1694. Examination by auditor. 1131. Upon receiving notification that the requirements of the preceding sections have been complied with, the auditor of state shall make an examination, or cause one to be made by some disinterested person officially appointed by him for that purpose; and if it shall be found that the capital herein required of the company named, according to the nature of the business proposed to be transacted by such company, has been paid in and is possessed by it in money, or in such stock, notes, bonds, and mortgages as are required by sections eleven hundred and twenty-four and eleven hundred and thirty of this chapter [§§ 1687, 1693], then he shall so certify; and if the examination be made by any other than the auditor, then the finding shall be certified under oath; or, if it is proposed to be a mutual insurance company, such certificate shall be to the effect that it has received and is in actual possession of the capital, premiums, or actual engagements of insurance or other securities, as the case may be, to the extent and value required by sections eleven hundred and twenty-four and eleven hundred and thirty of this chapter [§§ 1687, 1693]. The name and the residence of the maker of each premium note forming part of the capital of any such proposed mutual insurance company, and the amount of such note shall be returned to the auditor. The corporators or officers of any such company, or proposed company, shall be required to certify, under oath, to the auditor of state, that the capital exhibited to the person making the examination directed in this section, was, actually and in good faith, the property of the company so examined. The certificates above contemplated shall be filed in the office of said auditor, who shall thereupon deliver to such company a certified copy of the same, with his written permission for them to commence the business proposed in their written certificate of incorporation, which, being recorded by the recorder of the county in which the company is to be located, in a book prepared by him for that purpose, shall be their authority to commence business and issue policies; and such certified copy of said certificates may be used in evidence for or against said company with the same effect as the originals. [Same, § 7.]

1695. Kinds of insurance; limitation of risk. 1132. It shall be lawful for any company organized under this chapter, or doing business in this state:

1. To insure houses, buildings, and all other kinds of property against loss or damage by fire or other casualty, and to make all kinds of insurance on goods, merchandise, or other property in the course of transportation, whether on land or on water, or any vessel or boat, wherever the same may be;
2. To make insurance on the health of individuals, and against the personal injury, disablement, and death, resulting from traveling, or general accidents by land or water;

3. To insure the fidelity of persons holding places of private or public trust;

4. To receive on deposit and insure the safe-keeping of books, papers, moneys, stocks, bonds, and all kinds of personal property;

5. To insure horses, cattle, and other live stock against loss, or damage by accident, theft, or any unknown or contingent event whatever which may be the subject of legal insurance; to lend money on bottomry or respondentia, and to cause itself to be insured against any loss or risk it may have incurred in the course of its business, and upon the interest which it may have in any property, by means of any loan which it may have made on mortgage, bottomry, or respondentia, and generally to do and perform all other matters and things proper to promote these objects.

But no company shall be organized to issue policies of insurance for more than one of the above five mentioned purposes, and no company that shall have been organized for either one of said purposes, shall issue policies of insurance for any other; and no company organized under this chapter, or transacting business in this state, shall expose itself to loss on any one risk or hazard to an amount exceeding ten per cent. on its paid-up capital, unless the excess shall be re-insured by the same in some other good and reliable company. But the restrictions as to the amount of risk any company shall assume, shall not apply to any companies organized to guaranty the fidelity of persons in places of public or private trust, nor to companies that receive on deposit and guaranty the safe-keeping of books, papers, moneys, and other personal property. [Same, § 8.]

1696. Policies. 1133. All policies or contracts of insurance made or entered into by the company, may be made either with or without the seal of said company; but said policies shall be subscribed by the president, or such other officers as may be designated by the directors for that purpose, and shall be attested by the secretary thereof. [Same, § 12.]

1697. Transfer of stock. 1134. Transfers of stock may be made by any stockholder, or his legal representative, subject to such restrictions as the directors shall establish in their by-laws, except as hereinafter provided. [Same, § 13.]

CAPITAL INCREASED — REAL ESTATE.

1698. How. 1135. Whenever any company organized under this chapter, with less than the maximum capital limited in section eleven hundred and twenty-four hereof [§ 1687], shall, in the opinion of the directors thereof, require an increased amount of capital, they shall, if authorized by the holders of a majority of the stock to do so, file with the auditor of state a certificate setting forth the amount of such desired increase, not exceeding said maximum, and thereafter such company shall be entitled to have the increased amount of capital fixed by said certificate, and the examination of securities composing the capital stock thus increased, shall be made in the same manner as provided in section eleven hundred and thirty-one of this chapter [§ 1694] for the capital stock first paid in. [Same, § 14.]

1699. Dividends. 1136. The directors, trustees, or managers of any insurance company organized under this chapter, or incorporated under any law of this state, shall not make any dividends, except from the surplus profit arising from their business; and, in estimating such profits, there shall be reserved therefrom a sum equal to forty per cent. of the amount received as premiums on unexpired risks and policies, which amount, so reserved, is hereby declared to be unearned premiums; and there shall also be reserved all sums due the corporation on bonds and mortgages, bonds, stocks, and book account, of which no part of the principal or interest thereon has been paid during the year preceding such estimate of profits, and upon which suit for foreclosure or collection has not been commenced, or which, after judgment has been obtained thereon, shall have remained more than two years unsatisfied, and on which interest shall not have been paid; and, in case of any such judgment, the interest due or accrued thereon and remaining unpaid, shall also be reserved. Any dividends made contrary to these provisions, shall subject the company making it to a forfeiture of their charter. [Same, § 15.]

1700. May own real estate. 1137. No company organized under this chapter shall purchase, hold, or convey any real estate, save for the purposes and in the manner herein set forth:

1. Such as shall be requisite for its convenient accommodation in the transaction of its business;

2. Such as shall have been mortgaged to it in good faith by way of security for loans previously contracted, or for money due;

3. Such as shall have been conveyed to it in satisfaction of debts previously contracted in the legitimate business of the company, or for money due;

4. Such as shall have been purchased at sales upon judgments, decrees, or mortgages obtained or made for such debt; and it shall not be lawful for any such company to purchase, hold, or convey real estate in any other case, or for any other purpose, or acquired in any other manner, except that it may convey real estate which shall be found in the course of its business not necessary for its convenient accommodation in the transaction thereof; and all such last-mentioned real estate shall be sold and conveyed within three years after the same has been deemed by the auditor of state unnecessary for such accommodation, unless the company shall procure a certificate from the said auditor, that the interest of said company will materially suffer by a forced sale, in which event the sale may be postponed for such a period as the said auditor may direct in such certificate. [Same, § 16.]

DEPOSIT NOTES — LOSSES — POLICY.

1701. Mutual companies. 1138. All notes deposited with any mutual insurance company at the time of its organization, as provided in section eleven hundred and twenty-four hereof [§ 1687], shall remain as security for all losses and claims until the accumulation of the profits invested, as required by section eleven hundred and thirty of this chapter [§ 1693], shall equal the amount of cash capital required to be possessed by stock companies organized under this chapter, the liability of each note decreasing proportionately as the profits are accumulating; but any note which may have been deposited with any mutual insurance company subsequent to its organization, in addition to the cash premiums on any insurance effected with such company, may, at the expiration of the time of such insurance, or upon the cancellation by the company of the policy, be relinquished and given up to the maker thereof, or his legal representatives, upon his paying his proportion of losses and expenses which may have accrued thereon during such term. The directors or trustees of any such company shall have the right to determine the amount of the note to be given, in addition to the cash premium, by any person insured in such company; and every person effecting insurance in any mutual company, and also his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, continuing to be so insured, shall thereby become members of said company during the period of insurance, and shall be bound to pay for losses, and such necessary expenses as aforesaid, accruing to said company in proportion to his or their deposit note. But any person insured in any mutual company, except in the case of notes required by this chapter to be deposited at the time of its organization, may, at any time return his policy for cancellation, and, upon payment of the amount due at such time upon his premium note, shall be discharged from further liability thereon. [Same, § 17.]

1702. Settlement of losses. 1139. The directors shall, as often as they deem necessary, after receiving notice of any loss or damage, settle and determine the sums to be paid by the several members thereof as their respective portion of such loss, and publish the same in such manner as they shall deem proper, or the by-laws shall have prescribed; but the sum to be paid by each member shall always be in proportion to the original amount of his deposit note, and shall be paid to the officers of the company within thirty days after the publication of said notice; and if any member shall, for the space of thirty days after personal demand, or by letter, for payment shall have been made, neglect or refuse to pay the sum assessed upon him as his proportion of any loss aforesaid, the directors may sue for and recover the whole amount of his deposit note, with costs of suit; but execution shall issue for assessments and costs as they accrue only, and every such execution shall be accompanied by a list of losses for which the assessment was made. If the whole amount of deposit notes shall be insufficient to pay the loss occasioned, the sufferers insured by said company shall receive, toward making good their respective losses, a proportionate share of the whole amount of said notes, according to the sums to them respectively insured; but no member shall ever be required to pay for any loss more than the whole amount of his deposit note. [Same, § 18.]

1703. Kind of company. 1140. Every insurance company hereafter organized as provided in this chapter, shall, if it be a mutual company, embody the word "mutual" in its title, which shall appear upon the first page of every policy and renewal receipt; and every company doing business as a cash stock company, shall, upon the face of its policies, express in some suitable manner that such policies were issued by stock companies. [Same, § 19.]

FOREIGN COMPANIES — CAPITAL REQUIRED.

1707. Amount. 1144; 15 G. A., ch. 55; 16 G. A., ch. 60; 21 G. A., ch. 145. No insurance company, association, or partnership, organized or associated for any of the purposes specified in this chapter, incorporated by, or organized under, the laws of any other state or any foreign government, shall, directly or indirectly, take risks or transact any business of insurance in this state, unless possessed of two hundred thousand dollars of actual paid-up capital, exclusive of any assets of any such company deposited in any other states or territories for the special benefit or security of the insured therein; provided, that the foregoing provisions of this section shall not apply to foreign mutual hail insurance companies, issuing policies for a term of one year or less; provided further that foreign companies organized to insure plate glass exclusively shall not be required to have a greater capital than one hundred thousand dollars; and any such company desiring to transact any such business as aforesaid, by an agent or agents in this state, shall file with the auditor of state a written instrument, duly signed and sealed, authorizing any agent or agents of such company in this state, to acknowledge service of process for and in behalf of such company in this state, consenting that service of process, original, mean, or final, upon any such agent or agents, shall be taken and held as valid as if served upon the company according to the laws of this or any other state, and waiving all claim or right of error, by reason of such acknowledgment or service; and also a certified copy of their charter or deed of settlement, together with a statement, under oath, of the president or vice-president, or other chief officer, and the secretary of the company for which they may act, stating the name of the company and the place where located, the amount of its capital, with a detailed statement of the facts and items required from companies organized under the laws of this state, as per section eleven hundred and forty-one hereof [§ 1704]; also a copy of the last annual report, if any, made under any law of the state by which such company was incorporated; and no agent shall be allowed to transact business for any company whose capital is impaired by liabilities as stated in section eleven hundred and forty-one of this chapter [§ 1704], to the extent of twenty per cent. thereof, while such deficiency shall continue. Any mutual fire insurance company possessed of cash assets safely invested, amounting to at least two hundred thousand dollars over and above all its liabilities, including the reserve for reinsurance required by the laws of this state, shall be deemed to be "possessed of two hundred thousand dollars of actual paid-up capital," within the meaning of this section, and may be authorized to take risks and transact the business of insurance in this state, on complying with the requisitions of said chapter four, relating to insurance companies incorporated by or under the laws of other states; subject, however, to all the provisions of said chapter, applicable to such insurance companies and all other acts and laws relating to insurance so far as applicable. [Same, § 23; 14 G. A., ch. 100, § 2.]

Service of process may be made upon any agent of the company within the state: Niagara Ins. Co. v. Rodecker, 47-162.

RISKS — AGENTS.

1708. Certificate of authority. 1145. No agent shall act for any insurance company referred to herein, directly or indirectly, in taking risks or transacting business of insurance in this state, without procuring from the auditor of state a certificate of authority, stating that such company has complied with all the requisitions of this chapter. [12 G. A., ch. 138, § 24.]

1709. Annual statements; premium notes. 1146. The statements and evidences of investment required of foreign companies as above, shall be renewed, annually, in such manner and form as required hereby and as said auditor may direct, with any additional statement of the amount of the losses incurred or premiums received in this state during the preceding period, so long as such agency continues. And the said auditor, on being satisfied that the capital, securities, and investments remain secure, as hereinbefore provided, shall furnish a renewal of his certificates as aforesaid. All notes taken for policies of insurance in any company doing business in this state, shall state upon their face that they have been taken for insurance, and shall not be collectible unless the company and its agents have fully complied with the laws of this state relative to insurance. [Same, § 25.]

A negotiable note which does not state upon its face that it has been taken for insurance will not be subject, in the hands of an innocent holder, to the defense here indicated. The maker must have that fact appear upon the face of the note if he desires to rely upon such defense: Cook v. Weirman, 51-561.

1710. Conformity; failure to comply. 1147. Every insurance company organized under the laws of, or doing business in, this state, shall conform to all the provisions of this chapter applicable thereto, and, when necessary, any existing company shall change its charter and by-laws, so as to conform hereto, by a vote of a majority of its board of directors; and any president, secretary, or other officer of any company organized under the laws of Iowa, or any officer or person doing, or attempting to do, business in this state for any insurance company organized without this state, failing to comply with any of the requirements of this chapter, or violating any of the provisions thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in a sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, and be imprisoned in the county jail for a period not less than thirty days nor more than six months. [Same, § 26.]

This does not prevent the officers of a company which has not complied with the law from re-insuring their risks in another company and transferring to such company the premium notes received therefor: Davenport F. Ins. Co. v. Moore, 50-619.

1711. Advertisements. 1148. Every agent of any insurance company, shall, in all advertisements of such agency, publish the location of the company, giving the name of the city, town, or village in which the company is located, and the state or government under the laws of which it is organized. The term agent, used in the foregoing sections, shall include any other person who shall, in any manner, directly or indirectly, transact the insurance business of any insurance company not incorporated by the laws of this state.

The provisions of the foregoing sections relative to foreign companies, shall apply to all such companies, partnerships, associations, or individuals, whether incorporated or not. [Same, § 27.]

EXAMINATION BY AUDITOR.

1712. Examiners. 1149. The auditor of state shall, whenever he deems it expedient so to do, appoint one or more persons, not officers, agents, or stockholders of any insurance company doing business in this state, to examine into the affairs and condition of any insurance company incorporated or doing business in this state, or to make such examination himself; and the officers or agents of such company or companies shall cause their books to be opened for the inspection of the auditor or the person or persons so appointed, and otherwise facilitate such examination so far as may be in their power so to do; and for the purpose of arriving at the truth in such case, the auditor, or the person or persons so appointed by him, shall have power to examine, under oath, the officers or agents of any company, or others if necessary, relative to the business and condition of said company; and whenever the auditor shall deem it best for the interest of the public so to do, he shall publish the result of such investigation in one or more papers in this state; and whenever it shall appear to the auditor, from such examination, that the assets and funds of any company incorporated in this state are reduced or impaired by the liabilities of said company, as described under the head of liabilities in the statement required by this chapter, more than twenty per cent. below the paid-up capital stock required hereby, he may direct the officers thereof to require the stockholders to pay in the amount of such deficiency, within such a period as he may designate in such requisition, or he shall communicate the fact to the attorney-general, who shall apply to the district [or circuit] court, or, if in vacation, to one of the judges thereof, for an order requiring said company to show cause why their business should not be closed; and the court, or judge, as the case may be, shall thereupon proceed to hear the allegations and proofs of the respective parties; and in case it shall appear to the satisfaction of said court, or judge, that the assets and funds of said company are not sufficient, as aforesaid, or that the interest of the public requires it, the said court, or judge, shall decree a dissolution of said company and a distribution of its effects. The said court, or judge, shall have power to refer the application of the attorney-general to a referee, to inquire into and report upon the facts stated therein. [Same, § 28.]

1713. Requisition on stockholders. 1150. Any company receiving the aforesaid requisition from the auditor, shall forthwith call upon its stockholders for such amounts as will make its paid-up capital equal to the amount fixed by this chapter, or the charter of said company; and in case any stockholder shall refuse or neglect to pay the amount so called for, after notice personally given, or by advertisement in such time and manner as said auditor shall approve, it shall be lawful for the said company to require the return of the original certificate of stock held by such stockholder, and in lieu thereof to issue new certificates for such number of shares as the said stockholder may be entitled to in the proportion that the ascertained value of the funds of the said company may be found to bear to the original capital of the said company; the value of such shares for which new certificates shall be issued to be ascertained under the direction of the said auditor, the company paying for the fractional parts of shares; and it shall be lawful for the directors of such company to create new stock and dispose of the same, and to issue new certificates therefor, to an amount sufficient to make up the original capital of the company. And in the event of any additional losses accruing upon new risks, taken after the expiration of the period limited by the said auditor in the aforesaid requisition for the filling up of the deficiency in the capital of such company, and before said deficiency shall have been made up, the directors shall be individually liable to the extent thereof. [Same, § 29.]

1714. Mutual companies. 1151. If, upon such examination, it shall appear to the auditor, that the assets of any company, chartered upon the plan of mutual insurance under this chapter, are insufficient to justify the continuance of such company in business, he shall proceed in relation to such company in the same manner as herein required in regard to joint-stock companies; and the trustees or directors of such company are made personally liable for any losses which may be sustained upon risks taken after the expiration of the period limited by the auditor for filling up the deficiency in the capital, and before such deficiency shall have been made up. Any transfer of the stock of any company organized under this chapter, made during the pending of any investigation required above, shall not release the party making the transfer from his liability for losses, which may have accrued previous to such transfer. [Same, § 30.]

1715. Revocation of certificate. 1152. The auditor of state shall be authorized to examine into the condition and affairs of any insurance company, as provided for in this chapter, doing business in this state, not organized under the laws of this state, or cause such examination to be made by some person or persons appointed by him, having no interest in any insurance company; and, whenever it shall appear to the satisfaction of said auditor that the affairs of any such company are in an unsound condition, he shall revoke the certificates granted in behalf of such company, and shall cause a notification thereof to be published in some newspaper of general circulation published in the city of Des Moines, and the agent or agents of such company are, after such notice, required to discontinue the issuing of any new policy, or the renewal of any previously issued. [Same, § 31.]

1716. Amount of. 1153. There shall be paid by every company doing business in this state, except companies organized under the laws of this state, the following fees:

Upon filing declaration, or certified copy of charter, twenty-five dollars;

For filing each annual statement, and issuing the renewal of license required by law, three dollars;

For each certificate of authority to its agents, fifty cents. [Same, § 32.]

1717. Laws of other states. 1154. When, by the laws of any other state, any taxes, fines, penalties, licenses, fees, deposits of moneys or of securities, or other obligations or prohibitions, are imposed, or would be imposed, on insurance companies of this state, doing, or that might seek to do, business in such other state, or upon their agents therein, so long as such laws continue in force, the same obligations and prohibitions, of whatever kind, shall be imposed upon all insurance companies of such other state doing business within this state, or upon their agents here.

1718. Certificate of auditor. 1155. Every insurance company of the kind provided for in this chapter, doing business in this state, organized under the laws of this state or any other state or country, shall publish annually, in two newspapers of general circulation, one of which shall be published at the capital of this state, and in case of any company organized in the state of Iowa, one of which shall be published in the county where the principal office is located, a certificate from the auditor of state that such company has, in all respects, complied with the laws of this state relating to insurance. Said certificate shall also contain a statement, under the oath of the president or secretary of such insurance company, of the actual amount of paid-up capital, the aggregate amount of assets and liabilities at the date of such certificate, together with the aggregate income and expenditures of such company for the year preceding the date of such certificate. The necessary expenditure of any examination made, or ordered to be made, by the auditor of state under this chapter, shall be certified to by him and paid on his requisition, by the company which is the subject of such examination. In case of the refusal by any company to pay the requisition of the auditor of state the necessary expenses, it shall be the duty of the auditor to suspend such company from doing business in this state until said expenses are paid; if not so paid, the same may be audited and allowed by the executive council and paid out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated. [Same, § 12.]

STATEMENTS PUBLISHED.

1720. Printed forms. 1157. The auditor of state shall cause to be prepared and furnished to each company organized under the laws of this state, and to the attorney or agent of each company incorporated by other states and foreign governments, who may apply for the same, printed forms of statements required by this chapter, and he may, from time to time, make such changes in the forms of these statements as shall seem to him best adapted to elicit from the companies a true exhibit of their condition, in respect to the several points hereinbefore enumerated. [Same, § 37.]

1722. Stock or mutual. 1159. No company organized upon the mutual plan, shall do business or take risks upon the stock plan; neither shall a company organized as a stock company, do business upon the plan of a mutual insurance company. [Same, § 39.]

1723. Mutual associations. 1160; 16 G. A., ch. 103; 17 G. A., ch. 104; 20 G. A., ch. 11; 22 G. A., ch. 93. Nothing in this chapter shall be so construed as to prevent any number of persons from making mutual pledges and giving valid obligations to each other for their own insurance from loss by fire or death, or loss or damage by tornadoes, lightning, hail storms, cyclones or wind storms, but such association of persons shall in no case insure any property not owned by one of their own number, except such school-houses or church buildings as the said companies deem proper to insure within the territory where they do business, and no life except that of their own members, nor shall the provisions of this chapter be applicable to such associations or companies. Each fire insurance company organized under the provisions of this chapter shall report in January of each year, to the auditor of state, which report shall show the following facts:

1. Name of company.
2. Place of doing business.
3. Names of president and secretary.
4. Address of secretary.
5. Date of commencing business.
6. Amount of risks in force at the beginning of the year.
7. Amount of risks written during the year.
8. Amount of risks canceled during the year.
9. Amount of risks in force at the end of the year.
10. Amount of losses paid during the year.
11. Amount of other expenses.
12. Total expenses during the year.

These reports to be tabulated by the auditor of state, and published by him in his annual report on insurance, and one copy shall by him be sent to each company reporting as above. But no foreign life insurance company, aid society, or association for the insurance of the lives of its members and doing business on the assessment plan, shall be allowed to do business in this state unless it has a guarantied capital of not less than one hundred thousand dollars in the state in which it is organized, and such companies shall pay the same fees for annual reports as are now paid by stock companies. And such companies organized under this section shall pay the same fees for annual reports as are now paid by stock companies, but such association or companies shall receive no premiums nor make any dividends; but the word premiums herein, shall not be construed to mean policy and survey fees, nor the necessary expenses of such companies. [Same, § 40; 13 G. A., ch. 108; 14 G. A., ch. 107.]

Mutual aid associations fall within the provisions of this section and not within those of the three following: State ex rel. v. Iowa Mutual Aid Ass'n, 59-125.

Under the constitution and articles of the association known as the Ancient Order of United Workmen, held, that such association was, in effect, a mutual insurance company, and that the supreme lodge of that organization, being incorporated under the laws of Kentucky, was not authorized to exercise any powers or do business in the state of Iowa without compliance with the provisions of this section: State ex rel. v. Miller, 66-26.

Even though the relation between such mutual association and a member thereof is a personal one not passing to the legal representative, yet the association may ratify and confirm it in the hands of the personal representative of the deceased member, and will be held to do so if it makes assessments of such personal representative as a member: Hart v. Pottawattamie County Mut. F. Ins. Co., 36 N. W. Rep., 880.

1724. Forms of policies. 17 G. A., ch. 39, § 1. The auditor of state shall have power, and it shall be his duty, to examine the form of all policy contracts hereafter issued, or proposed to be issued, by any fire insurance company, association, or corporation now authorized by law, or that may hereafter apply to be authorized to transact the business of fire insurance in this state, and the auditor shall refuse to authorize any such company, association, or corporation to do business in this state, and shall not renew the authority or certificates of any such company, association, or corporation authorized to do business in this state, whenever the form of policy contract, issued or proposed to be issued by any such company, association, or corporation does not provide for the cancellation of the same at the request of the insured upon equitable terms, and in case of any violation of this act, it shall be the duty of the auditor to revoke the authority of such company to do business within this state. The provisions of this act shall not apply until January first, 1879, to any company now holding a certificate of authority from the auditor to do business in this state.

PUBLICATION OF FALSE STATEMENTS.

1725. False statement of assets. 17 G. A., ch. 111, § 1. It shall not be lawful for any company, corporation, association, individual or individuals, now transacting or now or hereafter authorized, under any existing or future laws of this state, to transact the business of fire insurance within this state, to state or represent either by advertisement in any newspaper, magazine, or periodical, or by any sign, circular, card, policy of insurance, or certificate of renewal thereof, or otherwise, any funds or assets to be in possession of any such company, corporation, association, individual or individuals, not actually possessed by such company, corporation, association, individual or individuals, and available for the payment of losses by fire and held for the protection of holders of policies of fire insurance.

1726. Statement of capital. 17 G. A., ch. 111, § 2. Every advertisement or public announcement, and every sign, circular, or card hereafter made or issued by any company, corporation, association, individual or individuals, or any officer, agent, manager or legal representative thereof, now, or hereafter authorized by any existing or future laws of this state to transact the business of fire insurance within this state, which shall purport to make known the financial standing of any such company, corporation, association, individual or individuals, shall exhibit the capital actually paid in, in cash and the amount of net surplus of assets over all liabilities of such company, corporation, association, individual or individuals, actually available for the payment of losses by fire and held for the protection of holders of their policies of fire insurance, and shall also exhibit the amount of net surplus of assets over all liabilities in the United States actually available for the payment of losses by fire and held in the United States for the protection of holders of their policies of fire insurance in the United States, including in such liabilities the fund reserved for re-insurance of outstanding risks; and shall correspond with the verified statement made by the company, corporation, association, individual or individuals making or issuing the same to the insurance department of this state next preceding the making or issuing the same. The provisions of this section shall not apply to companies, corporations or associations organized and doing business under the laws of this state.

1727. Statement of capital in policy. 17 G. A., ch. 111, § 3. Nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit any insurance company or association from publishing in any policy or certificate of renewal thereof a single item showing the amount of their capital as set forth in their charter, act of incorporation, deed of settlement or articles of association under which they are authorized to transact the business of insurance.

1728. Penalty. 17 G. A., ch. 111, § 4. Any violation of any provision of this act shall, for the first offense, subject the company, corporation, association, individual or individuals guilty of such violation, to a penalty of five hundred dollars, to be sued for and recovered in the name of the state, with costs and expenses of such prosecution by the district [county] attorney of any county in which the company, corporation, association, individual or individuals shall be located or may transact business, or in any county where such offense may be committed, and such penalty when recovered shall be paid into the treasury of such county for the benefit of the school fund of said county. Every subsequent violation shall subject the company, corporation, association, individual or individuals guilty of such violation to a penalty of not less than one thousand dollars, which shall be sued for, recovered and disposed of in like manner as for the first offense.

FORFEITURES OF POLICIES.

1729. How effected. 18 G. A., ch. 210, § 1. In every instance where a fire insurance company or association doing business in this state, shall hereafter take a note or contract for the premium on any insurance policy, or shall hereafter take a premium note or contract which, by its terms or by any agreement or rule of the company or association, is assessable for the premium due on the policy for which it was given, such insurance company or association shall not declare such policy forfeited or suspended for non-payment of such note or contract, except as hereinafter provided, anything in the policy or application to the contrary notwithstanding.

See Lewis v. Burlington Ins. Co., 71-97.

1730. Notice. 18 G. A., ch. 210, § 2. Within thirty days prior to, or at any time after the maturity of any note or contract, whether assessable, or where the time of payment is fixed in the contract, given for the premium on any policy of insurance, such company or association may serve a notice, in writing, upon the insured, that his note, or an instalment thereof, is due, or to become due, stating the amount which will be due on the note or contract, and also the amount required to pay the customary short rates, including the expense of taking the risk up to the time the policy will be suspended under the notice in order to cancel the policy, and that, unless payment is made within thirty days, his policy will be suspended. Such notice may be served either personally or by registered letter addressed to the assured, at his postoffice address, named in or on the policy, and no policy of insurance shall be suspended for non-payment of such amount until thirty days after such notice has been served.

An insurance company seeking to declare a forfeiture of a policy by reason of the non-payment of the premium note must not only give the maker notice of the proposed suspension of his policy on account of such non-payment, but must also notify him of the amount necessary to pay the customary short rates, including the expense of taking the risk, up to the time the policy will be suspended, in order to cancel the policy: Boyd v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co., 70-325.

In a particular case, held, that an application by insured for extension of time, and the fact that it was not granted, did not waive the provision as to notice just referred to: Ibid.

It appears that the legislature intended to provide for constructive notice by mail, to be completed either when the registered letter is mailed or as soon thereafter as it shall be received at the office of its destination by due course of mail: McKenna v. State Ins. Co., 73-453.

The condition in a policy that it shall be suspended on failure of assured to pay the premium note cannot be disregarded except as provided by statute. This statutory provision simply prevents such condition taking effect until thirty days after the specified notice has been given: Harte v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 71-401.

1731. Cancellation; short rates. 18 G. A., ch. 210, § 3. The assured may, at any time after the maturity of the note, contract or instalment, pay to the insurance company or association the customary short rates, including the expense of taking the risk, and the cost of suit, in case suit has been commenced or judgment rendered on the note or contract, and upon such payment, if he so elect, his said policy shall be canceled, and any note or contract, or any judgment rendered thereon, shall be canceled and shall be actually void in whomsoever hands the same may be. Provided, that the assured may at any time before cancellation of the policy, pay to the insurance company or association the full amount due upon any note or contract, and from the date of such payment the policy shall be revived, and shall be in full force and effect. Provided, such payment is made during the time stated in the policy and before a loss occurs. And provided further, that where any insurance company or association shall bring suit upon such note or contract and shall collect the same, from the date of such collection the policy shall be revived and be in full force from the time of such collection. Provided, such collection is made during the time stated in the policy and before a loss occurs. The provisions of this act shall apply to and govern all contracts and policies of insurance contemplated in this chapter, anything in the application or policy to the contrary notwithstanding.

The right of assured to cancel the policy and recover back premiums paid in excess of customary short rates cannot be exercised by assigning to another the right to cancel such policy and collect the unearned premium. The assignment would avoid the policy and terminate the right to recover. Nor can such unearned premium be recovered after the policy has been rendered void by taking other insurance: Colby v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co., 66-577.

SOLICITING AGENTS — APPLICATIONS — POLICIES.

1732. Solicitor deemed agent. 18 G. A., ch. 211, § 1. Any person who shall hereafter solicit insurance or procure applications therefor, shall be held to be the soliciting agent of the insurance company or association issuing a policy on such application, or on a renewal thereof, anything in the application or policy to the contrary notwithstanding.

1733. Copy of application. 18 G. A., ch. 211, § 2. All insurance companies or associations shall upon the issue, or renewal, of any policy attach to such policy, or indorse thereon, a true copy of any application or representation of the assured, which, by the terms of such policy, are made a part thereof, or of the contract of insurance, or referred to therein, or which may in any manner affect the validity of such policy. The omission so to do shall not render the policy invalid, but if any company or association neglects to comply with the requirements of this section, it shall forever be precluded from pleading, alleging or proving such application or representations or any part thereof, or falsity thereof, or any parts thereof, in any action upon such policy and the plaintiff in any such action shall not be required, in order to recover against such company or association, either to plead or prove such application or representation, but may do so at his option.

It is incompetent, in defense to an action upon a policy, to plead or prove statements made in the application, where such statements are not reduced to writing and a copy thereof is not attached to or indorsed upon the policy: Ellis v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 64-507. And see Wallace v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 66-139.

Where answers in the application are filled up by the agent taking such application from his own knowledge, the fact that a copy of the application is attached to the policy which is delivered to insured will not bind him to statements thus made, although he fails to notify the company of their falsity. The assured is not required to prove the statements made in the application to be true, and he is therefore not required to examine the copy of the application indorsed on the policy: Donnelly v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co., 70-693; and see Bennett v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 70-600.

Where the insured fills the application in blank and leaves it with the soliciting agent of insurer, who fills up the application and writes out answers to questions contained therein, basing such answers upon his own investigation and knowledge, the insurer will be estopped by such act of its agent from setting up misstatements in such answers as a breach of warranty: Ibid.

This and the preceding section of this act apply to all kinds of insurance and not merely to fire insurance: Cook v. Federal L. Ass'n, 74-746.

1734. Evidence of value; proofs of loss. 18 G. A., ch. 211, § 3. In any suit or action brought in any court in this state on any policy of insurance against the company or association issuing the policy sued upon in case of the loss of any building so insured, the amount stated in the policy shall be received as prima facie evidence of the insurable value of the property at the date of the policy; provided, nothing herein shall be construed to prevent the insurance company or association from showing the actual value at the date of the policy and any depreciation in the value thereof before the loss occurred; provided, further, such insurance company or association shall be liable for the actual value of the property insured at the date of the loss, unless such value exceeds the amount stated in the policy, and in order to maintain his action on the policy, it shall only be necessary for the assured to prove the loss of the building insured, and that he has given the company or association notice in writing of such loss, accompanied by an affidavit stating the facts as to how the loss occurred, so far as they are within his knowledge, and the extent of the loss; which notice shall be given within sixty days from the time the loss occurred; provided, further, that no action shall be begun within ninety days after notice of such has been given; all the provisions of this chapter shall apply to and govern all contracts and policies of insurance contemplated in this chapter, anything in the policy or contract to the contrary notwithstanding.

Actions cannot be brought before the expiration of ninety days, even on the refusal of the company to pay: Quinn v. Capital Ins. Co., 71-615.

Waiver of proofs of loss cannot be shown under an allegation that they have been furnished: Welsh v. Des Moines Ins. Co., 71-337.

The time of limitation fixed by the policy is not extended where proofs are neither furnished nor waived: Cornett v. Phenix Ins. Co., 67-388.

CHAPTER 5.

OF LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES.

1735. Conditions. 1161. Every company formed for the purpose of insuring the lives of individuals, whether organized under the laws of this state or of any other state, or foreign country, shall, before issuing any policies on lives within this state, comply with the conditions and restrictions of this chapter. [12 G. A., ch. 173, § 1.]

This and the following sections do not apply to mutual aid associations organized to afford financial aid and benefit to the families of deceased members, and assistance to members personally in case of sickness or disability. The payment of membership fees, dues and assessments alone being required, and no permanent fund for any other purpose being accumulated, such associations are within the provisions of § 1733: State ex rel. v. Iowa Mutual Aid Ass'n, 59-125.

Under the constitution of the association known as the Ancient Order of United Workmen, held, that such association, notwithstanding its fraternal character, was in effect a mutual insurance company, and that the supreme lodge of that corporation, being incorporated under the laws of Kentucky, was not authorized to exercise any powers or do business in Iowa without compliance with the laws of Iowa with reference to life insurance companies: State ex rel. v. Miller, 66-26.

1736. Stock companies; capital. 1162. Joint-stock companies, organized under the laws of this state, shall have not less than one hundred thousand dollars of capital stock subscribed, twenty-five per cent. of which shall be paid up and invested in stocks of the United States, or of this state, or in bonds and mortgages upon unincumbered real estate in the state of Iowa, worth, exclusive of improvements, at least double the sum loaned thereon, which said securities shall be deposited with the auditor of state, and, upon said deposit, and satisfactory evidence to the auditor that the capital stock is all subscribed in good faith, he shall issue to said company the certificate hereinafter provided for. But no part of the twenty-five per cent. aforesaid, shall be loaned to any stockholder or officer of the company; the remainder of such stock shall be paid in such time as the directors or trustees of the company may direct, and the same shall be secured by the notes of the stockholders of said company. No note shall be accepted as part of such capital stock, unless the same shall be accompanied by a certificate of a justice of the peace, notary public, or clerk of the district court of the county in which the person executing such note shall reside, that the person making the same is, in his opinion, pecuniarily good and responsible for the same in property not exempt from execution by the laws of this state. [Same, § 2.]

1737. Mutual companies; conditions. 1163. Companies organized under the laws of this state upon the mutual plan, shall, before issuing any policies, have actual applications on at least two hundred and fifty individual lives, for an average amount of one thousand dollars each, a list of which applications, giving the name, age, residence, amount of insurance, and annual premium of each applicant, shall be filed with the auditor of state, and a deposit made with said auditor of an amount equal to three-fifths of the whole annual premium on said applications, either in cash or the securities required by the foregoing section, and, on compliance with said provisions, the auditor shall issue to said mutual company the certificate hereinafter prescribed. [Same, § 3.]

[As to mutual benefit associations, see §§ 1761-1783.]

AGENTS — RISKS.

1738. Foreign companies; prerequisites. 1164. No person shall act within this state as agent, or otherwise, in receiving or procuring applications for insurance, or in any manner to aid in transacting the business of insurance referred to in section eleven hundred and sixty-one hereof [§ 1735], for any company or association incorporated by, or organized under, the laws of any state or government, unless such company is possessed of the amount of actual capital required of any company in this state, and the same is invested in stocks or treasury notes of the United States, or this state, or of interest-paying bonds of the state in which said company is located, or where said deposits are made, or in bonds and mortgages on unincumbered real estate within the state where such company is located, but all mortgages deposited by any company under this section, shall be upon unincumbered real estate worth double the amount loaned thereon; which stock and securities shall be deposited with the auditor, controller, or chief financial officer of the state by whose laws said company is incorporated, or some other state, and the auditor of this state furnished with a certificate of such auditor, controller, or chief financial officer aforesaid, under his hand and official seal, that he, as such auditor, controller, or chief financial officer of such state, holds in trust and on deposit, for the benefit of all the policy-holders of such company, the security before mentioned, which certificate shall embrace the items of security so held, and that he is satisfied that such securities are worth one hundred thousand dollars; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to invalidate the agency of any company incorporated in another state, by reason of such company having from time to time exchanged the securities so deposited with the auditor, controller, or chief financial officer of the state in which such company is located for other stock or securities authorized by this chapter, or by reason of such company having drawn its interest and dividends from time to time for such stocks and securities. [Same, § 4.]

1739. Agent; process. 1165. Such company shall also appoint an attorney or agent in each county in this state, in which the company has an agency, on whom process of law can be served, and such company shall file with the auditor of state a certified copy of the charter or articles of incorporation of said company, and also a certified copy of the certificate of appointment of such agent, or agents, which appointment shall continue until another agent or attorney be substituted. And in case any such insurance corporation shall cease to transact business in this state according to the laws thereof, the agents last designated, or acting as such for such corporation, shall be deemed to continue agents for such corporation for the purpose of serving process for commencing actions upon any policy or liability issued or contracted while such corporation transacted business in this state; and service of such process for the causes aforesaid upon any such agent, shall be deemed a valid personal service upon such corporation, and such company shall also file a statement of its condition and affairs in the office of the auditor of state, in the same form and manner required for the annual statements of similar companies organized under the laws of this state. [Same, § 5.]

directly or indirectly, in taking risks, collecting premiums, or in any manner transacting the business of life insurance in this state without procuring from said auditor a certificate of authority, stating that the foregoing requirements have been complied with, and setting forth the name of the attorney for each company, a certified copy of which certificate shall be filed in the county recorder's office of the county where the agency is to be established, and shall be the authority of such company and agent to commence business in this state. and such company, or its agent or attorney, shall, annually, by the first day of April, file with the auditor of state a statement of its affairs for the year terminating on the thirty-first day of December preceding, in the same manner and form provided for similar companies organized in this state. [Same, § 6.]

1743. Value of policies. 1169; 17 G. A., ch. 47; 21 G. A., ch. 169. As soon as practicable after the filing of said statement of any company organized and doing business under the laws of this state in the office of the auditor of state, he shall proceed to ascertain the net cash value of each policy in force upon the basis of the American experience table of mortality and four and one half per cent. interest; or actuaries' combined experience table of mortality and four per cent. interest. For the purpose of making such valuations, the auditor may employ a competent actuary to do the same, who shall be paid by the company for which the service was rendered; but nothing herein shall prevent any company from making said valuation herein contemplated, which shall be received by the auditor upon such proof as he may determine. Upon ascertaining the net cash value of all policies in force in any company organized under the laws of this state, the auditor shall notify said company of the amount, and within thirty days after the date of such notification, the officers of such company shall deposit with the auditor the amount of such ascertained valuation of all policies in force in the securities described in section one thousand one hundred and seventy-nine of this chapter [§ 1753]. But no joint-stock company organized under the laws of this state shall be required to make such deposit until the cash value of the policies in force as ascertained by the auditor exceed the amount deposited by said company under section one thousand one hundred and sixty-two hereof [§ 1736]. [Same, § 9; 14 G. A., ch. 106, § 3.]

This section recognizes the existence of a debt from the company to its policy-holders: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Board of Equalization, 74-178.

1744. Annual certificate. 1170; 15 G. A., ch. 2, § 3. On receipt of the deposit and statement from any company as provided in the preceding sections, and the statement and evidence of investment according to law of foreign companies, which shall be renewed annually, the auditor shall issue a certificate setting forth the corporate name of the company; its principal office or agency in the state; that it has fully complied with the laws of this state in relation to life insurance companies, and is authorized to transact the business of life insurance for twelve months from the date of such certificate, or until the expiration of the thirty days' notice given by the auditor of the next annual valuation of its policies, said certificate to expire on the first day of April in the year following after it is issued. [12 G. A., ch. 173, § 10.]

1745. Penalty. 1171; 15 G. A., ch. 2, § 4. Upon the failure of any company organized in this state to make the deposit, or file the statement in the time stated herein, the auditor shall notify the attorney-general of the default, who shall at once apply to the district [or circuit] court if in session, or, if in vacation, to any judge thereof, for an order requiring said company to show cause why its business shall not be closed; and, if upon hearing, the company shall fail to show sufficient cause for neglecting to make the deposit, or file the statement required by this chapter, then the court shall decree its dissolution. EXAMINATION BY AUDITOR.

1746. If insolvent, procure injunction. 1172. The auditor may at any time make a personal examination of the books, papers, and securities of any life insurance company doing business in this state, or may authorize or empower any other suitable person to make such examination, and for the purpose of securing a full and true exhibit of its affairs, he, or the person selected by him to make such examination, shall have power to examine, under oath, any officer or agent of said company, or others if necessary, relative to its business and management. If, upon such examination, the auditor is of opinion that the company is insolvent, or that its condition is such as to render its further proceedings hazardous to the public or to the holders of its policies, he shall communicate the facts to the attorney-general, who shall at once apply to a judge of the supreme or district court to issue an injunction, restraining such company from transacting further business, except the payment of losses already ascertained and due, until a full hearing can be had. It shall be discretionary with the judge, either to issue the injunction forthwith or to give notice to the company, and cause a hearing to be had as in ordinary proceedings for an injunction. Upon the final hearing of the cause, he may dissolve or modify the injunction or make it perpetual, and, if made perpetual, shall also decree what disposition shall be made of the deposit of the company in the hands of the auditor, subject to the provisions of the following section. [Same, § 12; 14 G. A., ch. 106, § 1.]

In an action under this section to close the business of a corporation for failure to comply with the provisions of chapter 5, title 9, of the Code, it must be assumed that the corporation was duly organized: State ex rel. v. Iowa Mutual Aid Association, 59-125.

1747. Securities. 1173. The securities of a defaulting or insolvent company, on deposit with the auditor of state, shall vest in the state for the benefit of the policies on which such deposits were made, and the proceeds of the same shall, upon the order of the court, be divided among the holders of said policies in the proportions of the last annual valuation of the same, or applied to the purchase of re-insurance for the benefit of the policy-holders. [12 G. A., ch. 173, § 13.]

1748. Change of securities. 1174. Companies shall have the right at any time to change their securities on deposit, by substituting for those withdrawn a like amount in other securities of the character provided for in this chapter, and whenever the annual valuation of policies outstanding and in force against any company, is less than the amount of security then on deposit with the auditor, said company shall have the right to withdraw such excess; but twenty-five thousand dollars shall remain on deposit. [Same, § 14.]

1749. Interest collected. 1175. The auditor shall permit companies, having on deposit with him stock or bonds as security, to collect the interest accruing on such deposits, delivering to their authorized agents, respectively, the coupons or other evidences of interest as the same become due, but upon default by any company to deposit additional security as called for by the auditor, or pending any proceedings to close up or enjoin it, he shall collect the interest as it becomes due, and add the same to the securities in his hands belonging to such company. [Same, § 15.]

1750. Auditor's report. 1176. At the earliest practicable date after the returns are received from the several insurance companies, the auditor shall make a report to the general assembly, of the general conduct and condition of the corporations visited by him since his last annual report, and shall include therein an aggregate of the calculated value of all outstanding policies of life insurance, and in connection therewith, shall prepare an abstract of all the returns and statements made to him by insurance companies and agents. [Same, § 16.]

1751. Penalty for acting without certificate. 1177; 15 G. A., ch. 2, § 5. Any company doing business in this state without the certificate required by section eleven hundred and seventy of this chapter [§ 1744], shall forfeit one hundred dollars for every day's neglect to procure said certificate. Any agent making insurance, or soliciting applications for any company having no certificate from the auditor, shall forfeit the sum of three hundred dollars, and any person acting for a company authorized to transact business in this state, without having the certificate prescribed in section eleven hundred and sixty-six [§ 1740], issued by the auditor of state, in his possession, shall be liable to pay twenty-five dollars for each day's neglect to procure such certificate. [Same, § 17.]

1752. Recovery of penalties. 1178; 15 G. A., ch. 2, § 6. Suits brought to recover any of the penalties provided for in this chapter shall be instituted in the name of the state of Iowa by the district [county] attorney of the district, under the direction and by the authority of the auditor of state, and may be brought in the district [or circuit] court of any county in which the company proceeded against is engaged in the transaction of business, or in which the agent resides, in cases in which the proceeding is against the agent individually. Said penalties when recovered shall be paid into the state treasury for the use of the school fund. [Same, § 21.]

1753. Investment of funds. 1179; 17 G. A., ch. 47; 21 G. A., ch. 169; 22 G. A., ch. 94. No company organized under the provisions of this chapter shall invest its funds in any other manner than as follows: In bonds of the United States. In bonds of this state or of any other state if at or above par. In bonds and mortgages on unincumbered real estate within this state or in any other state in which such company is transacting an insurance business, worth at least twice the amount loaned thereon, exclusive of improvements. In bonds or other evidences of indebtedness, bearing interest, of any county, incorporated city, town or school district within this state or any other state, in which such company is transacting an insurance business, where such bonds or other evidences of indebtedness are issued by authority of law, and are approved by the executive council. In loans upon its own policies, provided that the amount so loaned shall not exceed one-half of the reserve against said policy as provided in this chapter at the time such loan is made and that all policies upon which loans are made shall have been issued, and in force at least five years. And a sum not exceeding five per cent. of its assets may be invested in stocks of national banks, now or hereafter organized under the laws of the United States. [Same, § 22.]

1754. Real estate. 1180. No company organized under this chapter, shall be permitted to purchase, hold, or convey real estate, except for the purposes and in the manner herein set forth:

1. Such as shall be requisite for its immediate accommodation in the transaction of its business; or,

2. Such as shall have been mortgaged to it in good faith by way of security for loans previously contracted, or for moneys due; or,

3. Such as shall have been conveyed to it in satisfaction of debts previously contracted in the course of its dealings; or,

1755. When to be sold. 1181. All such real estate as may be acquired as aforesaid, and which shall not be necessary for the accommodation of such company in the convenient transaction of its business, shall be sold and disposed of within five years after such company shall have acquired title to the same; no such company shall hold such real estate for a longer period than that above mentioned, unless the said company shall procure a certificate from the auditor of state, that the interests of the company will suffer materially by a forced sale of such real estate, in which event the time for the sale may be extended to such time as the said auditor shall direct in said certificate. [Same, § 24.]

1756. Policy exempt from execution. 1182. A policy of insurance on the life of an individual, in the absence of an agreement or assignment to the contrary, shall inure to the separate use of the husband or wife and children of said individual, independently of his or her creditors; and an endowment policy, payable to the assured on attaining a certain age, shall be exempt from liability for any of his or her debts. [Same, § 18.]

This section contemplates a case where the policy is payable to deceased, or his or her legal representatives, and not a case where the policy is payable to another person for his use and benefit, in which case it cannot be otherwise disposed of by will: McClure v. Johnson, 56-620.

Where the contract of insurance provides the method by which insured may change the beneficiary entitled to the proceeds of the policy, and such method is not pursued, a direction in the will of the assured making such change will be without effect: Stephenson v. Stephenson, 64-534.

Where absolute power is given to a member of a mutual benefit association to designate who the beneficiary shall be, such direction cannot be disregarded, although the articles of incorporation of the association provide that its object shall be to provide for the widows and orphans of deceased members, and the beneficiary designated is not a widow or child of the deceased member: Mitchell v. Grand Lodge, 70-360.

The assured cannot by direction in his will provide for payment of the proceeds of a policy on his life to another beneficiary than the one mentioned in the policy. The contract with the company cannot thus be altered without its consent: Wilmaser v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 66-417.

The assured cannot change the beneficiary by will unless it is so provided in the contract of insurance: Wendt v. Iowa Legion of Honor, 72-682.

Where a decedent left a wife but no children, held, that under the statutory provision above referred to the proceeds should go to the wife alone, and not be divided among all the distributees of his estate: Rhode v. Bank, 52-375.

The proceeds of the policy, when realized by the person entitled thereto, are not exempt from execution for the debts of such person. The exemption exists only as to the debts of the person insured: Smedley v. Felt, 43-607; Murray v. Wells, 53-256.

In a particular case held that the evidence did not show a contract to subject the proceeds of a life policy to the payment of a debt: Herriman v. McKee, 49-185.

Where the proceeds of a policy of life insurance are used to release other property from a claim under which it is held, the property so released becomes subject to the payment of debts: Friedlander v. Mahoney, 31-311.

The proceeds of a life policy are assets of the estate, and only differ from other assets in the manner of their distribution: Kelley v. Mann, 56-625.

Further as to disposition of proceeds as assets of the estate, see § 3576.

1757. Fees. 1183. Each company contemplated in this chapter shall pay the same fees, and be liable to the same obligations as provided in sections eleven hundred and fifty-three, and eleven hundred and fifty-four of chapter four of this title [§§ 1716, 1717]. [Same, §§ 19, 20; 14 G. A., ch. 106, §§ 4, 5.]

DEFENSES TO ACTIONS ON POLICIES.

1758. Intoxication. 16 G. A., ch. 55, § 1. In all suits now or hereafter pending in any court of this state on policies of life insurance, wherein the defendant seeks to avoid liability upon the alleged ground of the intemperate habits or habitual intoxication of the assured, it shall be a sufficient reply for the plaintiff to show that such habits or habitual intoxication of the assured was generally known in the community or neighborhood where the agent of the defendant resided or did business, if thereafter the company continued to receive the premiums falling due on such policy.

1759. Physician's certificate. 16 G. A., ch. 55, § 2. In any case where the medical examiner, or physician acting as such, of any life insurance company doing business in this state, shall issue a certificate of health or declare the applicant a fit subject for insurance under the rules and regulations of such company, the company shall be thereby estopped from setting up in defense of suit on such policy, that the assured was not in the condition of health required by the policy, at the time of the issuing of such policy, except where the same is procured by or through the fraud or deceit of the assured.

1760. Misrepresentation of age. 16 G. A., ch. 55, § 3. In all cases where it shall appear that the age of the person insured has been misstated in the proposal, declaration or other instrument upon which any policy of life insurance has been founded or issued, then and in such case, the person or company issuing such policy, shall upon the discovery of such misstatement be permitted to demand and collect the difference of premium, if any, which would be due and payable on account of the true age of the assured, from year to year, according to the rates of premium of such person or company, upon which such policy was issued; or such person or company so issuing the policy may after the decease of the assured deduct from the amount payable by such policy the difference of premium, if any, which would so have been payable from year to year, by reason of any difference of age at time of issuance of such policy; and no other defense or deduction by such person or company issuing such policy, shall be permitted after the death of the person assured, on account of such misstatement of age of [the] assured, notwithstanding any warranty of such statement of age by terms of policy or otherwise, except when it be shown by the person or company insuring that the policy was procured by fraud in fact.

The provisions of §§ 1732, 1733 as to applications, etc., are applicable to life as well as fire insurance: See notes to § 1733.

MUTUAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATIONS.

1761. Comply with statute. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 1. Every corporation or association organized under the laws of this state upon the mutual assessment co-operative or natural pre[m]ium plan, for the purpose of insuring the lives of individuals, or of furnishing benefits to the widows, heirs, orphans or legatees, of deceased members, or of paying endowments or accident indemnity, shall, before commencing business, comply with the provisions of this act.

1762. Articles of incorporation. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 2. The articles of incorporation of such organizations shall show the plan of business, and shall be submitted to the auditor of state, and attorney-general, and if such articles are found to comply with the provisions of this act they shall approve the same. When said articles are thus approved, they shall be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds, in the county where such organization is located, and of the secretary of state, and a notice published as provided for under the general incorporation law of the state of Iowa. Nothing in this section shall be construed to require the incorporation of such companies already duly incorporated and operating under the laws of Iowa.

1763. Name. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 3. No corporation or association organized under this act, shall take any name in use by any other organization or so closely resembling such name as to mislead the public as to its identity.

1764. Conditions for commencing. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 4. Each association organized under this act, shall, before issuing any policy or certificate of membership, if said association has not membership sufficient to pay the full amount of the certificate or policy on an assessment it shall cause the application for insurance to have printed in red ink in a conspicuous manner along the margin of said application the words "It is understood and agreed that the amount to be paid, when the certificate or policy issued upon this application becomes a claim, shall be dependent upon the amount collected from an assessment made to meet such claim" and they must have actual applications upon at least two hundred and fifty individual lives for at least one thousand dollars each, and shall file, with the auditor of state, satisfactory proof that the president, secretary and treasurer, of said corporation or association have each given a good and sufficient bond for five thousand dollars, for the faithful discharge of their duties as such officers; sworn copies of which bonds shall be filed with the auditor of state, also a list of said applications giving the name, age, and residence of each applicant and the amount of insurance applied for by each, together with the annual dues and the proposed assessments thereon, which statement shall be verified under oath by the president and secretary of the association.

1765. Agent's certificate. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 5. No person shall act, within this state as agent or otherwise in receiving or procuring applications for insurance for any assessment association (except for the purpose of taking applications for organization), unless the corporation or association for which he is acting, has received a certificate from the auditor of state as provided in this act, authorizing said corporation or association to transact business in this state, nor as general or traveling agent or traveling solicitor, until he shall have received from said auditor a certificate in substance the same as that provided for in section eighteen of this act [§ 1778], and certifying that said corporation or association has complied with the provisions of this act, and that said general traveling agent or traveling solicitor is authorized to act as such.

1766. Assessments. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 6. The by-laws of any such corporation or association, and its notices of assessment, shall state the object or objects for which the money to be collected is intended, and no part of the proceeds of such assessment shall be applied to any other purpose than is stated in said notices and by-laws, and the excess beyond payment of the benefit provided for in such assessment, shall be set aside and applied only to such purposes as said by-laws and notices specify.

1767. Insurable age; beneficiary; assignment of policy. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 7. No corporation or association organized or operating, under this act, shall issue any certificate of membership, or policy to any person under the age of fifteen years, nor over the age of sixty-five years nor unless the beneficiary under said certificate shall be the husband, wife, relative, legal representative, heir or legatee of such insured member, nor shall any such certificate be assigned, except an endowment certificate, and any certificate issued or assignment made in violation of this section shall be void. Any member of any corporation, association or society operating under this act shall have the right at any time, with the consent of such corporation, association or society, to make a change in his beneficiary without requiring the consent of such beneficiary.

1768. Report to auditor of state; examination. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 8. The business year of each Iowa corporation or association organized or operating under this act, shall close on the thirty-first day of December, each year and such corporation or association, shall, within sixty days thereafter prepare under oath of its president and secretary and file in the office of the auditor of state a detailed statement of its assets, liabilities, receipts, from each assessment and all other sources, expenditures, salaries of officers, number of contributing members, death losses paid and amount paid on each death loss, death losses reported but not paid, and answer such other interrogatories as the auditor (who shall furnish blanks for that purpose) may require, in order to ascertain its true financial condition, and shall pay upon filing each annual statement, the sum of ten dollars. The auditor shall publish said annual statement in detail in his annual report, and for the purpose of verifying such statement, the auditor may make or cause to be made, an examination of the affairs of any Iowa association doing business under this act, at the expense of the association, which expense shall not exceed the necessary hotel and traveling expenses of the auditor or clerk. If the auditor appoints some person not employed in his office to make the examination, he shall in addition to actual expenses be allowed not to exceed five dollars per day for the time actually employed. If the said auditor shall deem it necessary for the security of the funds of the association, he may require the official bonds of the officers to be increased to an amount not to exceed double the sum for which they are accountable, and he may require supplemental reports from any such association at such time and in such form as he may direct.

1769. Trust funds; investments. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 9. Any corporation or association accumulating any moneys to be held in trust for the purpose of the fulfillment of its policy or certificate, contract, or otherwise, shall invest such accumulations in bonds or treasury notes of the United States, or of this or other states, or in interest-bearing bonds of any municipal corporation in Iowa or in notes secured by mortgage on unincumbered real estate in the state of Iowa, not to exceed forty per cent. of the appraised value thereof exclusive of improvements and shall deposit such securities with the auditor of state, who shall furnish such corporation or association with a certificate, under his seal of office, of such deposit, showing the purpose of such deposit and to what fund the same is to be applied when paid out and also showing the aggregate liabilities of such corporation or association at the date of issuance of such certificate, provided, however, that such corporation or association may invest in real estate in Iowa, such a portion of said accumulation as is necessary for its accommodation in the transaction of its business to be owned by said corporation or association, and in the erection of any building for such purpose may add thereto rooms for rental.

1770. Change of securities. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 10. Such association may have the right at any time to change its securities on deposit by substituting for those withdrawn a like amount in other securities of the character provided for in this act.

1771. Withdrawal. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 11. The auditor shall permit corporations or associations having a deposit with him of such securities to withdraw the same upon filing with him by the president and secretary of such corporations and associations, satisfactory proof that they are to be used for the purpose for which they were originally deposited in his office.

1772. Collection of interest. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 12. The auditor shall permit corporations or associations having on deposit with him such stocks and bonds, notes or other securities, to collect and retain the interest accruing on such deposits, delivering to them respectively the evidence of interest as the same becomes due, but on default of any corporation or association to make or enforce such collection, he may collect such interest and add the same to the securities in his possession belonging to such corporation or association, less the expense of such collection.

1773. Foreign companies. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 13. Any foreign corporation or association organized under the laws of any other state to carry on the business of insuring the lives of individuals or of furnishing benefits to the widows, orphans, heirs or legatees of deceased members, or of paying accident indemnity, or surrender value of certificate of insurance upon the mutual assessment plan, may be licensed by the auditor to do business in this state by complying with the following conditions, to wit: Said corporation shall file with the auditor of state a copy of its charter or articles of incorporation duly certified by the proper officers of the state wherein organized together with a copy of its by-laws, application, and policy or certificate of membership. It shall also file with said auditor a sworn statement signed and verified by its president and secretary, which statement shall contain the name and location of the said corporation or association, its principal place of business, the name of its president, secretary and other principal officers, the number of certificates or policies in force, the aggregate amount insured thereby the amount paid to beneficiaries in event of death or accident, the amount collected of each member on each assessment, and the purposes for which assessments are made and the authority under which they are made; the amount paid on the last death loss and the date thereof, the amount of cash or other assets owned by the company and association and how invested; and any information which the auditor may require. All said statements and papers thus filed shall show that death or surrender value of certificate of insurance or accident indemnity is in the main provided for by assessments upon or contributions by surviving members of such corporation or association and shall show to the satisfaction of said auditor that said corporation or association is legally organized and honestly managed, and that an ordinary assessment upon its members or other regular contribution to its mortuary fund, is sufficient to pay its maximum certificate to the full limit named therein. Such foreign corporation or association shall also designate to the said auditor an attorney or agent residing in this state on whom service of process or original notice may be made; and in the event of a failure to appoint or designate such attorney, such service may be made upon the auditor who shall at once notify said company by mailing a copy of said notice to the secretary of said corporation or association, directed to his last known postoffice address. Any action commenced in this state by service upon such attorney or auditor may be commenced in the county of the plaintiff's residence, regardless of the residence of said attorney or auditor, and every corporation or association coming into this state shall file with the auditor of state a contract or agreement that it will not transfer any action commenced against it in any court of this state to the United States courts, which contract shall contain the provision that if such transfer is made to the United States courts, the certificate of authority issued by said auditor to do business shall be revoked or canceled, and it shall be the duty of the auditor to promptly revoke the certificate of such corporation or association as soon as such transfer is made; and such corporation or association shall not be permitted to do business again within the state. Upon complying with the provisions of this section, and upon payment of twenty-five dollars, the auditor shall issue to such foreign corporation or association so complying, a certificate of authority to do business in this state, provided the same right is extended by the state in which said corporation is organized, to similar corporations or associations organized in this state. After any such foreign corporation or association shall have been licensed to do business in this state, it shall make before the first day of March of each year, to the auditor, on blanks furnished by him, the same detailed statement as is provided in section eight of this act [§ 1768], which statement shall be published in the annual report of the auditor, and shall also pay to the auditor, on filing such statement, a fee of twenty dollars. Whenever the auditor of this state shall have reason to doubt the solvency of any such foreign corporation or association and the failure to pay the full limit named in its certificate or policy shall be such evidence that it is not solvent and to require the auditor to investigate, he must for this or other good cause, at the expense of such corporation or association cause an examination of its books and papers to be made, and publish and distribute his report as provided in section eight of this act [§ 1768], and if in his judgment such examination establishes the fact that such corporation or association is not financially sound and is not paying its policies to the full limit named therein or is conducting its business fraudulently, or if it should fail to make the statement required by this act, he may revoke the authority of such corporation or association and prohibit it from doing business in this state until it can again comply with the provisions of this act. If the auditor appoints some one not receiving a regular salary in his office to make the examination provided for in this section he shall be entitled to receive five dollars per day for his service in addition to his actual traveling and hotel expenses to be paid by the association examined or by the state on approval of the executive council, if the association fails to pay the same.

1774. Penalty for foreign company. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 14. Any foreign corporation or association doing business in this state that shall refuse or neglect to comply with the provisions of this act after the space of ninety days after it takes effect shall be deemed and be held to be doing business unlawfully and any officer or agent of such corporation or association who shall do business in this state, or assist in, or knowingly permit the same in violation of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not more than five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not more than six months, or both, in the discretion of the court. It shall be the duty of the county attorney to prosecute any violation of this section when sufficient evidence is presented to him to warrant a prosecution of any person charged with its violation.

1775. Penalty for agents. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 15. Any solicitor or agent taking or soliciting applications for insurance within this state, for any corporation or association doing business on the mutual assessment or natural premium plan, after ninety days from the taking effect of this act without the certificate herein provided for, or shall take applications when the assessments will not pay the certificate or policy in full, without having the application form comply with the requirements of section four of this act [§ 1764] shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars for each offense, together with the costs of prosecution including attorneys' fee, and shall stand committed to the county jail until the fine and costs are paid. And the county attorney in each county shall prosecute parties charged with a violation of this section.

1776. Violations by domestic companies. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 16. Whenever any Iowa corporation or association shall fail to make its annual statement to the auditor on or before the first day of March, or is conducting its business fraudulently or not in compliance with this act, or is not carrying out its contracts with its members in good faith, then it shall be the duty of the auditor to promptly communicate the fact to the attorney-general, who shall at once commence action before the district [or circuit] court of the county in which said organization is located or any judge thereof, citing the officers to appear before said court or judge, and if upon a hearing of said cause, it is found to be [for] the best interests of the holders of the certificates of membership in said corporation, said court or judge shall have the power to remove any officer or officers of said corporation and appoint others in their place until the next annual election. If it is found to the best interests of said holders of certificates that the affairs of said corporation be wound up said court or judge shall so direct and for that purpose may appoint a receiver, who shall regard all proper claims for death benefit as preferred claims. Said receiver may also upon the approval of the court or judge transfer the members of said association who consent thereto to some solvent Iowa assessment or natural premium association or divide the surplus accumulated in proportion to the share due each certificate in force at the time.

1777. Fees. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 17. The auditor shall receive from each foreign corporation or association doing business in this state for each certificate issued to its agents or solicitor, as provided in this act, the sum of two dollars and from each corporation or association organized under the laws of this state the sum of fifty cents. Any other fees to be paid to said auditor not provided for in this act shall be the same as provided for in the general insurance laws of this state, in relation to life insurance companies. All fees collected by the auditor by this act shall be accounted for and paid into the state treasury in the same manner as provided in section three thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight, code of 1873 [§ 5030.]

1778. Certificate. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 18. On compliance with this act by any corporation or association the auditor shall issue a certificate setting forth: First: The corporate name of the association. Second: Its principal place of business. Third: The number of certificates or policies in force at the date of its last report. Fourth: The sum of money which an ordinary assessment for payment of a single certificate or policy would produce in each class. Fifth: The amount paid on its last death loss as evidenced by proof on file in his office and the date of such payment. Sixth: The amount of securities deposited in his office, and for what purpose deposited. Seventh: That it has fully complied with the provisions of this act, and is authorized to transact business for a period of one year from April first of the year of its issue, which certificate shall be published by said association for four weeks in a newspaper of general circulation published at the principal place of business of said association.

1779. Penalty for fraud in procuring insurance. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 19. Any agent, physician, or other person who, shall knowingly and by means of concealment or false or fraudulent statements assist in securing from any such organization, or assessment association, a policy or certificate of membership on the life of any person shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or undergo an imprisonment of not more than one year in the county jail, or both, in the discretion of the court.

1780. Assessment company; life and accident. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 20. Any corporation, or association doing business in this state which provides in the main, for the payment of death losses or accident indemnity by any assessment upon its members or upon the natural premium plan, shall for the purpose of this act, be deemed a mutual benefit association, and shall not be subject to the general insurance laws of this state, regulating life insurance. No corporation or association, operating upon the assessment plan, promising benefits upon any other event than that of the death or disability resulting from accident to the member shall be permitted to do business in this state. But this shall not prevent any assessment life association or organization authorized by this act, from providing for an equitable surrender value paid-up policy or endowment upon the cancellation of any policy or certificate provided the terms and conditions thereof are set forth in said policy or certificate of membership, and provided that such endowment or surrender value shall in the main be accumulated during the term of such policy or certificate. This act shall not relieve any corporation or assessment association, now doing business in this state, from the fulfillment of any contract heretofore entered into with its members under its policies or certificates of membership, nor shall any member be released hereby from his or her part of said contract.

1781. Benevolent societies. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 21. Nothing in this act shall be construed to apply to any secret fraternal society nor any association organized solely for benevolent purposes and composed wholly of members of any one occupation, guild, profession, or religious denomination, provided that any such society or organization named above in this section, shall by complying with the provisions of this act be entitled to all the privileges and be amenable to the obligations of this act.

1782. Live-stock companies. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 22. The provisions of this act shall be applied to all assessment or co-operative live-stock insurance companies or associations, now existing or hereafter organized in this or other states, so far as the same can be made to apply, and the auditor of state shall have the same power and authority in regard to such companies or associations as in regard to mutual benefit associations.

1783. 21 G. A., ch. 65, § 23. All acts or parts of acts conflicting with this act are hereby repealed, provided that nothing in this act shall be construed to affect insurance companies known as fixed or level premium companies, having a mathematical annual reserve.

CHAPTER 6.

OF MUTUAL BUILDING ASSOCIATIONS.

1784. How formed. 1184. Any number of persons, not less than five, may associate themselves and become incorporated as provided in chapter one of this title, for the purpose of raising moneys to be loaned to the members of the corporation, and to other persons, and for use in buying lots or houses, or in building or repairing houses or other purposes. [14 G. A., ch. 30, § 1.]

1785. Powers. 1185. Such corporation shall be authorized and empowered to levy, assess, and collect from its members such sums of money, by rates of stated dues, fines, interest on loans advanced, and premiums bid by members for the right of precedence in taking loans, as the corporation by its by-laws shall adopt; also to acquire, hold, incumber, and convey all such real estate and personal property as may be legitimately pledged to it on such loans, or may otherwise be transferred to it in due course of its business; and the dues, fines, and premiums so paid by members, in addition to the legal rate of interest on loans taken by them, shall not be construed to make the loans so taken usurious; but no person shall hold more than twenty shares in any such association. [Same, § 2; 14 G. A., ch. 101.]

1786. Similar societies heretofore organized. 1186. When mutual loan societies, or other associations heretofore organized under the laws of this state, with objects similar to those contemplated in the preceding sections, and permitting not more than twenty shares of their stock to be owned by any one member, have loaned, or shall hereafter loan, their capital or funds, or any part thereof, to their members, and have taken, or shall take, notes or obligations therefor, secured by mortgages, or otherwise, in accordance with the terms of their articles of incorporation and by-laws, such notes, obligations, and securities shall not be construed or held to be usurious by reason of any dues, fines, or premiums for the right of preference in taking such loans paid in addition to the legal rate of interest, but the same shall be valid and binding in all respects, the payment of such dues, fines, or premiums in addition to a rate of interest not exceeding ten per centum per annum, payable, annually, or at any less period, notwithstanding. [14 G. A., ch. 30, § 3; ch. 101.]

This and the preceding section do not authorize the taking of interest upon the premium bid for the loan. If the interest charged is more than ten per cent. per annum upon the amount actually loaned the contract is usurious: Hawkeye Benefit and Loan Ass'n v. Blackburn, 48-385; Burlington Mut. Loan Ass'n v. Heider, 55-424.

1787. Earnings. 1187. So much of the earnings of such corporations as may be necessary, not exceeding ten per cent. per annum, may be set apart to defray the current expenses of said association, and for the purchase of such real estate as may be necessary for the convenient transaction of its business, and the residue of said earnings shall be transferred to the credit of the shareholders, and when said shares are fully paid, then to be paid ratably to the shareholders. [14 G. A., ch. 30, § 4.]

CHAPTER 6a.

SAVINGS BANKS.

1788. How formed. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 1. Corporations to be known as savings banks may be formed, under and in accordance with the provisions of this act, for the purpose of receiving on deposit the savings and funds of others, and preserving and safely investing the same, and paying interest or dividends thereon; and such corporations, and the stockholders thereof, shall be subject to all the conditions and liabilities herein imposed; and hereafter no association shall be formed under the general incorporation acts for the purpose of transacting such banking business; and all corporations now organized thereunder and doing business as savings banks, shall, on or before the first day of July, A. D. 1875, conform to and re-organize under the provisions of this act, as hereinafter provided, and any failure or neglect of the proper officers of such associations to comply with the provisions of this act, shall be regarded as a forfeiture of all rights and privileges of such associations.

1789. Organization; examination; capital. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 2. It shall be lawful for any number of persons, not less than five, to organize savings banks under the provisions of this act, with a paid-up capital stock of not less than ten thousand dollars in cities and towns of ten thousand inhabitants, or under; and a paid-up capital stock of not less than fifty thousand dollars in cities of over ten thousand inhabitants; which said corporations shall be known as savings banks, and shall have power to transact the usual business of such institutions, but not to issue bank-notes to circulate as money; but no such association shall have the right to commence business until its officers elect, or its shareholders, shall have furnished to the auditor of state a sworn statement of the paid-up capital, and, when the auditor of state is satisfied as to the fact, he shall issue to such association a certificate authorizing it to commence business, a copy of which shall be published in some newspaper printed in the county where such association is located for four consecutive weeks, at the expense of such association. If the auditor of state should deem it necessary before issuing a certificate, he may make a personal examination of capital stock, or cause one to be made by some competent person appointed by him, the expense of which shall be paid by the association.

1790. Articles of incorporation. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 3. Any five or more persons of full age, a majority of whom shall be citizens of this state, who may desire to form an incorporated company for the purposes hereinbefore specified, shall make, sign and acknowledge, before some officer competent to take acknowledgments of deeds, and file in the office of the recorder of the county wherein the principal place of business of the company is intended to be located, and a certified copy thereof in the office of the secretary of state, articles of incorporation, in which shall be stated, the corporate name of the corporation; the object for which the corporation shall be formed; the amount of its capital stock; the time of its existence not to exceed fifty years; the number of its directors or trustees, and their names, who shall manage the affairs of the association for the first year; and the name of the city, or town, and county in which the principal place of business of the company is to be located; and a notice must be published in some newspaper published in the county wherein said bank is located for four consecutive weeks, stating the substance of the above requirements.

1791. Certified copy evidence. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 4. A copy of any articles of incorporation, filed in pursuance of this act and certified to by the recorder of the county in which it is filed, or by the secretary of state, shall be received in all courts, and in all actions and proceedings, as presumptive evidence of the facts therein stated.

1792. Enumeration of powers. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 5. When the certificate of the auditor shall have been received, and the articles of incorporation shall have been filed and recorded, and publication shall have been made as hereinbefore provided, the persons who shall have signed and acknowledged the same, and such persons as thereafter become their associates, or successors, shall be a body politic and corporate, and by their corporate name shall have succession for the period limited, and power:

First. To sue and be sued in any court;

Second. To make and use a common seal, and to alter the same at pleasure;

Third. To purchase, hold, sell, convey, and release from trust or mortgage, such real and personal estate as hereinafter provided for in this act;

Fourth. To appoint such officers, agents, and servants as the business of the corporation shall require, to define their powers, prescribe their duties, and fix their compensation, and to require of them such security as may be thought proper for the fulfillment of their duties;

Fifth. To loan and invest the funds of the corporation; to receive deposits of money, and to loan and invest the same as hereinafter provided, and to repay such deposits without interest, or with such interest as the by-laws of the constitution may provide;

Sixth. To make by-laws, not inconsistent with the laws of this state, for the organization of the company, and the management of its property, the regulation of its affairs, the condition on which deposits will be received, the time and manner of dividing the profits and of paying interest on deposits, and for carrying on all kinds of business within the objects and purposes of the company.

1793. Management. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 6; 22 G. A., ch. 89. The business and property of such savings banks shall be managed by a board of directors or trustees, of no less than five nor more than nine, all of whom shall be shareholders and citizens of this state, the first board to be designated in the articles of incorporation; and who shall organize by taking an oath, diligently, faithfully, and impartially to perform the duties imposed upon them by this act, and not knowingly to violate, or willingly to permit to be violated, any of the provisions thereof; that said directors or trustees are the bona fide owners in their own right of the stock standing in their respective names on the books of the bank; and that the same are not hypothecated, or in any manner pledged as security for any loan obtained, or debt owing to said savings bank; a certificate of which oath, signed by each director, and certified to by the officers before whom it was taken, shall be filed and preserved in the office of the auditor of state. The call for the first meeting of directors or trustees shall be signed by one or more persons named as directors or trustees in the certificate, setting forth the time and place of meeting, which notice shall be delivered personally to each director, or published at least ten days in some newspaper published in the county in which is the principal place of business of the corporation, or, if no newspaper is published in the county, then in a newspaper nearest thereto. At their first meeting, and as often thereafter as their by-laws shall require, the directors or trustees shall elect from their number, a president and one or more vice-presidents for the ensuing year; and shall appoint a treasurer or cashier, and such other subordinate officers, agents, and servants as may be required, who shall hold their offices at the pleasure of the board, and who shall give such security for the faithful performance of their duties as may be required by the by-laws. All vacancies in the board of directors or trustees shall be filled, at the next regular meeting after such vacancy shall arise, from among the stockholders, and the person receiving a majority of the votes of the whole number of directors or trustees shall be duly elected. The directors or trustees, to hold office after the expiration of the term of those named in the certificate of incorporation, shall be annually elected at such time and place, and in such mode, and upon such notice as shall be provided by the by-laws of the company, and shall hold office for one year, or until their successors are elected and qualified. All such elections shall be by ballot, and each stockholder shall be entitled to one vote for every share of stock held by him, and the persons so receiving the greater number of votes, shall be directors of [or] trustees. Shareholders may vote by proxy duly authorized, and no shareholder shall be entitled to vote whose liability to said bank is past due and unpaid. If it should happen at any time that an election of directors or trustees shall not be had on the day designated in the by-laws of the company, it shall be lawful on any other day to hold such election, after giving due notice, and the directors or trustees shall be continued in office until their successors are elected and qualified. A majority of the directors or trustees shall constitute a quorum of said board for the transaction of business, but in no case shall a measure be declared carried, unless receiving three affirmative votes; but said bank may provide in the by-laws that a smaller number, not less than five, one of whom shall be the president and [or] vice-president, shall constitute a quorum, which number shall thereupon be authorized to transact business.

1794. Deposits. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 7. All savings banks organized under this act may receive, on deposit, all such sums of money as shall from time to time be offered by tradesmen, merchants, laborers, servants, minors, and others. All such banks with a paid-up capital of ten thousand dollars may receive deposits to the amount of one hundred thousand dollars; those with a paid-up capital of twenty-five thousand dollars may receive deposits to the amount of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars; those with a paid-up capital of fifty thousand dollars, deposits to the amount of five hundred thousand; those with a paid-up capital of one hundred thousand dollars, deposits to the amount of one million dollars; and no greater amount of deposits shall be received without a like proportionate increase of cash capital, and which capital shall be regarded a guaranty fund for the better security of depositors, and so invested in some safe and available securities. The deposits so received for the purpose of safe keeping, and invested as provided in this act, shall be paid to such depositor or his or her representatives when requested at such time or times, and with such interest, and under such regulations as the board of directors or trustees shall from time to time prescribe, not inconsistent with the provisions of this act, which regulations shall be printed and conspicuously exposed in some place, accessible and visible to all, in the business office of said bank, and no alteration, which may at any time be made in such rules or regulations, shall in any manner affect the rights of depositors in respect to deposits, or the interest thereon, made previous to such alteration. It shall be lawful for savings banks to require sixty days' written notice of the withdrawal of any deposits, but when there are sufficient funds on hand the officers of the bank may in their discretion waive this requirement. It shall be lawful for savings banks to close any accounts upon written notice, as may be provided for in the by-laws, to a depositor to withdraw his deposit, after which notice it shall cease to draw interest; provided, nothing in this act shall be so construed as to prevent such banks in their discretion from issuing certificates of deposits, payable on demand.

1795. Limitation as to interest. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 8. All accounts upon which no deposit or drafts shall be made for a period of ten years in succession shall be so far closed that neither the sum deposited, nor the interest that shall have accrued thereon, shall be entitled to any interest after the expiration of the ten years from the date of the last deposit or draft. This provision, however, shall not apply to endowments for children, to trust estates, nor to other cases where special provision is made therefor at the time of the deposit thereof.

1796. Investment of funds. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 9. It shall be lawful for the directors or trustees of any such savings bank to invest the funds or capital belonging to said bank, and all moneys deposited therein, and all the gains and profits thereof, only as follows, to wit:

First. In the stocks or bonds, or interest-bearing notes or certificates, of the United States.

Second. In the stocks or bonds, or evidences of debt bearing interest, of this state.

Third. In the stocks, bonds, or warrants of any city, town, county, village, or school-district of this state, issued pursuant to the authority of any law of this state, but not exceeding twenty-five per cent. of the assets of the bank shall consist of town, village, or school-district bonds or warrants.

Fourth. In notes or bonds secured by mortgage or deed of trust upon unincumbered real estate in this state, worth at least twice the amount loaned thereon.

Fifth. It shall be lawful for said banks to discount, purchase, sell, and make loans upon commercial paper, notes, bills of exchange, drafts or any other personal or public security; but said bank shall not purchase, hold, or make loans upon the shares of its capital stock.

Sixth. In all cases of loans upon real estate, all the expenses of searches, examinations, and certificates of title, or the inspection of property, appraisals of value, and of drawing, perfecting, and recording papers, shall be paid by such borrowers. Wherever buildings are included in the valuation of any real estate upon which a loan shall be made by said bank, they shall be insured by the mortgagor, for the benefit of the bank for at least two-thirds their value, in some reliable company, and the policy of insurance shall be duly assigned to the bank; and it shall be lawful for said bank to renew such policy of insurance from year to year, in case the mortgagor neglects to do so, and may charge the same to him. All the necessary charges and expenses paid by said bank for such renewals shall be paid by such mortgagor to the said bank, and shall be a lien upon the property so mortgaged until paid.

1797. Real estate. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 10. It shall be lawful for savings banks to purchase, hold, and convey real estate only as follows, to wit:

First. The lot and building in which the business of the bank may be carried on.

Second. Such as shall have been purchased at sales upon foreclosure of mortgages owned by the bank, or upon judgment or decrees obtained or rendered for debts due it; and all such real estate as is described in this clause shall be sold by said bank within ten years after the title of the same shall be vested in it by purchases or otherwise.

1798. Interest; dividends. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 11. It shall be the duty of the board of directors or trustees, from time to time, to regulate the rate of interest or dividends to be allowed to depositors, and to pay the same upon the presentation of the deposit-book or certificates; and after the payment of, or setting aside a sufficient amount to pay, the interest to depositors of said banks, and after deducting the necessary expenses of said banks, the board of directors or trustees may make from the surplus profits in hand in cash such dividends on the capital stock as in their discretion may seem best and proper.

1799. Shares; liability of shareholders. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 12. The capital stock of all banks organized under this act shall be divided into shares of one hundred dollars each, and shall be deemed personal property, and shall be transferable on the books of the banks in such manner as shall be prescribed by the by-laws. No certificate representing shares of stocks shall be issued (nor shall such stock be considered as re[ac]quired) until the whole sum of money which such certificate purports to represent shall have been paid into the corporation. Shareholders in banks organized under the provisions of this act shall be individually and severally liable to the creditor[s] of the corporation of which they are shareholders, over and above the amount of stock by them held, to an amount equal to their respective shares so held, for all its liabilities accruing while they remained shareholders, and no transfer of stock shall affect such liability for the period of six months thereafter; and should any such bank become insolvent, and its assets be found insufficient to pay its debts and liabilities, its shareholders may, to that extent, be compelled to pay such deficiency, in proportion to the amount of stock owned by each.

1800. How voted. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 13. Whenever any stock is held by any person as executor, administrator, trustee, or guardian, he may represent such stock, in person or by proxy, and any married woman holding stock in her own name, in any bank organized under this act, may cast her vote or appoint her own proxy to vote for her.

1801. Other associations. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 14. Any person authorized thereto, by resolution of the board of directors or trustees of any corporation, association, or society, having funds deposited, or owning stock, in any bank formed under this act, shall be entitled to receive such deposit or to transfer such stock, and to cast the vote of such corporation, association, or society thereon.

1802. Deposits by executors, minors, etc. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 15. Whenever any deposits are held by any person or [as] executor, administrator, trustee, or guardian, he shall be entitled to receive the same; and whenever any deposit shall be made by any minor the directors or trustees shall pay to such depositor such sum as may be due to him or her, although no guardian shall have been appointed by or for such minor, or the guardian of such minor shall not have authorized the drawing of the same; and the check, receipt, or acquittance of such minor shall be as valid as if the same was executed by a guardian of said minor, or said minor was of full age, if such deposit was made personally by said minor; and whenever any deposit shall be made in her own name by any woman being or thereafter becoming married, said director[s] or trustees shall pay such sum as may be due to her on her receipt or acquittance.

1803. Cannot issue bills. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 16. No bank organized under this act shall, by implication or construction, be deemed to possess the power of creating and issuing bills, notes, or other evidences of debt for circulation as money; nor shall it be lawful for such bank, or the directors or trustees thereof, to contract any debt or liability against the bank, for any purpose whatever, except for deposits and the necessary expenses of management and transacting its business; and the capital stock and the assets of the bank shall be security to depositors.

1804. Pay of and losses to officers. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 17. No director or trustee of a saving[s] bank, shall, as such, receive any pay or emolument for his services; and no trustee, officer, or servant of such savings bank shall, directly or indirectly, in any manner, use the funds of the said bank, or its deposits, or any part thereof, except for regular business transactions, and all loans made to said trustees, officers, servants, and agents of the bank shall be upon the same security [as] required of others, and in strict conformity to the rules and regulations of the bank; and all such loans shall be made only by the board, and shall be acted upon in the absence of the party applying therefor: but such reasonable compensation may be paid to the officers of the bank as may from time to time be fixed in the by-laws.

1805. Limit of liabilities. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 18. The total liabilities to any association of any person, or of any company, corporation, or firm, for money borrowed, including in the liabilities of a company or firm the liabilities of the several members thereof, shall at no time exceed twenty per cent. of capital stock actually paid in; provided, that the discount of bona fide bills of exchange drawn against actually existing value and the discount of commercial or business paper actually owned by the person or persons, corporation, or firm negotiating the same shall not be considered money borrowed.

1806. Misnomer. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 19. The misnomer of any such savings bank, in any instrument, shall not vitiate or impair the same if it be sufficiently described to ascertain the intention of the parties.

1807. Unauthorized use of name. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 20. It shall not be lawful for any bank, banking association, or private bankers, to advertise or put forth a sign as a savings bank or savings institution; and any bank, banking association, or private banker, violating these provisions, shall forfeit and pay, for every such offense, the sum of one hundred dollars for every day such offense shall be continued, to be sued for, and recovered in the name of the people of the state, in any court having cognizance thereof, for the use of the school fund.

1808. Penalty. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 21. Any person or persons who shall put up or cause to be put up or exhibited any sign, or who shall issue or circulate any card, circular, or advertisement purporting to be a savings bank not being organized under this act, shall, on conviction thereof, be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and be punished by a fine not exceeding fifty dollars for each offense or for each day such offense shall be continued.

1809. Quarterly statements. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 22. All associations organized under the general incorporation laws of this state, for the purpose of transacting a banking business, buying, selling, exchange, receiving deposits, discounting notes, etc., shall make a full, clear, and accurate statement of the condition of the association as hereinafter provided, which shall be verified by the oath of the president or vice-president or cashier and two of the directors, which statement shall contain:

First. The amount of capital stock actually paid in.

Second. The amount of debts of every kind due to banks, bankers, or other persons other than regular deposits.

Third. The total amount due depositors including sight and time deposits.

Fourth. The amount subject to be drawn at sight then remaining on deposit with solvent banks or bankers of the country, specifying each city and town and the amount deposited in each and belonging to such association.

Fifth. The amount of gold and silver coin and bullion belonging to such association at the time of making statement.

Sixth. The amount then on hand of bills of solvent banks.

Seventh. The amount of bills, bonds, and other evidences of debt, discounted or purchased by such association, and then belonging to the same, specifying particularly the amount of suspended debts, the amount considered good, the amount considered doubtful, and the amount in suit or judgment.

Eighth. The value of real or personal property held for the convenience of such association, specifying the amount of each.

Ninth. The amount of undivided profits if any then on hands.

Tenth. The total amount of all liabilities to such association on the part of the directors thereof:

Which statement shall be forthwith transmitted to the auditor of state and be by him filed in his office.

1810. Examination by auditor. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 23. The auditor of state shall, at any time he may see proper, make, or cause to be made, an examination of any association, as hereinafter provided contemplated in this chapter, or he shall call upon any such association for a report of its state and condition as hereinbefore provided, upon any given day which has passed, as often as four times in a year, and which report the auditor shall cause to be published for one day in some daily newspaper published in the county where such association shall be located, or, if there be no such newspaper published in said county, then such report shall be published in some weekly newspaper printed in said county for one week, and the expenses of such publication shall be paid by such institution.

1811. Auditor to report. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 24. It shall be the duty of the auditor of state to communicate to the legislature, at each session, a statement of the condition of every savings bank, from which reports have been received for the preceding year, and to suggest any amendments in the law relative to savings banks which in his judgment may be necessary or proper to increase the security of depositors.

1812. Proceedings against by state. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 25. Whenever it shall appear to the auditor that any savings bank has been guilty of violating this act or the law, or is conducting its business in an unsafe manner, he shall, by an order under his hand and seal of office, addressed to the institution so offending, direct discontinuance of such illegal and unsafe practices, and he shall demand a conformity with the requirements of this act, and whenever any such savings bank shall refuse or neglect to comply with such order, he shall communicate the fact to the attorney-general of the state, whose duty it shall be to institute proceedings against such savings banks as are now, or may be hereafter, authorized in law in cases of insolvent corporations. The auditor of state may appoint, and the person or persons who may be appointed by him, to examine the affairs of any savings banks, shall have power to administer oaths to any person whose testimony may be required on any such examination, and to compel the appearance and attendance of any such person, for the purpose of such examination, by summons, subpoena, or attachment, in the manner now authorized in respect to the attendance of persons as witnesses in the courts of this state, and all books and papers which it may be deemed necessary to examine by the auditor, on the examination so appointed, shall be produced, and their production may be compelled in like manner. The expenses of any examination, made in pursuance of this act, shall be paid by the savings banks so examined, in such amount as the auditor shall certify to be just and reasonable.

1813. Penalty for false statements. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 26. Every officer, agent, or clerk of any savings bank organized under this act, who shall wilfully and knowingly subscribe or make any false statement or false entries in the books of such bank, or shall knowingly subscribe or exhibit false papers with the intent to deceive any person authorized to examine as to the condition of said institution, or shall wilfully or knowingly subscribe or make false reports, shall be deemed guilty of felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not exceeding ten thousand dollars, and be imprisoned in the state prison not less than two nor more than five years, and be forever after incapable of holding any office created by this act.

1814. Intentional fraud. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 27. Intentional fraud on the part of savings banks organized under this act, or in deceiving the public or individuals in relation to their means or their liabilities, or diversion of the funds of the bank to other objects than those mentioned in its certificate of incorporation, and the payment of dividends which leave insufficient funds to meet the liabilities of the bank, shall subject those guilty thereof to fine of not less than five hundred dollars, or imprisonment of not less than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court, and shall cause a forfeiture of all the privileges herein conferred, and the court may proceed to close the bank by an information in the manner prescribed by law.

1815. Taxation of capital. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 28. The paid up capital of all savings banks organized and doing business under this act shall be subject to the same rates of taxation and rules of valuation as other taxable property, by the revenue laws of the state, which taxes shall be levied on and paid by the banks and not the individual stockholders, and the general assembly shall never impose any greater tax upon property employed in banking under this act than is or may be imposed upon the property of individuals. The franchise of all such banks, the savings and funds deposited therein, and the mortgages and other securities, wherever the same are invested, are not to be taxed, but are expressly exempted therefrom, and may be omitted from assessments of the bank required by the revenue laws of this state.

So much of the capital stock of a savings bank as is invested in United States bonds is exempt from taxation by the state: German Am. Savings Bank v. Burlington, 54-609.

In general, see notes to § 1297.

1816. Increasing capital stock. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 29. Whenever it is desired to increase the amount of capital stock of such banks, a meeting of stockholders may be called by a notice signed by the officers of said bank, and at least a majority of its directors, and published at least thirty days in every issue of some newspaper published in the county where the principal place of business of the bank is located, which notice shall specify the object of the meeting, the time and place when it is to be held, and the amount which it is proposed to increase the capital stock; and a vote of two-thirds of all the shares of stock of said bank shall be necessary to an increase of the amount of capital stock. If at any meeting so called a sufficient number of votes have been given in favor of increasing the amount of capital stock, a certificate of the proceedings, showing a compliance with these provisions, the amount of capital stock actually paid in, and the amount to which the capital stock is to be increased, and the manner of such increase, shall be made out, signed, and verified by the affidavit of the chairman and secretary of the meeting, certified by a majority of the directors or trustees, and filed and recorded as required by the third section of this act. When this is done, the capital stock of the bank shall be increased to the amount specified in the certificate.

1817. Dissolution. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 30. All savings banks organized under this act may be dissolved, prior to the period fixed upon in the certificate of incorporation, by the affirmative votes of stockholders holding three-fourths of the capital stock, at a meeting of stockholders to be called for this purpose and in the manner and after publication of notice as required in the preceding section. In all cases of dissolution of a bank hereunder, or the commencement of proceedings under this act to close the same, the receiver or receivers appointed thereunder shall not be required or permitted by forced sale to sell the securities of said banks, but shall proceed as expeditiously as possible to collect the same and make distribution of proceeds to those entitled thereto.

1818. Re-organization. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 31. Any bank or association existing under and by virtue of any law of this state may be re-organized under the provisions of this act, and when duly organized all securities, real estate, or property may be transferred to such new organization; but no such re-organization shall have the effect to discharge the original bank, its directors or stockholders, from any liability to its depositors or any other person; but the same shall continue until legally discharged, and such new organization or bank shall be legally liable to pay every claim or demand existing against the bank whose assets or property, or any part thereof, it has received by reason of such re-organization. All such banks may avail themselves of the provisions [of] and become incorporated under this act, by filing with the recorder of the county in which the principal place of business is located, and a certified copy thereof in the office of the secretary of state, a certificate stating their intention and election to become so incorporated thereunder, which election and intention may be made and declared by the directors or trustees of such bank or association, or a majority of them. The certificate stating such intention may be signed by the president and secretary of such corporation, association, or bank, and shall be acknowledged before some officer competent to take acknowledgments of deeds; and in all other respects existing banks and associations re-organizing hereunder shall comply with, and conform to, all the provisions and requirements of this act with reference to the original organization of savings banks, so far as the same may be applicable, and as soon thereafter as the auditor's certificate is received and published, as hereinbefore provided, may proceed to transact business.

1819. False statement as to capital. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 32. Any saving[s] bank organized under the provisions of this act is hereby prohibited from advertising in any way, either by publication or otherwise, any greater amount of capital than such banks have [has] actually paid in, and such bank shall be subject to a fine of twenty-five dollars for each and every violation of this section.

1820. 15 G. A., ch. 60, § 33. All acts, and parts of acts in conflict with this act, are hereby declared to be inoperative so far as they affect this act.

STATE BANKS.

1821. Name. 21 G. A., ch. 72, § 1. All associations hereafter organized under the general incorporation laws of this state, for transacting a banking business, buying, or selling exchange, receiving deposits, discounting notes, etc.; other than savings banks, shall have the word "state" incorporated in and made a part of the name of such corporation, and no such corporation shall be authorized to transact business, unless the provisions of this act have been complied with.

1822. Change of name. 21 G. A., ch. 72, § 2. All such banking associations other than savings banks, incorporated at the time of the taking effect of this act may change their corporate name, by amendment of their respective articles of incorporation, so as to embrace the word "state" in their respective corporate names.

1823. Others not to use. 21 G. A., ch. 75, § 3. It shall be unlawful for any association, not incorporated, partnership, or individual engaged in banking business, buying or selling exchange, receiving deposits, discounting notes and bills etc.; to incorporate or embrace in the name of such associations, partnership, or individual the word "state" provided this act shall not apply to banking associations organized under the laws of the United States.

FRAUDULENT BANKING.

1824. Deposits not to be received by insolvent bank. 18 G. A., ch. 153, § 1. No bank, banking house, exchange broker, deposit office, or firm, company, corporation, or party engaged in the banking, broker, exchange, or deposit business, shall accept or receive on deposit, with or without interest, any moneys, bank bills, or notes, or United States treasury notes, or currency or other notes, bills or drafts circulating as money or currency, when such bank, banking house, exchange broker, or deposit office, firm, or party, is insolvent.

1825. Penalty. 18 G. A., ch. 153, § 2. If any such bank, banking house, exchange broker, or deposit office, firm, company, corporation, or party, shall receive or accept on deposit any such deposits as aforesaid, when insolvent, any officer, director, cashier, manager, member, party, or managing party thereof, knowing of such insolvency, who shall knowingly receive or accept, be accessory, or permit or connive at the receiving or accepting on deposit therein, or thereby, any such deposits as aforesaid, shall be guilty of a felony, and upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for a term not to exceed ten years, or by imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed one year, or both fine and imprisonment, the fine not to exceed ten thousand dollars.

TITLE X.

OF INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS.

CHAPTER 1.

OF MILL-DAMS AND RACES.

1826. Petition. 1188. Any person who owns land on one or both sides of a water-course, who desires to erect or heighten any dam thereon, or construct or enlarge a race therefrom, for the purpose of propelling any mill or machinery to be erected on such stream by the water thereof, may file a petition in the office of the clerk of the district [or circuit] court of the county in which such mill or machinery is to be erected. [R., §§ 1264, 1274; 10 G. A., ch. 31.]

The action here contemplated is to be commenced by the mill owner. The land owner is left to his common-law remedy or his remedy in equity. And the mill owner may, after proceedings are commenced, dismiss them without the consent of the other party: Hunting v. Curtis, 10-153.

The statute does not require that the petition should be sworn to: Gammell v. Potter, 2-562.

The dam, when erected in accordance with these provisions, will not be a nuisance, but may be so erected and maintained as to become such: State v. Close, 35-570.

This and the following sections are not unconstitutional: Burnham v. Thompson, 35-421; the use, though for private profit, is such a public one as to authorize the taking of public property therefor (arguendo): Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9.

Before the utilization of steam, the establishment of mills and manufactories and the use of water-power was deemed a public necessity for which private property might properly be condemned. If such statutes were now enacted for the first time it is possible, if not probable, that they would not be sustained: Fleming v. Hull, 73-598.

There is no limitation as to the purpose for which the mills and other machinery are to be used: Burnham v. Thompson, 35-421.

The proceedings need not necessarily be had before the work is commenced, but may be instituted while it is in progress: Ibid.

In the proceeding compensation for damages arising after the filing of the petition and before the assessment by the jury should be allowed: Ibid.

It is only injuries to lands which will be directly affected by the erection of the dam which are contemplated. And the owner of lands remote from the dam and not fronting upon the river need not be made party to the proceedings and cannot afterwards recover for injuries suffered, as, for instance, saturation by percolation: Wilson v. Hanthorn, 72-451.

1827. What to contain. 1189. Such petition shall describe with reasonable certainty the locality where such mill or machinery is to be erected, together with that of such dam or race, and also of the lands that will be overflowed or otherwise affected thereby, and the names of the owners thereof. The person filing the petition shall be known as plaintiff and the owners of the land as defendants. [R., § 1265.]

1828. Order for a jury; notice. 1190. The clerk shall thereupon issue an order, to which shall be attached a copy of the petition, directed to the sheriff, commanding him to summon a jury composed of twelve disinterested electors of his county to meet on a day fixed in said order upon the lands therein described, which order, including the copy of the petition, shall be served on the defendants in the same manner and for the same length of time previous to the day fixed in the order as is required for the service of original notices. If any of said defendants are non-residents of the state, they may be served by publication as original notices in like cases are required to be served. And if any defendant is a minor or insane person who has no guardian, the clerk, at the time of issuing the order, may appoint a guardian to defend for him by indorsement on such order. [R., §§ 1266, 1270.]

Where the husband is made party to the proceeding as the owner of the land the fact that he afterwards has the title vested in his wife collusively will not enable him to bring action for damages in disregard of proceedings for condemnation: Lummery v. Braddy, 8-33.

If, upon motion, the writ is quashed, the court should award another, no original notice of such second writ being necessary: Barnham v. Thompson, 35-421.

1829. Lands in another county. 1191. If any of the lands are situated in a county other than that in which the petition is required to be filed, the proceedings herein referred to may take place to the same extent and in the same manner as if such lands were situated in the county where the petition is filed. [R., § 1270.]

1830. Action of jury. 1192. The jury shall be sworn to impartially and to the best of their skill and judgment view the lands described in the petition, and ascertain and appraise the damages each of the defendants will sustain by reason of such lands being overflowed or otherwise injuriously affected by the dam or race, or the heightening or enlarging the same, and whether the dwelling-house, outhouse, orchard, or garden of any defendant will be so affected, and if so, whether the same has been placed there for that purpose. [11 G. A., ch. 119, § 1.]

It is not necessary that the inquisition of the jury shall say how far the lands of the claimant may be affected by the overflow: Gammell v. Potter, 2-563.

The overflow of agricultural land and the consequent damage is not the only matter to be looked at in estimating the damages. The flooding of a coal-bed or stone quarry, or loss of a spring, or the destruction of a ford, should be taken into consideration: Walters v. Houck, 7-72.

1831. Evidence; report. 1193. The jury may, in addition to examining the premises, hear and examine witnesses. They shall report their findings in writing and attach the same to the order, which shall be returned by the sheriff to the clerk, and if it appears therefrom that the dwelling-house, outhouse, orchard, or garden of any defendant will be injuriously affected, and that the same was placed on the premises for that purpose, such fact shall not be considered any bar or hindrance to the construction or building of the race or dam. [Same, § 2.]

Failure of the jury to estimate damages which should be included must be taken advantage of either in an application to the court to set aside the verdict and award a new inquiry, or else under the provision giving a right of action to the applicant for any loss or damage resulting, but not actually foreseen by the jury, nor estimated by them on the inquest: Gammell v. Potter, 6-548.

1832. Appeal. 1194; 15 G. A., ch. 22. Either party may appeal from such assessment of damages to the court where the said proceedings are pending within thirty days after the assessment is made, in the manner, and the proceedings on such appeal shall be, as provided in chapter four of this title.

1833. Cause shown. 1195. When said report is filed, the clerk shall issue an order directed to the defendants, requiring them to appear at the next term of the court and show cause, if any they have, why a license should not be granted to construct the dam or race, which order shall be served in the same manner as hereinbefore directed. [R., § 1268.]

1834. Objections filed; pleadings; amendment of; another jury. 1196. On or before the day fixed in the order for the defendants to show cause, they may file any objections to the prior proceedings or to granting the license they see proper. The petition and objections filed thereto shall constitute the pleadings, and the same may be amended upon such terms as the court deems just, and if the proceedings of the jury are found informal or defective in substance, the court may order a new jury to be impaneled upon such terms as to notice as it may direct. The return of the sheriff may be amended at any stage of the proceedings in accordance with the facts.

A defendant may plead and prove, by way of objection, facts tending to show that the granting of the license would be unreasonable or not for the public benefit; but he cannot thus set up matters legitimately involved in the question of damages submitted to the jury, and pertinent only to an application to set aside their finding and award a new inquiry. Until set aside their ascertainment must be considered conclusive: Gannell v. Potter, 6-548.

The overruling by the court of a motion to set aside the verdict of the jury and quash the writ may be appealed from, without any final judgment having been rendered: Burnham v. Thompson, 35-421.

1835. Written testimony. 1197. Testimony may be taken to be introduced on the final hearing before the court, in the same manner that testimony is taken in equitable actions triable on written testimony. [11 G. A., ch. 119, § 2.]

1836. License granted. 1198. If it shall appear to the court that neither the dwelling-house, outhouse, garden, or orchard of any defendant will be overflowed or injuriously affected, and the court shall judge it reasonable and for the public benefit, license shall be granted to construct such dam or race, on the plaintiff paying to the proper parties the damages found by the jury and decreed by the court. [R., § 1269.]

1837. Forfeiture of. 1199. If the plaintiff does not begin within one year thereafter to construct said dam or race, and finish and have in operation the mill and machinery in three years thereafter, and afterwards keep it in good repair for the accommodation of the public, or in case said dam, race, mill or machinery be destroyed, he shall not begin to repair or rebuild it within one year, and finish it in three years, then said license shall be forfeited. [Same.]

1838. Continuance. 1200. If the order shall not be executed by the sheriff on the day therein mentioned, he may, from time to time, appoint another day, notice thereof being given to the parties interested as hereinbefore provided; and if inquest cannot be completed in one day, the sheriff shall adjourn the jury, from day to day, until its completion. [R., § 1270.]

1839. No bar to action. 1201. No proceeding under this chapter shall bar an action which could have been maintained if this chapter had not been enacted, unless the prosecution or action was actually foreseen and estimated upon the inquest. [R., § 1271.]

This section does not bar an action for damages accruing before the proceeding. But where the jury found that certain land would be affected, but allowed no damages, held, that nevertheless, an action for damages subsequently suffered must have been foreseen and estimated, and that such action was therefore barred: Watson v. Van Meter, 43-76.

The fact that the land owner is entitled to recover damages not foreseen and estimated by the jury does not entitle him to maintain an injunction to restrain the maintenance of the claim: Lummery v. Braddy, 8-33.

1840. New party. 1202. Any owner of land affected by any proceedings under this chapter, who has not been made party by reason of want of notice, or from any other cause, may be made party thereto by proper proceedings at any time thereafter. [R., § 1272.]

1841. Costs. 1203. Costs and fees under this chapter shall be the same as in other cases for like services, and shall be paid by the plaintiff. [R., § 1273.]

1842. Right to repair. 1204. Where the water backed up by any dam belonging to any mill or machinery is about to break through or over the banks of the stream or race, or to wash a channel, so as to turn the water of such stream or race, or any part thereof, out of its ordinary channel, whereby such mill or machinery will be injured or affected, the owner or occupier of such mills or machinery, if he do not own such banks, or the lands lying contiguous thereto, may, if necessary, enter thereon, and erect and keep in repair such embankments and other works as shall be necessary to prevent such water from breaking through or over the banks of such stream or race, or washing a channel as aforesaid, such owner or occupier committing thereon no unnecessary waste or damage, and being liable to pay any damages which the owner of the lands may actually sustain by the erection and repair aforesaid. [R., §§ 1275, 1276.]

1843. Penalty for injuring embankment. 1205. If any person shall injure, destroy, or remove any such embankment, or other works, the owner or occupier of such mill or machinery may recover of such person all damages he may sustain by reason of such injury, destruction, or removal. [R., § 1277.]

1844. Fall below dam. 1206. Any person owning and using a water-power for the purpose of propelling machinery, shall have the right to acquire, maintain, and utilize the fall below such power for the purpose of improving the same, in like manner and to the same extent as provided in this chapter for the erection or heightening of mill-dams. After such right has been acquired, the fall shall be considered part and parcel of said water-power or privilege, and the deepening or excavating of the stream or tail-race as herein contemplated shall in no way affect any rights relating to such water-power acquired by the owner thereof prior thereto.

OF LEVEES, DRAINS, DITCHES, AND WATER-COURSES.

1845. Supervisors to locate. 1207; 16 G. A., ch. 140, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 1. The board of supervisors of any county having a population of five thousand inhabitants, as shown by the last preceding census, may locate and cause to be constructed levees, ditches or drains, or change the direction of any water-course in such county, whenever the same will be conducive to the public health, convenience, or welfare. [14 G. A., ch. 120, § 1.]

The provisions of this chapter are constitutional: Hatch v. Pottawattamie County, 43-442.

The work is not to be undertaken for private advantage, but for the public good: Patterson v. Baumer, 43-477.

1846. Proceedings; bond; survey; notice. 1208; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 2. A petition signed by a majority of persons resident in the county, owning land adjacent to such improvement, shall be first filed in the office of the county auditor, setting forth the necessity of the same, the starting point, route, and termini. A bond shall be filed in said office with sufficient sureties to be approved by the auditor, and conditioned to pay all costs and expenses incurred in case the supervisors refuse to grant the prayer of the petition. The auditor shall thereupon place a copy of said petition in the hands of the county surveyor, or a competent engineer, who shall take with him the necessary assistants and proceed to make a survey of the proposed levee, ditch, drain, or change in the direction of the water-course, and return a plat and profile of the same to the auditor; such return shall set forth a full and detailed description of the proposed improvement, its availability, necessity, and probable cost, with a description of each tract of land owned by different persons through which the proposed improvement is to be located, how it will be affected thereby, and its situation and level as compared with that of adjoining lands, together with such other facts as he may deem material. The county auditor shall, immediately thereafter, cause notice in writing to be served on the owner of each tract of land along the route of the proposed levee, ditch, drain, or change in the direction of such water-course, who is a resident of the county, of the pendency and prayer of said petition, and the session of the board of supervisors at which the same will be heard, which notice shall be served ten days prior to said session, in the same manner that original notices are required to be served; in case any such owner is a non-resident of the county, such notice shall be published for two consecutive weeks in some newspaper published in the county. [Same, § 2.]

A petition to the court signed by the residents interested in the improvements as prescribed in this section is a jurisdictional matter. Unless the requirements of the statute in this respect are complied with the supervisors can obtain no jurisdiction. In the absence of a showing by the record of the board or in some other manner authorized by law, no presumption will be exercised of the existence of the jurisdictional facts necessary to show that the supervisors acquired authority to act, such as that the petition was signed by the required number of residents: Richman v. Board of Supervisors, 70-627.

A person who signs a petition and afterwards a remonstrance must be regarded not as a petitioner but as a remonstrant: Ibid.

The petition must be signed by a majority of the persons residing in the county owning land adjacent to the proposed improvement, otherwise the board will not have the jurisdiction to levy taxes: Shaw v. Supervisors of Johnson County, 72-763.

Action by certiorari to review the action of the board of supervisors in levying a tax to pay for the construction of a ditch, the proceedings for the establishment of which are void, may be brought within one year after the levy of the tax: Shepard v. Supervisors of Johnson County, 72-258.

1847. Location; damages. 1209; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 3. The supervisors, at the session set for the hearing of said petition, shall, if they find the preceding section to have been complied with, proceed to hear and determine said petition; and, if they deem it necessary, shall view the premises, and if they find such levee, ditch, drain, or change in the direction of the water-course to be necessary, and that the same will be conducive to the public health, convenience, or welfare, and no application shall have been made for compensation as provided in the next section, shall proceed to locate and establish such levee, ditch, drain, or water-course, on the route specified in the plat and return of said county surveyor or engineer. But, if any application for compensation has been made, further proceedings shall be adjourned to the next regular session; and the county auditor shall forthwith proceed to appoint appraisers to assess and determine the damages and compensation of such claimant, who shall proceed in the manner as provided by law for the assessment of damages in the opening of highways; and the compensation so found and assessed in favor of said claimant, shall be paid, in the first instance, by the parties benefited by such improvement, or secured to be paid upon such terms and conditions as the county auditor may deem just and proper; and the said supervisors shall, at the next regular session after such compensation shall have been assessed and paid, or secured as aforesaid, proceed to locate and establish such levee, ditch, drain, or water-course, as hereinbefore provided. [Same, § 4.]

1848. Compensation. 1210; 16 G. A., ch. 140, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 4. Any person claiming compensation for land required for the purpose of constructing any such levee, ditch, drain, or water-course, or for damages sustained by the change of direction of any such water-course, shall make his application in writing therefor to the county supervisors on or before the first day of the session at which the petition has been set for hearing, and, on failure to make such application, shall be deemed and held to have waived his, her, or their right to such compensation. [Same, § 3.]

1849. Work divided. 1211; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 5. Said supervisors, whenever they shall have established any such levee, ditch, drain, or water-course, shall divide the same into suitable sections, not less in number than the number of owners of land through which the same may be located, and shall also prescribe the time within which work upon each section shall be completed. [Same, § 5.]

1850. Letting work; payment. 1212; 16 G. A., ch. 140, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 85, § 8; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 6. The county auditor shall cause notice to be given of the time and place of letting, and of the kind and amount of work to be done upon each section, and the time fixed for its completion, by publication for thirty days in some newspaper printed and of general circulation in said county, and shall let the work upon the sections respectively to the lowest bidder therefor; and the person or persons taking such work at such letting shall be paid in the following manner: The engineer in charge of the construction of the levee, ditch or drain shall furnish the contractors monthly estimates of the amount of work done on each section; upon the filing of such estimates with the county auditor, the auditor shall draw a warrant in favor of the contractor for eighty per cent. of the value of the work done, according to the estimate; and when said levee, ditch or drain is completed to the satisfaction of the engineer in charge, and when he so certifies the same to the county auditor, then the auditor shall draw a warrant in favor of said contractor upon the "levee or drainage fund" for the balance due the contractor, as provided in the following section. If any person to whom any portion of said work shall be let as aforesaid, shall fail to perform said work, the same shall be relet by the county auditor, in the manner hereinbefore provided. [Same, § 6.]

1851. Costs and fees; how paid. 1213; 16 G. A., ch. 140, § 3. The auditor and surveyor, or engineers, shall be allowed such fees for services under the preceding sections of this chapter as the supervisors shall in each case deem reasonable and allow; and all other fees and costs accruing under the preceding sections shall be the same as provided by law for like services in other cases; and all costs, expenses, cost of construction, fees, and compensation for property appropriated, or damages sustained by the change of direction of such water-course, which shall accrue and be assessed and determined, shall be paid out of the county treasury, from the fund collected for that purpose, on the order of the county auditor. [Same, § 8.]

A payment out of the general funds contrary to the provisions of this section does not render the tax provided by the next section invalid: Patterson v. Baumer, 43-477, 481.

1852. Assessment of costs and damages. 1214; 16 G. A., ch. 140, § 4; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 7; 21 G. A., ch. 139. Whenever any such ditch, drain or change in the direction of any water-course, shall have been located and established, as provided in the preceding section, or when it shall be necessary, to cause any such ditches, drains or water-courses to be re-opened and repaired, the auditor shall commission and appoint six disinterested freeholders of the county, not interested in a like question, who shall within twenty days after such appointment, personally inspect and classify as "dry," "low," "wet" or "swamp," all the land benefited by the location and construction of such ditch, drain or water-course, or the repairing or re-opening of the same and shall make an equitable apportionment of the cost, expenses, costs of construction, fees and compensation for property appropriated or damages sustained by the construction of any such ditch, drain, change of direction of such water-course or of repairing and re-opening the same and make report thereof in writing to the board of supervisors, which apportionment shall accrue and be assessed among the owners of the land benefited by the location, construction or the re-opening and repairing of such ditch, drain or water-course, in proportion to the benefit to each of them through, along the line, or in the vicinity of whose lands the same may be located, constructed or re-opened and repaired respectively and the same may be levied upon the lands of the owner so benefited, in said proportions and collected in the same manner that other taxes are levied and collected for county purposes and the amounts so assessed and collected shall be paid out of the county treasury, from the funds collected for that purpose on the order of the county auditor and said commissioners shall receive for each day's service when so engaged, two dollars to be paid out of the funds so collected. Any such ditch, drain or watercourse, which is now or may hereafter be constructed, so as to prevent the surplus and overflow waters from the adjacent land from entering the same. is hereby declared a nuisance and the same may be abated as provided in title twenty, chapter five, of the code of Iowa, and the diverting, obstructing, impeding or filling up of such drains, ditches, or water-courses in any manner by any person, without legal authority is hereby declared a nuisance and any person convicted of such crime, shall be punished as provided in title twenty-four, chapter fifteen, of the code for the punishment of nuisances. Nothing in this chapter contained shall be construed so as to prohibit any land owner from appealing from the order of the board in assessing his land, for any of the purposes mentioned in this section, to the circuit [district] court of the county, in the same manner that appeals are taken in the location of highways, nor shall the same be construed so as to prohibit the maintenance of an action for the recovery of any taxes erroneously or wrongfully assessed, for any of the purposes mentioned in this section and in order to show that such assessment was erroneous or wrongful, it shall only be necessary to prove that such lands so assessed were not benefited by the location, construction or maintenance, of such ditch, drain or water-course.

[The section of the Code for which this is a substitute had previously been amended by 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 7, so as to apply to levees as well; but by the act repealing the Code section and substituting the foregoing, no reference is made to levees.]

“Vicinity,” as used in this section, does not mean adjoining to or abutting on, but near by, close by, or neighboring country. The board being vested with the power to determine what land in the vicinity should be assessed has a large discretion as a local tribunal and may assess one parcel of land more, another less, and others not at all, and from the action of the board in this respect no appeal is provided for: Lambert v. Mills County, 58-666.

As the county has thus ample power to provide for the payment of a debt incurred for the construction of a ditch by the levy of a special tax therefor, a judgment may be rendered against it upon a warrant issued, payable out of the special fund for the construction of such improvement. Demand on the board to levy a tax to pay such warrant is not necessary before maintaining such action. It seems, however, that the creditor, after obtaining judgment on such warrant, could not by mandamus compel the treasurer to pay such judgment out of the general funds of the county, a method of raising amounts for the payment of such claims being provided by statute: Mills County Nat. Bank v. Mills County, 67-697.

Where the board of supervisors make an equitable apportionment of the cost of a ditch and levy a tax therefor, an original petition for an injunction to restrain its collection, when the only ground of complaint is that the ground is not benefited, is not the proper remedy: Hatch v. Pottawattamie County, 43-442.

By ordering payment the board of supervisors determine that the work has been completed, and this is a matter within their authority to determine, and their action cannot be reviewed in a proceeding to enjoin the collection of taxes: Patterson v. Baumer, 43-477.

Irregularity in letting of one contract should not render the tax levied by the county for payment of a ditch constructed void, when the tax levied was to pay for the entire work: Ibid.

Land owners in the vicinity of an improvement must be presumed to have notice of the action of the county in ordering the work and causing it to be prosecuted, and of any irregularities in the letting of the contracts therefor, and by failure to object before the expenditure of money and labor by the county and the contractors, they will be estopped from objecting to the collection of the taxes: Ibid.

1853. Record kept. 1215. The auditor shall keep a full and complete record of all proceedings had in each case. [Same, § 7.]

1854. Appeals. 1216; 16 G. A., ch. 140, § 5; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 8. The petitioners or any of them, or the applicant for compensation for land taken or for damages sustained by reason of the change of direction of any water-course, may appeal from the order locating and establishing such levee, ditch or drain or changing the direction of such water-course or refusing so to do, and from the amount allowed as damages by pursuing the same method provided for appeals from assessment of damages in the location of highways and the auditor shall make out transcripts as provided in appeals taken from the assessment of damages in case of highways.

LEVEES OR DRAINS THROUGH TWO OR MORE COUNTIES.

1855. Location by commissioners. 17 G. A., ch. 121, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 9. In all cases when it becomes necessary to construct a levee or drain through two or more contiguous counties or parts of counties, and a petition for such levee or drain has been presented to the board of supervisors of the counties through which such levee or drain is to be constructed, it shall be the duty of the board of supervisors of each of such counties to appoint a commissioner to act with the commissioner or commissioners of such other counties in locating such levee or drain.

The provisions of this section do not dispense with the necessity for a petition signed by a majority of the residents interested in the improvement as required by § 1846: Richman v. Board of Supervisors, 70-627.

1856. Action. 17 G. A., ch. 121, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 10. It shall be the duty of the commissioners appointed under section one of this act [§ 1855], to meet within twenty days after the appointment of the last commissioner by such board of supervisors, and at once locate such levee or drain through their respective counties.

1857. 18 G. A., ch. 85, § 1. Chapter one hundred and twenty-one of the acts of the seventeenth general assembly [§§ 1855, 1856] is amended by adding thereto the following sections:

1858. Engineer. 18 G. A., ch. 85, § 2; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 11. The said commissioners shall appoint a competent engineer, who shall have charge of the construction of said levee, ditch, drain or change in said water-course.

1859. Survey; plat; report. 18 G. A., ch. 85, § 3; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 11. Said commission shall continue until the levee, drain or ditch is fully completed. They shall, in connection with the engineer in charge, proceed to make a survey of the proposed levee, ditch, drain or change of water-course, and return a plat and profile of the same to the county auditor of each county through which the same may pass. Such return shall set forth a full and detailed description of the proposed improvement, its availability, necessity and probable cost, with a description of each tract of land owned by different persons through which the proposed improvement is to be located, or which may be benefited by reason of its construction, how it will be affected thereby, and its situation and level as compared with that of adjoining lands, together with such facts as they may deem material. The county auditor and the board of supervisors of each county shall then proceed in the same manner as though the levee, ditch or drain was all located in one county, as provided by sections one thousand two hundred eight, and one thousand two hundred nine, code of 1873 [§§ 1846, 1847].

1860. Appeal. 18 G. A., ch. 85, § 4; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 11. Any person aggrieved by the action of the board of supervisors of any county in locating said levee, ditch or drain, or in fixing the number of acres of land benefited by reason of the construction of such levee, ditch or drain, shall have the right of appeal to the circuit [district] court of the county in which such person's land may be situated, by serving notice thereof to the first four petitioners, within twenty days after such action of the board of supervisors.

1861. Proportional tax. 18 G. A., ch. 85, § 5; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 11. When a levee, ditch or drain has been located in two or more counties, the land benefited by the levee, ditch or drain shall be proportionally taxed, as provided in section twelve hundred and fourteen, code of 1873 [§ 1852], the same as though the levee or drain and land were all in one county.

1862. Excess and deficiency. 18 G. A., ch. 85, § 6; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 11. When a greater amount of money is collected by the county treasurer of a county through which such levee, ditch or drain may pass than is needed to pay for the work actually done in that county, and if in any county there should be more work done than the equitable tax in that county will pay for, then the boards of supervisors of the several counties shall confer together and ascertain where the excess and deficiency exist, and the county where the excess exists shall transfer the excess to the county or counties where the deficit exists.

1863. Additional levy. 18 G. A., ch. 85, § 7; 19 G. A., ch. 44, § 11. If the levy first made by the several boards of supervisors should be insufficient to pay for the construction of the levee, ditch or drain, then the several boards may make an additional levy in the same ratio as the first was made.

1864. Levees, ditches or drains in public highway. 20 G. A., ch. 186, § 1. Ditches or drains may be located and constructed within the limits of any public highway and on either or both sides thereof, and levees or embankments upon and along the same; provided, they are so constructed as not to prevent public travel thereon. The engineer or commissioner appointed to locate ditches, drains, levees or embankments, may recommend the establishment of a public highway upon and along the route of the same, and the board of supervisors may establish the same on such recommendation in the same manner as on the report of a highway commissioner. All levees built by taxation under the drainage laws shall be under the control of the board of supervisors of the county in which they are situated, and the board shall have the power to grant the right of way thereon to any railway company that will maintain the same while used for railway purposes: provided, the steps for condemnation and payment therefor, contained in chapter four, title ten, of the code, shall first be taken by said company; provided further, that nothing in this section shall be construed so as to require such ditches or levees to be kept up at the expense of the county.

1865. Petition for drain; proceedings. 20 G. A., ch. 186, § 2. Whenever the petition of one hundred legal voters of the county, setting forth that any body or district of land in said county, described by metes and bounds, or otherwise, is subject to overflow, or too wet for cultivation, and that in the opinion of petitioners the public health, convenience or welfare, will be promoted by draining or leveeing the same, and also a bond, conditioned as required by section one thousand two hundred and eight of the code [§ 1846], shall be filed with the county auditor, he shall appoint a competent engineer or commissioner, who shall proceed to examine said district of lands, and if he deem it advisable to survey and locate such ditches, drains, levees, embankments and changes in the direction of water-courses as may be necessary for the reclamation of such lands or any part thereof, and he shall make substantially the same report and the same proceedings shall be had as now provided by law for the location and construction of ditches, drains and changes in water-courses, and two or more counties may unite in such work of reclamation in the manner now provided by law.

1866. Drainage bonds. 20 G. A., ch. 186, § 3; 22 G. A., ch. 97. If the board of supervisors shall be of opinion that the estimated cost of reclamation of such district of lands is greater than should be levied and collected in a single year from the lands benefited, they may determine what proportion of the same should be levied and collected each year, and they may issue drainage bonds of the county bearing not more than eight per cent. annual interest, and payable in the proportion and at the times when such taxes so apportioned will have been collected, and may devote the same at par to the payment of such work as it progresses, or may sell the same at not less than par, and devote the proceeds to such payment; and should the cost of such work exceed the estimate, a new apportionment of taxes may be made and other bonds issued and used in like manner; but in no case shall any such bonds run longer than fifteen years, and at least ten per cent. in amount of those issued on the first estimate shall be payable annually. The board of supervisors may divide the land to be benefited into drainage districts, which shall be accurately described and numbered, and such drainage bonds shall be in sums of not less than fifty dollars each, and shall be numbered consecutively and issued as other county bonds are, and shall specify that that they are drainage bonds, and designate by its number the drainage district on account of which they are issued. And in no case shall the amount of bonds issued exceed fifty per cent. of the value of the lands in such drainage districts as shown by the last assessment for taxation. Provided that each bond so issued shall express on its face, that the same shall only be paid by taxes assessed, levied and collected on the lands within the district so designated and numbered and for the benefit of which district such bond was issued: And provided, further, that in no case shall any tax be levied or collected for the payment of such bond or bonds, or the interest thereon, on any property outside of the district so numbered, designated and benefited.

1867. Tax to pay bonds. 20 G. A., ch. 186, § 4. It shall be the duty of the board of supervisors to levy each year on the lands benefited a tax sufficient to pay the interest on such bonds and so much of the principal as falls due in the succeeding year, and such tax shall be collected in the same manner as other county taxes, and shall be carried to the credit of the drainage district on account of which the bonds are issued, and shall be used to pay the principal and interest of said bonds as the same falls due: provided, that any surplus may be devoted to payment of works of reclamation in said district or repairs thereof.

DRAINAGE OF SWAMP OR MARSH LAND.

1868. Petition for. 1217. Any person owning any swamp, marsh, or wet land, desiring to drain the same by cutting a ditch through the land of others, and who is unable to agree upon the terms thereof with such other persons, may make application in writing to the township trustees of the township where such swamp or marsh land is situated, with a description of such land, the commencement and termini of the proposed ditch, and a description of the land belonging to others, with their names, through which it will pass. Such petition shall be filed by the township clerk. [13 G. A., ch. 159, § 1.]

The provisions of § 1878 authorizing proceedings by which a land owner may acquire the right to locate under-ground drains through the land of another in other cases than where such drainage is required in the interest of the public health by reason of land being wet or swampy are unconstitutional: Fleming v. Hull, 73-598.

1869. Notice. 1218. When the application is filed the clerk shall notify the trustees, who shall immediately determine upon the time and place they will meet to consider the application, and shall cause the applicant and all persons owning land through which said ditch is to pass, who are residents of the county, to be notified of the time and place of said meeting, which notice shall be served ten days previous to such day in the same manner as original notices, and if any of such owners of land are non-residents of the county, said notice shall be served on them by posting up copies thereof in three public places in the township, satisfactory proof by affidavit of such posting, and places where posted, shall be furnished said trustees and filed with the clerk. [Same, § 3.]

No appeal from the action of the board in assessing the cost of the improvement upon land in the vicinity is provided for in behalf of the party whose land is assessed: Lambert v. Mills County, 58-666.

1870. Hearing. 1219. Upon the day fixed for the hearing, the trustees, if satisfied that the requirements of the preceding section have been complied with, may proceed to hear and determine the matter of the application, or they may adjourn the same to a future day, and, if necessary, may cause another notice to be served in the manner above required. But such adjournment shall not be for a longer period than twenty days. [Same, § 3.]

1871. Action of trustees. 1220. If the trustees are satisfied from a personal examination of the premises, or from evidence of witnesses, that such swamp or marsh lands are a source of disease, that the public health will be promoted by draining the same, that such ditch is necessary for the proper cultivation of such lands, that the permanent value thereof will be increased thereby, and that it is necessary, in order to drain said lands, that such ditch should pass through the lands of others, they shall determine the direction, depth, and width of such ditch, as near as may be, and, if necessary, may employ the county surveyor to assist them, and after such examination, or hearing such evidence, said trustees may order or refuse the construction of said ditch. All the findings and doings of the trustees shall be reduced to writing, and entered of record by the clerk. [Same, §§ 1, 3, 6.]

All the different facts enumerated as calling for a ditch should exist in a given case to justify its establishment; and where the record does not show that the township trustees found that the lands to be drained were a source of disease, and that their drainage would promote the public health, the establishment of the ditch will be invalid: Hull v. Baird, 73-528.

The presumption will be that there was not a finding by the trustees upon any fact not made of record: Ibid.

1872. Costs; bond. 1221. The applicant shall pay all costs of the proceedings before the trustees, and they may require, before fixing the day of meeting as above provided, such applicant to give bond with surties, to be approved by the township clerk, conditioned to pay all such costs and expenses. [Same, § 9.]

1873. Assessment of damages. 1222. If the trustees are satisfied the ditch will damage the land of any person, other than the applicant for the ditch, through which it has been located, they shall assess the amount to be paid the owner, and after payment, or tender of the same, to the person entitled thereto within thirty days after the same is assessed or ascertained on appeal in the circuit [district] court, or, in case no damages are assessed, the applicant may enter upon the land through which the ditch passes, with the necessary implements to accomplish the work. [Same, §§ 4, 5.]

1874. Appeal. 1223. The applicant, or any person through whose land the ditch is located, may appeal from so much only of the order or action of the trustees as relates to the assessment of damages to the circuit [district] court, in the same manner as to bond, the conditions thereof, notice of appeal, and the time within which it is to be taken, as is provided by law in cases of appeals from the assessment of damages on the location of highways. The township clerk shall approve the bond and make out a transcript of the proceedings before the trustees within ten days after the bond is filed and approved, and file the same with the clerk. [Same, § 7.]

The owner of land in the vicinity to whom the right to appeal: Lambert v. Mills County, a part of the expense is assessed, but whose land is not crossed by the ditch, is not given 58-666.

1875. Trial of appeal. 1224. On the trial of such appeal, the person claiming damages shall be plaintiff and the applicant defendant, and if the appeal is taken by any person other than the applicant, judgment shall be rendered by the court for the amount found due such person as damages, which may be enforced as are other judgments; and if the appeal is taken by the applicant, no judgment shall be rendered for the amount found due any person as damages, but the amount thereof shall be certified to the township clerk, and the same shall thereafter be regarded as if the same had been assessed by the trustees at the time so certified. The court shall make such disposition of the costs, as is required in similar cases in appeals from the assessment of damages on the location of highways. But the payment or acceptance of the damages assessed by the trustees shall bar the right to appeal.

1876. Ditch repaired. 1226. If the ditch becomes out of repair, the applicant, or any one interested therein, may make application in writing to the township trustees for leave to repair the same, whereupon such trustees shall make such orders in relation thereto as they deem proper, and may empower such applicant or other interested person to enter upon the land of another for the purpose of repairing such ditch. [Same, § 8.]

1877. Penalty for obstructing. 1227. Any person who shall dam up, obstruct, or in any way injure any ditch or ditches so opened, shall be liable to pay to the person owning or possessing the swamp, marsh, or other low lands for the draining of which such ditch or ditches shall have been opened, double the damages that shall be assessed by the jury for such injury, and in case of a second or other subsequent offense by the same person, treble such damages. [Same, § 11.]

TILE OR OTHER UNDER-GROUND DRAINS.

1878. Application; notice. 20 G. A., ch. 188, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 96, § 1. Whenever any person who is the owner of any swamp, wet or marsh land, which on account of its condition may endanger the public health, or is not for that reason in a proper condition for cultivation, shall desire to construct any tile or other under-ground drain through the land of another and shall be unable to agree with the owner or owners of such land as to the same, he may file with the clerk of the township where said land is situated an application therefor, giving a description of the land or lands through which he may desire to construct the same, and the township clerk shall forthwith notify the township trustees of said township of said application, who shall fix a time and place for the hearing of same, which time shall not be more than twenty days distant, and they shall cause said clerk to notify the applicant and land owner of the time and place of said hearing at least ten days before the time fixed for the hearing of same, which notice shall be in writing, signed by said clerk, and shall be served on said applicant and land owner, if within the county, and if not then upon his agent for said land, if within the county in the same manner as is now provided by law for the service of original notices, and in case that neither said party nor his agent are residents within said county, then the same shall be served by posting written notices in three public places in said township, one of which shall be upon said land, at least fifteen days before said hearing.

The original act (20 G. A., ch. 188) was not limited in its application to lands which were wet and swampy or to cases where the public health required that it should be drained, but was applicable to cases where the owner of land simply desired for his own advantage to construct a drain over the land of another, and therefore it was unconstitutional as providing for the taking of private property for other than public purposes: Fleming v. Hull, 73-598.

1879. Hearing. 20 G. A., ch. 188, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 96, § 2. Upon the day fixed for hearing, if said trustees are satisfied that the provisions of the prior section have been complied with, they may proceed to hear and determine the same and shall have power to adjourn from time to time until same is completed. Provided that no adjournment shall be for more than fifteen days.

1880. Action of trustees. 20 G. A., ch. 188, § 3; 22 G. A., ch. 96, § 3. The said trustees may fix the point or points of entrance and exit or outlet of said tile or other under-ground drain on said land, the general course of same through said land, the size and depth of same, when the same shall be constructed, how kept in repair, what connections may be made with same, what compensation, if any, shall be made therefor, and any other question arising in connection with same; and they shall reduce their findings to writing which shall be filed with the clerk of said township, who shall record it in full in his book of records of said township, and said finding and decision shall be final unless appealed therefrom as hereinafter provided for.

1881. Connecting drains. 20 G. A., ch. 188, § 4; 22 G. A., ch. 96, § 4. Wherever any water-course or natural drainage line crosses the boundary line between two adjoining land owners and both parties desire to drain the land along such water-course or natural drainage line, but are unable to agree upon the conditions as to the juncture or connection of the lines of tile or other drainage at the boundary line aforesaid, then and in such case the township trustees shall have full authority to hear and determine all questions arising relative thereto between such land owners and to render such judgment thereupon as shall to them seem just.

1882. Along highways. 20 G. A., ch. 188, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 96, § 5. Any person shall have the right to go upon any public highway to construct an outlet to a drain provided he shall leave the highway in as good condition as it was before the drain was constructed, to be determined by the supervisor of highways in the district where the work is done.

1883. Across railroads. 20 G. A., ch. 188, § 6; 22 G. A., ch. 96, § 6. Whenever any railroad crosses the land of any person or persons who desire to drain their land for any of the purposes set forth in section one of this act [§ 1878], the party or parties desiring such drain or drains shall notify the railroad company by leaving a written notice with the nearest station agent, stating in such notice the starting point, route or termination of such drain or drains, and if the railroad company refuse or neglect for the space of thirty days to dig across their right of way a drain of equal depth and size of the one dug by the party who wishes [wishes] to drain his land, then the party who desires to drain the land may proceed to dig such drain and the railroad company shall be liable for the cost of the construction of such drain, to be collected in any court having jurisdiction.

1884. Appeal. 20 G. A., ch. 188, § 7; 22 G. A., ch. 96, § 7. Either party may appeal to the district court of the county from all the findings of the township trustees, within ten days after the findings have been filed with the clerk, and the party appealing shall cause a notice in writing of the taking of said appeal to be served upon the opposite party for the same time and in the same manner as now provided by law for service of original notice in the district court; and if the appellant is the party petitioning for the drain, he must furnish a bond conditioned to pay all the costs of appeal assessed against him, said bond to be approved by the township clerk; and the matter shall be tried de novo in said court; provided that if the appellant does not recover a more favorable finding or judgment in the district court than he did before the trustees, he shall pay all the costs of the appeal.

The original act (18 G. A., ch. 188) provided for an appeal only in case damages were awarded, and was therefore unconstitutional because it denied the land owner the right of trial by jury and deprived him of his property without due process of law: Fleming v. Hull, 73-593.

1885. Transcript. 20 G. A., ch. 188, § 8; 22 G. A., ch. 96, § 8. In case of appeal the township clerk shall certify to the district court a transcript of the proceedings before said trustees, which shall be filed in said court with the appeal bond, the party appealing paying for said transcript and the docketing of said appeal as in other cases, and upon appeal the party claiming damages shall be plaintiff and the applicant defendant.

1886. Costs. 20 G. A., ch. 188, § 9; 22 G. A., ch. 96, § 9. The applicant shall pay the costs of the trustees clerk and serving of notices on the hearing before the trustees, and shall pay all damages awarded before entering on the construction of said tile or other drain through the lands of the other.

1887. Repairs. 20 G. A., ch. 188, § 10; 22 G. A., ch. 96, § 10. In case any dispute shall arise as to repair of any tile or other under-ground drain the same shall be determined by said trustees in same manner as in the original construction of same.

1888. Drains across highways. 21 G. A., ch. 55, § 1. When any water-course or natural drain crosses any public highway in the state of Iowa, and the adjoining or abutting land owner wishes to cross said highway with an under-ground tile drain for an outlet, or to connect with another under-ground tile drain, they shall notify the road supervisor having supervision over that public highway to be crossed, in writing, specify the depth of drain and size of tile to be used in crossing said highway, and give the road supervisor twenty days' time to construct said under-ground tile drain.

1889. Supervisor shall construct. 21 G. A., ch. 55, § 2. When the road supervisor receive said written notice, he shall order said under-ground tile drain constructed across said highway, and pay for the tile and construction of the same out of any money or fund in his command.

1890. Construction by owner. 21 G. A., ch. 55, § 3. If the supervisor fails to construct said under-ground tile drain within the twenty days' time, then the abutting or adjoining land owner may go upon the highway and construct said under-ground tile drain across said highway, and he shall receive pay for constructing the same, including tile used in crossing said highway, out of any money or fund belonging to such road district, provided he shall leave the highway in as good condition as it was before the drain was constructed.

DRAINAGE OF COAL LANDS.

1891. How done; damages assessed. 1228. Any person, or corporation, owning or possessing any land underlaid with coal, who is unable to mine such coal by reason of the accumulation of water in such mine, may drain the same through, over, or under the surface of land belonging to another person, and if such person or corporation and the owner of the land cannot agree as to the amount of damages that will be sustained by such owner, the parties may proceed to have the necessary right of way condemned and the damages assessed under the provisions of chapter four of this title. [10 G. A., ch. 91; 11 G. A., ch. 66.]

DRAINAGE OF LEAD MINES.

1892. Compensation for. 1229. Any person or corporation, who, by machinery, such as engines or pumps, or by making drains or adit levels, or in any other way, shall rid any lead-bearing mineral lands or lead mines of water, thereby enabling the miners and the owners of mineral interests in said lands to make them productive and available for mining purposes, shall be entitled to receive one-tenth of all the lead mineral taken from said lands as compensation for said drainage. [10 G. A., ch. 37, § 1.]

The provision giving one-tenth of the lead mineral as compensation in such cases is not unconstitutional as depriving the owner of his property without due process of law: Ahern v. Dubuque, etc., Mining Co., 48-140.

1893. Setting apart. 1230. The owners of the mineral interest in said lands, and persons mining upon and taking lead mineral from said lands, shall jointly and severally set apart and deliver from time to time, when demanded, the said one-tenth part of said mineral taken from said lands to the person or corporation entitled thereto as compensation for drainage. The owners of the mineral interest in said lands, shall allow the party entitled to such compensation, and his agents, at any and all times to descend into and examine said mines and to enter any building occupied for mining purposes upon any of said lands and examine and weigh the mineral taken therefrom. [Same, § 2.]

1894. Penalty. 1231. Upon the failure or refusal of any owner of the mineral interest in said lands, or of any person taking the mineral therefrom, to comply with the provisions of the preceding section, the person or corporation entitled to said compensation for drainage may sue for and recover the value of said mineral in any court of competent jurisdiction. And upon the hearing of any such case, if it shall appear that the defendant obstructed the plaintiff in the exercise of the right to examine the said mines, and to weigh said mineral, or concealed or secretly carried away any mineral taken from said lands, the court shall render judgment for double the amount proved to be due from such defendant. [Same, § 3.]

1895. Notice to smelters. 1232. The person or corporation entitled to said drainage compensation, may, at any time, leave with any smelter of lead mineral in this state, a written notice stating that said person, or corporation, claim of the persons named in said notice, the amount to which said person or corporation may be entitled, which notice shall have the effect of notices in garnishment, and also authorize the said smelter to retain, for the use of the persons entitled thereto, the one-tenth part of the mineral taken from said land and received from the person named in said notice; the payment or delivery of the one-tenth part of the mineral taken from any of said lands by any one of the persons whose duty it is made hereby to pay or deliver the same, shall discharge the parties liable jointly with him except their liability to contribute among themselves. [Same, § 4.]

1896. Right of way. 1233. Any person, or corporation, engaged as aforesaid, in draining such mines and lead-bearing mineral lands, whenever he or they shall deem it necessary for the prosecution of their work, shall have the right of way upon, over, or under the surface of such mineral lands and the contiguous and neighboring lands, for the purpose of conveying the water from said mineral lands by troughs, pipes, ditches, water races, or tunnels, and the right to construct and use shafts and air holes in and upon the same, doing as little injury as possible in making said improvements. [Same, § 5.]

1897. Damages for. 1234. If the said person, or corporation, engaged in draining as aforesaid, and the owner of any land upon which said right of way may be deemed necessary cannot agree as to the amount of damages which will be sustained by the owner by reason thereof, the parties may proceed to have the same assessed under the provisions of chapter four of this title. [Same, § 6.]

1898. Consent of owners. 1235. The foregoing provisions shall not be construed to require the owners of the mineral interest in any of said lands to take mineral therefrom, or to authorize any other person to take the mineral from said lands without the consent of the said owners. [Same, § 7.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF WATER-POWER IMPROVEMENTS.

1899. Taking land for. 1236. There is granted to any corporation hereafter organized in accordance with law, for the purpose of utilizing and improving any water-power within this state, or in the streams lying upon the borders thereof the right to take and hold so much real estate as may be necessary for the location, construction, and convenient use of its canals, conduits, mains, and water-ways, or other means employed in the utilization of such water-power, and for the construction of such buildings and their appurtenances as may be required for the purposes aforesaid. Such corporation may also take, remove, and use for the construction and repair of its said canals, water-ways, buildings, and appurtenances, any earth, gravel, stone, timber or other materials, on or from the land so taken. Compensation shall be made for the lands and materials so taken and used by such corporation, to the owner, in compliance with and in the manner provided in chapter four of this title. [14 G. A., ch. 79, § 1.]

1900. Use of highways. 1237. Such corporations may use, raise, or lower, any highway for the purpose of having their said canals, water-ways, mains, and pipes, pass over, along, or under the same; and in such case shall put such highway, as soon as may be, in good repair and condition, for the safe and convenient use of the public. And such corporation may construct and carry their canals, conduits, water-ways, mains, or water-pipes, across, over, or under any railway, canal, stream, or water-course, when it shall be necessary for the construction or operation of the same, but shall do so in such manner as not to impede the travel, transportation, or navigation upon, or other proper use of, such railway, canal, or stream. But the powers conferred in this section, can only be exercised in cities and towns with the consent and under the control of the city council or trustees of said municipal corporations. [Same, § 2.]

1901. Public lands. 1238. Such corporations are authorized to pass over, occupy, and enjoy, any of the school, university, and saline, or other lands of this state, whereof the fee, or any use, easement, or servitude therein is in the public, making compensation therefor. But no more of such land shall be taken than is required for the necessary use and convenience of such corporations. [Same, § 3.]

1902. Powers. 1239. Such corporations, in addition to other powers, shall have the following: To borrow money for the purpose of constructing, renewing, or repairing their works, and to make, execute, and deliver contracts, bonds, notes, bills, mortgages, deeds of trust, and other conveyance, charging, or incumbering their property, including all and singular their franchises, or any part or parcel thereof; to erect, maintain and operate canals, conduits, mains, water-ways, mills, factories, and other buildings and machinery, including water-ways, sluices, and conduits, for the purpose of carrying waste water off from said premises to the stream from which the same was taken, or other convenient place; to let, lease, or sell, and convey any portion of their water supply, and any of the buildings, mills, or factories, or machinery aforesaid, for such sums, prices, rents, tolls, and rates, as shall be agreed upon between the parties; and to lay down, maintain, and operate, such water mains, conduits, leads, and service pipes as shall be necessary to supply any building, village, town, or city, with water; and the grantee of any such corporations, or purchaser of the said property, franchise, rights and privileges, under and by virtue of any judicial sale, shall take and hold the same as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as the same were held and enjoyed by such corporations. [Same, § 4.]

1903. Completion of work; legislative control. 1240. Such corporation shall take, hold, and enjoy the privilege of utilizing and improving the water-power, and the rights, powers and privileges aforesaid, which shall be specifically mentioned and described in its articles of incorporation; provided, it shall proceed in good faith to make the improvements and employ the powers in its said articles of incorporation mentioned, and shall, within two years from the date of its organization, provide the necessary capital, complete the preliminary surveys, and actually commence the work of improving and utilizing the water-power, and furnishing the supply of water so mentioned in its articles of incorporation; and said water-works and canals shall be completed within five years from the time when said corporation has been organized; and, provided further, that the rights, powers, and privileges conferred by this chapter shall be at all times subject to legislative control. [Same, § 5.]

TAKING PRIVATE PROPERTY FOR WORKS OF INTERNAL IMPROVEMENT.

1904. By railway; limit of. 1241; 17 G. A., ch. 126. Any railway corporation organized in this state, or chartered by or organized under the laws of the United States or any state or territory, may take and hold, under the provisions of this chapter, so much real estate as may be necessary for the location, construction, and convenient use of its railway, and may also take, remove, and use for the construction and repair of said railway and its appurtenances, any earth, gravel, stone, timber, or other materials, on or from the land so taken; the land so taken otherwise than by the consent of the owners, shall not exceed one hundred feet in width, except for wood and water stations, unless where greater width is necessary for excavation, embankment, or depositing waste earth. [R., § 1314.]

Provisions constitutional: The use for which land appropriated for a right of way is taken is a public one although it is for private profit, and the provisions authorizing the taking of private property for such purpose upon compensation being made are therefore constitutional: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9.

Nature and extent of right: The railway company procuring the right of way is the owner of its right of way so long as it is used for railway purposes, and the owner of the land taken has no right to go thereon for the construction of fences or other purposes: Heskett v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 41-467.

The company may take, remove and use for the construction and repair of its railway and appurtenances any earth, gravel, stone, timber or other material on or from the land condemned, and is not limited as to the quantity of such materials to be used in the construction and repair of its road. The limitation to so much as is necessary implied under this section relates to the quantity of land to be taken: Winklemans v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 62-11.

It would seem that the company may sink wells on its right of way, for the purpose of supplying its engines with water, and would not be liable in damages for thus diverting percolating water from a spring upon the adjoining land of the person granting the right of way: Hougan v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 35-558.

Timber standing upon the property taken for right of way, other than that necessary for the construction of the railway, remains the property of the owner of the land: Preston v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 11-15.

The statute by express language authorizes the taking of material for the construction and use of the railway, but under a right of way deed granting an easement "for all purposes connected with the construction, use and occupation of the railway," held, that the railway company was not authorized to take sand for use in constructing a round-house, but the owner might take such sand so far as not interfering with the use of the land for railroad purposes: Vermilya v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 66-606.

By the condemnation proceedings a corporation requires the right to the exclusive use of the surface of the land, and the condemnation is made on the theory that this use of the surface will be perpetual: Hollingsworth v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-443; Cummings v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-397; Clayton v. Chicago, I. & D. R. Co., 67-238.

The conveyance to a railway of a right of way conveys only an easement: Brown v. Young, 69-625.

Constitutes an incumbrance: The right of way over land for a railway is an incumbrance for which a grantee of the land may recover on a covenant against incumbrances, although he knew of the existence of such right of way at the time of purchasing: Barlow v. McKinley, 24-69; Jerald v. Elly, 51-321; Flynn v. White Breast Coal, etc., Co., 72-738.

But the mere use and exercise of a right of way over the property is not sufficient to establish such right or raise a presumption of its existence: Jerald v. Elly, 51-321.

Subject to foreclosure proceedings: Where a railway company takes a deed for a right of way, and enters into possession pending foreclosure proceedings against the property, it is bound by decree and sale thereunder, though not made a party: Jackson v. Centerville, M. & A. R. Co., 64-292.

Width which may be taken: Under the statutory provision allowing the condemnation of a strip of land one hundred feet in width, the company is not limited to fifty feet on each side of its track, but the track may be located anywhere on the tract taken: Stark v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 43-501.

Additional width: Where a company has the power to build an additional lateral road auxiliary to the original road, the construction and maintenance of which is possible only upon an independent right of way, the right of way statute, limiting the width of right of way to one hundred feet, does not prevent the condemnation of land for such additional road; and the same power may be exercised by another corporation, even though it derives all its means from the first, and builds the road with the express design of leasing it: Lower v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 59-563.

Where a company entered into possession of and constructed its road over a right of way thirty feet in width acquired by deed, and subsequent proceedings to condemn a right of way seventy feet wide were instituted, held, that the subsequent proceedings must be considered as intended to secure a right of way in addition to that acquired by deed: Gray v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 37-119.

When a railway company applies for a hundred feet or less in width for a right of way, it must be conclusively presumed that the amount applied for is necessary, and the fact that the company owns land on one side of such right of way will not limit the amount which it may condemn: Stark v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 43-501.

Depot grounds: Under a previous statute, held, that a company had no right to condemn additional land for depot grounds, and that therefore any proceeding for that purpose might be enjoined: Forbes v. Delashmutt, 68-164.

Use by another road: Where right of way over land has been acquired by one railroad the owner cannot have an injunction against another road for using such right of way under agreement with the road to which it belongs: Holbert v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 38-315.

Appropriation of right of way by another company: The easement acquired by a railroad company is acquired to public use, and is in the nature of a grant from the state for the uses and purposes provided by law, and when the company fails to carry out the purposes of the grant, the legislature may transfer the easement to another company upon making compensation to the former company: Noll v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. Co., 32-66; Central Iowa R. Co. v. Moulton & A. R. Co., 57-249.

Transfer to another road: Where a right of way has been deeded to one railway company in consideration of the benefit to be derived from the construction of its line, such right of way cannot be transferred by that company to another proposing to construct a different line not running in the same direction: Crosbie v. Chicago, I. & D. R. Co., 62-189.

Who entitled to condemn: It is sufficient under the statute to allege that the party seeking to secure a right of way is a corporation duly organized, and engaged in building a railroad: Chicago, N. & S. W. R. Co. v. Mayor of Newton, 36-299.

A foreign corporation could not, before the amendment of this section, procure right of way by condemnation proceedings, and might be restrained by injunction from using property for right of way until the right was in some other manner procured: Holbert v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 45-23.

Before the change in the statute allowing foreign corporations to condemn land for right of way, held, that where nothing appeared to the contrary it would be presumed that the condemnation was properly made on behalf of a corporation duly authorized to institute the proceedings: Kostendader v. Pierce, 37-645.

Horse railways: The provisions for condemning right of way for the use of railway companies are applicable to railways operated by animal power as well as those operated by steam: Clinton v. Clinton & L. H. R. Co., 37-61.

Railways in cities: By § 623 the method of assessing damages for right of way is made applicable to damages caused to abutting owners from the construction of a railway upon the streets of a city, and such proceedings can be instituted only by the company and not by the property owner, who may have an action for damages without regard to the method of assessment thus provided: Mulholland v. Des Moines, A. & W. R. Co., 60-740.

Further as to the rights of railway companies to construct their tracks over the streets of cities and towns, see notes to § 623.

Parol license: Where the company by parol license enters upon ground to construct its railway the subsequent payment of the damages assessed gives it an easement by contract, which, though arising upon parol, cannot be revoked: Slocumb v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 57-675.

In such case a subsequent purchaser takes subject to the right of way, whatever it is, if it does not exceed the statutory width, and cannot set up non-user by the company of a portion, and adverse possession thereof, to defeat its rights: Ibid.

Presumption: Where a railway company is conceded to be in rightful possession of a right of way it will be presumed that it has an easement acquired either by condemnation or purchase: Drake v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 63-302.

Subsequent condemnation: Where the compensation for the right of way has not only been agreed upon, but also paid to the land owner by the corporation, and he has conveyed the right of way, proceedings to condemn such right of way cannot be instituted, and would be entirely void for want of jurisdiction: Council Bluffs & St. L. R. Co. v. Bentley, 62-446.

In an action against a railroad by an adjacent owner for damages for the occupation of a street in which such adjacent owner holds the fee, it is error to reject a deed from such owner to the company for right of way over his premises: Frith v. Dubuque, 45-406.

The occupation of premises taken for right of way cannot be enjoined for failure to pay therefor under proceedings which have been declared void where the company has a deed granting it a right of way substantially the same as that occupied: Bentley v. Wabush, St. L. & P. R. Co., 61-229.

Where a railway company having a right of way thirty feet in width instituted proceedings to condemn a right of way seventy feet in width, held, that such proceedings must be considered as intended to secure an additional right of way, and that payment of the damages assessed in such proceedings did not cancel the obligation entered into by the company in accepting the deed: Gray v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 37-119.

1905. For reservoirs. 1242. It may, also, take and hold additional real estate at its water-stations, for the purpose of constructing dams and forming reservoirs of water to supply its engines. Such real estate shall, if the owner requests it, be set apart in a square or rectangular shape, including all the overflowed land, by the commissioners as hereafter provided; but the owner of the land shall not be deprived of access to the water or the use thereof in common with the company on his own land. And the dwelling-house, out-house, orchards, and gardens of any person shall not be overflowed or otherwise injuriously affected by any proceeding under this section. [12 G. A., ch. 117, § 1.]

1906. Pipes. 1243. Any such railway corporation may lay down pipes through any land adjoining the track of the railway, not to a greater distance than three-fourths of a mile therefrom, unless by consent of the owners of the land through which the pipes may pass beyond that distance, and maintain and repair such pipes, and thereby conduct water for the supply of its engines from any running stream; and shall, without unnecessary delay, after laying down or repairing such pipes, cover the same so as to restore the surface of the land through which they may pass to its natural grade; and shall, as soon as practicable, replace any fence that it may be necessary to open in laying down or repairing such pipes; and the owner of the land through which the same may be laid, shall have a right to use the land through which such pipes pass in any manner so as not to interfere therewith; said pipes shall not be laid to any spring, nor be used so as to injuriously withdraw the water from any farm; provided, that such corporation shall be liable to the owner of any such lands for any damages occasioned by laying down, regulating, keeping open, or repairing such pipes, such damages to be recoverable from time to time as they may accrue in any ordinary action in any court of competent jurisdiction. [Same, § 2.]

1907. Depot grounds. 20 G. A., ch. 190, § 1. Any railway corporation owning or operating a completed railway in the state of Iowa, shall have power to condemn lands for necessary additional depot grounds in the same manner as is provided by law for the condemnation of the right of way: Provided, that before any proceedings shall be instituted to condemn such additional grounds, the railway company shall apply to the railway commissioners, who shall give notice to the land owner and examine into the matter and report by certificate to the clerk of the circuit [district] court in the city in which the land is situated, the amount and description of the additional lands necessary for the reasonable transaction of the business, present and prospective, of such railway company. Whereupon said railway company shall have power to condemn the lands so certified by the commissioners.

MANNER OF CONDEMNATION.

1908. Sheriff's jury; damages assessed. 1244. If the owner of any real estate, necessary to be taken for either of the purposes mentioned in the three preceding sections [§§ 1904-1906], refuse to grant the right of way, or other necessary interest in said real estate required for such purposes, or, if the owner and the corporation cannot agree upon the compensation to be paid for the same, the sheriff of the county in which said real estate may be situated, shall, upon the application of either party, appoint six disinterested freeholders of said county, not interested in a like question, who shall inspect said real estate and assess the damages which said owner will sustain by the appropriation of his land for the use of said corporation, and make report in writing to the sheriff of said county, and if said corporation shall, at any time before it enters upon said real estate for the purpose of constructing said railway, pay to said sheriff for the use of said owner, the sum so assessed and returned to him as aforesaid, it may construct and maintain its railway over and across such premises. [R., § 1317; 12 G. A., ch. 117, § 3.]

Measure of damages: The damages contemplated are the "just compensation" provided for by Const., art. 1, § 18. The owner is to have a fair equivalent in money for the injury done him by the taking of his property. It is the right of way which is appropriated, not the fee in the land; but the right of way is such as is peculiar to a railroad, and is the right to all freedom in locating, constructing, using and repairing such road and its appurtenances, and taking and using for that purpose only, any earth, gravel, stone, timber, etc., on or from the land taken, and the right to make cuts, embankments, etc., and includes the rights incident to rapid locomotion as against the owner of the fee. It seems that the right of way is intended to be in perpetuity: Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 2-288.

The question as to the proper measure of damages in such cases discussed and the true measure declared to be the difference between the market value of the land entire, and its market value after the right of way is carved out: Ibid.; Sater v. Burlington, etc., Plank Road Co., 1-386.

The amount of damage to be allowed is what will compensate plaintiff for the appropriation of the right of way. It may be more or less than the value of the property taken: Gear v. Chicago, C. & D. R. Co., 39-23.

Where the damages to a leasehold estate are to be assessed, the proper measure of damages is the difference in value of the annual use of the property, before taking and after: Renwick v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 49-664.

The land owner is entitled to the full and fair value of the land appropriated, and, in addition thereto, to such sum as will compensate him for the depreciation in value of his adjoining land by reason of the right of way, irrespective of any benefits of the road to the land; but speculative, contingent or future damages, not affecting the market value, cannot be allowed: Smalley v. Iowa Pacific R. Co., 36-571.

Increased danger of injury to or destruction of the property by reason of exposure to fire or other dangers incident to the operation of a railroad are elements of damage for which compensation should be made: Small v. Chicago, R. T. & P. R. Co., 50-338, 314; Dreher v. Iowa Southwestern R. Co., 59-599.

But it is error to take into account the value of specific property, such as a grove or house, which might be destroyed by fire: Lance v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 57-636.

The value of growing crops upon the right of way to be taken may be considered in assessing the compensation: Ibid.

The question whether, because of the construction of the road, the land is made more wet than it otherwise would be is a proper one, it not being sought to show that such damages were a result of the improper construction of the road: Britton v. Des Moines, O. & S. R. Co., 59-540.

The fact that the road-bed is constructed in a cut is a proper fact to be shown in estimating damages: Cummins v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-397.

While the land owner is not entitled to prove the proximity of the depot or the number of tracks as independent elements of damage, yet such evidence may be admissible in determining the extent to which the company would probably use the ground taken in carrying on its business: Ibid.

As the company acquires the right to occupy and use the whole of the right of way, it cannot have the damages assessed on the theory that it will in fact use but part, and therefore that the occupation of buildings situated upon the right of way will not be disturbed: Ibid.

Unless it appears that the reversionary right of the land owner is of some value, as, for instance, by reason of the land being underlaid by coal or mineral, it is not error to disregard such reversionary interest and assess the damages at the market value of the property taken: Ibid.; Hollingsworth v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 62-443.

The company may take, remove and use for the construction and repair of its railway and appurtenances any earth, gravel, stone, timber or other material on or from the land condemned, and is not limited as to the quantity of such materials to be used in the construction and repair of its road. The limitation to so much as is necessary implied under this section relates to the quantity of land to be taken: Winklemans v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 62-11.

Although the right of way taken is an easement and the fee remains in the owner, yet, unless it is made to appear that the fee burdened with the easement is of some determinative value, the assessment of damages should be based on the full value of the land actually taken, and it is not error to refuse to instruct the jury on the theory that the fee remains in the owner, and that at some time in the future the land may cease to be used for railway purposes and revert to such owner: Clayton v. Chicago, I. & D. R. Co., 67-238.

Where a railway company was seeking to condemn a right of way between the property of a riparian owner and the Mississippi river, held, that the owner was entitled to damages caused to an embankment constructed by him extending out to a crib in the river: Renwick v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 49-664.

The owner is not invested with the right to cross the right of way after its appropriation at his pleasure. Whatever right he has in that respect is subservient to that of the company using the road for the running of its trains: Ibid.

The question of the right of passage, as affected by the taking of the right of way, may be shown as affecting the damages: Bell v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 74-343.

Various items of damage held properly taken into account by a witness in testifying as to the market value of land after taking the right of way: Smalley v. Iowa Pacific R. Co., 36-571.

The prices at which other lands in the vicinity of the premises had been sold about the time of the commencement of the proceedings is not receivable in the absence of evidence that there was any similarity between the lots in question and those which it was claimed had been sold: Cummins v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-397; Hollingsworth v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-443.

It is proper for the court to state the law governing damages in such cases as found in the constitution and statutes of the state, no matter what evidence is introduced: Ball v. Keokuk & N. W. R. Co., 74-132.

Market value: In determining the damages the proper rule is to first ascertain the fair market value of the premises over which the proposed improvement is to pass, irrespective of the improvement, and also the like value of the same in the condition in which the premises will be after the land for the improvement has been taken, irrespective of the benefit which will result from the improvement, and the difference in value will constitute the measure of compensation: Sater v. Burlington, etc., Plank Road Co., 1-386.

The owner may be a witness generally as to the value of the land before and after appropriation, leaving the opposite party, by his right of cross-examination, to learn the ability of the witness to judge in the premises and what he takes into consideration in making up his judgment: Ibid.

In determining the amount of damage the witness may be allowed to testify as to the value immediately before the right of way was taken and immediately after, not taking into consideration the benefit to the land: Harrison v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 36-323.

The opinion of a witness as to the value before taking is admissible: Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 2-288, 311.

It is usual to take the testimony of the witness upon questions of the value of property when he states under oath that he knows its value or that he knows the value of like property: Ball v. Keokuk & N. W. R'y Co., 74-132.

It is not proper in such proceedings to show by evidence at what price the purchase of right of way from adjoining tracts has been secured, unless it is shown that such tracts were of like character or that the right of way had a uniform and marketable value in that neighborhood: King v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 34-458.

In ascertaining the damages to land used, improved and occupied together as one farm, witnesses cannot be asked as to the value of detached parcels: Winklemans v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 62-11.

Witnesses who were jurors for the assessment of damages in the first instance cannot be required to state on a trial of the case on appeal whether their report of the assessment made to the sheriff correctly expressed their judgment as to the amount of damages sustained: Ibid.

The fact that on the prior assessment the land owner made no claim for damages which were afterwards assessed upon appeal, held not objectionable, as it did not appear on the original assessment that such damages would result from the taking of the right of way: Ibid.

While it is competent to show the situation and general surroundings of the land, its character, and the roads leading thereto, etc., yet where the land was situated beyond the limits of a city and was not in the market as residence property, held, that evidence as to the character of improvements being made upon the street leading toward the land, but which would not if extended come within eighty yards of it, was improper in determining the damages caused to the land: La Mont v. St. Louis, D. M. & N. R. Co., 62-193.

The inquiry is not as to any special value of the property to the owner growing out of ownership of other distinct and separate property, nor that of the particular premises over which the road passes as intended to be put in the future to a particular use in connection with other distinct and separate pieces of land. Regard must be had to the immediate and not the remote damages of the appropriation: Fleming v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 34-353.

Evidence of increased fire risk in connection with the use of the premises intended to be made in the future cannot be taken into account: Ibid.

Entire premises: Damages to the entire premises necessarily and properly used by the owner in his business should be estimated, although such premises are divided by a street or highway: Renwick v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 49-664.

Where the right of way passes through a farm the owner may show as damages, depreciation in value of the whole farm, and is not limited to the damages to the governmental subdivision through which the road runs: Hartshorn v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 52-613; Ham v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 61-716.

Where two lots are improved and used as one property and a notice of proceedings to condemn a right of way to one lot only is given, and the right of way is taken entirely from such lot, nevertheless the commissioners may properly include both lots in their assessment and return: Cummins v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-397.

In such cases it will be presumed that the title to both lots is in the owner against whom the proceedings with reference to one lot is instituted, without proof on his part of that fact, the finding of the commissioners as to the ownership of the property not having been questioned on appeal: Ibid.

If a railway company applies to have the damages assessed, and, in its application, designates the land known as the farm of the adverse party, or if the jury is called under an agreement of both parties, and it is therein specified that the damages to the land owner in consequence of the location across his farm shall be assessed, the railway company will afterwards be estopped from confining the assessment to the immediate portion of land over which the railroad crosses, and also from denying defendant's ownership of such land, the damages to which they have agreed shall be assessed: Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Byington, 14-572.

Where different portions of land belonging to the same owner were adapted to different uses, and only one of such portions was crossed by the right of way, held, that the portion not crossed could not be taken into consideration in determining the damages: Haines v. St. Louis, D. M. & N. R. Co., 65-216.

Cost of fencing: The cost of building additional fence and keeping the same in repair should not be allowed as part of the damages: Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 2-288; Kennedy v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 2-521; Hanrahan v. Fox, 47-102.

Although the cost of fencing is not to be taken directly into account, yet, if the land was before fenced, and, by the taking of the right of way, it is thrown open and left in a manner unfenced, this fact will be taken into consideration in arriving at the depreciated value of the remaining premises: Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 2-288, 310.

Damages for improper construction: The damages to be awarded include those only from the appropriation and lawful use of the premises taken, and do not embrace injuries which may result from unlawful acts for which the company would be liable to the party injured: Fleming v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 34-353.

Damages consequent upon the negligent construction of the road are not to be considered. Only such damages are to be included as arise from its proper construction: King v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 34-458; Miller v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 63-680.

Obstruction of highway: The obstruction of a public highway is not a proper element of compensation to the owner of the property in this proceeding: Gear v. Chicago, C. & D. R. Co., 43-83; Fleming v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 34-353.

Trespass: If a subcontractor in constructing the road, without authority from the company, goes outside of the right of way and commits trespass on land not condemned, the company is not thereby rendered liable. In order to render the company liable it must be made to appear, in some way, that it consented to the trespass or had such knowledge of it at the time it was done that its consent might be presumed: Waltemeyer v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 71-626.

Diversion of water-course, etc.: The right which the owner of land has to a water-course flowing over it is a freehold right which cannot be taken from him for public use either directly or by diminution or diversion from its natural channel, without adequate compensation: McCord v. High, 24-336.

The fact that a right of way is asked across land crossed by a stream of water does not authorize the assessment of damages for the diversion of the stream from its natural channel when such diversion would not be absolutely necessary. The mere fact that such diversion would be convenient or advantageous in the construction of the road will not authorize the implication that the company desires to acquire the right to make such diversion and pay the damage therefor rather than construct its road by bridging or otherwise, so as to render such diversion unnecessary: Stodghill v. Chicago, B. & O. R. Co., 43-26.

The right to obstruct the passage of surface water is not presumed to be acquired in a condemnation proceeding, and the damages assessed do not cover damages resulting from such stoppage. The owner is not presumed to have been paid therefor, upon the theory that the company preferred to protect him against this incidental injury, and the enjoyment of the easement carries with it from day to day the obligation to furnish this protection: Drake v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 63-302. And see S. C., 70-59.

Interference with wells: Where a railway company had acquired right of way over land, held, that in connection with such right of way it might dig wells and would not be liable for thereby interfering with the percolation of water supplying springs upon the premises of the land owner: Hougan v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 35-558.

The fact that the construction of a railway destroys a valuable spring may be shown in evidence in determining the amount of damages. It will not be presumed that the spring was unnecessarily destroyed in the absence of evidence to that effect: Winklemans v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 62-11.

Consequential damages: Regard must be had only to the immediate and not to the remote consequences of the appropriation. The value of the remaining premises is not to be depreciated by heaping consequence on consequence: Sater v. Burlington, etc., Plank Road Co., 1-386.

Damages are not limited to the value of the land taken, but include such damages as result proximately from the use for which it is taken: Kucheman v. Chicago, C. & D. R. Co., 46-366, 376.

Obstructing a view or interfering with the owner's privacy, and the noises of approaching trains, are matters for which the land owner may have compensation. As to such matters he is not injured merely as a member of the community in general: Ham v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 61-716.

Evidence in regard to how the railroad affects a farm over which it passes, aside from the mere value of the land taken, is admissible: Disher v. Iowa Southern R. Co., 59-599.

Accidental injury from smoke and dust and the noise of moving trains gives no right for the recovery of damages where there is no other injury to which the smoke, etc., is incident. So held where the land condemned had not yet been actually occupied or interfered with by the railway company: Dimmick v. Council Bluffs & St. L. R. Co., 58-637.

Damages not connected with the taking of land: Whatever inconveniences a property owner may suffer by the construction of a railway upon the property of another, no carelessness or negligence in such construction appearing, such injuries will not entitle such property owner to compensation in damages: Barr v. Oshaloosa, 45-275.

When assessment proper: While the statute only contemplates an assessment where the owner refuses to grant the right of way, or when the parties cannot agree as to the compensation, yet where it appears that the land owner contests the right of the company to take his land on the terms fixed by the appraisers and attacks the regularity of the proceedings of such appraisers, and that the appraisers were only to assess damages in cases where the owners had refused to grant the right of way, held, that the refusal to grant the right of way sufficiently appeared to show the jurisdiction of the court: Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Rosseau, 8-373.

Where the compensation for the right of way has not only been agreed upon, but also paid to the land owner by the corporation, and he has conveyed the right of way, proceedings to condemn such right of way cannot be instituted, and would be entirely void for want of jurisdiction: Council Bluffs & St. L. R. Co. v. Bentley, 62-446.

The phrase "owner of any real estate" includes a mortgagee, and if not made a party to the proceedings he is not bound thereby: Severin v. Cole, 38-463.

This section refers to land taken and appropriated for right of way. The provisions of § 623, with reference to assessing damages to the abutting property owner by reason of the construction of a railroad track along the streets of a city, do not authorize such abutting property owner to have his damages assessed in this manner: Stough v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 71-641.

Respective interests of joint owners: Where the respective interests of tenants in common appear of record or can be conveniently ascertained, the company, if it applies for the appointment of commissioners to assess damages, should by its application cause such damages to be assessed separately to each owner: Ruppert v. Chicago, O. & St. J. R. Co., 43-490.

A sheriff's jury cannot apportion the damages between the owner and the person holding a mortgage upon the land. They are to estimate the right of way only, and where the mortgagee is not made a party he may voluntarily assert his right to the money in the hands of the sheriff: Sawyer v. Landers, 56-422.

Enforcement of payment: Where it had been agreed that the compensation to be paid for the right of way should be fixed by a third person, and under such agreement the railway company went into possession, but the amount of compensation was never fixed, held, that the land owner might, by condemnation proceedings, enforce payment of the compensation to which he was entitled: Corbin v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 66-269.

The agreement between the parties in such case as to the amount of damages might be interposed as a defense to the claim for damages in excess of the amount agreed upon, but such agreement need not be specially pleaded: Ibid.

New assessment: Where, upon condemnation of a right of way over agricultural college land, the damages assessed were deposited with the sheriff, held, that without return of the amount thus deposited the grantee of the land could not have another assessment of damages for the use of the premises by another railway company without a return of the money thus deposited: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Beun, 69-257.

Even though the land owner is seeking to set aside a deed previously made, on the ground of fraud or otherwise, he cannot disregard the previous transaction and have a new assessment: Council Bluffs & St. L. R. Co. v. Bentley, 62-446.

A land owner who has received compensation which has not been refunded by him cannot recover the second time: Dubuque & D. R. Co. v. Diehl, 64-635.

Homestead exemption: Damages assessed for a right of way over the homestead are exempt from execution to the same extent that the homestead is: Kaiser v. Seaton, 62-463.

Liability of commissioners: The commissioners should not be put to costs for doing in a regular and legal way what they are required to do, and in a certiorari proceeding to review their action an answer setting out the notice in the proceeding under which they are acting is sufficient: Forbes v. Delashmuth, 68-164.

Dismissal of proceedings: Where the company has not entered upon the land to construct the road, no right to the amount of damages assessed becomes vested in the land owner until the decision on the appeal, and pending the appeal the company may dismiss the proceedings: Burlington & M. R. Co. v. Sater, 1-421.

A proceeding for the condemnation of land for a railway simply fixes the price upon payment of which, within a reasonable time, the company may take the right of way. The company cannot be compelled to pay the damages and take the way, but may waive the rights acquired by the proceedings, being liable, however, for costs and for any damages actually suffered by the land owner: Gear v. Dubuque & S. O. R. Co., 20-523.

Judgment for the amount of damages, even though entered in the usual form of a judgment in an action of debt, passes no title to the company before payment, nor does it compel the acceptance of or payment for the land: Ibid.

Where, in proceedings to assess the damages for a right of way already occupied, the amount assessed is paid to the sheriff, and an appeal is afterwards taken, the railroad company cannot, by abandoning its right of way, defeat the land owner's right to the amount so paid, but such abandonment may be considered in determining the damages to which the land owner shall be entitled upon the trial of such appeal, and it would be error to enter a judgment for additional damages contingent upon the re-occupation of the land by the company; and held, that such re-occupation should not be made without a new assessment of damages: Hastings v. Burlington & M. R. Co., 38-316.

A proceeding instituted by a railway company to condemn a right of way may be dismissed as any other action without prejudice, and will not defeat a subsequent proceeding of the same character to condemn the right of way over such property: Corbin v. Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co., 66-73.

Remedies of land owner: The proceedings may be instituted by the land owner after the railway is completed: Hibbs v. Chicago & S. W. R. Co., 39-340.

The method provided for ascertaining and compelling the payment of the damages is exclusive, and none other can be pursued. But the owner is not deprived of his right to bring action for the possession of his property when taken without compensation: Daniels v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 35-129.

A party has, by appeal, an adequate remedy against any irregularities which may occur in the proceedings or any injustice which may be done him in the award, and if he has personal notice this remedy is exclusive as to all such matters, and he cannot rely upon irregularities as a ground for restraining the construction of the road in accordance with such proceedings: Phillips v. Watson, 63-28.

If the company enters upon the land before the damages are paid it may be treated as a trespasser. The owner is not compelled to resort to an injunction or an action for the amount: Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 10-540.

Where the occupancy of a right of way is commenced and continued without right, the company is a mere trespasser, and the land owner or his grantee may maintain an action for damages for the occupation of the land: Donald v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 52-411.

If the company enters before payment of the damages assessed it may be held liable in damages as for a tort: Dimnick v. Council Bluffs & St. L. R. Co., 62-409.

In an action to recover possession of land occupied without condemnation by the company, plaintiff may recover damages for the use of the premises. It is not necessary that such damages be assessed in a condemnation proceeding: Birge v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 65-440; Rush v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 57-201.

On failure of the company which is already in possession and use of the premises for right of way to pay the amount assessed, it may be restrained by injunction from further using the premises: Henry v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 10-540; Richards v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 18-259.

The same right to an injunction will accrue to the land owner in case he institutes proceedings for assessing the damages: Hibbs v. Chicago & S. W. R. Co., 39-340.

The land owner is not estopped from maintaining proceedings to recover compensation for land taken for right of way by the fact that he has allowed the railway company to go upon and use his land for that purpose, and make improvements thereon: Ibid.

In such cases he may maintain an injunction restraining defendant from further using the right of way without making compensation, or maintaining ejectment for the possession of the premises, if it appears that damages have been assessed and nothing but payment is wanting to entitle the company to the continued use of its right of way. It is proper to provide that no execution for the possession of the premises under such circumstances shall issue in the action of ejectment if the damages are paid within a limited time: Conger v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 41-419.

By agreement of parties an appeal was taken from the assessment of damages and judgment for the amount assessed was entered in such appeal, and execution thereon was stayed for two years, and the railroad was constructed through the property without objection. Held, that upon failure to pay the amount of the judgment at the time specified, the owner could proceed by injunction to restrain any further use of his property until compensation should be made: Irish v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 44-380.

A railway company may be dispossessed of its right of way by a judicial sale in a proceeding to enforce the land owner's right. So held where the owner of land had agreed to give the right of way in consideration of the performance of certain conditions by the company which had not been performed, and action was brought by the owner to foreclose his vendor's lien. Also, held, that the vendor's lien in such case was superior to the title of the purchaser of the railroad at foreclosure sale: Varner v. St. Louis & C. R. R. Co., 55-677.

Deposit of damages assessed: The fact that the company deposits the sum found due with the sheriff will not prevent the land owner from recovering, on appeal, the actual damage to the property and interest thereon from the time it is taken, even though the amount of the original damages is found to be less than that assessed by the sheriff's jury: Noble v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 61-637.

The sheriff, in receiving the money deposited as security cannot be regarded as the agent of the owner, but he is the agent of the railway company, and if, through the unfaithfulness or mistake of the sheriff, the money is lost before reaching the hands of the land owner, such loss does not fall upon him but upon the company making the deposit: White v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 64-281.

For moneys paid to a sheriff by the company the land owner may maintain action against him at any time after the expiration of the thirty days allowed for appeal. The statute of limitations, therefore, runs against such an action from that time, and the fact that the land owner has refused the money and attempted by injunction to restrain the taking of his land will not prevent the running of the statute: Lower v. Miller, 66-408.

1909. Application; notice. 1245. The application to the sheriff shall be in writing, and the freeholders appointed shall be the commissioners to assess all damages to the owners of real estate in said county, and said corporation, or the owner of any land therein, may, at any time after their appointment, have the damages assessed in the manner herein prescribed by giving the other party five days' notice thereof in writing, specifying therein the day and hour when such commissioners will view the premises, which shall be served in the same manner as original notices. [R., § 1318.]

Where a mortgage upon the property appears of record, notice must be given to the mortgagee, or he will not be bound by the proceedings: Severin v. Cole, 38-463. And see Cochran v. Independent School Dist., 50 663.

Where the proceedings are based upon the assumption that the owner is a non-resident and unknown, such assumption will be deemed true on certiorari unless the contrary is made to appear: Everett v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. Co., 28-417.

The notice must name the person whose land is affected by the proceedings. It is not sufficient that it be directed to all persons having an interest in certain described property: Birge v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 65-440.

Where a right of way over agricultural college land in possession of a lessee was condemned in proceedings to which the college was a party, and afterwards, the lessee's right being forfeited, the premises were sold to another, held, that the condemnation proceedings were binding on the subsequent purchaser of the premises: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Bean, 69-257.

1910. Minor or insane owner. 1246. If the owner of any lands is a minor, insane, or other person under guardianship, the guardian of such minor, insane or other person, may, under the direction of the circuit [district] judge, agree and settle with said corporation for all damages by reason of the taking of such lands for any of the purposes aforesaid, and may give valid conveyances of such land. [R., § 1316.]

1911. Non-resident owner. 1247. If the owner of such lands is a non-resident of the county in which the same are situate, no demand of the right of way or other purpose for which such lands are desired, shall be necessary, except the publication of a notice which may be in the following form:

NOTICE.— For the appropriation of lands for railway purposes. To (here name each person whose land is to be taken or affected), and all other persons having any interest in, or owning any of the following real estate (here describe the land by its congressional numbers in tracts not exceeding one sixteenth of a section, or, if the land consists of lots in a town or city, by the numbers of the lot and block). You are hereby notified that the — has located its railway over the above described real estate, and desires the right of way over the same, to consist of a strip or belt of land — feet in width, through the centre of which the centre line of said railway will run, together with such other land as may be necessary for bermes, waste banks, and borrowing pits, and for wood and water stations (or desires the same for the purposes mentioned in sections twelve hundred and forty-two, and twelve hundred and forty-three of this chapter [§§ 1905, 1906], as the case may be), and unless you proceed to have the damages to the same appraised on or before — day of —, A. D. 18— (which time must be at least four weeks after the first publication of the notice), said company will proceed to have the same appraised on the — day of — (which must be at least eight weeks after the first publication of the notice), at which time you can appear before the appraisers that may be selected. — Railway Company.

By —, attorney, or —, agent.

Where proceedings were based upon the assumption that the owner was a non-resident and unknown, held, on certiorari, that the contrary not being made to appear, the proceedings were not irregular: Everett v. Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co., 28-417.

The notice must name the person whose land has been taken or affected. It is not sufficient that it is directed to all other persons having an interest in the property described: Birge v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 65-440.

1912. Notice published. 1248. Said notice shall be published in some newspaper in the county, if there be one; if there is none, then in a newspaper published in the nearest county through which the proposed railway is to run, for at least eight successive weeks prior to the day fixed for the appraisalment at the instance of the corporation. [Same, § 3.]

1913. Appraisalment. 1249. At the time fixed in either aforesaid notices, the appraisalment may be made and returned in tracts larger than forty acres, and all the lands appearing of record to belong to one person and lying in one tract may be included in one appraisalment and return, unless the agent or attorney of the corporation, or the commissioners, has actual knowledge that the tract does not belong wholly to the person in whose name it appears of record; and in case of such knowledge, the appraisalment shall be made of the different parcels, as they are known to be owned. [Same, § 4.]

That damages to the entire premises of a property owner, and not merely to the government subdivision through which the road passes, are to be assessed, see notes to § 1968.

1914. Dwelling-house, garden, or orchard. 1250. If it appears from the finding of the commissioners that the dwelling-house, outhouse, orchard, or garden, of the owner of any land taken will be overflowed or otherwise injuriously affected by any dam or reservoir to be constructed under section twelve hundred and forty-two of this chapter [§ 1905], such dam shall not be erected until the question of such overflowing or other injury has been determined upon appeal in favor of the corporation. [12 G. A., ch. 117, § 3.]

1915. Takersmen. 1251. In case of the death, absence, neglect, or refusal, of any of said freeholders to act as commissioners as aforesaid, the sheriff shall summon other freeholders to complete the panel. [R., § 1319.]

1916. Costs. 1252. The corporation shall pay all the costs of the assessment made by the commissioners, and those occasioned by the appeal, unless on the trial thereof a less amount of damages is awarded than was allowed by the commissioners. [R., § 1317; 14 G. A., ch. 119.]

Where the damages allowed on the appeal are less than those awarded in the assessment, in the absence of any showing that either party has made an offer, the costs should be apportioned: Acute v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 61-637.

If, on the trial of an appeal by the land owner, a less amount of damages is given than was awarded by the commissioners, the court is not bound to tax all the costs of appeal to him, but may distribute them according to the general rules of law without reference to this section: Jones v. Mahaska County Coal Co., 47-354.

The purchaser of a railroad pending an appeal from allowance of damages for right of way becomes liable for the payment of costs incurred in such proceeding: Frankel v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 70-424.

1917. Report recorded. 1253. The report of the commissioners, where the same has not been appealed from, and the amount of damages assessed and costs have been deposited with the sheriff, or, if an appeal is taken and the amount of damages assessed on the trial thereof has been paid to the sheriff, may be recorded in the record of deeds in the county where the land is situate, and such record shall be presumptive evidence of title in the corporation to the property so taken, and shall constitute constructive notice of the rights of such corporation therein. [13 G. A., ch. 125, § 1.]

The company cannot be compelled to pay the damages assessed and take the right of way, but may waive the rights acquired by the proceedings, being liable, however, for costs, and any damages actually suffered by the land owner: Gear v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 20-523.

The recording of the award, if done by mistake, does not pass any title to the company so as to raise an implied contract to pay the amount of the award; certainly not until the fact of the mistake has become known to the company and it has had a reasonable time to correct it: Dinnick v. Council Bluffs & St. L. R. Co., 58-637.

Where a portion of plaintiff's land was included in the right of way condemned, but the road was not actually constructed over any portion of his land, which remained fenced and was not entered upon, held, that an appropriation did not appear, and title to the right of way did not pass to the company until it had made payment: Ibid. And see S. C., 62-409.

APPEALS.

1918. How taken. 1254. Either party may appeal from such assessment of damages to the circuit [district] court within thirty days after the assessment is made, by giving the adverse party, or, if such party is the corporation, its agent or attorney, and the sheriff, notice in writing that such appeal has been taken; the sheriff shall thereupon file a certified copy of so much of the appraisement as applies to the part appealed from, and said court shall thereupon take jurisdiction thereof and try and dispose of the same as in actions by ordinary proceedings. The land owner shall be plaintiff and the corporation defendant. [R., § 1317.]

Waiver: Objections to the jurisdiction of the sheriff's jury are not waived by appearance on appeal: Stough v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 71-641.

Exclusive remedy: The remedy by appeal is conclusive of all other remedies as to the manner and method of taking advantage of irregularities in the proceeding: Phillips v. Watson, 63-28.

An appeal is a plain, adequate and speedy remedy when the claim is that insufficient damages are given. Irregularities in the proceeding cannot be corrected by certiorari: Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co. v. Whelan, 64-694.

Joint assessment: Where the damages are assessed jointly in favor of two owners, one of them cannot properly prosecute an appeal without joining the other as appellant or making him a party to the proceedings by notice. Upon failure to do so the appeal should be dismissed on motion: Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Hurst, 30-73.

A subsequent settlement with a part of the owners in common, where the assessment is not apportioned, will not defeat an appeal by those not settled with: Ruppert v. Chicago, O. & St. J. R. Co., 43-490.

By mortgagee: The owner may take an appeal without joining a mortgagee therein, although an award has been made in favor of the owner and mortgagee jointly: Lance v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 57-635.

By person not party: A person not a party to the proceedings, although interested in the property, cannot appeal. Such person might, perhaps, make himself a party before the commissioners, but he cannot make himself a party merely by appealing: Connable v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60-27; Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60-35.

Whether, where publication of notice is authorized to be made to parties interested, all persons interested are to such extent parties as that they may appeal, quære: Ibid.

As to part of damages: Where the assessment covers the entire damage to two contiguous tracts used together and owned by the same person, an appeal cannot be taken from an assessment as to one tract only: Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60-35.

The sheriff is not a party to the condemnation proceedings, and is not disqualified from serving notice of appeal therein: Ibid.

Notice: Whether the giving of notice to the deputy-sheriff would be sufficient, quære: Waltmeyer v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 64-688.

But where it appeared that notice was brought to the sheriff's attention and he directed the deputy to accept service, held, that the notice was sufficient: Ibid.

Notice of appeal may be properly served on the engineer in charge of the survey and location of the railroad, and transacting business connected with securing the right of way in the county where the appeal is taken: Jamison v. Burlington & W. R. Co., 69-670.

The time for taking the appeal begins to run from the time the assessment is in fact made, reduced to writing, and made public, or in some legitimate manner comes to the knowledge of the parties interested: Ibid.

Upon motion being made to dismiss the appeal because not taken in time, affidavits of jurors for making the assessment are receivable to show when the assessment was actually made: Ibid.

Filing papers: Where the appeal has properly been taken by notice, the appellant should not be prejudiced by a failure of the officer to file the papers at the time required by statute: Robertson v. Eldora R., etc., Co., 27-245.

Change of venue may be had on the appeal the same as in civil actions: Whitney v. Atlantic Southern R. Co., 53-651.

Assessment of damages on appeal: On appeal the question of damages is to be determined upon its merits, and the regularity of prior proceedings, such as the selection of commissioners, etc., is not to be called in question. That can only be done by certiorari: Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Rosseau, 8-373. And see Kammer v. Keokuk, 11-543.

The assessment of damages upon appeal is to be made without any reference to that appealed from: Hain v. Chicago, O. & St. J. R. Co., 43-335.

The notice of appeal is presumptive evidence of an assessment from which an appeal can be taken: Ibid.

An appeal by the land owner from the assessment of the commissioners cures any defect in regard to giving notice of the assessment to such owner: Borland v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 8-148.

In the proceedings on appeal an offer to confess judgment may be made with the consequences provided in § 4109, with reference to costs: Harrison v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 34-323.

The company may dismiss the proceedings at any time before judgment upon payment of costs: Burlington & M. R. Co. v. Sater, 1-421.

It would seem that a land owner appealing need not give bond; but even if that be necessary, the failure to give bond at the time the appeal is taken ought not to work the dismissal of the appeal: Robertson v. Eldora R., etc., Co., 27-245.

Judgment: Where, under the provisions of a previous statute, general judgment was rendered against the company on the appeal, held, that it could have no greater effect than an assessment of damages: Gear v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 20-523.

Allowance of interest: In case of an appeal by the railway company, the proper measure of damages is the value of the land at the time of its appropriation, with interest thereon to the date of judgment: Daniels v. Chicago, I. & N. R. Co., 41-52.

Interest may be allowed on the damages

1919. Deposit. 1255. An appeal shall not delay the prosecution of the work upon said railway, if said corporation pays or deposits with the sheriff the amount assessed by the commissioners; said sheriff shall not pay such deposit over to the person entitled thereto after the service of notice of an appeal, but shall retain the same until the determination thereof. [R., § 1317.]

If an appeal is taken to the lower court and the damages awarded are greater than were allowed by the commissioners, the company desiring to appeal to the supreme court must deposit the additional amount with the sheriff, and is not relieved from the obligation to do so by giving a supersedeas bond: Downing v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 63-177.

The right of the owner to receive the amount so deposited is suspended until the appeal is decided. The property is not taken, in an absolute sense, until the final assessment is paid, and the section is, therefore, not unconstitutional: Peterson v. Ferreby, 30-327.

The sheriff holds the deposit not as agent of the owner, but as agent of the company, and 1920. When barred. 1256. An acceptance by the land owner of the damages awarded by the commissioners shall bar his right to appeal.

So held before there was any such statutory provision: Mississippi & M. R. Co. v. Byington, 14-572.

1921. Trial; judgment. 1257. On the trial of the appeal, no judgment shall be rendered except for costs; the amount of damages shall be ascertained and entered of record, and, if no money has been paid or deposited with the sheriff, the corporation shall pay the amount so ascertained, or deposit the same with the sheriff before entering upon the premises.

Under the Revision (which contained no similar provision), held, that where a general judgment was rendered against the company on appeal, it could have no greater effect than an assessment of damages as contemplated by the statute: Gear v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 20-523.

awarded from the time of condemnation, provided the damages are greater than those allowed by the sheriff's jury: Hartshorn v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 52-613.

Interest on the assessment does not begin to run from the time of assessment, but only from the time of taking possession: Haye v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 64-753.

In estimating the damages upon appeal the jury may consider the injury as originally sustained, and the interest which the original sum would have borne during the delay: Noble v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 61-637.

Where the court simply directed the jury to allow plaintiff the market value of the land taken at the time that it was taken, held, that such instruction was proper, and that interest should be allowed on the amount of the verdict from the time of the appropriation: Hollingsworth v. Des Moines & St. L. R. Co., 63-443.

The damages are to be assessed as of the date of the assessment by the sheriff's jury, and then upon the rendition of the verdict the court should make the proper order touching the question of interest. Such order should fix the date when the interest begins to run, which should be when the company deprives the property owner of the use of his property: Reed v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 25 Fed. Rep., 886.

if it does not come into the hands of the owner, or is for any reason lost or misappropriated, such loss must be sustained by the company: White v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 64-281.

For moneys paid to a sheriff the land owner may maintain action against him at any time after the expiration of thirty days allowed for appeal. The statute of limitations, therefore, runs against such action from that time, and the fact that the land owner has refused the money and has attempted by injunction to restrain the taking of his land will not prevent the running of the statute: Lower v. Miller, 66-408.

Interest may be allowed on the damages awarded from the time of condemnation, provided such damages are greater than as found by the sheriff's jury: Hartshorn v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 52-613.

Further as to interest, see notes to § 1918.

1922. Additional deposit. 1258. If, on the trial of the appeal, the damages awarded by the commissioners are increased, the corporation shall pay or deposit with the sheriff the whole amount of damages awarded before entering on, or, in any manner whatever, using or controlling the premises. And said sheriff, upon being furnished with a certified copy of such assessment, may remove said corporation, its agents, servants, or contractors, from said premises unless the amount of the assessment is forthwith paid or deposited with him.

Where the amount of damages awarded by the commissioners is paid to the sheriff and the company enters upon the land, if upon appeal by the land owner a larger sum is awarded, the company may be enjoined from further use of the property until it pays such further sum: Richards v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 18-259.

The federal court will not order its marshal to oust the railway company from the possession of the premises for non-payment of damages for the right of way fixed in that court on appeal, when the remedy of the statute, by application to the sheriff, is open to the property owner: Reed v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 25 Fed. Rep., 886.

If appeal is taken from the award and the damages awarded are greater than were allowed by the commissioners, the company desiring to appeal to the supreme court must deposit the amount with the sheriff, and is not relieved from the obligation by giving a superseedeas bond: Downing v. Des Moines N. W. R. Co., 63-177.

1923. Damages reduced. 1259. If the amount of the damages awarded by the commissioners is decreased on the trial of the appeal, the amount assessed on the trial of such appeal only shall be paid the land owners.

RIGHT OF WAY FOR CHANNELS AND DITCHES.

1924. May be condemned. 18 G. A., ch. 191, § 1. In all cases where any railroad corporation, organized under the laws of this state or any other state, owning or operating a line of railroad within this state, would have the right at this time, by procuring the right of way from the land owner, to dig a channel or cut a ditch in such manner as to change and straighten the course of a stream too frequently crossed by its road, or to protect the right of way and road-bed, or promote the safety and convenience of the operation of the road, such railroad company may condemn the right of way as provided in the next section.

This statute, at least in so far as it applies to cases where the right of way is taken, as provided for the purpose of promoting the safety of the traveling public, is not unconstitutional as authorizing the taking of private property for other than a public purpose: Reusch v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 57-687.

1925. Method of procedure. 18 G. A., ch. 191, § 2. Any such railroad corporation desiring the right of way for any of the purposes contemplated in the preceding section, where its officers and the land owner cannot agree upon the compensation to be paid him, or when he refuses to grant the right of way, may cause to be condemned, of land belonging to such person a strip or belt of such reasonable width as may be necessary for the channel or ditch so desired, by pursuing in all respects, as near as may be, and so far as applicable, the provisions of law for the condemnation of real estate for right of way for said railroads, as provided in sections 1241, 1242, 1243, 1244, 1245, 1246, 1247, 1248, 1249, 1250, 1251, 1252 and 1253 of the code of 1873 [§§ 1904-1917].

1926. Appeal. 18 G. A., ch. 191, § 3. Either party may appeal from such assessment in the manner provided for appeals from the assessment of the sheriff's jury in the condemnation of real estate for right of way for railroads, and sections 1254, 1255, 1256, 1257, 1258, and 1259 of the code [§§ 1918-1923] shall be applicable to such appeal.

1927. Intent of statute. 18 G. A., ch. 191, § 4. The true intent of this act is not to create in favor of a railroad corporation any additional right to divert a water-course from its natural channel, but simply to give the right to condemn the land necessary for the right of way in all cases where by conveyances to the railroad corporation it would have the right to dig such channels or ditches; provided, that nothing herein shall permit any railroad company to turn the channel of any stream off of any cultivated or pasture or meadow lands, when said stream only touches said lands at one point, unless it be by the consent of the owner of said land.

NON-USER.

1928. Effect of. 1260; 15 G. A., ch. 65; 18 G. A., ch. 15. In any case where a railway constructed in whole or in part, has ceased to be operated or used for more than five years, or in any case where the construction of a railway has been commenced by any corporation or person, and work on the same has ceased and has not been in good faith resumed for more than five years, and the same remains unfinished, or where any portion of such railway has not been operated for four years last past, and the rails and rolling stock have been wholly removed therefrom, it shall be deemed and taken that the corporation or person thus in default has abandoned all right and privilege over so much as remains unfinished, or from which the rails and rolling stock have been wholly removed, as aforesaid, in favor of any other corporation or person which may enter upon such abandoned work, as provided in section twelve hundred and sixty-one of the code [§ 1929]; provided, however, that if said road-bed or right of way, or any part thereof, shall not be used or operated for a period of eight years, or in any case where the construction of a railway has been commenced by any corporation or person, and work on the same has ceased and has not been in good faith resumed by any corporation or person for a period of eight years, the land and the title thereto shall revert to the owner of the section, subdivision, tract or lot from which it was taken; and provided, further, that the provisions of this act shall not apply to any railroad having a portion of its track laid with a wooden rail. [13 G. A., ch. 91, § 1.]

The easement being acquired by express grant is not barred by a failure to use the same for ten years, and a possession of the property, during that time, by the original owner, in the absence of any act of his preventing the use; Bastow v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 29-276; Aoll v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. Co., 32-66.

A land owner who has received damages for a right of way and has entered into an agreement by which another company has taken and used such right of way is not in position to rely on an abandonment by the first company; Marling v. Chicago, C. R. & N. R. Co., 67-531.

A portion of a line may become abandoned. Whether it is so or not is a question of fact; Central Iowa R. Co. v. Moulton & A. R. Co., 57-249.

1929. Condemning abandoned way. 1261. In every such case of abandonment, any other corporation may enter upon such abandoned work, or any part thereof, and acquire the right of way over the same and the right to any unfinished work or grading found thereon and the title thereto, by proceeding in the manner provided, and conforming in all particulars as near as may be to the provisions of this chapter; but parties who have previously received compensation in any form for the right of way on the line of such abandoned railway, which has not been refunded by them, shall not be permitted to recover the second time, but the value of such road-bed and right of way, excluding the work done thereon, when taken for a new company, shall be assessed to the former company or its legal representative. [Same, § 2.]

Where, upon condemnation of a right of way over agricultural college land, the damages assessed were deposited with the sheriff, held, that without return of the amount thus deposited the grantee of the agricultural college could not have another assessment of damages for the use of the premises by another railway company; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Bean, 69-257.

A land-owner who has received compensation which has not been refunded by him can not recover the second time; Dubuque & D. R. Co. v. Diehl, 64-635.

CROSSINGS.

1930. Raising or lowering highways. 1262; 15 G. A., ch. 47; 19 G. A., ch. 122. Any such corporation may raise or lower any turnpike, plank-road, or other highway, for the purpose of having its railway cross over or under the same; and in such cases said corporation shall put such highway, as soon as may be, in as good repair and condition as before such alteration. [R., § 1321.]

This section as it originally stood, authorizing a railway corporation to raise or lower a highway "for the purpose of having its railway pass over or under the same," was construed to confer upon railway companies the right to construct their tracks upon the public highways, including the streets of a city, without compensation to an abutting property owner, where he did not own the fee in the highway or street: Milburn v. Cedar Rapids, 12-246; Gear v. Chicago, C. & D. R. Co., 39-23.

But as now amended, by substituting "cross" for "pass," it cannot be construed as authorizing such use of highways or streets without other express legislative authority: Staley v. Davenport, 54-463.

The objection imposed by the statute upon a railway company constructing and operating its railway, to construct at all points where the highway crosses it sufficient and safe crossings, is binding upon all corporations using railways in the state: Farley v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 42-234.

The embankment constructed as a necessary approach to the crossing is a part of the crossing and the company is required to keep it in repair: Ibid.

The company is bound to keep crossings in a safe condition, and this obligation extends to the approaches to a bridge: Newton v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 66-422.

1931. Further repairs. 1263. If the supervisor, trustees, city council, or other person having jurisdiction over such highway require further or different repairs or alterations made thereon, or, if the same, in their opinion, is unsafe, they shall give notice thereof in writing to any agent or officer of the corporation, and if the parties are unable to agree respecting the same, either may apply by petition, setting out the facts, to the circuit [district] court, or judge thereof, and such court or judge shall cause reasonable notice to be given the adverse party of the application: the petition shall be filed in the clerk's office, and may be answered as in other cases. The court shall determine the matter in a summary way and make the necessary orders in relation thereto, giving such corporation a reasonable time to comply therewith, and upon failure to do so, said court may enjoin the corporation from using so much of its road as interferes with any such highways, and the court may award costs in favor of the prevailing party. [R., §§ 1322-3.]

1932. Temporary ways. 1264. Every such corporation when employed in raising or lowering any highway, or in making any other alteration by means of which the same may be obstructed, shall provide and keep in good order suitable temporary ways to enable travelers to avoid or pass such obstructions. [R., § 1324.]

1933. Crossing railways, canals, etc. 1265. Any such corporation may construct and carry its railway across, over, or under any railway, canal, or water-course, when it may be necessary in the construction of the same; and in such cases said corporation shall so construct its crossings as not un-

The company is under obligation to build and keep in repair an overhead crossing and the approaches thereto, provided the grade crossing is unsuitable and the overhead crossing is necessary to put the street in proximately as good repair and condition as before the railroad was built: Ibid.

As the railway has the right to raise or lower highways at crossings, an indictment charging the company with obstructing the public highway with digging, plowing and scraping such highway, throwing up embankments and making excavations, etc., at points where the railway crosses such highway, does not state facts sufficient to constitute the crime of obstructing the highway: State v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 63-508.

In an action for personal injuries received at a public crossing, the fact that the crossing is not as good as the highway was before the construction of the railway is admissible for the purpose of showing what vigilance was required of the railway as to the use of signals and the operation of trains in approaching such crossing: Funston v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 61-452.

The railway has no right to fence its track where it crosses streets or alleys properly laid out, whether they have been improved and used by the public or not: Lathrop v. Central Iowa R. Co., 69-105.

necessarily to impede the travel, transportation, or navigation upon the railway, canal, or stream so crossed; said corporation shall be liable for the damages occasioned by any corporation or party injured by reason of said crossing. [R., § 1325.]

The requirement of § 2005, that trains shall come to a full stop at crossings of other railroads, necessarily renders crossings on grade an impediment, to some extent, to travel and transportation, but the inconvenience and delay arising from their use must be borne by the company. The company constructing an intersecting line is required to so construct the crossing as not to unnecessarily interfere with the crossing of the other road. Whether such crossing shall be made at grade, or over or under the other, must depend upon circumstances; and under particular facts, held, that a requirement that an under-crossing be constructed was not unreasonable: Humestone & S. R. Co. v. Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co., 74-554.

1934. Bridges. 1266. Every such corporation shall maintain and keep in good repair all bridges, with their abutments, which it may construct for the purpose of enabling its railway to pass over or under any turnpike, highway, canal, water-course, or other way. [R., § 1326.]

1935. Damages. 1267. Every such corporation shall be liable for all damages sustained by any person in consequence of any neglect of the provisions of this chapter. [R., § 1327.]

The provisions of this section do not extend the liability of the corporation to the acts of those not its agents or servants: Callahan v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 23-562.

1936. Private crossings. 1268. When any person owns land on both sides of any railway, the corporation owning the same, shall, when requested so to do, make and keep in good repair one cattle-guard and one causeway or other adequate means of crossing the same, at such reasonable place as may be designated by the owner. [R., § 1329.]

When required: The company need not provide a crossing unless the land owner requires it: Henderson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 48-216.

The duty of the company to construct a private crossing may be enforced by mandamus: Boggs v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 54-435.

And in the particular case, held, that a request of the person owning land on both sides of the railway track, for an open crossing at a particular point, was not unreasonable, and compliance therewith might be enforced: Ibid.

The owner of land is authorized to designate the place where the crossing for his benefit shall be made, and the limitation put upon his choice of location is that the place designated shall be a reasonable one: Van Vrankin v. Wisconsin, I. & N. R. Co., 68-576.

Where the only means a citizen has of reaching a highway is across the railway, he may insist that an open crossing be provided for him by means of which he may reach the highway without stopping to open gates or remove bars: Gray v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 37-119.

Where a party owning land on opposite sides of a highway maintains a lane and fences in such manner as to indicate that he prefers an open crossing instead of one closed by gates, the company will not be liable to him for failure to maintain such gates: Tyson v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 43-207.

Where a railroad passes through a pasture the owner is not, as a matter of course, entitled to an open crossing for his stock, regardless of any other means of crossing. To entitle him to such a crossing it must appear that there is no provision for passing from one part of the field to the other, which is adequate under the circumstances: Curtiss v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 62-418.

A company required to maintain and construct proper cattle-guards cannot by contract with another company, whose road it purchases, relieve itself from the right or obligation to do so: Downing v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 43-96.

Gates and bars at private crossings: If the company undertakes to and does construct fences, gates, crossings and cattle-guards, etc., for a private owner, a request for their construction may be presumed, and the company will be required to keep them in repair: Muller v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 66-546.

Under the provisions of a previous statute, differing from the present one as to private crossings, held, that a company had a right to construct fences at such crossings, but must provide the same with gates: McKinley v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 47-76, 78.

The duty to maintain gates at private crossings is a part of the duty to fence, and the company will be liable for damages to stock injured by reason of failure to construct such gates or keep them in repair: Ibid.; Mackie v. Central R. of Iowa, 54-540.

As to the liability for failure to fence in general, see § 1973.

The obligations imposed upon the company to fence and to provide private crossings are correlative, and if it does each as well as it can consistently with the other it is not liable: Henderson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 39-220.

Where the company is required to put in a private crossing and erect proper gates and bars, it will not be liable for negligence of a person for whom the crossing is constructed in habitually leaving such gates or bars open, further than that it must use reasonable diligence and care in keeping them closed: Ibid.

But the company is not responsible in the absence of negligence, although it knows that the land owner or other persons are in the constant or usual habit of leaving the gates open: Henderson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 43-620.

Where the company nailed up the gates at a private crossing for the reason that they had been habitually left open, and the land owner tore down the fence so that the gates should be open, held, that it was error to instruct the jury as to the effect of the abandonment by the land owner of his crossing: Ibid.

The sufficiency of the gates provided at a private crossing is a question of fact for the jury; and held, that it was error to instruct the jury that such gates were sufficient in view of the fact that the land owner gave no notice to the company of objection thereto, and himself believed them sufficient: McKenly v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 43-641.

Under particular facts, held, that it was not sufficiently shown that injury to stock resulted from defect in the gate through which they escaped upon the track: Bothwell v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 59-192.

In an action for injuries to stock from failure to maintain a gate at a private crossing in good condition, evidence of the condition of the gate two or three days after the accident, it not being shown that its condition as to security was different from what it was at the time of the accident, was held proper: Mackie v. Central R. of Iowa, 54-540.

Where the company constructs a gate at a private crossing without fastenings, and in such manner that it may be blown open by the wind, it is not proper to charge the jury that the responsibility for keeping the gate closed is upon the person for whose convenience it is constructed, and that he cannot recover for injuries to his stock coming upon the track through such gate: Hammond v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 43-168.

Where it appeared that a gate at a private crossing had been constructed without fastenings and the wind had sometimes blown it open, held, that it was improper to exclude from the jury the question as to whether the company was guilty of negligence in thus constructing it, and that the proof of the habit of an adjoining owner to leave the gate open would not preclude recovery on account of such negligence in the original construction, it not appearing that it had been left open by such owner in the particular instance when the damage occurred: Ibid.

A company may be liable without knowledge of the defect in the fence if, in the exercise of reasonable care, such knowledge would have been acquired. If the fence was originally defective the company is chargeable with knowledge thereof without express notice: Ibid.

The company is only liable for negligence in failing to put up the bars at a private crossing, which have been left down, after acquiring knowledge of their condition, or in not ascertaining their condition, and the burden of proving such negligence is upon the plaintiff: Perry v. Dubuque Southern R. Co., 36-102.

Proof of the mere fact that bars have been left down by some person, and that through them cattle have strayed upon the track and been injured, does not make a prima facie case of liability on the part of the company. Such liability, if it exists at all, arises from the conduct of the company after the bars have been left down, either in failing to put them up after acquiring knowledge that they were down, or in neglecting to use reasonable diligence to ascertain such condition: Ibid.

And as to a like rule in regard to failure to repair fences, see notes to § 1972.

It is erroneous to instruct the jury that a person whose stock has been injured upon the track makes a prima facie case against the company by showing that the gate through which stock came upon the track was out of repair previous to the accident. Proof of such fact does not cast upon defendant the burden of showing that the accident did not result by reason of the gate being open. Such fact would be a circumstance tending to show that it was open through defendant's fault, which might have much or little weight according to circumstances; but the burden of proof would remain upon plaintiff to show negligence of defendant causing the injury: Johnson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 55-707.

The fact that the bars are left down by the land owner will not as to third persons discharge the company from its obligation to keep them closed: Barlett v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 20-188.

But the land owner could not recover for injuries resulting therefrom, and might be liable to a third person injured by such bars being open: Russell v. Hanley, 20-219.

If, by reason of the act of the land owner in wrongfully removing a gate at a private crossing on his land, stock of a third person gets upon the track and is injured, and the company is held liable therefor, it may recover from such land owner the amount which it has been compelled to pay: Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dunn, 59-619.

VIADUCTS IN CITIES.

1937. When required. 22 G. A., ch. 32, § 1. The council of any city of the first class and cities organized under special charter or cities of the second class having a population of seven thousand or over, shall have power to require any railroad company or companies, owning or operating any railroad track or tracks upon or across any public street or streets of such city to erect, construct, reconstruct, complete and keep in repair to the extent hereinafter provided any viaduct or viaducts upon or along such street or streets and over or under such track or tracks including the approaches thereto as may be deemed and declared by ordinances of such city necessary for the safety and protection of the public: provided, that the approaches to any such viaduct which any railroad company or companies may be required to construct, or reconstruct and keep in repair shall not exceed for each viaduct a total distance of eight hundred feet, and provided further that no such viaduct shall be required on more than every fourth street running in the same direction and that no railroad company shall be required to build or contribute to the building more than one such viaduct with its approaches in any one year. Nor shall any viaduct be required until the board of railroad commissioners shall, after due examination determined said viaduct to be necessary in order to promote the public safety and convenience, and the plans of said viaduct prepared as provided in section three hereof [§ 1939], shall have been approved by said board.

1938. Assessment of damages. 22 G. A., ch. 32, § 2. Whenever any such viaduct shall be deemed and declared by ordinances necessary for the safety and protection of the public, the council shall provide for appraising, assessing and determining the damages, if any, which may be caused to any property, by reason of the construction of such viaduct and its approaches. The proceedings for such purpose shall be the same as provided by law for taking possession of streets by railroad companies, except that the damages assessed shall be paid by the city.

1939. Specifications. 22 G. A., ch. 32, § 3. The width, height and strength of any such viaduct, and the approaches thereto, the material therefor, and the manner of construction thereof shall be such as may be required by the board of public works and approved by the mayor and council, but if there be no board of public works, then they shall be such as may be required by the council.

1940. Apportionment of cost; repairs. 22 G. A., ch. 32, § 4. When two or more railroad companies own or operate separate lines of track to be crossed by any such viaduct, the proportion thereof, and of the approaches thereto, to be constructed by each, or of the cost to be borne by each shall be determined by the council. After the completion of any such viaduct, any revenue derived therefrom by the crossing thereon of street railway lines, or otherwise, shall constitute a special fund, and shall be applied in making repairs to such viaduct. One-half of all ordinary repairs to such viaduct, or to the approaches thereto, shall be paid out of such fund, or shall be borne by the city, and the remaining half shall be borne by the railroad company or companies and if the track of more than one company is so crossed the said one-half of such repairs shall be borne by such companies in the same proportion as the original construction of such viaduct.

1941. Indemnity bond. 22 G. A., ch. 32, § 5. Every city to which this act applies is authorized and empowered to receive a bond of indemnity from persons interested in the construction of any such viaduct conditioned for the payment of all the damages which may be assessed in favor of abutting property owners together with costs.

1942. Refusal to comply. 22 G. A., ch. 32, § 6. If any railroad company neglects or refuses for more than thirty days after such notice as may be prescribed by ordinance, to comply with the requirements of any ordinance passed under the provisions hereof, the city may construct or repair the viaduct or approach or portion of viaduct or approach which such ordinance may require such railroad company to construct or maintain, and recover the cost of such construction or maintenance from such railroad company in any court of competent jurisdiction.

RIGHT OF WAY FOR OTHER PURPOSES.

1943. Canal, turnpike or bridge. 1269. When any corporation or person desires to construct a canal, turnpike, graded, macadamized, or plank road, or a bridge, as a work of public utility, although for private profit, such corporation or person may take such private property as may be deemed necessary for right of way, not exceeding one hundred feet in width, by pursuing the course prescribed in this chapter, all the provisions of which are made applicable in similar cases. [R., §§ 1278-88.]

This section does not authorize the taking of private property for landings for a public ferry: Sandford v. Martin, 31-37.

1944. Cities and towns. 1270. Cities and incorporated towns may exercise the powers herein conferred for the purpose of taking private property for streets, alleys, and market-house sites.

STATE MAY CONDEMN.

1945. How and when. 1271; 16 G. A., ch. 75. Whenever in the opinion of the governor, the public interest requires the taking of any real estate for the making or construction of any drains, sewers, yards, walls, buildings, or other improvements or conveniences for the use or benefit of the penitentiaries, hospitals for the insane, or any other institution of the state, upon or across lands being private property, the same proceedings may be had in the name of the state as provided in this chapter, and for that purpose the state shall be considered a person, and the proceedings shall be conducted by the district [county] attorney of the district [county] in which the land is situated, whenever directed by the governor, or the governor may appoint some other person for that purpose. [12 G. A., ch. 189, §§ 1, 2.]

1946. Damages. 1272. Whenever the amount of the damages contemplated in the preceding section is finally determined, the sheriff or clerk, as the case may be, shall certify the amount thereof to the governor, who shall, by an order indorsed thereon, direct the payment of the same, and the auditor of state shall issue a warrant on the treasury for the amount, which shall be paid with any money not otherwise appropriated. When the money is paid to the sheriff or person entitled thereto, the state, through its proper agent or officer, may enter on the premises and construct the desired work. [Same, § 4.]

STREET RAILWAYS OVER HIGHWAYS.

1947. Right of way. 18 G. A., ch. 32, § 1. Any street railway company now or hereafter organized under the laws of this state to operate a street railway in any city or incorporated town in this state, for the purpose of extending its railway beyond the limits of such city or town, may locate, build and operate, either by animal or motor power, its road over and along any portion of a highway which is of a width of one hundred feet or more. In such cases said company as soon as practicable shall put said highway in as good repair and condition as the same was before its use for the purpose herein contemplated, and boards of supervisors are hereby authorized to accept for highway purposes under this act conveyances of land adjoining any highway or part thereof sufficient to increase said highway to the width of one hundred feet.

1948. Condemnation; damages. 18 G. A., ch. 32, § 2. Unless the owners of the land abutting each side [side] of said highway shall consent to its use as contemplated in section one [§ 1947], said railway company shall pay all damages sustained by such land owners by reason of building said road, which damages shall be ascertained and paid in the same manner as provided for taking private property for works of internal improvement. Said company shall also be liable for all damages sustained by any one, resulting from the carelessness of its officers, agents, or servants, in the construction or operation of its railway.

PUBLIC WAYS TO MINES AND STONE QUARRIES.

1949. By quarry or mine owners. 15 G. A., ch. 34, § 1. Any person, copartnership, joint-stock association, or corporation, owning, leasing, or possessing any lands having thereon or thereunder any coal, stone, lead, or other mineral, may have established over the land of another a public way from any stone-quarry, coal, lead or other mine, to any railway or highway, not exceeding (except by the consent of the owner of the land to be taken) fifty feet in width. When said road shall be constructed, it shall, when passing through inclosed lands, be fenced on both sides by the person or corporations causing said road to be established.

No authority is given by this act to construct a private way. The way, when condemned, is to be a public one, and the act is therefore not invalid: Jones v. Mahaska, etc., Coal Co., 47-35.

A road or way established under the provisions of this statute is a public way, in the sense that the public may use and enjoy it in the manner in which roads and highways are ordinarily used by it, and the mine owner who procured it to be established must use the special privilege which the act confers on him in such a way as not to destroy this right of the public or prevent its enjoyment, and the statute is therefore constitutional. Nor can the construction of the railway in accordance with these provisions be enjoined on the ground that it prevents the owner of the land from constructing a railway thereon for his own use: Phillips v. Watson, 63-28.

11 G. A., ch. 127, which provided for the establishment of private ways was held unconstitutional; but held, arguendo, that to afford an outlet to a citizen or access to mineral wealth, a public way might properly be established: Bankhead v. Brown, 25-540.

1950. Proceedings. 15 G. A., ch. 34, § 2. If the owner of any real estate, necessary to be taken for the purposes mentioned in this act, refuse to grant the right of way, or if such owner and the person, partnership, joint-stock association, or corporation seeking to have such way established, cannot agree upon the compensation to be paid for the same, the sheriff of the county in which said real estate may be situated shall, upon the application of either party, appoint six disinterested freeholders of the county, not interested in a like question, who shall inspect said real estate, and assess the damage which said owner will sustain by the appropriation of said land for such public way, and make and report in writing to the sheriff of said county, and if the applicant for such public way shall at any time before entering upon said real estate, for the purpose of constructing such way, pay to said sheriff, for the use of said owner, the sum so assessed and returned to him as aforesaid, said highway may be at once constru[ct]ed and maintained over and across said premises.

1951. Provisions applicable. 15 G. A., ch. 34, § 3. In proceeding under this act, the application to the sheriff, the duty of commissioners, the time and manner of assessing the damages, the giving of notice thereof to residents and non-residents, the power of guardians to settle and convey, the making and returning of appraisal, the selection of talesmen, the payment of the costs of assessment, the report of the commissioners, the recording thereof, the right of appeal, the proceedings relating thereto, the result of non-user, the rights and duties as to other highways, are and shall be the same as provided in the sections of the code numbered twelve hundred and forty-five to and including twelve hundred and sixty-eight [§§ 1909-1936], and the provisions of all of said sections, so far as applicable, are declared to be a part of this act, except that the report of the commissioners, and record thereof, shall confer no title to the applicant for the land taken for the highway, but shall be presumptive evidence of the establishment of such way.

1952. Railway established. 15 G. A., ch. 34, § 4. Any owner, lessee, or possessor of lands having coal, stone, lead, or other mineral thereon, who has paid the damages assessed for highways established under this act, may construct, use, and maintain a railway on such way, for the purpose of reaching and operating any quarry or mine on such land and of transporting the products thereof to market. In the giving of the notices required by this act, the applicant shall state whether a railway is to be constructed and maintained on the way sought to be established; and if it be so stated the jury shall consider that fact in the assessment of damages.

RIGHTS OF RIPARIAN OWNERS.

1953. Erection of piers, cribs, etc. 15 G. A., ch. 35, § 1. All owners and lessees of lands, or lots, situate upon the Iowa banks of the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, upon which property there is now, or may hereafter be, carried on any business which is in any way connected with the navigation of said rivers, or to which the said navigation is a proper or convenient adjunct, are hereby authorized to construct and maintain, in front of their said property, piers, cribs, booms, and other proper and convenient erections and devices for the use of their respective pursuits and the protection and harbor of rafts, logs, floats, and other water-crafts; provided, that the same present no material or unreasonable obstruction to the navigation of the stream, or to a similar use of adjoining property.

1954. Construction of railroad. 15 G. A., ch. 35, § 2. It shall not be lawful for any person or corporation to construct or operate any railroad or other obstruction between such lots or lands and either of said rivers, or upon the shore or margin thereof, unless the injury and damage to such owners occasioned thereby shall be first ascertained and compensated in the manner provided by chapter four, title ten of the code.

Whether § 1953 is in conflict with act of congress (U. S. Rev. Stat., § 5254), relating to the construction of cribs, piers, etc., on the Mississippi river, quære. But even if it is, this section is not thereby rendered void. If a riparian owner is engaged in business connected with the navigation of the river it is not essential to his right to recover under this section that he should have erected a crib or pier in front of his property. The rule recognized in Tomlin v. Dubuque, B. & M. R. Co., 32-106, is no longer applicable, Revision, § 1328, being now repealed: Renwick v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 49-664; S. C., 102 U. S., 108.

CHAPTER 5.

OF RAILWAYS.

ORGANIZATION.

1955. Change of name. 1273. Any corporation organized under the laws of this state for the purpose of constructing and operating a railway, may, with the assent of two-thirds of all the stockholders in interest, change the corporate name thereof. But no change in the name of any such corporation shall be deemed complete until the president and secretary thereof shall file in the office of the secretary of state, a statement, under oath, showing the assent of the stockholders to such change, and the new name adopted, and a certified copy of the proceedings had by the corporation and stockholders in relation thereto as the same appears in the records thereof; from the time of such filing, the corporation by its new name shall be entitled to all the rights, powers, and franchises that it possessed under the old name, and by the new name shall be liable upon all contracts and obligations of every kind and description entered into by or binding upon such corporation by or under its old name to the same extent and manner as if no change in the name of such corporation had been made. [10 G. A., ch. 44, §§ 3, 4.]

1956. Record. 1274. The secretary of state shall immediately record in the proper book in his office the matters filed under the preceding section, and make intelligible references to the record of the articles of incorporation as originally recorded.

1957. May join or consolidate. 1275. Any such corporation may join, intersect, and unite its railway with the railway of any other corporation at such point on the boundary line of this state as may be agreed upon by such corporations. And with the assent of three-fourths in interest of all the stockholders, may, by purchase or sale, or otherwise, merge and consolidate the stock, property, franchises, and liabilities of such corporations, making the same one joint-stock corporation upon such terms as may be agreed upon not in conflict with the laws of this state. [R., § 1332.]

A railroad corporation organized under the general law may, after constructing a line, sell the property and continue the object of its incorporation by the construction of a new line: Mahaska County R. Co. v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 28-437.

Where the articles of incorporation of the company provided for the sale of the property with the limitation that "no sale shall be valid until all debts of the company shall be paid or arranged for," held, that the indebtedness being a very inconsiderable sum, if anything, and the purchaser having incurred if there were any debts, and being always ready to pay any that might be established, a sale under such circumstances was valid: Ibid.

Where a railway company through its directors sold its property to another company, and the directors and stockholders of the former stood by with knowledge of all the facts and saw the latter company make large expenditures on the property, held, that they were estopped from seeking a recovery of the property because of an irregularity in the sale: Ibid.

A company buying in the franchise of property of a railroad at a foreclosure sale does not become privy to any agreement on the part of the original company except so far as it may be incorporated into the deeds of conveyance under which the title is held: Close v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 64-149.

Where two railroad companies were consolidated under the arrangement that stock in the new company should be issued to stockholders in the old companies, and the new company should acquire the property of the old, held, that a stockholder in one of the old companies did not, by such transfer of property, acquire a vendor's lien thereon: Cross v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 58-62.

1958. Connections. 1276. Any such corporation which has or may construct its railway so as to meet or connect with any other railway in an adjoining state at the boundary line of this state, shall have power to make such contracts and agreements with the corporations controlling such railways in an adjoining state, for the transportation of freight and passengers, or for the use of its railway by such foreign corporation, as the board of directors may see proper. [R., § 1334.]

1959. Extension. 1277. Any such corporation organized for the purpose of constructing a railway from a point within the state may construct or extend the same into or through any other state under such regulations as may be prescribed by the laws of such state; and the rights and privileges of such corporation over said extension in the construction and use thereof, and in controlling and applying the assets, shall be the same as if its railway was constructed wholly within this state. [R., § 1333.]

1960. Duties and liabilities of lessees. 1278. All the duties and liabilities imposed upon corporations owning or operating railways by this chapter, shall apply to all lessees or other persons owning or operating such railways as fully as if they were expressly named herein, and any action which might be brought, or penalty enforced, against any such corporation by virtue of any provision of this chapter, may be brought or enforced against such lessees or other persons. [12 G. A., ch. 79; ch. 172, § 1.]

The obligation to fence (under § 1972) rests upon the lessee as much as upon the lessor, and the lessee is liable to damages done by its train, although as between it and the lessor the duty of fencing rests upon the latter: Clary v. Iowa Midland R. Co., 37-344.

Where the owner and a lessee each runs trains over the road, each is liable only for stock injured by its own trains by reason of the failure to fence: Stephens v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co., 36-327.

The remedy given against the lessees by statute is merely cumulative, and the right of action for negligence causing the injury of a passenger exists as against the company in whose name the road is being operated, although it may, in fact, have been leased to and be under the control of a lessee: Bower v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 42-546.

Prior to express statutory provision, held, that the statute imposing a liability for injuries to stock where the right of way is not fenced was applicable to a lessee: Liddle v. Keokuk, Mt. P. & M. R. Co., 23-378.

But further, held, under the same statutory provision, that where the lessee had the exclusive right to run, operate and control the road, and had built and maintained fences along the road, and had the same power to protect itself that the lessor would have, it was liable for injury to stock to the same extent as though it were owner of the road: Stewart v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 27-282.

The company whose engines set out fire are liable for damages from the fire thus set out, although the line is owned and operated by another company and fire starts on the right of way by reason of combustible material allowed to accumulate thereon by such other company: Slossen v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 60-215.

Where a railway company incorporated under the laws of Iowa leases its road to a foreign corporation, the lessor is a necessary party to an action for breach by the lessee of a contract entered into originally with the lessor. The statutory provision as to the liability of a lessee does not discharge lessor from liability, but in effect makes both the lessor and the lessee jointly liable: Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Crane, 113 U. S., 424.

A lessee of a railroad can exercise no right that its lessor could not, and if the lessor was subject to injunction against operating its road at the suit of the land owner whose property had been taken without compensation, the lessee is subject to the same restriction: Hibbs v. Chicago & S. W. R. Co., 39-340.

The company owning a railroad, and in whose name it is being operated, is liable in an action for personal injuries received thereon, although the road is leased to and operated by a lessee: Bower v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 42-546.

Where a railroad was leased to defendant under a contract by which he was to manage the same and apply the profits, after paying operating expenses, to the payment of certain advances made by him, etc., held, that he was a trustee and was not individually liable as lessee for operating expenses: United States Rolling Stock Co. v. Potter, 43-56.

A receiver operating a railway under direction of the court is liable to judgment for personal injuries received by an employee from the negligence of other employees engaged in the operation of the road, under the statutory provision on such subject: Sloan v. Central Iowa R. Co., 62-728.

For similar provisions, see § 1995.

1961. Offices. 1279. The offices of secretary and treasurer, or assistant treasurer and general superintendent of every railway corporation organized under the laws of this state, shall be kept where the principal place of business of such corporation is to be, in which offices the original record, stock, and transfer books, and all the original papers and vouchers of such corporation shall be kept; and such treasurer or assistant treasurer shall keep a record of the financial condition of the corporation, which may be inspected at all reasonable hours by any stockholder, or any committee appointed by the general assembly. Such corporation may keep in any other state a transfer office, in which may be kept a duplicate transfer book; but no transfer of shares of stock shall be legal or binding until the same is entered in the transfer book kept in this state. The secretary and treasurer, or assistant treasurer and general superintendent aforesaid shall reside in this state. [9 G. A., ch. 159, §§ 2, 6.]

1962. Report. 1280. Every such corporation shall, annually, under the oath of the president, in the month of January, make a full report of the condition of its affairs to the secretary of state, and shall have the same published in some newspaper printed in the place of its general business office, showing the amount of the capital stock of such corporation, and the amount paid thereon, the amount of bonds issued, and how secured, and all other indebtedness; the length of such railway when completed, and how much is built and in use; the number of acres of land donated or granted to them, by whom and what disposition has been made of said grants or donations, the gross amount of receipts and how disbursed, the net amount of profit and the dividends made, with such other facts as may be necessary to a full statement of the affairs and condition of such corporation, and the secretary of state shall present the said report to the general assembly. [Same, § 3.]

1963. Proceedings to compel. 1281. In case any such corporation shall neglect to make such report as required in the preceding section, any stockholder may file his petition in the district [or circuit] court in the county where the principal business office is kept, stating that said report has not been made, and praying that an order may issue against the corporation commanding it to make said report; said petition, shall be under oath and filed at least ten days before the next term of the district [or circuit] court in said county, and notice thereof shall be given such corporation for the same length of time, and in the same manner as is now required to be given in other suits in the district [or circuit] court, and upon the filing of such petition, the clerk shall issue such order and make the same returnable at the next term of the district [or circuit] court in said county, and costs shall be recoverable by either party as in ordinary actions. [Same, § 4.]

1964. Examination. 1282. If it appears such report has not been filed, the court shall, during the term, appoint three disinterested and competent persons near the place of the general business office of the corporation as an investigating committee, who shall examine into its affairs and report at as early a day as practicable its condition, in manner and form as prescribed in section twelve hundred and eighty of this chapter [§ 1962]; one copy of said report to be filed in the office of the clerk of the district court of the county where the proceedings are had, and one copy to be filed in the office of the secretary of state. The compensation for the services of such committee shall be paid by the corporation thus investigated, but it shall not exceed three dollars per day and mileage at the rate of ten cents per mile, counting one way. [Same, § 5.]

OF STOCK AND DEBTS.

1965. Bonds; mortgages. 1283. Any such corporation shall have power to issue its bonds for the construction and equipment of its railway, in sums not less than fifty dollars, payable to bearer or otherwise, and bearing interest at a rate not exceeding ten per cent. per annum, and make the same convertible into stock, and may sell the same at such rates or prices as is deemed proper; if such bonds are sold below the par value thereof, they shall, nevertheless, be valid and binding, and no plea of usury shall be allowed such corporation in any action or proceeding brought to enforce the collection of said bonds; such corporation may also secure the payment of said bonds by executing mortgages or deeds of trust of the whole or any part of its property and franchises. [R., § 1339; 10 G. A., ch. 20.]

1966. After-acquired property. 1284. Said mortgages or deeds of trust, may, by their terms, include and cover, not only the property of the corporation making them at the time of their date, but property both real and personal which may thereafter be acquired, and shall be as valid and effectual for that purpose, as if the property were in possession at the time of the execution thereof. [R., § 1340.]

1967. Execution of mortgages. 1285. Said mortgages or deeds of trust shall be executed in such manner as the articles of incorporation or by-laws of the corporation may provide, and shall be recorded in the office of the recorder of each county through which the railway of the corporation may run, or in which any property mortgaged or conveyed by such deeds of trust may be situated, and shall be notice to all the world of the rights of all parties under the same, and for this purpose, and to secure the rights of mortgagees or parties interested under deeds of trust so executed and recorded, the rolling stock and personal property of the company properly belonging to the road and appertaining thereto, shall be deemed a part of the road, and said mortgages and deeds so recorded, shall have the same effect both as to notice and otherwise, as to the personal, as to real estate covered by them. [R., § 1341.]

preferred stock, not exceeding ten thousand dollars for each mile of railway constructed, which stock shall be entitled to such dividends as the directors of the corporation may determine, not exceeding eight per cent. per annum, if the same is earned in any one year after payment of all interest on the bonds of the corporation before any dividend is made to the common stock. [10 G. A., ch. 44, § 1; 11 G. A., ch. 102.]

1969. Exchange for bonds. 15 G. A., ch. 20. Any railway corporation which has no surplus, after paying its running expenses, with which to pay the interest on its bonded indebtedness, with the assent of its bondholders, in addition to the right conferred by section one thousand two hundred and eighty-six of the code [§ 1968], may, with the assent of two-thirds of its stockholders, issue its preferred stock, at par, to an amount equal to and not exceeding its bonded indebtedness, in exchange for its said bonded indebtedness. The said stock shall be entitled to such dividends from its net profits as the directors of the corporation may determine, not exceeding eight per cent. per annum, if the same is earned in any one year, after payment of all interest on the indebtedness of the corporation, before any dividend is made to the common stock.

1970. Conversion into common stock. 1287. Such preferred stock, and any income or mortgage bond of the corporation, shall, at the option of the holder, be convertible into common stock in such manner and on such terms as the board of directors thereof may prescribe; but the aggregate amount of the common and preferred stock shall not exceed the total amount of stock which the corporation may be by law, or the articles of incorporation thereof, authorized to issue. [10 G. A., ch. 44, § 2.]

OF THE TRACK.

1971. Cattle-guards; crossings; signs. 1288. Every corporation constructing or operating a railway, shall make proper cattle-guards where the same enters or leaves any improved or fenced land, and construct at all points where such railway crosses any public highway, good, sufficient, and safe crossings and cattle-guards, and erect at such points at a sufficient elevation from such highway to admit of free passage of vehicles of every kind, a sign, with large and distinct letters placed thereon, to give notice of the proximity of the railway and warn persons of the necessity of looking out for the cars; and any railway company neglecting or refusing to comply with the provisions of this section, shall be liable for all damages sustained by reason of such neglect and refusal, and in order for the injured party to recover, it shall only be necessary for him to prove such neglect or refusal. [R., § 1331; 9 G. A., ch. 169, §§ 3, 4, 5.]

Cattle-guards: This section makes it necessary that cattle-guards be constructed not only where the track goes through outside fences, but also at division fences: Smith v. Chicago, C. & D. R. Co., 38-518.

Where the track passes through the lands of two owners fenced in common, and subsequently a division fence is constructed, it is the duty of the company upon notice to put in a cattle-guard, and it will be liable for the value of crops destroyed by reason of the failure to do so: Donald v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 44-157.

Where a railroad is constructed across unimproved or uninclosed land, and the land is afterwards improved or inclosed, the railway company is under obligation to construct cattle-guards just as it would have been under obligation to do if the land had been inclosed at the time the road was constructed: Heskett v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 61-467.

Whether notice to the company to construct cattle-guards is necessary after the land has been thus inclosed, quære; but, if necessary, the service of notice upon the station agent is sufficient: Ibid.

This provision as to cattle-guards applies to cases where the corporation fences its right of way. When it does so there is fenced land, and upon entering or leaving, the law requires a cattle-guard: Robinson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 67-292.

The statute is imperative, and the court will not engraft an exception upon it relieving a company from obligation to put in a cattle-guard on the ground that it is not fit, proper and suitable to do so in a particular case: Mundhenk v. Central Iowa R. Co., 57-718.

Where it appeared that plaintiff's horses were put temporarily in a field, from which they escaped through a defective fence, and were injured by reason, as alleged, of an insufficient cattle-guard, in a county where cattle were not allowed to run at large, held, that the facts did not necessarily show contributory negligence defeating plaintiff's right to recover: Timins v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 72-94.

There is nothing in this section requiring a company to make cattle-guards at a private crossing: Bartlet v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 20-188. (But see § 1936.)

Method of construction: The term cattle-guard as used in the statute imports a guard or protection extending the whole width of the right of way. The owner is under no obligation to construct a fence up to the track upon the right of way: Mundhenk v. Central Iowa R. Co., 57-718; Hessett v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 61-467.

The duty of connecting a cattle-guard with the right of way fence devolves upon the company, and is implied in the duty to construct the guard itself: Miller v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 66-546.

Where the right of way and public highway intersect obliquely, the company should fence to the point where the highway crosses the track, and construct the cattle-guard there, and not at the point where the highway intersects the right of way: Andre v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 10-107.

Crossings: Where a railway impinged upon a highway some twenty rods from the place where it finally crossed it, held, that all the intervening highway was not to be deemed a part of the crossing, within the meaning of this section: Beatty v. Central Iowa R. Co., 58-243.

It is the duty of the company to repair the crossings and keep them in a safe condition: Farley v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 42-234.

The embankment constructed as a necessary approach to the crossing is a part of the crossing, and the company is required to keep it in repair: Ibid.

Purchasers of a road at judicial sale take subject to any oral obligations to maintain crossings, etc., made by the former company in connection with the acquisition of the right of way: Swan v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 72-659.

Negligence: Where plaintiff's cow was injured by a wild-train at a highway crossing, held, that it was a question for the jury whether it was negligence in the plaintiff to allow his cow to be at such crossing at the time when no regular train was due: Couison v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 71-28.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to sustain a verdict against a railroad company for injury to a horse at a cattle-guard: Meade v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 45-699.

Where the sufficiency of a cattle-guard was in question, held, that the fact that a similar guard situated on other premises was sufficient to, and did, keep out stock, was not material or relevant: Downing v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 43-96.

Under the evidence in a particular case, held, that it was for the jury to say whether or not the cattle-guard was reasonably sufficient for the purpose for which it was constructed: Timins v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 72-94.

Measure of damages: As the owner of the land has no legal right to construct cattle-guards across the track, he is not bound to do so in order to protect himself from damages for want thereof, but may recover whatever damages he may sustain by reason of his land being left open and unfenced: Raridon v. Central Iowa R. Co., 65-640; Downing v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 43-96.

Measure of damages for failure to erect a cattle-guard at a partition fence between two fields, one of which might have been used for pasture, held to be the difference between the value of the pasture in the condition in which the inclosure was left by the company and what the value would have been if the cattle-guards had been maintained: Raridon v. Central Iowa R. Co., 69-527.

Where the land owner seeks to recover the entire value of a crop which he alleges to have been totally lost by reason of the failure of the company to construct cattle-guards, the question of how much less value the crop is by reason of such failure is a question of proof. The fact that a claim is made for the entire loss will not prevent the owner from recovering whatever loss is suffered: Raridon v. Central Iowa R. Co., 65-640.

The measure of damage for crops destroyed by reason of failure to put in a cattle-guard where a partition fence is erected subsequently to the completion of the road is the value of the crop destroyed by reason of such failure: Donald v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 44-157.

Double damages: A cattle-guard is not to be deemed a part of the fence required by other statutory provisions, and the company is not liable in double damages for failure to construct such cattle-guard as it is in case of failure to construct a fence: Moriarity v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64-696.

Contract: A company required to maintain and construct proper cattle-guards cannot, by contract with another company whose road it purchases, relieve itself from the right or obligation to do so: Downing v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 43-96.

Signs: This section only renders the company liable for damages sustained by reason of the failure to erect such signs: Lang v. Holiday Creek R., etc., Co., 49-469.

The failure to erect a sign renders the company absolutely liable in a case wherein it is shown that a person was injured at a crossing. Evidence of the injury and of the company's neglect to erect the sign establishes its liability, and it is not necessary for plaintiff to show his own care. (As the case arose, however, under a previous statute, this point was not involved): Payne v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 44-236.

Under a previous statute which did not contain the provision that proof of the neglect to erect a sign should be sufficient to entitle the injured party to recover for injuries received at such crossing, held, that proof of failure to erect a sign established negligence on the part of the company, but did not relieve plaintiff of the necessity of showing that his own negligence did not contribute to the injury: Dodge v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 34-276; Correll v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 33-120; Payne v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 39-523; S. C., 44-236.

1972. Liability for stock killed; speed at depots; damages by fire. 1289. Any corporation operating a railway, that fails to fence the same against live-stock running at large at all points where such right to fence exists, shall be liable to the owner of any such stock injured or killed by reason or the want of such fence for the value of the property or damage caused, unless the same was occasioned by the wilful act of the owner or his agent. And, in order to recover, it shall only be necessary for the owner to prove the injury or destruction of his property; and if such corporation neglects to pay the value of or damage done to any such stock within thirty days after notice in writing, accompanied by an affidavit of such injury or destruction, has been served on any officer, station or ticket agent employed in the management of the business of the corporation in the county where the injury complained of was committed, such owner shall be entitled to recover double the value of the stock killed or damages caused thereto; provided, that no law of this state, nor any local or police regulations of any county, township, city or town, regulating the restraint of domestic animals, or, in relation to the fences of farmers or land owners, shall be applicable to railway tracks, unless so specifically stated in the law or regulation. The operating of trains upon depot grounds necessarily used by the company and public, where no such fence is built, at a greater rate of speed than eight miles per hour, shall be deemed negligence and render the company liable under this section. And provided, further that any corporation operating a railway shall be liable for all damages by fire that is set out or caused by operating of any such railway, and such damage may be recovered by the party damaged in the same manner as set forth in this section in regard to stock, except to double damages. [Same, § 6; 14 G. A., ch. 128.]

Failure to fence: This section makes the fact of the injury or destruction of stock on the railway track prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of the corporation, and the burden of proof is upon the defendant to establish the building of a good and sufficient fence: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68-530.

In order to render the company liable for injury to stock, negligence must be shown, but it is sufficient to make out a prima facie case to show the injury and that it occurred by reason of the omission to fence. Thereupon the burden is upon the company to show freedom from negligence in the matter of a fence: Small v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 50-338.

If a railroad company fails to fence its road it is absolutely liable for stock injured, in the absence of wilful act of the owner: Aylesworth v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 30-459.

Liability for injury under this section attaches where the want of a fence in connection with some act of the company is the proximate cause of the injury. If it is claimed that defendant is liable for negligence in so constructing a bridge as to render it dangerous for stock running at large, such negligence must be directly alleged: Asbach v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 74-248.

Before the enactment of this statute it was held that to permit cattle to run at large did not impute negligence on the part of the owner, and that cattle would not be trespassers if found upon the unfenced track of a railway; that if the track was unfenced the company would be held to the use of ordinary care and diligence in running its trains to avoid injuring such stock, but if its track was fenced it would only be liable for injury resulting from gross or wilful negligence: Russell v. Hanley, 20-219; Alger v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 10-268.

The railroad company is required to fence its track for the protection of "crazy" horses as well as for the protection of animals possessing good "horse sense." The fact that the animal is injured by reason of failure to leave the track through want of natural intelligence will not show that the injury did not result from want of a fence: Liston v. Central Iowa R. Co., 70-714.

This statutory provision does not require railway companies to fence their roads, but subjects them to certain liabilities if they fail to do so. Failure to fence cannot, therefore, be imputed to the company as negligence in a case where a child, playing on an unfenced track of a road, is run over by one of the company's trains: Walkenhauer v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 3 McCrary, 553.

A railway company does not owe to its employees the duty to fence its right of way, and employees are supposed to contract to operate the road in its unfenced condition so far as it is unfenced. Any additional exposure on that account must be presumed to have been taken into consideration upon entering into the employment: Patton v. Central Iowa R. Co., 73-306. (By §§ 1973-1975 fencing is now obligatory.)

Animals not struck by train: It may be said that an animal is injured by reason of the failure of the company to fence when the want of a fence in connection with the acts of the defendant is the proximate cause of the injury. Therefore, where a horse going upon a track where there was a failure of the company to fence, being frightened by a coming train, ran upon a bridge and was injured, there being no other practicable means of escape for the animal, held, that the company was liable: Young v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 44-172.

It is therefore for the jury to say whether or not in a particular case an animal injured upon the track without being struck by the train was injured by defendant's negligence: Kraus v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 55-338.

The fact that the train does not strike the animal does not relieve the company of liability for the injury: Liston v. Central Iowa R. Co., 70-714.

Negligence: Plaintiff may ask recovery for stock killed, on the ground that the road was not fenced, pleading the facts entitling him to such recovery, and also on the ground of the negligent manner in which the train was operated, and he may then introduce evidence to sustain both or either of these causes of action: Scott v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 63-360.

Where it is claimed that stock was injured by reason of defective fence plaintiff may without proof of that fact recover the value of the stock killed if it is shown that the injury of the stock was due to negligence of the employees of the company operating the train: Baker v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 73-389.

The burden of proof is upon plaintiff to show that the injury occurred at a place where defendant had a right to fence and did not, and that it was caused by defendant's negligence: Comstock v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 32-376.

An agreement with the land owner by which he undertakes to erect and maintain a fence will not prevent liability on the part of the company to other persons for double damages for stock injured where such land owner has failed to fence or repair, even though the owner of the stock has placed them for pasture upon the land of the person agreeing to maintain the fence: Warren v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 41-484.

Negligence of land owner: Where a company is compelled to pay for injuries to animals of a third person which have got upon the track through a gate at a private crossing, wrongfully removed by the land owner for whom the gate was constructed, it may recover from such land owner the amount so paid: Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dunn, 59-619.

The fact that there were two gaps in a railroad fence within four hundred feet of each other, made by the plaintiff in the prosecution of work connected with such railroad, held not to preclude the owner from recovering damages for injuries to his stock by their escape upon the railroad track through a gap in the fence intermediate the two made by him and for which he was not responsible: Accola v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 70-185.

Sufficiency of fence: The fence contemplated is such as is reasonably sufficient to prevent live-stock from going on the railroad track. It is error to charge the jury that when fences are constructed along the right of way by the company they must, in order to relieve it from liability for injuries to stock, be such as to absolutely prevent stock from getting under, through or over the same: Shellabarger v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 66-18.

The fence must not only be sufficient to turn horses and cattle, but must be sufficient to turn swine, or the company will be liable for swine killed: Fritz v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 34-337.

The fence must be sufficient to turn live-stock of any kind in order to exonerate the company from liability for injuries to such live-stock. It is not sufficient that the fence be such as is described by statute as a lawful fence: Lee v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 66-131.

A bluff, a hedge, a trench, a wall, a trestle, or the like, may constitute a sufficient fence. The question whether the fence is sufficient is for the jury: Hilliard v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 37-442.

The fact that the fences and track are so constructed that stock having once entered upon the right of way cannot, when frightened and driven before the engine, find a safe place to leave the track will not render the company liable: Gilman v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 62-299.

The fact that the fastening of a gate in the fence is placed on the inside may be a proper matter to be considered by the jury in determining whether the fence is sufficient: Butler v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 71-206.

Replacing fences destroyed: The allegation that the road is unfenced at the time of the accident is supported by proof of the removal or destruction of the fence before the accident: Fritz v. Kansas City, C. B. & St. J. R. Co., 61-323.

Where the fences were swept away by a flood, failure to rebuild them within two months after the road was repaired and operated, held sufficient to render the company liable: Ibid.

If a fence constructed by the company falls by reason of its insufficiency, it is immaterial that it was not down such length of time before the animal passed through that the company might, in the exercise of due diligence, have had knowledge thereof: Libby v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60-323.

Where a railway was fenced only upon one side, and the animal injured was confined in a field inclosed in part by such fence, and escaped therefrom by reason of the fence being blown down by a storm, held, that the railroad not being fenced as required, the company was liable without regard to whether it was negligent in repairing the fence which was blown down, for the reason that the road was not properly fenced, and the animal after escaping from the inclosure was running at large: Tredway v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co., 43-527.

Operation of the road; construction train: The railway company is liable for stock killed by a construction train by reason of the failure to fence, although the road is not completed: Glandon v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68-457.

Failure to repair fences: While the company is liable for stock injured or killed on its track by reason of its failure to keep in repair the fences which it has erected on the line of its road, yet before such liability will attach the company must have knowledge, either express or implied, that the fence is out of repair, and a reasonable time after such notice to put it in repair: Aylesworth v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 30-459; Hilliard v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 37-442.

Knowledge that the fence is out of repair may be shown by the lapse of such time as to afford reasonable presumption thereof: Aylesworth v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 30-459; Davis v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 40-292.

The company having constructed a sufficient fence is only liable for failure to exercise reasonable care and diligence in maintaining it: Lemmon v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 32-151.

It is error to instruct the jury that the company would be liable if it failed to erect and maintain a fence sufficient to keep cattle from its right of way, and the cattle were injured by reason of such failure. The jury must be allowed to consider whether the defect in the fence was occasioned by want of repair, and if so, whether the company had discovered that it was out of repair, or should have discovered it in the exercise of reasonable care, and had had a reasonable time afterward to make the repair: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 58-625.

Where the track has been properly fenced and the fence has been destroyed, the company is liable, in case of a failure to use reasonable and ordinary diligence and care in rebuilding it. Reasonable time must be allowed: McCormick v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 41-193.

Burden of proof: Liability of the company for injuries caused by bars being left down at private crossings exists, if at all, either in failing to put them up after acquiring knowledge that they are down, or neglect to use reasonable diligence in ascertaining such condition, and the burden of proving these facts is upon the plaintiff seeking to recover damages for such negligence: Ferry v. DuBuque Southwestern R. Co., 36-102.

In case of an injury to stock by reason of a gate being open the burden is on plaintiff to show that the gate became open by defendant's fault. The fact that the gate was defectively constructed, unless it became open by reason of such construction, is not sufficient to entitle plaintiff to recover: Buller v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 71-206.

A railway is required to exercise due care to keep gates closed and obtain knowledge of their condition. If it fails to exercise such care and through its negligence remains ignorant of the fact that a gate is open, it will be chargeable with having knowledge of that fact which due care would have given it. It is the duty of the company in such cases to close a gate after gaining knowledge that it is open, whether left open by its own employees or others. The question whether it should have had knowledge is for the determination of the jury: Wait v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 74-207.

Further as to gates and bars at private crossings, see § 1936 and notes.

An instruction to the effect that defendant was not liable unless there was neglect in failing to repair the fence within a reasonable time after notice of the defective condition, held proper, as the jury must have understood therefrom that the burden of showing neglect rested upon the party seeking to recover: Dunn v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 58-674.

Evidence of the condition of the fence subsequent to the time of the injury is admissible only where it is shown that there had been no change in the condition: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 58-625.

Evidence of the condition of the fence at the time of the accident is admissible for the purpose of showing that the company was negligent in allowing it to get out of repair, and such evidence need not be confined to the particular portion of the fence through which the stock escaped: Lemmon v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 32-151.

Where damages are claimed by reason of the injured stock having escaped upon the right of way by reason of the fastening of a gate in the fence of the company being defective, evidence is admissible to show that other like fastenings have proved insufficient, and it is not competent for defendant to show that the fastening used was of the kind generally in use: Payme v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 72-214.

Ownership of stock: In an action against a railway company for damages for stock killed by its train, the ownership of the stock is an issuable fact, and while possession might make out a prima facie case of ownership, yet there must be such proof of possession or other proof of ownership to entitle plaintiff to recover: Welsh v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 53-632.

Stock running at large: The company is only liable for injuries to stock "running at large," and not when it is in charge of the owner and being driven by him at the time of the injury: Smith v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 34-96.

Stock which escapes from the inclosure of the owner upon the track of the company is "running at large:" Hinman v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 28-491.

And so, too, is stock which is in a field through which the railway passes and where the company has failed to fence: Swift v. North Missouri R. Co., 29-243.

The words "running at large" mean "not under control of the owner." A mule which had escaped from its owner, and which he was unable to catch, held to be running at large: Hammond v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 43-168.

Allegations in a petition that the animal injured escaped upon the railroad track, held to be in effect an allegation that he was running at large: Liston v. Central Iowa R. Co., 70-714.

A horse may be regarded as running at large where he has escaped from the control of his owner and cannot be caught by him. So held where the horse injured had on a bridle and an untied halter rope: Welsh v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 53-632.

Where a person in charge of a herd of cattle left them temporarily, and before the person who was to succeed him in their care took possession of them one of them escaped from the herd and was very soon afterwards killed on defendant's railway track, not having been missed from the herd, held, that such animal was running at large within the meaning of this section: Valleau v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 73-723.

A suckling colt may be considered as running at large within the provisions of the statute, although its mother is under the control of the owner: Smith v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 58-622.

A team of horses hitched to a wagon and which have escaped from the control of their owner are, within the terms of this statute, "live-stock running at large." Inman v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60-459.

It is error to instruct the jury that it is the duty of the company to build and maintain fences sufficient to keep cattle off the track under all ordinary circumstances, and that it is liable for all injury to cattle occasioned by its failure to perform that duty. The instructions should be qualified by limiting the liability to injuries caused to animals running at large: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68-530.

Proof of injury: When stock is killed at a place where the company has failed to fence, it will be presumed, prima facie, that the injury occurred "by reason of the want of such fence." Spence v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 25-139.

The evidence in a particular case as to stock killed by a train, having been struck by the train going in a particular direction and carried upon a bridge, held sufficient to support a verdict for damages: Martin v. Central Iowa R. Co., 59-411.

In an action against the company for injury to stock, there being no direct evidence as to whether the injury was caused by defendant's train, the jury may consider the character of the injury for that purpose, but evidence that when animals are struck by moving trains there is always some indication left along the track of the collision is not proper: Clark v. Kansas City, St. L. & N. R. Co., 55-455.

Double damages; constitutionality: The provision as to double damages is constitutional. It is uniform in its operation as to all persons or companies pursuing a particular business: Jo es v. Galena & C. U. R. Co., 16-6; Welsh v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 53-632.

Nor does such provision deny to railway companies, or persons operating railways, equal protection of the laws: Tredway v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co., 43-527.

This provision does not conflict with the constitutional guaranties for the protection of property: Mackie v. Central Railroad of Iowa, 54-540.

Not a penalty: The statute giving the owner double damages is not unconstitutional, as in conflict with the provision that all fines and penalties shall be paid into the school fund. Such damages are not a fine or penalty, and the legislature may determine the measure of damages to be recovered as in other particular cases: Ibid.

No part of the double damages is a statute penalty in such sense as to bring the action therefor within the provisions of the statute of limitations as to actions to recover such penalties. The period of limitation for such action is five years: Koons v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 23-493.

Not applicable in other cases: The provision for double damages being penal in its character will not be considered as applicable to any case not coming clearly within its provisions. Therefore, held, that double damages could not be recovered for injuries resulting from failure to construct and keep in repair a proper cattle-guard as required by the section with reference to cattle-guards: Moriarty v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64-696.

Neither can the provision be construed so as to authorize the recovery of double damages for injuries to stock on depot grounds where the company has no right to fence, caused by negligence in operating trains thereon: Miller v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 59-707.

Double damages can be recovered only when stock has been injured or killed by reason of the want of a fence, and not when the injury results by reason of the company having fenced where it should not: Davis v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 40-292.

For failure to repair: A railway company is liable in double damages for injuries caused by negligence in failing to keep a fence in repair as well as by reason of failure to fence: Bennett v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 61-355; Payne v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 72-214.

Interest: As this statutory provision establishes the measure of recovery in the cases contemplated, the court or jury cannot, in addition to the damages authorized, allow interest on the amount of recovery from the time of the accident, or from the time of the expiration of the thirty days allowed after notice in which to pay the damages: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68-530.

Assignment: The right of the owner to recover double damages may be assigned, and the assignee may serve the notice and affidavit required to authorize such recovery: Everett v. Central Iowa R. Co., 73-442.

Laws of another state: An action for double damages may be maintained in the courts of this state for injury occurring in another state which has a statute authorizing the recovery of such double damages: Boyce v. Wabash R. Co., 63-70.

Tender: Where stock was killed and before suit tender was made and kept good of a sum less than the value of the stock as found by the jury on the trial, such tender being made as in full payment, held, that plaintiff was entitled to double damages in the full amount found by the jury, and that a tender to be sufficient must be of an amount large enough to discharge defendant's full liability: Brandt v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 26-114.

Where a gross sum is tendered by the railway company in payment of damages caused by injuries to two different animals of the same owner, but it does not make a separate tender as to each, and the jury find the aggregate damage to be greater than the amount tendered, such tender cannot be considered as sufficient for either: Shuck v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 73-333.

Notice and affidavit: The written notice required by statute to entitle the owner to recover double damages is only necessary when double damages are sought: Rodemacher v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 41-297.

The affidavit required to entitle a party to double damages may be made by any one acquainted with the facts: Henderson v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 36-387.

It is not necessary that the affidavit designate the place of the injury: Mundhenk v. Central Iowa R. Co., 57-718.

The notice and affidavit need not be separate. If the notice contains the statements necessary in the affidavit, and is sworn to, that is sufficient: Mendell v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 20-9.

It is only necessary that the notice be such as to inform the company of the injury. It need not be stated therein that the animals were running at large or were destroyed without the wilful act of the owner: Mackie v. Central R. of Iowa, 54-540.

The fact that the amount claimed in the notice is greater than the value of the animal as stated in the petition is not sufficient in itself to show bad faith. If defendant claims that plaintiff's demand was made in bad faith such fact should be pleaded and issue joined thereon, and the same submitted to the jury: Valleau v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 73-723.

A return stating service of the notice upon a person named, "being the station agent of said road," etc., sufficiently shows service upon the station agent "employed in the management of the business of the corporation," as provided for by statute: Welsh v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 53-632; Schlegener v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 61-235.

An amendment to an affidavit for the purpose of perfecting the jurat may be allowed, but the company will not become entitled to the thirty days after the amendment in which to pay the claim and escape double damages, where it is clear that there was a bona fide attempt on the part of the owner to bring himself within the provisions of the statute, and it was so understood by defendant: Mundhenk v. Central Iowa R. Co., 57-718.

The original of the affidavit and notice of loss should be delivered to the agent upon whom service is made. The delivery of a copy is not sufficient: McNaught v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 30-336; Campbell v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 35-334.

The original of the affidavit must be served upon the company or its agent, and a copy thereof introduced in evidence. The introduction in evidence of a paper similar to that served upon the company is not sufficient: Kyser v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 56-207.

The officer making service may, by oral testimony, show that he served the original, although his return states the service of a copy: Liston v. Central Iowa R. Co., 70-714.

Service of the affidavit and notice should be made by delivering them to the agent of the company. It is not necessary to read them and deliver a copy: Mendell v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 20-9.

As the statute does not prescribe the manner of service, a service by simply delivering the notice and affidavit to the person upon whom service is to be made is sufficient: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68-530.

Service of the affidavit may be made by the claimant or any other person: Mundhenk v. Central Iowa R. Co., 57-718.

Whether proof of service of notice and affidavit upon the company can be made by an ex parte affidavit, quære: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 58-625.

The notice and affidavit will be admissible as proof of service if the return of the officer serving the same be regularly indorsed thereon: Brandt v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 26-114.

Evidence that a paper was read and given to the agent similar to that introduced in evidence is a sufficient proof of service of the notice of which the paper introduced is a copy: Keyser v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 56-440.

The original of notice and affidavit of loss which have been served upon defendant's agent are not evidence of such service in such sense that notice upon the defendant to produce them must be shown before other evidence thereof can be introduced to show double liability of the company: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 58-625; Smith v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 58-622; McLenon v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. P. R. Co., 69-320.

Pleading: In an action before a justice of the peace for killing stock for which the company is liable in double damages, the notice and affidavit may be introduced in evidence though not mentioned in the pleadings, as no petition need be filed: Brandt v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 26-114.

On the trial of an action against the company to recover double damages, the fact that the notice required by statute was not attached to the petition must be raised by demurrer, if at all, and cannot be raised as an objection when the notice is offered in evidence: McKinley v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 47-76.

Question for jury: Although the sufficiency of the service of the notice is a question of law for the court, yet where the fact of service is in issue its determination may properly be left to the jury: Cole v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 38-311.

Fencing at depot grounds: The company is not required to fence where it would not, in view of public convenience, be fit, proper or suitable for it to do so. Depot and station grounds may be left uninclosed when the business of the road and the interests of the public so require: Latty v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 38-250; Smith v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 34-506; Davis v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 26-549; Rogers v. Chicago &

N. W. R. Co., 26-558; Durand v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 26-559.

In the absence of proof of want of ordinary care, a company is not liable for stock killed on depot grounds: Packard v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 30-474.

Where it appeared that stock was killed one and one-fourth miles from a station, held, that it might be presumed that the place at which it was killed was not within depot grounds in the absence of any evidence upon the question: Smith v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60-512.

The burden is upon the company to show that the place where stock is injured and where there is no fence is a portion of the station grounds. The fact that a switch is there maintained will not necessarily give it that character: Comstock v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 32-376.

Where the company has its depot grounds surveyed and definitely allotted, the survey or allotment and use constitute a very strong presumptive proof of their necessary boundaries: Cole v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 33-311.

The fixing of cattle-guards at long distances beyond the switches and failing to fence between such guards and the switches cannot be regarded as setting apart that part of the main line as station or depot grounds, unless it be necessary for the purpose of transaction of business with the public that such part of the line remain unfenced. It is no reason for not fencing beyond such switch that in the operation of trains it would be inconvenient and possibly more hazardous to couple and uncouple cars if the track beyond the switches was fenced and provided with a cattle-guard: Peyton v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 70-522.

Negligence at depot grounds: As between the owner of cattle and the company, the latter cannot be required to keep a watch or guard at depot grounds, any more than it can be required to fence the same: Smith v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 34-506.

Speed at depot grounds: By this section a railroad company is liable for all stock killed on depot grounds by trains when running at a rate of speed greater than eight miles per hour; but if the stock is killed at a place where the company has a right to fence, although nearly adjacent to the depot grounds, the provisions as to the rate of speed have no application, and it is not negligence in the company that its trains are running at a higher rate of speed, even at such rate that they must necessarily enter on the depot grounds running faster than eight miles an hour: Monahan v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 45-523.

The provision making the company liable for stock killed on depot grounds by trains running at a greater rate of speed than eight miles an hour applies only to cases where the stock is killed on such grounds: Ibid.

If the train comes upon the depot grounds at a greater rate of speed than eight miles per hour, a verdict for damages for stock killed may be sustained, although at the time of the injury to the stock the train had nearly stopped. The jury might be authorized in such case to find that the train would have been stopped entirely if it had entered the grounds at a speed not exceeding the lawful rate: Miller v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 59-707.

An ordinance regulating the rate of speed of cars within city limits is applicable to the switch yards of the company, and is not to be limited to places where the public have a right to travel: Crowley v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 65-658.

Fencing at highway crossings: The company is not required to fence where its track crosses a public highway, whether such highway be one de jure or only de facto: Soward v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 33-383.

The company has no right to fence its line so as to obstruct a public street, whether such street is actually opened for public travel or not: Long v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64-657.

A railway company has not the right to fence across plated streets and alleys within city or town limits, even though such streets or alleys are not opened or used: Lathrop v. Central Iowa R. Co., 69-105.

A railroad corporation does not have a right to fence its track in cities and towns where it is intersected and crossed by streets and alleys: Blanford v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 71-310.

But the company has the right to fence within the corporate limits of a town so far as its line runs through lands situated beyond streets or other highways, and it will be liable in damages for injuries to stock at such places if it has failed to fence: Coyle v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 62-518.

In a particular case, held, that an instruction that if the animal killed was the property of plaintiff, was running at large, and was injured by defendant outside of the station grounds, plaintiff would be entitled to recover, was erroneous, it not appearing but that the animal might have been killed at some point outside of the station grounds where defendant had no right to fence: Smith v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 58-622.

Negligence at highway crossings or depot grounds: The company is bound to use ordinary and reasonable care to avoid injuring stock at points where it is not required to fence: Whitbeck v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 21-103; Balcom v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 21-102.

The company is not liable in double damages under the statute for cattle killed at a place where it has no right to fence its track: Soward v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 30-551.

Where an animal is killed on the depot grounds, negligence must be shown on the part of the company in order to make it liable: Cleveland v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 35-220; Plaster v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 35-449.

In an action to recover for stock killed upon a railway the burden rests upon plaintiff to show that the injury was caused at a point where the company is required to fence its track: Kyser v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. F. R. Co., 56-207; Comstock v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 32-376.

Evidence considered and held sufficient to show that the animal killed was struck at a highway crossing, and not in the field where the marks of blood were found: Sullivan v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 58-602.

In case of the killing of stock at a point where the railway has not the right to fence, the burden of proof is upon plaintiff to show negligence of the company: Schneir v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 40-337.

The failure to give signals at crossings does not in itself establish negligence on the part of the company nor render it liable for stock killed at such crossings. In such cases it is necessary, in order to hold the company liable, that the jury find that the failure to give signals, under the circumstances, constituted negligence, and also that such negligence, if any, was the cause of the injury: Jackson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 36-451.

Under particular facts, held, that the company was not guilty of any negligence in connection with the injury received from its train to stock, at a crossing, and was, therefore, not liable: Plaster v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 35-449; Schneir v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 40-337.

In a particular case, held, that there was not such absence of proof of negligence causing the injury to stock at a crossing, on the part of the company, as to require the setting aside of a verdict against it for damages: Lawson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 57-672.

The fact that an engineer, in the exercise of his judgment, believes he can frighten stock from the track without reversing his engine or stopping the train, will not show that there is not negligence unless it appears that he possesses and exercises ordinary judgment: Parker v. Dubuque Southwestern R. Co., 34-399.

In an action for negligence causing injuries to stock at a place where the company was not entitled to fence, held, that it was not improper to instruct the jury that, if defendant's employees saw the animal upon the track, and so near that it might reasonably be supposed, under all the circumstances, that the animal would be in danger, and could, by the use of ordinary care and prudence, have avoided the injury, and did not do so, the defendant was liable: Edson v. Central R. Co., 40-47.

Negligence or wilful act of stock owner: Contributory negligence of stock owner, not amounting to a wilful act, will not defeat his right to recover for stock injured where the company has a right to fence: Innan v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 60-459.

The mere fact that the owner, by his voluntary act, exposes the animal to danger, will not necessarily make the act wilful. If the act of the owner was for a lawful purpose, and the danger was merely incidental, it should not be considered wilful so as to defeat recovery: Smith v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 58-622.

Wilful act of owner: The statutory provision excludes all defenses in such cases except such as arise from the wilful act of the owner. This implies something more than mere negligence. It is an act in some way connected with the injury, such as driving live-stock upon the track, or permitting the animals to escape for the purpose of going upon the track: Ibid.

The fact that the owner of swine allows the animals to run at large on his premises, in close proximity to the railroad track, does not constitute a wilful act such as to defeat his recovery: Lee v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 66-131.

The act of the owner in permitting stock to run at large is not evidence of contributory negligence: Whitbeck v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 21-103; Evans v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 21-374; Stewart v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 32-561; Seurles v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 25-490.

The liability of the company for stock killed where it has a right to fence exists regardless of the negligence of the owner. It is only upon a showing that the injury is the result of the wilful act of the owner or his agent that the company is excused from liability: Spence v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 25-139.

It is contributory negligence on the part of the owner of cattle to allow them to frequent places of danger such as depot grounds: Smith v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 34-506.

But where plaintiff allowed a blind horse to run at large and it was killed by defendant's train on its depot grounds, held, that the question whether plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence was for the jury, and that such act was not, as a matter of law, negligence sufficient to defeat recovery: Hammond v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 49-450.

The fact that a party knowingly allows his animals to be upon and frequent depot and station grounds does not necessarily constitute contributory negligence such as to defeat recovery for injury to such animals: Miller v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 59-707.

That a stock owner allows his stock to run at large with the knowledge that a crossing is dangerous, and that his animals frequent such crossing, does not constitute negligence even though the statute makes the owner liable for all damage resulting from his animals being at large: Kuhn v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 42-420.

Where the owner of stock turned it loose upon the portion of his farm which was fenced, and it broke through the fence and strayed upon the railroad track, and it did not appear that the fence was not reasonably sufficient, held, that plaintiff, having no knowledge that his animals had escaped until they were killed, could not be considered guilty of contributory negligence: Moriarty v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64-696.

Stock unlawfully at large: The fact that sheep and swine are not allowed to run at large will not defeat the owner's right to recover for injuries to such animals: Spence v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 25-139; Stewart v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 27-382; Fernow v. Dubuque & S. W. R. Co., 22-528; Lee v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 66-131.

Where animals, allowed to run at large in violation of a city ordinance, come upon the track, they are trespassers, and the company owes no duty with reference to them and is not liable for injuries received by them, even though occasioned by a train running at greater speed than eight miles per hour, it not appearing that such improper speed was wanton or reckless: Vanhorn v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 59-33; S. C., 63-67.

To defeat recovery from a railroad company for killing on its depot grounds an animal which it is unlawful to allow to run at large, it is necessary to show that the animal is at large by the owner's sufferance: Pearson v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 45-497.

The fact that plaintiff's horse was at large in the night-time on the premises of another in violation of the herd law in force in the county, and was killed by defendant's train without fault or negligence of defendant, at a point where defendant had a right to fence, but did not, held not sufficient to defeat plaintiff's right of recovery: Krebs v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 64-670.

It is not contributory negligence sufficient to defeat the owner's right of recovery that the animal is at large within the city limits in violation of an ordinance of the city, if it is at large by accident and not intentionally: Doran v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 73-115.

Setting out fires: The effect of the present statutory provision above referred to is not to make the company absolutely liable for damages from fires set out, but to render the injury prima facie proof of negligence on part of the company, which may be rebutted by showing freedom from such negligence: Swill v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 50-338; Slossen v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 51-294; Libby v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 52-92.

The negligence of the company is presumed if the fire proceeds from one of its engines, and it is not necessary for the plaintiff in the first instance to prove more than that it did so proceed: Rose v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 72-625.

It is sufficient for plaintiff suing in such cases to set forth in his pleading simply the occurrence of the injury. The presumption of liability arising from the occurrence itself is not necessarily overcome by the proof merely that the company was not guilty of negligence in the matters which were the immediate cause of the injury, as permitting combustible material to accumulate and remain on the right of way. The burden of proving such fact is not upon plaintiff even though he may allege it in his petition: Engle v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 37 N. W. Rep., 6.

This prima facie evidence may be rebutted by defendant, the effect of the statute being simply to change the burden of proof. As to whether the rebutting evidence showing due care, etc., on the part of the company is sufficient is a question for the jury and not for the court: Babcock v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 62-593.

The good condition of the engine, the diligence of defendant's employees and other facts are evidence of care. When such evidence is introduced on the part of the defendant after the fact of the injury is proven by plaintiff, a conflict in the evidence arises which may be determined by the jury: Ibid.

The fact that the right of way is procured from the owner of the land does not preclude recovery of damages for fires set out in the operation of the railway to fences not then built and timber situated a mile from the track. Such damages could not have been considered in estimating damages in proceedings for condemning the right of way: Rodemacher v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 41-297.

A railroad company is liable for damages from fire communicated by its negligence to a building of a third person and from such building to buildings of plaintiff, and negligence of the third person owning the intermediate building in not keeping it in the proper condition will not defeat plaintiff's right to recover: Small v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 55-582.

Company operating road: The company whose engine sets out the fire is liable for the damages resulting, although it is operating a line owned and used by another company, and the fire originates on the right of way by reason of combustible matter allowed to accumulate thereon by such other company: Slossen v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 60-215.

Contributory negligence: If, by plowing around stacks in a field or otherwise protecting them, the owner could have prevented destruction of them by reason of fire originally set out by sparks from the locomotive spreading to such stacks, and the omission to protect them was negligence, then plaintiff cannot recover for their destruction; the question whether failure to thus plow around the stacks for their protection being a question for the jury: Kesee v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 30-78.

It is not, as a matter of law, contributory negligence on the part of the owner of grain stacked upon the open prairie to fail to take certain precautions to guard against the approach of fire, as by plowing around it, etc. The question whether such omission constitutes negligence in a particular case is one of fact for the jury: Garrett v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 36-121.

The right of recovery for an injury caused by fire set out in the operation of a railroad is not defeated by the mere contributory negligence of the injured party: West v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 77-654; Engle v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 77-661.

Whether, under the section as it now stands, differing from the provisions under which preceding cases were decided, it is necessary for plaintiff suing to recover damages to his property for fire set out by an engine to prove absence of contributory negligence on his part, quære: Ormond v. Central Iowa R. Co., 58-742.

Evidence as to whether other farmers had plowed around their stacks at the time plaintiff's stacks were destroyed by fire, held not admissible: Ibid.; Slossen v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 60-215.

Held, also, that it was error to instruct the jury in such cases that plaintiff's act in stacking his wheat in a field where it was grown and adjacent to a railroad, without plowing around his stacks, would not constitute negligence defeating his recovery unless the act was such as ordinarily prudent and cautious men would not have done in like manner under similar surrounding circumstances: Slossen v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 60-215.

The party from whose land the right of way is taken would not be negligent, as a matter of law, in sowing wheat upon the right of way and allowing the stubble to remain there after the wheat was removed: Ibid.

Constitutional: These peculiar provisions as to liability of railway companies for damages from fires are not in conflict with the constitution, being applicable alike to all persons or companies engaged in such business: Rodemacher v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co., 41-297.

Evidence: The frequent occurrence of fires caused by the same engine on the same trip may be shown for the purpose of proving that it was defective in its construction, or that it was out of repair or negligently handled: Slossen v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 60-215; Lanning v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 68-502; West v. Chicago & N. W. Ry Co., 77-654.

But, in such a case, it is not competent to show that other fires occurred along the right of way in the same vicinity shortly after the engine passed over the road and before the fire that destroyed plaintiff's property: Bell v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 64-321.

Plaintiff, in introducing evidence to rebut the evidence of the railway company tending to show want of negligence on its part causing fire set out by its locomotives, may do so by facts of a circumstantial character, as it is not usually possible to introduce witnesses who can testify from personal knowledge. Therefore evidence which might not be free from difficulties in other cases open to clearer proofs, might be considered sufficient: Burcock v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 62-593.

In an action by the tenant to recover the value of a crop destroyed by fire set out by the company's engines, it appearing that plaintiff did not pay cash rent, held error to refuse to allow plaintiff to be cross-examined as to whether he was to give a share of the grain for rent: Ormond v. Central Iowa R. Co., 58-742.

Where it appeared that plaintiff had as a trespasser cut and stacked hay upon the land of another which he had no title to, and of which he was not in possession, held, that he could not maintain an action against a railroad company for its negligence resulting in the destruction thereof by fire: Murphy v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 55-473; Lewis v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 51-127.

Negligence: Before the enactment of this statutory provision, it was held that the burden of proof in an action against the company for such damages was upon plaintiff to show negligence of the company, and that proof of the injury alone was not sufficient

But in such case, held, that as in the nature of the case plaintiff must labor under difficulties in making proof of the fact of negligence, and as that fact itself is always a relative one, it might be satisfactorily established by evidence of circumstances bearing more or less directly upon the fact of negligence, and which might not be satisfactory in other cases, free from difficulty and open to clear proof: Gandy v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 30-420.

A party using a dangerous instrument, body or element will be held to use greater care and prudence than when using a less destructive agency. Fire being a destructive element, persons using it are required to exercise all reasonably careful precautions against its spread, and the care and prudence required by law to prevent the spread of fire from a locomotive are not deemed to be exercised unless some proper precautions are used for that purpose: Jackson v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 31-176.

Ordinary care and prudence require the use of the best contrivances known, and unless such are used it will be considered negligence; but what amounts to negligence in such cases is a question of fact for the jury: Ibid.

Also held, that to allow dried grass, weeds, and other matter, the natural accumulations of the soil, to remain upon the right of way, was not negligence per se, but that there might be such peculiar or unusual circumstances in a given case as that such acts would amount to negligence in fact, and that when such circumstances existed they might properly be submitted to the jury to establish the fact of negligence: Kesee v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 30-78.

Also held, that the question of negligence, such as to render the company liable for damages resulting from such fires, was to be determined by the jury, and that it was not proper to enumerate facts and circumstances which as matter of law would be sufficient to charge the company with negligence: McCormick v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 41-193.

1973. Fences required. 22 G. A., ch. 30, § 1. All railroad corporations organized under the laws of this state, or any other state, owning or operating a line of railroad within this state, which have not already erected a lawful fence, shall construct, maintain and keep in good repair a suitable fence of posts and barb wire, or posts and boards on each side of the tracks of said railroad within the state of Iowa, and so connected with cattle-guards at all public highway crossings as to prevent cattle, horses and other live-stock from getting on the railroad tracks. Said railroad tracks to be fenced by said railroad companies on or before January first, 1890, where the railroads are now built, and within six months after the completion of any new railroads, or any part thereof, the said fences to be constructed either of five barbed wires, securely fastened to posts; said posts to be not more than twenty feet apart, and not less than fifty-four inches in height, or of five boards securely nailed to posts, said posts to be not further than eight feet apart, and said fence to be not less than fifty-four inches in height. Provided; when said railroad corporations, who have now their fences built shall when they rebuild or repair their fences the same shall be built as provided in this act: Provided: further that any other fence which in the judgment of the fence viewers is equivalent to the fence herein provided shall be a lawful fence. Provided however that this act shall not be so construed as to compel a railway company operating a third-class railway to fence its road through the land of any farmer or other person, who by written agreement with said company has waived or may waive the fencing of said road through such land. Provided further however, that at any points where third-class roads are not released by written agreement, from building fence as herein provided for, and fences are built on both sides of railway track at such points, cattle-guards shall be so constructed at such points as to prevent stock from going upon said track so fenced.

1974. Penalty. 22 G. A., ch. 30, § 2. If any corporation or officer thereof or lessee owning or engaged in the operation of any railroad, in this state, neglect or refuse to comply with any provision of section one of this act [§ 1973], such corporation, officer or lessee, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars for each and every offense. And every thirty days' continuance of such refusal or neglect shall constitute a separate and distinct offense within and for the purposes of this act.

1975. Killing of stock. 22 G. A., ch. 30, § 3. Nothing herein contained shall relieve said railroad corporations from pecuniary liability arising from the killing or maiming of live-stock on said track or right of way by said corporation, that may occur through the negligence of said corporation or its employees, and provided further, that nothing in this act shall be construed so as to interfere with the right to open or private crossings, as now maintained, or with the right of persons to such crossings. Provided further, that nothing in this act contained shall in any way limit or qualify the liability of any corporation or person, owning or operating a railway, that fails to fence the same against live-stock running at large, for any stock injured or killed by reason of the want of such fence as now provided for in section twelve hundred and eighty-nine of the Code of 1873 [§ 1972].

1976. Railway crossings near Mississippi river. 1290. Whenever it becomes necessary in the construction of any railway to cross any other railway near the shore of the Mississippi river, each shall be so constructed and maintained at the point of crossing, so that the respective road-beds thereof shall be above high water in such river. But where such crossings occur within the limits of cities containing six thousand inhabitants as shown by the last preceding census, the city council of such cities may establish the grade at such crossings. [14 G. A., ch. 33.]

1977. Conditions of aid tax. 1291. In all cases where taxes have been voted under chapter forty-eight, of twelfth general assembly, or chapter one hundred and two of thirteenth general assembly, to aid in the construction of any railway, or where said tax has been transferred under chapter eighty-one of the fourteenth general assembly, and said tax has been voted or transferred under any condition or contract with the railway company which the township may desire to have changed or modified, said township is hereby authorized upon agreement of its trustees with the railway company constructing said proposed railway, to submit to a vote of the electors of the township, the question whether the conditions or contract under which said tax was voted or transferred, shall be changed or modified, and said trustees, upon petition of one-third of the legal voters of the township, as shown by the vote cast at the last general election, asking such change or modification, shall order an election, submitting the agreement to the electors, at a special election called therefor, said election to be conducted in all respects as to notice and manner of holding, as the election at which the tax was originally voted.

FOREIGN RAILWAY CORPORATIONS.

1978. Privileges; filing articles. 18 G. A., ch. 128, § 1. Any railroad company organized, or created by, or under the laws of any other state, and owning and operating a line or lines of railroad in such state, is hereby authorized to extend and build its road or any branches thereof into the state of Iowa. And such railroad company shall have and possess all the powers, franchises, rights and privileges, and be subject to the same liabilities of railroad companies organized and incorporated under the laws of this state, including the right to sue, and the liability to be sued, the same as railroads organized under the laws of this state; provided, such railroad corporation shall file with the secretary of the state of Iowa, a copy of its articles of incorporation, if incorporated under a general law of such state, or a certified copy of the statute laws of such state incorporating such company, where the charter of such railroad corporation was granted by statute of such state.

RELOCATION OF RAILWAYS.

1979. Petition for change. 16 G. A., ch. 118, § 1. Any railroad company desiring to change or remove the line of its road, after the same has been permanently located and constructed, may for that purpose file a petition in the district [or circuit] court in any one of the counties wherein the change or removal is proposed to be made, describing with convenient accuracy that portion of its line of road which said company seeks to have changed or removed, and asking the court to grant the right or authority to make such change or removal. To this suit, all trustees, mortgagees, or other lien holders, and all townships, cities and counties which have aided by taxation to build the road, must be made defendants by service of original notice, in the time and manner as provided by law for service of original notices.

1980. Notice. 16 G. A., ch. 118, § 2. In addition to the foregoing notice, a public notice to all whom it may concern, of the time of filing such petition and of the object thereof and of the term of court at which the application for authority to make the change will be made, and requiring all persons desiring the repayment of money or the return of property, as in this act contemplated, to appear at such court and make good their claim therefor, must be published in a newspaper printed in each county wherein the change is to be made, for a period of ten successive weeks before the term of court at which the application is to be made. The court may order any additional notice or publication that it may deem proper.

1981. Conditions. 16 G. A., ch. 118, § 3. But no railroad company shall be allowed to change or remove the line of its road after its permanent location and construction, without repaying to the proper parties all moneys, and restoring all property, or its value, which were given or donated to the company building the same, exclusively in consideration of the said railroad's being located and constructed on such line, nor without first procuring the proper consent of all parties having liens upon said railroad; and also of any township, city or county that has by taxation or by the issuing of bonds contributed money to aid in the construction thereof; provided, that the consent of such township, city or county shall be necessary with reference only to the change to be made within its own territorial limits.

The obligation to operate a railway is incurred by accepting taxes: State v. Central Iowa R. Co., 71-410.

1982. Order of court. 16 G. A., ch. 118, § 4. If the court is satisfied that due and proper notice has been given, and that the consent of the proper parties, as herein contemplated, has been duly obtained, it shall order and adjudge in favor of all persons who have appeared and established their claims thereto, the repayment of all moneys, and the return of all property, or its value, which were given or donated to the company exclusively in consideration of the roads being located on the line from which it is proposed to make the removal, and shall declare and adjudge all persons not so appearing and establishing their claims as aforesaid, forever thereafter debarred and estopped from setting up or asserting the same. The court may, if the public interest demand it, make an order authorizing the railroad company to change or remove the location of its road, as asked for in the petition, but such order must be on the condition that all claims for the repayment of money, or the return of property, which may be allowed by the court, as herein provided, shall be first paid or satisfied.

1983. Effect. 16 G. A., ch. 118, § 5. All mortgage liens or other incumbrances on the line of road which the company is authorized by the court to change, shall be and remain valid liens and incumbrances on the line of road to which the change is made, and shall take priority of all other liens and incumbrances upon such new line of road.

1984. Notice. 16 G. A., ch. 118, § 6. For the purpose of this act, the trustees of each township shall be served with notice, and shall be authorized to represent and act for their respective townships; provided, that no vested right of any person or persons living on and along the line of any railroad removed under the provisions of this act, shall be defeated or affected by this act; and provided further, that the provisions of this act shall apply only to such railroads as were constructed prior to the year 1866.

1985. Cuts and banks. 16 G. A., ch. 118, § 7. When any railroad company shall take up their track and relocate the same under the provisions of this act, shall fill up the cuts and level down the banks, or cause the same to be done, within two years from the time of taking up such track.

1986. Provisions not to apply. 17 G. A., ch. 152, § 1. The provisions of section seven, of chapter one hundred and eighteen, of the laws of the sixteenth general assembly [§ 1985], shall not apply to any railroad which has its initial point at any town upon the Mississippi river, and which had in the year 1859, sixty-three miles and no more of completed track from such initial point, and provided that the exemption from the provisions of said section shall only apply a distance of sixty-three miles from the initial point of any such railroad.

OF THE OPERATION.

1987. Connections. 1292; 15 G. A., ch. 18. Any railway corporation, operating a railway in this state, intersecting or crossing any other line of railway, of the same gauge, operated by any other company, shall, by means of a Y, or other suitable and proper means, be made to connect with such other railway so intersected or crossed; and railway companies where railroads shall be so connected shall draw over their respective roads the cars of such connecting railway; and also those of any other railway or railways connected with said roads made to connect as aforesaid, and also the cars of all transportation companies or persons, at reasonable terms, and for a compensation not exceeding their ordinary rates. [9 G. A., ch. 158, § 1.]

1988. Commission to adjust rates. 1293; 15 G. A., ch. 18. When such corporations are unable to agree upon the method and terms of connection and rates of transportation, either, or any person interested in having such connection made, may make application to the district [or circuit] court in any county in which said connection may be desired or located, or to the judge of said courts if in vacation, after ten days' notice in writing to the companies. After hearing the parties, or on default, the said judge shall appoint three disinterested persons, being presidents or superintendents of railways, or experts in railway business, without regard to their place of residence, as commissioners, to determine the method and terms of connection and rules and regulations necessary thereto; provided, that the rates as fixed by the said commissioners, for freights offered or transported in the cars of the company offering the same, shall in no case exceed the local rates per mile fixed by law or set forth in the carrying companies' freight tariff prepared and made public in accordance with the laws of the state. [Same, § 2.]

1989. Report of. 1294. Said commissioners shall meet at such time and place as may be ordered by said court or judge, and shall hear the parties and any testimony brought before them, and make and sign their report, prescribing the things to be done. Such report made by them, or a majority of them, shall, within such time as ordered by said court or judge, be returned to and filed in said court, to be confirmed thereby; and, when so confirmed, it shall be binding upon the parties until another report shall be made upon a new application, which cannot be made within two years after such confirmation. [Same, § 3.]

1990. Duty, power, and compensation. 1295. Said commissioners shall have such compensation as shall be deemed reasonable by the court, and shall be governed by the same rules and have the same power in compelling the attendance of witnesses, and shall themselves be sworn, as is now provided in cases of referees in civil actions at law in the district court, and exceptions may be taken to their report in the same manner; and such exceptions shall have the same effect, and the proceedings upon their report shall be the same as on reports of referees in cases referred from said court, and the costs shall be paid by the parties in such proportion as to the court may seem equitable and just. [Same, § 4.]

1991. Penalty. 1296. If the officers of, or any person in the employ of said corporation, refuse to comply with the terms of such confirmed report, they may be punished as for a contempt of said court. [Same, § 5.]

1992. Pooling; penalty. 1297. It shall be unlawful for any railway company to make any contract, or enter into any stipulation with any other railway company running in the same general direction, by which either company shall, directly or indirectly, agree to divide in any manner or proportion the joint earnings upon the whole or any part of the freight transported over such roads, and any violation of this provision shall render the railway company violating the same, liable to a penalty of five thousand dollars for each month for which such earnings are divided, to be recovered for the use of the permanent school fund in the name of the state.

1993. Drawback. 1298. Contracts between any such corporations operating a railway, allowing a drawback of not exceeding fifteen per cent. on the gross earnings of the railway on business coming from or going to any other railway, shall be legal and binding. [10 G. A., ch. 86, § 1.]

1994. Same. 1299. Any such corporation owning and operating a railway partially constructed, may, for the purpose of inducing the investment of capital in the extension or completion of its railway, contract with the party furnishing such means, or the trustees who may represent them, allowing a drawback not exceeding twenty per cent. of the gross earnings of all business coming from and going to any part of the extension or portion to be aided or completed with the money or means thus obtained; or such railway company may lease of the trustees or said parties, the portion to be built with means thus furnished, subject to the same rights and liabilities as are provided in the next section. [Same, § 2; 14 G. A., ch. 39.]

1995. Sale; lease; joint arrangement. 1300. Any such corporation may sell or lease its railway property and franchises to, or may make joint running arrangements with, any corporation owning or operating any connecting railway, and the corporation operating the railway of another, shall, in all respects, be liable in the same manner and extent as though such railway belonged to it, subject to the laws of this state. [10 G. A., ch. 86, § 4.]

Where a line of road has been built by aid of taxes levied for that purpose, the line in aid of which the tax is voted must be operated as a whole, and a portion thereof cannot be leased and operated separately to the injury of any locality on the line. Any railroad company availing itself of such aid assumes relations to the public different from those resulting from a mere private contract: State v. Central Iowa R. Co., 71-410.

Further as to this section, see Treadway v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 21-351; and, in general, notes to § 1957.

1996. Mortgaged. 1301. Any contract, lease, or benefit derived therefrom, contemplated in either of the three preceding sections, may be mortgaged for the purpose of securing construction bonds in the same manner as other property of the corporation. [Same, § 3.]

Where a railroad has been constructed by the aid of taxes the obligation to operate it as an entire line attaches to it in the hands of a purchaser thereof at sale under foreclosure: State v. Central Iowa R. Co., 71-410.

1997. Change of name. 1302. Where any railway company shall be organized under a corporate name, and shall have made contracts for payments to it upon delivery of stock in such company, and shall, subsequent to such contracts, have changed their corporate name, or when the real ownership in the property, rights, powers, and franchises have passed legally or equitably, into any other company, no such contracts shall be enforced in law or equity until tender or delivery of stock in such last named corporation or company.

1998. Report. 1303. When any railway has been completed and opened for use, the corporation constructing the same shall report to the next general assembly, under oath, the total cost thereof, specifying the amount expended for construction, engines, cars, depots, and other buildings, and the amount of all other expenses, together with the length of the railway, the number of planes, with their inclination to the mile, the greatest curvature, the average width of grade, and the number of ties per mile. [9 G. A., ch. 169, § 1.]

1999. Maximum rates. 1304. In the month of June in each year, every corporation operating a railway in this state shall fix its maximum rates of fare for passengers and freight, for transportation of timber, wood, and coal, per ton, cord, or thousand feet per mile; also its fare and freight per mile for transporting merchandise and articles of the first, second, third and fourth classes of freight; and, on the first day of July following, shall put up at all the stations and depots on its railway, a printed copy of such fare and freight, and cause a copy to remain posted during the year. For wilfully neglecting so to do, or for wilfully receiving higher rates of fare or freight than those posted, the company shall forfeit and pay to the state of Iowa, for the use of the school fund, not less than one hundred dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, to be recovered in any civil action in the name of the state; and it is hereby made the duty of the several district [county] attorneys within their respective districts [counties] to sue for and recover all sums forfeited as aforesaid; and such corporation shall also forfeit and pay to the person injured, double the amount of compensation or charge illegally taken, to be recovered by such person in a civil action. [9 G. A., ch. 169, § 2; 13 G. A., ch. 139.]

A former statute, similar to this section, considered and held not to be in conflict with the U. S. Const., as being an attempt to regulate commerce between the states: Fuller v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 31-187.

Under such statute, held, also, that the receiving of higher rates than those posted subjected the company to the penalties imposed by the statute without it being shown that such overcharge was wilful: Fuller v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 31-211.

2000. Maximum passenger fare. 1305. For the transportation of passengers, no railway company shall charge to exceed three and one-half cents per mile per passenger.

2001. Rights reserved. 1306. All contracts, stipulations, and conditions, regarding the right of controlling and regulating the charges for freight and passengers upon railways, heretofore made in granting land or other property or voting taxes to aid in the construction of, or franchises to, railway corporations, are expressly reserved, continued, and perpetuated in full force and effect, to be exercised by the general assembly, whenever the public good or the public necessity requires such exercise thereof.

[In next to the last line, the word "and" is erroneously inserted in the printed Code in place of "or."]

2002. Liability for negligence or wrongs of employees. 1307. Every corporation operating a railway shall be liable for all damages sustained by any person, including employees of such corporation, in consequence of the neglect of agents, or by any mismanagement of the engineers or other employees of the corporation, and in consequence of the wilful wrongs, whether of commission or omission of such agents, engineers, or other employees, when such wrongs are in any manner connected with the use and operation of any railway, on or about which they shall be employed, and no contract which restricts such liability shall be legal or binding. [9 G. A., ch. 169, § 7; 13 G. A., ch. 121; 14 G. A., ch. 65.]

In general: Without this statutory provision the company would not be liable to an employee for injuries resulting from negligence of a co-employee, and the intention of the statute is merely to give to the employee a right of action in such cases, and not to change the degree of care necessary, which is, as between master and servant, that of ordinary care and diligence only: Hunt v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 26-363.

The company is liable to an employee for damages resulting from the negligence of a co-employee whose duty it was to keep a bridge in order, in the performance of such duty: Locke v. Sioux City & P. R. Co., 46-109.

Person or company operating railway: A receiver who is managing a railway under the direction of a court is within this section and may be charged, and a recovery obtained against him, as a person operating a railway. And though his liability could not be personal, a judgment against him might be satisfied out of the property in his hands if the court by whom he was appointed should so direct: Sloan v. Central Iowa R. Co., 62-728.

The fact that a lessee may be held liable under this section does not prevent recovery against the owner of the road. The actions are cumulative: Bower v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 42-546.

The running of special trains over the railway by a construction company in constructing it is operating a railroad within the meaning of the statutory provision: McKnight v. Iowa & M. R. Constr. Co., 43-406.

Persons not employees: The language of the section is so broad that it includes any and all persons, employees and others, who may be injured by the negligence of the agents or servants of the railway company or persons operating the railway: Rose v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 39-246.

If the act of the employee is within the scope of his authority the company is liable for injuries therefrom to a third person, even though the act is wilfully wrongful: Marion v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 64-568.

If the employees perform their duty in operating a train in a manner so unusual or reckless as to endanger lives of persons upon the train they are guilty of negligence, and if in direct consequence of such negligence a person is injured the company will be liable even though the person was on the train without right. This section renders the company liable for all damages sustained by any person in consequence of the neglect of agents, etc.: Way v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 73-463.

It is not material that plaintiff, claiming to recover by virtue of this section, was not employed in the operation of the road. It is sufficient if it appears that he was injured by the operation of the road and by negligence of the parties charged with responsibility with respect to the movement of trains: Pierce v. Central Iowa R. Co., 73-140.

Employees engaged in operating road: This section affords a remedy only to such employees as are employed, at the time of receiving the injury, in the business of operating a railroad: Malone v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 65-417.

So that to entitle an employee to recover against the company for injuries which he has sustained, he must show, first, that he belonged to the class of employees to whom the statute affords a remedy, and, second, that the company which occasioned the injury was of a class of companies for which the remedy is given: Ibid.

Therefore, held, that an employee whose duty was to wipe off engines, open and close the doors of the engine house, and remove snow from the turn-table and tracks and operate the turn-table, and who was injured by reason of the negligence of a co-employee causing the door of the engine house to fall upon him, was not engaged in the operation of the road in such a sense as to be within the statutory provisions: Ibid.

The change from the common law made by this section extends no further than to employees engaged in the business of operating a railway, and not to persons employed by the corporation without regard to the nature of their employment. Such corporation may be engaged in any other business, which may be within the scope of their organization, but not at all, or very remotely, connected with the use of their road, and in such cases employees by whom such affairs are conducted acquire no rights under the statutory provision, as their occupation does not expose them to the hazards incident to the use of railways, and the statute was not designed for their protection and benefit: Schroeder v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 41-344.

It is error for the court to instruct the jury that, as a matter of law, the nature of plaintiff's service and employment bring him within the terms of the statute. The character of his employment, whether in connection with the use of defendant's railroad, or whether thereby he is brought within the provisions of the statute, are questions of fact to be determined by the jury: Ibid.

This statutory provision applies no further than to employees engaged in the business of operating a railroad, and does not apply to employees in a machine-shop of the company. In such case the common-law rule exempting the employer from liability for injury to an employee resulting from the negligence of a co-employee is still in force: Potter v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 46-399.

The words "where such wrongs are in any manner connected with the operation or use of any railway" apply not only to wilful wrongs, but also to negligence of agents, etc., and in order to entitle an employee to recover for injuries received from a co-employee, it must appear that he was engaged in a service connected with the use and operation of the railroad: Foley v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 64-644.

Therefore, held, that an employee whose duty it was to repair cars while standing upon the track and side track of the company, while not in motion, and who was sometimes required to ride on the trains of the company from place to place for the purpose of making such repairs at different places, was not employed in the operation of the road in such sense as to bring him within the protection of the provision: Ibid.

Injuries to one employee by reason of negligence of another, both engaged in the work of repairing a track, such injury not resulting from the operation of the railroad, held not within the provisions of the statute: Matson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 68-22.

Employees engaged in hoisting coal in a coal-house for the purpose of filling a car are not so engaged in the hazardous business of operating a railroad as that one can recover for injuries caused by the negligence of the other: Luce v. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co., 67-75.

In order to render a company liable for injuries to an employee by reason of negligence of a co-employee, the negligence complained of must be that of an employee and affect a co-employee, who are in some manner performing work for the purpose of moving a train, as loading or unloading it, or superintending, directing or acting its movement. The persons must be connected in some manner with the moving of trains. Work preparatory thereto, which may be done away from the train, is not connected with its movement: Stroble v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 70-555.

Therefore, held, that where employees were engaged about elevating coal to a platform to supply the engine, their duties were not so connected with the use and operation of the railroad as that one of them could recover for injuries received from negligence of the other: Ibid.

Where a section hand was injured by the negligence of a co-employee while engaged in loading a car, held, that it did not sufficiently appear that his employment was of such character as to entitle him to recover: Smith v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 59-73.

Where an employee was injured by appliances connected with the round-house, held, that it was not error to instruct the jury that if they found it was a part of plaintiff's duty to keep such appliances in a safe condition, or that it was the duty of another employee of the same kind to do so, and that they both, or either of them, neglected to do so, then the plaintiff could not recover, the employees not being engaged in the operation of the road: Manning v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 64-240.

A person engaged in working on a bridge of the company and required, in the course of his employment, to ride on its trains, is within the statutory provision: Schroeder v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 47-375.

And so is a section hand: Frandsen v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 36-372.

And so is a hand engaged in shoveling gravel from a gravel train: McKnight v. Iowa & M. R. Constr. Co., 43-406.

Or a hand engaged in connection with the operation of a dirt train: Deppe v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 36-52.

Where the plaintiff was employed on a train used for hauling sand, and was injured by the falling of a bank of sand where he had been shoveling, held, that the case was within the provisions of this section: Handelun v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 72-709.

An employee required to go upon a train for the purpose of unloading cars is within the scope of this section and may recover for injuries received by reason of negligence of a co-employee: Raben v. Central Iowa R. Co., 73-579.

Where the employee was injured while engaged in operating a derrick situated on a flat car, the operation of which involved the movement of the car upon the track, held, that he was within the scope of this section: Nelson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 73-576.

A private detective injured while walking along the track, in accordance with directions of the company, to a certain place where he was to try to detect persons accustomed to place obstructions on the track, and who, while so walking to the place designated, was prostrated by sunstroke on the track and negligently run over and injured by defendant's engine, held to be so engaged as to subject him to the hazard peculiar to the business of operating a railway, and to be within the protection of the statutory provision: Fyfe v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 54-223.

Injury to foreman from negligence of subordinate: The fact that an employee of a railroad company is the foreman of a crew of workmen with power to direct the men under him in their work and to hire and discharge them at will does not prevent his being a co-employee with such workmen, within the meaning of this section, and he may recover for injuries received from the negligence of the men in his employ: Houser v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 59-230.

Contributory negligence: This statutory provision does not exonerate the injured party from the necessity of exercising reasonable care. Its purpose is to extend the liability of railroads to injuries to employees for which, at the common law, they were not liable: Murphy v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 45-661.

In case of death: Where the injury results in death, the company is liable to the personal representatives of deceased: Philo v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 33-47.

Constitutionality: This provision is not unconstitutional, as subjecting railroad corporations to penalties and liabilities other than those imposed on other business corporations engaged in a like business; being applicable to all persons or corporations engaged in a peculiar business it is not open to such objection: McAunich v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 20-338; Deppe v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 35-52; Bucklew v. Central Iowa R. Co., 64-603; Pierce v. Central Iowa R. Co., 73-140; Raben v. Central Iowa R. Co., 73-579.

Liability of company for negligence of superior or inferior employee: If the employee of a railroad company is injured while riding on a hand-car, through the negligence of the boss in charge thereof, the company is liable: Hoben v. Burlington & M. R. R. Co., 20-562.

Instructions based upon the hypothesis that a person for whose death damages were sought to be recovered from the company for injuries received while acting in obedience to the directions of an employee having authority to control him, held applicable where deceased was a fireman accompanying the engineer and discharging his duty while upon the engine under the control of such engineer: Cooper v. Central R. of Iowa, 44-134.

Where an accident by which an employee is injured is caused by the act of an inferior employee acting under the direction of such superior, the latter cannot recover for an injury received: Dewey v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 31-373.

Where the foreman of a crew of men employed by the company in the repair of bridges brought action against the company for injury received from negligence of one of the men under his control, held, that the fact that he was in charge of the workman did not defeat his right to recover for such negligence under the statute (referred to below), giving a right of action for the negligence of a co-employee: Houser v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 60-230.

It may be that a mere foreman, as the word is generally understood, that is, a laborer with power to superintend the labor of those working with him, is a co-employee so far as his own mere labor is concerned, but it is error to exclude from the jury the consideration of the question whether there is negligence of such foreman, acting as a superior: Baldwin v. St. Louis, K. & N. R. Co., 68-37.

Release of claim: A written release of all claim for damages resulting from an injury, executed for a consideration, will be binding on the person injured in the absence of fraud, even though it is not read over by him before signing it: Gullilher v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 59-416.

Contract: A written contract between a company and an employee by which he agrees to hold the company harmless for injuries received in doing certain acts which he is advised are dangerous is admissible for the purpose of showing the existence of the rule on the subject, and notice of it to the employee and also notice to the employee of such danger: Sedgwick v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 73-158.

2003. Signals at crossings. 20 G. A., ch. 104, § 1. A bell and a steam whistle shall be placed on each locomotive engine operated on any railway in this state, and said whistle shall be twice sharply sounded at least sixty rods before a highway crossing is reached, and after the sounding of the whistle the bell shall be rung continuously until the crossing is passed, provided, that at street crossings within the limits of incorporated cities or towns the sounding of the whistle may be omitted, unless required by the council of any such city or town; and the company shall also be liable for all damages which shall be sustained by any person by reason of such neglect.

Where there is failure to ring the bell upon approaching a crossing and an injury results, such failure will be negligence for which deendant will be liable unless exonerated by some negligence of plaintiff: Reed v. Chicago, St. P., M. & O. R. Co., 74-188.

2004. Penalty. 20 G. A., ch. 104, § 2. Every officer or employee of any railway company who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be punished by fine, not exceeding one hundred dollars, for each offense.

2005. Stopping at railway crossings. 20 G. A., ch. 163, § 1. All trains run upon any railroad in this state which intersects or crosses, or is intersected or crossed by any other railroad upon the same level, shall be brought to a full stop, at a distance not less than two hundred feet, nor more than eight hundred feet from the point of intersection or crossing of such road, before such intersection or crossing is passed by any such train.

2006. Penalty. 20 G. A., ch. 163, § 2. Every engineer violating the provisions of the preceding section shall for each offense forfeit one hundred dollars to be recovered in an action in the name of the state of Iowa, for the benefit of the school fund, and the corporation on whose road such offense is committed shall forfeit for each offense so committed the sum of two hundred dollars, to be recovered in like manner.

2007. Liability; contract or rule limiting. 1308. No contract, receipt, rule, or regulation, shall exempt any corporation engaged in transporting persons or property by railway from liability of a common carrier, or carrier of passengers, which would exist had no contract, receipt, rule, or regulation, been made or entered into. [11 G. A., ch. 113.]

A contract such as is prohibited by this section is void whether it is with or without consideration: Brush v. Sabula, A. & D. R. Co., 43-554.

Whether this section would be applicable to a contract made in Iowa but to be wholly performed in another state. quere; but it was held applicable to a contract to transport cattle from Clinton, Iowa, to Chicago, on the ground that it was to be partly performed in Iowa: McDaniel v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 24-412.

A company is not prohibited from providing by contract that it shall not be liable beyond the terminus of its road: Mulligan v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 36-181, 187.

The common-law liability of a common carrier attaches to a carrier of live-stock, so far as the rule is not inapplicable by reason of the peculiar character of the property. Responsibility for the carriage of stock cannot, therefore, be restricted by contract: McCoy v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 44-424.

A rule or custom limiting liability for injury to all stock, including such as is of especial value as being blooded, to the value of common stock, is void: McCune v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 52-600.

This section does not render the carrier liable for loss occurring by the act of the owner: Hart v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 69-485.

Whether a carrier, in the absence of any statute restricting his powers, can, by rule, regulation or contract, limit the amount for which he will be liable in case of loss of the property. quere. But the statutory provision prohibits the making of such contract: Ibid.

This statutory provision is applicable to contracts for transportation from a point within to a point without the state, and is not unconstitutional in that respect: Ibid.

2008. Judgment against; lien. 1309. A judgment against any railway corporation for any injury to any person or property, shall be a lien within the county where recovered on the property of such corporation, and such lien shall be prior and superior to the lien of any mortgage or trust deed executed since the fourth day of July, A. D. 1862. [9 G. A., ch. 169, § 9.]

Where action is brought for recovering from the company damages for breach of a contract under which the right of way was conveyed to it, the judgment may be made a lien on the portion of the line conveyed: Varnor v. St. Louis & C. R. R. Co., 55-677.

A judgment for damages for breach of contract by a railway company for failure to fence its right of way and construct cattle-guards becomes a lien on the property of the company, but the party is not entitled to such lien for damages caused by negligent construction of the road causing an overflow of his land, nor for trespass in going upon his land outside the right of way: Hull v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 65-713.

A right of action, or an action pending for such injury, is not a lien, and a purchaser of the road before the rendition of judgment takes it free from the lien of such judgment when rendered: Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Verry, 48-458; White v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 52-97.

This section is not unconstitutional: Central Trust Co. v. Sloan, 65-655.

2009. Railways terminating at Council Bluffs. 1310. All railway corporations that have been, or may hereafter be organized, under the laws of this state, that operate or may hereafter operate, a line of railway in this state terminating at or near the city of Council Bluffs, and making a connection with any railway, which, either by its charter or otherwise, extends to a point on the boundary or within the limits of this state, be, and they are hereby prohibited from making any transfer of freights, passengers, or express matters to or with any railway corporation at or near such terminus — either by delivering or receiving the same — at any other place than in this state, at or near the said point at which the said railway extending to the boundary of this state terminates. [14 G. A., ch. 6, § 1.]

This and following sections relating to the same subject are void as being a regulation of commerce between the states and therefore in conflict with U. S. Const., art. 1, § 8, and acts of congress, U. S. Rev. Stat., §§ 5257, 5258: Council Bluffs v. Kansas City, St. J. & C. B. R. Co., 45-338.

2010. Transfers. 1311. Every railway corporation, which, by its charter or otherwise, has its terminus at any point on the boundary or within the limits of this state, or which has authority to bridge or ferry the Missouri river for the purpose of having a continuous line of its railway, and for connecting with other railways in this state, is hereby prohibited from making any transfer of freights, passengers, or express matters to or with any other railway corporation, either by delivering or receiving the same at any other place than in this state, at or near its legal terminus; and every such corporation extending to the boundary or within this state, or having authority to bridge or ferry said Missouri river, shall erect and maintain at or near its legal terminus within the limits of this state, all its depots, stations, and other buildings necessary for such transfer. [Same, § 2.]

2011. Contracts with municipal corporations. 1312. Every railway corporation which has heretofore made, or which shall hereafter make, any contract with any municipal corporation in this state, is hereby prohibited from, in any manner, violating any of the provisions of such contract; and every railway corporation which has heretofore made, or which shall hereafter make, any contract with any municipal corporation in this state, is hereby required to perform each and all of the provisions of any and every such contract, specifically as agreed therein. In every case in which any such municipal corporation has complied with its obligations relating to such contract at any stage of the progress of its fulfillment, so far as it has agreed to do, such municipal corporation shall not be required to furnish any further tender or guaranty of compliance on its part in order to secure its rights in the courts; but in case anything remains to be done by such municipal corporation under such contract, after the completion of the same on the part of the railway corporation contracting therewith, then it shall, after the enforced compliance on the part of such corporation as hereinafter provided, be required to fully comply on its part. [Same, § 3.]

2012. Penalty. 1313. In case of a refusal of any railway corporation to comply with the provisions of section thirteen hundred and ten of this chapter [§ 2009], or its failure to perform the duties required in the preceding section, or their doing or having done any act at variance with such performance or duties, then the municipal corporation affected thereby, or with which the contract in that particular case was made, may, in an action by mandamus, in any court of record in the county in which such municipal corporation is situate, proceed against such corporation so failing or refusing, and such corporation shall, on proper proof, be required by such court to perform all the duties required by this and the three preceding sections, and said law pertaining to mandamus shall apply in such a case with the same force that it does in all other cases, except as it is herein enlarged. [Same, § 4.]

2013. Proceedings to enforce. 1314. In case any municipal corporation affected as before stated, or with which any such contract has been made, should not desire to seek the remedy given in the last preceding section, it may proceed in equity by the action of specific performance, in any court in the county in which such municipal corporation is situate, and in case such court should find that a contract had been made, it shall, by decree, require such company so violating or offering to violate its contract, or failing or refusing to perform the provisions thereof, to specifically perform the same. [Same, § 5.]

2014. Injunction. 1315. Any court or judge in this state to whom application shall be made, shall, at the suit of any municipal corporation as aforesaid, restrain by injunction the violation of any provisions of the five preceding sections of this chapter, or of the provisions of any contract as aforesaid; and in such proceeding, it shall not be necessary for such municipal corporation to give bond. [Same, § 6.]

2015. Remedies not exclusive. 1316. The remedies provided for in the two preceding sections shall not be construed to be exclusive, and any order, judgment, or decree made by any court in pursuance of any provisions of the six preceding sections, shall be enforced in the usual manner. [Same, § 7.]

OF ASSESSMENT AND TAXATION.

2016. Executive council to assess. 1317. On the first Monday of March in each year, the executive council shall assess all the property of each railway corporation in this state, excepting the lands, lots, and other real estate belonging thereto not used in the operation of any railway. [14 G. A., ch. 26, § 1.]

This and the following sections relating to the taxation of railway property are not unconstitutional as providing for the taxation of the property of a corporation otherwise than that of individuals: Dubuque v. Chicago, D. & M. R. Co., 47-196.

But a former statutory provision releasing railway companies from payment of municipal taxes previously levied, held unconstitutional: Davenport v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 38-633.

However questionable may be the constitutionality of provisions exempting railway companies from all other burdens by the payment of a definite sum annually, whether that sum be greater or less than its share of taxation, it is clear that such an exemption does not render void the general tax levied on other property; Muscatine v. Mississippi & M. R. Co., 1 Dillon, 536.

The order of the board of supervisors declaring the length of the main track and the assessed value of the railroad lying within each city, town, township or lesser taxing district in the county, and transmitted to the city council or trustees of each city or incorporated town or township, becomes the basis for the levy of taxes upon the railroad property without such property being placed upon the assessment books of the township or city: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45-168.

Although these sections relate to the assessment of the right of way, which is real property, and which, according to the general law as to assessments, would be assessed only once in two years, yet they are not unconstitutional, being applicable to all railway companies: Central Iowa R. Co. v. Board of Supervisors, 67-199.

As to taxation of property not used in operating the road, and of railway bridges over the Mississippi or Missouri rivers, see § 1281.

2017. Statement furnished. 1318. The president, vice-president, or general superintendent, and such other officers as such council may designate of any corporation operating any railway in this state, shall furnish said council on or before the fifteenth day of February in each year, a statement, signed and sworn to by one of such officers, showing in detail for the year ending on January the first preceding:

1. The whole number of miles owned, operated, or leased in the state by such corporation making the return, and the value thereof per mile, with a detailed statement of all property of every kind, and the value, located in each county in the state.

2. Also a detailed statement of the number and value thereof of engines, passenger, mail, express, baggage, freight, and other cars, or property used in operating or repairing such railway in this state; and on railways which are part of lines extending beyond the limits of this state, the return shall show the actual amount of rolling stock in use on the corporation's line in the state during the year for which return is made.

The return shall show the amount of rolling stock, the gross earnings of the entire railway, and the gross earnings of the same in this state, and all property designated in the next section, and such other facts as such council may, in writing, require. If such officers fail to make such statement, said council shall proceed to assess the property of the corporation so failing, adding thirty per cent. to the assessable value thereof. [Same, §§ 2, 11; 12 G. A., ch. 196.]

2018. Assessment; valuation. 1319. The said property shall be valued at its true cash value, and such assessment shall be made upon the entire railway within the state, and shall include the right of way, road-bed, bridges, culverts, rolling-stock, depots, station grounds, shops, buildings, gravel beds, and all other property, real and personal, exclusively used in the operation of such railway. In assessing said railway and its equipments, said council shall take into consideration the gross earnings per mile for the year ending January the first, preceding, and any and all other matters necessary to enable said council to make a just and equitable assessment of said railway property. If a part of any railway is without this state, then, in estimating the value of its rolling stock and movable property, they shall take into consideration the proportion which the business of that part of the railway lying within the state bears to the business of the railway without the state; such valuation shall be in the same ratio as that of the property of individuals. [14 G. A., ch. 26, § 3.]

The provisions of this section are applicable to railway bridges in general, but those of § 1281 apply to those therein mentioned: Missouri Valley & B. R. & B. Co. v. Harrison County, 74-283.

2019. Statement sent county auditor. 1320; 16 G. A., ch. 153. On or before the twenty-fifth day of March in each year, said council shall transmit to the county auditor of each county through which any railway may run, a statement showing the length of the main track of such railway within the county, and the assessed value per mile of the same as fixed by a pro rata distribution per mile of the assessed value of the whole property named in the preceding section. Said statement shall be entered on the proper record of the county. [Same, § 4.]

2020. Levy and collection. 1321. At the first meeting of the board of supervisors held after said statement is received by the county auditor, they shall make and cause the same to be entered in the proper record, an order, stating and declaring the length of the main track, and the assessed value of such railway lying in each city, town, township, or lesser taxing district in their county through which said railway runs, as fixed by the executive council, which shall constitute the taxable value of said property for taxable purposes, and the taxes on said property when collected by the county treasurer shall be paid over to the persons or corporations entitled thereto as other taxes, and the county auditor shall transmit a copy of said order to the city council or trustees of such city, incorporated town, or township. [Same, § 5.]

The order of the board becomes the basis for the levy of taxes on railway property for all purposes, and the assessment need not be placed upon the assessor's books: Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Osceola County, 45-168, 177.

The valuation upon which a railway company is to be taxed within any corporation or taxing district is to be determined from the number of miles of main track within the corporation or district, as determined by the order of the board of supervisors, and the value per mile as fixed by the executive council. The order of the board determining the number of the miles of track is not, in any sense, an assessment of valuation, and the provision of statute exempting agricultural and horticultural lands lying within the limits of incorporated towns and cities from taxation for city purposes have no application to railway property. The taxes due from the railroad company for such purposes cannot be reduced by reason of the fact that the track runs for a portion of the way within the city limits through land that is not platted or laid out into lots: Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Hamilton County, 73-313.

2021. Rate of taxation. 1322. All such railway property shall be taxable upon said assessment at the same rates, by the same officers, and for the same purposes as the property of individuals within such counties, cities, towns, townships, and lesser taxing districts. [Same, § 6.]

See § 1286.

2022. Provisions as to fare. 1323. The provisions of this chapter in relation to transporting of passengers, shall not apply to any railway in this state until the gross earnings of the preceding year, reckoning from the first day of January of each year, shall equal or exceed the sum of four thousand dollars per mile average for all the miles of road operated during the whole of that preceding year.

TAXATION OF SLEEPING AND DINING CARS.

2023. Number reported. 17 G. A., ch. 114, § 1. In addition to the matters required to be contained in the statement provided for in section thirteen hundred and eighteen of the code [§ 2017], such statement shall show the number of sleeping and dining cars not owned by such corporation, but used by it in operating its railway in this state during each month of the year for which the return is made, and also the number of miles each month that said cars have been run or operated on such railway within the state, and the total number of miles that said cars have been run or operated each month within and without the state.

2024. Assessment by executive council. 17 G. A., ch. 114, § 2. The executive council shall, at the time of the assessment of other railway property for taxation, assess for taxation the average number of cars so used by such corporation each month, and the assessed value of said cars shall bear the same proportion to the entire value thereof, that the monthly average number of miles that such cars have been run or operated within the state shall bear to the monthly average number of miles that such cars have been used or operated within and without the state, such valuation shall be in the same ratio as that of the property of individuals.

2025. Manner. 17 G. A., ch. 114, § 3. The executive council shall, as provided by sections thirteen hundred and eighteen and thirteen hundred and nineteen of the code [§§ 2017, 2018], first assess the value of the property of the corporation using sleeping and dining cars not owned by such corporation, and shall then add to such valuation, the amount of the assessed valuation of said sleeping and dining cars, made as hereinbefore provided, and such aggregate amount shall constitute and be considered the assessed value of the property of such corporation for the purposes of taxation.

These provisions held valid and constitutional, as subjecting such property only to the extent to which it receives protection, and not an interference with interstate commerce: Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Twombly, 29 Fed. Rep., 658.

RATES OF FARE AND FREIGHT.

2026. Classification of railroads. 15 G. A., ch. 68, § 1. All railroad corporations organized or doing business in this state, their trustees, receivers, or lessees, under the laws or authority thereof, shall be limited in their maximum charges to the rates of compensation for the transportation of passengers and freight, which are herein prescribed. All railroads in this state shall be classified according to the gross amount of their respective annual earnings within the state, per mile, for the preceding year, as follows: Class "A" shall include all railroads whose gross annual earnings, per mile, shall be four thousand dollars or more. Class "B" shall include all railroads whose gross annual earnings, per mile, shall be three thousand dollars or any sum in excess thereof less than four thousand dollars. Class "C" shall include all railroads whose gross annual earnings, per mile, shall be less than three thousand dollars.

The state cannot by statute regulate rates of transportation under one entire contract from a point within to a point without the state. Such regulation would be an interference with the power of the federal government to regulate interstate commerce: Carton v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 59-148; Keiser v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 5 McCrary, 496.

Where the railway obligates itself to carry to another point within the state and deliver to a connecting carrier, its contract is not one for transportation to a point beyond the state: Heiserman v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 63-732.

The regulation by a board of railroad commissioners that rates of transportation from a point without to a point within the state shall conform to like distances within the state is unconstitutional and interferes with interstate commerce: State v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 70-162.

Where a contract for transportation by a carrier provided for transportation of the goods from one point within the state to another point also within the state, and the rates of transportation were in excess of those fixed by statute, held, that the excess of charges paid might be recovered back, although it was shown that the intention was that the property should be delivered by the carrier receiving it to a connecting carrier and continuously transported to a point without the state, and although the charge for the entire transportation would have been a reasonable one: Heiserman v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 63-732.

Where the statute defines the charges which can lawfully be made by a railway company, charges in excess of those prescribed are unlawful and may be recovered back in an action for the excess. The amount fixed by statute will be conclusively presumed to be the limit of reasonable compensation: Ibid.

2027. Maximum rates of fare. 15 G. A., ch. 68, § 2. All railroad corporations, according to their classifications as herein prescribed, shall be limited to compensation per mile for the transportation of any person, with ordinary baggage not exceeding one hundred pounds in weight as follows: Class "A" three cents; class "B" three and one-half cents; class "C" four cents; provided, that no such corporation shall charge, demand, or receive any greater compensation per mile for the transportation of children twelve years of age or under, than half the rate above prescribed; and provided, also, a charge of ten cents may be added to the fare of any passenger, when the same is paid upon the cars, if a ticket might have been procured within a reasonable time before the departure of the train.

The regulation that a passenger shall pay full rate upon failure to procure and present a ticket which he might have purchased from the agent at a reduced rate is not unreasonable: State v. Chovin, 7-204.

The carrier may make a regulation requiring passengers to procure a ticket before taking passage in a caboose car attached to a freight train, and may eject from the car, in a proper place and manner, any person failing to comply with such regulation: Law v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 32-534.

The enactment of a statute imposing penalties for excessive charges recoverable by the party injured, and providing a punishment against the agent of a carrier for exacting and collecting excessive charges, does not take away the right existing at common law to recover money paid in excess of a reasonable charge: Ibid.

In such case an action will not be barred in two years under the provision relating to suits to recover a statute penalty, but will stand on the same footing as any action on implied contract: Ibid.

In an action to recover excessive charges paid, the plaintiff need not show objection or protest prior to or at the time of making payment which is in excess of a reasonable compensation: Ibid.

Under a statute imposing upon any railway company charging excessive rates a forfeiture to be recovered by the person injured, and providing that any agent or officer of such corporation violating or being a party to the violation of any of the provisions of the act should be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished accordingly, held, that where an agent was himself a shipper and accounted and turned over to the company charges for shipments made by him at illegal rates, he and the company were in pari delicto as to such charges, and that he could not recover the same in an action against the company: Steever v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 62-371.

This statutory provision held not an impairment of the charter of a railroad granted before its enactment, for the reason that as the charter of the company did not establish the maximum charges, it was competent for the legislature to do so afterwards. Nor is such legislation unconstitutional by reason of not being of uniform operation: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Iowa, 94 U. S., 155.

A railway company is allowed to collect an additional sum over the regular rate of fare from passengers who fail to purchase tickets, and the reasonableness of such regulation is not a question for the jury: Hoffbauer v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 52-342.

In an action to recover for being ejected from a train for want of a ticket, where the plaintiff claimed that he was not able to procure such ticket on account of the failure of the company to have its ticket office open before the starting of the train, held, that it was proper to allow defendant to introduce evidence of the character of the station and whether the facilities extended to the traveling public to purchase tickets were such as required for the convenience of the public. While it is required that the office should be open for business a sufficient time before the departure of the train, in order to enable passengers to procure their tickets, receive and count their change, if any, and prepare to board the train, without unnecessary interference with each other, yet it is not required that the office shall remain open up to the instant the train moves off. Unfitness of the station cannot be relied on as an excuse for not procuring a ticket, that reason not having been alleged to the conductor: Everett v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 69-15.

The failure of the company to sell a ticket to a passenger before entering the cars cannot be made a ground for recovery of damages where the passenger afterward tenders with his fare to the conductor the extra amount required on account of not having a ticket: Curl v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 63-417.

2028. Annual statement. 15 G. A., ch. 68, § 7. It shall be the duty of each railroad corporation operating a railroad in this state during the month of January, 1875, and each and every year thereafter, to make and return to the governor a statement of its gross receipts on its entire road within this state for the year preceding and ending with the thirty-first day of December. Said statement shall be sworn to by the president and superintendent of the road in this state, and shall contain a detailed statement of the entire receipts for transporting freight and passengers, and all other sources of income of the road. A failure to comply with the provisions of this section shall subject the corporation so failing, to a penalty of one hundred dollars per day, for each and every day after such report is due until it is made; to be recovered in an action in the name of the state of Iowa, for the benefit of the school fund. If the executive council shall, on examination, be satisfied of the correctness of said return, it shall be their duty to classify the different railroads in this state as hereinbefore provided, and the governor, when there shall be any change in classification, shall issue a certificate to any corporation or corporations affected by such change, certifying to them the class to which they are respectively assigned. And any change of rates made by any railroad corporation pursuant to any change of classification, shall take effect and be in force from and after the fourth day of July following such changes. The reports from the railroad corporations of this state for the year 1873, made pursuant to the provisions of section twelve hundred and eighty of the code [§ 1912], shall determine the classification of each road for the year ending July third, 1875.

BOARD OF RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS.

2028a. 22 G. A., ch. 29, § 1. Sections two and eight, of chapter seventy-seven, acts of the seventeenth general assembly, and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act, are hereby repealed.

2029. Election; organization. 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 29, § 2. At the regular election in the year 1888, there shall be three persons having the qualification of electors, in the places where they shall respectively reside in the state of Iowa, chosen by the electors of the state, from the body of the electors of said state, who, when they shall have taken the oath of office and given such bond as may be required of them by the governor of the state, shall be known and styled the board of railroad commissioners of the state of Iowa. They shall hold office, beginning on the second Monday in January, 1889, for the period of one, two, and three years respectively, as shall be decided between them by lot at their first meeting as a board in such manner as may be designated by the secretary of state. At the regular election in the year 1889, and every year thereafter at each such election there shall be chosen one person as commissioner, having the qualification hereinbefore and hereinafter described, who shall hold his office for three years from the second Monday in January after his election, and until his successor is elected and qualified. Said person shall fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of the commissioner whose term expires on the second Monday in Janu-

any following his said election. It shall organize on each second Monday in every year immediately after the new member has been qualified and if for any cause this is not done, it may be done at a subsequent meeting. The organization shall be by the selection of one member as chairman and a person having the qualifications hereinbefore and hereinafter described for a commissioner as secretary. The board shall have power to employ such additional clerical help as it may deem necessary and for the good of the service. No person in the employ of any common carrier or owning any bonds, stock, or property, in any railroad company, or who is in any way or manner pecuniarily interested in any railroad corporation shall be eligible to the office of railroad commissioner and the entering into the employ of any common carrier, or the acquiring of any stock or other interest in any common carrier by any officer under this act after his election or appointment shall disqualify him to hold the office, and to perform the duties thereof.

2030. Vacancies filled. 22 G. A., ch. 29, § 3. All vacancies in the office of railroad commissioners shall be filled by appointment of the governor. The person appointed to serve until his successor is elected and qualified. The board of commissioners as constituted by chapter seventy-seven, acts seventeenth general assembly [§§ 2033-2046], shall hold office and have all powers conferred upon them by chapter seventy-seven, acts of the seventeenth general assembly and acts amendatory thereto and such other powers and authority as are now or may hereafter be conferred upon them by law until commissioners shall be chosen and enter upon their duties as contemplated by this act.

2031. Canvass of votes for. 22 G. A., ch. 29, § 4. The canvass of votes cast for election of commissioners provided for in this act shall be made and returns and abstracts thereof and relating thereto be made, certified and forwarded and results of said election declared (by the executive council) in all respects in the same manner and by the same officers and boards as now provided by law for canvassing, making, certifying, forwarding and declaring the same as to other state officers.

2032. Powers. 22 G. A., ch. 29, § 5. The commissioners chosen under this act shall have all the powers that are conferred upon the railway commission by chapter seventy-seven, acts of the seventeenth general assembly [§§ 2033-2046], and such other powers and authority as may be now or shall hereafter be imposed by law.

2033. Duties. 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 3. Said commissioners shall have the general supervision of all railroads in the state operated by steam, and shall inquire into any neglect or violation of the laws of this state by any railroad corporation doing business therein, or by the officers, agents or employees, thereof, and shall also from time to time carefully examine and inspect the condition of each railroad in the state, and of its equipment, and the manner of its conduct and management, with reference to the public safety and convenience, and for the purpose of keeping the several railroad companies advised as to the safety of their bridges, shall make a semi-annual examination of the same, and report their condition to the said companies. And if any bridge shall be deemed unsafe by the commissioners, they shall notify the railroad company immediately, and it shall be the duty of said railroad company to repair and put in good order within ten days after receiving said notice, said bridge, and in default thereof, said commissioners are hereby authorized and empowered to stop and prevent said railroad company from running or passing its trains over said bridge, while in its unsafe condition. Whenever, in the judgment of the railroad commissioners, it shall appear that any railroad corporation fails, in any respect or particular, to comply with the terms of its charter or the laws of the state, or whenever in their judgment any repairs are necessary upon its road, or any addition to its rolling stock, or any addition to or change of its stations or station houses, or any change in its rates of fare for transporting freight or passengers, or any change in the mode of operating its road and conducting its business is reasonable and expedient in order to promote the security, convenience and accommodation of the public, said railroad commissioners shall inform such railroad corporation of the improvements and changes which they adjudge to be proper, by a notice thereof in writing to be served by leaving a copy thereof certified by the commissioners' clerk, with any station agent, clerk, treasurer or any director of said corporation and a report of the proceedings shall be included in the annual report of the commissioners to the legislature. Nothing in this section shall be construed as relieving any railroad company from their present responsibility or liability for damage to person or property.

2034. Report. 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 4. The said railroad commissioners shall, on or before the first Monday in December in each year, make a report to the governor of their doings for the preceding year, containing such facts, statements and explanations as will disclose the working of the system of railroad transportation in this state, and its relation to the general business and prosperity of the citizens of the state, and such suggestions and recommendations in respect thereto as may to them seem appropriate. Said report shall also contain as to every railroad corporation doing business in this state:

First.—The amount of its capital stock.

Second.—The amount of its preferred stock, if any, and the condition of its preferment.

Third.—The amount of its funded debt and the rate of interest.

Fourth.—The amount of its floating debt.

Fifth.—The cost and actual present cash value of its road and equipment, including permanent way buildings and rolling stock, all real estate used exclusively in operating the road, and all fixtures and conveniences for transacting its business.

Sixth.—The estimated value of all other property owned by such corporation, with a schedule of the same, not including lands granted in aid of its construction.

Seventh.—The number of acres originally granted in aid of construction of its road by the United States or by this state.

Eighth.—Number of acres of such land remaining unsold.

Ninth.—A list of its officers and directors, with their respective places of residence.

Tenth.—Such statistics of the road and of its transportation business for the year as may, in the judgment of the commissioners, be necessary and proper for the information of the general assembly, or as may be required by the governor. Such report shall exhibit and refer to the condition of such corporation on the first day of July of each year, and the details of its transportation business transacted during the year ending June thirtieth.

Eleventh.—The average amount of tonnage that can be carried over each road in the state with an engine of given power.

2035. Report of railroad companies. 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 5. To enable said commissioners to make such a report, the president or managing officer of each railroad corporation doing business in this state, shall annually make to the said commissioners, on the fifteenth day of the month of September, such returns, in the form which they may prescribe, as will afford the information required for their said official report; such returns shall be verified by the oath of the officer making them; and any railroad corporation whose return shall not be made as herein prescribed by the fifteenth day of September, shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each and every day after the sixteenth day of September that such return shall be wilfully delayed or refused.

2038. Examinations. 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 9. The said commissioners shall have power, in the discharge of the duties of their office, to examine any of the books, papers or documents of any such corporation, or to examine under oath or otherwise any officer, director, agent, or employee of any such corporation; they are empowered to issue subpoenas and administer oaths in the same manner and with the same power to enforce obedience thereto in the performance of their said duties as belong and pertain to courts of law in this state; and any person who may wilfully obstruct said commissioners in the performance of their duties, or who may refuse to give any information within his possession that may be required by said commissioners within the line of their duty, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be liable, on conviction thereof, to a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, in the discretion of the court, the costs of such subpoenas and investigation to be first paid by the state on the certificate of said commissioners.

2039. Duty of railroad to transport. 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 10. It shall be the duty of any railroad corporation, when within their power to do so, and upon reasonable notice, to furnish suitable cars to any and all persons who may apply therefor, for the transportation of any and all kinds of freight, and to receive and transport such freight with all reasonable dispatch, and to provide and keep suitable facilities for the receiving and handling the same at any depot on the line of its road; and also to receive and transport in like manner, the empty or loaded cars, furnished by any connecting road, to be delivered at any station or stations on the line of its road, to be loaded or discharged, or reloaded and returned to the road so connecting; and for compensation, it shall not demand or receive any greater sum than is accepted by it from any other connecting railroad, for a similar service.

The duty of one railway to transport the cars of another road may be enforced by no defense: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 34 Fed. Rep., 481. mandatory injunction, and the fact that the receiving of such cars by the former road will 2040. Reasonable rates. 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 12. No railroad company shall charge, demand, or receive from any person, company, or corporation an unreasonable price for the transportation of persons or property, or for the handling or storing of freight, or for the use of its cars, or for any privilege or service afforded by it in the transaction of its business as a railroad corporation.

2041. Penalty. 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 13. Any railroad corporation which shall violate any of the provisions of this act, as to extortion or unjust discrimination, shall forfeit for every such offense to the person, company, or corporation aggrieved thereby, three times the actual damages sustained or overcharges paid by the said party aggrieved, together with the cost of suit, and a reasonable attorney's fee to be fixed by the court, and if an appeal be taken from the judgment or any part thereof, it shall be the duty of the appellate court to include in the judgment an additional reasonable attorney's fee for services in the appellate court or courts, to be recovered in a civil action therefor. And in all cases where complaint shall be made, in accordance with the provisions of section fifteen [§ 2043], hereinafter provided, that an unreasonable charge is made, the commissioners shall require a modified charge for the service rendered, such as they shall deem to be reasonable, and all cases of a failure to comply with the recommendation of the commissioners shall be embodied in the report of the commissioners to the legislature; and the same shall apply to any unjust discrimination, extortion, or overcharge by said company, or other violation of law.

The extortion or unjust discrimination contemplated in this section is such as arises from extortionate or discriminating charges and not such as arises from failure or refusal to furnish transportation, or to furnish cars, nor does § 2039 make any provisions against discriminating in furnishing cars or transportation of property. It simply imposes duties which the common law lays upon all carriers with others relating to the furnishing of cars and the transportation of cars delivered to the railroad by a connecting road. The penalty in treble damages provided in this section is therefore not applicable to such discrimination: Bond v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co., 67-712.

This statute, so far as it imposes a forfeiture for doing acts therein prohibited, is to be regarded as penal and cannot be extended by implication: Ibid.

2042. Investigation of accident. 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 14. Upon the occurrence of any serious accident upon a railroad which shall result in personal injury, or loss of life, the corporation operating the road upon which the accident occurred shall give immediate notice thereof to the commissioners whose duty it shall be, if they deem it necessary, to investigate the same, and promptly report to the governor the extent of the personal injuries, or loss of life, and whether the same was the result of the mismanagement or neglect of the corporation on whose line the injury or loss of life occurred. Provided, that such report shall not be evidence or referred to in any case in any court.

2043. Examination of rates. 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 15. It shall be the duty of said commissioners upon the complaint and application of the mayor and aldermen of any city or the mayor and council of any incorporated town, or the trustees of any township, to make an examination of the rate of passenger fare or freight tariff charged by any railroad company, and of the condition or operation of any railroad, any part of whose location lies within the limits of such city, town or township, and if twenty-five or more legal voters in any city or township shall, by petition in writing, request the mayor and aldermen of such city or the trustees of such township, to make the said complaint and application, and the mayor and aldermen, or the trustees, refuse or decline to comply with the prayer of the petition, they shall state the reason for such non-compliance in writing upon the petition, and return the same to the petitioners; and the petitioners may thereupon, within ten days from the date of such refusal and return, present such petition to said commissioners and said commissioners, shall, if upon due inquiry and hearing of the petitioners, they think the public good demands the examination, proceed to make it in the same manner as if called upon by the mayor and aldermen of any city, or the trustees of any township. Before proceeding to make such examination, in accordance with such application or petition, said commissioners shall give to the petitioners and the corporation reasonable notice, in writing, of the time and place of entering upon the same. If, upon such an examination, it shall appear to said commissioners that the complaint alleged by the applicants or petitioners is well founded, they shall so adjudge, and shall inform the corporation operating such railroad of their adjudication within ten days, and shall also report their doings to the governor, as provided in the fourth section of this act [§ 2034].

2044. To whom applicable. 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 16. In the construction of this act, the phrase railroad shall be construed to include all railroads and railways operated by steam, and whether operated by the corporation owning them or by other corporations or otherwise. The phrase railroad corporation shall be construed to mean the corporation which constructs, maintains or operates a railroad operated by steam power.

2045. Cumulative. 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 17. Nothing in this act shall be construed to estop or hinder any persons or corporations from bringing suit against any railroad company for any violation of any of the laws of this state for the government of railroads.

2046. 17 G. A., ch. 77, § 18. All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

2047. Decrees of commissioners enforced. 20 G. A., ch. 133, § 1. The [circuit and] district courts of this state shall have jurisdiction to enforce, by proper decrees, injunctions and orders, the rulings, orders and regulations affecting public right, made or to be made by the board of railroad commissioners, such as are now, or may hereafter be, authorized to be made by them for the future direction and observance of railroads in this state. The proceedings therefor shall be by equitable action in the name of the state of Iowa and shall be instituted by the attorney-general, whenever advised by the board of railroad commissioners that any railway corporation, or person operating a line of road in this state, is violating and refusing to comply with any rule, order or regulation made by such board of railroad commissioners, and applicable to such railroad or person. It shall be the duty of the court in which any such cause shall be pending to require the issues to be made up at the first term of the court to which such cause is brought, which shall be the trial term, and to give the same precedence over other civil business. If the court shall find that such rule, regulation, or order is reasonable and just, and that in refusing compliance therewith said railway company is failing and omitting the performance of any public duty or obligation, the court shall decree a mandatory and perpetual injunction compelling obedience to and compliance with such rule, order, or regulation by said railroad company, or other person, its officers, agents, servants and employees and may grant such other relief as may be deemed just and proper. All violations of such decree shall render the company, persons, officers, agents, servants and employees who are in any manner instrumental in such violations, guilty of contempt of court, and the court may punish such contempt by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars for each offense, and may imprison the person guilty of contempt until he shall sufficiently purge himself therefrom. And such decree shall continue and remain in effect and be enforced until the rule, order or regulation shall be modified or vacated by the board of railroad commissioners.

See State v. Central Iowa R. Co., 71-410.

2048. Costs. 20 G. A., ch. 133, § 2. Whenever a decree shall be entered against a railroad company or person under section one [§ 2047], the court shall render judgment for costs, including a reasonable attorney's fee for counsel representing the state in said case, and said judgment shall be enforced by execution.

REGULATION OF RAILROADS AND OTHER CARRIERS.

2049. To what applicable. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 1. The provisions of this act shall apply to the transportation of passengers and property, and to receiving, delivering, storage and handling of property wholly within this state and shall apply to all railroad corporations and railway companies, express companies, car companies, sleeping-car companies, freight or freight-line companies and to any common carrier or carriers engaged in this state in the transportation of passengers or property by railroad therein, and shall also be held to apply to shipments of property made from any point within the state to any point within the state, whether the transportation of the same shall be wholly within this state or partly within this and an adjoining state or states. The term "railroad" as used in this act shall include all bridges and ferries used or operated in connection with any railroad and also all the road in use by any corporation, receiver, trustee or other person operating a railroad whether owned or operated under contract, agreement, lease or otherwise, and the term "transportation" shall include all instrumentalities of shipment or carriage, and the term "railroad corporation" contained in this act shall be deemed and taken to mean all corporations, companies or individuals now owning or operating, or which may hereafter own or operate any railroad in whole or in part in this state; and the provisions of this act shall apply to all persons, firms and companies and to all associations of persons whether incorporated or otherwise that shall do business as common carriers upon any of the lines of railway in this state (street railways excepted) the same as to railroad corporations herein mentioned.

2050. Charges to be reasonable. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 2. All charges made for any service rendered or to be rendered in the transportation of passengers or property in this state, as aforesaid or in connection therewith or for the receiving, delivering, storage or handling of such property shall be reasonable and just; and every unjust and unreasonable charge for such service is prohibited and declared to be unlawful.

2051. Unjust discrimination. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 3. If any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act, shall, directly or indirectly, by any special rate, rebate, drawback, or other device, charge, demand, collect or receive from any person or persons a greater or less compensation for any service rendered, or to be rendered, in the transportation of passengers or property subject to the provisions of this act, than it charges, demands, collects or receives from any other person or persons for doing for him or them a like and contemporaneous service in the transportation of a like kind of traffic, such common carrier shall be deemed guilty of unjust discrimination, which is hereby prohibited and declared to be unlawful; this section, however, is not to be construed as prohibiting a less rate per one hundred pounds in a carload lot than is charged, collected or received for the same kind of freight in less than a carload lot.

As to construction of provisions against unjust discriminations in a former statute, see Paxon v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 56-427.

2052. No preference or advantage; interchange. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 4. It shall be unlawful for any common carrier, subject to the provisions of this act to make or give any preference or advantage to any particular person, company, firm, corporation or locality or any particular description of traffic, in any respect whatsoever or to subject any particular person company firm corporation or locality or any particular description of traffic to any prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever; provided, however, that nothing herein shall be construed to prevent any common carrier from giving preference as to time of shipment of live-stock, uncured meats or other perishable property. All common carriers subject to the provisions of this act, shall, according to their respective powers, afford all reasonable, proper and equal facilities for the interchange of traffic between their respective lines, and for the receiving, forwarding and switching of cars, and the receiving, forwarding and delivering of passengers and property to and from their several lines, and to and from other lines and places connected therewith; and shall not discriminate in their accommodations, rates and charges between such connecting lines. And any common carrier may be required to switch and transfer cars for another for the purpose of being loaded or unloaded, upon such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the board of railroad commissioners.

2053. Long and short haul. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 5. It shall be unlawful for any common carrier, subject to the provisions of this act, to charge or receive any greater compensation in the aggregate for the transportation of passengers or of a like kind of property for a shorter than for a longer distance over its railroad, all or any portion of the shorter haul being included within the longer. And said common carrier shall charge no more for transporting freight to or from any point on its railroad than a fair and just rate as compared with the price it charges for the same kind of freight transportation to or from any other point.

2055. Schedules of rates and fare. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 7. Every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act, shall print and keep for public inspection, schedules showing the rates and fares and charges for the transportation of passengers and property which any such common carrier has established, and which are in force at the time upon its railroad as defined by the first section of this act. The schedules printed as aforesaid by any such common carrier shall plainly state the places upon its railroads between which property and passengers will be carried and shall contain the classification of freight in force upon such railroad, and shall also state separately any terminal charges and any rules or regulations which in any wise change, affect or determine any part of the aggregate of such aforesaid rates and fares and charges. Such schedules shall be plainly printed in large type of at least the size of ordinary pica, and a copy for the use of the public shall be kept in every freight office and passenger station, on such railroad, where it can be conveniently inspected, and such common carrier shall keep a printed notice posted in every such freight office and passenger station indicating where therein such schedules can be found. No advance shall be made in the rates, fares and charges which have been established and published as aforesaid by any common carrier in compliance with the requirements of this section, except after ten days' public notice, which shall plainly state the changes proposed to be made in the schedules then in force and the time when the increased rates, fares or charges will go into effect; and the proposed changes shall be shown by printing new schedules, or shall be plainly indicated upon the schedules in force at the time and kept for public inspection. Reduction in such published rates, fares or charges may be made without previous public notice, but whenever any such reduction is made, notice of the same shall immediately be publicly posted, and the changes made shall immediately be made public by printing new schedules, or shall immediately be plainly indicated upon the schedules at the time in force and kept for public inspection. And when any such common carrier shall have established and published its rates, fares and charges, in compliance with the provisions of this section, it shall be unlawful for such common carrier to charge, demand, collect or receive from any person or persons a greater or less compensation for the transportation of passengers or property, or for any services in connection therewith than is specified in such published schedule of rates, fares and charges as may at the time be in force. Every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act shall file with the board of railroad commissioners of this state, copies of its schedules of rates, fares and charges which have been established and published in compliance with the requirements of this section, and shall promptly notify said commissioners of all changes made in the same. Every such common carrier shall also file with said commissioners, copies of all contracts, agreements or arrangements with other common carriers in relation to any traffic affected by the provisions of this act to which it may be a party. And in cases where passengers and freight pass over continuous lines or routes in this state operated by more than one common carrier and the several common carriers operating such lines or routes have established joint tariffs of rates or fares or charges for such continuous lines or routes, copies of such joint tariffs shall also, in like manner, be filed with said commissioners. Such joint rates, fares and charges on such continuous lines so filed as aforesaid shall be made public by such common carriers, when directed by said commissioners in so far as may in the judgment of the commissioners be deemed practicable; and said commissioners shall from time to time prescribe the measures of publicity which shall be given to such rates, fares and charges, or to such part of them as they may deem it practicable for such common carriers to publish and the places in which they shall be published; but no common carrier, party to any such joint tariff shall be liable for the failure of any other common carrier party thereto, to observe and adhere to the rates, fares or charges thus made and published. If any such common carrier shall neglect or refuse to file or publish its schedules or tariffs of rates, fares and charges as provided in this section or any part of the same, such common carriers shall, in addition to other penalties herein prescribed, be subject to a writ of mandamus to be issued by any district court of this state in the judicial district wherein the principal office of said common carrier is situated, or wherein such offense may be committed. And if such common carrier be a foreign corporation, then such writ may be issued by any district court, in the judicial district where such common carrier accepts traffic and has an agent to perform such service, to compel compliance with the aforesaid provisions of this section, and such writ shall issue in the name of the state of Iowa at the relation or upon the petition of the said board of railroad commissioners of this state; and failure to comply with its requirements shall be punishable as and for a contempt; and shall make said corporation liable to a penalty of five hundred dollars for each day's failure to comply and when any such writ of mandamus, shall be so applied for by said commissioners, no bond shall be required of them by any court or judge, in which or before whom any such application may be made.

2056. Continuous shipments. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 8. It shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act to enter into any combination, contract or agreement, expressed or implied, to prevent by change of time schedules, carriage in different cars or by other means or devices, the carriage of freights from being continuous from the place of shipment to the place of destination in this state; and no break of bulk, stoppage or interruption made by such common carrier shall prevent the carriage of freights from being and being treated as one continuous carriage from the place of shipment to the place of destination, unless such break stoppage or interruption was made in good faith for some necessary purpose and without any intent to avoid or unnecessarily interrupt such continuous carriage or to evade any of the provisions of this act.

ful, or shall omit to do any act, matter or thing, in this act required to be done, such common carrier shall be liable to the person or persons injured thereby, for three times the amount of damages sustained in consequence of any such violation of the provisions of this act, together with costs of suit and a reasonable counsel or attorney's fee to be fixed by the court in which the same is heard on appeal or otherwise, which shall be taxed and collected as part of the costs in the case; provided that in all cases demand in writing on said common carrier shall be made for the money damages sustained before suit is brought for recovery under this section and that no suit shall be brought until the expiration of fifteen days after such demand.

2058. Remedy; evidence. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 10. Any person or persons claiming to be damaged by any common carrier, subject to the provisions of this act, may either make complaint to the board of railroad commissioners of this state or may bring suit in his or their own behalf for the recovery of damages for which any such common carrier may be liable under the provisions of this act in any court of this state of competent jurisdiction; but such person or persons shall not have the right to pursue both of said remedies at the same time. In any such action brought for the recovery of damages, the court before whom the same shall be pending may compel any director, officer, receiver, trustee or agent of the corporation or company, defendant in such suit to attend, appear and testify in such case and may compel the production of the books and papers of such corporation or company party to any such suit; the claims that any such testimony or evidence may tend to criminate the person giving such evidence shall not excuse such person or witness from testifying or producing said books and papers; but such evidence or testimony shall not be used against such person in any way, on the trial of any criminal proceedings.

tion of all books, papers, tariffs, schedules, contracts, agreements and documents relating to any matter under investigation, and to that end may invoke the aid of any court of this state in requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books, papers and documents under the provisions of this section. And any court of this state within the jurisdiction of which such inquiry is carried on, shall in case of contumacy, or refusal to obey a subpoena, or other proper process issued to any common carrier or person subject to the provisions of this act, or other person, issue an order requiring such common carrier or other person to appear before said commissioners (and produce books and papers if so ordered) and give evidence touching or in relation to the matter in question; and any failure to obey such order of the court shall be punished by such court as a contempt thereof; the claim that any such testimony or evidence may tend to criminate the person giving such evidence, shall not excuse such person or witness from testifying; but such evidence or testimony shall not be used against such person on the trial of any criminal proceeding.

2061. Complaint. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 13. Any person, firm, corporation or association, or any mercantile, agricultural or manufacturing society, or any body politic or municipal organization, complaining of anything done or omitted to be done, by any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act, in contravention of the provisions thereof, may apply to said commissioners by petition which shall briefly state the facts whereupon a statement of the complaint thus made with the damages if any are alleged shall be forwarded by the said commissioners to such common carrier who shall be called upon to satisfy the complaint, or to answer the same in writing within a reasonable time to be specified by the commissioners. If such common carrier within the time specified shall make reparation for the injury alleged to have been done or shall correct the wrong complained of, said carrier shall be relieved of liability to the complainant only for the particular violation of law thus complained of. If such common carrier shall not satisfy the complaint, within the time specified, or there shall appear to be any reasonable ground for investigating said complaint, it shall be the duty of the said commissioners to investigate the matters complained of in such manner and by such means as said commissioners shall deem proper and said commissioners whenever they may have sufficient reason to believe that any common carrier is violating any of the provisions of this act shall at once institute an inquiry in the same manner, and to the same effect, as though complaint had been made. No complaint shall at any time be dismissed because of the absence of direct damage to the complainant or complainants or petitioners.

2062. Investigations; report. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 14. Whenever an investigation shall be made by said commissioners after notice as provided by section thirteen, of this act [§ 2061], it shall be their duty to make a report in writing in respect thereto, which shall include the findings of fact upon which the conclusions of the commissioners are based, together with its or their recommendation or orders as to what reparation, if any, should be made by the common carrier to any party, or parties, who may be found to have been injured; and such finding, so made shall thereafter in all judicial proceedings be deemed and taken as prima facie evidence as to each and every fact found. All reports of investigation made by said commissioners shall be entered of record, and a copy thereof shall be furnished to the party who may have complained and any other person or persons directly interested, and to any common carrier that may have been complained of.

2063. Findings of the commissioners. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 15. If in any case in which an investigation shall be made by said commissioners it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the commissioners, either by the testimony of witnesses or other evidence that anything has been done or omitted to be done in violation of the provisions of this act or of any law cognizable by said commissioners by any common carrier, or that any injury or damages has been sustained by the party or parties complaining or by other parties aggrieved in consequence of any such violation it shall be the duty of said commissioners forthwith to cause a copy of their report in respect thereto to be delivered to such common carrier, together with a notice to said common carrier to cease and desist from such violation, or to make reparation for the injury so found to have been done, or both within a reasonable time to be specified by the commissioners; and if within the time specified it shall be made to appear to the commissioners that such common carrier has ceased from such violation of law and has made reparation for the injury found to have been done in compliance with the report and notice of the commissioners, or to the satisfaction of the party complaining, a statement to that effect shall be entered of record by the commissioners and the said common carrier shall thereupon be relieved from further liability or penalty for such particular violation of law.

2064. Enforcement of orders. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 16. Whenever any common carrier as defined in and subject to the provisions of this act shall violate or refuse or neglect to obey any lawful order or requirement of the said board of railroad commissioners, it shall be the duty of said commissioners, and lawful for any company or person interested in such order or requirement to apply in a summary way, by petition to the district or superior court in any county of this state in which the common carrier complained of has its principal office, or in any county through which its line or road passes or is operated, or in which the violation or disobedience of such order or requirement shall happen, alleging such violation or disobedience as the case may be; and the said court shall have power to hear and determine the matter on such short notice to the common carrier complained of as the court shall deem reasonable; and such notice may be served on such common carrier, his or its officers, agents or servants in such manner as the court shall direct; and said court shall proceed to hear and determine the matter speedily as a court of equity and without the formal pleadings and proceedings applicable to ordinary suits in equity but in such manner as to do justice in the premises; and to this end such court shall have power, if it think fit to direct and prosecute in such mode and by such persons as it may appoint all such inquiries as the court may think needful to enable it to form a just judgment in the matter of such petition; and on such hearing the report of said commissioners shall be prima facie evidence of the matter therein, or in any order made by them stated; and if it be made to appear to such court on such hearing or on the report of any such person or persons, that the order or requirement of said commissioners drawn in question, has been violated or disobeyed, it shall be lawful for such court to issue a writ of injunction, or other proper process mandatory or otherwise to restrain such common carrier from further continuing such violation or disobedience of such order or requirement of said commissioners and enjoining obedience to the same; and in case of any disobedience of any such writ of injunction or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise, it shall be lawful for such courts to issue writs of attachment, or any other process of said court incident or applicable to writs of injunction or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise, against such common carrier, and if a corporation, against one or more of the directors, officers or agents of the same, or against any owner, lessee, trustee, receiver or other person failing to obey such writ of injunction or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise; and said court may, if it shall think fit, make an order directing such common carrier or other person so disobeying such writ of injunction or other proper process mandatory or otherwise, to pay such sum of money not exceeding for each carrier or person in default the sum of one thousand dollars for every day after a day to be named in the order that such carrier or other person shall fail to obey such injunction or other proper process mandatory or otherwise; and such monies (moneys) shall, upon the order of the court, be paid into the treasury of the county in which the action was commenced and one-half thereof shall be transferred by the county treasurer to the state treasury; and the payment thereof may without prejudice to any other mode of recovering the same be enforced by attachment or order, in the nature of a writ of execution, in like manner as if the same had been recovered by a final decree in personam in such court, saving to the commissioners and any other party or person interested the right of appeal to the supreme court of the state under the same regulations now provided by law in relation to appeals to said court as to security for such appeal except that in no case shall security for such appeal be required when the same is taken by said commissioners; but no appeal to said supreme court shall operate, to stay or supersede the order of the court, or the execution of any writ or process thereon; and such court may in every such matter order the payment of such costs and attorney and counsel fees as shall be deemed reasonable. Whenever any such petition shall be filed or presented, or be prosecuted by the said commissioners, or by their direction it shall be the duty of the attorney-general of the state to prosecute the same, and in such prosecution he shall have the right to have the assistance of any county attorney of the county in which any such proceedings are instituted, and it is hereby made the duty of any such county attorney to render such assistance; and the costs and expenses on the part of said commissioners of any such prosecution shall be paid out of the appropriations for the expenses of said board of commissioners.

2065. Commissioners to make schedules. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 17. The board of railroad commissioners of this state are hereby empowered and directed to make for each of the railroad corporations, doing business in this state, as soon as practicable, a schedule of reasonable maximum rates of charges for the transportation of freight and cars on each of said railroads, and said power to make schedules shall include the power of classification of all such freights, and it shall be the duty of said commissioners to make such classification; provided, that the said rates of charges to be so fixed by said commissioners shall not in any case exceed the rates which are or may hereafter be established by law; and said schedules so made by said commissioners, shall in all suits brought against any such railroad corporations, wherein is in any way involved the charges of any such railroad corporation for the transportation of any freight or cars or unjust discrimination in relation thereto be deemed and taken in all courts of this state as prima facie evidence that the rates therein fixed are reasonable and just maximum rates of charges for the transportation of freight and cars upon the railroads for which said schedules may have been respectively prepared. Said commissioners shall from time to time, and as often as circumstances may require, change and revise said schedules, subject to the same provision that the rates fixed are not to be higher than now or hereafter established by law. When any schedule shall have been made or revised as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of said commissioners to cause notice thereof to be published for two successive weeks in some public newspaper published in the city of Des Moines in this state, which notice shall state the date of the taking effect of said schedule and said schedule shall take effect at the time so stated in such notice and a printed copy of said revised schedule shall be conspicuously posted by such common carrier in each freight office and passenger depot upon its line or lines. All such schedules, so made, shall be received and held in all such suits as prima facie the schedule of said commissioners without further proof than the production of the schedule desired to be used as evidence, with a certificate of said railroad commissioners, that the same is a true copy of the schedule prepared by them for the railroad company or corporation therein named, and that notice of making the same has been published as required by law; provided that before finally fixing and deciding what the original maximum rates and classification shall be, it shall be the duty of the railroad commissioners to publish ten days' notice in two daily papers published in Des Moines setting forth in such notice that at a certain time and place they will proceed to fix and determine such maximum rates and classification; and they shall at such time and place and as soon as practicable afford to any person, firm, corporation or common carrier who may desire it an opportunity to make an explanation or showing or to furnish information to said commissioners on the subject of determining and fixing such maximum rates and classification; and in any event the original schedule of rates and classification of freights on all lines of railroads in Iowa shall be fixed and shall go into effect within sixty days from the taking effect of this act.

2066. Complaint of violation of schedule. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 18. Whenever any person upon his own behalf, or class of persons similarly situated, or any firm, corporation or association, or any mercantile, agricultural or manufacturing society, or any body politic or municipal organization, shall make complaint to said board of railroad commissioners, that the rate charged or published by any railroad company, or the maximum rates fixed by said commissioners in the schedules of rates made by them under the provisions of section seventeen of this act [§ 2065], or the maximum rate that now or hereafter may be fixed by law is unreasonably high or discriminating, it shall be the duty of said commissioners to immediately investigate the matter of such complaint. If such complaint appears to be well founded and not trivial in character the board shall fix a day for hearing the same and shall notify the railroad company of the time and place of such hearing by mailing a notice properly directed to any division superintendent general or assistant superintendent, general manager, president or secretary of such company, which notice shall contain the substance of the complaint so made, and the board shall also notify the person or persons complaining of such time and place.

2067. Hearing; evidence. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 19. Upon such hearing so provided for, the said commissioners shall receive whatever evidence, statements or arguments either party may offer or make pertinent to the matter under investigation; and the burden of proof shall not be held to be upon the person or persons making the complaint, but the commissioners shall add to the showing made at such hearing whatever information they may then have, or can secure from any source whatsoever, and the person or persons complaining shall be entitled to introduce any published schedules of rates of any railroad company, or evidence of rates actually charged by any railroad company for substantially the same kind of service, whether in this or any other state; and the lowest rates published or charged by any railroad company for substantially the same kind of service, whether in this or any other state, shall, at the instance of the person or persons complaining be accepted as prima facie evidence of a reasonable rate for the services under investigation, and if the railroad company complained of is operating a line of railroad beyond the state of Iowa, or if it appears that it has a traffic arrangement with any such railroad company, then the commissioners in determining what is a reasonable rate, shall take into consideration the charge made, or rate established by such railroad company or the company with which it has traffic arrangements for carrying freight from beyond the state to points within the state, and from within the state to points beyond [the] state; and if such company be operating a line of railway beyond the state they shall also take into consideration the rate charged or established for a substantially similar or greater service by such company in any other state in which said railroad company operates a line of railway.

2068. Decision. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 20. After such hearing and investigation the said commissioners shall fix and determine the maximum charge to be thereafter made by the railroad company or common carriers complained of, which charge shall in no event exceed the one now, or hereafter fixed by law, and the said commissioners shall render their decision in writing; and shall spread the same at length in the record to be kept for that purpose; such decision shall, specifically, set out the sums or rate which the railroad company or common carrier, so complained of, may thereafter charge or receive for the service therein named and including a classification of such freight, and the said commissioners shall not be limited in their said decision and the schedule to be contained therein to the specific case or cases complained of but it shall be extended to all such rates between points in this state and whatever part of the line of railway of such company or common carrier within this state as may have been fairly within the scope of such investigation, and any such decisions so made and entered on record of said commissioners, including any such schedules and classifications, shall, when duly authenticated be received and held in all suits brought against any such railroad corporation or common carrier wherein is in any way involved the charges of any such corporation or carrier mentioned in said decisions, in any of the courts of this state, as prima facie evidence that the rates therein fixed are reasonable maximum rates, the same as the schedules made by said commissioners as provided in section seventeen hereof [§ 2065]; and the rates and classifications so established after such hearing and investigation shall from time to time thereafter upon complaint duly made be subject to revision by said commissioners the same as any other rates and classifications.

2069. Proceedings of commissioners. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 21. That the said board of railroad commissioners may in all cases conduct its proceedings when not otherwise particularly prescribed by law, in such manner as will best conduce to the proper dispatch of business and to the ends of justice. A majority of the commissioners shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but no commissioner shall participate in any hearing or proceeding in which he has any pecuniary interest. Said commissioners may from time to time make or amend such general rules, or orders, as may be requisite for the order and regulation of proceedings before it, including forms of notices and the service thereof, which shall conform as nearly as may be to those in use in courts of this state. Any party may appear before said board of commissioners and be heard in person or by attorney. Every vote and official action of said board of commissioners shall be entered of record and its proceedings shall be public upon the request of either party or any person interested. Said board of railroad commissioners shall have an official seal, which shall be judicially noticed, and every commissioner shall have the right to administer oaths and affirmations in any proceeding pending before said board.

2070. Annual reports. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 22. The said board of railroad commissioners is hereby authorized to require annual reports from all common carriers subject to the provisions of this act, to fix the time and prescribe the manner in which such reports shall be made, and to require from such carriers specific answers to all questions upon which the said commissioners may need information. Such annual reports shall show in detail the amount of the capital stock issued, the amounts paid therefor, and the manner of the payment of the same; the dividends paid, the surplus fund, if any, and the number of stockholders; the funded and floating debts and the interest paid thereon; the costs and value of the carrier's property, franchises and equipment; the number of employees, and the salaries paid each class; the amounts expended for improvements each year, how and where expended and the character of such improvements; the earnings and receipts from each branch of business, and from all sources; the operating and other expenses; the balances of profit and loss; and a complete exhibit of the financial operations of the carrier each year, including an annual balance sheet. Such reports shall also contain such information in relation to rates or regulations, concerning fares or freights, or agreements, arrangements, or contracts with other common carriers as the commissioners may require; and the said board of commissioners may within its discretion for the purpose of enabling it the better to carry out the purpose of this act (if in the opinion of the commissioners it is practicable to prescribe such uniformity and methods of keeping accounts), prescribe a period of time within which all common carriers subject to the provisions of this act, shall have as near as may be a uniform system of accounts and the manner in which such accounts shall be kept.

2071. Extortion; penalty. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 23. If any railroad corporation or common carrier subject to the provisions of this act, shall charge, collect, demand or receive more than a fair and reasonable rate of toll or compensation for the transportation of passengers or freight of any description or for the use and transportation of any railroad car upon its track, or any of the branches thereof, or upon any railroad within this state which it has the right, license or permission to use, operate or control or shall make any unjust and unreasonable charge prohibited in section two of this act [§ 2050], the same shall be deemed guilty of extortion, and shall be dealt with as hereinafter provided, and if any such railroad corporation (or common carrier) shall be found guilty of any unjust discrimination as defined in section three of this act [§ 2051], upon conviction thereof, shall be dealt with as hereinafter provided.

2072. Discrimination; punishment. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 24. If any such railroad corporation shall charge, collect or receive for the transportation of any passenger or freight of any description upon its railroad for any distance within this state, a greater amount of toll or compensation than is at the same time charged, collected or received for the transportation in the same direction of any passenger or like quantity of freight of the same class over a greater distance of the same railroad; or if it shall charge, collect or receive at any point upon its railroad a higher rate of toll or compensation for receiving, handling or delivering freight of the same class and quantity, than it shall at the same time charge, collect or receive at any other point upon the same railroad; or if it shall charge, collect or receive for the transportation of any passenger or freight of any description over its railroad a greater amount as toll or compensation than shall at the same time be charged, collected or received by it for the transportation of any passenger or like quantity of freight of the same class being transported in the same direction over any portion of the same railroad of equal distance; or if it shall charge, collect or receive from any person or persons a higher or greater amount of toll or compensation than it shall at the same time charge, collect or receive from any other person or persons for receiving, handling or delivering freight of the same class and like quantity, at the same point upon its railroad; or if it shall charge, collect or receive from any person or persons, for the transportation of any freight upon its railroad, a higher or greater rate of toll or compensation than it shall, at the same time, charge, collect or receive from any other person or persons, for the transportation of the like quantity of freight of the same class, being transported from the same point in the same direction, over equal distances of the same railroad, or if it shall charge, collect or receive, from any person or persons, for the use and transportation of any railroad car or cars upon its railroad, for any distance, a greater amount of toll or compensation than is at the same time charged, collected or received from any other person or persons, for the use and transportation of any railroad car of the same class or number, for a like purpose, being transported in the same direction, over a greater distance of the same railroad; or if it shall charge, collect or receive from any person or persons, for the use and transportation of any railroad car or cars upon its railroad, a higher or greater compensation in the aggregate, than it shall, at the same time, charge, collect or receive from any other person or persons, for the use and transportation of any railroad car or cars of the same class for a like purpose, being transported from the same original point, in the same direction, over an equal distance of the same railroad; all such discriminating rates, charges, collection or receipts whether made directly or by means of any rebate, drawback, or other shift or evasion, shall be deemed and taken, against such railroad corporation, as prima facie evidence of the unjust discriminations prohibited by the provisions of this act; and it shall not be deemed a sufficient excuse or justification of such discrimination on the part of said railroad corporation, that the railway station or point at which it shall charge, collect or receive less compensation in the aggregate for the transportation of such passenger or freight, or for the use and transportation of such railroad car the greater distance than for the shorter distance, is a railway station or point at which then exists competition with any other railroad or means of transportation. This section shall not be construed so as to exclude other evidence tending to show any unjust discrimination in freight and passenger rates. The provisions of this section shall extend and apply to any railroad, the branches thereof, and any road or roads which any railroad corporation has the right, license or permission to use, operate or control wholly or in part, within this state; provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to prevent railroad corporations from issuing commutation, excursion or thousand-mile tickets; provided the same are issued alike to all applying therefor.

2073. Discrimination as to quantity. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 25. It shall be unlawful for any such common carrier to charge, collect demand or receive more for transporting a car of freight than it at the same time charges, collects demands or receives per car for several cars of a like class of freight over the same railroad, for the same distance, in the same direction, or to charge, collect, demand or receive more for transporting a ton of freight than it charges, collects, demands or receives per ton for several tons of freight under a car load of a like class of freight over the same railroad for the same distance, in the same direction or to charge collect, demand or receive more for transporting a hundred pounds of freight than it charges, collects, demands or receives per hundred for several hundred pounds of freight, under a ton, of a like class of freight over the same railroad, for the same distance, in the same direction, all such discriminating rates, charges, collections or receipts, whether made directly or by means of any rebate, drawback or other shift or evasion, shall be deemed and taken against such railroad company as prima facie evidence of the unjust discrimination prohibited by this act; provided, however, that for the protection and development of any new industry within this state, such railroad company may grant concession or special rates for any agreed number of car loads, but such special rates aforesaid shall first be approved by the board of railroad commissioners, and a copy thereof filed in the office thereof.

2074. Penalty for discrimination. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 26. Any such railroad corporation guilty of extortion or of making any unjust discrimination as to passenger or freight rates or the rates for the use and transportation of railroad cars or in receiving handling or delivering freights shall upon conviction thereof be fined in any sum not less than one thousand dollars nor more than five thousand dollars for the first offense; and for every subsequent offense not less than five thousand dollars nor more than ten thousand dollars such fine to be imposed in a criminal prosecution by indictment, or shall be subject to the liability prescribed in the next succeeding section to be recovered as therein provided.

2075. Forfeiture. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 27. Any such railroad corporation guilty of extortion or of making any unjust discrimination as to passenger or freight rates or the rates for the use and transportation of railroad cars, or in receiving, handling or delivering freights shall forfeit and pay to the state of Iowa not less than one thousand dollars nor more than five thousand dollars for the first offense and not less than five thousand dollars nor more than ten thousand dollars for every subsequent offense to be recovered in a civil action by ordinary proceedings instituted in the name of the state of Iowa. And the release from liability or penalty provided for in section fifteen of this act [§ 2063] shall not apply to either a criminal prosecution under the last preceding section or a civil action brought under this section.

2076. Suits by commissioners. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 28. Whenever said railroad commissioners have good reason to believe, that any railroad corporation or common carrier subject to the provisions of this act has been guilty of extortion or unjust discrimination and thereby become liable to the penalties prescribed in sections twenty-six and twenty-seven hereof [§§ 2074, 2075], it shall be their duty to immediately cause suits to be commenced and prosecuted against any such railroad corporation or common carrier. Such suits and prosecutions may be instituted in any county of this state through or into which the line of the railroad corporation sued for violation of this act may extend. And such railroad commissioners are hereby authorized, when in their judgment, it is necessary so to do, to employ counsel to assist the attorney-general in conducting such suit on behalf of the state. No such suits commenced by said commissioners shall be dismissed unless the said commissioners and the attorney-general shall consent thereto. And the court may in its discretion give preference to such suits over all other business except criminal cases.

2077. Free transportation or reduced rates. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 29. Nothing in this act shall apply to the carriage, storage or handling of property free or at reduced rates for the United States or this state or municipal governments or for charitable purposes, or to and from fairs and expositions for exhibition thereat or for the employees of such common carriers or their families or private property or goods for the family use of the employees of such common carriers, or the issuance of mileage, excursion or commutation passenger tickets. Nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit any common carrier from giving reduced rates to ministers of religion, or to prevent railroads from giving free carriage to their own officers and employees and their families dependent upon said officer or employee for support and to persons in charge of live-stock being shipped from the point of shipment to destination and return, or to prevent the principal officers of any railroad company or companies from exchanging passes or tickets with other railroad companies for their officers and employees; and nothing in this act contained shall in any way abridge or alter the remedies now existing at common law or by statute, but the provisions of this act are in addition to such remedies; provided, that no pending litigation shall in any way be affected by this act.

2078. Commissioners transported free. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 30. The said railroad commissioners and their secretary shall have the right of free transportation in the performance of their duties concerning railroads, on all railroads and railroad trains in this state; and they may take with them experts or other agents whose services they may require and who shall in like manner be transported free of charge.

2080. 22 G. A., ch. 28, § 32. Section eleven of chapter seventy-seven of the acts of the seventeenth general assembly in relation to the board of railroad commissioners, and all laws now in force in direct conflict with any of the provisions of this act, are hereby repealed.

TAXES IN AID OF RAILROADS.

2081. 20 G. A., ch. 159, § 1. Chapter one hundred and twenty-three of laws of the sixteenth general assembly and chapter eighty-seven and one hundred and seventy-three of the laws of the seventeenth general assembly and chapter one hundred and ninety-two of the laws of the eighteenth general assembly and chapter one hundred and two of the laws of the nineteenth general assembly are hereby repealed and the following is enacted instead thereof:

2082. By township, cities, or towns; limit. 20 G. A., ch. 159, § 2. Taxes not to exceed five per centum on the assessed value of any township, incorporated town or city may be voted to aid any railroad company which is or may become incorporated under the laws of the state of Iowa, to aid in the construction of a projected railroad within this state as hereinafter provided.

Constitutionality: Under the constitution of 1846, held, that counties might, by a public vote, be authorized to issue bonds in aid of a railway to be constructed through the county: Dubuque County v. Dubuque & P. R. Co., 4 G. Gr., 1.

Also, held, under the provisions of Code of '51, that counties had authority by popular vote to issue bonds in subscription for the stock of a railway: Clapp v. Cedar County, 5-15; Ring v. Johnson County, 6-265.

Where such bonds were issued, held, that they were valid in the hands of a purchaser, and he need not go behind the records of the county to ascertain whether authority had been properly conferred upon the county officers to issue such bonds: Clapp v. Cedar County, 5-15.

Under the cases holding that the county had authority to subscribe for stock in aid of railway corporations, held, that irregularities in submitting the proposition to subscribe to such stock to the electors of the county might be cured by a legalizing act of the legislature: McMillen v. Boyles, 6-304; S. C., 6-391.

Held, also, that the county might vote taxes in aid of railroads: Games v. Robb, 8-193.

Where a county voted the issuance of bonds in aid of a railroad under the agreement that the county should receive certificates of stock of like amount, held, that delivery of such certificates was not a condition precedent to the delivery of the bonds: State ex rel. v. County Judge, 9-288.

It was held also that the power to subscribe for stock of a railroad and issue bonds in payment therefor might be conferred upon the county by the legislature, and, if conferred, the bonds issued in pursuance of such authority, or duly legalized if issued originally without authority, would be valid: Stokes v. Scott County, 10-166.

But, held, that a county had no authority without legislative grant to issue bonds in subscription for stock of a railway company: Ibid.

And, held, that the case above cited, upholding the authority of the county to issue bonds or vote a tax in aid of railroads, were erroneously decided, and that such power was not conferred by the provisions of the Code of '51: Ibid.

Therefore, held, that where, in the pursuance of the submission of such a proposition to vote, and the adoption thereof by the voters of the county, bonds were being issued which had not yet passed into the hands of purchasers, an injunction should be granted to restrain their issuance: Ibid.; State ex rel. v. Wapello County, 13-388.

Further, held, that the legislature had no constitutional power to authorize the levy of taxes by counties, cities or townships in aid of railroads: State ex rel. v. Wapello County, 13-388; McMillan v. Boyles, 14-107; Smith v. Henry County, 15-385; Ten Eyck v. Mayor of Keokuk, 15-486; Hanson v. Vernon, 27-28; King v. Wilson, 1 Dillon, 555.

But under a subsequent similar statute, held, that such provisions were not unconstitutional, overruling the previous cases: Stewart v. Board of Supervisors, 30-9; McGregor & S. C. R. Co. v. Birdsall, 30-255; Bonwifield v. Bidwell, 32-149; Renwick v. Davenport & N. W. R. Co., 47-511.

The present statute to the same effect is also upheld: Snell v. Leonard, 55-553; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67-728.

The fact that the company in favor of which the tax is voted is organized as a railroad and telegraph company will not affect its validity: Snell v. Leonard, 55-553.

Repeal of statute: Where, prior to the repeal of the act authorizing the levy of taxes in aid of a railroad in pursuance of a popular vote, the company in favor of which the tax is voted has expended money in constructing its road, relying upon such tax, it has a right, notwithstanding the repeal of the statute, to have the tax levied and collected in its favor: Burges v. Mabin, 70-633.

2083. Petition; notice; submission; certificate; levy; collection. 20 G. A., ch. 159, § 3. Whenever a petition shall be presented to the council or trustees of any incorporated town or city, or the trustees of any township signed by a majority of the resident freehold taxpayers of such township, incorporated city or town asking that the question of aiding any railroad company incorporated under the laws of the state of Iowa in the construction of a projected railroad within this state be submitted to the voters thereof, it shall be the duty of the trustees or council of such incorporated town or city or trustees of such township to immediately give notice of a special election by publication in some newspaper published in said incorporated town, city or township if any be published therein, and if not, then in some newspaper published in the county if any such there be and also by posting copies of said notice in five public places in such township, incorporated city or town at least ten days before said election which notice shall specify the time and place of holding said election, the name of the company and the line of the road proposed to be aided, the rate per centum of the tax to be levied, whether one-half of said tax shall be collected the first year and one-half the following year, or the whole thereof to be collected in one year, the amount of work required to be done, and when and where the same shall be done, to what point said railroad shall be fully completed and any other conditions which shall be performed before such tax or any part thereof shall become due, collectible and payable, and in no case shall such tax become due, collectible or payable until such railroad is fully completed according to the conditions in said notice. At such election the question of taxation shall be submitted. The form of the ballots shall be "for taxation" and "against taxation" and if a majority of the votes polled be "for taxation" then the recorder of the incorporated town, city or township clerk or clerk of election shall forthwith certify to the county auditor the result of said election, the rate per centum of tax thus voted, the year or years during which the same is to be collected, the name of the company to which voted, and the time, terms, and conditions upon which the same, when collected, is to be paid to the railroad company under the conditions and stipulations in said notice, together with an exact copy of the notice under which the election was held, which the county auditor shall at once cause to be recorded in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county; and the expense thereof and of publishing said notices and all the expenses of said election shall be paid by the railroad company to which it is proposed to vote said tax. When such certificates shall have been made and recorded the board of supervisors of the county shall, at the time of levying the ordinary tax next following, levy such taxes

The right to the tax and penalties and interest thereon is not taken away by the repeal of the statute under which the tax is voted, but repeal of the statute terminates the right to additional penalties: Tobin v. Hartshorn, 69-648.

The statute of limitations, as against an action to enforce a tax voted under a statute afterwards repealed, held to commence to run only in accordance with provisions of new statute: Harwood v. Brownell, 48-657.

Where a railroad was constructed by another corporation than that in whose behalf the tax was voted, and it did not appear that such construction was made in reliance upon the tax voted, or that the right to the tax was transferred to the other contracting road, held, that such tax could not be levied or collected after repeal of statute under which it was voted: Barthel v. Meader, 72-125.

Cities under special charter may vote a tax as here provided: Bartemeyer v. Rohlf's, 71-583.

as are voted under the provisions of this act as shown by said certificate, and cause the same to be placed on the tax lists of the proper township, incorporated city or town, indicating in their order thereupon when and in what proportion the same are to be collected and upon what conditions the same are to be paid to the railroad company, a certified copy of which order shall accompany the tax lists. Said taxes shall be collected at the time or times specified in said order in the same manner and subject to the same laws after they are collectible as other taxes, or as may be stated in the petition and notices for the election.

Petition for tax: A resident tax payer of the township may sign the petition for an election by the township to vote a tax in aid of a railroad, although he is also a resident and a voter of an incorporated town or city within the limits of such township: Ryan v. Varga, 37-78.

Under a previous statute, held, that one-third of the tax payers and not one-third of the resident tax payers must sign the petition: Zorger v. Township of Rapids, 36-175.

Action of trustees: The action of the township trustees in calling an election in pursuance of the petition, held to be of a judicial or quasi-judicial character, so that the question whether such action was illegal or without jurisdiction might be determined on certiorari: Jordan v. Hayne, 36-9.

The trustees may decide this question upon their own knowledge: Ibid.

Although the petition is not signed by the requisite number of tax payers, if the trustees have decided it to be sufficient and ordered an election, and the tax has been voted and levied, the validity of the tax cannot be assailed for such defect in the petition. The defect can only be taken advantage of in some method provided for direct review: Ryan v. Varga, 37-78; West v. Whitaker, 37-598.

But where the finding of the trustees was that the petition was signed by one-half of the resident freehold tax payers, when the statute required that it be signed by a majority, held, that although they ordered an election, subsequent proceedings were void: Slack v. Blackburn, 64-373.

Township embracing incorporated town: If the township embraces an incorporated town, and it is proposed that a township shall aid in the construction of the road, the voters in the corporation are entitled to vote at such election: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67-728.

Notice: The statute provides that the notice shall specify to what point the road shall be fully completed before the tax can be collected, and if the notice does not so specify the election will be void: Allard v. Guston, 70-731.

Ballots: Where the ballots upon the question of voting a tax in aid of a railroad were "taxation" and "no taxation," held, that the form of ballots was sufficient: West v. Whitaker, 37-598.

In a particular case, held, that the ballots were sufficient although they contained matter not necessary: Cattell v. Lowry, 45-478.

Undue influence at election: Where it appeared that an agent authorized by the company for whom the tax was being voted to represent it in procuring the voting of the tax for a compensation agreed upon made promises to voters that all resident tax payers who voted for the tax would receive fifty cents on the dollar on their certificates when issued, and thereby induced some of the voters to change their minds as to the vote which they would cast with reference to such tax, held, that the tax was thereby rendered illegal: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 66-728.

Where the submission of the proposition and its adoption are procured by false statements and fraudulent representations of the company and its agents the tax cannot be enforced: Sinnott v. Moles, 38-25.

Expenses of election in townships for the purpose of voting aid to railroads are not chargeable to the county: McBride v. Hardin County, 58-219.

Certificate as to result of election: The certificates of the clerk of election required by the statute in order to authorize the board of supervisors to levy a tax should set out the conditions under which the tax was voted, and it is not sufficient to attach and refer to the notice of the election in which such conditions are stated: Minnesota & I. S. R. Co. v. Hiams, 53-501.

Where the township clerk filed with the county auditor such records of proceedings as showed what was required to be certified by such clerk, held, that the certificate was sufficient to support the tax, although not contained in one paper; a substantial compliance with the law being deemed sufficient: Shontz v. Evans, 40-139.

Where there is a certificate which is defective, and the board of supervisors has determined that the certificate sufficiently complies with the law, the correctness of such decision cannot be collaterally attacked by an action to enjoin the collection of the tax: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67-728.

Where by mistake of the clerk the certificate has been improperly issued the collection of the tax may be restrained by injunction: Cattell v. Lowry, 45-478.

Levy: Where certain taxes were properly voted and certified, and the board of supervisors levied "all . . . railroad taxes that have been certified according to law," and the railroad tax in question was accordingly placed upon the tax list, held, that the levy was sufficient: Casady v. Lowry, 49-523.

The levy of a railroad aid tax held sufficient in a particular case, it being mentioned in the resolution enumerating the different taxes as "railroad tax" and being made certain as to amount by reference to the proper records of proceedings of the township for voting such tax: Shontz v. Evans, 40-139.

Where a committee of the board of supervisors recommended in a report that certain taxes be levied, which included the tax in question, and it appeared from the record that the report was adopted, the names of those voting in favor thereof being given, held, that the levy was sufficient: West v. Whitaker, 37-598.

A levy of taxes in different townships is to be considered as distinct, even though such separate levies are made by one resolution: Woodworth v. Gibbs, 61-398.

The action of the board in making the levy is not judicial but purely ministerial; their action in so doing may be questioned in a collateral proceeding, and held void for want of power to do it at the time it was done: Scott v. Union County, 63-583.

Authority to vote and levy the tax rests upon a substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute in the performance of the conditions upon which the authority is granted: Allard v. Guston, 70-731.

Under 12 G. A., ch. 48, held, that no levy by the board of a tax properly voted by a township was necessary, and that therefore such levy could not be compelled by mandamus: Chicago, D. & M. R. Co. v. Olmstead, 46-316.

Where a tax in aid of a railway was voted in March, held, that the levy was properly made upon the assessment of the same year, although the books were not returned until after that date: Parsons v. Childs, 36-108.

As to levy, see Bartemeyer v. Rohlf's, 71-582.

Entry of tax on tax list held not necessary under 12 G. A., ch. 48: Harwood v. Brownell, 48-657.

Validity: Where the validity of such a tax has been adjudicated in an action against the treasurer and the board of supervisors by parties claiming the tax, it cannot, in the absence of collusion or fraud, be again called in question in an action by a tax payer against the treasurer to enjoin its collection: Lyman v. Paris, 53-498.

Collection of tax: Although it may be the duty of the treasurer to proceed to collect the tax when due, he could not, under previous statutes, be compelled by the company to do so until it had showed itself entitled thereto: Harwood v. Case, 37-692.

Under a subsequent statute the tax did not become delinquent until the company was entitled to the tax and the whole amount thereof, and as to taxes levied before the passage of such act, held, though retrospective, it was not invalid: Ibid.

Where it appeared that the company was entitled to only a part of the tax, and such part was not claimed merely as an instalment, held, that the part claimed would not be regarded as an instalment, but in satisfaction of the whole tax, and as such might be collected: Casady v. Lowery, 49-523.

The county has no interest in the tax collected, and if it is to be refunded it should be refunded by the treasurer without any warrant or order of the board of supervisors. In the case of misappropriation by the treasurer the loss would not fall upon the county: Barnes v. Marshall County, 56-20.

A claim for the refunding of a portion of the tax is against the fund and not against the county: Ibid.

The county cannot be made liable for any part of a railroad tax paid into the county treasury. Where a railroad tax illegally collected remains in the treasury the proper officer may be compelled to refund the same by an action against him, but an action for the amount cannot be maintained against the county: Eyerly v. Jasper County, 72-149.

Where such taxes do not remain in the hands of the treasurer as a distinct fund, but have been placed in the general fund and expended in paying ordinary indebtedness of the county, judgment may be rendered against the county therefor: Merrill v. Marshall County, 74-24.

Conditions and stipulations: No contract, stipulation or reservation could, under the previous act, be set up to defeat the tax unless it was in writing: Muscatine Western R. Co. v. Horton, 38-33; Harwood v. Quinby, 44-385.

The omission to state in the levy the condition upon which it is to be paid to the company will not render the levy invalid when the condition was complied with before the levy: Burges v. Malin, 70-633.

Where a condition on which the taxes in aid of a railroad was that "the road should be built and in operation" by the time fixed, held, that such condition was sufficiently complied with if the trains were running by the time specified, although it was necessary in order to the completion of the road that it be ballasted and additional ties put in: Muscatine Western R. Co. v. Horton, 38-33.

Where the road is completed in accordance with the conditions of a written contract between the company and the township voting the tax, a failure of the company to comply with the just expectations of the voters which have not been embodied in such contract will not forfeit the tax: Ibid.

Where one of the conditions on which a tax was voted was that the road should be constructed and operated, and a depot located within a town named, on or before a certain day, and by that date the depot was partially erected and a track was laid for the distance of a mile from such depot, and the road was operated, although not in a first-class manner, the track not being ballasted, held, that there was a sufficient compliance with the conditions of the tax to entitle the railway to the same: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67-723.

In a particular case, held, that the construction of the road was not such as to constitute a compliance with the conditions on which the aid tax had been voted: Cox v. Forest City & S. R. Co., 66-289.

Where a tax was voted to be expended in three townships mentioned, held, that it appearing that more than the amount of tax voted had been expended in the township in question, the company was entitled to the tax in that township although nothing had been expended in the other two townships: Merrill v. Welsher, 50-61.

Also, held, that the fact that the line of the road was changed so that it did not pass through one of the townships specified, would not prevent the collection of the tax in the township through which it did pass: Ibid.

Also, held, under a special statute, that a mere suspension of work and failure to build the road for the period of four years mentioned in such statute was not the non-fulfillment of a special contract or agreement as therein specified, and did not amount to a forfeiture of the tax: Ibid.

Where the articles of incorporation of the company declared its purpose to be to construct a railroad by the way of Newton, in Newton township, and the petition and notice for the voting of a tax in that township specified that it was for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the road to be expended in Newton and another township named, held, that without the construction of the line to Newton the tax in Newton township could not be enforced, although double the amount of such tax had been expended in the other township: Lamb v. Anderson, 54-190.

It is a sufficient designation of the terminal point of a proposed line to state that it is to run in a certain direction to the connection with another line. It is sufficient completion of the line that the track is laid and cars run thereon: Yarish v. Cedar Rapids, I. F. & N. W. R. Co., 72-556.

Where a paper was signed by the president of a company, bearing the seal of the corporation, and was circulated among the electors on the day of election, containing certain stipulations in regard to the construction of the road for which the tax was being voted, held, that the provisions of such paper became binding upon the company: Meeker v. Ashley, 56-188.

Where the president of the company made statements at a public meeting called to discuss the voting of a tax in aid of a railway, which tended to induce tax payers to believe that the road, if built, would be located upon a line already surveyed and known to them, and afterwards the road was built upon a different line, less advantageous to the tax payers, held, that the collection of the tax could be enjoined: Curry v. Supervisors, 61-71.

As to notice, see Bartemeyer v. Rohlfes, 71-582.

Narrow Gauge: Where a tax was voted in aid of a railroad between certain termini and a narrow gauge road was constructed, held, that that fact would not defeat the company's right to the tax, it not having been specified in the notice of election what the gauge of the road should be, and it appearing that the road as constructed answered the purpose of the tax payers: Meador v. Lowry, 45-684.

And in such case, held, that the township trustees were not guilty of any fraud in certifying the construction of the road as contemplated in the notice submitting the question of levying the tax: Ibid.

The construction of a narrow gauge road having sufficient capacity for all the business to be done, and capable of doing it as economically as a road of any other gauge, is a sufficient compliance with the provisions for the voting of the tax, where no stipulation as to the gauge is made, to entitle the company to the tax voted: Casady v. Lowry, 49-523.

Estoppel. Where conditions and representations have not been complied with, the tax payer will not be estopped from enjoining the collection of the tax by the fact that the road has been built, where it appears that notice was given to the company before the construction of the road upon the new line that the tax would be contested on the ground of fraud and false representations: Curry v. Supervisors, 61-71.

Where it is not shown that the party objecting to the validity of a railroad aid tax had any knowledge thereof at the time it was expended, he will not be estopped from questioning its validity afterward: Truesdell v. Green, 57-215.

Purchase or leasing of another road: The leasing or purchase and operation of a line of road as a part or whole of the line for the construction of which the tax is voted will not constitute a compliance with the agreement to construct such road: Lamb v. Anderson, 54-190; Meeker v. Ashley, 56-188; Iowa, M. & N. P. R. Co. v. Schenck, 56-628; Lawrence v. Smith, 57-701.

Alienation: Where the company to which a tax has been voted has, upon the faith of the tax, constructed the road and put it in operation, such company becomes entitled to the tax, and this right is not forfeited by a subsequent alienation of the road to another company: Parsons v. Childs, 36-108.

The fact that a road in aid of which taxes are voted is sold at or before the time of its completion to another company will not defeat the right of the company in whose favor the tax is voted to receive the same: Muscatine Western R. Co. v. Horton, 38-33.

The alienation of the road before the payment of the tax, so that shares of stock in the road for which the tax was voted can no longer be issued to those holding certificates for the payment of such taxes as provided by statute, is a ground for setting such tax aside and releasing the tax payer from his burden: Manning v. Mathews, 66-675; Blunt v. Carpenter, 68-265.

The right of the tax payer to receive such certificates of stock in exchange for his receipts for taxes paid cannot be set aside by agreement or waiver: Blunt v. Carpenter, 68-265.

But a consolidation under terms securing to the tax payer equivalent stock in the consolidated company will not avoid the tax (see § 1997): Cantillon v. Dubuque & N. W. R. Co., 78-48.

But the lease of the road in favor of which the tax is voted in perpetuity to another road, by which the latter agrees to operate the line and pay the lessor company a per cent. of the gross earnings, it not appearing that the contract of lease is inequitable or not beneficial to the company constructing the road, will not deprive the company of the right to the tax: Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Shea, 67-728.

The county having collected a railroad aid tax cannot resist payment of it to the company on the ground that the company has sold and conveyed its property and franchises. Such a defense can only be interposed by the tax payer: Merrill v. Marshall County, 74-34.

Change of line: The fact that, after a tax in aid of a railroad is voted, the location of the line in a part of its course is changed, which change, however, is not in conflict with any of the conditions upon which the tax is voted, will not affect its validity: Shontz v. Evans, 40-139.

A private individual cannot, on account of private injuries to him alone, maintain an action of mandamus to compel a railway company which has received the benefit of taxes voted by the public to operate its line as it was originally located: Crane v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 74-330.

2084. Notice; conditions; limit of tax. 20 G. A., ch. 159, § 4. The stipulations and conditions contained in the said notices must conform to those set forth in the petition asking the election, and the aggregate amount of tax to be voted or levied under the provisions of this act in any township, incorporated town or city shall not exceed five per centum of the assessed value of the property therein respectively.

Under the statutory provision that a township, town or city, having voted a tax to the amount of five per centum upon its taxable property in aid of railroads, cannot impose another tax upon property for that purpose, held, that the power conferred to levy such taxes ceases upon a levy of taxes to that amount, but that taxes duly levied which have been abandoned or become uncollectible cannot be taken into account: Dumphy v. Supervisors of Humboldt County, 58-273.

An increase in value of taxable property after levy of the five per centum of taxes does not confer the power to make an additional levy: Ibid.

Taxes levied under a prior act providing for such taxation, although such act contained the same limitation as the present act, cannot be taken into account in determining whether the limit fixed in the present act has been exceeded: Scott v. Union County, 63-583.

Where, at the time of voting the tax under the present act, a prior tax of five per cent. stood uncanceled, but before the levy of the tax thus voted the prior tax was canceled, held, that the second tax was valid. The statute should be construed as if it provided that the aggregate amount of tax to be voted and levied shall not exceed five per cent.: Williams v. Poor, 65-410.

Penalties accruing on a railroad aid tax are not to be taken into account in determining whether the amount of the tax exceeds the limit fixed by statute: Tobin v. Hartshorn, 69-648; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Hartshorn, 30 Fed. Rep., 541.

2085. Money paid out; certificate. 20 G. A., ch. 159, § 5. The moneys collected under the provisions of this act shall be paid out by the county treasurer to the treasurer of the railroad company for whom the same was voted upon the orders of the president or managing director thereof at any time after the trustees of such township, or trustees or council of such incorporated town or city voting said tax, or a majority of them, shall have certified to the county treasurer that the conditions required of the railroad company and set forth in the notice for the special election at which the tax was voted have been complied with, and said township trustees, or trustees or council of such incorporated town or city shall make said certificate when the said conditions have been complied with sufficiently to entitle the said railroad company to the amount of such orders, or when the said conditions are fully complied with and performed on the part of the railroad company; but if the costs and expenses of holding said election and of recording said certificates shall not have been paid by the railroad company, then the county treasurer shall first deduct from the moneys so collected the amount of said costs and expenses and pay the same over to the parties entitled thereto.

[By § 527 the township trustees are authorized to employ counsel in litigation to which they are made parties, concerning their right or duty to levy taxes which have been authorized upon express conditions.]

Fee for collection: The treasurer is not authorized to deduct from the tax collected three per cent. for its collection. Sec. 5067 does not authorize such deduction: Merrill v. Marshall County, 74-

Certificate: The certificate of the township trustees of the compliance of the company with the terms on which the tax is voted need only be properly signed. It need not appear that there is a previous resolution or order authorizing its issuance: Merrill v. Welsher, 50-61.

Under a certificate in such case that the company had "so complied with the act as to entitle it to draw the sum of," etc., held, that as the company could not have been entitled to draw any sum until it had complied with the act, the certificate was sufficient: Casady v. Lowry, 49-523.

The certificate of the trustees is not a judicial act and is not conclusive, its only purpose being to authorize the treasurer to pay over the funds collected. It has nothing to do with the treasurer's right to collect the tax: Lamb v. Anderson, 54-190.

The duty of the trustees as to giving a certificate of completion of a road is only to determine whether it is completed, and they should not refuse to give it on the ground of fraud in the election, or in the certificate of the engineers: Harwood v. Quinby, 44-385.

An action to enforce the duty imposed on the trustees to make such certificate does not become barred as to a tax already voted until three years after the passage of the act limiting the time for making such certificate: Ibid.

The fact that the certificate of the trustees is given at a place outside of their township will not render it absolutely void: Meador v. Lowry, 45-684.

Also, held, that the proper trustees to make the certificate were those of the township which had voted the tax, although afterward portions of the township were organized into or transferred to another township: Ibid.

Assignment: The claim for a railroad aid tax is assignable: Merrill v. Welsher, 50-61.

The assignment of such a tax does not discharge the assignee of the equities between the company in favor of which the tax was voted and the tax payers, and in a suit by a tax payer to invalidate such a tax because of the non-fulfillment of conditions precedent on the part of the railroad company, the company in whose favor the tax was voted and the assignee of such tax are necessary parties. So, also, the township trustees and the county treasurer are to be made parties defendant: Sully v. Drennan, 113 U. S., 287.

2086. Certificate of taxes exchangeable for stock or bonds. 20 G. A., ch. 159, § 6. It shall be the duty of the county treasurer, when required, in addition to a tax receipt to issue to each tax payer on the payment of any taxes voted under the provisions of this act a certificate showing the amount of tax so paid, the name of the railroad company entitled thereto, and when the same was paid, and the treasurer shall be entitled to charge and receive the sum of twenty-five cents for each certificate so issued. Said certificates are hereby made assignable and when presented by any person holding the legal title thereto to the president, managing director, treasurer or secretary of the railroad company receiving the taxes paid as shown by such certificate, in amount showing the sum of one hundred dollars or more of taxes to have been paid for said railroad company, said railroad company shall issue or cause to be issued to said person the amount of stock of the company desiring the benefit from said taxes to the amount of said certificate or certificates, and if the taxes paid as shown by said certificate or certificates amount in the aggregate to more or less than any certain number of shares of said stock, then the holder of said certificates shall be entitled to receive the full number of shares of stock covered by said certificates and may make up and tender in money the balance of any share of said stock when the certificates held by him are not equal in amount to one full share of such stock, the stock for such purpose to be estimated at its par value. Whenever it shall be proposed in the petition and notice calling said election to issue first mortgages, bonds, not exceeding the sum of eight thousand dollars per mile for a railroad of three feet gauge and not exceeding the sum of sixteen thousand dollars per mile for the ordinary four feet eight and one-half inch gauge, in lieu of stock as herein provided, it shall be lawful to issue said bonds of the denomination of one hundred dollars in the same manner as is provided for the issue of stock, and in such case the petition and notice shall state the amount of bonds per mile to be issued, the rate of interest, and the time of payment of the interest and principal of said bonds.

If the company to which a tax has been voted transfers its property and franchises so that the tax payer cannot secure the stock to which he is entitled, the collection of the tax cannot be enforced. The tax payer cannot be compelled to take stock in another corporation, even though more valuable: Manning v. Mat- thews, 66-675; Blunt v. Carpenter, 68-265. But a consolidation under terms which secure to the tax payer equivalent stock in the consolidated company will not avoid the tax (see § 1997): Cantillon v. Dubuque & N. W. R. Co., 78-48.

2087. Liability of directors. 20 G. A., ch. 159, § 7. The board of directors of any railroad company receiving taxes voted in aid thereof under the provisions of this act, or those members thereof or either of them who shall vote to bond, mortgage, or in any manner incumber said road to an amount exceeding the sum of eight thousand dollars per mile for a railroad of three feet gauge, or exceeding the sum of sixteen thousand dollars per mile for the ordinary four feet eight and one-half inch gauge, not including in either case any debt for ordinary operating expenses, shall be liable to the stockholders or either of them for double the amount estimated of its par value of the stock by him or her held, if the same should be rendered of less value or lost thereby.

2088. Forfeiture of tax. 20 G. A., ch. 159, § 8. Should the taxes voted in aid of any railroad under the provisions of this act remain in the county treasury for more than one year after the same have been collected, the right to them by the railroad company shall be considered forfeited, and the persons who paid the said taxes shall be entitled to receive back from the county treasurer their pro-rata shares thereof remaining, and in all such cases where any taxes have been voted or levied upon the real or personal property in any township, city or town in any county in this state to aid in the construction of any railroad as hereinbefore provided, and the railroad in aid of which said taxes were voted or levied has not been built or completed or operated into or through such township, city or town, it shall be the duty of the board of supervisors of the county where said taxes have been voted and levied and still remain on the tax books, to give the railroad company to which the tax was voted at least thirty days' notice in writing, to be served like original notices, of their intention to abate and cancel such taxes, and thereupon to cause the same to be canceled and stricken from the tax books of the county, which cancellation shall remove all liens created by the levy of said taxes; but the foregoing provisions shall in no manner affect any actions which may now be pending for the recovery of any taxes heretofore voted in aid of any railroads; and in all cases where the railroad company to whom any taxes may have been or may hereafter be voted, neglects or refuses to receive such taxes or to require or permit the same to be collected and certificates therefor to be issued for the period of one year after such taxes become due and collectible, and in all cases where any taxes have been heretofore voted in aid of any railroad and the conditions upon which the same were voted have not in fact been complied with and the time in which said conditions were to be fulfilled has expired, all such taxes are hereby declared forfeited and canceled and the county officers of the county in which any such taxes shall have been levied and entered upon the tax books shall enter cancellation thereof upon the proper county records; and in all cases where any taxes to aid in the construction of any railroad may hereafter be voted upon the inducement or promise offered on the part of said railroad company, or any duly authorized agent thereof, for any rebate or exemption from said tax or any part thereof, or any agreed price to be paid for the stock that may be issued in lieu of said tax, or a division of said tax or any portion or percentage thereof, with any of the voters or tax payers as an inducement to procure said tax to be voted, all such taxes so procured to be voted are and shall be absolutely void.

The fact that a portion of the tax voted in aid of the railroad has been paid, and, after having lain in the treasury two years uncalled for, has been refunded to the tax payer as provided by statute, does not operate as a forfeiture of taxes not so paid: Merrill v. Welsher, 50-61.

Where the road has been completed and there has been a continuing demand of taxes received by the treasurer, the right to recover taxes received will not be defeated by the fact that they have remained in the treasury more than two years. The provision was intended to secure the speedy and prompt building of the road: Merrill v. Marshall County, 74-24.

Under a former statute, held, that the county had no interest in the tax collected; that it was to be paid to the county treasurer, and in proper case should be refunded by him without any warrant or order of the board of supervisors; that in case of misappropriation by the county treasurer the loss would not fall upon the county, and that the claim of plaintiff for the refunding of his proportion of the tax forfeited was strictly against the fund, and not against the county: Barnes v. Marshall County, 56-20.

2089. Taxes paid in labor or supplies. 20 G. A., ch. 159, § 9. Nothing contained in this act shall preclude any tax payer who may contract with a railroad company for which taxes shall have been or may hereafter be voted under the provisions of this act, to pay his tax thus voted or any part thereof in labor upon the line of said railroad, or in material for its construction, or supplies furnished or money paid for the construction of the road in pursuance of the terms and conditions stipulated in the notices of election in lieu of a payment to the county treasurer. Upon presenting to the county treasurer a receipt from said railroad company or its duly authorized agent specifying the amount of such payment, the same shall be credited by the county treasurer on his tax in aid of said railroad, with the effect in all respects as though the same was paid in money to the said county treasurer; and when such receipts have been presented and thus credited by the county treasurer they shall have the same force and validity in his settlement with the board of supervisors as the orders from the railroad company provided for in section four [five] of this act [§ 2085]; and provided, laborers shall have lien upon said tax so voted in aid of a railroad company for the amount due them for labor performed in the construction of said railroad.

Where the company issued to a tax payer a receipt for taxes paid directly to the company, to be presented to the county treasurer in payment of the taxes, held, that such receipts were in the nature of advance receipts for the taxes, and that no action thereon against the company or the assignor of such instrument could be maintained thereon, at least until demand has been made on the treasurer that they be received for taxes: Lisle v. Iowa, M. & N. P. R. Co., 54-499.

UNION RAILWAY DEPOTS.

2090. Corporations formed. 20 G. A., ch. 139, § 1. In order to facilitate the public convenience and safety in the transmission of freight and passengers from one railway to another and to prevent unnecessary expense and inconvenience attending the accumulation of a number of stations in one place, authority is hereby given to any number of persons or any number of railway corporations or both persons and railway corporations to form themselves into a body corporate under the general incorporation laws of this state relating to corporations for pecuniary profit for the purpose of acquiring, establishing, constructing and maintaining at any place in this state union station-houses or depots for freight or passengers, or for both, with necessary offices for express, baggage and postal rooms in the same or separate buildings, railroad tracts [tracks] and other appurtenances of such depots. And for that purpose may make and file for record articles of association in the manner provided for such corporations in this state, and any railroad company operating a road in this state or interested in the operation of a road in this state, whether organized under the laws of this state or elsewhere, may become stockholder in such corporation in the same manner an individual might. Such articles may provide for the business of the corporation being conducted under by-laws to be adopted by the stockholders, in which case a copy of such by-laws shall be posted in the passenger or waiting rooms of the depot and in the office of the company.

of said city, and by and with the consent of such city council may erect such depot upon or across any such street or alley, but no railroad track can thus be located, nor can such depot be so erected until after due injury to property abutting upon the streets or alleys upon which such railway track is proposed to be located or such depot is proposed to be erected, has been ascertained and compensation made in the manner provided for taking private property for works of internal improvement in chapter four of title ten of the code, subject to the provisions of section four hundred and sixty-four of the code [§ 623].

2093. Liability for damages. 20 G. A., ch. 139, § 4. Nothing in this act contained, or in the articles of incorporation or by-laws, of the corporation herein provided for, shall in any manner release the railroad companies using such union depots, tracks or appurtenances from the same liability for all damages by injuries to persons, stock, baggage or freight, or for the loss of baggage or freight, in or about said union depot grounds as if said depot, tracks and appurtenances wholly belonged to and were operated by said railroad companies using the same.

STATION-HOUSES AT INTERSECTIONS.

2094. Railroads to maintain. 20 G. A., ch. 24, § 1. All railroad corporations shall at all points of connection, crossing, or intersection with the roads of other corporations, unite with such corporations in establishing and maintaining suitable platforms and station-houses for the convenience of passengers desiring to transfer from one road to the other, and for the transfer of passengers, baggage or freight, whenever the same shall be ordered by the railroad commission; and such corporation shall, when so ordered by the railroad commission, keep such depot or passenger-house warmed, lighted and opened to the ingress and egress of all passengers a reasonable time before the arrival and until after the departure of all trains carrying passengers on said railroad or railroads; and said railroad companies so connecting, crossing or intersecting, shall stop all trains at said depots at said connections, crossings or intersections, for the transfer of passengers, baggage and freight, when so ordered by the railroad commission, and the expense of constructing and maintaining such station-house and platform shall be paid by such corporations in such proportions as may be fixed by the order of the railroad commission. Such corporations, connecting or intersecting as aforesaid, shall also, whenever ordered by the railroad commission, so unite and connect the tracks of said several corporations as to permit the transfer from the track of one corporation to the other of loaded or unloaded cars designed for transportation upon both roads.

2095. Penalty. 20 G. A., ch. 24, § 2. Any railroad corporation or company which, after having received ninety days' notice by the railroad commissioners, shall neglect or refuse to comply with the provisions of section one of this act [§ 2094], shall, for every day such corporations or company fails, neglects or refuses to comply therewith, forfeit and pay the sum of twenty-five dollars, which may be recovered in the name of the state of Iowa, for the use of the school fund of the county wherein such crossing or intersection is situated, and it shall be the duty of the prosecuting [county] attorney of the proper judicial district [county] to prosecute for and recover the same.

CHANGING NAMES OF STATIONS.

2096. By railroad commissioners. 22 G. A., ch. 31, § 1. In all cases where any railway company shall fail or refuse to make the name of a railway station conform to the name of the incorporated town within the limits of which it is situated, the railway commissioners of the state, upon hearing and after notice thereof may order a change in the name of the said station to effect such uniformity in name, said notice may be served upon the same persons and in the same manner as provided for service upon said railway company of original notice, at least ten days before the date named for hearing.

2098. Penalty. 22 G. A., ch. 31, § 3. A failure to comply with the order of the railway commissioners within thirty days from service of such notice, shall constitute a misdemeanor for which said railway company shall be subject to a fine of one thousand dollars and non-compliance for each thirty days thereafter shall constitute a separate and distinct offense, subject to a fine of one thousand dollars.

REGULATIONS AS TO OFFICES.

2099. Where maintained. 16 G. A., ch. 68, § 1. All railroads terminating in Iowa, shall establish and maintain at such terminus, general freight and passenger offices (and express and telegraph offices, when operating an independent express or telegraph company), at localities accessible and convenient to the public, and there keep for sale tickets over their respective roads, and in advertising, correctly set forth their true connections, starting or terminal points, time-tables and freight tariffs, affording correct information to the business and traveling public.

2100. Penalty. 16 G. A., ch. 68, § 2. If any officer, agent, employee or lessee engaged in operating any railroad, express company or telegraph line, terminating in or operated within the state of Iowa, shall refuse or neglect to comply with any of the provisions or requirements of section one of this act [§ 2099], he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars, and may be imprisoned not more than six months.

SLEEPING-CARS.

2101. Office kept open. 18 G. A., ch. 169, § 1. All railroad and sleeping-car companies running or operating sleepers or sleeping-cars within this state, upon railroads terminating therein, shall establish, maintain and keep open to the public at such termini, ticket offices at accessible and convenient places in which they shall keep a diagram of the berths, and state-rooms in such sleepers or sleeping-cars, and shall at all times during the day-time keep such offices open for the sale of tickets for such berths and state-rooms.

2102. Penalty. 18 G. A., ch. 169, § 2. If any officer, agent, employee, or lessee, engaged in operating any sleeper or sleeping-car line, terminating or operated within the state of Iowa, shall refuse or neglect to comply with any of the provisions or requirements of section one of this act [§ 2101] he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars and may be imprisoned not more than six months.

CHAPTER 6.

OF TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE LINES.

2103. Right of way. 1324; 19 G. A., ch. 104. Any person or company may construct a telegraph or telephone line along the public highways of this state or across the rivers or over any lands belonging to the state or to any private individual, and may erect the necessary fixtures therefor; provided, that when any highway along which said line has been constructed shall be changed, said person or company shall, upon ninety days' notice in writing, remove said line to said highway as established. Said notice contemplated herein may be served on any agent or operator in the employ of said person or company. [R., § 1348; C., '51, § 780.]

Both telegraph and telephone are used for distant communication by means of wire stretched over different jurisdictions. The fundamental principle in each, by which communication is procured, is the same, and the statutes with reference to telegraph companies are in general applicable to telephone companies: Iowa Union Telephone Co. v. Board of Equalization, 67-250; Franklin v. Northwestern Telephone Co., 69-97.

2104. How constructed. 1325. Such fixtures must not be so constructed as to incommode the public in the use of any highway or the navigation of any stream; nor shall they be set up on the private grounds of any individual without paying him a just equivalent for the damages he thereby sustains. [R., § 1349; C., '51, § 781.]

[The word "so" in the first line is erroneously omitted in the Code.]

2105. Damages assessed. 1326. If the person over whose lands such telegraph line passes claims more damage therefor than the proprietor of the telegraph is willing to pay, the amount of damages may be determined in the same manner as is provided in chapter four of this title. [R., § 1350; C., '51, § 782.]

2106. Liability for refusing to transmit. 1327. If the proprietor of any telegraph within this state, or the person having the control and management thereof, refuses to receive dispatches from any other telegraph line, or to transmit the same with fidelity and without unreasonable delay, all the laws of the state in relation to limited partnerships, to corporations, and to obtaining private property for the use of such telegraph shall cease to operate in favor of the proprietor thereof; and, if private property has been taken for the use of such telegraph without the consent of the owner, he may reclaim and recover the same. [R., § 1351; C., '51, § 783.]

2107. Penalty. 1328. Any person employed in transmitting messages by telegraph, must do so without unreasonable delay, and any one who willfully fails thus to transmit them, or who intentionally transmits a message erroneously, or makes known the contents of any message sent or received to any person except him to whom it is addressed, or to his agent or attorney, is guilty of a misdemeanor. [R., § 1352; C., '51, § 784.]

This does not excuse an operator from producing the telegrams which have passed between parties when subpoenaed as a witness in an action between them as to the transaction to which they relate: Woods v. Miller, 55-168.

2108. Liable for mistakes. 1329. The proprietor of a telegraph is liable for all mistakes in transmitting messages made by any person in his employment, and for all damages resulting from a failure to perform any other duties required by law. [R., § 1353; C., '51, § 785.]

A company may insert, in a contract under which a message is sent, a condition exempting it from liability for mistake made from unavoidable causes, provided proper instruments have been used and proper care and skill exercised by the company's employees to avoid or prevent mistake; but it cannot make general printed regulations which shall have the effect to relieve it from liability for improper conduct or negligence of its servants: Sweatland v. Ill. & Miss. Tel. Co., 27-433; Manville v. Western Union Tel. Co., 37-214.

Where the company has been released from liability except for its own negligence the party seeking to recover from it must make out such negligence: Ibid.

A telegraph company may contract to restrict its liability, but it cannot contract against its own negligence in failing to transmit and deliver a message: Harkness v. Western Union Tel. Co., 73-190.

To entitle a party to recover for a mistake in the transmission of a message he must prove something more than mistake and damage. He must show that the mistake was caused by the fault of the company, and that it might have been avoided if defendant's instruments had been good ones and his agents had been skillful operators and exercised the proper diligence in respect to the transmission and receipt of the message in question: Aikin v. Western Union Tel. Co., 69-31.

An instruction imposing liability upon a company upon proof of a mistake without evidence of negligence, and also the burden of proving that there was no negligence by reason of the mistake occurring through uncontrollable causes, held erroneous: Ibid.

In an action to recover damages for mistake in the transmission of a message, held, that the plaintiff to whom the message was delivered might testify as to what the message directed, as tending to show his good faith in acting thereunder, such evidence bearing upon the question whether the plaintiff, in the exercise of ordinary diligence and intelligence, was authorized to interpret the language of the dispatch as he did: Ibid.

An action for mistake in the transmission of a message from a broker to his principal may be brought by the principal in his own name: Ibid.

Where an agent sends or receives a telegram for the benefit and use of an undisclosed principal such principal may recover damages sustained by reason of the negligence or delay of the company in delivering it, and the recovery cannot be limited to the amount which the agent could have recovered for damages sustained by him individually: Harkness v. Western Union Tel. Co., 73-190.

TAXATION OF TELEGRAPH LINES.

These provisions as to taxation of telegraph companies are applicable to telephone companies: Iowa Union Telephone Co. v. Board of Equalization, 67-250.

2111. Assessment. 17 G. A., ch. 59, § 3. Upon the receipt of the said statement from the several companies, the auditor of state shall lay the same before the state board of equalization at its meeting on the second Monday in July in each year, which shall proceed to assess said telegraph lines at the true cash value thereof.

2112. Rate of tax. 17 G. A., ch. 59, § 4. The said state board shall also, at said meeting, determine the rate of tax to be levied and collected upon said assessment, which shall not exceed the average rate of taxes, general, municipal and local, levied throughout the state during the previous year, which rate shall be ascertained from the records and files in the auditor's office, which tax shall be in lieu of all other taxes, state and local, and shall be payable into the state treasury.

2113. When due; collection. 17 G. A., ch. 59, § 5. The taxes levied as provided by this chapter, shall become due and payable at the state treasury on the first day of February, following the levy thereof, and if said taxes are not paid as herein provided, it shall be the duty of the treasurer of state to collect the same by distress and sale of any property belonging to such company in the state, in the same manner as required of county treasurers, in like cases, by section eight hundred and fifty-eight of the code [§ 1340]; and the record of the state board in such case shall be sufficient warrant therefor.

2115. Penalty. 17 G. A., ch. 59, § 7. If the officers of any company fail to make and file the report required by section two of this act [§ 2110] such neglect shall not release its lines from taxation, but the state board shall proceed to assess the line notwithstanding, adding thereto thirty per centum on the assessable value thereof.

2116. 17 G. A., ch. 59, § 8. All acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

TITLE XI.

OF THE POLICE OF THE STATE.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE SETTLEMENT AND SUPPORT OF THE POOR.

2117. Who liable to maintain. 1330. The father, mother, and children of any poor person who is unable to maintain himself by work, shall, jointly or severally, relieve or maintain such poor person in such manner as may be approved by the trustees of the township where such poor person may be; but these officers shall have no control unless the poor person has applied for aid. [R., § 1355; C., '51, § 787.]

A child is not liable for the support of a parent except as provided by statute, and such liability can be enforced only in the manner specified; but the obligation of a parent to support a child until maturity is a perfect common-law duty: Dawson v. Dawson, 12-512.

Where one was afflicted with disease and cruelly treated by the members of his family, so that he was driven from home, held, that he was a poor person within the meaning of this section, although he had property which was appropriated and withheld from him by such family; and therefore that the son was liable to an action by the county for support furnished to him, and that the county, although having the right of action against the wife, might waive it and enforce recovery against the son: Jasper County v. Osborn, 59-208.

2118. Same. 1331. In the absence or inability of nearer relatives, the same liability shall extend to the grandparents, if of ability without personal labor, and to the male grandchildren who are of ability by personal labor or otherwise.

2119. Putative father. 1332. The word "father" in this chapter includes the putative father of an illegitimate child, and the question of his being the father may be tried in any action or proceeding to recover for, or to compel the support of an illegitimate child. But there shall be no obligation to proceed against the putative father before proceeding against the mother. [R., § 1356; C., '51, § 788.]

The county is not required to thus proceed against the father of an illegitimate child before proceeding against the mother: McAndrew v. Madison County, 67-54.

After recognition of an illegitimate child the father is chargeable with its support, the same as with that of a legitimate child: State v. Hastings, 74-574

2120. Proceeding to compel. 1333. Upon the failure of such relatives so to relieve or maintain a poor person who has made application for relief, the township trustees may apply to the circuit [district] court of the county where such poor person resides, for an order to compel the same, and all provisions of this chapter relating to trustees shall apply to any other officers of a county, township, or incorporated town, or city, charged with the oversight of the poor. [R., § 1357; C., '51, § 789.]

2121. Notice. 1334. At least ten days' notice of the application shall be given in writing, which shall be served as original notice in an action. In such proceedings the county is plaintiff, and the person to be charged is defendant. [R., § 1358; C., '51, § 790.]

2122. Same. 1335. The court shall make no order affecting a person not served, but may notify him at any stage of the proceedings. [R., § 1359; C., '51, § 791.]

2123. Hearing. 1336. The court may proceed in a summary manner to hear the allegations and proofs of the parties, and order any one or more of the relatives of such poor person who appear to be able, to relieve and maintain him, charging them, as far as practicable, in the order above named, and for that purpose making new parties to the proceedings when necessary. [R., § 1360; C., '51, § 792.]

2124. Order. 1337. Such order may be for the entire or partial support of the poor person, and it may be for the support, either by money or by taking the poor person to a relative's house, or the order may assign the poor person for a certain time to one, and for another period to another relative, as may be adjudged just and convenient, taking into view the means of the several relatives; but no person shall be sent to the house of any relative who shall be willing to pay the amount necessary for his support. [R., § 1361; C., '51, § 793.]

2125. Money value. 1338. If the court order the relief in any other manner than in money, it shall fix a just weekly value upon it. [R., § 1362.]

2126. Change. 1339. The order may be specific in point of time, or it may be indefinite until the further order of the court, and may be varied from time to time when the circumstances require it, on the application of the trustees, of the poor person, or of any relative affected by it, upon ten days' notice being given. [R., § 1363; C., '51, § 795.]

2127. Payment. 1340. When money is ordered to be paid, it shall be paid to such officer as the court may direct. [R., § 1364; C., '51, § 796.]

2129. Appeal. 1342. An appeal may be taken from such judgment as from other judgments of the circuit [district] court. [R., § 1366; C., '51, § 798.]

[The word "any" is erroneously substituted for "an" in the first line in the printed Code.]

2130. Abandonment; seizure of property. 1343. Whenever a father, or mother, abandons children, or husband abandons his wife, or wife her husband, leaving them chargeable, or likely to become chargeable, upon the public for their support, the trustees of the township where such abandoned person may be, upon application being made to them, may apply to the clerk of the circuit [district] court or judge thereof of any county in which the parties reside, or in which any estate of such absconding father, mother, husband or wife, may be, for an order to seize the same, and, upon due proof of the above facts, the clerk of the court or judge may issue an order authorizing the trustees or the sheriff of the county to take into their possession the goods, chattels, things in action, and lands of the person absconding. [R., § 1367; C., '51, § 799.]

2135. Restoration; security. 1348. If the party against whom such order issued, return and support the person so abandoned, or give security to the county, satisfactory to the clerk of the circuit [district] court, that such person shall not become chargeable to the county, the order shall be discharged by another order from such clerk, and the property taken and remaining restored. [R., § 1372; C., '51, § 804.]

2137. Recovery by county. 1350. Any county having expended any money for the relief of a poor person under the provisions of this chapter, may recover the same from any of his kindred mentioned in sections one thousand three hundred and thirty, and one thousand three hundred and thirty-one of this chapter [§§ 2117, 2118], by an action brought in any court having jurisdiction within two years from the payment of such expenses. [R., § 1374; C., '51, § 806.]

The kindred may be made liable as here provided without any proceedings having been instituted under § 2120 et seq.: Boone County v. Ruhl, 9-276.

There is no statute making a pauper liable to the county for aid furnished him as such, and he cannot be held liable on an implied promise: Bremer County v. Curtis, 54-72.

Nor can the county recover from his estate for such aid; and this is true notwithstanding the provision as to the liability of relatives: Ibid.

2138. By relative. 1351. A more distant relative who may have been compelled to aid a poor person, may recover from any one or more of the nearer relatives, and any one so compelled to aid may recover contribution from others of the same degree. [R., § 1375; C., '51, § 807.]

2139. Settlement; how acquired. 1352. Legal settlements may be acquired in the counties as follows:

1. Any person having attained majority, and residing in this state one year without being warned as hereinafter provided, gains a settlement in the county of his residence;

2. A married woman follows and has the settlement of her husband, if he have any within the state, and if she had a settlement at the time of marriage it is not lost by the marriage;

3. A married woman abandoned by her husband, may acquire a settlement as if she were unmarried;

4. Legitimate minor children follow and have the settlement of their father if he have one, but if he has none, then that of their mother;

5. Illegitimate minor children follow and have the settlement of their mother, or if she have none then that of the putative father;

6. A minor whose parent has no settlement in this state, and a married woman living apart from her husband and having no settlement, and whose husband has no settlement in this state, residing one year in any county gains a settlement in such county;

7. A minor bound as an apprentice or servant, immediately upon such binding, if done in good faith, gains a settlement where his master has one. [R., § 1376; C., '51, § 808; 10 G. A., ch. 40.]

The residence contemplated in this section is his "personal presence in a fixed, permanent abode;" Cerro Gordo County v. Wright County, 50-439.

Facts considered as showing what was the county of residence of the person receiving relief: Cerro Gordo County v. Hancock County, 58-114.

A prima facie case of settlement is made by proving residence, unless it be proven or conceded that the party is a married woman; in such case it might be necessary to prove either that her husband resides in the same county or that she has been deserted by him: Scott County v. Polk County, 61-616.

The provision of the section above referred to is applicable to the case of an insane person who becomes a county charge: Ibid.

A person choosing a residence while sane, and removing there, acquires a settlement as provided in this section, although he becomes insane and is removed to the hospital before the expiration of the year. Such removal to the hospital is not an interruption of his residence: Washington County v. Mahaska County, 47-57.

A person who is insane and helpless and does not voluntarily change his place of residence, but is a simple, passive subject without exercise of volition, does not acquire a settlement upon being removed from one county to another at the expense of the former: Fayette County v. Bremer County, 56-516.

If taken from one county to the other at the suggestion of the former county, merely that the charge of the person may remain with the same party who has had such charge, the settlement will remain as though no such change had been made: Ibid.

2140. How lost. 1353. A settlement once acquired continues until it is lost by acquiring a new one. [R., § 1377; C., '51, § 809.]

2142. Warning to depart. 1355. Persons coming from other states or counties who are, or of whom it is apprehended that they will become county charges, may be prevented from obtaining a settlement in a county by warning them to depart from the same or any township thereof, and thereafter they shall not acquire a settlement except by the requisite residence for one year uninterrupted by another warning. [R., § 1380; C., '51, § 812.]

2143. How served. 1356. Such warning shall be in writing, and may be served upon the order of the trustees of the township, or of the board of supervisors, by any person; and such person shall make a return of his doings thereon to the board of supervisors; and, if not made by a sworn officer, it must be verified by affidavit. [R., § 1381; C., '51, § 813.]

A warning for the purpose of preventing a pauper coming into the county from obtaining a settlement may be served upon the order of the trustees of the township, but the service of such warning signed by the trustees themselves does not constitute a sufficient order by them: Bremer County v. Buchanan County, 61-624.

2144. Removal. 1357. When a poor person applying for relief in one county has a settlement in another, he may be removed to the county of his settlement, if he be able to be removed, upon the order of the trustees of the township or board of supervisors of the county where he applied for relief, and delivered to any officer charged with the oversight of the poor, in the county where his settlement is, giving written notice of the fact to the county auditor; or the trustees of the township, or board of supervisors of the county where he applied for relief, may, in their discretion, cause the auditor of the county where he has a settlement to be notified of his being a county charge, and, thereupon, it will become the duty of the latter board to order the removal of the poor person, if he is able to be removed, and, if not able, then to provide for his relief and for refunding all expenses incurred in his behalf. [R., § 1382; C., '51, § 814.]

[The word "refundng" in the last line is erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

Notice by one county to another that a poor person having a settlement in the latter has become a county charge in the former, and is receiving relief, and that the county of settlement will be held responsible, imposes on the latter county the duty of making an order for removal. It is, in such case, not obliged to serve upon the other county notice of intention to contest the order for removal. If, instead of making the order for removal, the county furnishing the relief gives notice that the pauper has become a county charge and is receiving relief, and that the county of settlement will be held responsible, it may recover of the county of settlement, but the burden is upon it to show that the person relieved had a settlement in the defendant county: Winneshiek County v. Allamakee County, 62-558.

In the petition in an action by one county to recover from another the expenses of the support of a pauper it must be averred that the defendant county is the county of the pauper's settlement. An averment that plaintiff is informed that the pauper has a settlement in defendant county is not sufficient: Ibid.

Notice from the auditor of one county to the auditor of the other that relief was being furnished to a poor person having a residence in the latter county, held sufficient: Cerro Gordo County v. Wright County, 50-439.

It does not follow that, because a person is obliged to apply to the county for relief where he has no settlement, he should be removed at once to the county of his settlement, regardless of distance, expense or other circumstances. The county furnishing the relief should have a right of action upon the county of the settlement for relief so furnished, without obligating the supervisors of the latter county to make an order of removal; and it should be allowable in such cases to give notice of such claim for relief furnished, without requiring removal. The county auditor may give such notice, but the notice for the order of removal can only be given by the township trustees or county supervisors: Scott County v. Polk County, 61-616.

Where a party removes from one county to another, and, before obtaining a settlement in the new county, receives assistance, the county from which the person removes is liable therefor, although the person to whom the relief is furnished did not have a "pauper record" prior to such removal: Hardin County v. Wright County, 67-127.

2145. County of settlement liable. 1358. The county where the settlement is, shall be liable to the county rendering relief for all reasonable charges and expenses incurred in the relief and care of a poor person, if notice of relief being rendered is given to the county of the settlement within a reasonable time after the county of the settlement is ascertained, and for the charges of removal and expenses of support incurred after notice given, in all cases. [R., § 1383; C., '51, § 815.]

Action cannot be brought by one county against another for charges, etc., as here contemplated, until the claim is presented to the board of supervisors of the county liable, and payment demanded as provided in § 3815: Cerro Gordo County v. Wright County, 50-439.

Ignorance of the fact of the pauper's settlement will not prevent the statute of limitations from running against such claim: Washington County v. Mahaska County, 47-57.

In the petition in an action by one county to recover from another the expenses of the support of a pauper it must be averred that the defendant county is the county of the pauper's settlement. An averment that plaintiff is informed that the pauper has a settlement in defendant county is not sufficient: Winneshiek County v. Allamakee County, 62-558.

2146. Notice of contest. 1359. Such order of removal shall be binding on the county to which the removal is to be made, unless, within thirty days after receipt of the notice provided by section thirteen hundred and fifty-seven [§ 2144], it gives notice to the auditor of the county making such order of its intention to contest the same. In such case, the proper settlement of the pauper in such county may be tested and determined in an action brought to recover the amount already expended in his behalf. A notice of such action, signed by the county auditor, shall be served on the auditor of the other county, specifying the amount claimed and the facts out of which the claim arises, and no other proceeding shall be necessary to commence the action. The notice hereinbefore provided for, and a transcript of whatever other proceedings or papers there may be relative to the matter, shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the circuit [district] court, and the cause may be entitled as of the county issuing the order as plaintiff against the county contesting the same as defendant. [R., § 1384; C., '51, § 816.]

The county applied to for relief may make an order of removal to the county of the pauper's settlement, and give notice thereof, or it may give to the county of the settlement notice that such pauper has become a county charge. In the latter case the county notified is not under obligation to give notice of its intention to contest the removal: Winneshiek County v. Allamakee County, 62-558.

Under the section as it stood before the abolition of the circuit court that court had exclusive jurisdiction, and the case could not be taken to the district court even by consent of parties: Ibid.; Cerro Gordo County v. Wright County, 59-485.

2147. Trial. 1360. The cause may be tried as other actions at law, but no pleadings are necessary, the only issues being whether the pauper had a settlement in the county to which he was ordered to be removed at the time of such order, and whether the amount claimed, or any part thereof, was actually and properly expended by the plaintiff county in his behalf; and the burden of proof shall be on the county making the order of removal. [R., § 1385; C., '51, § 817.]

2148. Relief by trustees; overseer of the poor. 1361; 18 G. A., ch. 133. The trustees of each township shall provide for the relief of such poor persons in their respective townships as should not in their judgment be sent to the county poor-house. But where a city of the first or second class or acting under special charter is embraced within the limits of any township, the board of supervisors may appoint an overseer of the poor, who shall have within said city all the powers and duties conferred by this chapter on the township trustees. The relief thus furnished may be in the form of food, clothing, fuel, lights, rent, medical attendance or money; but exclusive of medical attendance the relief thus furnished shall not exceed the sum of two dollars per week for each person. And when in the opinion of the trustees or overseer the person asking aid, or any member of his family, is able to work, and such a condition would not be oppressive, they may require the person or any member of his family who is able, as a condition on which relief shall be granted to earn the relief by labor on the public highway at the rate of not to exceed sixty-five cents per day. The trustees of townships or overseers of the poor are also authorized to grant relief by furnishing food to transient persons who appear needy, and who are able to work; but such relief shall not exceed the sum of forty cents per day; and they may require such able-bodied persons to labor faithfully on the streets or highway at the rate of five cents an hour in payment for and as a condition of granting the relief. Said labor shall be performed under the direction of the officer having charge of working streets or highways. [12 G. A., ch. 95, § 1.]

Where a board of supervisors appoints an overseer of the poor for a city of the first or second class the power conferred upon such overseer is exclusive of that of the trustees of the township in which such city is located: Hoyt v. Black Hawk County, 59-184.

The township trustees having provided relief, the board of supervisors cannot limit the amount of such relief unless they establish a limit before the relief is rendered as may be done by § 2150. If no limit is established the board must pay the reasonable value of the services rendered: Hunter v. Jasper County, 40-568.

"Medical attendance" is not restricted to the services of a physician, but may include nursing, etc., and the expense thereof is not limited to $2 per week: Scott v. Winneshiek County, 52-579.

The board of supervisors have power to determine under § 2152 whether they will continue or deny the relief thus granted: Ellison v. Harrison County, 74-494.

2149. Soldiers or families. 1362; 16 G. A., ch. 26; 17 G. A., ch. 37. In no case shall a soldier, or the widows or families of soldiers, requiring public relief, be sent to the county poor-house when they can and prefer to be relieved out of the poor-house. All other persons in families requiring such aid, may, at the discretion of the board of supervisors, or the overseer of the poor under the supervision of the board of supervisors of such county, be sent to the county poor-house, or receive such aid out of poor-house, as the board may deem necessary, not to exceed the extent as above provided. [Same, § 2.]

2150. County expense. 1363. All moneys expended as contemplated in the two preceding sections, shall be paid out of the county treasury, after the proper account rendered thereof shall have been approved by the board of supervisors of the respective counties, and in all cases the necessary appropriations therefor shall be made by the respective counties. But the board of supervisors may limit the amount of relief thus to be furnished. [Same, § 3.]

Any limit to the amount of relief to be furnished must be fixed in advance, otherwise the board must pay the reasonable value of the services rendered: Hunter v. Jasper County, 40-568.

WHERE THERE IS NO POOR-HOUSE.

2152. Application for relief; action of supervisors. 1365; 22 G. A., ch. 101. The poor must make application for relief to the trustees of the township where they may be, and, if the trustees are satisfied that the applicant is in such a state of want as requires relief at the public expense, they may afford such relief subject to the approval of the board of supervisors as the necessities of the person require, and shall report the case forthwith to the board of supervisors, who may continue or deny relief as they find cause. The board of supervisors may examine into all claims including claims for medical attendance allowed by the township trustees for the support of the poor and if they find the amount allowed by said trustees to be unreasonable, exorbitant or for any goods or services other than for the necessities of life, they may reject or diminish the claim as in their judgment would be right and just, and this act shall apply to all counties in the state whether there are poor-houses established in the same or not: Provided that this act shall apply to acts of overseers of poor in cities as well as to township trustees. [R., § 1388; C., '51, § 820.]

The township trustees may bind the county for medical services rendered at their instance to poor sick persons in their township while the board of supervisors is not in session. Whether the physician employed by the trustees has a right to compensation for services rendered after the trustees ought to have reported to the board, though he was not notified of their failure to do so, quere: Cooledje v. Mahaska County, 24-211.

With the trustees rests, in the first instance, the determination of the question whether a poor person needs aid, and the nature of the relief to be given, and if made in good faith it binds the board of supervisors: Armstrong v. Tama County, 34-309.

Where the board of supervisors, as a matter of precaution and in the interest of economy, employ a convenient and competent physician, in advance, to furnish to all poor persons of the county all medicines and medical aid that they may require, the trustees cannot disregard such employment and render the county liable for services rendered by a physician employed by them: Mansfield v. Sac County, 59-694; Gawley v. Jones County, 60-159.

When the trustees authorize aid to be furnished to a poor person, it may be continued, if done in good faith, until the board of supervisors otherwise order, even though the trustees fail to report the case to the board; and the trustees, in such case of failure to report, will be held liable to the county for damages arising from continuance of aid to persons not properly entitled to it: Mansfield v. Sac County, 60-11.

Recovery cannot be had for aid furnished before application is made to the trustees, and the furnishing of such aid is authorized by them: Ibid.

The board have the authority to continue or deny the relief to persons to whom relief has been granted by the township trustees under the provisions of § 2148: Ellison v. Harrison County, 74-494.

Written orders of the township trustees for relief upon which the board of supervisors act are valid although not made of record as required in general with reference to the action of the trustees by §§ 531 and 534: Evemer County v. Buchanan County, 61-624.

The duty of the township trustees when applied to for relief for the poor is not to be determined by very rigid rules; they must, in the exercise of a wise discretion, grant relief where they judge that humanity requires it. Where they act in good faith, or without abuse of discretion, their action is not subject to review: Hardin County v. Wright County, 67-127.

The fact that the party to whom relief is furnished has, in fact, property, will not render the furnishing of relief necessarily improper. Ibid.

2153. Expense paid by county. 1366. All claims and bills for the care and support of the poor shall be certified to be correct by the proper trustees and presented to the board of supervisors, and, if they are satisfied that they are reasonable and proper, they are to be paid out of the county treasury. In no case shall a trustee, or either of the trustees, nor overseer of the poor, draw an order upon himself, or upon either of the board, for supplies for the poor, except such trustee or overseer has a contract to furnish such supplies. [R., § 1389; C., '51, § 821.]

The obligation of the county to support the poor is purely statutory: Cooledge v. Mahaska County, 24-211.

Under prior statutes held that neither the county judge nor county court had jurisdiction over the settlement or support of the poor, such jurisdiction being vested in the board of supervisors: Lucas County v. Ringgold County, 21-83.

The action of the board in allowing claims for care and support is of a quasi-judicial character, but the claimant having presented his bill is not limited to an appeal from the action of the board, but may bring suit against the county by ordinary proceedings: Armstrong v. Tama County, 34-309.

The certificate of the trustees required by that section to be presented with the claim to the board need not be made at a regular meeting: Hunter v. Jasper County, 40-368.

The board of supervisors may waive such certificate: Collins v. Lucas County, 50-448; Bradley v. Delaware County, 57-552.

A recommendation by the trustees that a bill be paid is not equivalent to the certificate required, and is not sufficient to entitle claimant to payment of his claim from the county: Mansfield v. Sac County, 60-11.

A pauper resident of one township who receives an injury while temporarily in another township may lawfully receive aid by order of the trustees of the latter: Mussel v. Tama County, 73-101.

A certificate signed by the trustees, to the effect that they had ordered the services specified in claimant's bill for medical service to poor persons, but not stating that the charges were correct, held not a sufficient certificate as required by statute: Sloan v. Webster County, 61-738.

The duty of determining who are to be relieved at the public expense pertains to the trustees and cannot be delegated to a physician or any other person; and where blank certificates were filled out by two trustees and left with a third person in order to be filled up by the physician rendering services to poor persons as he should designate, held, that such certificates were not sufficient to entitle the physician to recover from the county: Ibid.

Where the liability of the county is directly put in issue, a member of the board of supervisors cannot be regarded as having waived the certificate: Ibid.

A certificate of the trustees showing that the aid was furnished at their request and by their order is conclusive in that respect, and cannot be contradicted by parol evidence: Mussel v. Tama County, 73-101.

2154. Allowance. 1367. The board may, in its discretion, allow and pay to poor persons who may become chargeable as paupers and who are of mature years and sound mind, and who will probably be benefited thereby, such sums or such annual allowance as will not exceed the charge of their maintenance in the ordinary mode. [R., § 1390; C., '51, § 822.]

2155. Appeal to supervisors. 1368. If any poor person, on application to the trustees, is refused the required relief, he may apply to the board of supervisors, who, on examination into the matter, may direct the trustees to afford relief, or they may direct specific relief. [R., § 1391; C., '51, § 823.]

SUPERVISORS MAY CONTRACT.

2156. Support of county poor. 1369. The board of supervisors may enter into contract with the lowest bidder through proposals opened and examined at a regular session of the board, for the support of all the poor of the county for one year at a time, and may make all requisite orders to that effect; and shall require such contractor to give bonds in such sum as they deem sufficient to secure the faithful performance of the same. [R., § 1393; C., '51, § 825.]

ner the poor are kept and treated, which shall be done without notice to the person contracting for their support; and, if upon due notice and inquiry, the board find that the poor are not reasonably and properly supported or cared for, they may, at a regular session, set aside the contract, making proper allowances for the time it has been in force. [R., § 1394; C., '51, § 826.]

2158. Employment of paupers. 1371. Any such contractor may employ a poor person in any work for which his age, health and strength is competent, subject to the control of the trustees, and in the last resort of the board of supervisors. [R., § 1395; C., '51, § 827.]

SUPERVISORS MAY ESTABLISH POOR-HOUSE.

2159. Submission to vote. 1372. The board of supervisors of each county may order the establishment of a poor-house in such county whenever it is deemed advisable, and also the purchase of such land as may be deemed necessary for the use of the same, and may make the requisite contracts and carry such order into effect, provided the cost of said poor-house and land shall be first estimated by said board and approved by a vote of the people. [R., § 1396; C., '51, § 828.]

2161. Steward appointed. 1374. The board may appoint a steward of the poor-house, who shall be governed in all respects by the rules and regulations of the board and its committees, and may be removed by the board at pleasure, and who shall receive such compensation, perform such duties, and give such security for his faithful performance as the board may appoint. [R., § 1402; C., '51, § 834.]

The steward of the poor-house is also steward of the poor-farm: State v. Platner, 43-140. the steward as to deprive themselves of the power of removal at pleasure: Ibid.

The board cannot make such contract with

2163. Employment of paupers. 1376. He may require of persons so admitted, such reasonable and moderate labor as may be suited to their ages and bodily strength, the proceeds of which, together with the receipts of the poor-farm, if there be one, shall be appropriated to the use of the poor-house in such manner as the board may determine. [R., § 1404; C., '51, § 836.]

The steward of the poor-house is steward of the poor-farm: See note to § 2161.

2165. Binding out. 1378. The board may bind out such poor children of the poor-house as they believe are likely to remain a permanent charge on the public, males until eighteen and females until the age of sixteen, unless sooner married, on such terms and conditions as prescribed in the chapter concerning master and apprentices. And they may bind for shorter periods on such conditions as they may adopt. [R., § 1407; C., '51, § 839.]

2166. Discharge. 1379. When any inmate of the poor-house becomes able to support himself, the board may order his discharge. [R., § 1408; C., '51, § 840.]

2167. Visitation of poor-house. 1380. The board shall cause the poor-house to be visited at least once a month by one of their body, who shall carefully examine the condition of the inmates and the manner in which they are fed and clothed and otherwise provided for and treated, ascertain what labor they are required to perform, inspect the books and accounts of the steward, and look into all matters pertaining to the poor-house and its inmates and report to the board. [R., § 1410; C., '51, § 842.]

[By 16 G. A., ch. 149, and 21 G. A., ch. 10, the section is amended so as to make the limit of the amount of tax one and one-half mills; "provided that the provisions of this act shall not apply to counties in which the population is less than fourteen thousand inhabitants."]

The increase of the amount of the tax to one and one-half mills is not applicable to counties in which the population is less than the number fixed in the amendment: Lucas County v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 67-541.

2169. Letting out. 1382. The board is invested with authority to let out the support of the poor, with the use and occupancy of the poor-house and farm for a period not exceeding three years. [R., § 1415; C., '51, § 847.]

CHAPTER 2.

2170. Hospitals established; trustees. 1383. The hospital for the insane, located at Mount Pleasant, in Henry county, shall be known by the name of the Iowa hospital for the insane at Mount Pleasant; and the hospital for the insane, located at Independence, in Buchanan county, shall be known by the name of the Iowa hospital for the insane at Independence. Each of said hospitals shall be under the charge of five trustees, two of whom may be women, three of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; and in future no member of the general assembly shall be eligible to that office. When the term of a trustee expires, his successor shall be appointed by the general assembly for four years; but no vacancy shall be filled until the number of trustees is reduced to the number provided in this section. No trustees shall receive pay for more than thirty days in any year. [13 G. A., ch. 109, § 1.]

the discharge of their official duties, from the state treasury, out of any moneys not otherwise appropriated, by an order drawn by the secretary of the board and approved by the board. Each board of trustees shall hold an annual meeting upon the second Wednesday of July at the hospital, when they shall choose one of their number president and another secretary, and shall also choose a treasurer for the year then ensuing and until their successors are elected and qualified. They shall also hold quarterly meetings on the second Wednesday in October, January, and April. [Same, § 3; 14 G. A., ch. 135, § 1.]

[This section is modified as to compensation of trustees by § 5104.]

2172. Visitation; record; report. 1385. The board of trustees, or a majority thereof, shall inspect the hospital under their charge at each quarterly meeting and a committee may visit the hospital monthly. The trustees shall make a record of their proceedings in books kept for the purpose; and at the annual meetings preceding the regular sessions of the general assembly, they shall make a report to the governor of the condition and wants of the hospital, which shall be accompanied by full and accurate reports of its superintendent and treasurer, and an account of all moneys received and disbursed. [13 G. A., ch. 109, § 5.]

2173. Management. 1386; 15 G. A., ch. 53, § 1. The trustees shall have the general control and management of the hospital under their charge; shall make all by-laws necessary for the government of the same, not inconsistent with the laws and constitution of the state, and conduct the affairs of the institution in accordance with the laws and by-laws regulating the same. They shall appoint a medical superintendent, and upon the nomination of the superintendent, shall appoint an assistant physician or physicians, a steward, and a matron, who shall reside in the hospital and be styled resident officers of the same, and be governed and subject to all the laws and by-laws for the government of the said institution. But the same person shall not hold the office of superintendent and steward. They may, also, in their discretion, and upon the nomination of the superintendent appoint a chaplain and prescribe his duties. The board of trustees shall, from time to time, fix the salaries and wages of the officers and other employees of the hospital, and certify the same to the auditor of state; and they may remove any officer or other employee of such institution. [Same, § 6; Ex. S., 9 G. A., ch. 19, § 1; 11 G. A., ch. 100; 13 G. A., ch. 131; 14 G. A., ch. 135, § 1.]

2174. Property in trust. 1387. The board of trustees may take, in the name of the state, and hold in trust for the hospital, any land conveyed or devised, and any money or other personal property given or bequeathed, to be applied for any purpose connected with the institution. [13 G. A., ch. 109, § 7.]

will faithfully perform the duties of his office, and pay over and account for all money that shall come into his hands, and shall be filed with the secretary of state. He shall receive such compensation as the board shall fix, not exceeding one-half of one per cent. on all moneys paid out by him. Upon authority granted by the board, he may draw from the state treasury, out of money not otherwise appropriated, upon his order, approved by the superintendent and not less than two of the trustees, and under seal of the hospital, a sufficient amount quarterly for the purpose of defraying any deficiencies that may arise in the current expenses of the hospital, but the amount of each requisition shall in no case exceed sixteen dollars per month for each public patient in the hospital, taking the number of such patients on the fifteenth day of each month as the average number on which the estimate shall be made, the number then in the hospital to be certified to the auditor of state by the superintendent and steward, which certificate shall accompany the requisition. But no part of the money so drawn for current expenses shall be used in making improvements. Upon the presentation of such order to the auditor of state, he shall draw a warrant upon the treasurer of state for the amount therein specified, not exceeding the amount for each patient hereinbefore specified. [Same, § 10; 14 G. A., ch. 135, § 1.]

2180. Seal. 1393. The superintendent shall provide an official seal, upon which shall be inscribed the statute name of the hospital under his charge, and the name of the state. [13 G. A., ch. 109, § 13.]

2181. Assistant physicians. 1394. The assistant physicians shall be medical men of such character and qualifications as to be able to perform the ordinary duties of the superintendent during his necessary absence, or inability to : ct. [Same, § 14.]

HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE AT CLARINDA.

2182. Name. 22 G. A., ch. 75, § 1. The hospital for the insane, located at Clarinda, in Page county, shall be known by the name of the Iowa hospital for the insane at Clarinda.

2184. Election; office. 22 G. A., ch. 75, § 3. Said trustees shall be elected by the twenty-second general assembly, two of whom shall be elected for two years, two of whom shall be elected for four years, and one of whom shall be elected for six years, their term of office to commence on the second Wednesday of March, 1888.

2186. Qualification; organization. 22 G. A., ch. 75, § 5. Said trustees shall qualify in manner as the trustees for the hospitals at Mount Pleasant and Independence, and shall convene at Clarinda, Iowa, on the second Wednesday of March, 1888, and perfect their organization, take possession of the property of the state and enter upon the discharge of their duties.

2187. Commissioners. 22 G. A., ch. 75, § 6. When said trustees have qualified and entered upon the discharge of their duties, the board of commissioners, who now have charge of said hospital, shall cease to act and their offices shall therefrom be vacated and thereafter the powers and duties of said board of commissioners, as provided in chapter two hundred and one, of the acts of the twentieth general assembly, shall devolve upon, and be exercised by the trustees aforesaid.

2188. Final report. 22 G. A., ch. 75, § 7. Said board of commissioners shall on or before the first Wednesday of May, 1888, make their final report to the governor in manner as by law required.

COMMISSIONERS OF INSANITY.

2189. Appointment. 1395. In each county there shall be a board of three commissioners of insanity. The clerk of the circuit [district] court shall be a member of such board and clerk of the same. The other members shall be appointed by the judge of said court. One of them shall be a respectable practicing physician and the other a respectable practicing lawyer; and the appointment shall be made of persons residing as convenient as may be to the county seat. Such appointment may be made during the session of the court or in vacation; and, if made in vacation, it shall be by written order, signed by the judge and recorded by the clerk of the court. The appointment shall be for two years, and so that the term of one commissioner shall expire every year. The appointment of successors may be made at any time within three months prior to the expiration of the term of the incumbent, who shall hold his office until his successor is appointed and qualified. In the temporary absence or inability to act of two commissioners, the judge of the circuit [district] court, if present, may act in the room of one, or the commissioner present may call to his aid a respectable practicing physician or lawyer, who, after qualifying as in other cases, may act in the same capacity. The record in such cases must show the facts. [Same, § 15; 12 G. A., ch. 179, §§ 1-6.]

2191. Clerk. 1397. The clerk of said board of commissioners shall sign and issue all notices, appointments, warrants, subpoenas, or other process required to be given or issued by the commissioners, affixing thereto his seal as clerk of the circuit [district] court. He shall file and preserve in his office all papers connected with any inquest by the commissioners, and properly belonging to his office, with all notices, reports, and other communications. He shall keep separate books in which to minute the proceedings of the board, and his entries therein shall be sufficiently full to show, with the papers filed, a complete record of their findings, orders and transactions. The notices, reports, and communications herein required to be given or made, may be sent by mail, unless otherwise expressed or implied; and the facts and date of such sending and their reception, must be noted on the proper record. [Same, § 17; 12 G. A., ch. 179, §§ 1-6.]

2193. Admission to hospital. 1399. Applications for admission to the hospital must be made in the form of an information, verified by affidavit, alleging that the person in whose behalf the application is made, is believed by the informant to be insane, and a fit subject for custody and treatment in the hospital; that such person is found in the county, and has a legal settlement therein, if such is known to be the fact; and, if such settlement is not in the county, where it is, if known; or where it is believed to be, if the informant is advised on the subject. [Same, § 19; 12 G. A., ch. 179, §§ 1-6.]

2194. Investigation; warrant; certificate of physician. 1400. On the filing of such information, the commissioners may examine the informant, under oath, and if satisfied there is reasonable cause therefor, shall at once investigate the grounds thereof. For this purpose they may require that the person for whom such admission is sought be brought before them, and that the examination be had in his presence; and they may issue their warrant therefor, and provide for the suitable custody of such person until their investigation shall be concluded. Such warrant may be executed by the sheriff, or any constable of the county; or, if they shall be of opinion, from such preliminary inquiries as they may make — and in making which they shall take the testimony of the informant, if they deem it necessary or desirable, and of other witnesses if offered, — that such course would probably be injurious to such person, or attended with no advantage, they may dispense with such presence. In their examination they shall hear testimony for and against such application, if any is offered. Any citizen of the county or any relative of the person alleged to be insane, may appear and resist the application, and the parties may appear by counsel, if they elect. The commissioners, whether they dispense with the presence before them of such person or not, shall appoint some regular practicing physician of the county to visit such person and make a personal examination touching the truth of the information, and the actual condition of such person, and forthwith report to them thereon. Such physician may, or may not, be of their own number; and the physician so appointed and acting shall certify, under his hand, that he has, in pursuance of his appointment, made a careful personal examination as required; and that, on such examination, he finds the person in question insane, if such is the fact, and if otherwise, not insane; and in connection with his examination the said physician shall endeavor to obtain from the relatives of the person in question, or from others who know the facts, correct answers, so far as may be, to the interrogatories hereinafter required to be propounded in such cases, which interrogatories and answers shall be attached to his certificate.

The interrogatories and answers appended to the certificate of the physician are not competent evidence as to whether the party was insane previous to the examination: Buller v. St. Louis L. Ins. Co., 45-93, 36.

2195. Finding of commissioners' warrant; confinement. 1401; 18 G. A., ch. 152, § 6; 22 G. A., ch. 68, § 1 On the return of the physician's certificate, the commissioners shall, as soon as practicable, conclude their investigation, and shall find whether the person alleged to be insane, is insane; whether, if insane, a fit subject for treatment and custody in the hospital; whether the legal settlement of such person is in their county, and, if not in their county, where it is, if ascertained. If they find such person is not insane, they shall order his immediate discharge, if in custody. If they find such person insane, and a fit subject for custody and treatment in the hospital, they shall order said person to be committed to the hospital, and unless said person so found to be insane (or some one in his or her behalf) shall appeal from the finding of said commissioners, they shall forthwith issue their warrant, and a duplicate thereof, stating such finding, with the settlement of the person, if found; and, if not found, their information, if any, in regard thereto, authorizing the superintendent of the hospital to receive and keep such person as a patient therein. Said warrant and duplicate, with the certificate and finding of the physician, shall be delivered to the sheriff of the county, who shall execute the same by conveying such person to the hospital, and delivering him, with such duplicate and physician's certificate, and finding, to the superintendent thereof. The superintendent, over his official signature, shall acknowledge such delivery on the original warrant, which the sheriff shall return to the clerk of the commissioners, with his costs and expenses indorsed thereon. If neither the sheriff nor his deputy is at hand, or if both are otherwise engaged, the commissioners may appoint some other suitable person to execute the warrant in his stead, who shall take and subscribe an oath faithfully to discharge his duty, and shall be entitled to the same fees as the sheriff. The sheriff, or any other person so appointed, may take to his aid such assistance as he may need to execute such warrant; but no female shall thus be taken to the hospital without the attendance of some other female, or some relative. The superintendent, in his acknowledgment of delivery, must state whether there was any such person in attendance, and give the name or names, if any. But if any relative or immediate friend of the patient who is a suitable person, shall so request, he shall have the privilege of executing such warrant in preference to the sheriff, or any other person, and without taking such oath; and for so doing he shall be entitled to his necessary expenses but to no fees. And no person during such investigation, or who shall be found to be insane, as above provided, shall during investigation, or after such finding and pending commitment to the hospital for the insane or when en route to said hospital be confined in any jail or prison, or other place of solitary confinement; except in cases of extreme violence, when it may be deemed absolutely necessary for the safety of such insane person, or of the public; and if such violently insane person be so confined there shall at all times during such confinement be some suitable person or persons in attendance in charge of such insane person; but at no time shall any female be placed in such confinement, without at least one female attendant remaining in charge of such insane person. The requirements of this and preceding sections are modified by the provisions of the next section [§ 2201]. [Same, § 21; 12 G. A., ch. 179, §§ 1-6.]

The provisions here made for appeal, and the further provisions contained in §§ 2216 and 2217, allowing subsequent investigation of the question of sanity, prevent this section from being in conflict with the constitutional guar- without due jury trial: Blackhawk County v. anties against deprivation of personal liberty Springer, 58-117.

2196. Appeal from finding. 18 G. A., ch. 152, § 1. Any person found to be insane by the commissioners of insanity, may appeal to the circuit [district] court by giving the clerk of said court notice in writing that he or she appeals from said finding, which notice may be signed by the party, his or her attorney, agent or guardian.

2200. Final order. 18 G. A., ch. 152, § 5. If, upon the trial, such person is found not insane, the court shall order his or her immediate discharge, if in custody. If such person is found to be insane, and a fit subject for custody and treatment in the hospital, the court shall order that such person be committed to the hospital, and the clerk of the court shall issue a warrant to carry said finding and order into effect, which warrant and the proceedings on and under it, shall be substantially the same as are provided for in section fourteen hundred and one, of chapter two, title eleven, of the code [§ 2195].

2201. Settlement in another county. 1402. If the commissioners find that the person so committed to the hospital has, or probably has, a legal settlement in some other county, they shall immediately notify the auditor of such county of such finding and commitment; and the auditor so notified shall thereupon inquire and ascertain, if possible, whether the person in question has a legal settlement in that county, and shall immediately notify the superintendent of the hospital and the commissioners of the county from which such person was committed, of the result of such inquiry. If the legal settlement of a person so committed cannot for a time be ascertained, and is afterwards found, the notices so required shall then be given. [13 G. A., ch. 109, § 22.]

Notice to the county of settlement is a condition precedent to the right of recovery: Poweshieck County v. Cass County, 63-244.

2202. Custody outside hospital. 1403; 22 G. A., ch. 68, § 2. If any person found to be insane and a fit subject for custody and treatment in the hospital, cannot at once be admitted therein for want of room, or for any other cause, and cannot with safety be allowed to go at liberty, the commissioners shall require that such patient shall be suitably provided for otherwise until such admission can be had, or until the occasion therefor no longer exists. Such patients may be cared for either as private or as public patients. Those shall be treated as private patients, whose relations or friends will obligate themselves to take care of and provide for them without public charge. In such case, the commissioners shall appoint some suitable person a special custodian, who shall have authority, and who shall, in all suitable ways, restrain, protect, and care for such patient, in such manner as to best secure his safety and comfort, and to best protect the person and property of others. In the case of public patients, the commissioners shall require that they be in like manner restrained, protected and cared for by the board of supervisors at the expense of the county, and they may, accordingly, issue their warrant to such board, who shall forthwith comply with the same. If there is no poor-house for the reception of such patients, or if no more suitable place can be found, they may be confined in the jail of the county in charge of the sheriff. Provided however that any female that may be so confined in such poor-house or jail shall be at all times under the personal care of a suitable female attendant, who shall hold a key of the apartment in which said insane person is confined. [Same, § 28.]

Where an adult is adjudged insane and a fit subject to be treated in the hospital, but cannot be admitted there, and is otherwise maintained and treated, his father is not liable for the expense of his maintenance although he is appointed custodian: Speedling v. Worth County, 68-152.

2203. Same. 1404. On application to the commissioners in behalf of persons alleged to be insane, and whose admission to the hospital is not sought, made substantially in the manner above prescribed, and asking that provision be made for their care as insane—either public or private—within the county, and on proof of their insanity and need of care as above pointed out, the commissioners may provide for their restraint, protection and care, as in the case of other applications. [Same, § 29.]

2205. Transfer to hospital. 1406. Insane persons who have been under care, either as public or private patients, outside of the hospital, by authority of the commissioners of any county, may, on application to that effect, be transferred to the hospital whenever they can be admitted thereto, on the warrant of such commissioners. Such admission may be had without another inquest, at any time within six months after the inquest already had, unless the commissioner shall deem further inquest advisable. [13 G. A., ch. 109, § 33.]

2206. Interrogatories. 1407. In each case of application for admission to the hospital, correct answers to the following interrogatories, so far as they can be obtained, shall accompany the physician's certificate; and if, on further examination after the answers are stated, any of them are found to be erroneous, the commissioners shall cause them to be corrected:

1. What is the patient's name and age? Married or single? If any children, how many? Age of youngest child?
2. Where was the patient born?
3. Where is his (or her) place of residence?
4. What has been the patient's occupation?
5. Is this the first attack? If not, when did the others occur, and what was their duration?
6. When were the first symptoms of this attack manifested, and in what way?
7. Does the disease appear to be increasing, decreasing or stationary?
8. Is the disease variable, and are there rational intervals? If so, do they occur at regular periods?
9. On what subjects, or in what way is derangement now manifested? State fully.
10. Has the patient shown any disposition to injure others?
11. Has suicide ever been attempted? If so, in what way? Is the propensity now active?

12. Is there a disposition to filthy habits, destruction of clothing, breaking of glass, etc.?

13. What relatives, including grandparents and cousins, have been insane?

14. Did the patient manifest any peculiarities of temper, habits, disposition, or pursuits, before the accession of the disease?—any predominant passion, religious impressions, etc.?

15. Was the patient ever addicted to intemperance in any form?

16. Has the patient been subject to any bodily disease; epilepsy, suppressed eruptions, discharges of sores, or ever had any injury of the head?

17. Has restraint or confinement been employed? If so, what kind, and how long?

18. What is supposed to be the cause of the disease?

19. What treatment has been pursued for the relief of the patient? Mention particulars and effects.

20. State any other matter supposed to have a bearing on the case. [Same, § 34.]

2207. Discharge from hospital. 1408. On the application of the relations or immediate friends of any patient in the hospital who is not cured, and who cannot be safely allowed to go at liberty, the commissioners of the county where such patient belongs, on making provisions for the care of such patient within the county as is in other cases, may authorize his discharge therefrom; provided, no patient who may be under criminal charge or conviction shall be discharged without the order of the district court or judge, and notice to the district [county] attorney of the proper district [county] as hereinbefore provided. [Same, § 41.]

2208. Discharge from custody. 1409. Whenever it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the commissioners of insanity of any county, that cause no longer exists for the care within the county of any particular person as an insane patient, they shall order the immediate discharge of such person. [Same, § 47.]

2209. Expenses. 1410. Whenever the commissioners issue their warrant for the admission of a person to the hospital, and funds to pay the expense thereof are needed in advance, they shall estimate the probable expense of conveying such person to the hospital, including the necessary assistance, and not including the compensation allowed the sheriff; and on such estimate, certified by the clerk, the auditor of the county shall issue his order on the treasury of the county in favor of the sheriff or other person intrusted with the execution of such warrant; the sheriff, or other person executing such warrant shall accompany his return with a statement of the expenses incurred; and the excess or deficiency may be deducted from or added to his compensation, as the case may be. If funds are not so advanced, such expenses shall be certified and paid in the manner above prescribed on the return of the warrant. When the commissioners order the return of a patient, compensation and expenses shall be in like manner allowed. [Same, § 48.]

2210. Warrant and certificate. 1411. The warrant of the commissioners of insanity, authorizing the admission of any person to the hospital as a patient, accompanied by a physician's certificate as herein provided, shall operate to shield the superintendent and other officers of the hospital against all liability to prosecution of any kind on account of the reception and detention of such person in the hospital; provided, such detention shall be otherwise in accordance with the laws and by-laws regulating its management. [Same, § 51.]

INSANE PRISONERS.

2211. Inquiry; confinement. 1412. If any person in prison charged with a crime, shall, at any time before indictment is found against him, at the request of any citizen be brought before the commissioners in the manner provided by law, and if it shall be found by them that such person was insane when he committed the offense; or if any person in prison shall, after the commission of an offense, and before conviction, become insane, and if at the request of any citizen an inquest be instituted as provided for in this chapter, and if the commissioners shall find that such person became insane after the commission of the crime of which he stands charged or indicted, and is still insane, they shall issue their warrant authorizing and requiring the superintendent of either hospital to receive and keep the person as a patient therein. In such case the warrant can only be executed by the sheriff or his deputy; and no delivery of the insane prisoner to any other person than the superintendent of the hospital shall exonerate the sheriff from his liability for the custody of such prisoner, and any such lunatic may, when restored to reason, be prosecuted for any offense committed by him previous to such insanity. [R., §§ 1458, 1459.]

2212. Notice of recovery. 1413. When any lunatic shall be confined in either hospital under the preceding section, the superintendent in whose charge he may be, shall, as soon as such lunatic is restored to his reason, give notice thereof to the district [county] attorney of the proper county, and retain such lunatic in custody for such reasonable time thereafter as may be necessary for said attorney to cause a warrant to issue and to be served, by virtue whereof the said person so restored to reason shall again be returned to the jail of the proper county to answer to the offense alleged against him. [R., § 1460.]

2213. Prisoner insane after conviction. 1414. If any person, after being convicted of any crime or misdemeanor, and before the execution in whole or part of the sentence of the court, becomes insane, the governor shall inquire into the facts, and he may pardon such lunatic, or commute or suspend, for the time being, the execution in such manner and for such a period as he may think proper, and may, by his warrant to the sheriff of the proper county or warden of either penitentiary, order such lunatic to be conveyed to the hospital and there kept until restored to reason. If the sentence of any such lunatic be suspended by the governor, the sentence of the court shall be executed upon him after such period of suspension has expired, unless otherwise directed by the governor. [R., § 1464.]

CUSTODIAN OF INSANE PERSONS.

2214. Misdemeanor. 1415. Any person having care of an insane person, and restraining such person whether in the hospital or elsewhere either with or without authority, who shall treat such person with wanton severity, harshness, or cruelty, or shall in any way abuse such person, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, besides being liable in an action for damages. [13 G. A., ch. 190, § 32.]

[The words "whether in the hospital or elsewhere," in the second line, are erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

2215. Restraint without authority. 1416. No person supposed to be insane shall be restrained of his liberty by any other person, otherwise than in pursuance of authority obtained as herein required, excepting to such extent and for such brief period as may be necessary for the safety of person and property until such authority can be obtained. [Same, § 31.]

EXPENSES — REGULATIONS.

2216. County of settlement liable. 1417. When the superintendent of the hospital has been duly notified as herein required, that a patient sent to the hospital from one county has a legal settlement in another county, he shall thereafter hold and treat such patient as from the latter county; and such holding shall apply to expenses already incurred in behalf of such patient and remaining unadjusted. [Same, § 23.]

2217. Recovery. 1418. Expenses incurred as hereinafter provided by one county on account of an insane person whose legal settlement is in another county, shall be refunded, with lawful interest thereon, by the county of such settlement, and shall be presented to the board of supervisors of the county sought to be charged, allowed, and paid the same as other claims. If the settlement is denied by the latter board, they may serve a notice similar to that provided for in section thirteen hundred and fifty-nine, of chapter one of this title [§ 2146] for cases of removal; and all the provisions of that chapter in regard to the determination of a disputed claim upon an order of removal shall apply to the change of settlement of an insane person. [Same, § 24.]

Before the abolition of the circuit court it had not have exclusive jurisdiction of this action, although it did of the action provided for by § 2146: Winneshie's County v. Allamakee County, 62-558. As to liability of county of settlement, see notes to § 2144.

2218. At expense of state. 1419; 21 G. A., ch. 47. Patients in the hospital having no legal settlement in the state, or whose legal settlement cannot be ascertained, shall be supported at the expense of the state, and the trustees may authorize the superintendent to remove any patient at the expense of the state if they see proper. The cost of such removal to be paid directly from the state treasury upon the sworn statement of the superintendent and approval of the trustees appended to each voucher, and counties from which such patients are hereafter received, shall be reimbursed for expenses incurred in sending such patients to the hospital, claim for such reimbursement to be certified to by the county auditor and be paid directly from the state treasury. [Same, § 25.]

2219. Special care. 1420. All patients in the hospital shall be regarded as standing upon an equal footing, and the several patients, according to their different conditions of mind and body, and their respective needs, shall be provided for and treated with equal care; but if the relative or friends of any patient shall desire it, and shall pay the expense thereof, such patient may have special care, and may be provided with a special attendant, as may be agreed upon with the superintendent. In such cases, the charges for such special care and attendance shall be paid quarterly in advance. [Same, § 26.]

2220. Expenses paid by relatives. 1421. The relatives or friends of any patient in the hospital shall have the privilege of paying any portion or all of the expenses of such patients therein; and the superintendent shall cause the account of such patient to be credited with any sums so paid. [Same, § 27.]

2221. Discrimination in reception. 1422. If at any time it may become necessary, for want of room or other cause, to discriminate in the general reception of patients into the hospital, a selection shall be made as follows:

1. Recent cases, i. e., cases of less than one year's duration, shall have the preference over all others;
2. Chronic cases, i. e., where the disease is of more than one year's duration, presenting the most favorable prospects of recovery shall be next preferred;
3. Those for whom application has been longer on file, other things being equal, shall be next preferred;
4. Where cases are equally meritorious in all other respects, the indigent shall have the preference. [Same, § 35.]

2222. Escape. 1423. If any patient shall escape from the hospital, the superintendent shall cause immediate search to be made for him; and, if he cannot soon be found, shall cause notice of such escape to be forthwith given to the commissioners of the county where the patient belongs; and if such patient is found in their county, the commissioners shall cause him to be returned, and shall issue their warrant therefor as in other cases, unless the patient shall be discharged, or unless, for good reasons, they shall provide for his care otherwise, of which they shall notify the superintendent. [Same, § 39.]

2225. Notice to commissioners. 1426. When patients are discharged from the hospital by the authorities thereof without application therefor, notice of the order of discharge shall at once be sent to the commissioners of the county where they belong; and the commissioners shall forthwith cause them to be removed, and shall at once provide for their care in the county as in other cases, unless such patients are discharged as cured. [Same, § 43.]

2226. Compensation for keeping. 1427; 17 G. A., ch. 84. The trustees shall, from time to time, fix the sum to be paid per month for the board and care of the patients, which shall not exceed the sum of sixteen dollars per month, and the monthly sum so fixed shall be the sum the said hospital shall be entitled to demand for keeping any patient; and the certificate of the superintendent, attested by the seal of the hospital, shall be evidence in all places of the amount due as fixed. [Same, § 44; 14 G. A., ch. 135, § 1.]

2227. Enforcing payment by counties. 1428; 16 G. A., ch. 28; 17 G. A., ch. 183, § 1. The superintendent shall certify to the auditor of state on the first day of January, April, July and October, the amount, not previously certified by him, due to said hospital, from the several counties having patients chargeable thereto; and said auditor shall pass the same to the credit of the hospital. The auditor shall, thereupon, notify the county auditor of each county so owing of the amount thereof, and charge the same to said county; and the board of supervisors shall levy a tax in said county for said amount, and pay the amount due the state into the state treasury; and should they within one year from the taking effect of this act fail to levy such tax sufficient to pay the amount now due the state, as shown by the books of the auditor of state, and shall fail at the time of levying other taxes thereafter to levy the tax aforesaid to an amount sufficient to pay the sum then due the state, it shall be the duty of the auditor of state to charge such delinquent county with a penalty of three per centum per month upon the amount of indebtedness then six months due, for each month until payment thereof and penalty thereon be made. And should any county, within one year from the taking effect of this act, fail to levy such tax sufficient to pay the amount then due the state, and shall fail, at the time of levying other county taxes thereafter to levy the tax aforesaid to an amount sufficient to pay the indebtedness subsequently incurred, it shall be the duty of the attorney-general, upon request of the executive council, to bring, in the name of the state, an action against any county so failing as aforesaid, to enforce the levying of said tax. [13 G. A., ch. 109, § 45.]

No authority is given to the board of supervisors to levy an independent or special tax for the purposes here specified: Iowa Land Co. v. Carroll County, 39-151.

2228. Tax collected and paid. 17 G. A., ch. 183, § 2. It shall be the duty of the county treasurer on collection of the taxes herein required to be levied to pay into the state treasury the amount due and owing from his county at the times and in the manner required for the payment of state taxes collected.

2229. Not to be diverted. 17 G. A., ch. 183, § 3. Taxes levied and collected in any county for the purpose named in this act, shall be used only to defray the expenses of the insane chargeable to such county, and the costs incident thereto, and shall not be diverted to any other purpose, nor be transferred to any other fund.

2231. Notice to officers. 17 G. A., ch. 183, § 5. The auditor of state shall notify the several county auditors, and county treasurers of the provisions of this act, and it shall be the duty of said officers to present said notice to the board of supervisors at their first meeting thereafter.

of supervisors, are authorized and empowered to collect from the property of such patients any sums paid by the county in their behalf as herein provided; and the certificate from the superintendent and the notice from the auditor of state, stating the sums charged in such cases, shall be presumptive evidence of the correctness of the sums so stated. If the board of supervisors in the case of any insane patient, who has been supported at the expense of the county, shall deem it a hardship to charge the estate of any such patient with such cost of supporting the patient, they may relieve such estate or estates from any part or all of such burden as may seem to them reasonable and just. [Same, § 46; 12 G. A., ch. 179, § 13.]

The "relatives" contemplated in this section, as it stood before amendment, were only such as were legally bound for the support of the insane person. A father is not legally bound to support his adult children. The provisions of § 2117 et seq., as to the support of paupers, have no application under this section: Bonroe County v. Teller, 51-670.

Under this section as amended a husband is not liable for the expense of treating an insane wife sent to the hospital by the commissioners of insanity. Such expense is not family expense within the meaning of § 3405: Delaware County v. McDonald, 46-170.

The claim of the county becomes a lien from the commencement of the suit by the county for the expense of support, and collection is to be made like any other claim by action, judgment and execution. There is no lien until it is allowed by the court: Thode v. Spofford, 65-294.

2237. Meaning of term "insane." 1434. The term "insane," as used in this chapter, includes every species of insanity or mental derangement. The term "idiot," is restricted to persons foolish from birth, supposed to be naturally without mind. No idiot shall be admitted to the hospital. [13 G. A., ch. 109, § 54.]

A person who, of sound mind until nine years of age, then became affected with epilepsy and gradually lost her mind until she was unable to take the slightest care of herself, held insane within the meaning of this section: Speedling v. Worth County, 68-152.

VISITING COMMITTEE.

2238. Appointed by governor; power and duties. 1435. There shall be a visiting committee of three, one of whom at least shall be a woman, appointed by the governor, to visit the insane asylums of the state at their discretion, and without giving notice of their intended visit; who may, upon such visit, go through the wards unaccompanied by any officer of the institution, with power to send for persons and papers, and to examine witnesses on oath, to ascertain whether any of the inmates are improperly detained in the hospital, or unjustly placed there, and whether the inmates are humanely and kindly treated, with full power to correct any abuses found to exist; and any injury inflicted upon the insane shall be treated as an offense, misdemeanor, or crime, as the like offense would be regarded when inflicted upon any other citizen outside of the insane asylums. They shall have power to discharge any attendant or employee who is found to have been guilty of misdemeanor meriting such discharge; and in all these trials for misdemeanor, offense, or crime, the testimony of patients shall be taken and considered for what it is worth, and no employee at the asylum shall be allowed to sit upon any jury before whom these cases are tried. Said committee shall make an annual report to the governor. [14 G. A., ch. 91, § 1.]

[By § 122 this report, on odd-numbered years, is required to be made on or before September fifteenth. As to compensation of visiting committee, see § 5104.]

A visiting committee has no authority to punish witnesses for contempt in refusing to testify before it: Brown v. Davidson, 59-461.

2239. Inmates allowed to write. 1436; 15 G. A., ch. 53, § 2. The names of this visiting committee and their postoffice address, shall be kept posted in every ward in the asylum, and every inmate in the asylum shall be allowed to write once a week what he or she pleases to this committee. And any member of this committee who shall neglect to heed the calls of the patient to him for protection, when proved to have been needed, shall be deemed unfit for his office, and shall be discharged by the governor. [Same, § 2.]

2240. Writing material furnished. 1437. Every person confined in any insane asylum, shall be furnished by the superintendent or party having charge of such person, at least once in each week, with suitable materials for writing, inclosing, sealing, and mailing letters, if they request the same, unless otherwise ordered by the visiting committee, which order shall continue in force until countermanded by said committee. [Same, § 3.]

2241. Letters. 1438; 15 G. A., ch. 53, § 2. The superintendent or party having charge of any person under confinement, shall receive, if requested to do so by the person so confined, at least one letter in each week addressed to one of the visiting committee, without opening or reading the same, and without delay to deposit it in a postoffice for transmittal by mail, with a proper postage stamp affixed thereto; and to deliver to said person any letter (without opening or reading the same) written to him or her by one of the visiting committee. But all other letters written by, or to, the person so confined may be examined by the superintendent, and, if in his opinion the delivery of such letters would be injurious to the person so confined, he may retain the same. [Same, §§ 4, 5.]

2242. Inquest. 1439. In the event of the sudden and mysterious death of any person so confined, a coroner's inquest shall be held as provided for by law in other cases. [Same, § 6.]

2243. Punishment for violation of law. 1440. Any person neglecting to comply with, or wilfully and knowingly violating any of the provisions of the five preceding sections, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by both fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court, and by ineligibility for this office in the future, and, upon trial had for such offense, the testimony of any person, whether insane or otherwise, shall be taken and considered for what it is worth. [Same, § 7.]

2244. Visits of committee. 1441. At least one member of said committee shall visit the asylums for the insane every month. [Same, § 8.]

WHEN ILLEGALLY CONFINED.

2245. Commission of inquiry. 1442. On a statement in writing, verified by affidavit, addressed to a judge of the district [or circuit] court of the county in which the hospital is situated, or of the county in which any certain person confined in the hospital has his legal settlement, alleging that such person is not insane, and is unjustly deprived of his liberty, such judge shall appoint a commission of not more than three persons, in his discretion, to inquire into the merits of the case, one of whom shall be a physician, and if two or more are appointed, another shall be a lawyer. Without first summoning the party to meet them, they shall proceed to the hospital and have a personal interview with such person, so managed as to prevent him, if possible, from suspecting its object; and they shall make any inquiries and examinations they may deem necessary and proper of the officers and records of the hospital touching the merits of the case. If they shall judge it prudent and advisable, they may disclose to the party the object of their visit, and either in his presence or otherwise, make further investigation of the matter. They shall forthwith report to the judge making the appointment, the result of their examination and inquiries. Such report shall be accompanied by a statement of the case, made and signed by the superintendent. It, on such report and statement, and the hearing of the testimony, if any is offered, the judge shall find the person not insane, he shall order his discharge. If the contrary, he shall so state, and authorize his continued detention. The finding and order of the judge, with the report and other papers, shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the court over which such judge presides, who shall enter a memorandum thereof on his record, and forthwith notify the superintendent of the hospital of the finding and order of the judge, and the superintendent shall carry out the order. The commissioners appointed as provided in this section, shall be entitled to their necessary expenses and a reasonable compensation, to be allowed by the judge, and paid by the state out of any funds not otherwise appropriated; provided, that the applicant shall pay the same if the judge shall find that the application was made without probable grounds, and shall so order. [12 G. A., ch. 179, § 9; 13 G. A., ch. 109, § 36.]

2248. Failure of duty. 1445. Any officer required herein to perform any act and any person accepting an appointment under the provisions of this chapter, and wilfully refusing or neglecting to perform his duty as herein prescribed, shall be guilty of misdemeanor, besides being liable to an action for damages. [Same, § 49.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF DOMESTIC AND OTHER ANIMALS.

2249. Restrained. 1446; 15 G. A., ch. 70, § 2. Every owner of swine, sheep, or goats shall restrain the same from running at large. [R., § 288; 14 G. A., ch. 59, § 2.]

2250. Male animals. 1447. Any person may take possession of any stallion, jack, bull, boar, or buck, found at large in the county in which such person resides, and give notice thereof to any constable in the county, who shall sell the animals so taken at public auction to the best bidder for cash, having given ten days' notice of the time and place of sale, by posting the same in writing in three public places in the township wherein such animals were found at large. Out of the proceeds of sale he may pay all costs and charges of keeping and any damage done by said animals, and shall pay the remainder of said proceeds into the county treasury, to be applied to the use of the county, unless legal proof be made to the county auditor by the owner of said animals of his right thereto; such proof may be made at any time within twelve months from the sale, and thereupon said auditor shall order the proper amount to be paid to the owner out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated. But if the owner or any person for him, shall, on or before the day of sale, pay the costs and charges thus far made, and all damages, and make satisfactory proof of his ownership, the constable shall release the animals to him without proceeding further. [R., §§ 289, 1522; 10 G. A., ch. 65; 14 G. A., ch. 59, § 3.]

Under a somewhat similar provision it was said that the law did contemplate that the officer should have a process in order to make the sale provided for: Dalby v. Wolf, 14-228. The provisions as to stallions is not applicable to colts until they are of such ages as to be troublesome to mares or dangerous to be at large: Aylesworth v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 30-459.

2251. Distrain damage feasant; recovery. 1443; 15 G. A., ch. 70, § 3. When any person is injured in his lands inclosed by a lawful fence by any kind of domestic animal, he may recover his damages by an action against the owner, or by distraining the animals doing the damage; but if they were lawfully on the adjoining land, and escaped therefrom by reason of the neglect of the person suffering the damage to maintain his part of the division fence, the owner of the animals shall not be liable for such damage, and if the party injured elects to recover by action against the owner of the stock, no appraisal need be made by the trustees as in cases of distrain; and in counties where by police regulation stock is restrained from running at large, any person injured in his improved or cultivated lands by any domestic animal may recover his damages as provided in section six of this act and sections one thousand four hundred and fifty-four, one thousand four hundred and fifty-five, and one thousand four hundred and fifty-six of the code [§§ 2255 and 2258-2260], whether the lands whereon the injury was done was inclosed by a lawful fence or not. [R., § 1548; C., '51, § 913.]

In this state cattle are free commoners, and may lawfully be permitted to run at large, and the rule of the common law that every man is bound to keep his cattle within his own inclosure or be responsible in damage for injuries arising from their being abroad is not applicable to the condition and circumstances of the people, and is not in force: Wagner v. Bissell, 3-396; Heath v. Coltenback, 5-490; Alger v. M. & M. R. Co., 10-268; Russell v. Hawley, 20-219; Smith v. C., R. I. & P. R. Co., 34-506. Therefore, the owner of land can only maintain an action for trespass by cattle by showing that his fence was such as is required by statute: Frazier v. Nortinus, 34-82. But if cattle, after breaking over a sufficient fence into one field, go thence into another of the same owner, through a fence which is not sufficient, the action for their trespass upon the second field will lie: Herold v. Meyers, 20-378.

Cattle being free commoners, the mere fact of permitting them to run at large is not a ground of imputing negligence to the owner: Haughey v. Hart, 62-96.

The right of the owner of cattle or other stock to pasture them upon the commons is a permissive and not an abstract right. And while the owner of an inclosure cannot maintain an action for trespass against the owner of cattle entering thereon from the commons unless his fence is such as is required by statute, yet there is no obligation on his part to fence, and there can be no recovery for injuries to the cattle from feeding upon growing crops: Herold v. Meyers, 20-378.

If animals, though lawfully on adjoining land, escape therefrom and do damage, and their escape is not in consequence of the neglect of the person suffering the damage, their owner is liable therefor. It is not necessary that the fence surrounding the land of the person injured is throughout a lawful fence, if it is shown to have been such at the place where the cattle broke through. And this will be true where the owner of the adjoining land and the owner of the cattle are the same person and the fence broken through belongs to him: Noble v. Chase, 60-261.

It is only persons whose lands are inclosed by a lawful fence who are authorized to distrain domestic animals injuring their premises. If lands are not so inclosed there is no right to distrain, and possession acquired by such distrain is unlawful. The rightfulness of the distrain may therefore be inquired into in an action of replevin; it is not a matter for the exclusive determination of the fence viewers. But if the distrain is found to be legal the property may be remanded to the distrainer, and the damages may be assessed by the township trustees subject to the right of appeal as provided for in §§ 2258 and 2259: Syford v. Schiver, 61-155.

Cattle, when they of their own accord go upon the unfenced land of another, do not render their owner liable to an action by the owner of the land, and the owner of the cattle may rightfully enter to remove them; and if they have crossed the unfenced land of one and gone on to that of another they may be driven back across the land they crossed in entering: Camp v. Flaherty, 28-520.

Where plaintiff, claiming to own certain real estate, sought to recover damages from defendant for maliciously, wrongfully and unlawfully breaking down and destroying the fence and turning his cattle upon such land without plaintiff's consent, held, that an instruction, in substance, that if the land was the property of plaintiff, as to which the jury were directed to inquire, and if they found the land was fenced and the defendant broke down the fence and thereby allowed the cattle to go upon the land, or if the land was fenced and the fence was broken down without defendant's fault, and he drove his cattle upon the land, the plaintiff would be entitled to recover, was not erroneous: Erbes v. Wehmeyer, 69-85.

The owner of the land may have his remedy by action against the owner of the stock as here provided, or by distraining the animals as provided in §§ 2255 et seq. If he pursue the former course the ordinary rules as to proof, etc., apply, and he need not have the damages ascertained by the township trustees, as provided in § 2258: Quinton v. Van Tuyl, 30-554.

A land owner in a county where stock is prohibited from running at large is not relieved of his obligation to maintain partition fences, and if stock rightfully in an adjoining inclosure escape upon his land by reason of his failure to maintain such fence he cannot recover damages from the owner of the stock: Duffees v. Judd, 48-256.

The servant of a land owner, who distrains stock as agent of such owner, may justify as such agent in an action of replevin brought against him to recover the stock: Bearinger v. O'Hare, 26-250.

As to damage from bull unlawfully at large, see note to § 2255.

2253. Meaning of "stock;" question of running at large. 1450; 15 G. A., ch. 70, § 4. Section three hundred and nine of the code [§ 430] is hereby amended by striking out the word "now" in the fifth line thereof; and the word "stock," as used therein and in this chapter, is hereby declared to mean cattle, horses, mules, and asses; and under said section, the board of supervisors of each county may—and on petition of one-fourth of the legal voters thereof, as shown by the returns of the last general election, must—submit, in the manner provided by section three hundred and ten of the code [§ 431], except as herein modified, to the electors of the county at the next general election, or, if they deem it advisable, at a special election called for that purpose, the following questions of police regulation, or either of them, and no others, to wit:

First. Shall stock be restrained from running at large?

Second. Shall stock be restrained from running at large between sunset and sunrise?

Third. Shall stock be restrained from running at large from the first day of (naming the month) in each year, until the first day of (naming the month) following?

Fourth. Shall stock be restrained from running at large between sunset and sunrise from the first day of (naming the month) in each year, until the first day of (naming the month) following? [12 G. A., ch. 144; 13 G. A., ch. 26, § 1.]

The provisions of former statutes authorizing a submission of the question whether swine and sheep should be allowed to run at large, to vote in each county, were held to be merely an exercise of the police power, and therefore not unconstitutional as not having a uniform operation, nor as depending for their validity upon a vote of the people. (Const., art. 1, § 6, and art. 3, § 1): Dalby v. Wolf, 14-228.

A section similar to this, making the question whether that act should be in force in any county dependent upon a vote of the people of the county, was held unconstitutional, and the act was held to be in force in all the counties of the state without such adoption: Weir v. Cram, 37-649; Little v. McGuire, 33-560; Hallock v. Hughes, 42-516.

The provision that the word stock shall include cattle, horses, mules and asses is only applicable in the connection in which it is used, and is not to be deemed a limitation upon the meaning of the word as found in other statutes. As generally used it includes swine as well as the animals referred to: State v. Clark, 65-336.

running at large," or "for restraining stock from running at large between the hours of sunset and sunrise," as provided in chapter three, title eleven, of the code, or in the law or laws to which the same is amendatory, such vote is hereby declared to be legal and valid, and to amount to an adoption by the county of the police regulation so voted for, as the same is herein set out as fully and effectually as if the same was submitted and voted for under this act, except that the same shall be and remain in force in such county until the end of thirty days after the next general election and no longer unless re-adopted thereat. [12 G. A., ch. 144; 13 G. A., ch. 26, § 2.]

2255. Owner liable; distraint. 1452; 15 G. A., ch. 70, § 6; 18 G. A., ch. 188, § 1. The owner of any stock or domestic animal, prohibited by law or police regulation of any country from running at large at any of the times herebefore mentioned, shall be liable for all damages done thereby while wrongfully remaining at large upon the public highway, or upon the improved or cultivated lands of another, which may be recovered by action at law, or the party injured may, at his option, distrain the trespassing animals, and retain the same in some safe place, at the expense of the owner, until the damages are paid as provided in section[s] fourteen hundred and fifty-four, fourteen hundred and fifty-five, and fourteen hundred and fifty-six of the code [§§ 2258-2260]; said damages to be assessed pro rata per head, and each owner, if more than one owner, be liable for the pro rata amount, and each owner shall have the right to discharge his stock from distraint by paying the said pro rata amount to the person damaged, together with his pro rata share of the cost of distraint; provided, that no stock or domestic animal, except the male animals mentioned in section fourteen hundred and forty-seven of the code [§ 2250], shall be considered as running at large, so long as the same is upon unimproved or uncultivated lands, and under the immediate care and control of the owner, or upon the public highway under like care and control, for the purpose of travel or driving thereon. [12 G. A., ch. 144; 13 G. A., ch. 26, § 3.]

Held, that the original section as contained in 13 G. A., ch. 26, was applicable without a submission to vote of the question of restraining stock from running at large, and that it was immaterial whether the premises were enclosed with a lawful fence or not: Little v. McGuire, 38-560; Hallock v. Hughes, 42-516; and see notes to § 2253.

The owner of a thoroughbred cow, which is got with calf by an ill-bred and unpedigreed bull, unlawfully running at large, may recover damages from the owner of such bull, which are to be measured by the difference in the value of the cow, for the purpose of breeding of fine stock, before meeting such bull and afterwards: Crawford v. Williams, 48-247.

The fact that an eighty-acre tract of land is surrounded by a single ploughed furrow, and includes a few acres under cultivation, will not render it all improved or cultivated land within the meaning of this section; but in such cases the owner of the land may recover damages from the owner of cattle who herds and confines them upon such land: Otis v. Morgan, 61-712.

The word "stock" here used includes swine: State v. Clark, 65-336.

2257. Who to be considered owner. 1453; 15 G. A., ch. 70, § 7. The word owner, as used in the preceding and in the three succeeding sections of this chapter of the code [§§ 2255 and 2258-2260], shall include the person entitled to the present possession of the animal, and also the person having the care or charge of the same, as well as the person having the legal title thereto. [12 G. A., ch. 144; 13 G. A., ch. 26, § 4.]

2258. Assessment of damages; enforcement. 1454. Within twenty four hours after the stock has been distrained, Sunday not being included, the party so injured, or his agent, shall notify the owner of said stock, when known, and if said owner shall fail to satisfy the owner of, or occupant cultivating said land, he shall, within twenty-four hours thereafter, notify the township trustees to be and appear upon the premises to view and assess the damages; such notices to be either verbal or in writing. When two or more trustees have assembled, they shall proceed to view and assess the damages and the amount to be paid for keeping said stock; and if the person or persons owning such distrained stock refuse to pay such damages so assessed, then the trustees shall post up notices in three conspicuous places in the township where such damages were done, that the said stock, or so much thereof as is necessary to pay said damages with costs of sale, will be sold to the highest bidder; any money or stock left after satisfying such claims shall be returned to the owner of the stock so disposed of; said sale shall take place at the inclosure where such stock was distrained between the hours of one and three P. M. on the tenth day after the posting of said notice; provided, that if any one or more of said trustees are interested in said damages, the trustee or trustees not so interested shall appoint some one or more, as the case may require, to act in the place of the person or persons so interested; the owner of the stock, or the person entitled to the possession thereof, when known, shall also be notified of the time and place of the meeting of said trustees to assess said damages. When either trustee is absent so that notice cannot be served upon him, then any justice of the peace shall appoint a suitable person, having the qualifications of a juror, to supply the place of the absent trustee, and the person so appointed shall serve as such trustee for all the purposes of this and the following sections. [13 G. A., ch. 26, § 5; 12 G. A., ch. 144.]

Upon the hearing before fence viewers to assess the damages caused by stock running at large, the question as to whether the stock was improperly at large, as well as the amount of damage done, is before the fence viewers, and such question may also be considered on appeal from their action: Duffees v. Judd, 48-256.

This section does not confer special authority upon the township trustees to inquire into and determine the lawfulness of the fence inclosing the injured premises, and that matter may be determined in an action of replevin to recover the property from the person making distraint, when it is claimed that his premises are not surrounded by a lawful fence: Syford v. Schwer, 61-155.

The fence viewers are not given special authority to inquire into and determine the lawfulness of fences inclosing the premises trespassed upon by cattle, and that matter may be determined in an action of replevin to recover the animals from the person making distraint, when it is claimed that his premises are not surrounded by a lawful fence: Ibid.

Failure to serve notice upon one of the trustees, who might have been served, will render the action of the other two entirely void, as being without jurisdiction: Barrett v. Dotan, 71-94.

Notice to the owner of the stock of the amount of damages assessed by the trustees, and the demand from him that he pay such damages, are not necessary to warrant a sale: Miller v. Dale, 72-470.

2259. Assessment made; appeal. 1455. The trustees shall make their assessment in writing and file the same with the township clerk, to be of record in his office. Any person aggrieved by the action of the trustees under this chapter, may appeal to the circuit [district] court of the proper county. The bond shall be filed with the clerk of the township in a penalty double the value of the property distrained, or if the value of the property exceed the amount of the damage claimed, then double the amount of the damage. Notice of such appeal shall be given in the same time and manner as in appeals from a judgment of a justice of the peace, with good and sufficient securities, to be approved by the clerk; and from and after the filing of the appeal bond, the same shall operate as a supersedeas. In case the owner of such stock be appellant the same shall be delivered to him. The clerk, after the appeal is taken, shall certify all the original papers to the clerk of the circuit [district] court within the time prescribed for the appeal. [13 G. A., ch. 26, § 6; 12 G. A., ch. 144.]

[The word "stock" between "such" and "be" in the eleventh line is omitted in the printed Code.]

Upon appeal to the circuit court, not only and the sufficiency of the fences, may be rethe amount of damages, but also the question viewed: Duffees v. Judd, 48-256.
whether the stock were in fact trespassers,

2260. Estrays. 1456. If the owners of such distrained stock are not known, it shall be treated as estrays. [13 G. A., ch. 26, § 7; 12 G. A., ch. 144.]

[Secs. 1457 to 1463 repealed by 15 G. A., ch. 70, § 1.]

An animal stolen from its owner and afterwards abandoned by the thief may lawfully be treated as an estray: Kinney v. Roe, 70-509.

2261. Unbroken animals. 1464. No person shall take up any unbroken animal as a stray, between the first day of May and the first day of November, unless the same be found within his lawful inclosure, nor shall any person take up any stray unless he be a householder. [9 G. A., ch. 102, § 1.]

[The word "any" in the first line is "an" in the printed Code.]

A distinction is here contemplated between mer may be taken up if found running in the a broken and an unbroken animal. The for- highway: Knudson v. Gieson, 88-234.

2262. Who may take up. 1465. If any horse, mule, neat cattle, or other animal, liable to be taken up as a stray, come upon any person's premises, any other person may notify him of the fact, and if he fail to take up such stray for more than five days after such notice, any other person being a householder in the same township, may take up such stray and proceed with it as if taken upon his own premises; provided, that he shall produce to the justice of the peace proof of the service of such notice, and all persons taking up stray animals shall state to the justice, under oath, where such stray was taken up. [Same, § 2.]

An estray is an animal whose owner is un- such animal is known to him. In such case known, and therefore a person cannot take up the owner may replevin without tendering an animal as an estray when the owner of costs: Walters v. Glats, 29-437.

2265. Entry in estray book. 1468. The justice shall, within ten days thereafter, send a certified copy of said entry to the county auditor, who shall immediately enter the same in an estray book, to be kept by him for that purpose. If the appraised value of the stray is ten dollars, or more, the auditor shall cause a copy of said entry to be posted on the court-house door, and a copy of said notice to be inserted three times in some newspaper in the county, if there be one, if not, he shall cause to be posted up written notices in three public places in the county, and he shall, within ten days after receiving the notice of appraisement, unless the animal shall have been previously reclaimed by the owner, forward a certified copy of the same to the public printer hereafter provided; together with the amount required to pay for two insertions of said notice in the paper published by such printer. [Same, §§ 5, 6.]

2268. Property vests when. 1471. Where the appraised value of any stray does not exceed five dollars, no further proceedings need be had than for the justice to enter a description of said stray on his estray book, and if no owner appear within six months, the right of the property shall vest in the finder, if he has complied with the law and paid all costs. [Same, § 12.]

2270. Use or appropriation. 1473. Any person legally taking up a stray may use or work, if he does so with care and moderation, and does not abuse or injure it. But if any person unlawfully take up any stray, or take up any stray and fail to comply with the provisions of this chapter, or use or work it in a manner contrary to this chapter, or work it before having it appraised, or keep such stray out of the county for more than five days at any one time, before he acquires a title to said stray, such offender shall forfeit to the county twenty dollars, to be sued for by any person in the county; and the owner of the stray may also recover of such offender double the amount of all injury sustained, with costs. [Same, § 16.]

2272. Title vests in finder. 1475. If the owner fail to claim and prove his title to any stray for one year after the time of taking up, and the finder shall have complied with this law, a complete title to the stray shall vest in the finder; but if the owner shall appear within eighteen months from the time of taking up, and prove his ownership of such stray, and pay all costs and expenses as above provided, the finder shall pay him the appraised value of such stray, or may, at his option, deliver up the stray. [Same, § 18.]

2273. Finder not liable. 1476. If any stray legally taken up, escape from the finder, or die, without any fault on his part, he shall not be liable for the loss. [Same, § 19.]

2274. Penalty. 1477. If any person shall sell, or trade, or take out of the state, any stray before the legal title shall have vested in him, he shall forfeit to the owner double the value of said stray, and shall be punished by fine not exceeding ninety dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days. [Same, § 20.]

2275. Same. 1478. If any printer, auditor, or justice of the peace, fail to perform the duties enjoined upon him by this chapter in relation to strays, he shall forfeit to the county not less than five or more than fifty dollars, to be sued for by any person in the county. [Same, § 21.]

2276. Marks and brands. 1479. The board of supervisors of each county shall procure at the expense of the county, a book for each civil township, in which to record the marks and brands of horses, sheep, hogs, and other animals. [R., § 1555; C., '51, § 920.]

2277. Record. 1480. Any person wishing to mark or brand his domestic animals with any distinguishing mark, may adopt his own mark and have a description thereof recorded by the clerk of the township in which the owner lives. [R., § 1556; C., '51, § 921.]

2278. Mark previously recorded. 1481. No person shall adopt a mark or brand previously recorded to another person residing in the same township, nor shall the clerk record the same one to two persons, unless on their joint application. [R., § 1557; C., '51, § 922.]

REGISTRATION OF PEDIGREES.

2279. Certificate posted. 22 G. A., ch. 102, § 1. Any owner or keeper of a stallion or bull for public service, who represents him to be a pure bred, or thorough bred bull, or standard bred, or thorough bred stallion or bull, of any breed of horses or cattle, that have a stud or herd book for the registration of their pedigrees, shall place a copy of certificate of registration on the door of the stall or stable, where said stallion is usually kept, giving the number of registration, name of breeder and name of animal and the volume and page of the stud or herd book in which said stallion or bull is recorded and when requested to do so shall give to any patron a copy of said certificate.

2280. Penalty. 22 G. A., ch. 102, § 2. Any owner or keeper of such stallion or bull who shall violate provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished accordingly.

CARE; PREVENTION OF CRUELTY.

2281. Abandoned animals. 1482. Any person may take charge of any animal whose owner has abandoned it or fails to properly take care and provide for it, and may furnish the same with proper shelter, nourishment, and care, at the owner's expense, and shall have a lien on such animal for the same; which lien, at the expiration of three months, shall become a perfect title to the property as provided in the case of a stray. [13 G. A., ch. 176, § 4.]

2282. Food and water supplied. 1483. In case any creature impounded or otherwise confined, shall be without necessary food or water for more than twelve successive hours, it shall be lawful for any person, as often as necessary, to enter the pound, inclosure, or building, and supply it with necessary food and water so long as it shall remain so confined; and the reasonable cost of such food and water may be collected by him of the owner of such creature. [Same, § 9.]

2283. Diseased animals killed. 1484. The sheriff, constable, police officer, officer of any society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, or any magistrate, shall destroy any horse or other animal having the disease called and known as the glanders, or any disabled creature unfit for further use. [Same, § 10.]

2284. Dogs killed. 1485. It shall be lawful for any person to kill any dog caught in the act of worrying, maiming, or killing any sheep or lambs, or other domestic animal, or any dog attacking or attempting to bite any person, and the owner shall be liable to the party injured, for all damages done by his dog, except when the party is doing an unlawful act. [Ex. S., 9 G. A., ch. 20, § 3; 9 G. A., ch. 76, § 9.]

To justify the killing of a dog under this section he must be not only trespassing but actually engaged in one of the acts mentioned: Marshall v. Blackshire, 44-475.

A person who has a dog in his possession or harbors him on his premises, as owners usually do with their dogs, is to be considered the owner within the meaning of this section. In determining the question of ownership the jury must consider the party's former treatment of the animal, his declarations concerning him, and the habits of the dog as to staying at such person's place: O'Harra v. Miller, 64-462.

Aside from this provision a person who has in his charge a vicious dog, knowing his character, and fails to restrain him, is absolutely liable for an injury inflicted. It makes no difference whether the person has charge of the animal as owner or only as bailee: Marsel v. Bowman, 62-57.

Dogs may be personal property and have value, and such value may be shown in an action for injury thereto: Anson v. Dwight, 18-241.

OTHER PROVISIONS.

2285. Bond to release. 1486. Any animal, or other property, taken up, held, distrained, or seized under this chapter, may be released at once by the owner, upon execution and filing of a bond in double the value of the property held, conditioned for the payment of all costs and damages for which the same is held, and to which the one taking up, holding, or distraining, may be legally entitled, within twenty days from the filing and approval of such bond; said bond shall be filed with and approved by any constable, sheriff, or other officer having custody of the property, or by the nearest acting justice of the peace, or by the justice before whom any legal proceedings relating to such property is pending. Said bond shall be for the use of any person having any right or interest in or to said property so released.

[The word "with" after "filed" in the seventh line is erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

2286. Bounty. 1487. A bounty of one dollar shall be allowed on each scalp of a wolf, lynx, swift, or wild-cat, to be paid out of the treasury of the county in which the animal was taken, upon a verified statement of the facts showing the claimant to be entitled thereto. [R., §§ 2193, 2195.]

2287. Proceedings. 1488. The person claiming the bounty shall produce such statement, together with the scalp or scalps, with the ears thereon, to the county auditor, or a justice of the peace of the county wherein such wolf, lynx, swift, or wild-cat, may have been taken and killed; and the officer before whom such scalps are produced shall deface or destroy the scalps when so produced, so as to prevent the use of the same to obtain for the second time the bounty herein provided for. [R., § 2194.]

In an action to recover from the county additional bounty offered for wolf scalps, held, that the certificate of a justice of the peace showing the delivery to him of the scalps and that he had destroyed the same was sufficient evidence of the fact that such wolves were caught and killed in the county, and that the scalps had ears: Murray v. Jones County, 72-286.

COMPENSATION FOR DOMESTIC ANIMALS KILLED BY DOGS.

2288. Assessors to list dogs. 20 G. A., ch. 70, § 1. It shall be the duty of every assessor of this state, at the time of listing the property of his district, to list each dog over three months of age in the name of the owner thereof, without affixing any value thereto. Any person keeping or harboring a dog or dogs shall be deemed the owner thereof within the meaning of this act.

2289. Tax. 20 G. A., ch. 70, § 2. The board of supervisors of each county shall, at their September session each year, when levying other taxes, levy a tax of fifty cents on each male, and one dollar on each female dog listed by the assessor, which tax shall constitute a special fund, to be disposed of as provided for in this act.

2290. Assessment. 20 G. A., ch. 70, § 3. It shall be the duty of each county auditor to provide suitable columns, properly headed, in the assessor's book, to carry out the provisions of this act.

2292. Damages, how claimed; proof; allowance. 20 G. A., ch. 70, § 5; 22 G. A., ch. 42. Any person damaged by the killing or injury of sheep, or any other domestic animal, by a dog or dogs, may present to the board of supervisors of the county in which such killing or injury occurred, a detailed account of such killing or injury, stating the amount of damage claimed therefor, and verified by affidavit, such claim to be filed with the county auditor at least ten days before some regular session of the board, and within sixty days from the time such killing or injury occurred. At the first regular session of the board of supervisors after such claim shall have been filed for ten days as herein provided, the same may be established by proof before the board; and upon the hearing thereof, the claimant shall establish his claim for damages by testimony satisfactory to said board. It shall also be made to appear to the satisfaction of said board that such damage was not caused, in whole or in part, by a dog or dogs owned or controlled by the claimant, and that claimant does not know whose dog or dogs caused the damage, and that said damage was caused by dogs; or, in case the owner of such dog or dogs is known to the claimant, and that such owner has no property subject to execution, out of which the claim can be made. The board shall hear and determine said claims in the order in which they are filed unless good cause is shown for continuance, and shall allow the same or such portions thereof as they may deem just, and shall authorize the auditor to issue warrants for the same not to exceed seventy-five per cent. of the amount allowed to be paid out of the domestic animal fund.

2293. Payment. 20 G. A., ch. 70, § 6. The treasurer shall, between the first and tenth days of January and the first and tenth days of July of each year, pay the said warrants issued by the auditor as provided for by section five of this act [§ 2292], out of the domestic animal fund. If said fund is insufficient to pay said warrants in full, he shall pay on each pro rata. If after paying all warrants at either period above named, there shall remain more than two hundred and fifty dollars of said fund in the treasury, the board of supervisors shall order the excess to be transferred to the county fund.

CHAPTER 3a.

2294. Appointment; qualification; compensation. 20 G. A., ch. 189, § 1. The governor shall appoint a state veterinary surgeon who shall hold his office for a term of three years unless sooner removed by the governor; he shall be a graduate of some regular and established veterinary college and shall be skilled in veterinary science; he shall be a member of the state board of health, which membership shall be in addition to that now provided by law. When actually engaged in the discharge of his official duties he shall receive from the state treasury as his compensation the sum of five dollars per day and his actual expenses, which shall be presented under oath and covered by written vouchers before receiving the same.

2295. Powers. 20 G. A., ch. 189, § 2. 2296. Penalty for interfering with. 20 G. A., ch. 189, § 3. Any person who wilfully hinders, obstructs or resists said veterinary surgeon or his assistants, or any peace officer acting under him or them when engaged in the duties or exercising the powers herein conferred, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished accordingly.

which shall be ascertained and fixed by the state veterinary surgeon and the nearest justice of the peace, who, if unable to agree, shall jointly select another justice of the peace as umpire and their judgment shall be final when the value of the stock does not exceed one hundred dollars, but in all other cases either party shall have the right of appeal to the circuit [district] court, but such appeal shall not delay the destruction of the diseased animals. The state veterinary surgeon shall, as soon thereafter as may be, file his written report thereof with the governor, who shall, if found correct, indorse his finding thereon, whereupon the auditor of state shall issue his warrant therefor upon the treasurer of state who shall pay the same out of any moneys at his disposal under the provisions of this act; provided, that no compensation shall be allowed for any stock destroyed while in transit through or across this state, and that the word stock, as herein used, shall be held to include only neat cattle and horses.

A certificate given by a deputy veterinary surgeon to the owner of a horse showing him to be affected with glanders, held not admissible as evidence that he was so affected at the time of his purchase, more than a year previous to the giving of such certificate: Welch v. Norton, 73-721.

2300. Co-operate with United States. 20 G. A., ch. 189, § 7. The governor of the state, with the state veterinary surgeon, may co-operate with the government of the United States for the objects of this act, and the governor is hereby authorized to receive and receipt for any moneys receivable by this state under the provisions of any act of congress which may at any time be in force upon this subject, and to pay the same into the state treasury to be used according to the act of congress and the provisions of this act as nearly as may be.

2301. Appropriation. 20 G. A., ch. 189, § 8. There is hereby appropriated out of any moneys not otherwise appropriated the sum of ten thousand dollars for use in 1884 and 1885, and three thousand dollars annually thereafter, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the uses and purposes herein set forth.

2302. Compensation to assistants. 20 G. A., ch. 189, § 9. Any person, except the veterinary surgeons, called upon under the provisions of this act shall be allowed and receive two dollars per day while actually employed.

CHAPTER 36.

2303. Private ownership. 16 G. A., ch. 70, § 4. Persons raising or propagating fish on their own premises, or owning premises on which there are waters having no natural outlet, supplied with fish, shall absolutely own said fish, and any person taking fish therefrom, or attempting to take fish therefrom, without the consent of the owner, or his agent, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not more than twenty-five dollars, nor less than five dollars or imprisoned in the county jail not more than thirty days, and shall be liable to the owners of the fish in damages in double the amount of damages sustained, the same to be recovered in a civil action before any court having jurisdiction over the same.

2307. Fish commissioner; duties. 17 G. A., ch. 80, § 1. The governor of the state is hereby authorized and required to appoint, after the expiration of the term of the present incumbent, and biennially thereafter, one competent person, who shall be known as the state fish commissioner, who shall hold his position for the term of two years; and any vacancy that may occur, for the unexpired term, or by reason of the expiration of the term of said office, shall be filled by the appointment and commission of the governor. The general duties of said commissioner, including the present incumbent, shall be to have general charge and superintendence of the state hatching house, now located at Anamosa, to forward the restoration of fish to the rivers and waters of the state, and to stock the same with fish from said hatching house, and elsewhere, to the extent that means therefor may be furnished by the state, and to the extent that means for that purpose may be furnished by the United States fish commissioner, and by societies and individuals interested in the propagation of fish in the waters of this state.

2308. Salary. 17 G. A., ch. 80, § 2. The fish commissioner, including the present incumbent, shall receive, in full compensation for his services, twelve hundred dollars per year, to be paid out of any money in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated.

2310. Obstructions prohibited. 17 G. A., ch. 80, § 5. No person shall place, erect, or cause to be placed or erected, across any of the rivers, creeks, ponds or lakes of this state, any trot line, dam, seine, weir, fish dam, or other obstruction, in such manner as to prevent the free passage of fish up, down or through such water-courses, unless the same be done by the instruction or under the direction of the fish commissioner, and when the same is so done by or through the instruction, or under the direction of the fish commissioner, it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to remove, or in any way interfere with the same. This section shall not be construed to prohibit the erection of dams for manufacturing purposes as provided by law.

2311. Penalty. 17 G. A., ch. 80, § 6. Any person found guilty of a violation of the provisions of section five of this act [§ 2310], shall, upon conviction before a justice of the peace, be fined not less than twenty-five, nor more than one hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not less than ten days, nor more than thirty days, in the discretion of the court.

2315. Provisions applicable. 21 G. A., ch. 155, § 5. Wherever the law in regard to the propagation of fish now in force refers to the hatching house at Anamosa the same shall be deemed hereafter to refer so far as applicable to the hatching house at Spirit Lake.

2316. Where required. 17 G. A., ch. 188, § 1. The owner or owners of any dam or obstruction across any river or stream, creek, pond, lake, or water-course, in this state, shall, within a reasonable time, erect, construct and maintain, over or across said dam or obstruction, a suitable fish-way of suitable capacity and facility to afford a free passage for fish up and down through such water-course when the water of said stream is running over the said dam.

Any person guilty of the violation of the provisions of this act, shall, upon conviction before a justice of the peace, be fined not less than five nor more than fifty dollars for the first offense, and not less than twenty dollars for each subsequent offense, and shall stand committed until such fine is paid.

FISH DAMS ACROSS OUTLETS OF LAKES.

2319. Cities and towns may maintain. 21 G. A., ch. 63, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 108. Any city or incorporated town which is bounded in whole or in part by any meandered lake or chain of lakes of this state is hereby authorized and empowered to construct and maintain across any outlet of such lake a dam to obstruct the passage of fish. Such dam may be constructed of earth, masonry or other substance to the heighth [height] of the natural and ordinary level of the lake, but above such level and across the entire width of the natural outlet it shall be an open net-work of bars, rods, or wire, including however the necessary and proper framework and supports therefor. Said net-work may be constructed to prevent so far as possible the escape of fish from the lake. But nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize the raising of the ordinary and natural level of the lake or the interfering with any water-power, dwelling-house, out-building, orchard or grove.

2320. May condemn property for. 21 G. A., ch. 63, § 2. Such city or town is authorized to purchase or to condemn in the manner provided by law for condemning private property for streets and other municipal purposes so much land situate within or without the corporate limits of said city or town as the council shall deem necessary for the construction and maintenance of such dam and to pay for the same out of the general fund; provided, however that before any city or incorporated town shall be authorized to acquire property or construct or maintain a dam by virtue of the provisions of this act a majority of the resident tax payers of such city or town shall petition the council therefor.

2321. Penalty for injuring. 21 G. A., ch. 63, § 3. If any person shall wilfully injure or destroy or be a party to the injury or destruction of any dam constructed or maintained by virtue of the provisions of this act he shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year.

CHAPTER 4.

OF FENCES.

2322. Partition. 1489. The respective owners of lands inclosed with fences, shall keep up and maintain partition fences, between their own and the next adjoining inclosure so long as they improve them in equal shares, unless otherwise agreed between them. [R., § 1526; C., '51, § 895.]

Applied: Schnare v. Gehman, 9-283.

2323. Neglect to build or repair; fence viewers. 1490. If any party neglect to repair or rebuild a partition fence, or a portion thereof, which he ought to maintain, the aggrieved party may complain to the fence viewers, who, after due notice to each party, shall examine the same, and if they determine the fence is insufficient, shall signify it in writing to the delinquent occupant of the land, and direct him to repair or rebuild the same within such time as they judge reasonable. [R., § 1527; C., '51, § 896.]

The duty of maintaining partition fences as provided in this chapter, being one created solely by statute, the method prescribed by the statute for enforcing such duty must be followed. A party cannot proceed by action in court instead of by application to the fence viewers: Lease v. Vance, 28-509.

It is not necessary that the complaint to the fence viewers be in writing and made matter of record: Tubbs v. Ogden, 46-134.

Unless due notice is given to the adverse party of the meeting of the fence viewers to examine the fence the subsequent proceedings cannot constitute the basis of a recovery against him: Lookhart v. Wessels, 46-81. As to what is due and sufficient notice, see Tubbs v. Ogden, 46-134.

Fence viewers have jurisdiction only when a controversy arises between the respective owners of land about the partition fences: Anderson v. Cox, 54-578.

Where the parties have agreed to maintain a certain kind of fence the trustees may determine whether such agreement has been performed and decide as to time and manner of performance: Huber v. Wilkinson, 46-458.

The evidence of fence viewers is competent in regard to a matter upon which they are authorized to form an opinion: Phillips v. Oystee, 32-257.

An apportionment of the obligation to maintain a partition fence, made after the adoption of the herd law, which is acquiesced in and complied with by both parties, remains binding on them until in some manner the parties are relieved therefrom: Barrett v. Dolan, 71-94.

2324. Penalty for non-compliance with order. 1491. If such fence be not repaired or rebuilt accordingly, the complainant may repair or rebuild it, and the same being adjudged sufficient by the fence viewers, and the value thereof, with their fees, being ascertained by them and certified under their hands, the complainant may demand of the owner of the land where the fence was deficient the sum so ascertained, and, in case of neglect to pay the same for one month after demand, may recover it with one per cent. a month interest by action. [R., § 1528; C., '51, § 897.]

The action of the fence viewers is conclusive where they have jurisdiction; but they cannot conclude a party by determining that to be a partition fence which, in fact, is not: Bills v. Belknap, 38-225.

The adjudication by the trustees as to the sufficiency of the fence should be by them sitting as a board, and as a result of personal inspection, but the inspection need not be made by them in a body. A record of the adjudication should be made by the clerk, but it is not necessary that such adjudication be reduced to writing and certified by them. The certificate of the viewers as to the value of the fence should be filed with the clerk and will then be sufficient evidence of complainant's rights and notice to the adverse party: Tubbs v. Ogden, 46-134.

There is no appeal from the action of fence viewers: McKeever v. Jenks, 59-350.

The decision of fence viewers upon questions within their jurisdiction is conclusive, and the fact that the statute as to these matters denies to the parties a trial in court, either by an appeal or otherwise, does not render it unconstitutional: Ibid.

2325. Disputes; fence viewers to settle. 1492. When a controversy arises between the respective owners about the obligation to erect or maintain partition fences, either party may apply to the fence viewers, who, after due notice to each party, may inquire into the matter and assign to each his share thereof, and direct the time within which each shall erect or repair his share in the manner provided above. [R., § 1529; C., '51, § 893.]

Neither the notice here provided, nor the finding assigning to each his share, etc., need be in writing, though it would be the better practice to put them in that form: Talbot v. Blackledge, 22-572; Gontz v. Clark, 31-254.

Therefore, held, that a party at whose house the viewers met, and who was verbally notified by them of making a division, and, on being asked whether he had received notice, admitted that he had, could not object to want of a written notice. Also held, that where parties were verbally notified, and knew of the action and decision of the fence viewers, and such decision was reduced to writing and duly recorded, objection as to want of notice thereof could not be considered: Talbot v. Blackledge, 22-572.

Under a former statutory provision, held, that notice of a meeting of the fence viewers to determine the value of a fence erected in pursuance of their direction, not being expressly required, was not necessary: Ibid.

The statute does not make the fence viewers sole judges of the sufficiency of the fence in an action brought for damages caused by trespassing cattle. The sufficiency may be proved like any other fact: Noble v. Chase, 60-261.

Where a party, without availing himself of the provisions of the statute as to fence viewers, gave notice to an adjoining land owner to build one-half the fence between their lands, and such adjoining owner, in compliance with his demands, built his one-half the fence and afterwards built the remainder of the fence, which should have been built by the party giving the notice, held, that the party thus building the fence might recover, from the party serving the notice, the value of one-half the fence built: Schnare v. Gehman, 9-283.

When exercising power granted to them, the proceedings of fence viewers are to be considered by the court as to all matters of form with at least the same tender and indulgent consideration which is extended to proceedings before a justice of the peace: Ibid.

As to necessity of notice, see note to § 2323.

The decision of the fence viewers is not conclusive as to the true division line, and in an action by one land owner against an adjoining owner to recover the proportion of the cost of building a partition fence, in accordance with the direction of the fence viewers, the defendant may show, as a defense, that the fence was not erected upon the true line: Peschonys v. Mueller, 50-237; and see note to preceding section.

2326. Failure to comply. 1493. If a party neglect to erect or maintain the part of fence assigned him by the fence viewers, it may be erected and maintained by the aggrieved party in the manner before provided, and he shall be entitled to double the value thereof, to be recovered as directed above. [R., § 1530; C., '51, § 899.]

2327. Repair. 1494. All partition fences shall be kept in good repair throughout the year, unless the owners on both sides otherwise agree. [R., § 1531; C., '51, § 900.]

2328. Who required to maintain. 1495; 22 G. A., ch. 95, § 1. No person not wishing his land inclosed and not occupying nor using it otherwise than in common, shall be compelled to contribute to erect or maintain any fence between him and an adjacent owner; but when he incloses, cultivates or uses his land otherwise than in common, he shall contribute to the partition fences as in this chapter provided. [R., § 1532; C., '51, § 901.]

In counties where a herd law is in force a party desiring to use his ground for purposes not requiring a fence in such county, for instance, for raising crops alone, cannot be compelled to contribute to the erection of a partition fence between his land and that of an owner who desires to use his premises for purposes requiring fences, as, for instance, raising stock; and this is true notwithstanding the provision of § 2341: Syas v. Peck, 58-256.

Land is to be deemed as not used in common where the use is such that means must be taken to preserve the crops. Where there is no regulation prohibiting stock from running at large, the party desiring to use his land for the raising of crops which must be protected from such stock must contribute to a partition fence. Where it did not appear that stock was not prohibited from running at large, held, that such fact would not be presumed for the purpose of establishing error in the judgment below: Hewitt v. Jewell, 59-37.

2329. Division of land inclosed in common. 1496. When lands owned in severalty have been inclosed in common without a partition fence, and one of the owners is desirous to occupy his in severalty, and the other refuses or neglects to divide the line where the fence should be built or build a sufficient fence on his part of the line when divided, the party desiring it may have the same divided and assigned by the fence viewers, who may, in writing, assign a reasonable time, having regard for the season of the year for making the fence, and if either party neglect to comply with the decisions of the viewers, the other, after making his own part, may make the other part and recover as directed above. [R., § 1533; C., '51, § 902.]

Adjoining owners cannot be considered as occupying their premises in severalty, within the meaning of the statute, unless there be a partition fence of such character that the proprietor is able to keep his stock upon his own premises. Therefore, held, that a hedge which had not attained sufficient perfection to prevent stock from passing through it did not constitute a partition fence, and the owners were therefore holding in common within the meaning of the statute: Miner v. Bennett, 45-635.

Where one of the owners of adjacent property inclosed in common intentionally puts his animals into the common inclosure, by which the property of the other owner is injured, he is liable therefor, and it is immaterial whether the fence inclosing the common inclosure was a lawful fence or not: Broadwell v. Wilcox, 22-568.

One who purposely turns his cattle upon his land, from which they go upon the land of another, inclosed in common, and do damage, is liable, though there was no intention that they should go upon his neighbor's land. And where the land trespassed upon is inclosed in common with that of the owner of the cattle, without partition fence, by agreement, the liability is the same as though their lands were separated by a lawful partition fence. The agreement stands as and for the fence: Winters v. Jacobs, 29-115.

2330. Throwing open. 1497. In the case mentioned in the preceding section, when one of the owners desires to throw open any portion of his field not less than twenty feet in width, and leave it uninclosed to be used in common by the public, he shall first give the other party six months' notice thereof. [R., § 1534; C., '51, § 903.]

When a person incloses land adjoining the inclosure of another, and, before any division of the fence separating them has been made, desires to throw open his field as provided in this section, it would seem that he might do so at pleasure and without notice: Miner v. Bennett, 45-635.

2331. Payment for fence when used. 1498. When land which has lain uninclosed is inclosed, the owner thereof shall pay for one-half of each partition fence between his lands and the adjoining lands, the value to be ascertained by the fence viewers, and if he neglect for thirty days after notice and demand to pay the same, the other party may recover as before provided; or he may, at his election, rebuild and make half of the fence, and if he neglect so to do for two months after making such election, he shall be liable as above provided. [R., § 1535; C., '51, § 904.]

2332. Division recorded. 1499. When a division of fence between the owners of improved lands may have been made, either by fence viewers, or by agreement in writing, recorded in the office of the clerk of the township where the lands are, the owners and their heirs and assigns shall be bound thereby, and shall support them accordingly, but if any desire to lay his lands in common, and not improve them adjoining the fence divided as above, the proceedings shall be as directed in the case where lands owned in severalty have been inclosed in common without a partition fence. [R., § 1536; C., '51, § 905.]

If parties use a fence as a partition fence between their farms, it is wholly immaterial whether it is on the exact boundary line, so far as the obligation to maintain the fence or contribute to its construction is concerned: Card v. Dale, 67-552.

One of the adjacent proprietors cannot evade the law or defeat it by purposely making his fence a few feet from instead of upon the dividing line: Talbot v. Blackledge, 22-572.

Where defendant in inclosing his premises left a private way entirely on his own land, next to his neighbor's, held, that he could not be required, in addition to fencing such right of way over the remainder of his own land, to construct his share of the partition fence between such right of way and his neighbor's land: Bland v. Hixenbaugh, 39-532.

A party who fences across a public alley in a village, separating his lot from his neighbor's, so as to make use of his neighbor's fence, does not thereby make such fence a partition fence nor render himself liable to pay for a share thereof: Anderson v. Cox, 54-578.

An assignment made by the fence viewers under § 2325 is binding upon the parties thereto without being recorded: Gantz v. Clark, 31-254.

The agreement here referred to is one between the owners as to the amount of fence each shall maintain; and held, that an agreement that there should be a lane and no partition fences need not be in writing: Bills v. Belknap, 38-225.

See note to § 2330.

2333. Definition of "owner" and "fence viewers." 1500. In the provisions of this chapter, the term "owner" shall apply to the occupant or tenant when the owner does not reside in the county, but these proceedings will not bind the owner unless notified. The term "fence viewers" means the fence viewers of the township, in which the division line in controversy is, and if that line is between two townships, and both parties live in the same, then it means the viewers of that township, but if the parties live in different townships, one viewer at least shall be taken from that of the party complained against. [R., § 1537; C., '51, § 906.]

2334. Fence on another's land. 1501. When a person has made a fence or other improvement on an inclosure, which, on afterward making division lines is found to be on land of another, and the same has occurred through mistake, such first person may enter upon the land of the other and remove his fence or other improvement and material within six months after such line has been run, upon his first paying, or offering to pay, the other party for any damage to the soil which may be occasioned thereby, and when the parties cannot agree as to the damages the fence viewers may determine them as in other cases. [R., § 1538; C., '51, § 907.]

2335. Payment. 1502. But such fence or other improvement, except substantial buildings, shall not be removed if they were made or taken from the land on which they lie, until the party pays the owner the value of the timber, to be ascertained by the fence viewers, nor shall a fence be removed at a time when the removal will throw open or expose the crop of the other party, but it shall be removed in a reasonable time after the crop is secured, although the above six months have passed. [R., § 1539; C., '51, § 908.]

2336. Disputes; fence viewers to determine. 1503. When any question arises between parties, other than those above stated, concerning their rights in fences, or their duties in relation to building or supporting or removing them, such question may be determined by the fence viewers upon the principles of this chapter. [R., § 1540; C., '51, § 909.]

Where the parties have agreed to maintain a certain kind of fence the trustees may determine whether such agreement has been performed, and decide as to time and manner of performance: Huber v. Wilkinson, 46-458.

2337. Lines; fence on. 1504. A person building a fence, may lay the same upon the line between him and the adjacent owners, so that the fence may be partly on one side and partly on the other, and the owner shall have the same right to remove it as if it were wholly on his own land. [R., § 1541; C., '51, § 910.]

2338. Same. 1505. The foregoing provisions concerning partition fences shall apply to a fence standing wholly upon one side of the division line. [R., § 1542; C., '51, § 911.]

2339. Other proceedings. 1506. The foregoing provisions of this chapter do not bar any other legal proceedings for the determination of the title to land, or the dividing line between contending owners, nor do they preclude agreements by the parties. [R., § 1543; C., '51, § 912.]

The agreements here referred to need not necessarily be in writing. It was not so intended by § 2332: Bills v. Belknap, 23-225. The proceedings of the fence viewers do not bar other proceedings which involve division lines: Peckhous v. Mueller, 50-237.

2340. Lawful fence defined. 1507; 16 G. A., ch. 101; 17 G. A., ch. 124; 18 G. A., ch. 47. A fence made of three rails of good substantial material, or three boards not less than six inches wide, and three-quarters of an inch thick, such rails or boards to be fastened in or to good substantial posts, not more than ten feet apart, where rails are used, and not more than eight feet apart where boards are used, wire either wholly or in part, substantially built and kept in good repair, or any other kind of fence, which, in the opinion of the fence viewers shall be equivalent thereto, shall be declared a lawful fence; provided, that the lowest or bottom rail, wire, or board shall not be more than twenty nor less than sixteen inches from the ground, and that such fence shall be fifty-four inches in height, except that a barbed wire fence may consist of three barbed wires, or of four wires, two of which shall be barbed; such fence in either case to have not less than thirty-six iron barbs of two points each, [or] twenty-six iron barbs of four points each on each wire to the rod, the wires to be firmly fastened to posts not more than two rods apart, with two stays between the posts, or with posts not more than one rod apart without such stays, the top wire to be not more than fifty-four nor less than forty-eight inches in height, and the bottom wire not more than twenty nor less than sixteen inches from the ground; provided further, that all partition fences may be made tight at the expense of the party desiring it, and such party may take from such fence the same material, by him added thereto whenever he may elect; and provided further, that when the owner or occupants of adjoining land use the same for the purpose of pasturing swine or sheep, each of said owners or occupants shall keep their respective share of the partition fence sufficiently tight to restrain such swine or sheep. [R., § 1545.]

A bluff, a hedge, a trench, a wall, a trestle or the like may be held to be in fact a lawful fence: Summit v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 37-112.

The evidence of fence viewers is competent in regard to a matter upon which they are authorized to form an opinion: Phillips v. Oystee, 32-257.

Rev. § 1544, construed in regard to height there required: Ibid.

There is no obligation as to the public resting upon the owners of growing crops to fence them; and in an action by the owner of an ox which had broken through an insufficient fence into a cornfield, and died from the effects of eating the corn brought against the owner of the field for damages, held, that defendant was not liable: Herold v. Meyers, 20-378.

As to obligation to fence generally, see notes to § 2251.

2341. Where stock is restrained. 1508. All the provisions of this chapter in relation to partition fences, shall be alike applicable to counties or townships having restrained, or which may restrain, stock from running at large. [14 G. A., ch. 128.]

* Applied: Duffes v. Judd, 28-253.

This section does not prevent the rule as to partition fences being different in counties where stock is prohibited from running at large from what it is in other counties: See note to § 2328.

2342. 22 G. A., ch. 95, § 2. Section fifteen hundred and eight of the code of 1873 [§ 2341], is hereby amended by adding the following, to wit: and section fourteen hundred and ninety-five of the code of 1873 [§ 2328], and all parts thereof shall be so construed in counties where stock is restrained from running at large as in counties where stock is not so restrained: provided that the provisions of this act shall not apply to counties having a population of less than twelve thousand inhabitants according to the census of 1885.

DIVISION HEDGES.

2343. Fence beyond division line. 16 G. A., ch. 106, § 1. If any person shall desire to plant or make a hedge fence on any line separating his lands, or inclosures from the lands, or inclosures of any other person, or persons, he shall be allowed to make or build a fence sufficient to protect the hedge and set the same five feet beyond the line on the adjoining lands and keep the same there, not more than five years, and free from weeds, and then he shall be allowed to remove the same, and during which time he shall be permitted to cultivate the land thus inclosed for the benefit of the hedge; provided, he shall enter upon the cultivation of said hedge within twelve months from the time said fence is removed on the adjoining land.

2344. Payment for hedge. 16 G. A., ch. 106, § 2. When any person builds a hedge on the entire line between his own and uninclosed lands, when said lands are inclosed the owner thereof shall pay for one-half of said hedge the value to be ascertained by the fence viewers, and the manner of proceeding in this respect shall conform to the provisions of the law now in force in relation to the ascertainment of the value of partition fences with like remedies; the maker of said hedge to select his own half thereof; provided, this act shall not apply to town lots.

The language of this statute is not to be so construed as to defeat recovery by a party on the ground that on some point on his line a hedge could not be grown for a short distance: McKeever v. Jenks, 59-300.

CHAPTER 5.

OF LOST GOODS.

2345. Taking up rafts, logs, and lumber. 1509. If any person shall hereafter stop or take up any raft of logs, or part thereof, or any logs suitable for making lumber, or hewn timber or sawed lumber, found adrift on any water-course within the limits or upon the boundaries of this state, such person, within five days thereafter, provided the same shall not have been previously restored to the owner, shall go before some justice of the peace or notary public of the county in which the same was taken up, and make affidavit in writing, setting forth an exact description of the articles found, and stating when and where the same were found, the number of logs or other pieces, and the marks and brands thereon, and that the same have not been altered or defaced since the taking up by him or by any other person to his knowledge. And such justice of the peace or notary public, within five days thereafter, shall transmit such affidavit to the county auditor of said county, and the said auditor shall thereupon file the same in his office, and enter in his estray book the description of the said property, the time and place, when and where, and the name and residence of the person by whom the same was taken up, and the said auditor shall also publish a notice thereof for three weeks successively in some newspaper printed in the county. [14 G. A., ch. 20, §§ 1, 5.]

2346. Disposition of property unclaimed. 1510. In all cases where the value of the articles so taken up shall not exceed five dollars, and no person shall appear to claim and prove the same within three months after the publication of such notice, then the property in the same shall vest in the person taking them up; but if the value thereof shall exceed five dollars, and the same be not claimed or proven within six months after such publication, then the finder shall deliver them to the sheriff of said county, and thereupon the same proceedings shall be had, and the same disposition be made of the proceeds arising from the sale thereof, as is provided for in section fifteen hundred and thirteen of this chapter [§ 2349] in relation to boats, vessels, etc., the value of which exceeds twenty dollars. [Same, §§ 2, 5.]

2348. Vessels and water-crafts. 1512. If any person shall stop or take up any vessel or water-craft found adrift within the limits or upon the boundaries of this state, of the value of five dollars or upwards, including her cargo, tackle, rigging, and other appendages, such person, within five days thereafter, provided the same shall not have been previously proven and restored to the owner, shall go before some justice of the peace in the township where the craft or vessel is found of the proper county, and make affidavit in writing, setting forth the exact description of such vessel or water-craft; where and when the same was found; whether any, and if so, what cargo, tackle, rigging, or other appendages, were found on board or attached thereto; and that the same has not been altered or defaced, either in the whole or in part, since the taking up, either by him, or by any other person, to his knowledge; and the said justice shall thereupon issue his warrant, directed to some constable of his township or district, commanding him to summon three respectable householders of the neighborhood, who shall proceed without delay, to examine and appraise such boat or vessel, her cargo, or tackle, rigging, and all other appendages as aforesaid, and to make report thereof, under their hands, to the justice issuing such warrant, who shall enter the same, together with the affidavit of the taker-up at large in his estray book; and, within five days, shall transmit a certified copy thereof to the county auditor of the proper county, to be by him recorded in his estray book and filed in his office. [R., § 1506.]

2349. Advertisement; title vests. 1513. In all cases where the appraisement of any such boat or vessel, including her cargo, tackle, rigging, or other appendages, shall not exceed the sum of twenty dollars, the taker-up shall advertise the same on the door of the court-house and in three other of the most public places in the county within five days after the appraisement, and if no person shall appear to claim and prove such boat or vessel within six months from the time of taking up, the property in the same shall vest in the taker-up; but if the value thereof shall exceed the sum of twenty dollars, the county auditor, within five days from the time of reception of the justice's certificate at his office, shall cause an advertisement to be set up on the door of the court-house, and at three other of the most public places of the county; and, also, a notice thereof to be published for three weeks successively in some public newspaper printed in this state, and if the said boat or vessel be not claimed or proven within ninety days after the advertisement of the same as aforesaid, the taker-up shall deliver the same to the sheriff of the county wherein such boat or vessel may have been taken up, who shall thereupon proceed to sell the same at public auction to the highest bidder for ready money, having first given ten days' notice of the time and place of sale; and the proceeds of all such sales, after deducting the cost and other necessary expenses, shall be paid into the county treasury. [R., § 1507.]

2350. Money; bank-notes. 1514. If any person shall find any lost goods, money, bank-notes, or other things of any description whatever, of the value of five dollars and upwards, such person shall inform the owner thereof, if known, and make restitution of the same without any compensation whatever, except the same be voluntarily given; but if the owner be unknown, such person shall, within five days after such finding, take such goods, money, bank-notes, or other things, before some justice of the peace of the proper county, and make affidavit of the description thereof, the time and place, when and where the same was found, and that no alteration had been made in the appearance thereof since the finding of the same; whereupon the justice shall enter a description of the property, and the value thereof, as near as he can ascertain, in his estray book, together with the affidavit of the finder; and shall, also, within five days transmit to the county auditor a certified copy thereof, to be by him recorded in his estray book and filed in his office. [R., § 1508.]

2351. Advertisement; title vests. 1515. In all cases where such lost goods, money, bank-notes, or other things, shall not exceed the sum of ten dollars in value, the finder shall advertise the same on the door of the court-house, and three other of the most public places in the county; and if no person shall appear to claim and prove such money, goods, bank-notes, or other things, within twelve months from the time of such advertisement, the right to such property when the same shall consist in goods, money, or bank-notes, shall be vested in the finder; but if the value thereof shall exceed the sum of ten dollars, the county auditor, within five days from the receipt of the justice's certificate, shall cause an advertisement to be set upon the court-house door, and in three of the most public places in the county; and also a notice thereof to be published for three weeks successively in some public newspaper printed in this state; and if the said goods, money, bank-notes, or other things, be not reclaimed within six months after the finding, the finder, if the same shall consist in money or bank-notes, shall deliver the same to the county treasurer, after deducting the necessary expenses hereinafter provided for; if in bills, notes of hand, patents, deeds, mortgages, or other instruments of value, the same shall be delivered to the county auditor, to be preserved in his office for the benefit of the owner, whenever legal application shall be made therefor; if in goods, or merchandise, the same shall be delivered to the sheriff of the county, who shall thereupon proceed to sell the same at public auction to the highest bidder for ready money, having first given ten days' notice of the time and place of such sale; and the proceeds of all such sales, after deducting the costs and other expenses, shall be paid into the county treasury, [R., § 1509.]

2352. Same. 1516. In all cases where any vessel or water-craft shall be taken up, or any goods, money, or bank-notes shall be found as aforesaid, which shall be of a value less than five dollars, the finder shall advertise the same by setting up three advertisements in the most public places in the neighborhood; but in such cases he shall keep and preserve the same in his possession, and shall make restitution thereof to the owner, without fee or reward, except the same be given voluntarily, whenever legal application be made for the same, provided it shall be done in three months from such taking up or finding; but if no owner shall appear to claim such property within the time aforesaid, the exclusive right to the same shall be vested in the finder or taker-up. [R., § 1510.]

2353. Ownership settled. 1517. In any case where a claim is made to property found or taken up, and the ownership of the property cannot be agreed upon by the finder and claimant, they may make a case before any justice of the peace, who may hear and adjudicate it, and if either of them refuses to make such case, the other may make an affidavit of the facts which have previously occurred, and the claimant shall also verify his claim in his affidavit, and the justice may take cognizance of and try the matter on the other party having one day's notice, but there shall be no appeal from the decision. This section does not bar any other remedy given by law. [R., § 1504.]

2354. Compensation. 1518. As a reward for the taking up of all boats and other vessels, and for finding of lost goods, money, bank-notes, and other things, before restitution of the property or proceeds thereof shall be made, the finder shall be entitled to ten per cent. upon the value thereof, in addition to which said allowance the owner shall also be required to pay to the taker-up, or finder, all such costs and charges as may have been paid by him for services rendered as aforesaid, including the cost of publication, together with reasonable charges for keeping and taking care of such property, which last mentioned charge, in case the taker-up, or finder, and the owner cannot agree, shall be assessed by two disinterested householders of the neighborhood, to be appointed by some justice of the peace of the proper county, whose decision, when made, shall be binding and conclusive on all parties. [R., § 1514.]

2355. Proceeds. 1519. The net proceeds of all sales made by the sheriff, and all money or bank-notes paid over to the county treasurer, as directed in this chapter, shall remain in the hands of the county treasurer in trust for the owner, if any such shall apply in one year from the time the same shall have been paid over; but if no owner shall appear within the time aforesaid, the said money shall be considered as forfeited, and the claim of the owner thereto forever barred, in which event the money shall remain in the county treasury for the use of common schools in said county. [R., § 1516.]

2356. Taker-up not accountable. 1520. If the taker-up of any watercraft, raft, logs, timber or boards, or finder of lost goods, bank-notes, or other things, shall be faithful in taking care of the same, and if any unavoidable accident shall happen thereto, without the fault or neglect of the finder or taker-up before the owner shall have an opportunity of reclaiming the same, such taker-up or finder shall not be accountable therefor; provided, that in cases of accident as aforesaid, the taker-up or finder, within ten days thereafter, shall certify the same under his hand to the county auditor, who shall make an entry thereof in his estray book. [R., § 1517; 14 G. A., ch. 20, § 4.]

The sole object of this notice to the auditor is to advise the owner of the property, when examining the estray book, of the loss or accident, and when he has actual knowledge of the loss without such notice there is no necessity for it: Houes v. Carver, 3-257.

2357. Penalty for selling. 1521. If any person shall trade, sell, or loan, out of the limits of this state, any such property as may at any time be taken up or found as aforesaid before he shall be vested with the right to the same, agreeably to the foregoing provisions, he shall forfeit and pay double the value thereof, to be recovered by any person who shall sue for the same, in any court, or before any justice of the peace having jurisdiction thereof; one-half thereof shall go to the person suing, and the other half to the county aforesaid. [R., § 1518; 14 G. A., ch. 20, § 4.]

2358. Penalty for failure to comply. 1522. If any person shall take up any boat or vessel, or any raft, logs, timber or boards, or shall find any goods, money, bank-notes, or other things, and shall fail to comply with the requisitions of this chapter, every such person so offending shall forfeit and pay the sum of twenty dollars, to be recovered before any justice of the peace by any person who will sue for the same, one-half for the use of the person suing, and the other half to be deposited in the county treasury for the use of common schools; but nothing herein contained shall prevent the owner from having and maintaining his action for the recovery of any damage he may sustain. [R., § 1519; 14 G. A., ch. 20, § 4.]

A failure to take the steps here contemplated will not render the finder guilty of larceny under § 5213, where the owner was not known at the time of the taking: State v. Dean, 49-73.

CHAPTER 6.

OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

2359. Selling or keeping for sale prohibited. 1523. No person shall manufacture or sell, by himself, his clerk, steward, or agent, directly or indirectly, any intoxicating liquors except as hereinafter provided. And the keeping of intoxicating liquor, with the intent on the part of the owner thereof, or any person acting under his authority, or by his permission, to sell the same within this state contrary to the provisions of this chapter, is hereby prohibited, and the intoxicating liquor so kept, together with the vessels in which it is contained, is declared a nuisance, and shall be forfeited and dealt with as hereinafter provided. [R., § 1559.]

Statute constitutional: The provisions of the Code of '51 prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors by the glass, held constitutional: Zumhoff v. State, 4 G. C., 526.

The provisions of the prohibitory liquor law are not in conflict with the constitution nor law. of the state nor the United States: Scotto v. State, 2-165; State v. Carney, 20-82; State v. Baughman, 26-497.

As to the effect of United States internal revenue license, see notes to § 2400.

The statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors cannot be said to deprive the owner of his property therein without compensation in violation of constitutional guaranties, unless such property was owned by him prior to the prohibitory act of 1855: McLane v. Leicht, 69-401.

The power of the legislature to enact laws for the suppression of the general traffic in intoxicating liquors within the state has been recognized and affirmed by this court for more than twenty-five years. It has uniformly been held that the state, in the exercise of its police power, might regulate the traffic, or prohibit it entirely; and when the power to prohibit the traffic is recognized, the power to enact whatever laws may be necessary to make the prohibition effectual follows necessarily: McLane v. Bonn, 70-752.

Laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors are regarded as police regulations, and the state may in its discretion prohibit the sale of one kind of liquor and allow the sale of another kind, and the fact that it prohibits the sale of wine from foreign grapes, while permitting the sale of native wine, will not render the legislation unconstitutional as an improper regulation of interstate commerce: State v. Stucker, 58-496.

The restrictions as to the sale of intoxicating liquors were adopted not for the purpose of securing an undue advantage to the citizens of the state, but for the purpose of preventing violations of the prohibitory laws of the state, and although, in effect, the citizens of other states are debarred from selling in Iowa liquors to be resold for legal purposes, this is but an incidental result of a valid exercise of police power by the state, and no provision of the federal constitution is thereby violated: Kohn v. Melcher, 29 Fed. Rep., 433.

Where the evidence does not show that the prosecution of the defendant is for illegal sales of wine or beer, the objection that the statute is unconstitutional on the ground that it provides for the taking of private property without due compensation does not arise: State v. Jordan, 72-377.

The prohibitory law as amended so as to cover manufacture and sale of beer which was previously legal is constitutional. (Following Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S., 623): Kaufman v. Dostal, 73-691.

What selling or keeping prohibited: A sale of liquor to be used as a beverage is a violation of law, regardless of the quantity to be used and the extent to which it is to be diluted. Therefore, held, that the sale of beer by one having a permit for use in manufacturing a beverage not intoxicating was illegal: State v. Yager, 72-421.

When liquors are so compounded with other substances as to lose their characteristics as intoxicating liquors, and are no longer desirable for use as a stimulating beverage their sale is not prohibited; but if, notwithstanding other ingredients have been mixed therewith, they retain their character and are capable of use as a beverage, they fall under the ban of the law. The question is one for the jury: State v. Leffer, 38-422.

As to what are deemed intoxicating liquors, see notes to § 2416.

To authorize the forfeiture of liquors it must be shown that they are kept with intent to sell in violation of law: State v. Harris, 36-136.

The keeping of intoxicating liquors with no intent to sell within the state in violation of law is not forbidden. In the absence of such intention the possession is lawful, and will be protected: Niles v. Pries, 35-41.

This section prohibits the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors except as permitted or authorized by statute, and manufacture for exportation from the state not being permitted or authorized, such manufacturing is illegal even though the manufacturer holds a permit to manufacture for lawful purposes: Pearson v. International Distillery, 72-318.

Buyer not punished: The statutes punishing the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor are applicable to the seller and not to the buyer of such liquors, and the buyer is not guilty of a crime as accessory to the sale in such sense that he may be excused from testifying as to his purchase of such liquor on the ground that such testimony would tend to criminate him: Wakeman v. Chambers, 69-169.

One who buys intoxicating liquor from a person illegally selling the same does not become an accomplice in the crime of the illegal sale, and therefore the speaking of words charging a person with such purchase does not constitute slander actionable per se: Sterling v. Jugenheimer, 65-210.

Property in intoxicating liquors: While the commerce in intoxicating liquor as an article of beverage is unlawful, its character as property is not thereby destroyed; and where such liquor was seized on execution for the debt of one not its owner, held, that the owner might recover it by replevin, although it was kept for sale in violation of the statute: Monty v. Arneson, 25-383.

That intoxicating liquors are held for an unlawful purpose is no answer to an indictment for stealing the same: State v. May, 20-305.

That liquors are unlawfully kept is not a defense to an action of trespass for destroying them: Turner v. Hitchcock, 20-310.

Where liquor had been seized by an officer under an information which had subsequently been held defective and a return of the liquor ordered, held, that in an action by the owner against such officer to recover damages for a failure to return the property as so ordered, the plaintiff could not recover without proving that he owned and kept the liquor with a lawful intent: Walker v. Shook, 49-264.

In an action against a common carrier to recover the value of intoxicating liquors lost or destroyed by it, it is necessary for plaintiff to prove that he owned or possessed such liquors with lawful intent. (Overruling Bowen v. Hale, 4-430): Sommer v. Cate, 22-585.

Intoxicating liquors cannot be recovered by the owner unless he shows that they were in his possession with lawful intent, and that he was illegally deprived of them: Funk v. Israel, 5-438, 452.

The keeping of intoxicating liquors with no intent to sell within the state in violation of law is not forbidden. In the absence of such intention the possession is lawful, and will be protected. And it is immaterial that they were bought of one not authorized to sell: Niles v. Pries, 35-41.

Any person has the right to own and keep liquors unless he owns and keeps them with intent to sell them without lawful authority: Wakeman v. Chambers, 69-169.

2360. Manufacture; sales under permits; renewal. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 1. After this act takes effect no person shall manufacture for sale, sell, keep for sale, give away, exchange, barter or dispense any intoxicating liquor, for any purpose whatever, otherwise than as provided in this act. Persons holding permits as herein provided shall be authorized to sell and dispense intoxicating liquors for pharmaceutical and medicinal purposes and alcohol for specified chemical purposes, and wine for sacramental purposes, but for no other purposes whatever; and all permits must be procured as hereinafter provided from the district court of the proper county at any term thereof after this act takes effect, and a permit to buy and sell intoxicating liquors when so procured shall continue in force for one year from date of its issue unless revoked according to law or until application for renewal is disposed of, if such application is made before the year expires. Provided, that renewals of permits may be annually granted upon written application by permit holders who show to the satisfaction of the court or judge that they have during the preceding year complied with the provisions of this act and to execute a new bond as in this act required to be originally given, but parties may appear and resist renewals the same as in applications for permits.

Under Code, § 1524, now repealed, it was held not necessary in a prosecution for using a building for the purpose of illegally selling, etc., for the state to negative the exceptions, and they must be proved by way of defense if relied on: State v. Becker, 30-438.

A manufacturer as therein specified had no right to sell without a permit: Becker v. Betten, 39-668.

That section did not authorize a person holding a manufacturer's permit to manufacture for exportation outside of the state, and such manufacture was unlawful: Pearson v. International Distillery, 72-348.

2361. Penalty for manufacturing. 1525; 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 1. Every person who shall manufacture any intoxicating liquors as in this chapter prohibited, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon his first conviction for said offense, shall pay a fine of two hundred dollars and costs of prosecution, or be imprisoned in the county jail not to exceed six months, and on his second and every subsequent conviction for said offense, he shall pay a fine of not less than five hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars and costs of prosecution, and be imprisoned in the county jail one year. [R., § 1561.]

2362. Application for permit. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 2. Notice of an application for a permit or renewal thereof must be published for three consecutive weeks in a newspaper regularly published and printed in the English language and of general circulation in the city or town where the applicant proposes to keep and sell intoxicating liquors or if there be no newspaper regularly published in such city or town, such publication shall be made in one of the official papers of the county, the last of which publications shall be not less than ten days nor more than twenty days before the first day of the term; and state the name of applicant; the purpose of the application; the particular location or the place where the applicant proposes to keep and sell liquors and that the petition provided for in the next section will be on file in the clerk's office at least ten days before the first day of the term naming it, when the application will be made, and a copy thereof shall be served personally on the county attorney in the same manner and time as required for service of original notices in the district court.

2363. What to contain. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 3. Applications for permits shall be made by petition signed and sworn to by the applicant and filed in the office of the clerk of the district court of the proper county at least ten days before the first day of the term, which petition shall state the applicant's name; place of residence; in what business he is then engaged, and in what business he has been engaged for two years previous to filing petition; the place particularly describing it, where the business of buying and selling liquor is to be conducted; that he is a citizen of the United States and of the state of Iowa; that he is a registered pharmacist and now is, and for the last six months has been lawfully conducting a pharmacy in the township or town wherein he proposes to sell intoxicating liquors under the permit applied for, and as the proprietor of such pharmacy, that he has not been adjudged guilty of violating the law relating to intoxicating liquors within the last two years next preceding his application; and is not the keeper of a hotel, eating-house, saloon, restaurant or place of public amusement; that he is not addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage and has not within the last two years next preceding his application, been directly or indirectly engaged, employed or interested in the unlawful manufacture, sale or keeping for sale of intoxicating liquors and that he desires a permit to purchase, keep and sell such liquors for lawful purposes only.

The provision of a former statute that a permit should be granted only to a person of good moral character was held not unconstitutional: In re Ruth, 32-250.

2364. Bond. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 4. This permit or renewal thereof shall issue only on condition that the applicant shall execute to the state of Iowa, a bond in the penal sum of one thousand dollars with good and sufficient sureties to be approved by the clerk of the court, conditioned that he will well and truly observe and obey the laws of Iowa now or hereafter in force in relation to the sale of intoxicating liquors; that he will pay all fines, penalties, damages and costs that may be assessed or recovered against him for a violation of such laws during the term for which said permit or renewal thereof is granted. Said bond shall be for the use and benefit of any person or persons who may be injured or damaged by reason of any violation of the law relating to intoxicating liquors purchased, sold or given away during the term for which said permit or renewal thereof is granted. The said bond shall be deposited with the county auditor, and suit shall be brought thereon at any time by the county attorney, or any person for whose benefit the same is given, and in case the conditions thereof or any of them shall be violated, the principal and sureties therein, shall also be jointly and severally liable for all civil damages, costs and judgments that may be obtained against the principal in any civil action brought by a wife, child, parent, guardian, employer or other person, under the provisions of sections fifteen hundred and fifty-six, fifteen hundred and fifty-seven and fifteen hundred and fifty-eight of the code of Iowa [§§ 2417-2419], as the same is amended and now in force, and section twelve, chapter sixty-six, acts of the twenty-first general assembly of the state of Iowa [§ 2419]. All other money collected for breaches of such bond shall go to the school fund of the county. Said bond shall be approved by the clerk of the district court under the rules and laws applicable to the approval of official bonds.

In an action on such bond under former provisions, held, that the assignment of a breach thereof by selling intoxicating liquors to divers persons whose names were unknown, to be by them used as a beverage, etc., was sufficient: Jones County v. Sales, 25-25.

In case of a sale for purposes not specified in the permit, the defendant is not only liable on his bond, but also to a criminal prosecution for selling in violation of law: State v. Adams, 20-486; State v. Stutz, 20-488.

Under the provisions of this Code it was held that action on the bond might be brought by any citizen of the county: State ex rel. v. Martland, 71-543.

2365. Petition by freeholders; remonstrance. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 5. At least ten days before the first day of the term the applicant shall file with the clerk in support of the application, a petition signed by one-third of the freehold voters of the township, incorporated town, city or ward in which the permit is to be used, and each person aforesaid shall sign said petition by his own true name and signature, and state that each, before signing the same, has read said petition and understands the contents and meaning thereof, and is well and personally acquainted with the applicant, that the applicant is a resident of the county, is over twenty-one years of age, is of good moral character, reputed to be law-abiding, and has not been found guilty of violating the laws relating to intoxicating liquors in any proceeding at law or in equity within the last two years next preceding the date of his application as far as the petitioner has knowledge or information and is not in the habit of using intoxicating liquors as a beverage; and that the permit prayed for is necessary for the convenience and accommodation of the people of said locality and that they believe that the applicant is worthy of confidence and will observe the laws governing permitted persons in conducting the dispensation of liquors. On or before nine o'clock, A. M., of the first day of the term any resident of the county may file a remonstrance against granting the permit applied for, which must show the residence, sex and age of the person signing it and the grounds of objection to granting the permit.

2366. Hearing; resistance. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 6. No application for a permit or renewal thereof shall be considered or acted upon by the court until the requisite notice has been given and petitions filed as provided by this act, and each is in form and substance such as required. On the first day of the term, having ascertained that the application is properly presented the court shall proceed to hear the application, unless objection thereto be made, in which case the court shall appoint a day during the term, but not later, when the same shall be heard; and in doing so shall consider the convenience of the court, and the interested parties and their counsel so far as the state of the business and the necessities of the case will permit. If unavoidable causes prevent a hearing during the regular time allotted to the term, the same shall be heard and disposed of in vacation by the judge as soon as practicable thereafter. The county attorney, or other counsel, or any citizen may in person or by counsel appear and resist the application, and whether resisted or objection be made or not the court shall not grant the permit until it shall first be made to appear by competent evidence that the applicant is possessed of the character and qualifications requisite, is worthy of confidence and to receive the trust and will be likely to execute the same with fidelity; and that the statements made in his application and the petition of residents are all and singular true, and, considering the population of the locality and the reasonable necessities and convenience of the people such permit is proper. If the application is resisted the court or judge shall hear controversy upon the petitions, remonstrances and objections, and the evidence offered and grant or refuse such permit, as the public good may require. If there be more than one permit applied for in the same locality, they shall all be heard at the same time, unless for good cause otherwise directed, and the court may grant or refuse any or all of the applications as will best subserve the public interest.

Under the former statute, held, that any citizen of the county who appeared to resist the granting of a permit might make a showing with reference to either of the questions which the board of supervisors was required to determine in granting such permit, and might introduce evidence to negative either of the facts which the statute provided must be proven before the permit should be granted. He, in effect, became a party to the proceeding and had sufficient interest in the matter to authorize him to institute a proceeding by certiorari to have any errors and irregularities by the board in granting the permit reviewed: Darling v. Boesch, 67-702.

2367. Oath of applicant; permit issued. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 7. If the application for the permit or renewal thereof is granted it shall not issue until the applicant shall make and subscribe an oath before the clerk, which shall be indorsed upon the bond to the effect and tenor following:

"I, ——— do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will well and truly perform all and singular the conditions of the within bond, and keep and perform the trust confided in me to purchase, keep and sell intoxicating liquors. I will not sell, give or furnish to any person any intoxicating liquors otherwise than as provided by law, and, especially, I will not sell or furnish any intoxicating liquors to any person who is not known to me personally, or duly identified: nor to any minor, intoxicated person or persons who are in the habit of becoming intoxicated: and I will make true, full and accurate returns of all certificates and requests made to or received by me as required by law; and said returns shall show every sale and delivery of such liquors, made by or for me during the month embraced therein, and the true signature to every request received and granted: and such returns shall show all the intoxicating liquors sold or delivered to any and every person as returned."

Upon taking said oath and filing bond as herein before provided, the clerk shall issue to him a permit authorizing him to keep and sell intoxicating liquors as in this act provided: and every permit so granted, shall specify the building giving street and number or location in which intoxicating liquors may be sold by virtue of the same, and the length of time the same shall be in force which in no case shall exceed twelve months.

Liquors held for the purpose of lawful sale under a permit are not subject to seizure, and the possession thereof may be lawful although they be bought of one not authorized to sell: Niles v. Fries, 35-41.

An indictment for unlawful sale need not negative the authority of defendant to sell under a permit. Such authority must be pleaded in defense: State v. Beneke, 9-203; State v. Collins, 11-141.

Under former provisions a person having a permit to sell was only bound to exercise due diligence and act in good faith in determining whether the person buying intended to use the liquors for a lawful purpose: Taylor v. Pickett, 52-467; State v. Blair, 72-591.

Selling without a permit may be punished both under § 2381 and § 2384: State v. Waynick, 45-516.

The legislature may change a law under which a permit has been granted so as to impose other regulations upon the holder of such permit. A permit is not a vested right: State v. Mullenhoff, 74-271.

2368. Revocation. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 8. Permits granted under this act shall be deemed trusts reposed in the recipients thereof, not as a matter of right but of confidence, and may be revoked upon sufficient showing, by order of the court or judge thereof. Complaint may be presented at any time to the district court, or one of the judges thereof, which shall be in writing and signed and sworn to by three citizens of the county in which the permit was granted, and a copy of such complaint shall, with a notice in writing of the time and place of hearing be served on the accused, five days before the hearing, and if the complaint is sufficient, and the accused appear and deny the same, the court or judge shall proceed without delay, unless continued for cause to hear and determine the controversy, but if continued or appealed at the instance of the permit holder, his permit to buy and sell liquors may in the discretion of the court be suspended pending the controversy. The complainant and accused may be heard in person or by counsel or both, and submit such proofs as may be offered by the parties; and if it shall appear upon such hearing, that the accused has in any way abused the trust or so conducted the business under the permit as to acquire notoriety and public repute that liquors are sold by the accused or his employees in violation of law, or if it shall appear that any liquor has been sold or dispensed unlawfully or has been unlawfully obtained at said place from the holder of the permit or any employee assisting therein, or that he has in any proceeding, civil or criminal, since receiving his permit, been adjudged guilty of violating any of the provisions of this act or the acts for the suppression of intemperance, the court or judge shall by order revoke and set aside the permit; the papers and order in such case shall be immediately returned to and filed by the clerk of the court, if heard by the judge and the order entered of record as if made in court and if in this or any other proceeding, civil or criminal, it shall be adjudged by the court or judge that any registered pharmacist, proprietor or clerk has been guilty of violating this act or the act for the suppression of intemperance and amendments thereto, by unlawfully manufacturing, selling, giving away or unlawfully keeping with intent to sell intoxicating liquors, such adjudication may in the discretion of the commissioners of pharmacy work a forfeiture of his certificate of registration, and the commissioners of pharmacy shall, upon receipt of a transcript of a judgment or order authenticated by the clerk of the court showing a second and subsequent violation, cancel his registration. It shall be the duty of the clerk to forward to the commissioners of pharmacy such transcripts without charge therefor as soon as practicable after final judgment or order.

In a proceeding to revoke a permit, defendant is not entitled to trial by jury. The permit is not property in such sense that by its revocation the party is deprived of his property without due process of law: State v. Schmidtz, 65-556.

The proceeding to revoke a permit is not a criminal proceeding, but a special proceeding of a civil nature. The revocation, therefore, cannot be suspended by giving bail, nor by a supersedeas bond on appeal, for the reason that the judgment is self-executing and no process is necessary in order to carry it out. A supersedeas bond would, however, suspend the execution of the judgment for costs: Ibid.

A judgment revoking a permit, being a final order in a special proceeding affecting a substantial right, may be appealed from: Ibid.

2369. To whom permit granted. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 9. Registered pharmacists who show themselves to be fit persons and who comply with all the requirements of this act may be granted permits, and in any township where there is a registered pharmacist conducting a pharmacy and no pharmacist obtains a permit, if found necessary the court may grant a permit to one discreet person in such township not a pharmacist, but having all other qualifications requisite under this act, upon like notice and proceedings as pertain to permitted pharmacists and subject to the same liabilities, duties, obligations and penalties.

2370. Records. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 10. The clerk of the court granting the permit shall preserve as part of the records and files of his office all petitions, bonds and other papers pertaining to the granting or revocation of permits and keep suitable books in which bonds and permits shall be recorded. The books shall be furnished by the county like other public records. Whether said permit be granted or refused the applicant shall pay the costs incurred in the case, and when granted he shall make payment before any permit issue, except the court may tax the cost of any witnesses summoned by private persons, resisting said application, and the fees for serving such subpoenas to such persons when it is shown that such witnesses were summoned maliciously or without probable cause to believe their evidence material. A fee of one dollar and fifty cents shall be taxed for the filing of the petition and one dollar for entering the order of the court approving bond and granting said application, and witnesses shall be entitled to mileage and per diem as in other cases. And fees for serving notices and subpoenas shall be the same as in other cases in the district court.

2371. Authority to purchase; certificate. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 11. When any person holding a permit in full force desires to purchase or procure any intoxicating liquors to be kept and sold under his permit, the county auditor shall upon the written or printed application of the permit holder, signed by him, specifying the kind and quantity of liquors desired by him, issue to such holder under seal of his office a certificate authorizing him to purchase and cause to be transported from the place of purchase to his place of business described in his permit, the kind and quantity of liquors mentioned in such certificate. Said certificate shall be dated as of its true date when issued and attached to the way bill accompanying the shipment and when so attached, shall be authority for the common carrier in whose hands it may be, to transport and deliver the package or packages containing the liquors therein described and in packages therein designated according to the direction of the certificate. Upon receipt of the liquors, the certificate shall be returned to the auditor who issued the same and be canceled, filed and preserved by him in his office. No certificate so issued authorizing the purchase and transportation of any intoxicating liquors shall be used more than once or later than thirty days following its date; and such certificate shall be in the following form, to wit:

“STATE OF IOWA, } ——— County. }

“I hereby certify that ———, who is permitted under the laws of Iowa to buy and sell intoxicating liquors at ———, in said county of ———, is hereby authorized to purchase and ship to ——— the following described intoxicating liquors, to wit: ———, provided such liquors are shipped in the following described packages, to wit: ———. Witness my hand and the seal of the county this ——— day of ———, 18—.

—————, Auditor.”

2372. Sales under permits. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 12. Before selling or delivering any intoxicating liquors to any person a request must be printed or written, dated of the true date, stating the age, and residence of the signer, for whom and whose use the liquor is required, the amount and kind required, the actual purpose for which the request is made and for what use desired and his or her true name and residence, and where numbered by street and number if in a city, and that neither the applicant nor the person for whose use requested habitually uses intoxicating liquors as a beverage and the request shall be signed by the applicant by his own true name and signature and attested by the permit holder who receives and fills the request by his own true name and signature in his own handwriting. But the request shall be refused notwithstanding the statement made unless the permit holder has reason to believe said statement to be true, and in no case unless the permit holder filling it personally knows the person applying to be of good moral character, reliable and trustworthy, that he is not a minor, that he is not intoxicated, and that he is not in the habit of using intoxicating liquors as a beverage; or if the applicant is not so personally known to the permit holder before filling the said order or delivering the liquor he shall require identification and the statement of a reliable and trustworthy person of good character and habits known personally to him that the applicant is not a minor and is not in the habit of using intoxicating liquor as a beverage and is worthy of credit as to the truthfulness of the statements in the application and this statement shall be signed by the witness in his own true name and handwriting stating his residence correctly. The requests shall be made upon blanks furnished by the county auditor in packages of one hundred each to the holders of the permits from time to time as the same shall be needed and shall be consecutively numbered by the auditor. The blanks shall be in two series, one for requests by persons known to the seller and one for requests by unknown applicants, identified and vouched for by a known witness both on one sheet and each request and identification shall when used be attested by the seller and such attestation shall be conclusive evidence against the permit holder that the seller did fill the order and deliver the liquor as stated therein and that the sale was made with knowledge of the habits and character of the purchaser or witness. The blanks aforesaid shall be procured by the county auditor in uniform cheap books like blank checks at the expense of the county and furnished to the holders of permits by the county auditor at actual cost and the proceeds be by said auditor paid into the county treasury, and the date of delivery shall be indorsed by the county auditor on each book and receipt taken therefor; and preserved in his office. The permit holder shall preserve the applications in the original form and book except the filling of the blanks therein until returned to the county auditor. When return thereof is made if the book be full the county auditor shall indorse thereon the date of return and file and preserve the same. If the book is not filled the auditor shall remove those filled, inclose the same in an envelope and indorse thereon the name of the permit holder, the date of return and number thereof and file and preserve the same and redeliver the book with indorsement of date thereon and statement of the number remaining therein and so on until the book is filled and return thereof made. All unused or mutilated blanks shall be returned or accounted for before other blanks are issued to such permit holders.

2373. Monthly returns of sales. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 13. On or before the tenth day of each month each permit holder shall make full returns to the county auditor of all requests filled by him and his clerks during the preceding month and accompany the same with a written or printed oath duly taken and subscribed before the county auditor or notary public, which shall be in the following form, to wit: "I, ———, being duly sworn on oath state that the requests for liquors herewith returned are all that were received and filled at my pharmacy (or place of business) under my permit during the month of ———, 18—; that I have carefully preserved the same and that they were filled up, signed and attested at the date shown thereon, as provided by law; that said requests were filled by delivering the quantity and kind of liquors required and that no liquors have been sold or dispensed under color of my permit during said month except as shown by the requests herewith returned and that I have faithfully observed and complied with the conditions of my bond and oath taken by me thereon indorsed and with all the laws relating to my duties in the premises." Every permit holder shall keep strict account of all liquors purchased or procured by him in a book kept for that purpose which shall be subject at all times to the inspection of the commissioners of pharmacy and the county attorney, any grand juror or peace officer of the county and such book shall show of whom such liquors were purchased or procured, the amount and kind of liquors purchased or procured, the date of receipt and amount sold and amount used in compounding medicines tinctures and extracts, amount on hand of each kind for each month. Such book shall be produced by the party keeping the same, to be used as evidence on the trial of any prosecution against him or against liquors alleged to have been seized from him or his house, on notice duly served that the same will be required as evidence; and at the same time he returns requests to the county auditor he shall file a statement of such account with such auditor except that the items of sales need not be embraced therein, but the aggregate amount of each kind shall be, and such statement shall be verified before the county auditor or a notary public. All forms necessary to carry out the provisions of this act not otherwise provided for shall be as may be provided by the commissioners of pharmacy.

The provisions of Code, § 1537 (now repealed), as it originally stood, with reference to the time when the report of sales by a person having a permit should be made, were directory, and a failure to file such report at the time specified would not subject such person to the penalty provided, if it was in fact filed before action for the penalty was commenced: Abbott v. Sartori, 57-656.

But after the amendment of this section so as to require the return to be made on the day specified or within five days thereafter, held, that the provisions as to the penalty must be regarded as mandatory, and a failure to make return within the time would render a party liable for the statutory penalty: State ex rel. v. McEnice, 63-381; State ex rel. v. Chamberlin, 74-266.

Under the provisions of the Code, now repealed, held, that it was the duty of a pharmacist holding a permit to make returns of prescription sales as well as of others: State ex rel. v. Chamberlin, 74-266.

Under the provisions of the Code, failure to make reports and selling at illegal profit would not render the seller liable to punishment for illegal sales which were otherwise lawful: State v. Von Hatschuherr, 72-541.

2374. Punishment for illegal sales under permit. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 14. Every permit holder or his clerk under this act, shall be subject to all the penalties, forfeitures and judgments and may be prosecuted by all the proceedings and actions, criminal and civil, and whether at law or in equity provided for or authorized by the laws now or hereafter in force for any violation of this act, and the act for the suppression of intemperance and any law regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors and by any or all of such proceedings applicable to complaints against such permit holder; and the permit shall not shield any person who abuses the trust imposed by it or violates the laws aforesaid and in case of conviction in any proceeding civil or criminal all the liquors in possession of the permit holder shall by order of the court be destroyed. On the trial of any action or proceeding against any person for manufacturing selling, giving away or keeping with intent to sell intoxicating liquors in violation of law, or for any failure to comply with the conditions or duties imposed by this act, the requests for liquors and returns made to the auditor as herein required, the general repute of the accused and his place of business and manner of conducting the same, the quantity and kinds of liquors sold or kept, purchased or disposed of, the purpose for which liquors were obtained by or from him and for which they were used, the character and habits of applicants for liquor and their general repute as to habits of sobriety or otherwise, shall be competent evidence and may be considered so far as applicable to the particular case with any other recognized, competent and material facts and circumstances bearing on the issues involved in determining the ultimate facts. In any suit, prosecution or proceeding for violations of this act or the acts for the suppression of intemperance, and acts amendatory thereof, the court may compel the production in evidence of any books or papers required by this act to be kept, and may compel any permit holder, his clerk or any person who has purchased liquors of either of them to appear and give evidence, and the claim that any such testimony or evidence will tend to criminate the person giving such evidence shall not excuse such person or witness from testifying or producing such books or papers in evidence: but such oral evidence shall not be used against such person or witness, on the trial of any criminal proceeding against him. Any number of distinct violations of this act may be charged in one indictment in different counts and all tried in the same action, the jury specifying the counts, if any, on which the defendant is found guilty.

2375. Sales to pharmacists. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 15. Registered pharmacists, conducting pharmacies and not holding permits and manufacturers of proprietary medicines are hereby authorized to purchase of permit holders in the counties of their residence, intoxicating liquors (not including malt) for the purpose of compounding medicines, tinctures and extracts that cannot be used as a beverage. Said permit holders shall not charge such registered pharmacists over ten per cent. net profit for liquors so sold. Such purchasers shall keep a record of uses to which the same are devoted, giving the kind and quantity so used, and on or before the tenth day of each calendar month they shall make and file with the county auditor sworn reports for the preceding calendar month giving full and true statements of the quantity and kinds of such liquors purchased and used, the uses to which the same have been devoted, and giving the names of the permit holders of whom the same were purchased and the dates and quantities so purchased, together with an invoice of the amount of each kind still in stock and kept for such compounding. The commissioners of pharmacy are hereby empowered and directed to make further rules and regulations regarding the quantity of intoxicating liquors to be kept in stock by such pharmacists at any one time, and such further rules and regulations with respect to the purchase, use and keeping of such liquors as they may deem proper for the prevention of abuses of the trust reposed in such purchasers, and if the said registered pharmacist sell, barter, give away, exchange or in any manner dispose of said liquors, or use the same for any purpose other than authorized in this section, he shall upon conviction before any district court thereof forfeit his certificate of registration; and be liable to all the penalties, prosecutions and proceedings at law or in equity provided against persons selling without a permit, and upon any such conviction the clerk of the district court shall within ten days after said judgment or order transmit to the commissioners of pharmacy the certified record thereof, upon receipt of which the commission shall strike his name from the list of pharmacists and cancel his certificate. Provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize the manufacture or sale of any preparation or compound under any name, form or device which may be used as a beverage and which is intoxicating in its character.

2376. Permit holders liable for sales by clerks. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 16. A permit holder may employ not more than two registered pharmacists as clerks to sell intoxicating liquors in conformity to the permit and provisions of this act, but in such case the acts of his clerks in conducting the business shall be deemed the acts of the permit holder who shall be liable therefor as if he had personally done the acts and in making returns the verification of such requests as may have been received attested and filled by a clerk must be made by such clerk and the clerk who transacted any of the business under the permit must join in the general oath required of the employer so far as relates to his own connection therewith. If for any cause a registered pharmacist who holds a permit shall cease to hold a valid and subsisting certificate of registration or renewal thereof his permit shall thereby be forfeited and be null and void.

2378. Fines for violations. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 18. If any person shall be convicted of violating any of the provisions of this act or of the acts regulating the practice of pharmacy or any acts for the suppression of intemperance or amendments thereto by reason of a prosecution by the commissioners of pharmacy all fines so imposed and collected shall be paid into the county treasury of the proper county for the use of the school fund, and the commissioners of pharmacy shall be entitled to draw from the state treasury an amount not exceeding fifty per cent. of the amount of the fines so collected to be used solely in prosecution instituted by them for failure to comply with the provisions of this act or of the acts regulating the practice of pharmacy. And the court before whom any prosecution instituted and prosecuted by the commissioners of pharmacy shall certify to the auditor of state all cases in which they have appeared as prosecutors, either in person or by their attorney, and the amount of fines imposed and collected in such cases. And the commissioners of pharmacy shall have power to revoke the certificate of registration of pharmacists for repeated violation of this act. Said amount to be drawn from time to time upon the warrants of the state auditor which shall issue for the payment of expenses actually incurred in said prosecutions after said expenses shall have been audited by the executive council.

2379. Penalties. 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 19. If any person shall make any false or fictitious signature or sign any name other than his or her own to any paper required to be signed by this act or make any false statement in any paper or application signed to procure liquors under this act, the person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars and cost of prosecution and shall be committed until said fine and cost are paid or be imprisoned not less than ten nor more than thirty days. If any permit holder or his clerk shall make false oath touching any matter required to be sworn to under the provisions of this act, the person so offending shall upon conviction therefor be punished as provided by law for perjury. If any person holding a permit under this law shall purchase or procure any intoxicating liquors otherwise than authorized by this act, or in any larger quantities than shall be stated in the county auditor's certificate obtained by him for that purpose, or make any false return to the county auditor, or use any request for liquors for more than one sale or the county auditor's certificate for purchasing liquors for more than one purchase, in any of such cases he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction, punished accordingly.

2380. Selling or giving to minors or intoxicated persons. 1539; 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 9. It shall be unlawful for any person to sell or give away by agent or otherwise, any spirituous or other intoxicating liquors, including wine or beer, to any minor for any purpose whatever, unless upon the written order of his parent, guardian, or family physician, or to sell the same to any intoxicated person, or to any person who is in the habit of becoming intoxicated, and any person violating the provisions of this section shall forfeit and pay to the school fund the sum of one hundred dollars for each offense, to be collected by action against him, or by action against him and the sureties on his bond, if one has been given, by any citizen in the county. One-half of the amount so recovered shall go to informer, and the other half shall go to the school fund of the county. [14 G. A., ch. 24, § 5.]

This section applies not only to persons having a permit to sell liquors, but to all persons: Cobleigh v. McBride, 45-116, 120.

To constitute the offense it is not necessary that defendant should have known that the person to whom sale was made was a minor. Knowledge of such fact need neither be charged nor proved: Jamison v. Burton, 43-282. So, in case of sale to a person in the habit of becoming intoxicated, it is immaterial whether the seller knew the habits of such person. He sells at his peril: Dudley v. Sautbine, 49-650.

A defendant charged with such sales cannot excuse himself on the ground of his ignorance of the fact that the person to whom such sales were made was a minor or an inebriate: State

v. Ward, 75-637; State v. Thompson, 74-119.

In case of sale to a minor the consent of the parent will be no defense unless it is in writing: State v. Coeman, 48-567.

The principal is liable for a sale made by an agent in violation of this section, although the agent was positively forbidden to sell to such persons generally, or to the particular person to whom sale was made: Dudley v. Sautbine, 49-650.

The sale of wine or beer to one of the classes of persons here mentioned, resulting in injury such as is contemplated in § 2418, will give a right of action under that section: Jewett v. Wauishura, 43-574.

Under § 2415, this section is to be construed as prohibiting the giving as well as the sale to an intoxicated person: Church v. Higham, 44-482.

The action for the benefit of the school fund may be brought by a citizen as well as by the treasurer: Ibid.

Under this section the seller of liquor to an intoxicated person will be liable, although the liquor is bought and paid for by a third person by way of treating such intoxicated person: State v. Hubbard, 60-466.

Evidence of intoxication at a period subsequent to the sale of the liquor should not be received to prove that the person to whom it was furnished was intoxicated at the time of such sale: Ibid.

No section of the statute except this forbids the giving away of intoxicating liquors, except it is done as an evasion of the penalties for selling or as a subterfuge to conceal unlawful sales: State v. Hutchins, 74-20.

A corporation is a person within the meaning of this section. Therefore, held, that where the defendant corporation ordered and conducted a ball at which the principal officer and member of the managing committee and other officers thereof sold beer, the proceeds of which were received by the corporation, the action provided by this section might be maintained against it: Stewart v. Waterloo Turn Verein, 71-226.

Sales of liquors to the class of persons enumerated in this section are not by its terms declared to be misdemeanors, and the penalty imposed by it can be enforced only by civil action by a citizen of the county: State v. Douglass, 73-279.

Whether allegation of plaintiff's citizenship is sufficiently put in issue by a mere general denial of the allegation of the petition, quere: Kirk v. Litterst, 71-71. But in actions under § 2384, it is held that a general denial does not put in issue plaintiff's citizenship as alleged in the petition: See notes to that section.

2381. Penalty for selling without a permit. 1540; 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 10. If any person not holding such a permit, by himself, his clerk, servant or agent, shall for himself or any person else directly or indirectly, or on any pretense, or by any device, sell, or in consideration of the purchase of any other property, give to any person any intoxicating liquors, he shall, for the first offense be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction for said first offense shall pay a fine of not less than fifty or more than one hundred dollars and costs of prosecution, and stand committed to the county jail until such fine and costs are paid; for the second and every subsequent offense he shall pay on conviction thereof, a fine of not less than three hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars and costs of prosecution and be imprisoned in the county jail, not to exceed six months. All clerks, servants, and agents of whatever kind, engaged or employed in the manufacture, sale, or keeping for sale in violation of this chapter, of any intoxicating liquor, shall be charged and convicted in the same manner as principals may be, and shall be subject to the penalties herein provided. Indictments and information for violations under this section may allege any number of violations of its provisions by the same party, but the various allegations must be contained in separate counts, and the person so charged may be convicted and punished for each of the violations so alleged as on separate indictments or informations, but a separate judgment must be entered on each count on which a verdict of guilty is rendered. The second and subsequent convictions mentioned in this section shall be construed to mean convictions on separate indictments or information. And in default of the payment of the fines and cost provided for the first conviction under this section, the person so convicted shall not be entitled to the benefit of chapter forty-seven, title twenty-five, of this code, until he shall have been imprisoned sixty days. [R., § 1562; C., '51, §§ 930-1.]

Without permit: This section contains the only provision under which a party can be punished criminally for an act of sale of intoxicating liquors, and by its express language it is applicable only to persons not holding permits. Persons holding permits are subject to the penalties prescribed by §§ 2383 and 2384 for owning or keeping liquors with unlawful intent, or for keeping or maintaining a place in which such liquors are sold or kept for sale unlawfully: State v. Douglass, 73-279.

Sales by clerks: Under provisions for the punishment of the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, held, that the fact that defendant acted as the clerk of another or as volunteer and without pecuniary reward would be no defense, clerks being liable equally with their principals. Nor would it be any defense that the principal has been convicted for the same act: State v. Finan, 10-19.

One who acts as agent or clerk of a social club, to keep and deal out its liquors to members purchasing and presenting tickets, may be indicted and punished under this section: State v. Mercer, 32-405; Cantril v. Sainer, 59-26.

Where the only evidence of illegal sale was the testimony of a clerk in defendant's drug store that he sold at that store a half-pint of liquor to a certain person, it not appearing that defendant knew of such sale or kept intoxicating liquors for sale, or that there were any such in his possession or kept by him for any purpose, held, that the conviction could not be sustained: State v. Findley, 45-435.

Giving: Under a similar statutory provision, held, that the giving of intoxicating liquor to another was not an offense unless it was "in consideration of the purchase" of other property as specified in the statute, and that the fact that the liquors were so given, if such was the case, should be averred: State v. Finan, 10-19.

There is no provision making a gift of intoxicating liquors not in consideration of the purchase of any other property illegal, except the provisions of the preceding section which have reference to minors: State v. Hutchins, 74-20.

Indictment or information: Under the provisions of § 2406, as to the sufficiency of an indictment or information for illegal sales, an information charging defendant with selling intoxicating liquors is sufficient: Foreman v. Hunter, 59-550.

It is not necessary in an indictment for the illegal sale to specify the kind of liquor sold: State v. Whalen, 54-753.

However, if the kind of liquor is specified it must be proven as charged: State v. Hesner, 55-494.

An information charging defendant with selling, etc., is sufficient without stating the method in which the sale was accomplished. A selling committed in any of the different methods referred to by statute constitutes one and the same offense: Devine v. State, 4-443.

Any number of violations may be charged in separate counts and a separate conviction had on each: Walters v. State, 5-507.

Under an ordinance providing a punishment for the sale of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors not prohibited by statute, held, that more than one offense might be included in the same complaint: Jackson v. Boyd, 53-536.

But the first and second, or second and third, offenses cannot be charged in the same indictment or information: State v. Leis, 11-416.

The separate counts should show that the offense charged in each is different from those charged in the others, and where a number of counts were identical in language so that the charge in each would be proven by the same evidence, which would establish that alleged in any of the others, held, that a demurrer to the information should have been sustained, or the state should have been restricted in the introduction of evidence to such as was intended to sustain a single sale: State v. Van Hartschuherr, 72-541.

An attorney entitled to recover the fee provided by § 5109 can recover but one such fee for each prosecution, although several counts for different offenses are embraced in the same information or indictment: Schulte v. Keokuk County, 74-292.

An information for the offense of illegal sales should charge that defendant sold, etc., to some person, giving the name, if known: State v. Allen, 32-491.

An indictment charging defendant with keeping for sale and selling intoxicating liquors is good without the allegation that they were so kept and sold in violation of law: State v. Jordan, 39-387.

Where the information charges the sales of liquor to different persons named, on certain dates, the jury may convict on proof of sales to any of the persons named at any time within the statute of limitation and prior to the filing of the information: State v. Johnson, 69-623.

Evidence: On proof of the sale of intoxicating liquors in defendant's place of business, the burden is upon him to prove that the sales were lawful: State v. Cloughly, 73-626.

In a prosecution for the illegal sale it is proper to ask a witness whether he purchased such liquor of defendant and whether he knows of defendant selling such liquor to any one. It is also proper to ask a witness what defendant's business was: State v. Roben, 39-424.

The testimony of a witness in a prosecution for illegal sale that he bought and drank in defendant's saloon what, in his opinion, was whisky, held not incompetent as being merely an opinion. A man who resorts to a saloon for intoxicating liquors may be presumed to be qualified to express an opinion as to the liquor supplied him: State v. Miller, 53-84.

Punishment: Under a previous act, held, that while a person holding a permit was liable on his bond for selling for improper purposes, he was also liable to a criminal prosecution: State v. Adams, 20-486.

A person selling without a license may also be punished for the crime of keeping a nuisance under § 2384, either independently of or in addition to the punishment for the illegal sale: State v. Waynick, 45-516.

Where a previous conviction was not shown, held, that it was erroneous to impose a greater fine than authorized for the first offense: Walters v. State, 5-507.

But where, on appeal, the prosecution offered to remit the excess, the supreme court modified the judgment in accordance with such offer and affirmed it: State v. Shaw, 23-316.

Under the section as it now stands the length of imprisonment for non-payment of a fine is as provided generally in § 5894: Ex parte Tucher, 69-393.

A person sentenced under this section cannot avail himself of the provisions for the discharging of poor convicts: Hanks v. Workman, 69-600.

Subsequent convictions: Before defendant can be found guilty of the offense of a second sale he must be charged, convicted and fined for the first offense of selling: State v. Leis, 11-416.

Under an information charging a second or third offense and a former conviction, defendant may be found guilty of a first offense: State v. Ensley, 10-149; State v. Gaffeny, 63-262.

In such case the offense of a first sale may be regarded as included in the offense of a second sale charged in the indictment: Ibid.

Revenue license no defense for illegal selling: See notes to § 2400.

2382. Sale of mixed liquors. 1541. Any person who shall mix any intoxicating liquor with any beer, wine, or cider by him sold, and shall sell, or keep for sale, as a beverage, such mixture, shall be deemed guilty under the preceding section, and shall be punished accordingly. [R., § 1587.]

2383. Keeping with intent to sell; evidence. 1542; 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 11. No person shall own or keep, or be in any way concerned, engaged, or employed in owning or keeping any intoxicating liquors with intent to sell the same within this state, or to permit the same to be sold therein in violation of the provisions hereof, and any person who shall so own or keep, or be concerned, engaged or employed in owning or keeping such liquors with any such intent, shall be deemed, for the first offense, guilty of a misdemeanor; and on conviction for said first offense shall pay a fine of not less than fifty nor more than one hundred dollars and costs of prosecution, and shall stand committed to the county jail until such fine and costs are paid, and in default of such fine and costs, he shall not be entitled to the benefits of chapter forty-seven, title twenty-five, of the code, until he shall have been imprisoned sixty days; for the second and every subsequent offense he shall pay a fine of not less than three hundred dollars nor more than five hundred, or be imprisoned in the county jail not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court, and upon trial of every indictment or information of violations of the provisions of this section, proof of the finding of the liquor named in the indictment or in the information, in the possession of the accused in any place except his private dwelling-house or its dependencies, or in such dwelling-house or dependencies, if the same is a tavern, public eating-house, grocery or other place of public resort, or in unusual quantities in the private dwelling-house or its dependencies of any person keeping a tavern, public eating-house, grocery, or other place of public resort in some other place, shall be received and acted upon by the court as presumptive evidence that such liquor was kept or held for sale contrary to the provisions hereof. [R., § 1583.]

As the keeping of intoxicating liquors for sale within the state is unlawful in itself, unless the party thus keeping and offering for sale is authorized to sell, an indictment charging the keeping of intoxicating liquors in the state with intent to sell the same will be sufficient, and the indictment need not negative the authority to sell: State v. Collins, 11-141.

Held, that the expression in an indictment, "kept intoxicating liquors to sell," was sufficient to charge the offense: Vaughn v. State, 5-369.

An indictment charging that "defendant did keep and was concerned, etc., in owning and keeping intoxicating liquors to sell," held to charge but one offense: Ibid.

An information charging defendant with keeping intoxicating liquors "for the purpose of sale," instead of "with intent to sell the same," as provided in the statute, held sufficient to support a conviction: State v. Mohr, 53-261.

One who acts as agent or clerk of a social club, to keep and deal out its liquors to members purchasing and presenting tickets, may be indicted and punished under this section: State v. Mercer, 32-405.

Where a druggist has a permit to sell intoxicating liquors, but makes unlawful sales, the fact that the owning and keeping is with intent to make unlawful sales, and therefore unlawful in itself, may be presumed: State v. Sartori, 55-340.

The provision that the finding, etc., shall be presumptive evidence, etc., is not unconstitutional: Santo v. The State, 2-165, 214. But it would seem that such presumption would not attach to liquor in transitu, and it is doubtful whether it may be made except upon the trial of an indictment or information. In an action against a carrier for damages for the loss of liquor delivered to it for transportation, held, that the carrier could not set up as a defense that the keeping of such liquor was unlawful: Bowen v. Hale, 4-430; but see Sommer v. Cate, in notes to § 2407.

Any person has the right to own and keep liquors unless he owns and keeps them with intent to sell without lawful authority: Wakeman v. Chambers, 69-169.

The offense under this section and that under the next are not the same, and a conviction for one will not bar a prosecution for the other: State v. Graham, 73-553.

The provision that defendant shall stand committed until the fine and costs are paid does not take the offense out of the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace. Although such imprisonment may extend beyond thirty days, it is not as a punishment for the offense but only as a method of enforcing the payment of the fine: Albertson v. Kriechbaum, 65-11.

The provisions of § 5894, as to the extent of imprisonment for non-payment of fine, are still applicable under the section as it now stands: Ex parte Tuicher, 69-393.

2384. Nuisance; penalty; injunction. 1543; 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 12. In cases of violation of the provisions of either of the three preceding sections or of sections fifteen hundred and twenty-five of this chapter [§ 2361], the building or erection of whatever kind, or the ground itself in or upon which such unlawful manufacture or sale, or keeping with intent to sell, use or give away, of any intoxicating liquor is carried on, or continued, or exists, and the furniture, fixtures, vessels, and contents is hereby declared a nuisance and shall be abated as hereinafter provided. And whoever shall erect or establish, or continue, or use any building, erection or place for any of the purposes prohibited in said sections: shall be deemed guilty of a nuisance, and may be prosecuted and punished accordingly, and upon conviction shall pay a fine of not exceeding one thousand dollars and costs of prosecution, and stand committed until the fine and costs are paid. And the provisions of chapter forty-seven, title twenty-five, of this code, shall not be applicable to persons committed under this section. Any citizen of the county where such nuisance exists, or is kept or maintained, may maintain an action in equity to abate and perpetually enjoin the same, and any person violating the terms of any injunction granted in such proceedings shall be punished as for contempt by a fine of not less than five hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

What constitutes nuisance: The act of selling, or keeping with intent to sell, in a building or place, as here defined, is a nuisance, while the keeping with intent to sell and selling, as defined by the preceding section, is not a nuisance: State v. Harris, 64-287.

In order to convict for a nuisance it must be shown that the liquors were sold or kept with intent to sell in a building or place frequented by persons desiring to procure intoxicating liquors: Ibid.

This section provides a punishment for keeping nuisances for the sale of intoxicating liquors, which is a different crime from that of the unlawful sale, and the first as well as subsequent offenses are punishable by indictment: State v. Howarth, 70-151.

It is illegal for any person to sell for any purpose intoxicating liquors without a permit from the board of supervisors, and the use of a building for such illegal sales is a nuisance. So held as to a druggist selling intoxicating liquors for medicinal purposes: State v. Waynick, 45-516.

To constitute the offense of nuisance it is not sufficient that defendant used and kept a place with the intent and for the purpose of selling intoxicating liquors therein contrary to law. It must be charged and shown that he manufactured, or sold, or owned and kept with intent to sell, contrary to law. The presence of the liquor in the building is essential: State v. Hass, 22-193; State v. Harris, 27-429; State v. Tierney, 74-237.

A previous conviction or acquittal of the crime of owning or keeping with intent to sell will not bar a prosecution for a nuisance: State v. Harris, 64-287.

An instruction that any building where any kind of intoxicating liquors is kept for the purpose of sale or is sold is a nuisance is erroneous as not referring to lawful sales under permit. But such error will be without prejudice where it does not appear that defendant had any permit to sell: State v. Wambold, 74-605

Indictment: The offense of nuisance may be committed by the manufacture, or the sale, or the keeping with intent to sell, contrary to law. While an indictment charging the offense as committed in any of these three ways would be sufficient, yet one charging its commission by any two, or all three, of the specified unlawful acts, charges but one offense, and is not bad for duplicity: State v. Becker, 20-438; State v. Baughman, 20-497.

Two indictments charging the offense as committed in two different ways charge the same and not two separate offenses; and the fact that the acts set out in the indictments are charged as committed at different times is not conclusive that the offenses are separate and not the same, since the time need not be proved as alleged: State v. Layton, 25-193.

An allegation that a certain building was used by defendants as a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors, and that they did then and there keep said intoxicating liquors for sale in said building with intent to sell, held sufficient without further averment that said building was under their control: State v. Schilling, 14-455.

An indictment charging the offense as committed by using and keeping a room and place for the purpose of selling and by selling therein intoxicating liquors in violation of § 2381, held sufficient: State v. Freeman, 27-333.

And so held, also, where the indictment, similar to the foregoing, charged the acts as "contrary to law," without specifying the section: State v. Allen, 32-248.

It is not necessary that the nuisance should continue up to and exist at the time of the indictment to make it punishable: State v. Schilling, 14-455.

An indictment charging the keeping and using of a "certain building or place," or "a certain frame building," for the purposes prohibited, is sufficiently definite: Ibid.; State v. Kreig, 13-462.

A matter of local description, though it need not have been stated, must be proved as laid: State v. Crogan, 8-523.

But on the trial of an indictment under this section, which charged the use of a building, etc., "next door west of Chamber's store," etc., while the proof was that the building was next door west from "Chamberlain's store," the court were equally divided as to whether the variance was fatal: State v. Verden, 24-126.

In an indictment for the crime of nuisance under this section it is not necessary that the premises be particularly described, although such description may be necessary where an order of abatement is desired: State v. Waltz, 74-610.

The indictment need not state the names of the persons to whom liquor was sold: State v. Becker, 20-438; State v. Jordan, 39-387.

Evidence: Proof of the manufacture, sale, or keeping with intent to sell, in violation of law, is presumptive proof of the offense of nuisance: State v. Guisenhouse, 20-227; State v. Baughman, 20-497.

And this is true even though the sale be secret and by clerk: State v. Freeman, 27-333. Proof of actual sale is presumptive evidence of illegal sale, and the burden of proving that the sales made were legal is upon defendant: Shear v. Green, 73-688.

The proof of a single sale will warrant a conviction for nuisance. Such sale will show unlawful intent as well as keeping: State v. Reyelts, 74-499.

Evidence as to the control of the place in question by defendant, and that bottles, glasses, etc., were there found, held sufficient to warrant conviction of defendant for the crime of keeping a nuisance: State v. Wambold, 74-605.

Unlawful intent may be presumed from unlawful sales, and it is not sufficient for a registered pharmacist to show that sales were made on written applications stating that the purchaser was not a minor or in the habit of becoming intoxicated and that the liquor was desired for use as a medicine: State v. Thompson, 74-119.

The fact that defendant believed in good faith that he had the right to sell for the purposes for which sales were made will not constitute a defense in a prosecution for keeping a place where illegal sales were made: State v. Mullenhoff, 74-271.

As proof of the finding of liquor in the possession of accused, in any place except the private dwelling, is by § 2333 presumptive evidence that such liquor is illegally held for sale, the proof of such finding will be sufficient evidence of a nuisance committed by "keeping with intent to sell:" State v. Norton, 41-430.

The state is not bound to show affirmatively that the liquors were not kept in the original vessels or packages, or that they were not sold for proper purposes, these being proper matters of defense: State v. Becker, 20-438.

Sales by clerk: A barkeeper or clerk, having no interest in the business, may be convicted of the crime of nuisance for the mere sale by him of intoxicating liquors in a building used for that purpose: State v. Stucker, 33-395.

Where liquors are lawfully kept for sale and with intent to sell them for lawful purposes, an illegal sale by an agent without the knowledge or consent of the principal will not render such principal criminally liable for keeping a nuisance: State v. Hayes, 67-27.

Punishment: The punishment for the crime of nuisance, as defined in this connection, is that provided in § 5473 for the crime of nuisance generally: State v. McGrew, 11-112; State v. Collins, 11-141; State v. Schilling, 14-155; State v. Little, 42-51, 54; State v. Dean, 44-648.

A party may be punished for the offense of keeping a nuisance either independently of or in addition to the punishment for illegal selling: State v. Waynick, 45-561.

A pharmacist may be indicted and punished for illegal sales as constituting a nuisance: State v. Mullenhoff, 74-271.

This section authorizes commitment until both fine and costs are paid in case of a conviction for nuisance, but not in case of punishment for contempt: Goetz v. Stutsman, 73-693.

Under an indictment not specifying whether the offense was committed before or after the date of the change of this section, held, that evidence was admissible to prove the commission of the offense prior to such change, and that defendant was properly sentenced under the law as then in force: State v. Reyelts, 74-499.

Injunction; constitutionality: The provision for an injunction in such cases in an action in equity is not unconstitutional as depriving defendant of the right of trial by jury: Littleton v. Fritz, 65-488; State v. Jordan, 72-377.

An action to enjoin a nuisance caused by the selling and keeping for sale of intoxicating liquors contrary to law, held not to involve a federal question in such sense as to authorize a removal of the cause to the federal court: Lemen v. Wagner, 68-660; Schmidt v. Cobb, 119 U. S., 286 (the supreme court of the United States being equally divided).

While the penalty of five hundred dollars for the violation of an injunction in such cases is extraordinary, the statute imposing such a penalty is not unconstitutional: Jordan v. Circuit Court, 69-177.

Citizenship of plaintiff: The action by a citizen of the county to obtain an injunction, although prosecuted in the name of such citizen as a private party, is for the public benefit, and it cannot be maintained except by a citizen of the county. A wife who has been injured in her means of support by illegal sales cannot maintain the action for an injunction if she is a resident of another county: Applegate v. Wimbrenner, 66-67.

An allegation that plaintiff is a citizen of the county is not put in issue by a general denial, but only by specially alleging facts showing the allegation of the petition in this respect not to be true: Littleton v. Harris, 73-167; Shear v. Green, 73-688.

Averment by defendant of want of knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to plaintiff's citizenship is not sufficient to put that matter in issue: Craig v. Hasselman, 74-538.

While the right to institute proceedings is dependent upon residence or citizenship of the plaintiff in the county, yet when that right has attached and the suit has been instituted, the right to prosecute it to judgment does not terminate by plaintiff's removal to another county: Judge v. Kahl, 74-486.

An allegation in a petition for injunction that defendant had established and was maintaining a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors contrary to the statutes of the state, and that he kept such liquors for sale contrary to law and there sold the same unlawfully, not being controverted must be deemed true: Bloomer v. Glendy, 70-757.

Temporary injunction: It was held before the statutory provision expressly authorized it, that a preliminary injunction might be granted as in other proceedings for an injunction: Littleton v. Fritz, 65-488.

A temporary injunction should not be awarded against the premises. The injunction against the occupant and owner is all that is contemplated at that stage of the proceedings: Gray v. Stienes, 69-124.

Where it appears that defendant has been maintaining a nuisance which would warrant the granting of an injunction, the fact that on the application for a temporary injunction he testifies that he has a few days previously quit the business will not be sufficient ground for refusing to grant a temporary injunction: Judge v. Kribs, 71-183.

Owner of the property: Where leased property is being used as a place for the unlawful sale of liquors, the landlord may be made a party defendant to the action to abate such place as a nuisance without regard to his previous knowledge of such use. The building becomes a nuisance and its continuance as such may be enjoined and prevented: Martin v. Blattner, 68-286.

The owner of the building in which unlawful sales of liquor are conducted permitting such sales by a tenant may properly be enjoined from further permitting such use: Gray v. Stienes, 69-124.

A decree abating premises as a nuisance and providing for the destruction of property should not be entered when some of the owners of the property are not parties to the suit: Shear v. Green, 73-688.

If persons not parties to the suit have an interest in the real property involved therein a decree should not be made for removal and sale of fixtures constituting a part of the realty: Danner v. Hotz, 74-389.

Facts in a particular case held sufficient to warrant a decree against the owner of the property: Littleton v. Harris, 73-167.

Where premises are leased for a lawful purpose, to render the owner liable to the penalties herein provided, it is not sufficient to show that he knew of their unlawful use, without taking steps to prevent it, but it must appear that, after he became aware of such illegal use, he did some act or made some declaration affirmatively assenting thereto: State v. Ballingall, 42-87.

Permanent injunction: An injunction should not be issued against a building in which a nuisance has been maintained by a tenant when the owner of the building upon being informed of the nuisance has taken steps to have it abated, and there is nothing tending to show that this was not done in good faith: Shear v. Brinkman, 72-698.

The fact that the owner of property ceases to use it for improper purposes only about the time the case is reached for trial does not render it erroneous to enter a decree for abating the property as a nuisance: Danner v. Hotz, 74-389.

Where the evidence shows that a nuisance is being maintained in the building the personal property used about the premises is subject to sale upon the judgment. A violation of the law works a forfeiture of the permit, and the premises used for the purpose of illegal manufacture may be closed even for the purposes of legal manufacture: Pearson v. International Distillery, 72-348.

Contempt: An order imposing a fine and imprisonment for contempt in violating an injunction may be made by the judge in vacation: McLane v. Granger, 74-152.

Abatement: The provisions as to abatement of the nuisance are applicable to acts committed before the enactment of those provisions: McLane v. Bonn, 70-752; Drake v. Jordan, 73-707.

2385. Action by county attorney; when triable; evidence. 21 G. A., ch. 66, § 1. Actions to enjoin nuisances as authorized by section twelve, of chapter one hundred and forty-three, of the acts of the twentieth general assembly [§ 2384], may be brought in the name of the state of Iowa, by the [district or] county attorney of the proper county; and it shall be the duty of such [district or] county attorney where any such nuisance exists, to institute and prosecute such action for the abatement thereof; provided, however, if after notice or information given him of such nuisance, said [district or] county attorney refuse or neglect to bring suit, and prosecute the same with reasonable diligence, then any citizen residing in the county may institute and prosecute such action in the name of the state for the abatement of such nuisance. But nothing in this section shall prevent any citizen of a county from instituting and maintaining in his own name an action under said section twelve, of said chapter one hundred and forty-three, and to all of such actions, whether brought under the provisions of said section twelve of said chapter one hundred and forty-three or of this act, the provisions contained in this act shall apply. All such actions shall be triable at the first term of court, after due and timely notice of the commencement thereof has been given. Evidence of the general reputation of the place designated in the petition shall be admissible for the purpose of proving the existence of such nuisance, and if successful in the action the plaintiff shall be entitled to an attorney's fee of not less than twenty-five dollars, to be taxed and collected as costs against the defendant.

Whether this statute changes the general rule as to the method of trial of equity causes in this class of cases or not, it is error to continue a case for the purpose of taking depositions without making an order for the trial of the cause upon depositions: Ellwood v. Price, 73-84.

The provisions of this act as to attorneys' fees and also as to closing the building are applicable on the trial of cases commenced before the statute went into effect: Drake v. Jordan, 73-707.

2386. Temporary injunction. 21 G. A., ch. 66, § 2. In any such action the court, if in session, or the judge thereof in vacation shall upon the demand of the attorney or party charged with the management of the cause for the plaintiff, grant a temporary injunction without bond, if it be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court or judge, by evidence in the form of affidavits or otherwise as the court or judge may order, that such nuisance actually exists, or is being maintained, and when the cause is continued at the instance of the defendant, a temporary injunction shall be issued as a matter of course without bond.

2387. Violation of injunction. 21 G. A., ch. 66, § 3. In case of the violation of any injunction granted in such action, the court, or in vacation the judge thereof shall have power to try summarily and punish the party or parties guilty thereof, as required by section twelve of chapter one hundred and forty-three of the acts of the twentieth general assembly [§ 2384], provided, that if the penalty inflicted for such contempt, be imprisonment alone, it shall not be for less than three nor more than six months. The evidence in such proceeding or trial for contempt, may be in the form of affidavits, or on the demand of either party the witnesses shall be brought before the court for examination and the provisions of section three thousand four hundred and four of the code [§ 4640] shall not be held to apply to persons charged with violating injunctions issued under this act and the act to which this is amendatory.

This section expressly authorizes the examination in court of witnesses in contempt proceedings. In such case it is sufficient if the evidence is taken down by the shorthand reporter and filed with the certificate of the judge thereto, followed at a later time by the filing of the reporter's transcript of his shorthand notes certified to by him: Goetz v. Stutzman, 73-693.

2389. Nuisance abated. 21 G. A., ch. 66, § 5. If the existence of the nuisance be established either in criminal or equitable action, it shall be abated under the judgment and order of the court, by seizing and destroying the liquor therein, and removing from the building, erection or place, all fixtures, furniture, vessels, and all movable property, used in or about the premises, in carrying on the unlawful business, and selling the same in a manner provided for sale of chattels under execution, and by securely closing the said building, erection, or place, as against the use or occupation of the same for saloon purposes, and keeping the same securely closed for the period of one year (unless sooner released as hereinafter provided) and any person breaking open said building, erection, or place, or using the premises so ordered to be closed, shall be punished as for contempt as above provided in case of the violation of injunctions, provided, however, that when leasehold premises are adjudged to be a nuisance, the owner thereof shall have the right to terminate the lease by giving three days' notice thereof, in writing, to the tenant, and when this is done the premises shall be turned over to the owner upon the order of the court or judge. But the release of the property shall be upon condition that the nuisances shall not be continued, and the return of the property shall not release any lien upon said property occasioned by any prosecution of the tenant.

2390. Proceeds, how applied. 21 G. A., ch. 66, § 6. The proceeds of the sale of the personal property as provided in the preceding section, shall be applied, first: in payment of the costs of the action and abatement, secondly: to the satisfaction of any fine and costs adjudged against the proprietor of the premises and keepers of said nuisance, and the balance if any shall be paid to the defendant.

2391. Abatement by owner. 21 G. A., ch. 66, § 7. If the owner appear and pay all costs of the proceeding and file a bond with sureties to be approved by the clerk, in the full value of the property to be ascertained by the court or in vacation by the clerk, auditor and treasurer of the county, conditioned that he will immediately abate said nuisance and prevent the same from being established or kept therein within the period of one year thereafter, the court, or in vacation the judge may, if satisfied of his good faith, order the premises taken and closed under the order of abatement, to be delivered to said owner, and said order of abatement canceled so far as the same may relate to said property, and if the proceeding be an action in equity, and said bond be given and costs therein paid before judgment and order of abatement, the action shall be thereby abated; provided, however, that the release of the property under the provisions of this section shall not release it from any judgment lien or penalty, or liability to which it may be subject under any other statute or law.

2392. Presumption from possession. 21 G. A., ch. 66, § 8. In all actions, prosecutions and proceedings under the laws of this state prohibiting the illegal manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, the finding of such liquors, except in the possession of one legally authorized to sell the same or except in a private dwelling-house, which does not include, or is not used in connection with a tavern, public eating-house, restaurant, grocery or other place of public resort shall be presumptive evidence that such liquors were kept for illegal sale; and proof of actual sale shall be presumptive evidence of illegal sale.

2393. Second offense. 21 G. A., ch. 66, § 9. Any person who shall have been convicted of keeping a nuisance under the laws prohibiting the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, or who shall have been enjoined under the provisions of this act or the act to which this is amendatory, and shall again directly or indirectly engage in such unlawful business, of keeping a nuisance or selling such liquors in violation of law, in the same or any other county in this state, shall upon conviction thereof be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not less than three months or more than one year. But no equitable proceeding, order or judgment shall be construed as a conviction under the provisions of this section.

2394. Repeal; saving clause. 21 G. A., ch. 66, § 13. All acts and parts of acts, inconsistent with this act, are hereby repealed; provided, however, that this repeal shall not effect [affect] any act done, or right accruing or accrued, or which had been established, nor any action or proceeding commenced before the time this repeal takes effect, nor any offense committed or penalty or forfeiture incurred; and any suit or proceeding pending when the repeal takes effect, or thereafter brought, for any offense committed, or for recovery of a forfeiture or penalty incurred, prior thereto shall be maintained and prosecuted under the law, as in force prior to the taking effect of this act.

2398. Contempt. 22 G. A., ch. 73, § 4. In any action to enjoin a nuisance as authorized by section twelve, of chapter one hundred and forty-three, of the acts of the twentieth general assembly [§ 2384], and chapter sixty-six, of the acts of the twenty-first general assembly [§§ 2385-2394], the injunction granted shall be binding on the party or parties enjoined throughout the judicial district in which the action is brought. And any person enjoined in such action, who shall while such injunction remains in force, again engage in, or be in any manner concerned in the selling, or keeping for sale, contrary to law, of any intoxicating liquor, anywhere within the jurisdiction of the court, he shall be deemed guilty of contempt of court and punished accordingly.

sessed against him. And the clerk of the court, when such fine is paid, shall pay over to such attorney the amount thus allowed him.

2400. Revenue license; evidence. 21 G. A., ch. 113, § 1. The fact that any person engaged in any kind of business, has or keeps posted, in or about his place of business, a receipt, or stamp, showing payment of the special tax, levied under the laws of the United States, upon the business of selling distilled, malt or fermented liquors, or shall have paid such special tax for the sale of distilled malt or fermented liquors in the state of Iowa, shall be evidence that said person, or persons so owning, or controlling such receipts or stamps, or having paid such special tax, are engaged in keeping, and selling intoxicating liquors contrary to the provisions of chapter one hundred and forty-three of the laws of the twentieth general assembly of the state of Iowa [§§ 2383, 2384]. and also prima facie evidence that any, and all intoxicating liquors found in the possession or under the control of any person so holding such receipts or stamp or having paid such special tax, are kept for sale in violation of law; and on conviction shall be subject to the penalties provided for in said chapter one hundred and forty-three: Provided however, that this act shall not apply to persons lawfully authorized to keep for sale and to sell intoxicating liquors for such purposes as are authorized by law.

Before this act, held, no defense in a prosecution for selling in violation of the state law that defendant held a United States internal revenue license to retail liquors. Such license does not authorize the holder to violate the law of the state: State v. McCleary, 17-44: State v. Carney, 20-82; State v. Stutz, 20-488; State v. Baughman, 20-497.

Nor was the holding of such license a circumstance tending to show a violation of the state law: State v. Stutz, 20-488.

2401. Search-warrant; seizure. 1544. If any credible resident of any county, shall, before a justice of the peace for the same county, make written information, supported by his oath or affirmation, that he has reason to believe, and does believe, that any intoxicating liquor described, as particularly as may be, in said information, is in said county, in any place described, as particularly as may be, in said information, owned or kept by any person named or described in said information, as particularly as may be, and is intended by him to be sold in violation of the provisions of this chapter, said justice shall, upon finding probable cause for such information, issue his warrant of search, directed to any peace officer in said county, describing as particularly as may be, the liquor and the place described in said information, and the person named or described in said information as the owner or keeper of said liquor, and commanding the said officer to search thoroughly said place, and to seize the said liquor, with the vessels containing it, and to keep the same securely until final action be had thereon; whereupon, the said peace officer to whom such warrant shall be delivered, shall forthwith obey and execute, so far as he shall be able, the commands of said warrant, and make return of his doings to said justice, and shall securely keep all liquors so seized by him, and the vessels containing it, until final action be had thereon; provided, however, that if the place to be searched be a dwelling-house in which any family resides, and in which no tavern, eating-house, grocery, or other place of public resort is kept, such warrant shall not be issued unless said complainant shall, on oath or affirmation, declare before said justice that he has reason to believe, and does believe, that within one month next before the making of said information, intoxicating liquor has been, in violation of this chapter, sold in said house, or in some dependency thereof, by the person accused in said information, or by his consent or permission; nor unless from the facts and circumstances disclosed by such complaint to said justice, the said justice shall be of opinion that said complainant has adequate reason for such belief. [R., § 1565; 9 G. A., ch. 94, § 9.]

Information: The expression "as particularly as may be" conveys the idea of the greatest degree of certainty, and this section is therefore not in conflict with Const., art. 4, § 8, as authorizing a search-warrant to issue without the particularity of description there required; nor as authorizing unreasonable search and seizure: Santo v. State, 2-165, 212.

Although the section requires that the information be filed by "a credible resident of" the county, it is not necessary that either the information or the warrant should state that it is made by such a person. That fact may be found by the justice before whom information is filed, upon proof independent of the information, or from personal knowledge: State v. Thompson, 44-399; Weir v. Allen, 47-482; State v. Blair, 72-591.

Warrant: Proceedings under a warrant will not be rendered invalid by the fact that the officer searched for and seized the liquor before having such warrant. Nor is it material whether the liquor was in possession of the person claiming to be owner thereof, it appearing that the owner had no right to keep or sell such liquor: State v. Ward, 75-637.

What subject to seizure: It is only liquors which are kept with the intention of selling the same in violation of law that may be seized: State v. Harris, 36-136.

The fact that the owner has been selling liquors in violation of law is not a ground for their condemnation, and is simply evidence of the unlawful intent with which they were kept: State v. Blair, 72-591.

The information must charge some specific person as owner or keeper of the intoxicating liquor with an illegal intent, and the liquor cannot be destroyed unless the evidence shows that the person who is charged as owner or keeper had such intent: State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 64-300.

If a pharmacist sells liquors for purposes other than as medicine, search and seizure of liquors owned by him may be made as provided in this section: State v. Ward, 36 N. W. Rep., 765.

It will not be presumed that the place to be searched is a dwelling-house, etc., from the mere fact that the information avers that the liquors are kept in "a certain house or place, known," etc.: Sanders v. State, 2-230, 277.

A previous conviction of the owner of the liquors for selling the same will not bar a proceeding, under this section, against the liquors themselves: Ibid.

The jurisdiction here conferred upon justices of the peace is not exclusive, but may also be exercised by police justices in cities acting under special charter: Weir v. Allen, 47-482.

Seizure: Liquors seized as here contemplated cannot be taken from the officer by replevin: Frank v. Israel, 5-438; State v. Harris, 38-242; Weir v. Allen, 47-482; Fries v. Porch, 49-351.

Nor can the owner recover their value from such officer by way of damages in an action of trespass, unless he show that he possessed them with lawful intent, and was unlawfully deprived of them: Plummer v. Harbut, 5-308.

Liquors in the hands of an officer by virtue of a seizure cannot be taken from him by writ of replevin from a federal court: Senior v. Pierce, 31 Fed. Rep., 625.

A judgment rendered against the officer holding the liquor by stipulation on his part should be set aside on motion of the attorney representing the prosecution in the case against the liquors: Fries v. Porch, 49-351.

Where intoxicating liquors held for sale are seized in the custody of an express company, in a proceeding to condemn them it is immaterial whether the officers of the company knew the character of the property and the use to which it was to be put. It is the duty of such company, under the statute, to know whether goods it receives for shipment are such as the law authorizes to be bartered and sold: State v. United States Ex. Co., 70-271.

Such a proceeding is not a criminal one against the express company and it becomes a party voluntarily, if at all, to the case: Ibid.

Proceeding criminal: These proceedings for the condemnation of intoxicating liquors illegally kept with intent to sell are criminal in their nature, and the defendant has the rights of the defendant in a criminal prosecution. For instance, a verdict of the jury for defendant should not be set aside upon motion in arrest of judgment in behalf of the prosecution: State v. Harris, 40-95.

A proceeding for the seizure, condemnation and destruction of intoxicating liquors kept for sale in violation of law is a criminal action, and the jurisdiction of the justice does not, therefore, depend on the amount in controversy: State v. Arlen, 71-216.

2402. Information. 1545. The information and search-warrant in such case, shall describe the place to be searched, as well as the liquors to be seized, with reasonable particularity. When any liquors shall have been seized by virtue of any such warrant, the same shall not be discharged or returned to any person claiming the same, by reason of any alleged insufficiency of description in the warrant of the liquor or place, but the claimant shall only have a right to be heard on the merits of the case. [9 G. A., ch. 94, § 9.]

2403. Notice; trial; judgment; appeal. 1546. Whenever upon such warrant such liquors shall have been seized, the justice who issued such warrant shall, within forty-eight hours after such seizure, cause to be left at the place where said liquor was seized, if said place be a dwelling-house, store, or shop, posted in some conspicuous place on or about said buildings, and also to be left with or at the last known and usual place of residence of the person named or described in said information as the owner or keeper of said liquor, if he be a resident of this state, a notice, summoning such person and all others whom it may concern, to appear before said justice at a place and time named in said notice, which time shall not be less than five nor more than fifteen days after the posting and leaving of said notices, and show cause, if any they have, why said liquor, together with the vessels in which the same is contained, should not be forfeited; and said notice shall, with reasonable certainty, describe said liquor and vessels, and shall state where, when, and why, the same were seized. At the time and place prescribed in said notice, the person named in said information, or any other person claiming an interest in said liquor and vessels, or any part thereof, may appear and show cause why the same should not be forfeited. If any person shall so appear, he shall become a party defendant in said case, and said justice shall make a record thereof. Whether any person shall so appear or not, said justice shall, at the prescribed time, proceed to the trial of said case, and said complainants, or either of them, may, and upon their default, the officer having such liquor in custody shall appear before said justice and prosecute said information, and show cause why such liquor should be adjudged forfeited. The proceeding in the trial of such case may be the same, substantially, as in cases of misdemeanor triable before justices of the peace, and if any person shall appear and be made a party defendant as herein provided, and shall make written plea that said liquor, or the part thereof claimed by him, was not owned or kept with intent to be sold in violation of this chapter, such party defendant may, at his option, demand a jury to try the issue, and, if upon the evidence then and there presented, the said justice or jury as the case may be, shall find for verdict that said liquor was, when seized, owned or kept by any person, whether said party defendant or not, for the purpose of being sold in violation of this chapter, the said justice shall render judgment that said liquor, or said part thereof, with the vessels in which it is contained, is forfeited. If no person be made defendant in manner aforesaid, or if judgment be in favor of all the defendants who appear and are made such, then the costs of the proceeding shall be paid as in ordinary criminal prosecutions where the prosecution fails. If the judgment shall be against only one party defendant appearing as aforesaid, he shall be adjudged to pay all the costs of proceedings in the seizure and detention of the liquor claimed by him up to that time, and of said trial. But, if such judgment shall be against more than one party defendant claiming distinct interests in said liquor, then the cost of said proceedings and trial shall be according to the discretion of said justice equitably apportioned among said defendants, and execution shall be issued on said judgments against said defendants for the amount of the costs so adjudged against them. Any person appearing and becoming party defendant as aforesaid, may appeal from said judgment of forfeiture as to the whole, or any part, of said liquor and vessels claimed by him and so adjudged forfeited, to the district court as in ordinary cases of misdemeanor. [R., § 1566.]

See notes to § 2401.

2404. Destruction of liquor and vessels. 1547. Whenever it shall be finally decided that liquor seized as aforesaid is forfeited, the court rendering final judgment of forfeiture, shall issue to the officer having said liquors in custody, or to some other peace officer, a written order, directing him forthwith to destroy said liquor and vessels containing the same, and immediately thereafter to make return of said order to the court whence issued, with his doings indorsed thereon, and sworn to. Whenever it shall be finally decided that any liquor so seized is not liable to forfeiture, the court by whom such final decision shall be rendered, shall issue a written order to the officer having the same in custody, or to some other peace officer, to restore said liquor, with the vessels containing the same, to the place where it was seized, as nearly as may be, or to the person entitled to receive it, which order, the officer, after obeying the commands thereof, shall return to the said court with his doings thereon indorsed; and the costs of the proceedings in such case attending the restoration, as also the costs attending the destruction of such liquor in case of forfeiture, shall be taxed and paid in the same manner as is provided in case of ordinary criminal prosecution, where the prosecution fails. [R., § 1567.]

2405. Intoxication punished. 1548; 15 G. A., ch. 37. If any person shall be found in a state of intoxication, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and any peace officer may, without warrant, and it is hereby made his duty to, take such person into custody, and to detain him in some suitable place, till an information can be made before a magistrate and a warrant issued in due form, upon which he may be arrested and tried, and, if found guilty, he shall pay a fine of ten dollars and the costs of prosecution, or shall be imprisoned in the county jail thirty days. But the magistrate before whom such person is tried and convicted may remit any portion of such penalty, and order the prisoner to be discharged upon his giving information, under oath, stating when, where, and of whom he purchased or received the liquor which produced the intoxication, and the name and character of the liquor obtained; provided such intoxicated person gives bail for his appearance before the proper magistrate, court, or jury, to give testimony in any action or complaint against the party for furnishing such liquor. In cases arising under this section, appeals may be allowed as in cases of ordinary misdemeanor within the jurisdiction of the justices of the peace. [R., §§ 1568, 1586.]

The word drunkenness, in a warrant of commitment, held to have the same legal significance as the word intoxication: Smith v. Bigelow, 19-459.

An instruction defining "intoxication" discussed: State v. Huxford, 47-16.

A person is drunk in a legal sense when he is so far under the influence of intoxicating liquor that his passions are visibly excited and his judgment impaired: State v. Pierce, 65-85.

2406. Requisites of indictment or information. 1549. In any indictment or information arising under this chapter, it shall not be necessary to set out exactly the kind or quantity of intoxicating liquors manufactured or sold, or kept for purposes of sale, nor the exact time of the manufacture, or sale, or keeping with intent to sell, but proof of the violation by the accused of any provision of this chapter, the substance of which violation is briefly set forth, within the time mentioned in said indictment or information, shall be sufficient to convict such person; nor shall it be necessary in any indictment or information to negative any exceptions contained in the enacting clause, or elsewhere, which may be proper ground of defense; and, in any prosecution for a second or subsequent offense as provided herein, it shall not be requisite to set forth in the indictment or information the record of a former conviction, but it shall be sufficient briefly to allege such conviction, nor shall it be necessary in every case to prove payment in order to prove a sale within the true meaning and intent of this chapter, and the person purchasing any intoxicating liquor sold in violation of this chapter, shall, in all cases, be a competent witness to prove such sale. [R., § 1569.]

As to sufficiency of indictments or informations, see notes to § 2381.

2407. Payments; contracts; negotiable paper. 1550. All payments or compensation for intoxicating liquor sold in violation of this chapter, whether such payments or compensation be in money, goods, land, labor, or anything else whatsoever, shall be held to have been received in violation of law and against equity and good conscience, and to have been received upon a valid promise and agreement of the receiver in consideration of the receipt thereof, to pay on demand to the person furnishing such consideration the amount of said money or the just value of such goods, land, labor, or other thing. All sales, transfers, conveyances, mortgages, liens, attachments, pledges, and securities of every kind, which either in whole or in part shall have been made for or on account of intoxicating liquors sold in violation of this chapter, shall be utterly null and void against all persons in all cases, and no rights of any kind shall be acquired thereby, and no action of any kind shall be maintained in any court in this state for intoxicating liquors, or the value thereof, sold in any other state or country contrary to the law of said state or country, or with intent to enable any person to violate any provision of this chapter, nor shall any action be maintained for the recovery or possession of any intoxicating liquor, or the value thereof, except in cases where persons owning or possessing such liquor with lawful intent, may have been illegally deprived of the same. Nothing, however, in this section shall affect in any way negotiable paper in the hands of holders thereof in good faith for valuable consideration, without notice of any illegality in its inception or transfer, or the holder of land or other property who may have taken the same in good faith, without notice of any defect in the title of the person from whom the same was taken, growing out of a violation of the provisions of this chapter, and all evidence given in actions brought by or against such holders, shall be in no way affected by the provisions of this section. [R., § 1571.]

Recovery of payments: The statutory provision as to recovery of money paid for intoxicating liquors is not unconstitutional on account of being in any way a regulation or restriction of commerce among the states: Connolly v. Scarr, 72-223.

A claim for money paid for intoxicating liquors may be set up by way of counter-claim in an action on account: Tolman v. Johnson, 43-127.

A manufacturer not being allowed to sell without the permit required by § 2360, even to one having such permit, money paid on such sale may be recovered back: Becker v. Betten, 39-668.

The giving of a note for liquors does not constitute payment, even when it has been sold and transferred by the payee, and until it is actually paid the maker cannot maintain an action for the amount thereof: Carlin v. Heller, 34-256.

The action to recover money paid will not be barred until five years from time of payment: Woodward v. Squires, 41-677.

One who has exchanged property for liquors sold in violation of law may, instead of suing upon a promise to pay therefor, treat the transaction as void and sue for the value of the property; and if accord and satisfaction is then set up as a defense, he may, in reply, set up the illegal nature of the transaction: Smith v. Grable, 14-429.

The action to recover money paid is civil, and not quasi-criminal in character: Woodward v. Squires, 39-435.

A party who has made payments for illegal sales of liquors and is entitled to recover back the purchase money paid, being garnished for the indebtedness thereupon arising to him from the person to whom the payments were made, it must be shown, in order to warrant judgment against him as garnishee, that the liquors were intoxicating and sold in violation of law: Church v. Simpson, 25-408.

The provisions for recovery of money paid do not apply to a non-resident selling liquor without permit to a registered pharmacist for lawful purposes and receiving payment therefor in another state: Kohn v. Melcher, 29 Fed. Rep., 433.

Sales, securities, etc., void: Under the provision with reference to sales, securities, etc., being void, held, that the word securities includes promissory notes: Taylor v. Pickett, 52-467.

A promissory note given in part for intoxicating liquors is wholly void: Ibid.; Bratch v. Guelick, 37-212.

But where a note was given for the amount due on an account, some of the items of which were legal and others illegal as being for intoxicating liquors, and the account was continued and payments afterwards made on accounts generally, held, that the note being void, the legal items of account included therein should be regarded as still due on account and the subsequent payments applied thereto: Quigley v. Duffey, 52-610.

An assignment of a contract against a third person, made for intoxicating liquors sold in violation of law, is void, and the assignee cannot recover against such third person thereon: Davis v. Slater, 17-250.

A judgment recovered on a claim founded upon the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors is not void. The defense must be interposed before judgment or it is lost: Smith v. Leddy, 50-112.

A person who has sold another intoxicating liquor in violation of law cannot, on the ground that the sale is void, recover them back in an action of replevin from attaching creditors of his vendee. Being particeps criminis, the law will leave the seller where it finds him: Marienthal v. Shafer, 6-223.

In an action on a note in which defendant pleaded that it was given to him for liquors sold in violation of law, held, that an indictment against him for nuisance committed in the sale of intoxicating liquors was not competent evidence in his behalf: Taylor v. Pickett, 52-467.

Bona fide purchasers: A party claiming the benefit of the provision in such section protecting bona fide holders for value has the burden of showing that he is such holder without notice: Rock Island Nat. Bank v. Nelson, 41-563.

An assignee after maturity is not protected: Banlow v. Scott's Adm'rs, 12-63.

Sale made in another state: A contract for the sale of liquors, made in another state, with the intention of violating the laws of this state, will not be enforced in our courts, although good where made: Davis v. Bronson, 6-410.

Where the contract of sale is made outside of the state, it must, to render the contract void, be made to appear affirmatively that the vendor intended thereby to enable the vendee to violate the laws of this state: Whitlock v. Workman, 15-351.

It must be shown not only that the vendor knew of the laws of this state, but that he made the sale with the intention of enabling the purchaser to violate them: Second Nat. Bank v. Curren, 36-555.

But while mere knowledge on the part of the vendor that the purchaser intends to violate the liquor law of this state may not vitiate the sale, yet it is a fact from which the jury might infer the intent to enable the buyer to violate such law: Tegler v. Shipman, 33-194, 200.

Evidence that one of the partners in the firm making the sale had been in this state before the sale was made and had knowledge of the existence of the law in this state with reference to the suppression of intemperance, held admissible in order to show that he must have known that under the circumstances stated to him the sale of the liquor by the purchaser in Iowa would be illegal: Rindskoff v. Curran, 34-325.

A sale of intoxicating liquors in violation of law, made in this state by an agent of a firm in another state, is void: Second Nat. Bank v. Curren, 36-555; Taylor v. Pickett, 52-467; Schuenfeldt v. Junkermann, 20 Fed. Rep., 357.

If the order for liquor is taken in this state by such agent, but subject to the approval or disapproval of his principal, the sale will be held as made in the state where the principal resides, and will be enforceable in Iowa unless made with intent to violate its laws: Tegler v. Shipman, 33-194; Schuenfeldt v. Junkermann, 20 Fed. Rep., 357.

Where a sale was made in another state, but notes in payment of the purchase money were executed in Iowa and forwarded to the seller, held, that the place where the contract and delivery was made, and not the place where the notes were executed, was the place of contract: Whitlock v. Workman, 15-351.

Where liquors are ordered by mail by a resident of one state, the contract is deemed made in the place where the order is received and the goods delivered to the carrier for shipment; and the same rule applies to a contract taken by an agent at the place of residence of the buyer, but subject to the approval of the principal in another state from which the goods are to be shipped in case of the approval of the contract: Engs v. Priest, 65-232.

Where it appears that the contract for sale of liquor was made in Iowa it will be presumed that payment therefor was intended to be made and was afterwards made at the place where the contract was entered into: Connolly v. Scarr, 72-223.

Sales under permits: Where orders were taken in different parts of the state by a firm having authority to sell within a particular county, held, that it would be presumed that the sale was made in that county, and was completed when the orders were taken, unless the contrary was made to appear: Gross v. Scarr, 71-656.

Where orders for liquors sent to a druggist were filled by a third person having a permit to sell intoxicating liquors, and that fact was known to the purchaser, held, that he could not recover from the druggist money paid for liquors the sale of which to him was illegal: Hurlburt v. Fyock, 73-477.

Property in intoxicating liquors and the recovery thereof: While the commerce in intoxicating liquor as an article of beverage is unlawful, its character as property is not thereby destroyed; and where such liquor was seized on execution for the debt of one not its owner, held, that the owner might recover it by replevin, although it was kept for sale in violation of the statute: Monty v. Arneson, 25-383.

That intoxicating liquors are held for an unlawful purpose is no answer to an indictment for stealing the same: State v. May, 20-305; nor to an action of trespass for destroying them: Turner v. Hilcheock, 20-310.

Where liquor had been seized by an officer under an information which had subsequently been held defective and a return of the liquor ordered, held, that, in an action by the owner against such officer to recover damages for a failure to return the property as so ordered, the plaintiff could not recover without proving that he owned and kept the liquor with a lawful intent: Walker v. Shook, 49-264.

In an action against a common carrier to recover the value of intoxicating liquors lost or destroyed by it, it is necessary for plaintiff to prove that he owned or possessed such liquors with lawful intent (overruling Bowen v. Hall, 4-430): Sommer v. Cate, 22-585.

Intoxicating liquors cannot be recovered by the owner unless he shows that they were in his possession with lawful intent, and that he was illegally deprived of them: Frank v. Israel, 5-438, 452; and as to action of replevin or trespass against officer seizing liquors, see notes to § 2401.

2408. Information by peace officer. 1551; 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 13. All peace officers shall see that the provisions of this chapter are faithfully executed, and when informed that the law has been violated, or when they have reason to believe that the law has been violated, and that proof of the fact can be had, such officers shall go before a magistrate and make information of the same and of the person so violating the law. Upon the filing of such information before a magistrate he shall institute a suit and proceed to the arrest, and trial thereof, according to law. Upon trials before a magistrate, it shall be the duty of the district [county] attorney to appear for the state, unless the person filing such information shall select some other attorney. Any peace officer failing to comply with the provisions of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and pay a fine of not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars, and a conviction shall work a forfeiture of his office. Every peace officer shall give evidence when called upon, of any facts within his knowledge, tending to prove a violation of the provisions of this chapter, but his evidence shall in no case be used against him in any prosecutions against him for a violation of the provisions of this chapter. [R., § 1578.]

It is only a peace officer who files an information for the violation of the liquor law that is authorized to select an attorney other than the district attorney to prosecute the same and receive fees therefor from the county: Foster v. Clinton County, 51-541.

A special constable is not such peace officer as that he is authorized to employ an attorney at the expense of the county under such circumstances: Ibid.

The county is not liable for the fees of an attorney in prosecutions upon information by a private person for illegal sales, but only for those commenced by peace officers: Blair v. Dubuque County, 27-181.

A peace officer may select another attorney than the county attorney, and the attorney thus selected will be entitled to the fees authorized by § 5109: Work v. Wapello County, 73-357.

As to compensation of attorney selected by a peace officer filing an information as here provided, see § 5109 and note.

2409. Principal and securities liable. 1552. The principal and securities in the bond mentioned in sections fifteen hundred and twenty-eight and fifteen hundred and twenty-nine [§§ 2364, 2366], shall be jointly and severally liable for all fines and costs that they be adjudged against the principal for any violation of any of the provisions of this chapter, and shall also jointly and severally be liable for all civil damages and costs that may be adjudged against such principal in any civil action authorized to be brought against him by the provisions of this chapter. [R., § 1579.]

2410. Transportation. 1553; 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 14; 21 G. A., ch. 66, § 10; 22 G. A., ch. 73, § 6. If any express company, railway company, or any agent or person in the employ of any express company, or of any common carrier, or any person in the employ of any common carrier, or if any other person shall transport or convey between points, or from one place to another within this state, for any other person or persons or corporation, any intoxicating liquors, without first having been furnished with a certificate from and under the seal of the county auditor of the county to which said liquor is to be transported or is consigned for transportation, or within which it is to be conveyed from place to place, certifying that the consignee or person to whom said liquor is to be transported, conveyed or delivered, is authorized to sell such intoxicating liquors in such county, such company, corporation, or person so offending, and each of them, and any agent of such company, corporation, or person so offending, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in the sum of one hundred dollars for each offense and pay costs of prosecution and the cost shall include a reasonable attorney fee to be assessed by the court, which shall be paid into the county fund, and stand committed to the county jail until such fine and costs of prosecution are paid. The offense herein defined shall be held to be complete and shall be held to have been committed in any county of the state, through or to which said intoxicating liquors are transported, or in which the same is unloaded for transportation or in which said liquors are conveyed from place to place or delivered. It shall be the duty of the several county auditors of this state, to issue the certificate herein contemplated, to any person having such permit and the certificate so issued shall be truly dated when issued, and shall specify the date at which the permit expires as shown by the county records. Provided however that the defendant may show as a defense hereunder by preponderance of evidence that the character and circumstances of the shipment and its contents were unknown to him. [R., § 1580.]

This section, as now amended, is unconstitutional as being in conflict with the provisions of the United States constitution granting to congress the power to regulate commerce among the several states: Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 125 U. S., 465.

The statute does not forbid the transportation of liquors out of the state, but it does forbid the manufacture of liquors for purposes other than for sale according to the provisions of the statute. This construction does not render the statute unconstitutional as an interference with interstate commerce: Pearson v. International Distillery, 72-348.

2411. False statements. 21 G. A., ch. 63, § 11. If any person for the purpose of procuring the shipment, transportation, or conveyance of any intoxicating liquors from point to point or from one place to another within this state, shall make to any company, corporation or common carrier, or to any agent of such company, corporation or common carrier, or other person, any false statements as to the character or contents of any box, barrel or other vessel or package containing such liquors or shall refuse to give correct and truthful information as to the contents of any such box, barrel, or other vessel or package so sought to be transported or conveyed; or shall falsely mark, brand or label such box, barrel, or other vessel or package, in order to conceal the fact that the same contains intoxicating liquors for the purpose aforesaid; or shall by any device or concealment procure or attempt to procure the conveyance or transportation of such liquors as herein prohibited, he shall upon conviction, be fined for each offense one hundred dollars, and costs of prosecution, and the costs shall include a reasonable attorney fee to be assessed by the court, which shall be paid into the county fund, and be committed to the county jail until such fine and costs are paid. Any peace officer of the county under process or warrant to him directed shall have the right to open any box, barrel, or other vessel or package, for examination if he has reasonable ground for believing that it contains intoxicating liquors, either before or while the same is being so transported or conveyed.

2412. Packages labeled. 22 G. A., ch. 73, § 7. It shall be unlawful for any common carrier or other person, to transport or convey by any means, from point to point or from one place to another within this state, any intoxicating liquor, unless the vessel, or other package containing such liquors, shall be plainly and correctly labeled or marked, showing the quantity and kind of liquor contained therein, as well as the name of the party to whom it is to be delivered. And no person shall be authorized to receive or keep such liquors unless the same be marked or labeled as herein required. The violation of any provision in this section, by any common carrier or any agent, or employee of such carrier or by any other person, shall be punished the same as provided in section fifteen hundred and fifty-three, as substituted and enacted in section ten, chapter sixty-six, acts of twenty-first general assembly [§ 2410], for the violation of the provisions of that section. And liquors conveyed or transported, or delivered without being marked or labeled as herein required, whether in the hands of the carrier or some one to whom it shall have been delivered shall be subject to seizure and condemnation as liquor kept for illegal sale.

2413. Club room. 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 15. Every person who shall, directly or indirectly, keep or maintain, by himself, or by associating or combining with others, or who shall in any manner aid, assist, or abet, in keeping or maintaining any club room, or other place in which intoxicating liquors is received or kept for the purpose of use, gift, barter, or sale, or for distribution or division among the members of any club or association by any means whatever, and every person who shall use, barter, sell, or give away, or assist or abet another, in bartering, selling, or giving away any intoxicating liquors as received or kept, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction therefor shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than six months.

2414. Repeal. 20 G. A., ch. 143, § 16. All statutes and acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter as hereby amended are hereby repealed; provided, however, that this repeal shall not affect any act done, any right accruing or which has accrued or been established, nor any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil cause before the time such repeal takes effect, and no offense committed, nor penalty or forfeiture incurred, and no suit or prosecution pending when the repeal takes effect, for an offense committed, or for the recovery of a penalty or forfeiture incurred, shall be affected by this repeal, and the provisions of section fifteen hundred and fifty-five, as amended and substituted by the act of this general assembly approved March fourth, 1884 [§ 2416], shall apply and have relation to the provisions of the code as herein amended, and all penalties as herein provided shall be held to apply to intoxicating liquors as defined in said act of March fourth, 1884.

2415. Evasions. 1554. Courts and jurors shall construe this chapter so as to prevent evasion, and so as to cover the act of giving as well as selling by persons not authorized. [R., § 1581; C., '51, § 929.]

Applied: Woolheather v. Risley, 38-486, 491; Church v. Higham, 44-482, 484.

It is proper to instruct a jury that a licensed pharmacist selling intoxicating liquors must use the utmost good faith and ordinary caution, and show that liquor is only sold by him as medicine, and that his license will not protect him for artful sales of liquor for other purposes than medicine: State v. Harris, 64-287.

This section does not declare the act of giving unlawful. Its purpose is to provide a rule for the interpretation of other provisions which will defeat the evasions of their penalties: State v. Hutchins, 74-20.

2416. "Intoxicating liquors" construed. 1555; 20 G. A., ch. 8, § 1. Wherever the words intoxicating liquors occur in this chapter, the same shall be construed to mean alcohol, ale, wine, beer, spirituous, vinous and malt liquors, and all intoxicating liquors whatever: and no person shall manufacture for sale, or sell, or keep for sale, as a beverage, any intoxicating liquors whatever including ale, wine and beer. And the same provisions and penalties of law in force relating to intoxicating liquors, shall in like manner be held and construed to apply to violations of this act, and to the manufacture, sale, or keeping for sale, or keeping with intent to sell, or keeping or establishing a place for the sale of ale, wine and beer, and all other intoxicating liquors whatever.

Under this section as amended the sale of cider when intoxicating is forbidden. It includes intoxicating liquors of every kind: State v. Hutchinson, 72-561.

The inference from the statute is that there is but one kind of beer and that it is intoxicating, and a liquor denominated beer, without anything in its name tending to show it not to be intoxicating, may be refused by the common carrier for transportation: Milwaukee Malt Extract Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 73-98.

The statute classes beer as an intoxicating liquor; and if there are kinds of beer not in fact intoxicating, the burden is upon the person charged with the sale of such liquor to show that it is not in fact that kind, if he so claims: State v. Cloughly, 73-626.

So long as liquors retain their character of intoxicating liquors capable of use as a beverage, notwithstanding other ingredients may have been mixed therewith, they fall within the provisions of the statute prohibiting the sale of such liquors. But when they are so compounded with other substances as to lose the character of intoxicating liquors and are no longer desirable for use as a stimulating beverage, and are, in fact, medicine, then their sale is not prohibited: State v. Laffer, 38-422.

Under this section, before its amendment, by which the manufacture and sale of beer, cider from apples, or wine from grapes, currants or other fruits grown in this state, was not prohibited, held, that wine was presumed to be an intoxicating liquor, unless it was shown that it was manufactured from grapes or fruit grown in this state: Worley v. Spurgeon, 38-465.

Held, also, that, in an indictment for the sale of wine made from fruit grown out of the state, an allegation that it was intoxicating was mere surplusage: State v. Curley, 33-359.

The distinction made in this section, as it stood before repeal, between wine made from native and that from foreign grapes, did not render the regulations as to sale of the latter void, as an improper regulation of interstate commerce in violation of the federal constitution: State v. Stucker, 58-496.

The meaning put by that section upon the term intoxicating liquors, so as to include those that were spirituous and vinous, excluding malt liquors, held to be purely arbitrary, as the latter are known to be in fact intoxicating: Jewett v. Wanshura, 43-574.

Also held, that the limitation of the latter part of the provision in regard to the place where the materials were grown did not apply to beer: State v. Brindle, 28-512.

A defendant relying upon such proviso as to beer and native wine must allege and prove the facts bringing him within its provisions, and it was not necessary that the prosecution charge and prove, in the first instance, that the case did not fall within the proviso: State v. Stapp, 29-551; State v. Curley, 33-359; State v. Miller, 53-84. (This is expressly provided in § 2406.)

2417. Liability for care of intoxicated person. 1556. Any person who shall by the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors, contrary to the provisions of this chapter, cause the intoxication of any other person, shall be liable for and compelled to pay a reasonable compensation to any person who may take charge of and provide for such intoxicated person, and one dollar per day in addition thereto for every day such intoxicated person shall be kept in consequence of such intoxication, which sums may be recovered in a civil action before any court having jurisdiction thereof. [9 G. A., ch. 47, § 1.]

A physician, called to attend a person for an injury received, or for sickness resulting from intoxication, has no claim against the person selling the liquor, as contemplated by this section: Sansom v. Greenough, 55-127.

2418. Civil action for damages by wife, parent, etc. 1557. Every wife, child, parent, guardian, employer, or other person, who shall be injured in person or property, or means of support, by any intoxicated person, or in consequence of the intoxication, habitual or otherwise, of any person, shall have a right of action in his or her own name, against any person who shall, by selling intoxicating liquors, cause the intoxication of such person, for all damages actually sustained as well as exemplary damages; and a married woman shall have the same right to bring suits, prosecute, and control the same and the amount recovered as if a single woman; and all damages recovered by a minor under this section, shall be paid either to such minor or his parent, guardian, or next friend, as the court shall direct, and all suits for damages under this section shall be by civil action in any court having jurisdiction thereof. [Same, § 2.]

Right of action: The cause of action is the selling of the liquors, yet the foundation of the action is the wrongful act of defendant in causing the intoxication of the husband, father or other person, which is a personal injury to him, and the action is one for injury to the person in such sense that it must be brought within two years as provided by the statute of limitations in reference to that class of actions: Emmert v. Grill, 39-690.

In an action by a plaintiff suing as wife, the fact of marriage is not essential, and she may recover without proof thereof: Kearney v. Fitzgerald, 43-580.

By the provisions of this section a right of action was given for the sale of wine and beer to minors or intoxicated persons when sales of those liquors were in general not prohibited: Jewett v. Wanshura, 43-574.

Before the passage of the present law prohibiting entirely sales of wine and beer there was no cause of action for injuries due to the sale of beer, unless it was sold in violation of § 2380, prohibiting the sale to minors, intoxicated persons, etc.: Myers v. Conway, 55-166.

And before the enactment of that statutory provision there was no liability whatever to civil damages for injury resulting from the sale of beer: Woody v. Coenan, 44-19.

Giving: Damages arising from the giving as well as from the sale of intoxicating liquors may be recovered: Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56-11.

Under circumstances indicating that liquor furnished to plaintiff's husband was for a pecuniary compensation, although not directly paid for nor charged to him, held, that it was not error to allow the wife to recover damages for such act: Rafferty v. Buckman, 46-195.

For what injuries: The wife may recover damages resulting from the death of her husband caused by intoxication: Ibid.

In order that a right of action may exist, the liquor sold must cause or contribute to intoxication, and the wife must sustain some injury by the intoxication: Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56-11.

The damages sustained "in person" as contemplated by the statute mean in body, and threatening language, vulgar conduct, etc., directed towards plaintiff by her husband, but not resulting in physical injury or impairment of health, will not entitle her to either actual or exemplary damages as against the person causing the intoxication of her husband: Calloway v. Laydon, 47-456; Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56-11.

For wounded feelings, disgrace, etc., not resulting from injury to the person, no recovery can be had, but for mental anguish, shame or suffering resulting from violence to the person, plaintiff is entitled to recover: Ward v. Thompson, 48-588.

Plaintiff may recover for injuries to person, property and means of support, but not for wounded feelings or disgrace or loss of standing in society: Jackson v. Noble, 54-641.

The occupation and business capacity of the husband may be shown, and the manner in which he supported plaintiff previous to the intoxication, as showing of what plaintiff was deprived by reason of such intoxication: Ibid.

If it is shown that defendant has deprived plaintiff of the assistance of her husband in the support of herself and family by causing his frequent intoxication, her means of support would thus be shown to have been injured to that extent without reference to her condition before such injury: Woolheather v. Risley, 38-486.

The fact that plaintiff's husband has been for a long time habitually drunk cannot be shown in evidence for the purpose of affecting the wife's damages, but evidence as to the previous habits of the husband was material in such cases under the statute by which sale of beer was legal, except to persons in the habit of becoming intoxicated: Huff v. Aultman, 69-71.

Exemplary damages: This statutory provision gives a new and peculiar remedy not only for actual but also for exemplary damages. The injury is of a peculiar character not recognized or redressed by the common law: Dunlavy v. Watson, 38-398.

Exemplary damages may be allowed although no tort or breach of the peace has resulted: Goodenough v. McGrew, 44-670.

While threatening language and vulgar conduct by the husband towards the wife may result in the impairment of health, and thus amount to an injury for which damages might be recovered, yet such words and conduct unaccompanied with physical injury will not entitle her to actual damages, and therefore they cannot be a ground for exemplary damages, even where damages on other grounds are recovered. The exemplary damages in such case must be such as are called for under the circumstances under which the actual damages are sustained: Calloway v. Laydon, 47-456.

Where it appeared that defendant sold plaintiff's husband intoxicating liquor when he was in a state of intoxication, and continued to sell him liquors, knowing that he was in the habit of becoming intoxicated, held, that a verdict for exemplary damages was not erroneous: Weitz v. Ewen, 50-34.

Exemplary damages may be awarded in every case brought under this section where there has been a wilful violation of the statute which has occasioned injury, for which a right of action is given. The party injured is entitled to exemplary damages in a proper case, and the awarding of them is not left to the discretion of the jury: Fox v. Wunderlich, 64-187.

No special prayer for exemplary damages is required: Gustafson v. Wind, 62-281.

Who liable: The right of action is given any person who actually makes the sale of the intoxicating liquor, whether he be the owner, or the son, clerk or servant of such owner: Worley v. Spurgeon, 38-465.

It is sufficient to hold a defendant liable if it be shown that liquor sold by him contributed to the intoxication complained of: Woolheather v. Risley, 38-486.

A party is liable if he contributes to actual specific fits of intoxication as a direct result of liquor sold by him in part, even if the intoxication had become habitual, but not for contributing to the habit of drinking without intoxication, but leading to other drinking resulting in intoxication: Cox v. Newkirk, 73-42; Arnold v. Barkalou, 73-183.

Joint liability: A joint action will not lie against several defendants having independent places of business, where the injuries are successive and not the result of one particular intoxication. Section 3755 is not applicable to such cases: La France v. Krayner, 42-143.

Where a joint action will not lie, each party is liable for the damages which he occasions, and a settlement with one does not bar an action against another: Jewett v. Wanshura, 43-574.

But defendant may show that plaintiff has brought actions and obtained judgments against others for causing the same habitual intoxication, not by way of defense or mitigation of damages, but to show the actual extent of the damage caused by defendant's own act, and that he was not responsible for the entire damage resulting from such intoxication: Ibid.; Ennis v. Shiley, 47-552; Engleken v. Webber, 47-558.

The fact that plaintiff has brought another action against another person covering injuries caused in the same manner, and during the same time, is not a matter which may be shown by way of defense: Ward v. Thompson, 48-588.

While defendant in such action may show that he was only liable for part of the injuries resulting from the intoxication on the ground that plaintiff received compensation in other suits for injuries from the same intoxication, he should prove that such sales for which the other suits were brought were made during the same time as those sued for during the pending action, and if defendant desires to rely upon such partial defense, it is questionable whether he should not set it up in his answer: Jackson v. Noble, 54-641.

Where the intoxication causing the damages sued for was produced on some occasions by defendant and at other times by others, the defendant should only be held liable for the damages to which he contributed, and the difficulty of thus apportioning the damages will not render him liable for the whole: Huggins v. Kavanagh, 52-368.

If the damage is the proximate result of a particular intoxication, all parties contributing thereto are jointly liable, but not if it is the result of a besotted condition: Hitchner v. Ehlers, 44-40.

Where a wife sued for damages from the suicide of her husband caused by intoxication, held, that if the act resulted from the particular intoxication during which it was committed, all persons who contributed to such intoxication by selling him liquor were jointly liable for the injuries she sustained in her means of support, but if it resulted not alone from that particular intoxication but from a besotted condition, those contributing to such besotted condition but not to the immediate intoxication would not be jointly liable with those who did contribute to such particular intoxication: Ibid.

Where plaintiff did not rely on or prove any specific act or acts of intoxication, but it appeared that her husband had been in the habit of becoming intoxicated for many years, procuring liquor from any person who would let him have it. held, that the several persons who had sold him liquor could not be considered as joint wrong-doers, but that each was severally liable for the damage caused by his own acts: Richmond v. Shickler, 57-486.

Persons who have contributed to habitual intoxication are not to be held responsible as joint wrong-doers, but each is liable for the part of the damages caused by his acts: Eunis v. Shilen, 47-552; Flint v. Gauer, 66-696.

Plaintiff contributing to injury: The wife cannot recover damages where she has herself contributed to her husband's intoxication: Engleken v. Hilger, 43-563; Kearney v. Fitzgerald, 43-580.

The fact that during the period covered by the wife's action for damages for sale of intoxicating liquors to her husband she herself bought liquors for him will not be such contribution on her part to the injury as to defeat her recovery if she had reason to believe that she would thereby keep him away from saloons and prevent the injuries for which she sues: Ward v. Thompson, 48-588.

In such case the fact that the wife has contributed to the condition of the husband by at times giving him permits to buy liquor will not absolutely defeat her recovery. Such connivance or assent will only defeat recovery for damages resulting from or caused by intoxication contributed to or connived at by her: Rafferty v. Buckman, 46-195.

The fact that the wife gives to the husband at his request sums of money belonging to him and placed by him in her custody, with knowledge on her part that portions thereof will be used for the purpose of procuring intoxicating liquors, will not necessarily constitute a voluntary contribution on her part to the intoxication of her husband, so as to defeat her right of recovering damages against the persons causing such intoxication: Huff v. Avllman, 69-71.

Evidence: In an action by the wife for damages for a sale of intoxicating liquors to her husband, the burden of proof is upon plaintiff to establish the fact that defendant sold liquor to the husband, and also that such liquor produced or contributed to produce the intoxication complained of: Macleod v. Geyer, 53-615.

In an action by the wife, held not error to allow the husband as a witness to state about how much money he had paid defendant for liquor, such fact being material as tending to show the injury to plaintiff's means of support, but not otherwise: Ward v. Thompson, 48-588.

Held, that in such cases indictments against defendant and convictions thereon for illegal sales of intoxicating liquors were not admissible in evidence against defendant, at least where it was not shown that the indictments were founded upon unlawful sales made to plaintiff's husband: Applegate v. Weinbrenner, 67-235.

Evidence of an assault committed upon the wife by the husband, held not admissible in an action by the wife against defendant for the recovery of damages for illegal sale of liquors to the husband, it not appearing that at the time of the assault the husband was intoxicated, nor that his intoxication, if any, was contributed to by defendant: Ibid.

The evidence necessary or competent to establish the injury and its extent is not confined within the bounds admissible to establish a common-law tort: Dunlavey v. Watson, 38-398.

Evidence as to the age, condition, circumstances, etc., of the husband, his habits of industry and his ability to support his wife before and after the acts complained of, may be received: Ibid.

It is error, in an action by the wife, to allow evidence as to number, age, etc., of children: Huggins v. Karanagh, 52-368; Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56-11.

The wife may show the number and ages of her children belonging to her family if she also shows that defendant had knowledge of the facts, and that they were in danger of being injured or compelled to leave home, and after such knowledge wantonly continued to sell liquor to the husband, by reason of which the right of action arose, such evidence being pertinent to the question of exemplary, not of actual, damages: Ward v. Thompson, 48-588.

Life tables: It is doubtful whether the Carlisle life tables are admissible as evidence in determining the amount of damages in such an action, the measure of actual damage being the amount which would, from a pecuniary point of view, compensate the wife for the injury: Rafferty v. Buckman, 46-195.

2419. Property liable; lien of judgment; bond. 1558; 21 G. A., ch. 66, § 12. For all fines and costs assessed, or judgments rendered, of any kind, against any person for any violation of the provisions of this chapter, or costs paid by the county on account of such violations, the personal and real property, except the homestead and the personal property of such person which is exempt from execution, as well as the premises and property, personal or real, occupied and used for the purpose, with the knowledge of the owner thereof or his agent, by the person manufacturing or selling or keeping, with intent to sell intoxicating liquors contrary to law, shall be liable; and all such fines, costs and judgments shall be a lien on such real estate until paid. And where any person is required by section fifteen hundred and twenty-eight and fifteen hundred and twenty-nine of this chapter [§§ 2364-2366] to give bond with sureties, the principal and sureties on such bond, shall be jointly and severally liable for all civil damages, costs and judgments that may be adjudged against the principal in any civil action authorized to be brought against him for any violation of the provisions of this chapter; costs paid by any county for the prosecution or on account of any violation of the law prohibiting the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, that would be a lien on the property under the foregoing provisions, and including costs paid in seizure and condemnation proceedings, may be [re]covered by such county, by the enforcement of such lien by execution, or by action against the owner to subject the property to sale for the payment thereof. And evidence of the general reputation of the place shall be admissible on the question of knowledge, and written notice given him or his agent by any citizen of the county shall be sufficient to charge the owner with knowledge under the provisions of this section. [Same, § 3.]

When accrue: The right to make the judgment a lien upon the property where the business is carried on rests in the exercise of the police power and not in the right of eminent domain: Polk County v. Hierb, 37-361.

Property can only be made liable after it has been established in a competent court by a legal jury that it was used for the illegal purpose with the knowledge or consent of the owner, and the statute does not, therefore, authorize the taking of private property without a trial: Ibid.

That under this section a party is liable to a pecuniary forfeiture does not constitute the act or omission so punished a crime. The section is not an ex post facto law, nor does it impair vested rights: Ibid.

Method of proceeding: The party injured by the illegal sale may bring action against the seller alone, and by subsequent action against the owner enforce the judgment previously obtained; or may join the seller and the owner of the building in the same action: La France v. Krayer, 42-143.

The action for damages against the person selling may be joined with that against the person owning the premises in which sales are made and against which it is sought to have the judgment established as a lien: Loan v. Hincy, 53-89.

If a joint action is brought, either party is entitled to a jury trial on the question of the illegal sale and damages, and the owner is entitled to a jury trial also on the question as to whether such use of the premises was with his consent and knowledge: Ibid.

Where plaintiff brought action for damages for sale of intoxicating liquors against three defendants jointly as sellers, and joined with them as defendant the owner of the property in which the business was carried on, and two separate judgments were rendered at separate trials against two sellers respectively, and at a third trial the judgments were made a lien against the property of the owner, held, that on appeal of the owner from final judgment against him, he could not set up the fact of recovery of the former judgment against another one of the sellers by default: Putney v. O'Brien, 53-117.

In such case, held, that plaintiff might elect which judgment she would enforce and the other would be treated as satisfied: Ibid.

Where it is sought to subject property alleged to have been fraudulently conveyed for the purpose of evading the lien of a judgment to the payment of the same, the action against the grantee is equitable in its nature, and the defendant cannot demand a jury trial: Buckham v. Grape, 65-535.

In such an action against the holder of the legal title, who was not a party to the original action in which judgment was recovered, the record of the judgment in the former action may be introduced in evidence for the purpose of showing that the plaintiff has recovered judgment against the defendant in such former action, but not as evidence of the amount for which the lien should be established, except that in no event can the lien be established for any greater amount: Ibid.

The court establishing the lien of a judgment for illegal sale of liquors against the premises in which the same were sold should ascertain specifically the property upon which the lien shall attach. Such a judgment should not be entered where there is no evidence on the trial showing the title to be in defendant, and that fact is only shown by an affidavit filed after the verdict: Flint v. Gauer, 66-696.

The court should specifically ascertain and fix the property upon which the lien shall attach: Engleken v. Webber, 47-558, 561.

The statute does not contemplate that judgment against the wrong-doer may be split up and a part only charged as a lien upon the premises. It is sufficient that the landlord furnished the liquor seller, in part, the means of committing the injury: Arnold v. Barkalow, 73-183.

Knowledge of owner: A judgment in a proceeding to recover penalties for illegal sales to minors or intoxicated persons is not a lien upon the premises where such sales were made, unless the owner had knowledge of and consented to illegal sales of that character. His knowledge of and consent to sales without permit would not be sufficient. The owner should be shown to have had knowledge of and to have consented to the unlawful act on account of which the judgment was recovered: Cobleigh v. McBride, 45-116; Myers v. Kirt, 64-27.

Both knowledge and assent, on the part of the owner of the premises unlawfully used, must be shown to render them subject to the lien of the judgment: Myers v. Kirt, 57-421.

Facts in a particular case held to show knowledge and assent on the part of the owner of the building: Putney v. O'Brien, 53-117.

The consent of the owner need not be shown by any positive or affirmative act, but may be inferred from circumstances and knowledge of the illegal sales under such conditions as properly to call forth a protest, and a failure to make any objection: Loan v. Etzel, 62-429.

Knowledge and consent of the owner of the property cannot be inferred from circumstances tending to show knowledge alone: Coz v. Newkirk, 73-42.

Where the owner by reason of absence from the state was not aware of the improper use being made of his building, and so soon as he became aware of such use removed the tenant, held, that he was not liable for costs: Drake v. Kingsbaker, 72-441.

Under the provisions of this section as amended the knowledge to which the owner is entitled may be shown by proving the general reputation of the place or by proving that a written notice by any citizen of the county was given to him or his agent. The property is only liable for fines, costs and judgments assessed or rendered for violations of the law occurring after the owner is chargeable with knowledge that the property is being used for prohibited purposes: Judge v. O'Connor, 74-166.

Under this section prior to its amendment it was held that to fix the liability of the property it must be shown to have been used for unlawful purposes with the consent and knowledge of the owner; but under the present statute it is sufficient, in order to make out a prima facie case, to show that the unlawful use was with the knowledge of the owner. If, notwithstanding that fact, the property is not liable, the burden of showing it is on the owner: Ibid.; Judge v. Flourney, 74-164.

2420. False statements. 1559. If any one purchasing intoxicating liquors of a person authorized to sell, shall make to such person any false statement regarding the use to which such liquor is intended by the purchaser to be applied, such person so obtaining such liquor shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, forfeit and pay a fine of ten dollars, together with costs of prosecution, or shall stand committed until the same is paid. For the second offense he shall pay a fine of twenty dollars and costs of prosecution, and be imprisoned in the county jail not less than ten nor more than thirty days. [R., § 1577.]

2421. Two-mile limit; city or town. 17 G. A., ch. 119, § 1. It is hereby made unlawful for any person by himself, his agent or employee, directly or indirectly to sell to any person ale, wine, beer or other malt or vinous liquor within two miles of the corporate limits of any municipal corporation; except at wholesale for the purpose of shipment to places outside of such corporation and such two-miles limits, except as hereinafter provided; and excepting further, that when said two miles embrace any part of another municipal corporation, that part so embraced within said other corporation shall not be held to be affected by this act, but shall remain as heretofore exclusively under the control of the corporation within which it is situated.

This statute held constitutional: State v. Shroeder, 51-197; Centerville v. Miller, 51-712; Toledo v. Edens, 59-352.

By virtue of this statute a city ordinance regulating within the city limits the sale of liquors not prohibited would become operative within the limits specified without further action: Toledo v. Edens, 59-352.

2422. Place of election. 17 G. A., ch. 119, § 2. It is hereby made unlawful for any person by himself, his agent or employee, directly or indirectly to sell to any person, and upon any pretext whatever ale, wine, beer or other malt

When the property of one not a party to the suit is seized on process issued on a judgment on the ground that the property was used with the knowledge of the owner for purposes in violation of statute, the officer makes such seizure at his peril, but is protected if he can show that the property has been so used that under the law it is liable: Snedaker v. Jones, 74-235.

Lien attaches when; conveyance subject to: A purchaser of the property occupied and used for purposes of illegal sale, who purchases pending an action against the seller and the owner, in which it is sought to make any judgment recovered a lien upon the property, takes subject to the lien of any such judgment. The doctrine of lis pendens applies: O'Brien v. Putney, 55-292.

The lien of the judgment upon the premises attaches only on the rendition thereof, and is subordinate to that of a mortgage previously executed: Goodenough v. McCoid, 44 659.

Where a conveyance of property on which it is sought to establish a lien is made pending the action, that fact is no defense for the original owner, against whom a lien is sought to be established: Myers v. Kirt, 68-124.

The homestead when not used for the purpose of the violation of the liquor law is exempt from judgment therefor; but when used or kept for such purpose, with the consent of the owner, it is subject to such judgment: Arnold v. Gotshall, 71-572.

Whatever territory the city maintains jurisdiction over for the purpose of taxes or otherwise, under a claim to exercise such jurisdiction, must be regarded as a de facto portion of its territory. The right of jurisdiction cannot be questioned in a prosecution for violation of this statutory provision: Albia v. O'Harra, 64-297.

or vinous liquors upon the day on which any election is held under the laws of this state, within two miles of the place where said election is held.

2423. Under permit upon prescription. 17 G. A., ch. 119, § 3. The foregoing sections shall not be held to include the sale, by any person holding a permit therefor under the laws of this state, of said malt or vinous liquors, when said sale is made upon the prescription therefor of a practicing physician. The provisions of this section shall be a matter of defense in any prosecution under this act.

2424. Exchanging deemed selling. 17 G. A., ch. 119, § 4. The giving to any person of ale, wine, beer, or other malt or vinous liquor, in consideration of the purchase of any other property shall be construed and held to be a sale thereof within the meaning of this act, and courts and jurors shall construe this act so as to prevent evasion.

2426. Liability of agent. 17 G. A., ch. 119, § 6. Any employee or agent of whatsoever kind, engaged or employed in selling, in violation of this act, shall be charged and convicted in the same manner as a principal may be, and shall be subject to the penalties and punishment in this act provided for such principal.

2427. Information. 17 G. A., ch. 119, § 7. Informations for violations under this act may allege any number of violations of its provisions by the same party, but the various allegations must be contained in separate counts, and the person so charged may be convicted and punished for each of the violations so alleged as on separate informations; but a separate judgment must be entered on each count on which a verdict of guilty is rendered. The second and third convictions mentioned in this act shall be construed to mean convictions on separate informations. If the information does not otherwise indicate, it shall be held to be for a first offense.

2428. Conviction forfeits lease. 17 G. A., ch. 119, § 8. A conviction for a violation of the provisions of this act, shall, at the option of the landlord or his agent, be held to be a forfeiture of any lease of the real estate in or upon which such sale in violation thereof is made, and such landlord or his agent shall have the right at any time within thirty days from such conviction to institute a suit of forcible entry and detainer for the possession of said real estate, and shall recover possession of such leased premises upon proof of the conviction of the tenant, his agent, servant, clerk, or any one claiming under him, of a violation of the provisions of this act, committed in or upon said leased premises.

2429. Jurisdiction of city or town. 17 G. A., ch. 119, § 9. The power and jurisdiction of every municipal corporation, whether acting under general or special charter, to regulate, prohibit or license the sale of ale, wine and beer, and of the courts and officers thereof to enforce said regulations, is hereby extended two miles beyond the corporate limits of said corporation; provided, that this section shall not be held to authorize said corporation to license any malt or vinous liquors, other than those malt or vinous liquors which said corporation, at this date, is authorized to license.

2430. Giving liquor to voters. 18 G. A., ch. 82, § 1. It shall be unlawful for any person to furnish, or give, or offer to give, any intoxicating liquors including ale, wine and beer, to voters at or within one mile of the polls during the day upon which any election is held in this state, prior to the closing of the polls.

2431. Penalty. 18 G. A., ch. 82, § 2. Any person violating the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars nor less than five dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court, and in case of fine he shall stand committed until the same be paid.

CHAPTER 7.

OF FIRE COMPANIES.

2432. Exemptions to. 1560. Any person who is an active member of any fire-engine, hook and ladder, hose, or any other company, for the extinguishment of fire, or the protection of property at fires under the control of the corporate authorities of any city or incorporated town, shall, during the time he shall continue an active member of such company, be exempted from the performance of any military duty, and from the performance of labor on the highways on account of poll-tax, and from serving as a juror; and any person who shall have been an active member of such company in any city or town as aforesaid, and shall have faithfully discharged his duties as such for the term of ten years, shall be forever thereafter exempted from the performance of military duty in the time of peace, from serving as a juror, and from the performance of labor on the highways. [R., § 1763; 13 G. A., ch. 18, § 1.]

2434. Certificate of foreman. 1562. 2520. 21 G. A., ch. 52, § 18. Chapter thirty-nine of the acts of the eighteenth general assembly of Iowa and all acts and parts of acts in conflict with this act are hereby repealed.

2521. 22 G. A., ch. 98, § 2. Section seventeen [§ 2519] is hereby repealed and the following enacted in lieu thereof — “The unexpended portion of the appropriation provided for by section seventeen of the fifty-second chapter of the acts of the twenty-first general assembly, is hereby appropriated for the next biennial period, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the proper carrying out of the purposes of the act; but not more than one-half of said unexpended balance shall be drawn from the state treasury prior to the first day of May 1889. The amount hereby appropriated shall be expended only under the direction and with the approval of the executive council. And all salaries, fees, costs and expenses of every kind incurred in the carrying out of this law shall be drawn from the sum so appropriated.”

2522. 22 G. A., ch. 98, § 3. Said chapter fifty-two of the acts of the twenty-first general assembly as hereby amended is continued as a general and permanent statute.

CHAPTER 8d.

THE PRACTICE OF PHARMACY, AND SALE OF MEDICINES AND POISONS.

2523. Registry required; suits for prosecutions. 18 G. A., ch. 75, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 21. From and after the passage of this act it shall be unlawful for any person, not a registered pharmacist within the meaning of this act, to conduct any pharmacy, drug store, apothecary shop or store for the purpose of retailing, compounding or dispensing medicines or poisons, and any person violating the provisions of this section shall be liable to pay a penalty of five dollars for each day of such violation and cost of prosecution. Suits brought to recover any of the penalties provided for in this act or the acts to which it is amendatory shall be instituted in the name of the state of Iowa by the county attorney or under the direction and by the authority of the commissioners of pharmacy for the state of Iowa. In all cases brought under this act or the acts to which it is amendatory, the prosecution need not prove that the defendant has not the required pharmacy certificate of registration; if the defendant has such certificate he must produce it.

A non-registered clerk may aid a pharmacist under his supervision, but the pharmacist must have immediate personal supervision of the work: State v. Mullenhoff, 74-271.

2524. Penalty. 18 G. A., ch. 75, § 2. It shall be unlawful for the proprietor of any store or pharmacy to allow any person except a registered pharmacist to compound or dispense the prescriptions of physicians, or to retail or dispense poisons for medical use, except as an aid to and under the supervision of a registered pharmacist. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be liable to a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars, for each and every such offense.

2525. Commissioners of pharmacy. 18 G. A., ch. 75, § 3; 21 G. A., ch. 83, § 1. The governor, with the advice of the executive council, shall appoint three persons from among the most competent pharmacists of the state, all of whom shall have been residents of the state for five years, and of at least five years' practical experience in their profession, who shall be known and styled as commissioners of pharmacy for the state of Iowa; one of whom shall hold his office for one year, one for two years, and the other for three years, and each until his successor shall be appointed and qualified; and each year thereafter another commissioner shall be so appointed for three years, and until a successor be appointed and qualified. If a vacancy occur in said commission, another shall be appointed, as aforesaid, to fill the unexpired term thereof. Said commissioners shall have power to make by-laws and all necessary regulations for the proper fulfillment of their duties under this act, without expense to the state; except that the secretary of state is authorized to furnish said commissioners with stationery and blanks necessary for their office, and said commissioners are authorized to administer oaths, and take and certify the acknowledgments of instruments in writing.

[By § 123 the commission is required to make its report to the governor on odd-numbered years on or before September fifteenth.]

2526. Registry of certificates; forfeiture; renewal. 18 G. A., ch. 75, § 4; 19 G. A., ch. 137, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 22; 22 G. A., ch. 106. The commissioners of pharmacy shall register in a suitable book, the names and places of residence of all persons to whom they issue certificates, and dates thereof. Druggists and pharmacists, who were registered without examination, forfeit their registration when they have voluntarily sold, parted with, or severed their connection with the drug business for a period of two years at the place designated in certificate of registration. Should such party who has thus forfeited his registration wish to re-engage in the practice of pharmacy, he is required to be registered by examination as per section five [§ 2527], provided that registered pharmacists who remove to another locality, and re-engage in the practice of pharmacy within a period of two years, and have paid to the commission of pharmacy the sum of one dollar on or before the twenty-second day of March of each year, as provided in this chapter, such registered pharmacist shall not be required to register by examination, but his former registration shall be in full force and effect. Every registered pharmacist, who desires to continue his profession, shall, on or before the twenty-second day of March of each year, pay to the commission of pharmacy the sum of one dollar, for which he shall receive a renewal of his certificate unless his name has been stricken from the register for violation of law. It shall be the duty of each registered pharmacist, before changing his locality as designated in his certificate of registration, to notify the secretary of the commission of pharmacy of his new place of business, and for recording the same and certification thereto, the secretary shall be entitled to receive fifty cents for each certificate. It shall be the duty of every registered pharmacist to conspicuously post his certificate of registration in his place of business. Any person continuing in business, who shall fail or neglect to procure his annual renewal of registration, or who shall change his place of business without complying with this section, or who shall fail to conspicuously post his certificate of registration in his place of business, shall for each such offense be liable to a fine of ten dollars for each calendar month during which he is so delinquent.

A pharmacist who was in business before the law took effect and was registered without examination, and then removed to another place, and has for two years failed to submit to an examination, cannot compel the commissioners to issue him a new certificate without such examination: Braniff v. Weaver, 72-641.

2527. Examination; diploma. 18 G. A., ch. 75, § 5. The said commissioners of pharmacy shall, upon application, and at such time and place, and in such manner as they may determine, examine, either by a schedule of questions, to be answered and subscribed to under oath, or orally, each and every person who shall desire to conduct the business of selling at retail, compounding, or dispensing drugs, medicines or chemicals for medicinal use, or compounding or dispensing physicians' prescriptions as pharmacists, and if a majority of said commissioners shall be satisfied that said person is competent and fully qualified to conduct said business of compounding or dispensing drugs, medicines or chemicals for medicinal use, or to compound and dispense physicians' prescriptions, they shall enter the name of such person as a registered pharmacist in the book provided for in section four of this act [§ 2526]; and all graduates in pharmacy having a diploma from an incorporated college or school of pharmacy that requires a practical experience in pharmacy of not less than four years before granting a diploma, shall be entitled to have their names registered as pharmacists by said commissioners of pharmacy without examination.

2528. Fee. 18 G. A., ch. 75, § 6. The commissioners of pharmacy shall be entitled to demand and receive from each person whom they register and furnish a certificate as a registered pharmacist, without examination, the sum of two dollars; and from each and every person whom they examine orally, or whose answers to a schedule of questions are returned subscribed to under oath, the sum of five dollars, which shall be in full for all services. And in case the examination of said person should prove defective and unsatisfactory and his name not be registered, he shall be permitted to present himself for re-examination within any period not exceeding twelve months next thereafter, and no charge shall be made for such re-examination.

2529. Adulteration. 18 G. A., ch. 75, § 7. Every registered pharmacist shall be held responsible for the quality of all drugs, chemicals and medicines he may sell or dispense, with the exception of those sold in the original packages of the manufacturer, and also those known as "patent medicines;" and should he knowingly, intentionally and fraudulently adulterate, or cause to be adulterated, such drugs, chemicals or medical preparations, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, be liable to a penalty not exceeding one hundred dollars, and in addition thereto, his name be stricken from the register.

2530. Sole right to sell, except liquors. 18 G. A., ch. 75, § 8; 21 G. A., ch. 83, § 2; 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 20. Pharmacists whose certificates of registration are in full force and effect, shall have the sole right to keep and to sell under such regulations as have been or may be established from time to time by the commissioners of pharmacy, all medicines and poisons, excepting intoxicating liquors.

Before the passage of 21 G. A., ch. 83, pharmacists could not sell intoxicating liquors without permits obtained in accordance with the statutes regulating the sale of such liquors: State v. Mercer, 53-182; State v. Bissell, 67-616; State v. Knowles, 57-669.

But that act made special provision for permits to pharmacists, and superseded other statutes on that subject, and under it no bond was required, and the permit was not limited to one year: State v. Courtney, 73-619; State v. Mullenhoff, 74-271. [The provisions of this act with reference to permits are now repealed by 22 G. A., ch. 71, § 20.]

A pharmacist having been permitted under former statutes to keep intoxicating liquors without a permit for dispensing as medicine, it is error in a prosecution for keeping a nuisance to allow evidence of the keeping of the intoxicating liquor at such time when it was lawful: State v. Shank, 74-649.

Under former statutes it was held that an unregistered pharmacist could not defend, in a prosecution for unlawfully keeping liquors for sale, on the ground that sales were made by a clerk who was registered, and for medicinal purposes only: State v. Norton, 67-641.

Also held that a licensed pharmacist selling intoxicating liquors must use the utmost good faith and ordinary caution, and show that the liquor was only sold by him as medicine; and his license would not protect him for artful sales of liquor for other purposes than as medicine: State v. Harris, 64-287; State v. Knowles, 57-669.

If sales are for unlawful purposes a pharmacist has no protection in the pharmacy statute, and the question of his guilt is to be determined according to the rules applicable to other offenders; and a written statement by the purchaser that he is one to whom a sale may properly be made, and that the liquor is desired for proper purposes, will not protect the pharmacist in case of an unlawful sale: State v. Thompson, 74-119.

A pharmacist is liable for illegal sales as well as any other person: State v. Mullenhoff, 74-271.

If it is proven that persons drank intoxicating liquors in defendant's pharmacy, that fact would be presumptive evidence that the liquors so drank had been unlawfully sold or given to the party by defendant: State v. Cloughly, 73-626.

Under the provisions of 21 G. A., ch. 83, now repealed, with reference to sales to minors or persons in the habit of becoming intoxicated, it was held that a pharmacist was not excusable for ignorance of the fact that the person to whom sale was made was a minor, or in the habit of becoming intoxicated: State v. Ward, 75-637.

A registered pharmacist being now required to hold a permit and make monthly reports, such permit does not prevent his being prosecuted and convicted for illegal sales, and his reports are admissible in evidence for the purpose of showing the fact of illegal sales: State v. Smith, 74-580.

Failure to make reports or selling at an illegal profit will not subject defendant to punishment for unlawful sales where the sales are otherwise legal: State v. Von Haltschuherr, 72-541.

2531. Poisons, how retailed; liquors. 18 G. A., ch. 75, § 9. It shall be unlawful for any person, from and after the passage of this act, to retail any poisons enumerated in schedules "A" and "B," except as follows: Schedule A; arsenic, and its preparations, corrosive sublimate, white precipitate, red precipitate, biniodide of mercury, cyanide of potassium, hydrocyanic acid, strychnia, and other poisonous vegetable alkaloids, and their salts, essential oil of bitter almonds, opium and its preparations, except paregoric and other preparations of opium containing less than two grains to the ounce; Schedule B, aconite, belladonna, colchicum, conium, nux vomica, henbane, savin, ergot, cotton root, cantharides, creosote, digitalis, and their pharmaceutical preparations, croton oil, chloroform, chloral hydrate, sulphate of zinc, mineral acids, carbolic acid and oxalic acid; without distinctly labeling the box, vessel or paper in which the said poison is contained, and also the outside wrapper or cover, with the name of the article, the word "poison," and the name and place of business of the seller. Nor shall it be lawful for any person to sell or deliver any poison enumerated in schedules "A" and "B" unless, upon due inquiry, it be found that the purchaser is aware of its poisonous character, and represents that it is to be used for a legitimate purpose. Nor shall it be lawful for any registered pharmacist to sell any poisons included in schedule "A" without, before delivering the same to the purchaser, causing an entry to be made, in a book kept for that purpose, stating the date of sale, the name and address of the purchaser, the name of the poison sold, the purpose for which it is represented by the purchaser to be required, and the name of the dispenser; such book to be always open for inspection by the proper authorities, and to be preserved for at least five years. The provisions of this section shall not apply to the dispensing of poisons, in not unusual quantities or doses, upon the prescriptions of practitioners of medicine. Nor shall it be lawful for any licensed or registered druggist or pharmacist to retail, or sell, or give away any alcoholic liquors or compounds as a beverage, and any violation of the provisions of this section shall make the owner or principal of said store or pharmacy liable to a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars, and not more than one hundred dollars, to be collected in the usual manner; and, in addition thereto, for repeated violations of this section his name shall be stricken from the register.

The provision that it shall be unlawful for a licensed druggist to retail alcoholic liquors as a beverage applies to the sale in any form of intoxicating liquor as a beverage which is not authorized by statute, either at retail or wholesale: Torbert v. Clough, 72-220.

2532. Itinerant vender of drugs; license; appropriation. 18 G. A., ch. 75, § 10; 19 G. A., ch. 137, § 2; 21 G. A., ch. 83, § 3. Any itinerant vender of any drug, nostrum, ointment or appliance of any kind, intended for the treatment of diseases or injury, who shall, by writing or printing, or any other method, publicly profess to cure or treat diseases, or injury, or deformity, by any drug, nostrum, manipulation, or other expedient, shall pay a license of one hundred dollars per annum, to be paid to the treasurer of the commission of pharmacy, whereupon the secretary of said commission shall issue such license for one year. Any person violating this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction, pay a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than two hundred dollars; all moneys received for licenses to be reported to the auditor of state. The sum of two thousand dollars per year, or as much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of the moneys so received for licenses, for the expenses of said commission, all exceeding said amount to be paid into the state treasury.

2533. Penalty for false representations. 18 G. A., ch. 75, § 11; 19 G. A., ch. 137, § 3. Any person who shall procure, or attempt to procure, registration for himself or for another under this act, by making, or causing to be made, any false representations, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be liable to a penalty of not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars, and the name of the person so fraudulently registered shall be stricken from the register. Any person, not a registered pharmacist as provided for in this act, who shall conduct a store, pharmacy, or place for retailing, compounding or dispensing drugs, medicines or chemicals, for medicinal use, or for compounding or dispensing physicians' prescriptions, or who shall take, use or exhibit the title of registered pharmacist, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be liable to a penalty of not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars.

2534. Physicians' prescriptions; proprietary medicines; concentrated lye. 18 G. A., ch. 75, § 12; 19 G. A., ch. 137, § 4; 21 G. A., ch. 83, § 4; 22 G. A., ch. 81. Physicians dispensing their own prescriptions only, are not required to be registered pharmacists. Provided, that nothing in this act shall prevent any person not a registered pharmacist or not holding a permit, from keeping and selling proprietary medicines, and such other domestic remedies as do not include any intoxicating liquors or poisons, nor from selling concentrated lye and potash, provided however, that if any person sell or deliver said concentrated lye or potash without having the word "poison" and the true name thereof written or printed upon a label attached to the vial, box, or parcel containing the same shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty days, or by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, but they shall not be compelled to register the sales of said lye and potash as required by section four thousand and thirty-eight, code of 1873, [§ 5359].

Where liquors are dispensed by a physician, not upon his judgment as to the needs of the patients, but upon the demands of his customers, such transaction is not protected under this section: State v. Cloughly, 73-626.

CHAPTER 8e.

PRACTICE OF DENTISTRY.

2535. Dentist must have license or diploma. 19 G. A., ch. 36, § 1. It shall be unlawful for any person who is not at the time of the passage of this act engaged in the practice of dentistry in this state to commence such practice unless such person shall have received a license from the board of examiners, or some member thereof as hereinafter provided, or a diploma from the faculty of some reputable dental college duly authorized by the laws of this state, or by some other of the United States, or by the laws of some foreign country in which college or colleges there was, at the time of the issue of such diploma, annually delivered a full course of lectures and instructions in dental surgery.

2536. Board of examiners. 19 G. A., ch. 36, § 2. A board of examiners is hereby created whose duty it shall be to carry out the purposes and enforce the provisions of this act. The members of said board shall be appointed by the governor, and shall consist of five practicing dentists, who shall have been engaged in the continuous practice of dentistry in the state for five years or over, at the time of, or prior to, the passage of this act. The term for which the members of said board shall hold their office shall be five years, except that the members of the board first to be appointed under this act shall hold their offices for the term of one, two, three, four and five years respectively, and until their successors shall be duly appointed. In case of vacancy occurring in said board, such vacancy shall be filled by the governor.

2537. Organization and meetings of board. 19 G. A., ch. 36, § 3. Said board shall choose one of its members president, and one the secretary thereof; and it shall meet at least once in each year, and as much oftener, and at such times and places, as it may deem necessary. A majority of said board shall at all times constitute a quorum, and the proceedings thereof shall at all reasonable times be open to public inspection.

2538. Registry of practitioners. 19 G. A., ch. 36, § 4. It shall be the duty of every person who is engaged in the practice of dentistry in this state, within six months from the date of the taking effect of this act, to cause his or her name and residence, or place of business, to be registered with the said board of examiners, who shall keep a book for that purpose; and every person, who shall so register with said board as a practitioner of dentistry, may continue to practice the same as such without incurring any of the liabilities or penalties of this act.

2539. Persons not registered must be examined. 19 G. A., ch. 36, § 5. No person whose name is not registered on the books of said board as a regular practitioner of dentistry, within the limits prescribed in the preceding section, shall be permitted to practice dentistry in this state until such person shall have been duly examined by said board, and regularly licensed in accordance with the provisions of this act.

2540. Examination and license. 19 G. A., ch. 36, § 6. Any and all persons, who shall so desire, may appear before said board at any of its regular meetings, and be examined with reference to their knowledge and skill in dental surgery, and if such person shall be found, after having been so examined, to possess the requisite qualifications, said board shall issue a license to such person to practice dentistry in accordance with the provisions of this act. But said board shall at all times issue a license to any regular graduate of any reputable dental college, without examination, upon the payment by such graduate to the said board, of a fee of one dollar. All licenses issued by said board shall be signed by the members thereof and be attested by its president and secretary; and such license shall be prima facie evidence of the right of the holder to practice dentistry in the state of Iowa.

2541. Temporary license. 19 G. A., ch. 36, § 7. Any member of said board shall issue a temporary license to any applicant upon the presentation by such applicant of the evidence of the necessary qualifications to practice dentistry; and such temporary license shall remain in force until the next regular meeting of said board occurring after the date of such temporary license and no longer.

2542. Penalty. 19 G. A., ch. 36, § 8. Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be liable to prosecution, before any court of competent jurisdiction, upon information, and upon conviction shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars, nor more than fifty dollars, for each and every offense.

2543. Fees; compensation; report. 19 G. A., ch. 36, § 9. In order to provide the means for carrying out and maintaining the provisions of this act, the said board of examiners may charge each person applying to or appearing before them for examination for license to practice dentistry a fee of two dollars; and out of the funds coming into the possession of the board from the fees so charged, the members of said board may receive as compensation the sum of five dollars for each day actually engaged in the duties of their office. And no part of the salary or other expenses of the board shall ever be paid out of the state treasury. All moneys received in excess of said per diem allowance shall be held by the secretary of said board as a special fund for meeting the expenses of said board, he giving such bond as the board shall from time to time direct. The said board shall make an annual report of its proceedings to the governor, by the fifteenth of November of each year, together with an account of all moneys received and disbursed by them pursuant to this act.

2544. Registry of licenses; penalty. 19 G. A., ch. 36, § 10. Any person who shall be licensed by said board to practice dentistry, shall cause his or her license to be registered with the county clerk of any county, or counties, in which such person may desire to engage in the practice of dentistry; and the county clerks of the several counties in this state shall charge for registering such license a fee of twenty-five cents for each registration. Any failure, neglect, or refusal on the part of any person holding such license to register the same with the county clerk, as above directed, for a period of six months, shall work a forfeiture of the license; and no license, when once forfeited, shall be restored, except upon the payment to the said board of examiners of the sum of twenty-five dollars, as a penalty for such neglect, failure, or refusal.

2545. Extracting teeth. 19 G. A., ch. 36, § 11. Nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent persons from extracting teeth.

THE PRACTICE OF MEDICINE.

2546. Qualifications required; graduates; examination. 21 G. A., ch. 104, § 1. Every person practicing medicine, surgery or obstetrics, in any of their departments, within this state, shall possess the qualifications required by this act. If a graduate in medicine such person shall present his or her diploma to the state board of examiners, for verification as to its genuineness. If the diploma is found genuine, and is issued by a medical school legally organized and in good standing, of which the state board of examiners shall determine, and if the person presenting and claiming such diploma be the person to whom the same was originally granted, then the state board of examiners shall issue its certificates to that effect signed by not less than five physicians thereof, representing one or more physicians of the schools on the board, and such certificate shall be conclusive as to right of the lawful holder to practice medicine, surgery, and obstetrics within this state. If not a graduate the person practicing medicine or surgery within this state, unless he or she shall have been in continuous practice in this state, for a period of not less than five years, of which he or she shall present to the state board of examiners satisfactory evidence in the form of affidavits, shall appear before said state board of examiners, and submit to such examination as said board may require. All examinations shall be conducted in writing, and all examination papers, together with the reports, and action of the examiners thereon, shall be preserved as the records of the said board for a period of five years, during which time they shall remain open for inspection at the office of the said state board of examiners. Such examinations shall be in anatomy, physiology, general chemistry, pathology, therapeutics, and the principles and practice of medicine, surgery and obstetrics. Provided, that each applicant upon receiving from the secretary of the board an order for an examination shall receive also a confidential number, which he or she shall place upon his or her examination papers so that when said papers are passed upon by the examiners, the latter shall not know by what applicant said papers have been prepared. That upon each day of examination all candidates be given the same set or sets of questions. It is further provided that the examination papers shall be marked upon the scale of one hundred, and that in order to secure a license, it shall be necessary for the applicant to attain such average as shall hereafter be determined by the state board of examiners, and if such examination be satisfactory to at least five physicians of said board, representing the different schools of medicine on the board, the board shall issue a certificate which shall entitle the lawful holder thereof to all the rights and privileges herein provided, and the physicians and the secretary of the state board of health shall constitute, and be deemed a board of examiners for the purpose of this act.

2547. Seal; certificates; meetings. 21 G. A., ch. 104, § 2. The state board of examiners shall procure a seal within sixty days after the passage of this act, and through the secretary of said board shall receive applications for certificates and examinations. The president, or any member of the board, shall have the authority to administer oaths and take testimony in all matters relating to their duties as examiners aforesaid. The board shall provide three forms of certificates: One for persons in possession of genuine diplomas, one for candidates examined by the board, and one for persons who have practiced medicine or surgery in any of its departments for five years as provided in this act. Said certificate shall be signed by not less than five physicians of the board, and this number may act as an examining board in the absence of the full board: Provided that one or more members of the different schools of medicine represented in the state board of health shall also be represented in the board of examiners. The board of examiners shall hold meetings at such places as will best accommodate applicants residing in different portions of the state, and at any such time as they shall deem best, and due notice of the time and place of such meetings shall be published.

2548. Certificate on diploma. 21 G. A., ch. 104, § 3. The board shall examine all diplomas submitted to them for such purpose to determine their genuineness and the rightful ownership of the person presenting the same. The affidavit of the applicant and holder of any diploma that he or she is the person therein named, and is the lawful possessor thereof, shall be necessary to verify the same, with such other testimony as the board may require. Diplomas and accompanying affidavits may be presented in person or by proxy. If the diploma shall be found genuine, and in possession of the person to whom it was issued, the state board of examiners shall, upon the payment of a fee of two dollars, to the secretary of the board, issue a certificate to the holder of such diploma, and no further fee or sum shall be demanded or collected from said applicant by said board for such certificate. If the diploma shall be found to be fraudulent, or not lawfully in possession of the holder or owner thereof, the person presenting such diploma or holding or claiming possession thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof, before any court of competent jurisdiction, be fined not less than twenty dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars.

2550. How recorded. 21 G. A., ch. 104, § 5. The county recorder shall record in a book provided for that purpose, a complete list of the certificates presented for record, and the date of their issue by the state board of examiners. If the certificate is issued by reason of a diploma, the name of the medical college conferring the same, and the date when conferred shall be recorded; and when such certificate shall have been granted upon the examination of the board, or because of five years' practice in the state, such fact shall be recorded. Said records shall be open for inspection during business hours.

2551. Fees; compensation. 21 G. A., ch. 104, § 6; 22 G. A., ch. 66. Candidates for examination shall pay in advance to the secretary of the state board of examiners, a fee of ten dollars, which fee, together with the fees received for certificates, shall defray the entire expense of the aforesaid board of examiners, and the balance shall be turned over to the state treasurer for the benefit of the school fund, except such an amount as will pay each member of the board ten dollars per day during the time he is in actual attendance upon the session of the said board for the purpose of performing the duties required of him under this act, and, as will pay the secretary of the board such a salary as they may allow, not to exceed five dollars per day during the time he is actually engaged in performing the work of the board under this act, and each member of the board of examiners shall also receive a sufficient amount to defray his actual and necessary expenses while in the discharge of the duties herein provided. Any one failing to pass the required examination shall be entitled to a second examination within twelve months without fee; provided that any applicant for examination by notice in writing to the secretary shall be entitled to an examination within three months from the time of said notice and a failure to give such opportunity, shall entitle such applicant to practice without the certificate required by this act until the next regular meeting of said board. Provided further, the board may also issue certificates to persons, who, upon application present a certificate of having passed a satisfactory examination before any other state board of medical examiners, upon the payment of the fee provided in section three [§ 2548.]

2552. Refusal of certificate; revocation. 21 G. A., ch. 104, § 7. The state board of examiners may refuse to grant a certificate to any person, who has been convicted of a felony committed in the practice of his profession or in connection therewith or may revoke certificates for like cause, or for palpable evidence of incompetency, and such refusal or revocation shall prohibit such person from practicing medicine, surgery or obstetrics, provided, such refusal or revocation of a certificate can only be made with the affirmative vote of at least five physicians of the state board of examiners, in which number shall be included one or more members of the different schools of medicine represented on said board; and provided further, that the standing of a legally chartered medical college, from which a diploma may be presented, shall not be questioned except by a like vote.

2553. Who deemed practitioner. 21 G. A., ch. 104, § 8. Any person shall be deemed as practicing medicine, surgery or obstetrics or to be a physician within the meaning of this act, who shall publicly profess to be a physician, surgeon, or obstetrician, and assume the duties, or who shall make a practice of prescribing or of prescribing and furnishing medicine for the sick, or who shall publicly profess to cure or heal, by any means whatsoever, but nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit students of medicine, surgery or obstetrics, from prescribing under the supervision of preceptors, or gratuitous service in case of emergency, nor shall this act extend to prohibit women who are at this time engaged in the practice of midwifery nor to prevent the advertising, selling or prescribing natural mineral waters flowing from wells or springs nor shall this act apply to surgeons of the United States army or navy, marine hospital service, nor to physicians as defined herein who have been in practice in this state for five consecutive years, three years of which time shall have been in one locality; provided, such physician shall furnish the state board of examiners satisfactory evidence of such practice, and shall procure the proper certificate, as provided in this act, and for which certificate such physician shall pay the secretary of the state board of examiners a fee of two dollars, and said board shall issue to the applicant such certificate; nor shall this apply to registered pharmacists when filling prescriptions, nor shall it be construed to interfere with the sale of patent or proprietary medicines in the regular course of trade.

2554. Penalty for practicing without compliance. 21 G. A., ch. 104, § 9. Any person who shall practice medicine or surgery within this state, without having complied with the provisions of this act, and who is not embraced in any of the exceptions or after being prohibited from so doing as provided in section seven of this act [§ 2552], shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than ten days, nor more than thirty days.

2556. Time of taking effect. 21 G. A., ch. 104, § 11. The penalties, as provided in this act, or violations thereof, shall not be enforced prior to the first day of January, A. D. 1887.

2557. 21 G. A., ch. 104, § 12. All acts and parts of acts in conflict with this act are hereby repealed.

CHAPTER 8g.

THE STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

2558. Appointment. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 1. The governor, with the approval of the executive council, shall appoint nine persons, one of whom shall be the attorney-general of the state (by virtue of his office), one a civil engineer, and seven physicians, who shall constitute a state board of health. The persons so appointed shall hold their offices for seven years: provided, that the terms of office of the seven physicians first appointed shall be so arranged by lot that the term of one shall expire on the thirty-first day of January of each year; and the vacancies thus occasioned, as well as all other vacancies otherwise occurring, shall be filled by the governor, with the approval of the executive council.

2559. Powers and duties. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 2. The state board of health shall have the general supervision of the interests of the health and life of the citizens of the state. They shall have charge of all matters pertaining to quarantine; they shall supervise a state registration of marriages, births and deaths, as hereinafter provided; they shall have authority to make such rules and regulations and such sanitary investigations as they may, from time to time, deem necessary for the preservation or improvement of public health; and it shall be the duty of all police officers, sheriffs, constables, and all other officers of the state to enforce such rules and regulations, so far as the efficiency and success of the board may depend upon their official co-operation.

[The board is required to cause the prosecution of persons violating the law as to the sale of canned goods. See § 5377.]

2560. Clerk of court to keep registry; report; fees. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 3; 19 G. A., ch. 140. The clerk of the district [and circuit] court[s] of each of the several counties in the state shall be required to keep separate books for the registration of the names and postoffice address of physicians and midwives, for births, for marriages, and for deaths, which record shall show the names, date of birth, death or marriage; the names of parents and sex of the child, when a birth; and when a death, shall give the age, sex and cause of death, with the date of the record and the name of the person furnishing the information. Said books shall always be open for inspection without fee, and the clerks of said courts shall be required to render a full and complete report of all births, marriages and deaths to the secretary of the board of health, annually, on the first day of October of each year, and at such other times as the board may direct; for which service the clerk shall receive, in addition to the compensation already allowed him by law, the sum of ten cents for each birth, marriage, or death so recorded by him, and the further sum of ten cents for each one hundred words of written matter contained in said report, the same to be paid out of the county fund.

2561. Forms furnished. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 4. It shall be the duty of the board of health to prepare such forms for the record of births, marriages and deaths as they may deem proper; the said forms to be furnished by the secretary of said board to the clerk[s] of the district [and circuit] court[s] of the several counties, whose duty it shall be to furnish them to such persons as are herein required to make reports.

2562. Physicians and midwives to register and report. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 5. It shall be the duty of all physicians and midwives in this state to register their names and postoffice address with the clerk of the district [and circuit] court[s] of the county where they reside, and said physicians and midwives shall be required, under penalty of ten dollars, to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction in the state at suit of the clerk of the courts, to report to the clerk of the courts, within thirty days from the date of their occurrence, all births and deaths which may come under their supervision, with a certificate of the cause of death, and such other facts as the board may require, and the blank forms furnished as hereinafter provided.

This statute, so far as it authorizes the board of health to require a physician to report information as to birth and deaths, is not unconstitutional. Its objects are within the authority of the state, and may be attained in the exercise of its police power: Robinson v. Hamilton, 60-134.

2563. Report by parent; by clerk. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 6. When any birth or death shall take place, no physician or midwife being in attendance, the same shall be reported by the parent to the clerk of the district [and circuit] court[s] within thirty days from the date of its occurrence, and if a death, the supposed cause of death, or if there be no parent by the nearest of kin not a minor, or if none, by the resident householder, where the birth or death shall have occurred, under penalty provided in the preceding section of this act. Clerks of the district [and circuit] court[s] shall annually, on the first day of October of each year, send to the secretary of the state board of health a statement of all births and deaths recorded in their offices for the year preceding said date under a penalty of twenty-five dollars in case of failure.

2564. Coroners to report. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 7. The coroners of the several counties shall report to the clerk of the courts, all cases of death which may come under their supervision, with the cause or mode of death, etc., as per form furnished, under penalty as provided in section five of this act [§ 2562].

2565. Penalties; special fund. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 8. All amounts recovered under the penalties of this act shall be appropriated to a special fund for carrying out the object of this law.

2566. Meetings of board. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 9. The first meeting of the board shall be within twenty days after its appointment, and thereafter in May and November of each year, and at such other times as the board shall deem expedient. The November meeting shall be in the city of Des Moines; a majority of the members of the board shall constitute a quorum. They shall choose one of their number to be president and shall adopt rules and by-laws for their government, subject to the provisions of this act.

2567. Secretary; compensation. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 10; 20 G. A., ch. 173. They shall elect a secretary who shall perform the duties prescribed by the board and by this act. He shall receive a salary which shall be fixed by the board, not exceeding twelve hundred dollars per annum. He shall, with the other members of the board receive actual traveling and other necessary expenses incurred in the performance of official duties; but no other member of the board shall receive a salary. The president of the board shall monthly certify the amount due the secretary, and on presentation of said certificate, the auditor of state shall draw his warrant on the state treasurer for the amount.

2568. Biennial report. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 11; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 37. It shall be the duty of the board of health to make a biennial report, through their secretary or otherwise, in writing to the governor of the state, and such report shall include so much of the proceedings of the board, such information concerning vital statistics, such knowledge respecting diseases and such instruction on the subject of hygiene as may be thought useful by the board for dissemination among the people, with such suggestions as to the legislative action as they may deem necessary.

2569. Annual appropriation; office. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 12; 20 G. A., ch. 173. The sum of five thousand dollars per annum, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated to pay the salary of the secretary, meet the contingent expenses of the office of the secretary and the expenses of the board and all costs of printing, which, together, shall not exceed the sum hereby appropriated. Said expenses shall be certified and paid monthly in the same manner as the salary of the secretary. The secretary of state shall provide rooms suitable for the meeting of the board and office room for the secretary of the board.

2570. Local boards of health. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 13. The mayor and alderman of each incorporated city, the mayor and council of any incorporated town or village, in the state, or the trustees of any township, shall have and exercise all the powers and perform all the duties of a board of health within the limits of the cities, towns and townships of which they are officers.

[Other provisions as to local boards of health are found in §§ 532, 556-561, 723, 961-979.]

2572. Report to state board. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 15. It shall be the duty of the health physician of every incorporated town, and also the clerk of the local board of health in each city or incorporated town or village in the state, at least once a year to report to the state board of health their proceedings, and such other facts required, on blanks, and in accordance with instructions received from said state board. They shall also make special reports whenever required to do so by the state board of health.

2573. Regulations; penalty. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 16. Local boards of health shall make such regulations respecting nuisances, sources of filth, and cause of sickness within their jurisdiction, and on board any boats in their ports or harbors, as they shall judge necessary for the public health and safety; and if any person shall violate any such regulations, he shall forfeit a sum of not less than twenty-five dollars for every day during which he knowingly violates or disregards said rules and regulations, to be recovered before any justice of the peace or other court of competent jurisdiction.

Where the mayor and aldermen of a city constituting a board of health made a regulation that no hog-pen nor inclosure wherein swine are kept and fed otherwise than for purpose of commerce should be allowed within the city limits, held, that such regulations might be enforced by the city: State v. Holcomb, 68-107.

2574. Notice to abate nuisance. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 17. The board of health of any city or incorporated town or village shall order the owner of any property, place or building (at his own expense), to remove any nuisance, source of filth or cause of sickness, found on private property, within twenty-four hours, or such other time as is deemed reasonable after notice served as hereinafter provided; and if the owner or occupant neglects to do so, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding twenty dollars for every day during which he knowingly and wilfully permits such nuisance or cause of sickness to remain after the time prescribed for the removal thereof.

Exclusive jurisdiction to determine what constitutes a nuisance and to abate nuisances is not conferred upon the local board of health. A private action for damages may be maintained against a person maintaining a nuisance by one specially injured thereby without regard to the action of the board: Baker v. Bohannan, 69-60.

2575. Abatement by board. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 18. If the owner or occupant fails to comply with such order, the board may cause the nuisance, source of filth or cause of sickness to be removed, and all expenses incurred thereby shall be paid by the owner, occupant or other person who caused or permitted the same, if he has had actual notice from the board of health of the existence thereof, to be recovered by civil action in the name of the state before any court having jurisdiction.

2576. Tenements. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 19. The board when satisfied, upon due examination, that any cellar, room, tenement, or building in its town, occupied as a dwelling-place, has become, by reason of the number of occupants, or want of cleanliness, or other cause, unfit for such purpose, and a cause of nuisance or sickness to the occupants or the public, may issue a notice, in writing, to such occupants, or any of them, requiring the premises to be put in a proper condition as to cleanliness, or, if they see fit, requiring the occupants to remove or quit the premises within such time as the board may deem reasonable. If the persons so notified, or any of them, neglect or refuse to comply with the terms of the notice, the board may cause the premises to be properly cleaned at the expense of the owners, or may remove the occupants forcibly and close up the premises, and the same shall not again be occupied as a dwelling-place without permission, in writing, of the board.

2577. Forcible entry. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 20. Whenever the board of health shall think it necessary for the preservation of the lives or health of the inhabitants to enter a place, building or vessel in their township, for the purpose of examining into and destroying, removing or preventing any nuisance, source of filth, or cause of sickness, and shall be refused such entry, any member of the board may make complaint, under oath, to any justice of the peace of his county, whether such justice be a member of the board or not, stating the facts of the case so far as he has knowledge thereof. Such justice shall thereupon issue a warrant directed to the sheriff or any constable of the county, commanding him to take sufficient aid, and being accompanied by two or more members of said board of health between the hours of sunrise and sunset, repair to the place where such nuisance, source of filth, or cause of sickness complained of may be, and the same destroy, remove or prevent, under the direction of such members of the board of health.

2578. Removal of infected person. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 21. When any person coming from abroad, or residing within any city, town, or township, within this state, shall be infected, or shall lately have been infected with small-pox or other sickness dangerous to the public health, the board of health of the city, town or township, where said person may be, shall make effectual provision in the manner in which they shall judge best for the safety of the inhabitants by removing such sick or infected person to a separate house, if it can be done without damage to his health, and by providing nurses and other assistance and supplies, which shall be charged to the person himself, his parents or other person who may be liable for his support, if able, otherwise, at the expense of the county to which he belongs.

The board of health may, under this section, erect a temporary building to which infected persons may be removed for isolation, and the county will be liable for the expenses thereof in case of the inability of the infected person or persons to pay such charge. Whether the infected person would be liable for such expenses in any event, doubted: Staples v. Plymouth County, 62-364.

The sick person is properly chargeable with all expenses which may be incurred, as, including expenses of removal, if that plan is adopted, or isolation, if that is adopted; and in the latter case the expense of food furnished to the entire family during the period of isolation may be included; also, the supplying of clothing in place of clothing worn by the family which is burned. For all such expenses which the sick person or those liable for his support are unable to pay the county is ultimately liable: Clinton v. Clinton County, 61-205.

It is the imperative duty of the local board

2579. Care without removal. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 22. If any infected person cannot be removed without damage to his health, the board of health shall make provision for him as directed in the preceding section in the house in which he may be, and in such case they may cause the persons in the neighborhood to be removed and may take such other measures as may be deemed necessary for the safety of the inhabitants.

2580. Warrant for removal. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 23. Any justice of the peace on application under oath showing cause therefor by a local board or any member thereof, shall issue his warrant under his hand, directed to the sheriff or any constable of the county, requiring him under the direction of the board of health to remove any person infected with contagious diseases, or to take possession of condemned houses and lodgings, and to provide nurses and attendants and other necessaries for the care, safety, and relief of the sick.

2581. Meeting of local boards; report of clerk. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 24; 22 G. A., ch. 65. Local boards of health shall meet for the transaction of health to provide for a sick person, regardless of his settlement — as where the person is a foreigner, not yet having acquired a settlement. The sick or afflicted person must in such case be deemed to belong to the county where the relief becomes necessary: Ibid.

The county is liable for the care of sick persons under said statute only in case they or the persons liable for their support are not able to make compensation therefor. The liability of the county can be established only by showing that the facts exist which are contemplated by the statute as rendering the county liable, and the burden of proving these facts is therefore upon the party seeking to establish such liability: Gill v. Appanoose County, 68-20.

The board will not be bound by the actions of individual members in authorizing a physician to render services. Such action must be by the board as a body: Young v. Blackhawk County, 66-460.

of business on the first Monday of April and the first Monday in October of each year, and at any other time that the necessities of the health of their respective jurisdictions may demand, and the clerk of each board shall transmit his annual report to the secretary of the state board of health within two weeks after the October meeting. Said report shall embrace a history of any epidemic disease which may have prevailed within his district. The failure of the clerk of the board to prepare, or cause to be prepared, and forward such report as above specified, shall be considered a misdemeanor for which he shall be subject to a fine of not more than twenty-five dollars.

2582. 18 G. A., ch. 151, § 25. All laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed.

[For other provisions as to banks, see §§ 1788-1825.]

2583. What required. 1570. All associations organized under the general incorporation laws of this state, for the purpose of transacting a banking business, buying or selling exchange, receiving deposits, discounting notes, etc., shall make a full, clear, and accurate statement of the condition of the association as hereinafter provided, which shall be verified by the oath of the president or vice-president, cashier or secretary, and two of the directors, which statement shall contain:

5. The amount of gold and silver coin and bullion belonging to such association at the time of making the statement;
6. The amount then on hand of bills of solvent specie-paying banks;
7. The amount of bills, bonds, notes, and other evidences of debt, discounted or purchased by such association, and then belonging to the same, specifying particularly the amount of suspended debts, the amount considered good, the amount considered doubtful, and the amount in suit or judgment;

2584. Additional reports. 1571. The auditor of state shall, at any time he may see proper, make or cause to be made, an examination of any association, as hereinafter provided, contemplated in this chapter, or he shall call upon any such association for a report of its state and condition as hereinbefore provided, upon any given day which has passed, as often as four times a year, and which reports the auditor shall cause to be published for one day in some daily newspaper published in the county where such association shall be located, or if there be no such newspaper published in said county, then such report shall be published in some weekly newspaper printed in said county for one week; the expenses of such publication shall be paid by each institution.

2585. Insolvent; receiver appointed. 1572. If such auditor is satisfied from said examination or reports that any such institution is insolvent, he shall direct the attorney-general to commence the proper proceedings, to have a receiver appointed and said institution wound up, and the assets thereof ratably distributed among the creditors thereof, giving preference in payment to depositors.

2586. Forfeiture. 1573. Any wilful failure or neglect of the proper officers of such association to comply with the provisions of this chapter, shall be regarded as a forfeiture of all the rights and privileges of such association. [R., § 1638.]

2587. Failure to report. 1574. Any officer whose duty it is made to make statement and publication as aforesaid, who shall wilfully neglect, or refuse to do so shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not less than three months nor more than three years in the penitentiary. [R., § 1639.]

2588. Existing associations; how affected; four statements required each year. 1575. The provisions of sections fifteen hundred and seventy-three and fifteen hundred and seventy-four, of this chapter [§§ 2586, 2587], shall not apply to or be enforced against any such banking institution, or the officers thereof, who heretofore have been incorporated and come under the provisions of this chapter; provided, that on or before the first day of September, 1873, any such institution shall have shown by a statement of its condition to the satisfaction of the auditor of the state, that it is now in a sound condition. In no case shall more than four statements in one year be required.

2589. Amount of capital required. 1576. No association shall be organized under the provisions of this chapter with a less amount of paid-up capital than fifty thousand dollars, except in cities or towns having a population not exceeding three thousand, where such association may be organized with a paid-up capital of not less than twenty-five thousand dollars. But no such association shall have the right to commence business until its officers-elect, or its stockholders, shall have furnished to the auditor of state a sworn statement of the paid-up capital, and when the auditor of state is satisfied as to the fact, he shall issue to such association a certificate authorizing such association to commence business, a copy of which shall be published as provided in section fifteen hundred and seventy-one of this chapter [§ 2584].

TITLE XII.

OF EDUCATION.

CHAPTER 1.

OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

2590. Duties. 1577. The superintendent of public instruction shall be charged with the general supervision of all the county superintendents and all the common schools of the state. He may meet county superintendents in convention at such points in the state as he may deem most suitable for the purpose, and by explanation and discussion endeavor to secure a more uniform and efficient administration of school laws. He shall attend teachers' institutes in the several counties of the state, as far as may be consistent with the discharge of other duties imposed by law, and assist by lecture or otherwise in their instruction and management. He shall render a written opinion to any school officer asking it, touching the exposition or administration of any school law, and shall determine all cases appealed from the decision of county superintendents. [C., '51, § 1080; 10 G. A., ch. 52, § 5; 12 G. A., ch. 162, § 2.]

If the superintendent should announce a decision differing from the decision actually rendered, he possesses the power to recall such announcement and publish the decision correctly, or if mistakenly he should render the decision, he could, before rights had been acquired under it and within proper time, upon discovering his mistake, recall it and decide rightly. If the decision is recalled and a different one rendered it will be presumed, in the absence of any showing on the subject, that it was done for a proper cause and within a proper time and that no rights had been acquired under his decision. The second decision is to be regarded as the final judgment rendered: Desmond v. Independent Dist., 71-23.

As to provision for traveling expenses, see § 5014.

2592. Publication of school laws. 1579; 18 G. A., ch. 150, § 1; 22 G. A., ch. 59. After the adjournment of the eighteenth general assembly and every four years thereafter, if deemed necessary, he may cause to be printed and bound in cloth the school laws, and all amendments thereto, with such notes, rulings, forms and decisions as may seem of value to aid school officers in the proper discharge of their duties. Appropriate reference shall be made to the previous law that has been amended or changed so as clearly to indicate the effect of such amendments or changes. He shall send to each county superintendent a number of copies sufficient to supply each school district in his county with one copy of such school laws, with decisions. He shall also cause to be printed and bound in paper covers the school laws with notes and with forms necessary to be used in carrying out the school laws. Provided that he shall furnish each of the members of the board of directors with one copy of the laws bound in paper covers, which shall be turned over to their successors in office. [C., '51, §§ 1083, 1085; 10 G. A., ch. 52, § 8; 12 G. A., ch. 162, § 2.]

2593. Amendments; how published. 18 G. A., ch. 150, § 2. After such sessions of the general assembly as the state superintendent shall not deem it necessary to publish the laws, as provided for in section one of this act [§ 2592], he shall cause to be published in pamphlet form all the amendments to the school laws passed by such general assembly, in sufficient number to supply each of the county superintendents and school officers of the state with one copy free of charge, which said amendments shall be sent to the several county superintendents for distribution.

2594. Iowa School Journal. 1581. He may, if he deem it expedient, subscribe for a sufficient number of copies of the Iowa School Journal, or of such other educational journal published in the state as he may select to furnish each county superintendent with one copy, and his certificate of having thus subscribed, shall be authority for the auditor of state to issue his warrant for the amount of said subscriptions; provided, he shall cause to be inserted in the journal he may so select a correct copy of any decision he may deem it necessary to make for the efficient carrying out of the school law. [10 G. A., ch. 52, § 7.]

[The words "of copies" in the second line are erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

2596. Report to governor. 1583; 22 G. A., ch. 82, § 29. He shall make to the governor, biennially a report which shall embrace, first, a statement of the condition of the common schools of the state; the number of district townships and subdistricts therein; the number of teachers; the number of schools; the number of school-houses and the value thereof; the number of persons between five and twenty-one years of age; the number of scholars in each county that have attended school the previous year, as returned by the several county superintendents; the number of books in the district libraries; and the value of all apparatus in the schools and such other statistical information as he may deem important. Second, such plans as he may have matured for the more perfect organization and efficiency of common schools. He shall cause one thousand copies of his report to be printed, and shall present it to the general assembly on the second day of its session. [C., '51, § 1086; Same, § 10.]

2597. Appoint teachers' institutes. 1584. The treasurer shall give bonds, as the board may require, conditioned for the faithful accounting of all moneys that come into his hands. The secretary and treasurer, if not a member of the board, shall receive three dollars per day for the time he is actually employed during the sessions of the board, or under their direction. Said board shall meet at the institution on the first Wednesday in October of each year, and every three months thereafter, and at such other times as two of their number may decide. Every child and youth residing in this state, between the ages of five and eighteen years, who, by reason of deficient intellect, is rendered unable to acquire an education in the common schools, shall be entitled to receive the physical and mental training and care of this institution at the expense of the state; and it shall be the duty of the county superintendent of common schools in each county to report to the superintendent of the institution, on the first day of October of each year, the name, age, and postoffice address of every person in his county between the ages of five and twenty-one, who by reason of feeble mental and physical condition is deprived of a reasonable degree of benefit from the common schools. The said auditor shall then proceed at once to collect the same, by suit, if necessary, in the name of the county, and pay the same into state treasury. The superintendent shall, at the same time, transmit a duplicate of the same account to the auditor of state, who shall credit the same to the account of the institution, and charge it to the proper county: Provided, [if] it shall appear by the affidavit of three disinterested citizens of the county, not kin to the inmate, that the parent or guardian would be unreasonably oppressed by such suit, then such auditor shall not institute such suit, but shall credit the same to the state on his books, and report the amount of such account to the board of supervisors of his county, and the said board shall draw from the county fund the amount claimed, and cause the same to be paid into the state treasury. All accounts for clothing and transportation of pupils on the books of the superintendent of this institution, and not paid at the time of the enactment of this section, hereby are made subject to the same, and shall be collected accordingly.

Each county having a population of two thousand inhabitants or over, as shown by the last state or federal census, may establish a high school on the conditions and in the manner hereinafter prescribed, for the purpose of affording better educational facilities for pupils more advanced than those attending district schools, and for persons desiring to fit themselves for the vocation of teaching. [13 G. A., ch. 116, § 1.]

High schools are deemed a part of the common school system of the state, though they are not to derive any support or assistance from the school fund: High School v. Clayton County, 9-175.

2804. Petition for election. 1698. When one-third of the electors of a county, as shown by the returns of the last preceding election, shall petition the board of supervisors requesting that a county high school be established in their county at the place in said petition named, then, or when said board in its discretion shall deem proper, said board shall give twenty days' notice previous to the next general election, or previous to a special election duly called for that purpose, that they will submit the question to the electors of said county whether such high school shall be established; at which election said electors shall vote by ballot, for or against establishing such county high school. The notice contemplated in this section shall be given through one or more newspapers published in said county, if any be published therein, and by at least one written or printed notice to be posted in each township. [Same, § 2.]

2805. Votes canvassed; trustees. 1699. After said election, the ballots on said question shall be canvassed in the same manner as in the election for county officers; and if a majority of all the votes cast on said question shall be in favor of establishing said school, the board of supervisors shall immediately proceed to appoint six persons, who shall be residents of the county, but not more than two of whom shall be residents of the same township, who shall, with the county superintendent of common schools, constitute a board of trustees for said high school. Each of said trustees appointed as aforesaid shall hold his office until his successor is elected and qualified, and shall be required, within ten days after appointment, to qualify by taking the oath of office, and giving such bond as may be required by the said board of supervisors, for the faithful discharge of his duties. [Same, § 3.]

2806. Election of trustees. 1700. At the next general election after said appointment, there shall be elected in said county six high school trustees, who shall be divided into three classes of two each; each class to hold their office one, two, and three years, respectively, and their respective terms to be decided by lot. And each year thereafter there shall be two such trustees elected to succeed those whose term is about to expire. And said trustees shall qualify and enter upon the duties of their office in the same manner, and at the same time as other county officers. [Same, § 4.]

2807. County superintendent. 1701. The county superintendent shall, by virtue of his office, be president of said board of trustees; and at their first meeting in each year, they shall appoint from their own number a secretary and treasurer, who shall perform the usual duties devolving upon such officers for the term of one year, or until their successors are appointed to take their places. [Same, § 5.]

2808. Estimate of funds; tax levied. 1702. At said meeting, or at some succeeding meeting called for such purpose, said trustees shall make an estimate of the amount of funds needed for building purposes, for payment of teachers' wages, and for contingent expenses, and they shall present to the board of supervisors a certified estimate of the rate of tax required to raise the amount desired for such purposes. But in no case shall the tax for such purposes exceed in one year the amount of five mills on the dollar on the taxable property of the county, and, when the tax is levied for the payment of teachers' wages and contingent expenses only, shall not exceed two mills on the dollar. [Same, § 6.]

2809. Collection. 1703. The said tax shall be levied and collected in the same manner as other county taxes, and when collected the county treasurer shall pay the same to the treasurer of the county high school, in the same manner that school funds are paid to the district treasurers as required by law. [Same, § 7.]

2810. Treasurer; accounts. 1704. The said treasurer of the high school shall give such additional bond as the board of trustees may deem sufficient, and receive all moneys from the county treasurer and from other parties that belong to the funds of said school, and pay the same out only by direction of the board of trustees upon orders duly executed by the president, countersigned by the secretary thereof, stating the purpose for which they were drawn. Both the secretary and treasurer shall keep an accurate account of all moneys received and expended for said school; and at the close of each year, and as much oftener as required by the board, they shall make a full statement of the financial affairs of the school. [Same, § 8.]

2811. Site; contracts. 1705. The said board of trustees shall proceed, as soon as practicable after their appointment as aforesaid, to select the best site, in accordance with the vote of the county, that can be obtained without expense to the same, and the title thereof shall be vested in said county. They shall then proceed to make such purchases of material, and to let such contracts for their necessary school buildings as they may deem proper, but shall not make any purchase or contract in any year to exceed the amount on hand and to be raised by the levy of tax that year. [Same, § 9.]

2812. Employment of teachers. 1706. When said board of trustees shall have furnished a suitable building for the school, they shall employ some competent teacher to take charge of the same, and furnish such assistant teachers as they deem necessary, and provide for the payment of their salaries. As far as practicable, model schools shall be encouraged, and advanced students and those preparing to become teachers may be employed a portion of their time in teaching the younger pupils, in order that they may become familiar with the practice as well as theory of successful school-teaching, and also avoid, as far as practicable, the expense of employing other assistant teachers. [Same, § 10.]

2813. Tuition free; rules. 1707. Tuition shall be free to all pupils of such school residing in the county where the same is located. The board of trustees, however, shall make such general rules and regulations as they deem proper in regard to age and grade of attainments essential to entitle pupils to admission in the school. If there should be more applicants than can be accommodated at any time, each district shall be entitled to send its equal proportion of pupils according to the number of pupils it may have, as shown by the last report to the county superintendent of common schools. And the boards of the respective school districts shall designate such pupils as may attend. [Same, § 11.]

2814. Pupils from other counties. 1708. If, at any time, the school can accommodate more pupils than apply for admission from that county, the vacancies may be filled by applicants from other counties, upon the payment of such tuition as the board of trustees may prescribe; but at no time shall such pupils continue in said school to the exclusion of pupils belonging in the county in which such high school is situated. [Same, § 12.]

2815. Rules. 1709. The principal of any such high school, with the approval of the board of trustees, shall make such rules and regulations as he deems proper in regard to the studies, conduct, and government of the pupils under his charge, and if any such pupils will not conform to and obey the rules of the school, they may be suspended or expelled therefrom by the board of trustees.

2816. Trustees to report. 1710. The said board of trustees shall, annually, make a report to the board of supervisors of their county, which shall specify the number of students, both male and female, who have been in attendance at the county high school during the year, the branches of learning taught, the text-books used, the number of teachers employed, the amount of salary paid to them, the amount expended for library and apparatus, and for buildings and all other expenses; also the amount of funds on hand, debts unpaid, and other information deemed important or expedient to report. Said report shall be printed in at least one newspaper in the county, if any is published therein, and a copy of the report shall be forwarded to the state superintendent of public instruction. [Same, § 15.]

2817. Vacancies. 1711. The board of supervisors shall have power to fill any vacancy that may occur in the board of trustees of that county by appointment, until the next general election, and a majority of any such board of trustees shall be a quorum for the transaction of business. [Same, § 16.]

2818. Compensation. 1712. The board of supervisors may allow each member of the board of trustees the sum of two dollars per day for the time actually employed in the discharge of his official duties, and when such accounts are presented for payment, they shall be audited and paid out of the county treasury in the same manner as other accounts against the county, and said trustees shall not be entitled to any further remuneration for services or expenses. [Same, § 17.]

CHAPTER 9.

OF THE SYSTEM OF COMMON SCHOOLS.

2819. School districts. 1713. Each civil township now or hereafter organized, and each independent school district organized as such prior to the taking effect of this code, is hereby declared a school district for all the purposes of this chapter, subject to the provisions hereinafter made. [R., § 2022; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 1.]

It is contemplated that school districts shall coincide in boundary with civil townships. The only exception is found in the provisions (§ 2916) for the case where, by reason of streams or other natural obstacles, a portion of the inhabitants of a township cannot with reasonable facility enjoy the advantages of any school in their township; but no such restriction exists upon the formation of independent districts: District T^p v. Independent Dist., 41-30.

2820. Special elections. 1714. When an organized district has been left without officers, the township trustees shall give such notice for a special election of directors, as is required in cases of regular district elections; and the persons elected shall continue in office until their successors are duly elected and qualified. [Same, § 3.]

2821. Division; apportionment. 1715. When changes in civil township boundaries are made, or any district shall be divided into two or more entire townships for civil purposes, the existing board of directors shall continue to act for both or all the new districts, or parts of districts, until the next regular district election thereafter, at which time the new district townships shall organize by the election of directors. The respective boards of directors shall, immediately after such organization, make an equitable division of the then existing assets and liabilities between the old and new districts; and in case of a failure to agree, the matter may be decided by arbitrators, chosen by the parties in interest. A similar division shall be made in case of the formation or changes of boundaries of independent districts. [Same, § 4; 14 G. A., ch. 133, § 1.]

The directors constitute a special tribunal to make division of assets and liabilities. Their jurisdiction for that purpose is exclusive and their decision cannot be collaterally attacked: Independent School Dist. v. Independent School Dist., 43-444; District T^p v. District T^p, 45-104.

If this tribunal fails to act it may be compelled to do so by mandamus, but appeal from its decision cannot be had to the courts: Ibid.

The adjudication of the directors in the division of assets is final and conclusive until reversed by proper proceedings. Appeal in such case lies from their action to the county superintendent: Independent School Dist. v. Independent School Dist., 45-391.

The failure to agree referred to in this section is a disagreement of the directors acting as a tribunal and not a failure of the new districts to agree: Ibid.

In making the division, school-houses and real estate used for school purposes are to be taken into account, but such division need not result in the partition of the real estate: District T^p v. District T^p, 36-216.

Where the boards of the two districts appoint arbitrators to make division of assets and liabilities, a court of equity has jurisdiction to set aside their award for gross error in computation, etc. In such a case an appeal would not lie to the county superintendent: District T^p v. District T^p, 54-286.

The arbitration here contemplated is a statutory arbitration (see §§ 4652-4667), and a court cannot enter up judgment for a different amount than that taxed in the award: District T^p v. Independent Dist., 60-141.

Where it appears that the respective boards of directors have met and failed to agree, mandamus may be maintained to compel a choice of arbitrators, but not to compel the making of equitable division: Case v. Blood, 68-486.

A person who has ceased to be a resident of the district and a patron of the school, but is still a tax payer, may bring action to compel the board of directors to make the apportionment here required: Case v. Blood, 71-632.

Where a portion of an independent district is severed and restored to a district township, to which it geographically belongs, it seems that bonds issued by the independent district must be taken into account in apportioning the liabilities between it and the district township, although the district township cannot issue such bonds: Albin v. Board of Directors, 58-77.

Where the proper board of directors has made a division of assets and liabilities upon the organization of subdistricts into independent districts and then has ceased to exist, an action in equity may be maintained to effect such division, where it appears that the one originally made was inequitable and unjust, and there was no negligence on the part of the plaintiff in not having a proper division made by the board while in existence: Independent School Dist. v. Independent School Dist., 41-321.

After the division of a district township the old district township goes out of existence entirely, and action by the new township for division of assets may be brought against the independent districts formed out of the other portion of the old district township. In such case an action against the old district could be of no avail and no jurisdiction would be acquired thereby: District Twp v. Independent Dist., 63-188.

The provisions as to division of assets in case of division of boundary or division of the district township are not applicable in case of an action by one district township against another: District Twp v. District Twp, 52-73.

2822. Body corporate. 1716. Every school district which is now, or may hereafter be organized, is hereby made a body corporate by the name of the "district township," or "independent district" (as the case may be), of —, in the county of —, and in that name may hold property, become a party to suits and contracts, and do other corporate acts. [R., § 2026; C., '51, § 1108; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 5; 11 G. A., ch. 33.]

A school district is a body corporate with the power to hold property and be a party to suits and contracts: Baker v. Chambliss, 4 G. Gr., 428.

A district township is a political corporation within the meaning of Const., art. 11, § 3, fixing the limit of indebtedness of political and municipal corporations: Winspear v. District Twp, 37-542.

The school district, being a public corporation or quasi-corporation, is not liable for personal injuries sustained on account of the negligent construction of its school-houses, or negligence in keeping them in repair: Lane v. District Twp, 58-462.

Whether a district township can be made liable for unlawful acts of officers in converting the property of others, quære; but where such officer allowed lumber, levied on under attachment but subsequently released, to be used in a school building, held, that the district township was not liable for its conversion: Charnock v. District Twp, 51-70.

A school-house, being public property, is not subject to execution and is therefore not subject to a mechanic's lien: Charnock v. District Twp, 51-70.

The property of school districts in cities and towns is not exempt from special taxation for improvement of streets, laying of sidewalks, etc.: Sioux City v. Independent School Dist., 55-150.

2823. Annual meeting; powers. 1717; 18 G. A., ch. 63; 19 G. A., ch. 51. Each district township shall hold an annual meeting on the second Monday in March, and the electors of the district, when legally assembled at such meeting, shall have the following powers:

1. To appoint a chairman and secretary in the absence of the regular officers;

2. To direct the sale or other disposition to be made of any school-house or the site thereof, and of such other property, personal and real, as may belong to the district; to direct the manner in which the proceeds arising therefrom shall be applied; to determine what additional branches shall be taught in the schools of the district; or to delegate any of these powers to the board of directors, and to authorize the board of directors to obtain, at the expense of the district township, such highways as such board may deem necessary for proper access to the school-houses in their districts;

3. To vote such tax, not exceeding ten mills on the dollar in any one year, on the taxable property of the district township, as the meeting shall deem sufficient for the purchase of grounds and the construction of the necessary school-houses for the use of the district, and for the payment of any debts contracted for the erection of school-houses, and for procuring district libraries, and for obtaining highways for access to school-houses;

4. To instruct the board of directors to transfer any surplus in the school-house fund, not appropriated, to either the contingent or teachers' fund. [R., §§ 2027-28, 2033; C., '51, §§ 1114, 1115; 9 G. A., ch. 172, §§ 6, 7, 16; 11 G. A., ch. 143, §§ 1, 2; 14 G. A., ch. 84.]

It is not necessarily improper for the electors to vote a tax for the erection of a school-house where one school-house already exists in the district. It may be that the school-house existing is unfit for further use or unfit for the purpose: Casey v. Independent Dist., 64-659.

The electors of a district township have no power under this section, or otherwise, to authorize the discharge of a debtor of the district without consideration: District Twp v. Thomas, 59-50.

The electors may provide that music shall be taught in the schools of the district: Bellmeyer v. Independent Dist., 44-564.

Under the power to direct the sale or other disposition of the school-house, etc., the electors may authorize the use of such house for purposes of religious worship, Sabbath-schools, etc.: Davis v. Boget, 50-11; Townsend v. Hagan, 35-194.

A contract to repair a school-house may be made by the board without a previous vote of the electors (§ 2867): Williams v. Peinny, 25-436.

The taxes for contingent and teachers' funds are to be estimated and certified by the board of directors under § 2895, and a vote of such tax by the electors, under this section, is not valid: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll Co., 41-153.

Where the electors made an appropriation and voted a tax for the erection of a school-house, and such tax had been collected, and action commenced to compel the erection of the house by the board of directors, held, that the electors could not, at a subsequent annual meeting, rescind their previous action, the right of the parties interested in the erection of the school-house having become vested: Benjamin v. District T'p, 50-648.

In such action, held, that the directors might be compelled, by mandamus, to carry out the vote of the electors by the erection of a school-house, and that appeal to the county superintendent was not such speedy and adequate remedy as to deprive the plaintiff of his right to an action by mandamus: Ibid.

The board of directors may incur indebtedness, etc., in carrying out the vote of the township: See note to § 2833.

As to how long the polls shall remain open at such a meeting, see § 2908.

2824. Special meeting. 18 G. A., ch. 84. When a school district, by fire or otherwise, has been deprived of a school building, and the board of directors of such district, by the use of the powers in them vested, are unable to provide for the continuance of the school therein; then such board of directors shall call a meeting of such district. The manner of calling such meeting, and the powers of such meeting shall be as follows:

1st. The board of directors shall cause to be posted in three public places in such district, at least ten days prior to the designated time of holding such meeting, written notices of such meeting, in which shall be stated the time and place of such meetings, and the object or purpose for which same is called.

2d. The powers of such meeting shall be the same as is prescribed in section seventeen hundred and seventeen hereof [§ 2823], except those powers which are set forth in paragraph two, after the word "applied" in the fourth line thereof, and in paragraph three, after the word "district" in the fifth [fourth] line thereof.

SUBDISTRICTS.

2825. Election of subdirector. 1718. The several subdistricts shall, annually, on the first Monday in March, hold a meeting for the election of a subdirector, five days' notice of which meeting shall be given by the then resident subdirector, or, if there is none, by the district secretary, posting a written notice in three public places therein, and such notice shall state the hour of meeting. [R., § 2030; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 8.]

2826. Certificate of election. 1719; 18 G. A., ch. 7, § 1. At the meeting of the subdistrict, a chairman and secretary shall be appointed, who shall act as judges of the election, and give a certificate of election to the subdirector elect. When there is a tie vote between two persons for the office of subdirector, the secretary shall notify the secretary of the district township board of such tie vote, and shall notify said persons to appear at the regular meeting of the board on the third Monday in March to determine the tie vote by lot before one or more members of the board elected, and the certificate of election shall be given accordingly. Should either party fail to appear or take part in the lot, the secretary shall draw for him. [R., § 2031; C., '51, § 1111; Same, § 9.]

The proceedings here contemplated are a meeting, and also an election; and where the polls were kept open only forty minutes, and after the meeting had formally adjourned, and while the officers and electors were still present, electors who applied to vote were refused permission to do so, held, that the election was invalid: State ex rel. v. Wollem, 37-131.

So where, at such an election, the polls were only kept open for thirty minutes, and soon after they were closed voters appeared and offered their votes, the other electors being still present, held, that it was error to refuse such votes, although the meeting had, by formal motion, adjourned: State ex rel. v. Wollem, 39-380.

As to how long the polls shall remain open, see § 2908.

The provision in § 2896, with reference to taxes voted by electors of subdistricts for school-house purposes, gives implied authority to vote such taxes, although the power is not elsewhere expressly conferred: Wood v. Farmer, 69-538.

2828. Women eligible. 16 G. A., ch. 136, § 1. No person shall be deemed ineligible by reason of sex, to any school office in the state of Iowa.

2829. Directors or superintendents. 16 G. A., ch. 136, § 2. No person who may have been or shall be elected or appointed to the office of county superintendent of common schools or school director in the state of Iowa, shall be deprived of office by reason of sex.

There is nothing in the constitution prohibiting women from holding such offices. The legislature has power to make good, retro- spectively, acts which it had power to authorize in advance: Huff v. Cook, 44-639.

2830. Board of directors; president; secretary; treasurer. 1721; 15 G. A., ch. 27. The subdirectors of the several subdistricts shall constitute a board of directors for the district township, and shall enter upon their duties upon the day fixed for the regular meeting of the board in March, at which time they shall organize by electing from their own number a president, who shall simply be entitled to a vote as a member of the board, and from the district township at large, at their regular meeting on the third Monday of September in each year, a secretary and treasurer, unless there are at least five subdirectors in the district township, in which case they may be selected from the board; and said secretary and treasurer thus elected shall qualify and enter upon the duties of their respective offices within ten days following the date of their election. If selected from the district township at large, they shall have no vote in the proceedings of the board. [R., §§ 2035, 2076; C., '51, § 1721; Same, § 18; 11 G. A., ch. 143, § 13.]

The subdirector may qualify on or before the day fixed by appearing before some officer authorized to administer oaths and taking the oath of office. Failure to appear at the meeting of the board next ensuing does not prevent such qualification being valid: Bennett v. District T'p, 53-687. The written evidence of such qualification is not required to be filed with the secretary: Ibid.

2831. Regular and special meetings. 1722; 18 G. A., ch. 176. The board of directors shall hold their regular meetings on the third Monday in March and September of each year, and may hold such special meetings as occasion may require, at the call of the president or by request of a majority of the board; provided, that the board of directors of a district township may hold their meetings at any place within the civil or district township in which such district township is situated. [R., § 2036.]

2832. Make contracts; school-houses. 1723. They shall make all contracts, purchases, payments, and sales necessary to carry out any vote of the district; but before erecting any school-house they shall consult with the county superintendent as to the most approved plan of such buildings. And all school-houses erected or repaired at a cost exceeding three hundred dollars, shall be so erected or repaired by contract, and no such contract for labor or materials shall be let until proposals for the same shall have been invited by advertisement for four weeks in some newspaper published in the county where the work is to be done, if there be one published therein, if not, in the nearest newspaper in an adjoining county; and such contract shall be let to the lowest responsible bidder, and bonds with sufficient sureties for the faithful performance of the contract shall be required. [R., § 2037; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 20.]

[As to issuing bonds to pay off bonded or judgment indebtedness, see §§ 2965-2974.]

Powers of directors: Lightning-rods are not such an expense as may be paid for out of the contingent fund, and an order for that purpose drawn upon such fund is prima facie invalid: Wolf v. Independent School Dist., 51-432; Monticello Bank v. District T'p, 51-350.

The board of directors has no authority to bind the district township for insurance of building, furniture, etc.: American Ins. Co. v. District T'p, 55-606.

The directors have authority to bind a district for expenses incurred in procuring a highway to run by a school-house in case such house is not located upon a highway: Independent Dist. v. Kelly, 55-568.

Repairs proper may be contracted and paid for out of the contingent fund without being previously authorized by a vote of the electors; but where they amount to remodeling or rebuilding they should not be undertaken unless authorized by such vote: Williams v. Peinny, 25-436.

Apparatus, etc.: The board of directors of a district township are without power to make contracts to purchase apparatus, maps, charts, etc., thereby creating an indebtedness, without being first authorized thereto by the vote of the electors: Taylor v. District T'p, 26-281; Manning v. District T'p, 28-332.

Although by statute the board cannot contract indebtedness for apparatus, etc., but are limited to the use of unappropriated contingent funds on hand for such purposes, yet a contract for the purchase of such apparatus, to be paid for in the future, does not necessarily imply that there is no such fund, and such credit is not necessarily void: Bellmeyer v. Independent Dist., 44-564.

An independent district has power to determine that music shall be taught in the school as a branch of education, and if it does so determine, the board may properly contract for the purchase of a musical instrument out of any unappropriated funds in their hands: Ibid.

The board cannot employ one of its members to complete an abandoned contract and allow him compensation therefor: Moore v. Independent Dist., 55-654.

The directors cannot, by any acts, render the district liable upon an implied contract, or make valid by ratification a contract which they have no authority to make directly; and the use in the schools of apparatus, etc., the purchase of which is without authority, will not render the district liable: Taylor v. District T'p, 25-447; Manning v. District T'p, 28-332.

A school district may, through officers having authority to contract for it, adopt any contract of officers acting de facto; and thus officers, after legal incorporation, may ratify an act done before such incorporation: Dubuque Female College v. District T'p, 13-555.

Where the evidence shows that the directors and other officers knew of the services rendered and the materials furnished in constructing buildings under a parol contract not binding on the district, held, that acquiescence therein by such officers, and appropriation thereof to the use of the township, constituted a ratification binding upon such township: Bellows v. District T'p, 70-320.

While use of the buildings by school children may not alone authorize the finding of a ratification, yet that fact is evidence to be considered with other matters from which ratification may be presumed: Ibid.

Buildings in question being outbuildings in connection with the school-house, built under a valid contract, held, that if the acceptance of the main building was not intended to include the acceptance of the outbuildings the officers should, by some proper act, have prohibited the use of them: Ibid.

The board of directors acting for a school district has power to change a contract already made, even though such change operates to release sureties on the contract: Independent Dist. v. Reichard, 50-98.

A contract which the board of directors is authorized to make will not be void because no record thereof is made. Within the scope of their powers they may be bound by verbal contracts: Bellmeyer v. Independent Dist., 44-564; Athearn v. Independent Dist., 33-105.

The board of directors has no authority to release a lawful claim of the district against an officer for money coming into his hands: District T'p v. Morton, 37-550.

The assent of a majority of the members of the board of directors of the district township individually to a proposition will not bind the district. An action to be binding must be that of the board as a body: Herrington v. District T'p, 47-11.

Where individual members of the board were procured to sign their names individually to a contract for school supplies, conditioned that it should be binding when signed by a majority of the members of the board, held, that such contract was in contravention of the policy of the law and void, where it was procured by misrepresentation as to the fact that the president of the board had agreed to sign such contract: Mills v. Collins, 67-164.

Contracts which the directors of an independent district are authorized to make will be binding upon the district, although executed by them individually and not while acting as a board. Their powers are the same as those of a subdirector: Athearn v. Independent Dist., 33-105.

A contract signed by the directors in their official capacity and attested by their secretary, held binding upon the district and not upon the directors individually: Independent Dist. v. Reichard, 50-98.

Where the language of a note was, "We, the undersigned, directors of school district No. 4, . . . promise to pay," etc., and it was signed by the directors in their individual names, without official designation, held, that the note was binding on the district, and the directors were not individually liable: Baker v. Chambles, 4 G. Gr., 428.

So held, also, where the note read, "We, the board of school district No. 1, . . . promise to pay," and was signed by the directors with their individual names: Lyon v. Adamson, 7-509.

The directors or trustees are not liable to a personal action for damages at the suit of a teacher whom they have employed, for wrongfully, unjustly and illegally refusing to allow him to enter on his duties: Chamberlain v. Clayton, 56-331.

School-houses: The directors of a school district may, in a proper case, as where the public school-house is out of repair or insufficient, and in other cases where the best interests of the school would be subserved thereby, cause the school to be taught in a rented house instead of the public school building. Their action in doing so cannot be reviewed by mandamus: Scripture v. Burns, 59-70.

It being the duty of a school district to maintain schools, it may maintain injunction to prevent the wrongful removal of school-houses, and is not limited to an action at law for damages in such case: District T^p v. District T^p, 54-115.

A contract to repair a school-house may be made by the board of directors without a previous vote of the electors: Williams v. Feinny, 25-436.

The conditions of the bond here provided for are not prescribed by law, and the court may require such bond as shall protect third parties who furnish material or work in the performance of the contract, and action thereon may be brought by such parties: Baker v. Bryan, 64-561.

A board of directors has no authority to employ one of its number for a compensation to oversee the completion of a school-house abandoned by the contractor: More v. Independent Dist., 55-654.

A failure of the board to select a site or to receive proposals for the erection of a building will not render void the tax voted therefor: Casey v. Independent Dist., 64-659.

Where a proposal for bids stated that the right to reject any and all bids was reserved by the board, held, that a bidder could not by mandamus compel the contract to be awarded to him as being the lowest responsible bidder: Hanlin v. Independent Dist., 66-69.

The board of directors of a school district having the power to make contracts for the erection of school-houses in subdistricts may, by its acts in respect thereto, ratify a contract made by a subdirector for a like purpose: Stevenson v. District T^p, 35-462.

The board may proceed to the erection of a school-house in advance of the collection of the tax voted therefor under § 2823, ¶ 3. For this purpose they may incur indebtedness not to exceed the limit fixed by the township meeting, and may, by negotiable note, borrow money to pay such indebtedness. But they cannot bind the township by borrowing money to pay a debt contracted after the limit fixed by the township has been reached. And for money borrowed to pay a legitimate debt the board can only bind the township to pay six per cent. interest: Austin v. District, etc., 51-102.

There is nothing in the statute providing that one school district shall have but one school-house. If it be necessary, in order to maintain more than one school in a subdistrict, to build another house, the authority to erect it is implied from the authority to maintain more than one school: Wood v. Farmer, 69-533.

2833. School-house sites. 1724. They shall fix the site for each school-house, taking into consideration the geographical position and convenience of the people of each portion of the subdistrict, and shall determine what number of schools shall be taught in each subdistrict, and for what additional time beyond the period required by law they shall be continued during each year. [19 G. A., ch. 172, § 21; R., § 2037.]

The power given to fix the site of each school-house carries with it the power to change the school-house site, and where the board acts within its jurisdiction in the matter an appeal to the county superintendent and not an injunction is the proper remedy to correct errors in the exercise of the power: Vance v. District T^p, 23-408; Atkinson v. Hutchinson, 68-161.

In determining such an appeal all considerations proper to be taken into account in determining whether the change should be made or not, and existing at the time of the decision of the appeal, may be considered: Atkinson v. Hutchinson, 68-161.

Upon the reversal of the action of the board in changing the site, it becomes their duty to restore the school-house to the original site unless they are excused from doing so for some reason occurring after the appeal was taken: Ibid.

Where changes relied on to justify the action of the board occur before the decision of the appeal, and are such as to render the new site the proper one, they should be shown upon a hearing of the appeal, and the appeal may be determined according to the propriety of the action at that time: Ibid.

It is the duty of the board to comply with orders of the state superintendent, in his decision upon an appeal from an action of the board, and such orders may be enforced by mandamus: Newby v. Free, 72-379.

Action of the board in improperly locating or relocating school-houses cannot be made the basis of an action by a tax payer in the name of the district against members of the board individually for damages: Independent Dist. v. Gookin, 72-387.

2834. Divide districts. 1725; 16 G. A., ch. 109; 21 G. A., ch. 124. They shall determine where pupils may attend school, and for this purpose may divide their district into such subdistricts as may by them be deemed necessary; provided, that no such subdistrict shall be created for the accommodation of less than fifteen pupils, but the board of directors shall have power to rent a room and employ a teacher for the accommodation of any ten scholars; provided further, that nothing in this chapter contained shall be construed to prohibit the construction of as many school-houses, out of moneys derived from taxes levied previous to January first, 1876, in any subdistrict, where the subdistrict comprises the entire district township, as shall have been authorized and provided for at the annual meeting of the district township electors.

The board cannot discriminate between white and colored children and require the latter to attend a separate school: Clark v. Board of Directors, 24-266; Smith v. Directors, 40-518; Dove v. Independent School Dist., 41-659.

The power of a board to rent a room and employ a teacher is discretionary, and their action in refusing to exercise such power cannot be questioned, except by appeal to the county superintendent: Ananson v. Anderson, 70-102.

2835. Graded or union schools. 1726. They may establish graded or union schools wherever they may be necessary, and may select a person who shall have the general supervision of the schools in their district, subject to the rules and regulations of the board. [R., § 2037; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 22.]

[As to what rules the board may make and enforce, see notes to § 2849.]

2836. Insurance. 19 G. A., ch. 149, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 107. The board of directors of all school districts organized under any of the laws of this state may use unappropriated contingent funds for the purpose of effecting an insurance on the school property of their district, but they may contract no debts for this purpose.

2838. County superintendent to enforce. 19 G. A., ch. 23, § 2. It shall be the duty of the county superintendent, in visiting the several schools in his county, to call the attention of any board of directors neglecting to comply with the requirements of this statute, and the required number of shade trees shall be planted as soon thereafter as the season will admit.

2839. Barb wire fences; removal. 20 G. A., ch. 103, § 1. It is hereby made the duty of the board of directors of every independent district and of every district township to remove before the first day of September, A. D. 1884, any barb wire fence inclosing in whole or part any public school grounds in such district, and it is also made the duty of any person owning or controlling any barbed wire fence within ten feet of any public school grounds to remove the same within the time herein above named.

2840. Prohibited. 20 G. A., ch. 103, § 2. Hereafter barb wire shall not be used in inclosing in whole or in part any public school building or the grounds upon which the same may stand; and no barbed wire shall be used for a fence or other purpose within ten feet of any public school ground.

2842. Number and length of schools; who attend. 1727. In each subdistrict there shall be taught one or more schools for the instruction of youth between the ages of five and twenty-one years, for at least twenty-four weeks, of five school days each, in each year, unless the county superintendent shall be satisfied that there is good and sufficient cause for failure so to do. Any person who was in the military service of the United States during his minority shall be admitted into the schools in the subdistrict in which he may reside, on the same terms on which youths between the ages of five and twenty-one are admitted. [R., § 2023; Same, § 12; 11 G. A., ch. 143, § 3.]

[As to teaching the effects of stimulants and narcotics, see §§ 2884-2886.]

The board has authority to direct that no school shall be taught in a certain subdistrict during a particular period, and a contract for the employment of a teacher made by the subdirector in violation of such provision will be void: Potter v. District T^p, 40-369.

The board may provide a school for less than twenty-four weeks in the year, with the assent of the county superintendent, and such assent may be obtained after the action of the board is had: Herrington v. District T^p, 47-11.

Where a district fails to provide school for 2843. Change of books. 1728. The board of directors of any district township or independent district, shall not order, or direct, or make any change in the school books, or series of text-books, used in any school under their superintendence, direction, or control, more than once in every period of three years, except by a vote of the electors of the district township or independent district. [14 G. A., ch. 80.]

2844. Contingent fund. 1729. They may use any unappropriated contingent fund in the treasury to purchase records, dictionaries, maps, charts, and apparatus for the use of the schools of their districts, but shall contract no debts for this purpose. [9 G. A., ch. 172, § 7.]

An unauthorized purchase of maps, apparatus, etc., will not bind the districts, nor will the use thereof in the schools be a ratification of such action, so as to make the district liable. A ratification to be binding would have the prescribed period, children residing therein may attend school in another district, by consent of the directors of the latter, and the district in which they reside will be responsible for their tuition, as provided in § 2912: District T^p v. District T^p, 49-231.

Though a person over twenty-one years of age is not entitled to attend school, yet if such person does attend he assumes all the duties of a scholar, and is as fully subject to discipline as one under that age: State v. Mizner, 45-248.

to be by formal action of the electors: Taylor v. District T^p, 25-447.

The board may contract, in proper cases, for the purchase of an organ out of any unappropriated funds on hand: Bellmeyer v. Independent Dist., 44-564.

2846. Bonds of officers. 1731. They shall require the secretary and treasurer to give bonds to the district in such penalty and with such security as they may deem necessary to secure the district against loss, conditioned for the faithful performance of their official duties. The bond shall be filed with the president, and in case of a breach of the conditions thereof, he shall bring suit thereon in the name of the district township, or independent district. [R., § 2037; C., '51, § 1144; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 24.]

The treasurer of a school district is absolutely liable for money coming into his hands by virtue of his office, regardless of the cause or circumstances of the loss. Proof of a special deposit of such money in a bank which afterwards becomes insolvent will not excuse him: District T^p v. Hardinbrook, 40-130.

The treasurer is absolutely liable on his bond for the performance of the duties of holding and paying out money, and will not be excused for loss by showing the exercise of due diligence and care: District T^p v. Morton, 37-550.

Nor will he be excused upon showing that the money was destroyed by inevitable accident: District T^p v. Smith, 39-9.

2847. Examine accounts of treasurer. 1732. They shall, from time to time, examine the accounts of the treasurer and make settlement with him; and shall present at each regular meeting of the electors of the district township, a full statement of the receipts and expenditures of the district township, and such other information as may be deemed important. [R., § 2037; C., '51, § 1146; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 25.]

2848. Audit claims; compensation. 1733. They shall audit and allow all just claims against the district, and fix the compensation of the secretary and treasurer, and no order shall be drawn on the treasury until the claim for which it is drawn has been audited and allowed. [R., § 2037; C., '51, § 1149; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 26.]

It is not a breach of duty on the part of the board to draw orders for a claim which has been audited and allowed, although the services for the claim as presented may not have been rendered: State v. Stiles, 40-148.

As no order can properly be drawn until the claim has been audited and allowed by the board, and as the board cannot audit and allow a claim until it has been presented, the presentation of the claim to the board is a condition precedent to the right of action thereon: District T'p v. District T'p, 56-85.

An order issued on a claim which has not been audited and allowed is void: National State Bank v. Independent Dist., 39-490.

Although the compensation of the treasurer is not fixed until after the expiration of his term, still he is bound by the amount allowed by the board, and cannot recover on the basis of a reasonable compensation: Wilson v. Independent Dist., 39-471.

Where no compensation has been allowed to the treasurer of a school district the sureties on his bond cannot, in an action against them for default of their principal, offset any claim for compensation on his part: Independent School District v. McDonald, 39-564.

As to orders, see notes to § 2854.

2849. Visit schools; make rules; discharge teachers. 1734. They shall visit the schools in their district, and aid the teachers in establishing and enforcing the rules for the government of the schools; and see that they keep a correct list of the pupils, embracing the periods of time during which they have attended school, the branches taught, and such other matters as may be required by the county superintendent. In case a teacher employed in any of the schools of the district township is found to be incompetent, or is guilty of partiality or dereliction in the discharge of his duties, or for any other sufficient cause shown, the board of directors may, after a full and fair investigation of the facts of the case, at a meeting convened for the purpose, at which the teacher shall be permitted to be present and make his defense, discharge him. [R., § 2037; C., '51, § 1147; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 27.]

Rules: A board of directors has no authority to punish a scholar by suspension for acts which are not contrary to any rules of the school, and are not in themselves immoral. Therefore, held, that the acts of the pupil in making a publication out of school tending to bring ridicule upon the board of directors was not such as to warrant the suspension of the pupil: Murphy v. Board of Directors, 30-429.

Rules of a board of directors providing for the suspension of a pupil for a certain number of absences or cases of tardiness, unexcused, are reasonable and may be enforced, even if the absence or tardiness is by the consent or direction of the parent: Burdick v. Babcock, 31-562.

Acts out of school hours which are detrimental to the best interests of the school may be forbidden: Ibid.

Such rules are constitutional as a delegation to school boards of the power given the legislature under Const., art. 9, § 8. (Per Cole, J.): Ibid.

Where the parent and the pupil united in the request that the pupil be excused from attendance during a certain part of the day, and from a certain study, held, that the teacher was not authorized to punish the pupil for failure to attend such part of the day, or to pursue such study, the only remedy being the expulsion of the pupil: State v. Mizner, 50-145.

A rule providing for expulsion of a pupil for failure to pay for damages done by him to school property, when his default is no breach of good order or good morals, is beyond the authority of school officers to promulgate or enforce: Perkins v. Board of Directors, 56-476.

Powers of teacher: The general doctrine is that the teacher may, for the maintenance of his authority and the enforcement of discipline, legally inflict chastisement upon a pupil: State v. Mizner, 45-248.

In a criminal prosecution against a teacher for assault and battery in punishing a scholar, the court should permit the defendant to prove that the whipping was a reasonable chastisement of the prosecuting witness as a pupil for misconduct, and leave it to the jury to determine whether or not the whipping was, under the circumstances, reasonable: Ibid.

Although it is only scholars between the ages of five and twenty-one years who have the right to attend public schools, yet, if a person over that age is allowed to become a scholar by sufferance or through misrepresentation, he thereby waives any privilege that his age confers, and the teacher has the same right of chastisement as to him that he has as to any other scholar: Ibid.

In a particular case, held, that it was proper to instruct the jury that in the absence of all proof the law presumes that a teacher punishes a pupil for a reasonable cause in a moderate and reasonable manner, but this presumption may be rebutted by the proof. Also that the legal object and purposes of punishment in school are like the object and purposes of the state in punishing a citizen. They are threefold: first, the reformation and the highest good of the pupil; second, the enforcement and maintenance of correct discipline in school; third, as an example to like evil-doers. And in no case can the punishment be justifiable unless it is inflicted for some definite offense which the pupil has committed and the pupil is given to understand what he is being punished for: State v. Mizner, 50-145.

Dismissal of teacher: Under a contract by which a teacher agreed to faithfully and impartially govern and instruct, etc., and to strictly conform to the rules and regulations established by the board, etc., and that the subdirector should have power to dismiss the teacher for a violation of any of the stipulations of the contract, held, that the teacher might be dismissed by the subdirector for failure to properly manage and control the school although not unfaithful in efforts to do so: Eastman v. District T'p, 21-590.

The action of a board of directors in discharging a teacher is judicial, and not ministerial: Smith v. District T'p, 42-522.

Where a teacher is discharged by the board without a full and fair investigation of the case at a meeting convened for that purpose, at which the teacher is permitted to be present and make defense as here required, the remedy of the teacher is by appeal to the county superintendent, and if he does not pursue such appeal he cannot recover in an action for damages for such improper discharge: Kirkpatrick v. Independent Dist., 53-585.

The power and duty imposed upon a board of directors with reference to the discharge of a teacher partakes of a judicial character, and the teacher who has been discharged by the board has no remedy in court until it has been determined by the county superintendent that the discharge was wrongful or unlawful. The parties are concluded as to the question involved in the controversy by the decision which shall be officially made in the proceedings: Park v. Independent School Dist., 65-209.

Pending the appeal by the teacher from the decision of the board discharging him, and the further appeal by the board from the decision of the county superintendent declaring such discharge invalid, the teacher is under no obligation to perform or offer to perform services required by his contract, but upon final decision by the superintendent of public instruction declaring the discharge illegal, he should perform or tender the performance of the duties remaining due from him under the contract in order to enable him to recover for breach of contract for that time: Ibid.

2850. Dismissal or suspension of pupil. 1735. The majority of the board in independent districts shall have power, with the concurrence of the president of the board of directors, to dismiss or suspend any pupils from the school in their district for gross immorality or for a persistent violation of the regulations or rules of the school, and to re-admit them if they deem proper so to do.

In district townships this power is in the subdirector: See § 2871. In regard to making and enforcing rules, see notes to preceding section.

2851. Certificate of election of officers. 1736. They shall, at their regular meeting in March of each year, require the secretary to file with the county superintendent, county auditor, and county treasurer each, a certificate of the election, qualification, and postoffice address of the president, treasurer, and secretary of the district township, and to advise them from time to time of any changes made in said offices by appointment. [9 G. A., ch. 172, § 2.]

2852. Rules for subdirectors. 1737. They shall make such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the direction and restriction of subdirectors in the discharge of their official duties, and not inconsistent with law. [Same, § 32.]

Held, that the board had authority to direct that no school should be taught in a certain subdistrict during the winter, and that a contract for the employment of a teacher, made by the subdirector in violation of such provision, was void: Potter v. District T'p, 40-369.

2853. Quorum; tax; boundaries; pay of officers. 1738. A majority of the board of directors shall be a quorum to transact business, but a less number may adjourn from time to time, and no tax shall be levied by the board after the third Monday in May; nor shall the boundaries of subdistricts be changed except by a vote of a majority of the board, nor shall the members of the board, except its secretary and treasurer, receive pay out of any school funds for services rendered under this chapter. [R., § 2038; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 34; 10 G. A., ch. 102, § 2.]

The assent of a majority of the members of the board, individually, to a proposition will not be binding. The action must be that of the board as such: Herrington v. District T^{wp}, 47-11.

Directors not being allowed compensation for their services, the board cannot employ one of its members to oversee and complete a contract for the erection of a school-house left unfinished by the contractor and bind the district to compensate him therefor: Moore v. Independent Dist., 55-654.

The provision as to the time within which a board of directors shall act with reference to the levy of the tax is mandatory, and any action by them after the time specified is void: Standard Coal Co. v. Independent Dist., 73-304.

As to dividing the district into subdistricts, or discontinuing such subdistricts, see § 2915 and notes.

PRESIDENT.

2854. President to preside, draw drafts, sign orders. 1739; 19 G. A., ch. 46. The president shall preside at all meetings of the board of directors of independent districts and of the district townships; shall draw all drafts on the county treasury for money apportioned to his district, sign all orders on the treasury, specifying in each order the fund on which it is drawn, and the use for which the money is appropriated, and shall sign all contracts made by the board; and shall be empowered to administer the oath of office to the secretary, treasurer, and members of the board. [R., § 2039; C., '51, §§ 1122-3; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 35.]

It is not essential that a judgment against a school district should specify the fund from which it is to be paid. The board must satisfy the same by orders drawn on the proper funds. It is the duty of the board to specify the fund from which payment is to be made or the amount to be paid from each fund, and the fact that plaintiff does not specify the fund, or that it is difficult to apportion the claim among different funds, is no defense: District T^{wp} v. Board of Directors, 52-287.

Where a warrant was given by one district township to another in settlement of a claim for taxes, held, that there was sufficient consideration therefor, and the receipt by plaintiff of a portion of the taxes, in lieu of which the warrant was given, would not estop plaintiff from suing on the warrant: District T^{wp} v. District T^{wp}, 52-153.

A school order is not a negotiable instrument: Shepherd v. District T^{wp}, 22-595; School Dist. v. Lombard, 2 Dillon, 493.

The president and secretary are not personally liable at the suit of an assignee of an order drawn by them on the treasurer, without authority, when they are induced to issue the same through fraud of the payee: Boardman v. Hayne, 29-339.

An assignee of an order is bound, at his peril, to ascertain whether or not officers issuing the same had authority to do so: Ibid.

A defense that warrants sued upon were issued to an amount in excess of the indebtedness for which they were issued may be urged against a bona fide assignee for value: Eastman v. District T^{wp}, 40-438.

A school district may be sued, and a judgment recovered on an order properly drawn and not paid. This is contemplated by § 2906. Mandamus is not the only, even if the proper, remedy: Cross v. District T^{wp}, 14-28.

2855. Represent district. 1740. He shall appear in behalf of his district in all suits brought by or against the same, but when he is individually a party this duty shall be performed by the secretary; and in all cases where suits may be instituted by or against any of the school officers to enforce any of the provisions herein contained, counsel may be employed by the board of directors. [R., § 2040; C., '51, § 1125; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 36.]

The president is not authorized by this section to employ counsel to represent the board in case of appeal from an order of the board: Templin v. District T^{wp}, 36-411.

SECRETARY.

2856. Keep records; countersign orders. 1741. The secretary shall record all the proceedings of the board and district meetings in separate books kept for that purpose; shall preserve copies of all reports made to the county superintendent; shall file all papers transmitted to him pertaining to the business of the district; shall countersign all drafts and orders drawn by the president, and shall keep a register of all orders drawn on the treasury, showing the number of the order, date, name of the person in whose favor drawn, the fund on which it is drawn, for what purpose, and the amount; and shall, from time to time, furnish the treasurer with a transcript of the same. [R., § 2041; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 37.]

Held, that a similar provision in the Code of 1851 was directory merely, and that the fact that the records were kept on loose sheets of paper would not render the proceedings void: Higgins v. Reed, 8-298.

2857. Notice of meetings. 1742. He shall give ten days' previous notice of the district township meeting, by posting a written notice in five conspicuous places therein, one of which shall be at or near the last place of meeting, and shall furnish a copy of the same to the teacher of each school in session, to be read in the presence of the pupils thereof, and such notice shall in all cases state the hour of meeting. [R., § 2043; C., '51, § 1129; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 38.]

2858. Keep accounts. 1743. He shall keep an accurate account of all the expenses incurred by the district, and shall present the same to the board of directors, to be audited and paid as herein provided. [R., § 2042; C., '51, § 1128; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 39.]

2859. Notify county superintendent. 1744. He shall notify the county superintendent when each school of the district begins and its length of term.

2860. Reports. 1745; 16 G. A., ch. 112, § 1; 19 G. A., ch. 23, § 3. Between the fifteenth and twentieth days of September in each year, the secretary of each school district shall file with the county superintendent a report of the affairs of the district, which shall contain the following items:

1. The number of persons, male and female each, in his district between the ages of five and twenty-one years;
2. The number of schools, and the branches taught;
3. The number of pupils, and the average attendance of the same in each school;
4. The number of teachers employed, and the average compensation paid per week, distinguishing males from females;
5. The length of school, in days, and the average cost of tuition per week for each pupil;

* * * * *

9. The text-books used, and the number of volumes in the district library, and the value of apparatus belonging to the district;

10. The number of school-houses and their estimated value;

11. The name, age, and postoffice address of each deaf and dumb, and each blind person within his district between the ages of five and twenty-one, including all who are blind or deaf to such an extent as to be unable to obtain an education in the common schools;

12. The number of trees set out and in thrifty condition on each school-house grounds. [R., § 2046; C., '51, §§ 1127-8; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 41; 14 G. A., ch. 114, § 2.]

2861. Penalty. 1746. Should the secretary fail to file his report as above directed, he shall forfeit the sum of twenty-five dollars, and shall make good all losses resulting from such failure, and suit shall be brought in both cases by the district on his official bond. [R., § 2047; C., '51, § 1137; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 42.]

TREASURER.

2862. Pay orders. 1747. The treasurer shall hold all moneys belonging to the district, and pay out the same on the order of the president, countersigned by the secretary, and shall keep a correct account of all expenses and receipts in a book provided for that purpose. [R., § 2048; C., '51, § 1138; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 43.]

The treasurer of a school district is an officer thereof in such sense that service of notice upon him is binding on the district: Kennedy v. Independent School Dist., 48-189.

The treasurer of a district township has no authority to bind the township by his contract or admissions: Carpenter v. District T'p, 58-335.

As to orders, see notes to § 2854.

As to liability of treasurer for money lost, etc., see notes to § 2846.

2863. Different funds; partial payments. 1748. The money collected by district tax for the erection of school-houses, and for the payment of debts contracted for the same, shall be called the "school-house fund;" that designed for rent, fuel, repairs, and all other contingent expenses necessary for keeping the school in operation, the "contingent fund;" and that received for the payment of teachers, the "teachers' fund;" and the district treasurer shall keep with each fund a separate account, and shall pay no order which does not specify the fund on which it is drawn and the specific use to which it is applied. If he have not sufficient funds in his hands to pay in full the warrants drawn on the fund specified, he shall make a partial payment thereon, paying as near as may be an equal proportion of each warrant. [R., § 2049; C., '51, § 1139; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 44.]

Lightning-rods are not such an expense as may be paid for out of the contingent fund, and an order for that purpose drawn upon such fund is prima facie invalid: Wolf v. Independent School Dist., 51-432; Monticello Bank v. District T'p, 51-350.

The payment of money out of the contingent fund to secure a highway to a schoolhouse is not unlawful: Independent Dist. v. Kelley, 55-568.

The provision as to partial payment applies to orders drawn to pay a judgment. The holder thereof cannot insist on its being satisfied in full to the exclusion of the other creditors: Chase v. Morrison, 40-620.

2864. Receive money. 1749. He shall receive all moneys apportioned to the district township by the county auditor, and also all money collected by the county treasurer on the district school tax levied for his district. [R., § 2050; C., '51, § 1140; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 45.]

2865. Register orders. 1750. He shall register all orders on the district treasury reported to him by the secretary, showing the number of the order, date, name of the person in whose favor drawn, the fund on which it is drawn, for what purpose, and the amount. [9 G. A., ch. 172, § 46.]

2866. Report to directors. 1751; 16 G. A., ch. 112, § 2. He shall render a statement of the finances of the district from time to time, as may be required by the board of directors, and his books shall always be open for inspection. He shall make to the board, on the third Monday in September, a full and complete annual report, embracing:

1st. The amount of teachers' fund held over, received, paid out, and on hand;

2d. The amount of contingent fund held over, received, paid out, and on hand;

3d. The amount of school-house fund held over, received, paid out, and on hand.

He shall immediately file a copy of said report with the county superintendent, and for failure to file said report, he shall forfeit the sum of twenty-five dollars to be recovered by suit brought by the district on his official bond. [R., § 2051; C., '51, § 1141; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 47.]

SUBDIRECTOR.

2867. Oath. 1752. Each subdirector shall, on or before the third Monday in March following his election, appear before some officer qualified to administer oaths, and take an oath to support the constitution of the United States, and that of the state of Iowa, and that he will faithfully discharge the duties of his office; and in case of failure to qualify, his office shall be deemed vacant. [R., §§ 2032, 2079; C., '51, §§ 1113, 1120; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 11.]

2868. Powers. 1753. The subdirector, under such rules and restrictions as the board of directors may prescribe, shall negotiate and make in his subdistrict all necessary contracts for providing fuel for schools, employing teachers, repairing and furnishing school-houses, and for making all other provisions necessary for the convenience and prosperity of the schools within his subdistrict, and he shall have the control and management of the school-house unless otherwise ordered by a vote of the district township meeting. All contracts made in conformity with the provisions of this section shall be approved by the president and reported to the board of directors, and said board, in their corporate capacity, shall be responsible for the performance of the same on the part of the district township. [R., § 2053; C., '51, §§ 1124, 1142; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 48.]

The district is bound by the contracts of the subdirector: Ahearn v. Independent Dist., 33-105.

The board may restrict the subdirector to the employment of a certain class of teachers, or prohibit his employing a certain specified teacher, where such teacher has proved unsatisfactory, and a contract made in violation of such restriction would be invalid: Thompson v. Linn, 35-361. And see Potter v. District Twp., 40-369.

The electors may authorize the use of the school-house for purposes of religious worship, etc. (notes to § 2823), and the subdirector may be compelled by mandamus to allow its use for such purposes in accordance with such vote: Davis v. Boget, 50-11.

The authority to repair the school-house does not authorize a contract to remodel or rebuild: See note to § 2832.

The board may regulate and restrict the action of subdirectors: See § 2852 and note.

2870. Report to secretary. 1755. He shall, between the tenth and fifteenth days of September of each year, report to the secretary of the district township the number of persons in his subdistrict between the ages of five and twenty-one years, distinguishing males from females. [9 G. A., ch. 172, § 50; 11 G. A., ch. 143, § 6.]

2871. Dismiss pupils with concurrence of directors. 1756. He shall have power, with the concurrence of the president of the board of directors, to dismiss any pupil from the schools in his subdistrict for gross immorality, or for persistent violation of the regulations of the school, and to re-admit them, if he deems proper so to do; and shall visit the schools in his subdistrict at least twice during each term of said school. [R., § 2054; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 51.]

[As to rules, etc., and dismissal or suspension of scholars, see § 2850 and notes to § 2849.]

2872. Contracts with teachers. 1757; 22 G. A., ch. 60. All contracts with teachers shall be in writing, specifying the length of time the school is to be taught, in weeks; the compensation per week, or per month of four weeks, and such other matters as may be agreed upon; and shall be signed by the subdirector or secretary and teacher, and be approved by and filed with the president before the teacher enters upon the discharge of his duties; and a copy of all such contracts shall also be filed with the secretary of the board by the subdirector, before the teacher enters upon the discharge of his duties. [R., § 2055; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 52.]

The approval of the president is essential, and a resolution of the board for the employment of a teacher will not be binding, nor amount to a valid ratification of a previous contract: Gambrell v. District Twp., 54-417.

A contract of directors with a teacher, even though originally not binding, because not properly executed, will be ratified and become binding by partial payment to the teacher who has properly performed his contract, such payment being in accordance with the terms of the contract for services rendered under it with knowledge of the facts and without dissent: Athearn v. Independent Dist., 33-105.

Where a verbal contract of employment of a teacher was partly performed on each side, held, that there was such ratification by the district as to be binding upon it: Cook v. Independent School Dist., 40-444.

Where the contract was signed the day school commenced and left with the subdirector, held, that it was his duty to file it with the president and secure his approval, and the teacher being permitted to enter upon the performance of her duties might presume that it was approved; and that the absence of such approval would not deprive her of the right to recover compensation thereunder: Conner v. District T^p, 35-375.

A contract of a teacher with a person assuming to be a subdirector, but not so either de facto or de jure, as the teacher knew or had reason to believe, held not to be binding upon the district: Bennett v. District T^p, 53-687.

It is the duty of the president to determine whether the contract of the subdirector conforms to the provisions of law, and give or withhold his approval accordingly. If he withhold approval, though erroneously, the contract is incomplete. An action, however, may be maintained on the contract if it has been performed without objection on the part of the district, or part payment has been made thereunder for services rendered, or there have been other acts upon the part of the district evincing an intention to ratify the contract and waive its formal approval. But where the services were rendered after notification by the president that he would not approve the contract, and there is no proof that the services were accepted or the contract ratified, the mere rendering of the services will not entitle plaintiff to recover: Place v. District T^p, 56-573.

2873. Certificate. 1758. No person shall be employed to teach a common school which is to receive its distributive share of the school fund, unless he shall have a certificate of qualification signed by the county superintendent of the county in which the school is situated, or by some other officer duly authorized by law; and any teacher who commences teaching without such certificate, shall forfeit all claim to compensation for the time during which he teaches without such certificate. [R., § 2062; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 59.]

2874. Keep register. 1759. The teacher shall keep a correct daily register of the school, which shall exhibit the number or other designation thereof, township and county in which the school is kept; the day of the week, the month and year; the name, age, and attendance of each pupil, and the branches taught. When scholars reside in different districts, a register shall be kept for each district. [R., § 2062; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 60.]

2875. File copy with secretary. 1760. The teacher shall, immediately after the close of his school, file in the office of the secretary of the board of directors, a certified copy of the register aforesaid. [R., § 2062; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 61.]

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

2876. School month. 1761. A school month shall consist of four weeks of five school days each. [R., § 2077; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 74.]

2877. Institutes. 1762. During the time of holding a teachers' institute in any county, any school that may be in session in such county shall be closed; and all teachers, and persons desiring a teacher's certificate, shall attend such institute, or present to the county superintendent satisfactory reasons for not so attending, before receiving such certificate. [L. B. E., 1861.]

2878. Foreign language. 1763. The electors of any school district at any legally called school meeting, may, by a vote of a majority of the electors present, direct the German or other language to be taught as a branch in one or more of the schools of said district, to the scholars attending the same whose parents or guardians may so desire; and thereupon such board of directors shall provide that the same be done; provided, that all other branches taught in said school or schools shall be taught in the English language; provided, further, that the person employed in teaching the said branches shall satisfy the county superintendent of his ability and qualifications, and receive from him a certificate to that effect. [Same.]

2879. Bible. 1764. The Bible shall not be excluded from any school or institution in this state, nor shall any pupil be required to read it contrary to the wishes of his parent or guardian. [R., § 2119.]

It is a matter of individual option with school teachers as to whether they will read the Bible in school or not, such option being restricted only by the provision that no pupil shall be required to read it contrary to the wishes of his parent or guardian, and such provision is not unconstitutional: Moore v. Monroe, 64-367.

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT.

2880. Cannot hold another office. 1765. The county superintendent shall not hold any office in, or be a member of the board of directors of a district township or independent district, or of the board of supervisors during the time of his incumbency.

Women are eligible to the office: See §§ 2828, 2829.

2881. Examination of teachers. 1766; 17 G. A., ch. 143. On the last Saturday of each month, the county superintendent shall meet all persons desirous of passing an examination, and for the transaction of other business within his jurisdiction, in some suitable room provided for that purpose by the board of supervisors at the county seat, at which time he shall examine all such applicants for examination as to their competency and ability to teach orthography, reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, English grammar, physiology, and history of the United States; and in making such examination he may, at his option, call to his aid one or more assistants. Teachers exclusively teaching music, drawing, penmanship, book-keeping, German or other language, shall not be required to be examined except in reference to such special branch, and in such case it shall not be lawful to employ them to teach any branch, except such as they shall be examined upon and which shall be stated in the certificate. [R., §§ 2066, 2068; C., '51, § 1148; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 64; 11 G. A., ch. 143, § 7.]

There is no authority for the superintendent charging the county for examining teachers on any other days than those here specified. (See § 2887): Farrell v. Webster County, 42-248.

2882. Certificates. 1767. If the examination is satisfactory, and the superintendent is satisfied that the respective applicants possess a good moral character, and the essential qualifications for governing and instructing children and youth, he shall give them a certificate to that effect, for a term not exceeding one year. [R., § 2067; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 65.]

[As to state board of examiners and the certificate thereof, see §§ 2598-2606.]

It is discretionary with the superintendent to grant a certificate, and he cannot be compelled to do so by mandamus: Bailey v. Ewart, 52-111.

2883. Record. 1768. Any school officer or other person shall be permitted to be present at the examination; and the superintendent shall make a record of the name, residence, age, and date of examination of all persons so examined, distinguishing between those to whom he issued certificates, and those rejected. [9 G. A., ch. 172, § 66.]

2884. Physiology; stimulants and narcotics. 21 G. A., ch. 1, § 1. Physiology and hygiene, which must in each division of the subject thereof include special reference to the effects of alcoholic drinks, stimulants and narcotics upon the human system shall be included in the branches of study now and hereafter required to be regularly taught to and studied by all pupils in common schools and in all normal institutes, and normal and industrial schools and the schools at the soldiers' orphans' home, and home for indigent children.

2885. Duty of officers. 21 G. A., ch. 1, § 2. It shall be the duty of all boards of directors of schools and of boards of trustees, and of county superintendents in the case of normal institutes, to see to the observance of this statute and make provision therefor and it is especially enjoined on the county superintendent of each county that he include in his report to the superintendent of public instruction the manner and extent to which the requirements of section one of this act [§ 2884] are complied with in the schools and institutes under his charge, and the secretary of school boards in cities and towns is especially charged with the duty of reporting to the superintendent of public instruction as to the observance of said section one hereof, in their respective town and city schools, and only such schools and educational institutions reporting compliance, as above required, shall receive the proportion of school funds or allowance of public money to which they would be otherwise entitled.

2886. Examinations. 21 G. A., ch. 1, § 3. The county superintendent shall not after the first day of July 1887 issue a certificate to any person who has not passed a satisfactory examination in physiology and hygiene with especial reference to the effects of alcoholic drinks, stimulants and narcotics upon the human system, and it shall be the duty of the county superintendent as provided by section one thousand seven hundred and seventy-one [§ 2889] to revoke the certificate of any teacher required by law to have a certificate of qualification from the county superintendent, if the said teacher shall fail or neglect to comply with section one of this act [§ 2884], and said teacher shall be disqualified for teaching in any public school for one year after such revocation, and shall not be permitted to teach without compliance.

2887. Normal institute. 1769; 15 G. A., ch. 57; 17 G. A., ch. 54. The county superintendent shall hold, annually, a normal institute for the instruction of teachers and those who may desire to teach, and with the concurrence of the superintendent of public instruction procure such assistance as may be necessary to conduct the same, at such time as the schools in the county are generally closed. To defray the expenses of said institute, he shall require the payment of a registration fee of one dollar from each person attending the normal institutes, and shall also require the payment, in all cases, of one dollar from every applicant for a certificate. He shall monthly, and at the close of each institute, transmit to the county treasurer all moneys so received, including the state appropriation for institutes, to be designated the "institute fund," together with a report of the name of each person so contributing, and the amount. The board of supervisors may appropriate such additional sum as may by them be deemed necessary for the further support of such institute. All disbursements of the institute fund shall be upon the order of the county superintendent; and no order shall be drawn except for bills presented to the county superintendent and approved by him for services rendered, or expenses incurred, in connection with the normal institute.

2888. Deputy. 1770. If, for any cause, the county superintendent is unable to attend to his official duties, he shall appoint a deputy to perform them in his stead, except visiting schools and trying appeals. [R., § 2069; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 68.]

2889. Revocation of certificate. 1771. The superintendent may revoke the certificate of any teacher in the county which was given by the superintendent thereof, for any reason which would have justified the withholding thereof when the same was given, after an investigation of the facts in the case, of which investigation the teacher shall have personal notice, and he shall be permitted to be present and make his defense. [R., § 2070; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 69; 14 G. A., ch. 133, § 2.]

[As to revocation of certificate for failure of teacher to comply with the law with reference to instruction as to the effects of stimulants and narcotics, see § 2886.]

The superintendent cannot, by injunction, from paying for such services; but it seems a restraint a teacher whose certificate he has revoked, from teaching school, nor the officers resident of the district might do so: Perkins v. Wolf, 17-228.

2890. Report. 1772. On the first Tuesday of October of each year, he shall make a report to the superintendent of public instruction, containing a full abstract of the reports made to him by the respective district secretaries, and such other matters as he shall be directed to report by said superintendent, and as he himself may deem essential in exhibiting the true condition of the schools under his charge; and he shall, at the same time, file with the county auditor a statement of the number of persons between the ages of five and twenty-one years in each school district in his county. [R., § 2071; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 70; 11 G. A., ch. 143, § 12.]

2892. Duties. 1774; 19 G. A., ch. 161, § 2. He shall at all times conform to the instructions of the superintendent of public instruction, as to matters within the jurisdiction of the said superintendent. He shall serve as the organ of communication between the superintendent and township or district authorities. He shall transmit to the townships, districts, or teachers, all blanks, circulars, and other communications which are to them directed; he may, at his discretion, visit the different schools in his county, and shall, at the request of a majority of the directors of a district, visit the school in said district at least once during each term. [R., § 2073; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 72; 10 G. A., ch. 102, § 4.]

2893. Report as to blind and deaf. 1775. He shall report on the first Tuesday of October of each year to the superintendent of the Iowa college for the blind the name, age, residence, and postoffice address of every person blind to such an extent as to be unable to acquire an education in the common schools, and who resides in the county in which he is superintendent, and also to the superintendent of the Iowa institution for the deaf and dumb, the name, age, and postoffice address of every deaf and dumb person between the ages of five and twenty-one who resides within his county, including all such persons as may be deaf to such an extent as to be unable to acquire an education in the common schools. [13 G. A., ch. 31; 14 G. A., ch. 114, § 1.]

2894. Compensation. 1776; 19 G. A., ch. 161, § 1. The county superintendent shall receive from the county treasurer the sum of four dollars per day for every day necessarily engaged in the performance of official duties, and also the necessary stationery, and postage for the use of his office, and he shall be entitled to such additional compensation as the board of supervisors may allow; provided, that he shall first file a sworn statement of the time he has been employed in his official duties with the county auditor. [R., § 2074; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 73; 11 G. A., ch. 143, § 8.]

The sworn statement of the superintendent amount so shown to be due: Bean v. Board of Supervisors, 51-53.
not be compelled by mandamus to allow the TAXES.

2895. Board of directors to estimate. 1777. The board of directors shall, at their regular meeting in March of each year, or at a special meeting convened for that purpose, between the time designated for such regular meeting and the third Monday in May, estimate the amount required for the contingent fund, and also such sum as may be required for the teachers' fund, in addition to the amount received from the semi-annual apportionment, as shown by the notice from the county auditor, to support the schools of the district for the time required by law for the current year; and shall cause the secretary to certify the same, together with the amount voted for school-house purposes, within five days thereafter to the board of supervisors, who shall, at the time of levying taxes for county purposes, subject to the provisions of section seventeen hundred and eighty of this chapter [§ 2898] levy the per centum necessary to raise the sum thus certified upon the property of the district township, which shall be collected and paid over as are other district taxes. [R., §§ 2037, 2044; 9 G. A., ch. 172, §§ 31, 40; 11 G. A., ch. 143, § 14; 14 G. A., ch. 132.]

The directors are only to determine and certify what amount of contingent fund is necessary to meet contracts which they are authorized to make; but they cannot include therein an amount to meet a contract for apparatus for which they are not authorized to contract any debt: Manning v. District T'p, 28-332.

The duty of the board of supervisors to levy the tax so certified is purely ministerial. When each of two districts claims certain territory, and asks a levy accordingly, the board cannot investigate as to the legality of organization, etc., but must make the levy asked by the one first taking steps to organize: Independent Dist. v. Board of Supervisors, 51-658.

The board of directors, and not the electors, are authorized to fix the rates to be levied for the teachers' and contingent fund. Action of the latter in such matter is void: Cedar Rapids & M. R. R. Co. v. Carroll County, 41-153, 179.

Although the tax must be levied by the board of supervisors, their action is based solely upon the action of the board of directors, and if the action of the board of directors is void because made after the date specified by § 2853, the levy by the supervisors will be of no effect: Standard Coal Co. v. Independent Dist., 73-304.

Where certain lands in one township were set over into another for school purposes and both townships certified a percentage of tax for school purposes differing in amount, and the township in which the lands were situated received the money under its levy and the other levy was never collected, held, that as the tax collected was not the one levied by the township to which the lands were attached, the latter could not maintain an action for money had and received against the former on account of the tax collected: District T'p v. District T'p, 27-323.

2896. Apportionment of school-house tax; limitation. 1778. They shall apportion any tax voted by the district township meeting for school-house fund, among the several subdistricts in such a manner as justice and equity may require, taking as the basis of such apportionment the respective amounts previously levied upon said subdistricts for the use of such fund; provided, that if the electors of one or more subdistricts at their last annual meeting shall have voted to raise a sum for school-house purposes greater than that granted by the electors at the last annual meeting of the district township, they shall estimate the amount of such excess on such subdistrict or subdistricts, and cause the secretary to certify the same within five days thereafter to the board of supervisors, who shall, at the time of levying taxes for county purposes, levy the per centum of such excess on the taxable property of the subdistrict asking the same, provided that not more than fifteen mills on the dollar shall be levied on the taxable property of any subdistrict for any one year for school-house purposes. [R., §§ 2033-4, 2037, 2088; 9 G. A., ch. 172, §§ 17, 30; 11 G. A., ch. 143, §§ 4, 5; 12 G. A., ch. 183.]

The duty of determining what is a just and equitable apportionment of the school-house fund rests, at least in the first instance, upon the board. They can be compelled to act, but their discretion cannot be controlled: Cooper v. Nelson, 38-440, 445.

The provision with reference to taxes voted by electors of subdistricts for school-house purposes gives implied authority to vote such taxes, although the power is not elsewhere expressly conferred: Wood v. Farmer, 69-533.

2897. School tax levy. 1779. The board of supervisors of each county, shall, at the time of levying the taxes for county purposes, levy a tax for the support of schools within the county of not less than one mill, nor more than three mills on the dollar, on the assessed value of all the real and personal property within the county, which shall be collected by the county treasurer at the time and in the same manner as state and county taxes are collected, except that it shall be receivable only in cash. [R., §§ 2057, 2059; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 53.]

2898. District tax; levy; limit. 1780. They shall also levy at the same time, the district school tax certified to them from time to time by the respective district secretaries; provided, that the amount levied for school-house fund shall not exceed ten mills on the dollar on the property of any district, and the amount levied for contingent fund shall not exceed five dollars per pupil, and the amount raised for teachers' fund, including the amount received from the semi-annual apportionment, shall not exceed fifteen dollars per pupil for each pupil residing in the district, as shown by the last report of the county superintendent. And if the amount certified to the board of supervisors exceeds this limit, they shall levy only to the amount limited; provided, that they may levy seventy-five dollars for contingent fund, and two hundred and seventy dollars, including the amount received for the semi-annual apportionment, for the teachers' fund for each subdistrict. [9 G. A., ch. 172, § 54; 14 G. A., chs. 21, 132.]

The provision as to the levy of the tax by the board of supervisors is directory, and if the levy is not made at the proper time it may be made at the time fixed for making the succeeding tax levy: Perrin v. Benson, 49-325.

The limit of taxation for school-house fund of ten mills on a dollar includes the tax to pay judgments, as provided for under § 2906, and that section does not authorize the levying of a tax beyond the limit of this section: Sterling School Furniture Co. v. Harvey, 45-466.

The limitation of taxation to ten mills does not limit the amount which may be voted to pay interest upon a bonded debt contracted for school-house purposes by vote of the electors of an independent district; and where the electors have failed to vote a sufficient tax to pay interest on the outstanding bonds it is lawful for the supervisors to do so: Richards v. Supervisors, 69-612.

There is no fixed limit to the rate of taxation when it is necessary to raise funds to meet the interest and principal of bonds lawfully issued under authority of a vote of the electors of the school district. The supervisors may be compelled to levy any tax for that purpose certified to by the directors: United States ex rel. v. Board of Directors, 20 Fed. Rep., 294.

Where a new township was formed in March and a tax levied therein, held, that in the absence of proof that said tax exceeded the limit imposed by statute it was legal, although the report of the county superintendent, being made before the creation of the township, did not show the number of pupils therein: Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kossuth County, 41-57.

Where one school district is organized out of part of the territory included in another, and the entire amount of the taxes is received by the old district, an action for money had and received can be maintained against it by the new district: District T'p v. District T'p, 11-505.

Where, in the division of a school district, it was provided that one district should recover taxes due from property included in another district, held, that the district entitled to such taxes might draw the same, and that the other district, in wrongfully drawing them from the county treasurer, did not become trustee of an express or implied trust: District T'p v. District T'p, 62-62.

Two other school districts having been carved out of an original school district, and the agreement being that the original school district should collect taxes then due and make certain application thereof, held, that it was entitled to the proceeds of a railroad tax which should have been assessed prior to that time by the county board of supervisors, but was not in fact assessed until afterward: District T'p v. District T'p, 49-183.

Where the treasurer in refunding a school district tax illegally exacted improperly refunded it all out of the taxes due to one of three districts, which had been formed out of the territory of the original district to which the illegal tax had been paid, held, that such district might maintain an action for contribution against the other districts: District T'p v. District T'p, 56-85.

It seems that where a district township has exercised jurisdiction over certain territory claimed by another district, by collecting taxes therefrom and providing schools for the children therein for several years, during a portion of which time the other district has withheld its school privileges from such children and made no claim to said territory, the latter will be estopped from afterward asserting a claim to the territory in dispute: Independent School Dist. v. Hobson, 25-275.

2899. Districts in two counties. 15 G. A., ch. 67, § 1. All school districts lying in two adjoining counties shall have the right to vote mills instead of specific sums for school purposes.

COUNTY AUDITOR.

2900. Apportionment of taxes and interest. 1781. The county auditor shall, on the first Monday in April and the fourth Monday in September of each year, apportion the county school tax, together with the interest of the permanent school fund to which his county is entitled, and all other money in the hands of the county treasurer belonging in common to the schools of his county and not included in any previous apportionment, among the several subdistricts therein, in proportion to the number of persons between five and twenty-one years of age, as shown by the report of the county superintendent filed with him for the year immediately preceding. [R., § 2060; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 55.]

2901. Notice. 1782. He shall immediately notify the president of each school district of the sum to which his district is entitled by said apportionment, and shall issue his warrant for the same to accompany said notice, which warrant shall be also signed by the president and countersigned by the secretary of the district in whose favor the same is drawn; and shall authorize the district treasurer to draw the amount due said district from the county treasurer; and the secretary shall charge the treasurer of the district with all warrants drawn in his favor, and credit him with all warrants drawn on the funds in his hands, keeping separate accounts with each fund. [R., § 2061; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 56.]

2902. Report to auditor of state. 1783. He shall forward to the superintendent of public instruction, a certificate of the election or appointment and qualification of the county superintendent; and shall, also, on the second Monday in February and August of each year, make out and transmit to the auditor of state, in accordance with such form as said auditor may prescribe, a report of the interest of the school fund then in the hands of the county treasurer, and not included in any previous apportionment; and also the amount of said interest remaining unpaid. [9 G. A., ch. 172, § 57.]

COUNTY TREASURER.

2903. Pay over taxes. 1784. The county treasurer shall, on the first Monday in April of each year, pay over to the treasurer of the district the amount of all school district tax which shall have been collected, and shall render him a statement of the amount uncollected, and shall pay over the amount in his hand quarterly thereafter. He shall also keep the amount of tax levied for school-house purposes, separate in each subdistrict, where such levy has been made directly upon the property of the sub-district making the application, and shall pay over the same quarterly to the township treasurer for the benefit of such subdistrict. He shall, in all counties wherein independent districts are organized, keep a separate account with said independent districts, in which the receipts shall be daily entered, which books shall at all times be open to the inspection and examination of the district board of directors, and shall pay over to the said independent districts the amount of school taxes in his possession on the order of the board, on the first day of each and every month. [9 G. A., ch. 172, § 58; 10 G. A., ch. 102; 12 G. A., ch. 29.]

2904. Notice of tax collected. 1785. On the first day of each quarter, the county treasurer shall give notice to the president of the school board of each township in his county of the amount collected for each fund; and the president of each board shall draw his warrant, countersigned by the secretary, upon the county treasurer for such amount, who shall pay the amount of such taxes to the treasurers of the several school boards only on such warrants. [12 G. A., ch. 122.]

MISCELLANEOUS.

2905. Fines and penalties. 1786. All fines and penalties collected from a school district officer by virtue of any of the provisions of this chapter, shall inure to the benefit of that particular district. Those collected from any member of the board of directors, shall belong to the district township, and those collected from county officers, to the county. In the two former cases, suit shall be brought in the name of the district township; in the latter, in the name of the county, and by the district [county] attorney. The amount in each case shall be added to the fund next to be applied by the recipient for the use of common schools. [R., § 2081; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 77.]

2906. Judgments. 1787. When a judgment has been obtained against a school district, the board of directors shall pay off and satisfy the same from the proper fund, by an order on the treasurer; and the district meeting at the time for voting a tax for the payment of other liabilities of the district shall provide for the payment of such order or orders. [R., § 2095; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 79.]

[As to issuing bonds to pay off judgment or bonded indebtedness, see §§ 2965-2974.]

The issuance of the order on the treasurer does not satisfy the judgment. The district is required to vote a tax to pay such orders, but if it fail to do so the board of directors of the district may be compelled by mandamus to levy such tax: Boynon v. District Tp, 34-510.

The issuance of an order upon the treasurer does not amount to a payment of a debt or judgment of the school district, but where an order has been issued to pay a demand upon the district and there are no funds in the treasury to pay such order, the board may be compelled by mandamus to take measures for the levy of a tax to provide the necessary funds: Stevenson v. District Tp, 35-462.

The recovery of a judgment against a school district does not entitle the creditor to have all the funds of the district applied to his judgment to the exclusion of other creditors. He can only have a pro rata allowance out of such funds, but he may, by mandamus, compel the levy of a special tax up to the maximum limit for the payment of his judgment: Chase v. Morrison, 40-620.

This section contemplates the right of a creditor to a judgment against a school district, and the issuance to him of an order in payment of his claim does not prevent his obtaining judgment, nor is he required to resort first to an action of mandamus to enforce the levying and collection of a tax: Cross v. District Tp, 14-28.

That the board cannot accurately specify the amount which should be paid from each fund is no excuse for not issuing orders in payment of a judgment: District Tp v. Board of Directors, 52-237.

This section does not authorize the levy of a tax in excess of the ten-mill limit: See § 2398 and notes.

2907. Tax to pay money borrowed. 1788. In case a school district has borrowed money of the school fund, the board of supervisors shall levy such tax, not exceeding five mills on the dollar in any one year, on the taxable property of the district as constituted at the time of making such loan, as may be necessary to pay the annual interest on said loan, and the principal when the same falls due, unless the board of supervisors shall see proper to extend the time of said loan. [R., § 2092; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 80.]

2908. Hours of meeting and adjourning. 1789; 22 G. A., ch. 51. No district township or subdistrict meeting shall organize earlier than nine o'clock a. m., nor adjourn before twelve o'clock m., and in all independent districts having a population of three hundred and upward, the polls shall remain open from twelve o'clock m. to seven o'clock, p. m. [9 G. A., ch. 172, § 81.]

Where an election is not ordered and held during the hours specified, the action of the electors thereat is void: District Tp v. Independent Dist., 34-306; and see note to § 2826.

2909. Oaths. 1790. Any school director, or director elect, is authorized to administer to any school director elect the official oath required by law, and said official oath may be taken on or before the third Monday in March following the election of directors.

2910. Delivering records, money, etc. 1791. When any school officer is superseded by election or otherwise, he shall immediately deliver to his successor in office, all books, papers, and moneys pertaining to his office, taking a receipt therefor; and every such officer who shall refuse to do so, or who shall wilfully mutilate or destroy any such books or papers, or any part thereof, or shall misapply any moneys intrusted to him by virtue of his office, shall be liable to the provisions of the general statutes for the punishment of such offense. [R., § 2080; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 82.]

2911. Jurisdiction. 1792. Nothing in this chapter shall be so construed as to give the board of directors of a district township jurisdiction over any territory included within the limits of any independent district. [R., § 2085; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 83.]

2912. Children attending in another district. 1793; 16 G. A., ch. 64; 17 G. A., ch. 41. Children residing in one district may attend school in another in the same or adjoining county or township, on such terms as may be agreed upon by the respective boards of directors; but in case no such agreement is made, they may attend school in any such adjoining district, with the consent of the county superintendent of the county where said pupil resides and the board of directors of said adjoining district, when they reside nearer the school in said district, and one and a half miles or more, by the nearest traveled highway, from any school in their own. The board of directors of the township, in which such children reside, shall be notified in writing, and the district in which they reside shall pay to the district in which they attend school, the average tuition of said children per week, and an average proportion of the contingent expenses of said district where they attend school; and in case of refusal so to do, the secretary shall file the account for said tuition and contingent expenses, certified to by the president of his board, with the county auditor of the county, in which said children reside, and the said county auditor shall at the time of making the next semi-annual apportionment thereafter, deduct the amount so certified, from the sum apportioned to the district in which said children reside, and cause it to be paid over to the district in which they have attended school. [R., § 2024; C., '51, § 1143; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 13.]

When a district fails to provide school for the period prescribed in § 2842, children residing therein may attend school in another district as here provided, and the district where they reside will be liable for their tuition; and where, upon being notified in writing, the directors of the district where children resided, at a meeting called to consider the question, determined not to pay such tuition, held, that demand on them before filing the account with the auditor was unnecessary: District Tp v. District Tp, 49-231.

2913. Residence of pupils. 1794. Pupils who are actual residents of a district shall be permitted to attend school in the same, regardless of the time when they acquired such residence, whether before or after the enumeration, or of the residence of their parents or guardians; but pupils who are sojourning temporarily in one district, while their actual residence is in another, and to whom the last preceding section is not applicable, may attend school upon such terms as the board of directors may deem just and equitable. [9 G. A., ch. 172, § 14.]

2914. Pupils; where attend school. 1795. Pupils may attend school in any subdistrict of the district township in which they reside with the consent of the subdirector of such subdistrict, and of the subdirector of the subdistrict in which such pupils reside. [Same, § 15.]

2915. Divide townships. 1796. The board of directors shall, at their regular meeting in September, or at any special meeting called thereafter for that purpose, divide their townships into subdistricts, such as justice, equity, and the interests of the people require; and may make such alterations of the boundaries of subdistricts heretofore formed, as may be deemed necessary; and shall designate such subdistricts, and all subsequent alterations, in a distinct and legible manner, upon a plat of the district provided for that purpose; and shall cause a written description of the same to be recorded in the district records, a copy of which shall be delivered by the secretary to the county treasurer, and also to the county auditor, who shall record the same in his office; provided, that the boundaries of subdistricts shall conform to the lines of congressional divisions of land; and that the formation and alteration of subdistricts as contemplated in this section, shall not take effect until the next subdistrict election thereafter, at which election a subdirector shall be elected for the new subdistrict. [Same, § 29.]

The district board may in the exercise of its discretion change the subdistricts and dispense with a new district previously created, if, in the exercise of its legal discretion, it finds such action to be to the best interest of all parts of the district: Morgan v. Wilfley, 70-233.

Where an election to determine whether the subdistricts of a district township should be made independent districts under §§ 2950-2955 was ordered, and before it was held a new subdistrict was formed, held, that the subsequent election at which the subdistricts were constituted independent districts applied also to the new district, although it had not yet elected a director: Independent School Dist. v. Independent School Dist., 48-157.

The provisions as to change of boundaries of subdistricts does not apply to independent districts, the boundaries of which can be changed, if at all, only under other statutory provisions: Eason v. Douglass, 55-390; Independent Dist. v. Independent Dist., 65-590.

Where a restoration of territory is agreed to, and no time fixed therefor, it will be considered as taking place the first of March following; and taxes collected prior to that time should be paid to the township to which the territory had previously been attached: District T^p v. Floete, 59-109.

2916. Where obstacles interfere. 1797. In cases where, by reason of streams or other natural obstacles, any portion of the inhabitants of any school district cannot, in the opinion of the county superintendent, with reasonable facility enjoy the advantages of any school in their township, the said county superintendent, with the consent of the board of directors of such district as may be affected thereby, may attach such part of said township to an adjoining township, and the order therefor shall be transmitted to the secretary of each district, and be by him recorded in his records, and the proper entry made on his plat of the district. [11 G. A., ch. 143, § 16; 13 G. A., ch. 94.]

There is now no authority for attaching territory situated within one district township to another district township for school purposes except as provided in case of streams or other natural obstacles: Large v. District T^p, 53-663.

The same rule existed prior to 11 G. A., ch. 143, § 16; and held, that the portion of that statute which legalized the organization of subdistricts previously formed in accordance therewith only legalized the incorporation of territory of one district township into the subdistrict of another township where streams or other obstacles existed, and that where no such ground was shown, the action of the directors of two townships in attaching part of one to another would not be valid, and the township to which territory was attached could not recover from the other township taxes collected within such territory: District T^p v. District T^p, 53-667.

To warrant the action of the county superintendent in attaching a portion of a district township to another township, the consent of the directors of the township from which the territory is detached, and the existence of natural obstacles, must both appear. Otherwise such action is unauthorized and void. Some action may, however, be legalized by a curative act. But the district township cannot be deprived, by such curative act, of taxes already levied on the territory at the time the transfer was made: Independent Dist. v. Independent Dist., 62-616.

Whether a portion of one district township which is annexed to another district township for school purposes is properly so annexed or not, taxes levied and collected upon the certificate of the township to which the territory is attached should be paid to such township, and not to the township to which the territory properly belongs: District T^p v. Floete, 59-109.

2917. Restoration of territory. 1798; 18 G. A., ch. 111; 19 G. A., ch. 160. In all cases where territory has been or may be set into an adjoining county or township, or attached to any independent school district in any adjoining county or township for school purposes, such territory may be restored by the concurrence of the respective board[s] of directors; but on the written application of two-thirds of the electors residing upon the territory within such township or independent district in which the school-house is not situated, the said boards shall restore the territory to the district to which it geographically belongs. Provided, however, that no such restoration shall be made unless there are fifteen or more pupils between the ages of five and twenty-one years actually residing upon said territory sought to be restored, and not until there has been a suitable school-house erected and completed within the limits of said territory suitable for school purposes. [14 G. A., ch. 125, § 1; 13 G. A., ch. 94.]

If one of the townships has no district board, the restoration cannot be made even upon the written application here provided for, as the concurrence of the board is necessary though they are given no discretion: Independent Dist. v. Durland, 45-43.

Where a restoration of territory is agreed to and no time fixed therefor, it will be considered as taking place the first of March following; and taxes collected prior to that time should be paid to the township to which the territory had previously been attached: District T'p v. Floete, 59-109.

The provision for restoration of territory applies as well to territory incorporated into an independent district at the time of its organization as to such as is subsequently attached thereto: Albin v. Board of Directors, 58-77.

This provision seems to be peremptory; and when two-thirds of the electors ask it to be done, or when the school-house has been removed, or when the territory is inhabited, it shall remain under the jurisdiction and form a part of the district township to which it geographically belongs, and the respective boards of directors in either case shall divide their districts accordingly. The refusal to make such divisions may be corrected on appeal under § 2985: Barnett v. Directors, 73-134.

Under a statute providing that a school district formed of parts of two or more civil townships should become disorganized and the portions of the different townships should fall to the jurisdiction of the townships to which they belong upon the removal of the school-house, held, that the tearing down or removal of the school-house in such a district for the purpose of the erection of another was not a removal such as would work the disorganization of the district: State v. McCormick, 37-142.

2918. District not to be divided. 1799. The boundary lines of a civil township shall not be changed by the board of supervisors of any county, so as to divide any school district by changing the boundary lines thereof, except when a majority of the voters of such district shall petition therefor; provided, however, that this shall not prevent the change of the boundary lines of any civil township, when such change is made by adopting the lines of congressional townships. [14 G. A., ch. 122.]

For similar provision as to dividing school districts, see § 516.

INDEPENDENT DISTRICTS.

2919. Contiguous territory included. 1800; 18 G. A., ch. 139. Any city, town or village containing not less than two hundred inhabitants within its limits, may be constituted a separate school district and territory contiguous to such city, town or village may be included with it as a part of said separate district in the manner hereinafter provided. The village herein mentioned shall be understood to be a collection of inhabitants residing within the limits of a town plat and not organized into a city or incorporated town. [R., §§ 2097, 2105; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 84; 12 G. A., ch. 28, § 1; 13 G. A., ch. 8, § 1.]

It is a prerequisite that there shall be the specified number of inhabitants, and that matter may be inquired into by quo warranto: State v. Independent School Dist., 29-264.

No village of less than two hundred inhabitants within its limits may be organized into an independent district. The inhabitants of contiguous territory are not to be added to the village proper in order to increase the number to two hundred: Allen v. District T'p, 70-436.

An independent district may be formed from territory lying in adjoining townships, either in the same or different counties, and no concurrent action of the school authorities of the two townships is necessary: Independent School Dist. v. Board of Supervisors, 25-305; District T'p v. Independent Dist., 41-30.

It is not essential that the boundaries of the city and the school district should coincide, and the extension of the limits of the city does not have the effect of enlarging the limits of the school district before existing: State v. Independent School Dist., 46-425.

The extent of the territory which may be included with the city or town in the independent district is not limited: Ft. Dodge City School Dist. v. District T'p, 15-434.

Whether territory is so contiguous to a town as to be properly included with it in the same independent district is a question to be settled, at least in the first instance, by the school officers: Independent Dist. v. Board of Supervisors, 51-658.

2920. What territory included. 19 G. A., ch. 118, § 1. All the territory of an incorporated city or town, whether included within the original incorporation or afterward attached thereto in accordance with the provisions of law, shall be or become a part of the independent district or districts of said city or town.

2921. Assets and liabilities. 19 G. A., ch. 118, § 2. When boundaries are changed by the taking effect of this act, the respective boards of directors shall make an equitable settlement of the then existing assets and liabilities of their districts, as provided for by section one thousand seven hundred and fifteen of the code [§ 2821].

2922. Vote of people. 1801. At the written request of any ten legal voters residing in such city or town, the board of directors of the district township shall establish the boundaries of the contemplated school district, including such contiguous territory as may best subscribe the convenience of the people for school purposes, and shall give at least ten days' previous notice of the time and place of meeting of the electors residing in said district, by posting written notices in at least five conspicuous places therein; at which meeting the said electors shall vote by ballot for or against a separate organization. [R., § 2098; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 85; 14 G. A., ch. 73, § 1.]

An election upon the question as to the organization of an independent district must be conducted as to the time of opening the polls, etc., according to the provisions as to other school elections, and if not so conducted the proceedings will be void: District T^{wp} v. Independent Dist., 34-306.

Where the question of a separate organization was submitted only to the voters within the city, and not to those within the territory included in the contemplated district, but outside of the city, the election was held void, although the majority in the city was greater than the total number of voters in such other territory: Fort Dodge City School Dist. v. District T^{wp}, 17-85.

Where territory is included in each of two independent districts the one first taking steps to organize is entitled to it: Independent Dist. v. Board of Supervisors, 51-658.

Where a subdistrict had been formed but no director elected, and in pursuance of steps taken before the formation of the new district the subdistricts of the township, including the new one, voted for organization into independent districts, and the new subdistrict then properly completed its organization as an independent district, held, that it was properly organized: Independent School Dist. v. Independent School Dist., 48-157.

Where the legislature legalized the organization of an independent district, held, that such legalization did not operate to make a part of the district territory which had previously been organized into a separate independent district: Ibid.

2923. Election of directors; organization of board. 1802; 15 G. A., ch. 27; 17 G. A., ch. 113; 18 G. A., ch. 143. Should a majority of votes be cast in favor of such separate organization, the board of directors of the district township shall give similar notice of a meeting of the electors for the election of six directors. Two of these directors shall hold their office until the first annual meeting after their election, and until their successors are elected and qualified, two until the second, and two until the third annual meeting thereafter, their respective terms of office to be determined by lot. The six directors shall constitute a board of directors for the district, and they shall, at their first regular meeting in each year, elect a president from their own number, and at their meeting on the third Monday of September in each year a secretary and treasurer, to be chosen outside of the board. Provided, that in all independent districts having a population of less than five hundred there shall be three directors elected, who shall organize by electing a president from their own number, also a secretary, who may or may not be a member of the board, and a treasurer who shall not be a member of the board. And provided further, that in all independent districts already organized the terms of office of such directors as may have been chosen previous to the taking effect of this section for two or three years shall not be interfered with by its passage. [R., §§ 2099, 2100, 2106; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 86; 12 G. A., ch. 28, § 2; 13 G. A., ch. 8, § 1; 14 G. A., ch. 76, § 1.]

[As to duty of directors with reference to barb wire fences around school grounds, see §§ 2839-2841. As to insuring school property, see § 2836. As to setting out shade trees, see §§ 2837, 2838. The board is required to make provision for teaching physiology and hygiene with special reference to stimulants and narcotics, and the secretary is to report to the superintendent of public instruction as to the observance of such provisions: See §§ 2884-2886.]

The treasurer is an officer of the district, under § 3817: Kennedy v. Independent School Dist., 48-189.

2924. Method of election. 1803. Said meeting for the first election of directors shall organize by appointing a president and secretary, who shall act as judges of the election and issue a certificate of election to the person elected. [9 G. A., ch. 172, § 87.]

2925. When organization completed; taxes. 1804. The organization of such independent district shall be completed on or before the first day of August of the year in which said organization is attempted, and when such organization is thus completed, all taxes levied by the board of directors of the district township of which the independent district formed a part in that year, shall be void so far as the property within the limits of the independent district is concerned; and the board of directors of such independent district shall levy all necessary taxes for school purposes as provided by law for that year at a meeting called for that purpose, at any time before the third Monday of August of that year, which shall be certified to the board of supervisors on or before the first Monday of September, and said board of supervisors shall levy said tax at the time and in the manner that school taxes are required to be levied in other districts. [11 G. A., ch. 143, § 11.]

Whether the organization of an independent district will render void taxes levied prior to such organization to pay debts for the erection of a school-house therein, quære; but such organization cannot prejudice the rights of a party having a valid claim against the whole district prior to such organization: Stevenson v. District T^{wp}, 35-462.

2926. District in two townships. 1805. In case such district is formed of parts of two or more civil townships in the same or adjoining counties, the duty of giving the notice shall devolve upon the board of directors of the township in which a majority of the legal voters of the contemplated district reside. [R., § 2105; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 88; 12 G. A., ch. 28, § 2.]

2927. Number of schools. 1806. Said district may have as many schools, and be divided into such wards or other subdivisions for school purposes, as the board of directors may deem proper; and shall be governed by the laws enacted for the regulation of district townships, so far as the same may be applicable. [R., § 2101; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 89.]

Contracts which the directors are authorized to make will be binding upon the district although executed by them individually and not while acting as a board. Their powers, etc., are the same as those of a subdirector under § 2868: Athearn v. Independent Dist., 33-105. The directors may authorize the teaching of music and contract for the purchase of an organ out of any unappropriated funds on hand: Bellmeyer v. Independent Dist., 44-564.

2928. Subdistricts. 22 G. A., ch. 61, § 1. The subdistricts of a district township may be constituted independent districts in the manner hereinafter provided.

2929. Meeting called. 22 G. A., ch. 61, § 2. At the written request of one-third of the legal voters in each subdistrict of any district township the board of directors shall call a meeting of the qualified electors of each subdistrict by giving at least thirty days' notice thereof by posting three written notices in each subdistrict in the township, at which meeting the electors shall vote by ballot for or against independent district organization.

2930. Majority vote. 22 G. A., ch. 61, § 3. If a majority of the votes cast in each subdistrict shall be favorable to such independent organization then each subdistrict shall become an independent district.

2931. Election of directors. 22 G. A., ch. 61, § 4. The board of directors of the old district township so voting shall then call a meeting in each independent district for the election of three or more directors as may be required by law, and the organization of the said independent district shall be completed and governed in the same manner as other and similar independent districts.

The formation of a subdistrict into an independent district cannot prejudice the rights of persons holding claims against the district township for compensation for building school-houses in the original subdistrict. So far as such creditors are concerned the district township is to be treated as if no part of it had been organized into independent districts: Stevenson v. District T'p, 35-462.

When a district township is thus divided into independent districts, the old district township ceases to exist: District T'p v. Independent Dist., 36-220.

The new independent district is not liable for the debts of the original subdistrict from which it is formed. Such debts, being claims against the district township, may be enforced by action against all the independent districts which have been formed out of it, and a judgment may be rendered against them jointly, which may be enforced against any one of them, leaving the question as to the apportionment of such judgment to be settled between the districts themselves: Knorrville Nat. Bank v. Independent Dist., 40-612; Independent School Dist. v. District Court, 48-182; Kennedy v. Independent School Dist., 48-189; District T'p v. District T'p, 52-73.

2932. Change of boundary line. 22 G. A., ch. 62, § 1. The boundary lines of contiguous independent districts within the same civil township, may be changed by concurrent action of the respective boards of directors at their regular meeting in September, or at special meetings thereafter called for that purpose; provided, that the district so formed, from which territory has been detached, shall not contain less than four government sections of land; and provided, further, that the boundary lines of said districts shall conform to the lines of congressional divisions of land.

Prior to the passage of this statute the board of directors of an independent district had no power to change its boundaries: Eason v.

Douglass, 55-390; Independent Dist. v. Independent Dist., 65-590.

2933. School-house tax. 1807; 21 G. A., ch. 131, § 1. It shall be lawful for the electors of any independent district, at the annual meeting of such district, to vote a tax, not exceeding ten mills on the dollar in any one year, on the taxable property of such district, as the meeting may deem sufficient for the purchase of grounds and the construction of the necessary school-houses for the use of such independent district, and for the payment of any debts contracted for the erection of such school-houses, and for procuring a library and apparatus for the use of the schools of such independent district. And said electors may direct the sale or other disposition to be made of any school-house or the site thereof or any part of such site and of such other property, real and personal as may belong to the independent district and direct the manner in which the proceeds arising therefrom shall be applied. [10 G. A., ch. 57.]

Where a levy of a three per cent. tax was made, it was held valid to the extent of one per cent. and void as to the excess: McPherson v. Foster, 43-48, 73.

The limitation of taxation to ten mills does not limit the amount which may be voted to pay interest upon a bonded debt created for school-house purposes by vote of the electors; and where the electors have failed to vote a sufficient tax to pay interest on the outstanding bonds, it is lawful for the supervisors to levy such tax: Richards v. Supervisors, 69-612.

2934. Certain acts legalized. 21 G. A., ch. 131, § 2. All acts of independent districts heretofore done in authorizing or making sales of real estate, where done as provided in paragraph two of section seventeen hundred and seventeen of the code of Iowa [§ 2823], or submitted and carried under section two of chapter eight of the laws of A. D. 1880, of Iowa [§ 2937], are hereby legalized and made valid in all respects as duly authorizing or making such sales and conveyances thereunder, the same as though said paragraph two of section seventeen hundred and seventeen of the code has been incorporated in and made part of said section eighteen hundred and seven [§ 2933].

2935. Election of directors. 1808; 18 G. A., ch. 7, § 2. The annual meeting of all independent districts shall be held on the second Monday in March for the transaction of the business of the district, and for the election by ballot of two directors, as the successors of the two whose term expires, who shall continue in office for three years; and the president, secretary, and one of the directors then in office shall act as judges of the election, and shall issue certificates of election to the persons elected for the ensuing term; provided, that in all independent districts, having a population of less than five hundred, there shall be elected, annually, one director, who shall continue in office for three years. In cases of a tie vote in the election of director or directors, the secretary shall notify them to appear at the regular meeting of the board on the third Monday in March to determine their election by lot before one or more members of the board elected, and the certificate of election shall be given accordingly. Should either party fail to appear or take part in the lot, the secretary shall draw for him. [9 G. A., ch. 172, § 90; 13 G. A., ch. 8, § 5; 14 G. A., ch. 76.]

2936. Election precincts. 18 G. A., ch. 8, § 1. Independent school districts having a population of not less than fifteen thousand inhabitants shall be divided into not less than three, nor more than six, election precincts, in each of which a poll shall be held at a convenient place, to be appointed by the board of directors, for the reception of the ballots of the electors residing in such precinct at said election.

2937. Questions submitted. 18 G. A., ch. 8, § 2. The board of directors shall provide for the submission of all questions relating to the powers reserved to the electors under section one thousand eight hundred and seven of the code [§ 2933], which questions shall be decided by ballot, returns to be made on questions submitted as hereinafter provided.

2938. Registration of voters. 18 G. A., ch. 8, § 3. A register of the electors residing in each precinct shall be prepared by the board of directors from the register of the electors for any city, town, or township, which is in whole or in part included within such independent school district; and, for that purpose, a copy of such register of electors shall be furnished by the clerk of each such city, town, or township, to the board of directors. Said board shall, in each year, before the annual election for directors, revise and correct such school election registers by comparison thereof with the last register of elections for such cities, towns, and townships; and the register provided for by this section shall have the same force and effect at elections held under this act and in respect to the reception of votes at said elections as the register of elections has by law at general elections.

2939. Notice of election. 18 G. A., ch. 8, § 4. Notice of every election under this act shall be given in each district in which the same is to be held, by the secretary thereof, by posting up the same in three public places in said district, and by publication in a newspaper published therein, for two weeks preceding such election; such notice shall also state the respective election precincts and the polling place in each precinct.

2940. Judges and clerks; opening and closing. 18 G. A., ch. 8, § 5. The board of directors shall appoint one of their own number and another elector of the district to act as judges of election, and a clerk for each polling place, who shall be sworn as provided by section six hundred and nine of the code [§ 1070] in case of general elections. The polls shall be open from nine o'clock A. M. to six o'clock P. M. If either of the judges or clerk fail to attend, his place may be filled by the others, by appointing an elector attending in his place, and, if all fail to attend in time, or refuse to serve or be sworn, the electors present shall choose two judges and a clerk from the electors attending. A ballot-box and the necessary poll book shall be provided by the board of directors for each precinct, and the election shall be conducted in the same manner, and under the same rules and regulations, so far as applicable, as, or [are] provided by chapter three, of title five of the code for general elections.

2941. Canvass; returns; certificate. 18 G. A., ch. 8, § 6. The judges of election and clerk in each precinct shall canvass the vote therein, and shall, as soon as possible, make out, sign and return, to the secretary of the district, a certificate showing the whole number of votes cast in such precinct, and the number of votes in favor of each person voted for, and questions submitted. The board of directors shall meet on the next Monday after the election and canvass the returns and ascertain the result of the election, the whole number of votes cast, and the number in favor of each person voted for shall be entered in their record, and the persons respectively receiving the highest two numbers of votes shall be declared elected, and all questions submitted, receiving a majority of votes cast, shall be recorded as carried. The secretary shall issue to each person so elected a certificate of his election.

2942. 18 G. A., ch. 8, § 7. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

2943. Remainder of township. 1809. When an independent district has been formed out of a civil township, or townships, as herein contemplated, the remainder of such township, or of each of such townships, as the case may be, shall constitute a district township as provided in section seventeen hundred and thirteen of this chapter [§ 2819], and the boundaries between such district township and independent district may be changed, or the independent district abandoned at any time, with the concurrence of their respective boards of directors. [R., § 2104; 9 G. A., ch. 172, § 9; 14 G. A., ch. 133, § 3.]

The power and jurisdiction to act with reference to a change of boundaries being here given to the board of directors of the district township, from which action an appeal will lie to the county superintendent, it is implied that when a proper application is made it is the duty of the board to act, and that duty may be enforced by mandamus at the suit of a private citizen, although they cannot be thus compelled to act in any particular manner: Hightower v. Overhauser, 65-347; District Twp v. Independent Dist., 72-687.

A party will not be estopped, by a refusal of the board to allow the application, from presenting a subsequent application, and insisting upon its consideration: Hightower v. Overhauser, 65-347.

2944. Independent district embracing township. 1810. In case an independent district embraces a part or the whole of a civil township which has no separate district township organization, upon the written application of two-thirds of the electors residing upon the territory of such independent district and within such civil township to the board of directors, they shall set off such territory, whether provided with school-houses or not, to be organized as a district township in the manner provided for such organization when a new civil township is formed. [14 G. A., ch. 125, § 2.]

2945. Consolidation of districts. 1811; 22 G. A., ch. 63, § 1. Independent districts located contiguous to each other, may unite and form one and the same independent district, in the manner following: At the written request of any ten legal voters residing in each of said independent districts, or, should there not be ten legal voters in one of such districts, then at the written request of the majority of such voters, their respective boards of directors shall require their secretaries to give at least ten days' notice of the time and place for a meeting of the electors residing in such districts, by posting written notices in at least five public places in each of said districts, at which meetings the said electors shall vote by ballot for or against a consolidated organization of said independent districts; and if a majority of the votes cast at the election in each district, shall be in favor of uniting said districts, then the secretaries shall give similar notice of a meeting of the electors as provided for by the law for the organization of independent districts. The independent district thus consolidated shall be completed, and its directors governed by the same provisions of the law which apply to other independent districts. Where from the courses of Iowa rivers, and the contour of the adjoining territory, the proper school facilities cannot be given to the school children of each territory by forming school districts from the territory in any one county, independent school districts may be formed from the contiguous territory in adjoining counties. [13 G. A., ch. 8, § 2.]

Where there is no written request of electors looking toward the consolidation of independent districts, and the notice of election does not proper action of the board of directors not properly specify its object, an election on the question of consolidation will be void, and the original and independent districts will be still in existence: State v. Leverton, 53-483.

2946. Legalizing. 22 G. A., ch. 63, § 2. Any independent school districts heretofore formed under said section one thousand eight hundred and eleven [§ 2945], where there were less than ten legal voters residing therein at the time of the consolidation is hereby legalized and made valid provided that two-thirds of the legal voters then residing in such independent district petitioned for such consolidation.

2947. School districts in two counties. 1812. Where, under the school laws of the state heretofore in force for the convenience and accommodation of the people, school districts were formed of portions of two counties of territory lying contiguous to each other, at the written request of five legal voters residing in portions of said territory in each county, the board of directors of the district township to which such territory belongs, having a majority of the legal voters, shall fix the boundaries of an independent school district composed of such sections of land, or portions thereof, as may be described in the petition therefor, and shall give at least ten days' notice of the submission of the question of the formation of said independent district, at a special election for said purpose, specifying the boundaries of the district, the time and place of the meeting of the electors for such election, at which meeting the electors in the contemplated district shall vote by ballot for or against the separate organization. Should a majority of the votes be cast in favor of such separate organization, the said board of directors shall proceed by ballot to elect officers in the manner provided by law, and organize such independent district. [14 G. A., ch. 137.]

These provisions do not apply in case of the formation of an independent district out of contiguous territory situated in different counties, under § 2919: District T'p v. Independent Dist., 41-30.

2948. Statement. 1813. The boards of directors of the several independent school districts are hereby required to publish, two weeks before the annual school election in such district, by publication in one or more newspapers, if any are published in such district, or by posting up in writing in not less than three conspicuous places in such independent district, a detailed and specific statement of the receipts and disbursements of all funds expended for school and building purposes for the year preceding such annual election. And the said boards of directors shall also, at the same time, publish in detail an estimate of the several amounts which, in the judgment of such board, are necessary to maintain the schools in such district for the next succeeding school year; and failure to comply with the provisions of this section shall make each director liable to a penalty of ten dollars. [14 G. A., ch. 46.]

2949. Districts consolidated. 1814. Township districts may be consolidated and organized as independent districts, in the following manner: Whenever the board of directors of any existing district township shall deem the same advisable, and also whenever requested to do so by a petition signed by one-third of the voters of the district township, the board shall submit to the voters of said district township, at a regular election, or one called for the purpose, the question of consolidation, at which election the voters of the district township shall vote for or against consolidation. If a majority of votes shall be in favor of such consolidated organization, such district township shall organize on the second Monday of March following as an independent district; provided, that in townships which have been divided into independent districts, the duties in this section devolving on the board of directors shall be performed by the trustees of the township to whom the petition shall in such cases be addressed; and provided further, that nothing in this section shall be construed to affect independent districts composed wholly or mainly of cities or incorporated towns. Independent districts may in like manner change their boundaries so as to form any number of districts less than the number of districts existing at the time such change is asked for, and such changes shall be specified in the notices for a vote thereon.

Section considered: Independent Dist. v. Durland, 45-53, 56.

2950. Independent districts may become district township. 1815; 16 G. A., ch. 155, § 1. The independent districts of a civil township may be constituted a district township in the manner hereinafter provided.

As bearing upon the original section, see State v. Independent School Dist., 29-264.

2952. When district township organization is agreed to. 1817; 16 G. A., ch. 155, § 3. If a majority of the votes cast at such election be in favor of such district township organization, each independent district shall become a subdistrict of the district township, and shall organize as such subdistrict, on the first Monday in March following, by the election of a subdirector.

2956. Subdivision of independent districts. 17 G. A., ch. 133, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 131. Any independent school district, organized under any of the laws of this state, may subdivide for the purpose of forming two or more independent school districts, or have territory detached to be annexed with other territory, in the formation of independent district or districts; and it shall be the duty of the board of directors of said independent district to establish the boundaries of the districts so formed; the districts so formed not to contain less than four government sections of land each; this limitation shall not apply when, by reason of a river, or other obstacle, a considerable number of pupils will be accommodated by the formation of a district containing less than four sections, or where there is a city, town, or village, within said territory, of not less than one hundred inhabitants, and, in such cases, the independent districts so formed shall not contain less than two government sections of land, such subdivision to be effected in the manner provided for in sections two, three, and four of this chapter [§§ 2957-2959]; provided, that where either of the districts so proposed to be formed contains less than four government sections, it shall require a majority of the votes of each of the proposed districts to authorize such subdivision.

2958. Election of directors. 17 G. A., ch. 133, § 3. Should a majority of the votes cast be in favor of such subdivision, the board or boards of directors shall call a meeting in each independent district so subdivided or formed as aforesaid, for the purpose of electing by ballot three directors, who shall hold their offices one, two and three years respectively, the length of their respective terms to be determined by lot; and but one director shall be chosen annually thereafter, who shall hold his office for three years.

2959. Name of district. 17 G. A., ch. 133, § 4. At the meeting of the electors of each independent school district, as provided in the last section, they shall also determine by ballot the name to be given to their district, and each independent district, when so organized, shall be a body corporate, and the name so chosen shall be its corporate name; provided, that the board of directors of any district organized under the provisions of this act may change its name if any other district in the township shall have chosen the same name.

2960. How governed. 17 G. A., ch. 133, § 5. Independent districts organized under the provisions of this act shall be governed by the laws relating to independent districts.

MAY ISSUE BONDS.

2961. Power given; limit. 1821; 16 G. A., ch. 121. Independent school districts shall have the power and authority to borrow money for the purpose of redeeming outstanding bonds and erecting and completing school-houses, by issuing negotiable bonds of the independent district, to run any period not exceeding ten years, drawing a rate of interest not to exceed ten per centum per annum, which interest may be paid semi-annually; which said indebtedness shall be binding and obligatory on the independent district for the use of which said loan shall be made; but no district shall permit a greater outstanding indebtedness than an amount equal to five per centum of the last assessed value of the property of the district. [12 G. A., ch. 98, § 1.]

In an action on such bonds it will be presumed, until the contrary appears, that they are within the limit of indebtedness, and issued in proper manner and for proper purpose: Mosher v. Independent Dist., 42-632. But if issued in excess of the limit, such bonds are void, even in the hands of an innocent holder for value: McPherson v. Foster, 43-48, 55.

ceeding one thousand dollars, due not more than ten years after date, and payable at the pleasure of the district at any time before due; which said bonds shall be given in the name of the independent district issuing them, and shall be signed by the president of the board and attested by the secretary and delivered to the treasurer, taking his receipt therefor, who shall negotiate said bonds at not less than their par value, and countersign the same when negotiated. The treasurer shall stand charged upon his official bond with all bonds that may be delivered to him; but any bond or bonds not negotiated may be returned by him to the board. [Same, § 2.]

[The word "any" in the second line is erroneously printed "the" in the Code.]

2963. Tax to pay. 1823. If the electors of an independent school district which has issued bonds, shall, at the annual meeting in March for any year, fail to vote sufficient school-house tax to raise a sum equal to the interest on the outstanding bonds which will accrue during the then coming year, and such proportionate portion of the principal as will liquidate and pay off said bonds at maturity, then it shall be lawful for the board of such district to vote a sufficient rate on the taxable property of the district to pay such interest, and such portion of the principal as will pay said bonds in full by the time of their maturity, and shall cause the same to be certified and collected the same as other school taxes. [Same, § 3.]

2964. Orders to bear interest. 1824. All school orders shall draw lawful interest after having been presented to the treasurer of the district and not paid for want of funds, which fact shall be indorsed upon the order by the treasurer. [Same, § 4.]

2965. Bonds to fund judgment. 18 G. A., ch. 51, § 1. Any school district or district township against which judgments have been rendered prior to the passage of this act, and which such judgments remain unsatisfied, may, for the purpose of paying off such judgment indebtedness, issue negotiable bonds of such district township, upon a resolution of the board of directors of the district township, running not more than ten years, and bearing a rate of interest not exceeding eight per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, which bonds shall be signed by the president of the district and countersigned by the secretary, and shall not be disposed of for less than their par value, nor for any other purpose than that provided by this act, and such bonds shall be binding and obligatory upon the district township.

2966. Levy to pay. 18 G. A., ch. 51, § 2. It shall be the duty of the board of directors of any district township which issues bonds under this act, to provide for the payment of the same by the levy of tax therefor, in addition to the other taxes provided by law; and they are hereby required to levy such an amount each year as shall be sufficient to meet the interest on such bonds promptly as it accrues.

2967. Form. 18 G. A., ch. 51, § 3. The bonds issued under this act shall be in the name of the district township, and in substantially the same form as is by law provided for county bonds; shall be payable at the pleasure of the district township; shall be registered in the office of the county auditor; shall be numbered consecutively and redeemed in the order of their issuance.

[An act almost identical with the foregoing, but applying only to school districts, was passed in 1878, 17 G. A., ch. 132, but is omitted and the later act inserted.]

2968. Funding of indebtedness. 18 G. A., ch. 132, § 1; 21 G. A., ch. 95. Any independent school district or district township now or hereafter having a bonded or judgment indebtedness outstanding, is hereby authorized to issue negotiable bonds at any rate of interest not exceeding seven per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, for the purpose of funding said indebtedness; said bonds to be issued upon a resolution of the board of directors of said district, provided that said resolution shall not be valid unless adopted by a two-thirds vote of said directors.

2969. Sale of bonds. 18 G. A., ch. 132, § 2; 21 G. A., ch. 95. The treasurer of such district is hereby authorized to sell the bonds provided for in this act at not less than their par value, and apply the proceeds thereof to the payment of the outstanding bonded or judgment indebtedness of the district, or he may exchange such bonds for outstanding bonds, par for par: but the bonds hereby authorized shall be issued for no other purpose than the funding of outstanding bonded or judgment indebtedness. The actual cost of the engraving and printing of such bonds to be paid for out of the contingent fund of said district.

2970. Time to run ; notice to stop interest. 18 G. A., ch. 132, § 3. Said bonds shall run not more than ten years, and be payable at the pleasure of the district after five years from the date of their issue; provided, that in order to stop interest on them, the treasurer shall give the owner of said bonds ninety days' written notice of the readiness of the district to pay and the amount it desires to pay, said notice to be directed to the postoffice address of the owner of the bonds; provided further, that the treasurer shall keep a record of the parties to whom he sells the bonds and their postoffice address, and notice sent to the address as shown by said record shall be sufficient.

2971. Form of bond. 18 G. A., ch. 132, § 4. Said bonds shall be in denominations of not less than one hundred dollars, and not more than one thousand dollars; and said bonds shall be given in the name of the independent district or district township, and signed by the president and countersigned by the secretary thereof; and the principal and interest may be made payable wherever the board of directors may by resolution determine.

2972. Treasurer to account for. 18 G. A., ch. 132, § 5. When said bonds are delivered to the treasurer to be negotiated, the president shall take his receipt therefor, and the treasurer shall stand charged on his official bond with the amount of the bonds so delivered to him.

2973. Levy of tax. 18 G. A., ch. 132, § 6. The tax for the payment of the principal and interest of said bonds shall be raised as provided in section one thousand eight hundred and twenty-three, chapter nine, title twelve, of the code [§ 2963]; provided, that if the district shall fail or neglect to so levy said tax, the board of supervisors of the county in which said district is located, shall upon application of the owner of said bonds, levy said tax.

2974. 18 G. A., ch. 132, § 7. All acts and parts of acts in conflict with this act are hereby repealed.

INDUSTRIAL EXPOSITIONS IN SCHOOLS.

2975. School directors may establish. 15 G. A., ch. 64, § 1. It shall be the duty of the board of directors of independent school districts, and the subdirector of each subdistrict, if they should deem it expedient, under the direction of the county superintendent, to introduce and maintain an industrial exposition in connection with each school under their control within this state.

2976. To consist of what. 15 G. A., ch. 64, § 2. These expositions shall consist of useful articles made by the pupils, such as samples of sewing, and cooking of all kinds, knitting, crocheting, and drawing, iron and wood-work of all kinds, from a plain box or horse-shoe to a house or steam-engine in miniature; also, all other useful articles known to the industrial world, or that may be invented by the pupils, in connection with farm and garden products in their season, that are the results of their own toil.

2977. Pupils to explain. 15 G. A., ch. 64, § 3. The pupils [shall] be required to explain the use and method of their work, and kind and process of culture [of] farm and garden products.

2978. Parents and friends. 15 G. A., ch. 64, § 4. The parents and friends of the pupils [shall] be allowed and requested to be present at said exposition.

2979. Ornamental work. 15 G. A., ch. 64, § 5. Ornamental work shall be encouraged when accompanied by something useful made by the same pupil.

2980. How often. 15 G. A., ch. 64, § 6. These expositions [shall] be held in the school-room upon a school-day as often as once a term, and not oftener than once a month.

CHAPTER 10.

OF SCHOOL-HOUSE SITES.

2981. Districts may take real estate for. 1825. It shall be lawful for any district township, or independent district, to take and hold under the provisions contained in this chapter, so much real estate as may be necessary for the location and construction of a school-house and convenient use of the school; provided, that the real estate so taken, otherwise than by the consent of the owner or owners, shall not exceed one acre. [13 G. A., ch. 124, § 1.]

2982. Where located. 1826. The site so taken must be on some public highway, at least forty rods from any residence, the owner whereof objects to its being placed nearer, and not in any orchard, garden, or public park. But this section shall not apply to any incorporated town. [Same, § 2.]

2983. May condemn; proceedings. 1827. If the owner of any such real estate refuse or neglect to grant the site on his premises, or if such owner cannot be found, the county superintendent of the county in which said real estate may be situated, shall, upon application of either party, appoint three disinterested persons of said county, unless a smaller number is agreed upon by the parties, who shall, after taking an oath to faithfully and impartially discharge the duties imposed on them by this chapter, inspect said real estate and assess the damages which said owner will sustain by appropriation of his land for the use of said house and school, said county superintendent giving to the owner of such real estate the same notice as is required for the commencement of a suit at law in the district court of the time of such assessment of damage, and make a report in writing to the county superintendent of said county, giving the amount of damages, description of land, and exact location, who shall file and preserve the same in his office. If said board shall, at any time before they enter upon said land for the purpose of building said house, deposit with the county treasurer for the use of said owner, the sum so assessed as aforesaid, they shall be thereby authorized to build said house, and maintain the right to said premises; provided, that either party may have the right to appeal from such assessment of damages to the circuit [district] court of the county where such real estate is situated, within twenty days after receiving notice that such assessment is made, which appeal shall be final; but such appeal shall not delay the prosecution of work upon said house if said board shall pay, or deposit with the county treasurer, the amount so assessed by such appraisers, and in no case shall said board be liable for costs on appeal, unless the owner of said real estate shall be adjudged a greater amount of damages than was awarded by said appraisers. The board shall in all cases pay costs of the first assessment. [Same, § 3.]

The holder of a tax certificate upon property sought to be condemned under these provisions is an "owner" in such sense that he is entitled to notice: Cochran v. Independent School Dist., 50-663.

Notice by publication is not sufficient as against a party residing in the county: Ibid.

CHAPTER 11.

OF APPEALS.

2985. To county superintendent. 1829. Any person aggrieved by any decision or order of the district board of directors, in matter of law or of fact, may, within thirty days after the rendition of such decision, or the making of such order, appeal therefrom to the county superintendent of the proper county. [R., § 2133.]

This section does not clothe the superintendent with judicial powers: School Dist. Tp v. Pratt, 17-16.

Mandamus to compel action by a district board will not lie where the aggrieved party has a right of appeal to the county superintendent: Marshall v. Sloan, 35-445.

An appeal is authorized from the decision or order of the directors. It cannot be taken where they simply refuse or neglect to act where they should do so: Case v. Blood, 71-632.

Where a positive, official duty is enjoined upon a board of directors, which is not discretionary, an appeal from the board is not such a plain, speedy and adequate remedy that such duty may not be enforced by mandamus: Benjamin v. District Tp, 50-648.

A teacher, claiming that he is wrongfully discharged by the board for incompetency without being heard, should appeal. He cannot, without doing so, maintain an action for his salary on the ground that such dismissal is void: Kirkpatrick v. Independent School Dist., 53-585.

Cases wherein the jurisdiction and power of directors are brought in question, and wherein questions arise involving the construction of statutes conferring power upon school officers, may properly be brought in the courts, as by mandamus, for instance, without prosecuting the appeal here provided. It is held as to power of directors to make certain rules, under which plaintiff was excluded from school: Perkins v. Board of Directors, 56-476.

An appeal will lie from an action of the board in refusing in a proper case to attach a portion of a district township to an independent district for school purposes. If the board refuses to act upon the application action can be compelled by mandamus: Hightower v. Overhaulser, 65-347.

Appeal from action of directors in apportioning the assets and liabilities of new districts under § 2821, may be taken as here provided, and the final judgment of the county superintendent enforced by action: Independent School Dist. v. Independent School Dist., 45-391.

Although a county superintendent cannot, on appeal, render a judgment, his action in a proper case is conclusive upon the parties. The remedy for the collection of the amount awarded where money is claimed would be by action: Ibid.

An appeal to the county superintendent lies from an order of the district board changing the site of the school-house: Atkinson v. Hutchinson, 68-161.

In determining an appeal the superintendent is not confined to the exact record made, but may look into the situation as it is at the time of the hearing, and, upon new evidence or such information as he sees fit to consider, may make such determination as will do justice at the time: Ibid.

It seems that an appeal will lie from the action of the board of directors of an independent district as well as from similar action by the directors of the district township: Barnett v. Directors, 73-134.

2986. Affidavit. 1830. The basis of the proceeding shall be an affidavit, filed by the party aggrieved with the county superintendent, within the time for taking the appeal. [R., § 2134.]

2987. Errors stated. 1831. The affidavit shall set forth the errors complained of in a plain and concise manner. [R., § 2135.]

2988. Notice to district. 1832. The county superintendent shall, within five days after the filing of such affidavit in his office, notify the secretary of the proper district, in writing, of the taking of such appeal. And the latter shall, within ten days after being thus notified, file in the office of the county superintendent a complete transcript of the record and proceedings relating to the decision complained of, which transcript shall be certified to be correct by the secretary. [R., § 2136.]

2989. Parties notified. 1833. After the filing of the transcript aforesaid in his office, he shall notify in writing all persons adversely interested of the time and place where the matter of the appeal will be heard by him. [R., § 2137.]

2990. Hearing; take testimony. 1834. At the time thus fixed for hearing, he shall hear testimony for either party, and for that purpose may administer oaths if necessary, and he shall make such decision as may be just and equitable, which shall be final, unless appealed from as hereinafter provided. [R., § 2138.]

2991. Appeal to superintendent of public instruction. 1835. An appeal may be taken from the decision of the county superintendent, to the superintendent of public instruction in the same manner as provided in this chapter for taking appeals from the district board to the county superintendent, as nearly as applicable, except that he shall give thirty days' notice of the appeal to the county superintendent, and the like notice shall be given the adverse party. And the decision when made shall be final. [R., § 2139.]

The decision of the superintendent of public instruction in questions properly before him on appeal is final and cannot be reviewed by the courts: Wood v. Farmer, 69-533. It may be enforced by mandamus: Newby v. Free, 72-379.

2992. No money judgment. 1836. Nothing in this chapter shall be so construed as to authorize either the county or state superintendent to render a judgment for money, neither shall they be allowed any other compensation than is now allowed by law. All necessary postage must first be paid by the party aggrieved. [R., § 2140.]

CHAPTER 12.

OF THE SCHOOL FUND.

2993. Permanent fund; what constitutes. 1837. The following are hereby declared to be and remain perpetual funds for common school purposes, the interest of which only can be appropriated:

1. The five per cent. upon the net proceeds of the public lands in the state of Iowa;

2. The proceeds of the sales of the five hundred thousand acres of land which were granted to the state of Iowa under the eighth section of the act of congress, passed September fourth, A. D. 1841, entitled "An act to appropriate the proceeds of all sales of public lands, and to grant pre-emption rights;"

3. The proceeds of all sales of intestate estates which escheat to the state;

4. The proceeds of the sales of the sixteenth section in each township, or lands selected in lieu thereof. [R., § 1962.]

The school fund belongs to the state, which has solemnly pledged itself to maintain the same inviolate: Des Moines County v. Harker, 34-84.

The state is the legal owner of the school fund, and actions for the benefit of such fund are to be conducted in accordance with the rules pertaining to actions by the state: Ibid.

2994. Temporary fund. 1838. The following are declared to be and remain temporary funds for common school purposes, to be received and appropriated annually in the same manner as the annual interest of the perpetual fund:

1. All forfeitures of ten per cent. which are authorized to be made for the benefit of the school fund.
2. The proceeds of all fines collected for violations of the penal laws.
3. The proceeds of all fines collected for the non-performance of military duty.
4. The proceeds of the sales of lost goods and estrays. [R., § 1963.]

A prosecution to recover a fine should be in the name of the state and not in the name of the treasurer of the county to which the fine would go when recovered: Rogers v. Alexander, 2 G. Gr., 443.

The statute giving the owner of stock killed by a railroad company double damages does not conflict with the provision that all fines and penalties shall go to the school fund. Such damages do not constitute fines or penalties: Mackie v. Central R. of Iowa, 54-540.

See as to fines for violations of the penal laws, Const., art. 9, § 4, and § 4606.

2995. Five per cent. fund. 1839. The five per centum of the net proceeds of all sales of the public lands is hereby made payable to the state treasurer, and the state auditor shall apportion the same among the several counties, taking into consideration the amount of the permanent school fund already in possession of and steadily loaned in said counties. [R., § 1964.]

2996. Permanent fund. 1840. Those portions of the permanent school fund enumerated in the second and fourth subdivisions of section eighteen hundred and thirty-seven of this chapter [§ 2993], are hereby made payable to the county treasurer of the county in which the lands sold are situated, and the proceeds of subdivision third of said section to the treasurer of the county where said escheated estates are. [R., § 1965.]

2997. Temporary fund. 1841. The temporary funds enumerated in section eighteen hundred and thirty-eight of this chapter [§ 2994], are hereby made payable to the county treasurers of the several counties in which they arise respectively, and shall be accounted for to the board of supervisors, who shall apportion the same among the several school districts of said county as provided by law. [R., § 1966.]

The board of supervisors cannot make an agreement as to the time of paying the fine payable to the school fund. The governor alone can remit fines: State v. Stewart, 74-336.

2998. Auditor to audit losses of. 1842. The auditor is required to audit all losses to the school fund as provided in section three of article seven of the constitution; and, for this purpose, he shall prescribe such regulations for the conduct of officers having such funds in charge as he shall deem necessary to ascertain such losses. [10 G. A., ch. 134, § 3.]

2999. To issue bonds. 1843. Whenever any amount, not less than one thousand dollars, is audited in favor of the permanent school fund for losses of the same, whereby the state becomes indebted to said fund, the state auditor shall issue the bond or bonds of the state in favor of said fund, bearing interest at the rate of eight per cent., payable semi-annually, on the first day of January and July after the issuing of the same, and the amount required to pay the interest on said bonds, as the same becomes due, is hereby appropriated out of any revenue in the state treasury. [Same, § 2.]

3000. To keep account with different funds. 1844. The state auditor shall keep the school fund accounts in books provided for that purpose, separate and distinct from the revenue books, and immediately after making the apportionment required by section sixty-six of chapter three of title two [§ 70], he shall notify the auditor of each county of the sum to which his county is entitled by said apportionment, and in those cases where the counties have less of such interest than they are entitled to by apportionment, he shall, by such notice, authorize the treasurer of each of such counties to transfer the amount of such deficiency from the state revenue in his hands to such interest fund, and said notice shall be filed by the treasurer and be his proper voucher to the state for the amount of said revenue so transferred. And in those cases where the counties have an excess of such interest over the amount apportioned to each, such notice shall authorize the county treasurer to transfer such excess from the interest fund to the state revenue, and such notice shall be filed and be his proper voucher for such amount of the interest fund; and such excess so transferred shall be paid into the state treasury as revenue. [R., § 1969.]

[The words between "from the interest fund," in the fourteenth line, and the words "and such excess," etc., in the next to the last line, are erroneously omitted in the printed Code. By § 2885 only such schools as comply with the requirement as to giving instruction as to the effects of stimulants and narcotics can receive an allowance from the school fund.]

SALE OF LANDS.

3001. Sale of sixteenth section. 1845. The board of supervisors may, at such time as they deem best, authorize the trustees of any township where the sixteenth section, or land selected in lieu thereof, has not been sold, to lay out the same in such tracts as in their judgment will be for the best interests of the school fund, conforming, as far as the interests of said fund will permit, to the legal subdivisions of the United States surveys; and they shall appraise each tract at what they believe to be its true value, and certify to the said board of supervisors the divisions and appraisements made by them; said division and appraisement shall be approved or disapproved by said board at their first meeting after such report, and in case they disapprove the same, they may at once order another division and appraisement, should they deem it best. Where the board of supervisors approve, the county auditor shall make and keep a record of such division, appraisement, and approval. [R., § 1970.]

3002. Notice. 1846; 18 G. A., ch. 12, § 4. Whenever the board of supervisors shall offer for sale the sixteenth section, or lands selected in lieu thereof, or any portion of the same, or any part of the five hundred thousand acre grant, the county auditor shall give at least forty days' notice by written or printed notices posted in five public places in the county, two of which shall be in the township in which the land to be sold is situated; and also publish a notice of said sale for four weeks preceding the same, in a newspaper, should one be published in the county; if there is none published in said county, then in some newspaper authorized by the board of supervisors; and he shall describe the land to be sold, and state the time and place of sale; then at such time and place, or at such other time and place as the sale may be adjourned to, he shall offer to the highest bidder, subject to the provisions of this chapter, and shall sell either for cash, or one-third cash, and the balance on a credit not exceeding ten years, with interest on the same at the rate of eight per cent. per annum; said interest to be paid at the office of the county treasurer of said county, on the first day of January in each year; but in no case shall the land so offered be sold for less than its appraised value; nor shall any member of the board of supervisors, or county auditor, township trustee, or any person who was engaged in the division and appraisement of said land, be, directly or indirectly, interested in the purchase thereof; and any sale made where such parties, or any of them, are so interested shall be void and of no effect. [R., § 1971.]

3003. Minimum price. 1847. No school lands shall be sold for less than the minimum price of six dollars per acre, except as hereinafter provided, and in no case for less than the amount at which it has been appraised. [10 G. A., ch. 118, § 3; 13 G. A., ch. 29, § 1.]

3004. Prerequisites of sale. 1848. No school lands of any kind shall be sold until there shall be at least twenty-five legal voters resident in the congressional township in which said school land is situated, and in a fractional township of less than thirty-six sections the number of voters residing therein must have at least the same ratio to twenty-five as the number of sections, or parts of sections, in said township has to thirty-six, which fact in all cases must be shown to the satisfaction of the board of supervisors. [13 G. A., ch. 29, § 2.]

3005. Sale for less. 1849. Where the board of supervisors of any county shall have once, at least, offered for sale any school lands in compliance with the requirements of section eighteen hundred and forty-five, and eighteen hundred and forty-six of this chapter [§§ 3001, 3002], and are unable to sell the same for the minimum price of six dollars per acre, and if, in the opinion of said board, it is for the best interests of the school fund that the same be sold for a less price, then said board may instruct the auditor of said county to transmit by mail or otherwise to the register of the state land office, a certified copy of the proceedings of said board of supervisors in relation to the order of sale of said land, and subsequent proceedings in relation thereto, including the action of the township trustees, and the price per acre at which said land shall have been appraised, which transcript the register of the state land office shall submit to the executive council; and if a majority of said council, including the register, shall approve of the sale of said land for less than the minimum price of six dollars per acre, then the register shall certify such approval to the auditor of the county from whence said transcript came, which certificate shall be transcribed in the minute book of the board of supervisors of said county, and, thereupon, said land may again be offered and sold to the highest bidder, as provided in section eighteen hundred and forty-six of this chapter [§ 3002] without being again appraised; but in no case under the provisions of this section, shall any school land be sold for less than one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre. [Same, § 3.]

3006. Lands bid in on execution. 1850. When any lands have been bid in by the state in behalf of the school fund, on execution founded on a judgment in favor of said fund, such land shall be sold in the same manner as other school lands. Whenever any such lands shall have been conveyed to the counties in which the same are situated for the use of the school fund, instead of to the state as required by law, such conveyance shall be considered valid and binding, and on the proper certificates being made as hereinbefore provided, patents shall be issued to the purchasers of said lands in like manner as in cases where the conveyances were made to the state for the use of the school fund. [9 G. A., ch. 148, § 11; 12 G. A., ch. 78, § 2; 13 G. A., ch. 29, § 5.]

This section applies to land purchased upon judgments recovered upon mortgages or contracts, such as the county authorities are authorized to take or make with relation to the school fund. Where the school fund was loaned by the state under the provision of a spec-ute, and not by the county under the general statutes, held, that the county had no authority to bid in such land at the sale thereof under foreclosure of such mortgage: Carter v. Sherman, 63-689.

3007. Patent to issue. 1851. When any purchaser shall pay the full amount of his purchase money at the time of purchase, or, whenever full payment shall be made for lands previously purchased belonging to the school fund, the auditor shall forthwith issue a certificate of that fact, which shall be transmitted to the state land office and entitle the purchaser to a patent which shall be issued by the governor. [R., § 1972; 9 G. A., ch. 148, § 12.]

3008. Contracts. 1852. In case the lands are purchased upon a partial credit as hereinbefore provided, the contract shall at once be reduced to writing, signed by the parties, and recorded in the office of the recorder, after which it shall be filed in the office of the county auditor, and during the continuance of such contract, it shall be lawful for such purchaser, his heirs, or assignees, at any time to pay the principal and interest due upon such contract, and receive a certificate of purchase as mentioned in the preceding section. [R., § 1973.]

3009. Sale on credit. 1853. When, in the judgment of the board of supervisors, any school lands are of such a character that a sale upon partial credit would be unsafe or incompatible with the interest of the school fund, and especially in the case of timbered lands, the board of supervisors may, in their discretion, exact the whole of the purchase money in advance; or, if they sell such land upon a partial credit as hereinbefore prescribed, they shall require good collateral security for the payment of the purchase money upon which credit is given. [R., § 1974.]

3010. Suit to collect. 1854. Whenever any purchaser of any school lands, sold under the provisions of this chapter upon a partial credit, or any person to whom a portion of the school fund has been loaned, fails to pay the interest upon the amount due the school fund from him on the first day of January, and such payment is not made within six months thereafter, then the entire amount, both of principal and interest, owing to the school fund from such person, shall be deemed to have become due, and the county auditor shall report the name of the delinquent, together with the sum total due from such delinquent, to the district [county] attorney of his judicial district [county], who shall immediately commence suit for the collection of the amount thus reported. The provisions of this section, in so far as they provide for the principal owing for the purchase of school lands, or for money borrowed from the school fund becoming due and being collected at an earlier day than that stipulated in the contract upon failure to pay the interest, are hereby declared to be a part of every contract made under and by virtue of this chapter, whether expressed in such contract or not. [R., § 1975.]

3011. Collection of university funds. 1855. The provisions of the last section shall be of force, as far as applicable, to all cases where land is purchased or money borrowed from the university fund, and, in case of delinquency as provided for in said section, the treasurer of the state university shall make the report therein required to the district [county] attorney of the district [county] where the party so purchasing or borrowing resides, or where the real estate given as security for said purchase or loan is situated. [R., § 1979.]

3012. Lands taxable. 1856. All school lands, the sale of which is provided for under this chapter, shall be subject to taxation from and after the execution and delivery of the contract to the purchaser. [R., § 1976.]

3013. Waste punished. 1857. All contracts relative to the sale of school lands provided for in this chapter, shall be subject to such laws as now are, or may hereafter be in force relative to the prevention or punishment of waste. [R., § 1977.]

3014. Township trustees; duty. 1858. The township trustees in each township, shall see that no waste be committed upon any school lands lying in their township, and in case any such waste be attempted, they shall apply by petition to the district [or circuit] court, or to any judge thereof, for an injunction to stay waste, and the same, if granted, shall be without bond. The court may make such order in the premises as shall be equitable and calculated to secure the school lands from waste or destruction and may adjudge damages against the party for injuries done in such cases; the costs shall abide the event of the suit, and the damages shall be paid to the county treasurer and constitute a part of the permanent school fund. [R., § 1978.]

3015. Survey. 1859. When, in the opinion of the board of supervisors, it may be necessary to have a portion of the school lands within their county surveyed, they may employ the county surveyor for the purpose, who shall be paid out of the county treasury upon proof made of the request and performance of the service. [R., § 1980.]

FUNDS AND SECURITIES.

3016. Supervisors to manage. 1860. The several boards of supervisors shall hold and manage the securities given to the school fund in their respective counties, and also all judgments and lands therein belonging to said fund for the use of said fund; and to that end such counties shall have power to sue in their own name, for the use of said fund, either by the district [county] attorney, or such other attorney as such board shall select, and to do all other acts in relation to the same necessary for the protection of said fund, and such counties shall be severally liable for all losses upon loans of such fund made in such county. But any county may discharge itself from any liability in any case wherein its liability is not made absolute by sections eighteen hundred and eighty-one, and eighteen hundred and eighty-two of this chapter [§§ 3042, 3043], by showing that the alleged loss was not incurred by reason of any default of its officers or by taking insufficient or imperfect securities. The state auditor shall examine and adjust any claim by a county for exemption from liability under the foregoing proviso, upon proof in writing submitted to him in behalf of the county, within three months after he shall notify the county auditor of his readiness to receive it. In the absence of such proof, or, if the same is insufficient, the state auditor shall charge the amount of such loss against the county as a final adjustment. If found sufficient, he shall present the facts thereof in his report to the general assembly next ensuing. [9 G. A., ch. 148, § 1; 14 G. A., ch. 68.]

As the lien of a school-fund mortgage is superior to that of a tax title subsequently acquired on the property, the county has no authority to buy in such tax title, such an act not being necessary for the protection of the fund; and held, that it had no authority to buy in such title for the purpose of defeating the lien of a mortgage held by a third party and prior to the one in favor of the fund: Miller v. Gregg, 26-75.

The county being liable for all losses upon loans of the school fund made in the county may sue in behalf of such fund, in its own name, as trustee of an express trust: Madison County v. Tullis, 69-720.

In the management of the school fund the board of supervisors have authority to do acts which, in the exercise of wisdom and care, men of affairs ordinarily do for the security and collection of debts. Therefore, held, that a compromise, in a particular case, of a claim in behalf of the school fund was valid: Poweshiek County v. Buttles, 70-246.

3017. Fund loaned. 1861. The permanent school fund shall be loaned out as hereinafter provided, as the same may come into the hands of the county treasurer, but no loan to any one person or company shall exceed the sum of five hundred dollars, nor shall any loan of the school fund be made to the county auditor, treasurer, or to any member of the board of supervisors. Said loans shall not be made for a shorter time than one year, nor for more than five years. [R., § 1981.]

[This section is modified by § 3023.]

3018. How secured; interest. 1862; 19 G. A., ch. 174, § 2. The payment of the money thus borrowed, together with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, shall be secured by promissory notes executed by the party borrowing, and by mortgage on unincumbered real estate, which, exclusive of any buildings, is appraised by the appraisers hereinafter provided for at double the value of the amount of money loaned; which real estate must be situated in the county where such loan is made. [R., § 1982; 10 G. A., ch. 118, § 1; 13 G. A., ch. 46.]

[Rate of interest changed to eight per cent.: See § 3020.]

A loan made by an officer out of the school fund, without first taking the security provided by the statute, may be repudiated by the proper authorities and the officer and his sureties held liable, or the loan may be ratified and its collection enforced against the borrower and sureties on the note given for the money: Bremer County v. Barrick, 18-390.

3019. Value of security. 1863. The value of real estate offered as security for money loaned as herein provided, shall be fixed by three appraisers under oath, who shall be selected by the county auditor, and, in making the valuation provided for, the appraisers shall not take into consideration any buildings that may be on the land; said appraisers shall be allowed for their services the sum of fifty cents each, to be paid by the party borrowing, and the party borrowing shall pay for recording the mortgage given to secure such loan. [R., § 1983.]

3020. Rate of interest. 18 G. A., ch. 12, § 1. The rate of interest on all permanent school funds loaned after January first, A. D. 1880, shall not exceed eight per cent. per annum from date of such loan.

3021. Interest on interest. 18 G. A., ch. 12, § 2. Interest not paid when due shall bear interest at the same rate as the principal.

3022. Interest charged to counties. 18 G. A., ch. 12, § 3. After July first, A. D. 1880, the counties having permanent school funds in control shall be charged only six per cent. instead of eight per cent. as now provided by the code.

3023. Amount of loan to one person. 18 G. A., ch. 12, § 6. Loans may hereafter be made to one person, or one company, to the amount of one thousand dollars; provided, it is found impracticable to keep the whole amount of the funds loaned in sums of five hundred dollars or less.

3024. 18 G. A., ch. 12, § 7. All laws inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

3025. Legalizing acknowledgments. 21 G. A., ch. 163, § 1. All acknowledgments of school-fund mortgages and contracts heretofore taken and certified by any county auditor or deputy county auditor in any county in this state are hereby legalized and declared to be as legal, valid and binding, as though such officer had been authorized to take such acknowledgment when taken.

LOANS.

3026. Permanent fund. 1864. When any person desires to borrow from the permanent school fund, he shall apply to the county auditor, and if, in the opinion of said auditor, it would be to the interest of the school fund to grant such application, he shall order the necessary papers to be made out to secure the amount thus to be borrowed, as required by sections eighteen hundred and sixty-two and eighteen hundred and sixty-three of this chapter [§§ 3018, 3019]. When the same are made out, they shall be presented to said auditor, who shall, if he approves the same, indorse thereon, "accepted," and sign his name below the same, and he shall examine the title to any real estate offered as security, and make and preserve an abstract of such title, which shall be certified by him and submitted to the board of supervisors at the first meeting thereafter; he may charge a fee not to exceed two dollars for his services in making such abstract of title, to be paid by the party borrowing. He shall then give to the party borrowing a copy of the promissory note, certifying over his hand and official seal, that it is a correct copy of the same, which, together with a mortgage securing it, has been filed in his office, and upon the parties presenting said certificate to the treasurer, he shall pay the amount specified in said copy of note out of the permanent school fund in his possession, and retain the said certified copy as his voucher. The said auditor shall file the original note in his office, and also the mortgage, after having it recorded. [R., § 1984.]

The county auditor is not authorized to receive money paid into the school fund: Mahaska County v. Searle, 44-492; Mahaska County v. Kuan, 45-328.

The fact that the clerk of the court previously made payment of money collected for the school fund to the auditor, held not sufficient to relieve him from liability for a subsequent payment, made in the same manner, which did not reach the treasurer: Mahaska County v. Searle, 44-492.

The board of supervisors has power over

3027. Report of loans; approval. 1866. At each meeting of the board of supervisors, the auditor shall make a full statement of all money received for and loaned out of the school fund under his control, and shall also submit for their examination all notes, mortgages, and abstracts of title connected with the school fund which have come into his possession since their last meeting. Said board, at the first meeting after such report and papers are submitted to them, shall either approve or disapprove of each loan made by said auditor. Should they disapprove of any loan or security thus reported, they may require the party borrowing to give additional security within thirty days; and in case of failure so to do, the entire amount, both of principal and interest, owing to the school fund, shall be deemed to have become due, and the district [county] attorney shall be directed immediately to collect the same; and in such case, should it be found impossible to collect the entire amount due, and the security prove insufficient, then the county auditor and his bondsmen shall be liable for the deficiency. The provision herein contained with regard to principal and interest becoming due on the failure to give additional security when required for money borrowed from the school fund, is hereby declared to be a part of every contract made under and by virtue of this chapter, whether expressed in the contract or not. [R., § 1985.]

3028. How paid. 1867. When any person desires to pay either principal or interest due the school fund, he shall obtain a certificate from the county auditor specifying the amount due from such person to the school fund, stating whether it is principal or interest, or both, and setting forth distinctly the amount of each. Upon the presentation of which certificate to the county treasurer, the treasurer shall receive the amount so specified from the person presenting the certificate, and shall indorse on said certificate the date and his name, and upon the return to the auditor of such certificate so indorsed, the party returning it shall have a receipt from him for the amount so paid. [R., § 1986.]

The auditor is not authorized to receive payments: See notes to § 3026.

3029. Prior incumbrances. 1868. Whenever any portion of the school fund has been loaned upon real estate security, upon which exists a prior incumbrance other than for taxes, the board of supervisors shall have authority, in their discretion, if they deem it necessary to remove said prior incumbrance in order that said fund may ultimately realize the money upon said loan, to appropriate so much money out of the school fund, if any there be within said county, as shall be necessary to remove said incumbrance; provided, said incumbrance shall not exceed one-half the actual cash value of said real estate. [9 G. A., ch. 148, § 2.]

the management of the school fund, but the auditor has the custody of the securities thereof: Madison County v. Tullis, 69-720.

It is the duty of the auditor to preserve and safely keep the notes and mortgages, and when he fails to do so without sufficient excuse he becomes liable on his bond: Ibid.

The auditor has no authority to release a portion of the premises covered by a school-fund mortgage upon the payment of the pro rata amount secured thereby: Madison County v. Kridler, 56-32.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

3030. Assignment of claim. 1869. The board of supervisors may, by resolution, assign without recourse any school fund claim to any person having a subsequent lien on the premises affected by such claim, upon the full payment of the amount due the said fund, but not otherwise. [10 G. A., ch. 118, § 4.]

3031. Agents to examine securities. 1870. Such board may, when deemed necessary, employ some competent person to examine the securities aforesaid, make abstracts of titles to the lands mortgaged, and make out complete statements thereof for such boards, and under the direction of said boards, or committee thereof, to procure the renewal of such notes and mortgages, when demanded by persons entitled thereto, upon such terms as to time and security in all respects as in making new loans. And such agent may, with the consent of said board or committee, take from any person responsible for any loan, any additional security by way of bond or mortgage, or both, in cases where the property mortgaged is inadequate security for the sum loaned, and the applicant shall pay up all interest and procure the written consent of the securities on the note; but in all cases of the continuance of loans, as well as in cases of new loans, abstracts of title shall be presented and filed with the mortgage, which shall show that the title to the mortgaged premises is in the mortgagor, free and clear of any incumbrance or debt. [9 G. A., ch. 148, § 3.]

3032. Reloaning. 1871. Any person responsible to the school fund for any part of the principal thereof, who shall promptly pay all interests and costs, if any, thereon, whether the same may be rendered into a judgment or not, shall be permitted to borrow such principal upon complying in all respects with the requirements of law relating to new loans. [Same, § 4.]

The right to reborrow the principal must be exercised under such regulations as the board of supervisors may establish by virtue of § 3016. Such right cannot be set up as a defense in an action for the principal sum, but may be enforced, if it exists, by action of mandamus against the auditor: Emmett County v. Skinner, 48-244.

3033. Notice of delinquency. 1872. Every county auditor in whose county there are outstanding contracts on the sale of school lands, which are due, shall immediately publish a notice requiring all persons holding any such lands, to at once pay up the amount due thereon, or otherwise make satisfactory arrangements for an extension of time. He shall also give a like notice to all mortgagors to said fund on whose notes either principal or interest is due. Such notices shall be printed for four weeks in a newspaper published in the county, if there be one; if there be none, then in such newspaper published in this state as will be most likely, in the opinion of said auditor, to give notice to all concerned; and a copy of such notice shall be posted for the same time at the outer door of the building in which the last district court in said county was held. [Same, § 5.]

3034. Suit brought; injunction; attorney's fee. 1873; 18 G. A., ch. 12, § 5. In case the person holding lands so contracted or mortgaged shall neglect to pay the sums due thereon, or make an arrangement for an extension of time within three months from the first publication of such notice, the board of supervisors may cause suit to be brought and prosecuted with the utmost diligence to secure said fund, and in any action in favor of a county for the use of the school fund, an injunction may issue without bond, and in any such action, where service is made by publication, default and judgment may be entered and enforced without the bond required of individuals. In all such suits the court shall give the plaintiff, as a part of the costs, such an amount as will be a sufficient compensation for the plaintiff's attorney in the case, but in no case to exceed ten per cent. on the amount for which judgment is rendered, and in no case to exceed the sum of twenty-five dollars. [Same, § 6.]

The provision of this section as amended relating to attorneys' fees pertains to the mere question of costs, and is therefore not unconstitutional as referring to mortgages executed prior to its passage: Kossuth County v. Wallace, 60-508.

3035. Land bid off. 1874. In case of sales of lands on execution founded on any such mortgage or contract, the attorney for said board, or other person authorized by said board, shall bid on behalf of the state or county, as the case may be, for the use of said fund, such sum as the interests of said fund may require, and if struck off to the state, the same shall be held and disposed of in all respects the same as other lands belonging to said fund, except as hereinafter provided. [Same, § 7.]

3036. Contracts and notes payable to county. 1875. All contracts, notes and mortgages given to said fund shall be made payable to the county controlling them, but no such contracts, notes, or mortgages shall be invalid because they are made payable to any other payee, but the same shall be deemed and taken to belong to said county for the use of said fund, and suits may be maintained thereon in the name of the said county, with the same effect as if they were drawn payable to the said county. [Same, § 9.]

3037. Treasurer to keep accounts. 1876. Each county treasurer shall, immediately upon receiving or paying out any moneys belonging to the school fund, enter a correct account thereof on proper books kept by him for the purpose in all cases where money is received, distinguishing between principal and interest, and shall keep an account showing all money due the school fund, whether principal or interest, and designating the amount of each and from whom due, and his books shall at all times present a clear and intelligible statement of the school fund in his hands. Said books shall at all times be open to the inspection and examination of any householder or tax payer in the county. [R., § 1990.]

3038. Auditor to keep accounts; settlement; report. 1877. Each county auditor shall keep in his office, in books provided for that purpose, an account to be known as the school fund account, in which he shall enter all notes, mortgages, bonds, and assets of every kind and description which may come into his hands, and he shall open accounts with the county treasurer in which he shall charge him with all money in his hands at the time such account is opened, and also with all money which may thereafter be paid to him, as shown by the certificates duly indorsed as hereinbefore provided for, distinguishing between principal and interest, which shall be kept in distinct accounts; and shall, on the third Monday in May, the first Monday of October, and the third Monday of December, in each and every year, make a complete settlement of the school fund account with the county treasurer, from the time of the last settlement, and at each regular meeting of the board of supervisors, he shall submit a full report or his last settlement with the county treasurer, and also of all notes, mortgages, bonds, and assets of every kind and description which have come into his hands since the last meeting of the board. [R., § 1991.]

3039. Penalty. 1878. Any county treasurer, or auditor, failing or neglecting to perform any of the duties which are required of him by the provisions of this chapter, shall be liable to a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, to be recovered in an action brought in the district court by the board of supervisors, the judgment to be entered against the party and his bondsmen and the proceeds to go to the school fund. [R., § 1992.]

3040. Extending time. 1879. Whenever it shall be evident to the board of supervisors, that the interest of the school fund will be endangered by immediate prosecution of any mortgage, or the sale of mortgaged premises, they may give such reasonable time as they may deem for the best interests of the school fund. [R., § 1993.]

3041. No limitation. 1880. Lapse of time shall in no case bar any action brought, or to be brought, on any contract for any part of the school fund, nor shall such lapse of time prevent the introduction of evidence in any such action, any provision of this code to the contrary notwithstanding. [9 G. A., ch. 148, § 13.]

[For similar provision, see § 3747.]

COUNTIES RESPONSIBLE.

3042. Foreclosure of mortgages. 1881. On and after the first day of January, A. D. 1874, the board of supervisors of the several counties shall have sole control and management of all loans on mortgages then held or thereafter made, and shall, when necessary, have them foreclosed at the expense of the county; and any losses sustained or gains realized upon foreclosures and resales of mortgaged property, shall be made good by or inure to the benefit of the county, as the case may be; provided, however, that upon a foreclosure of contracts, when the land is bid in by the county, the auditor of state, as soon as notified by the county auditor that the foreclosure has been effected and the lands bid in, shall give the county credit for the original amount of the notes remaining unpaid; and on being notified by the county auditor that a resale has been effected, he shall charge the county with the full amount of resale; but when the land is purchased by a third party on the foreclosure for a less amount than due on the contract notes, the loss shall be sustained by the county. County auditors shall report annually on the first day of January, the amounts of all sales and resales of the sixteenth section, five hundred thousand acres grant, and escheated estates made the year previous; and the auditor of state shall charge up the same to said counties, and also charge interest on the same from the date of said sales or resales, at the rate of eight per cent. per annum. [14 G. A., ch. 34, § 3.]

3043. Liable for interest. 1882. On and after the first day of January, A. D. 1874, the auditor of state shall charge up to each county having permanent school fund under its control, interest on the whole amount in said county, at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, semi-annually, on the first day of January and July of each year, which amount so charged shall become due and payable on the first day of January and July of the year following, and be embraced in the semi-annual apportionment of interest collected for the year 1875 and each year thereafter, and shall be deemed the whole amount due from each county on account of interest accrued subsequent to the first day of January, 1874. Any surplus of interest collected over the eight per cent. charged to the counties, shall be paid into the county treasury for the benefit of the county. If any county should fail to collect the full amount of interest due the state, the deficiency shall be advanced from the county treasury, and if any county becomes delinquent in the payment of the full amount of interest due the state, the auditor of state shall charge to and collect from such county a penalty of one per cent. per month on the amount delinquent until paid. [Same, § 4.]

3044. Transfers. 1883. Whenever there are funds belonging to the permanent school fund in any county amounting to one thousand dollars that cannot be loaned according to law, the county auditor may certify the fact to the auditor of state, who shall order a transfer of said funds to some other county, or counties, where, in his opinion, it can be loaned readily. Upon such transfer being made, the auditor of state shall give the county making the transfer credit for the amount transferred, and shall charge the county or counties to which the transfer is made with the amount transferred, and shall afterwards charge interest on the actual amount in the possession of each county. [Same, § 5; 10 G. A., ch. 118, § 2.]

3045. County auditor to report. 1884. The county auditors shall continue to report to the auditor of state, semi-annually, as now required by law, the amount of interest collected and which accrued previous to the first day of January, A. D. 1874, until the amount of interest due up to that date has been collected. The amount collected from time to time shall be added to the semi-annual apportionment of interest heretofore provided for. The county auditor shall also embrace in said reports, in the year 1875 and thereafter, the amount of interest collected and which accrued subsequent to the first day of January, 1874, in a separate item. [14 G. A., ch. 34, § 6.]

CHAPTER 13.

3046. Trustees. 1885. The governor, judges of the supreme court, secretary of state, and superintendent of public instruction, shall, by virtue of their office, constitute a board of trustees of the state library, of which the governor shall be president. [14 G. A., ch. 92, § 1.]

3047. Powers. 1886. The said trustees shall have full power to make and carry into effect such rules and regulations for the superintendence and care of the books, maps, charts, papers, and furniture contained in the state library, and for the arrangement and safe-keeping of the same as they may deem proper. [14 G. A., ch. 92, § 3.]

3049. Same. 1888. No books or other property shall be removed from the seat of government, and no person shall be entitled to take from the library more than two books at the same time; provided, that during the terms of the supreme court of the state, or the federal courts, the judges and attorneys of said courts may be permitted to take and use any number of books needed on the trial of causes, but such books shall not be taken from the seat of government, and shall be returned according to law. Before entering upon the duties of his office, he shall give a bond with good and sufficient surety, in the penal sum of five thousand dollars, in such form as the governor shall approve, conditioned for the performance of all the duties required of him by law, and for the observance of all the rules prescribed by the trustees of the library. [Same, § 6.]

[The word "thousand," in the sixth line, is erroneously printed "hundred" in the Code.]

3054. Duties. 1891. The librarian shall give his personal attendance upon the library during the hours it shall be directed to be kept open, and shall perform such duties as shall be imposed on him by law or shall be prescribed by the rules and regulations of the trustees. [Same, § 7.]

PART SECOND.

PRIVATE LAW.

TITLE XIII.

OF RIGHTS OF PROPERTY.

CHAPTER 1.

OF RIGHTS OF ALIENS.

[Sections 1908 and 1909 are repealed: See § 3080.]

3073. Non-resident aliens. 22 G. A., ch. 85, § 1. Non-resident aliens or corporations incorporated under the laws of any foreign country, or corporations organized in this country one-half of whose stock is owned or controlled by non-resident aliens, are hereby prohibited from acquiring title to or taking or holding any lands or real estate in this state by descent, devise, purchase or otherwise only as hereinafter provided except that the widow and heirs of aliens who have heretofore acquired lands in this state under the laws thereof may hold such lands by devise or descent for a period of ten years and no longer and if at the end of such time herein limited such lands so acquired have not been sold to a bona fide purchaser for value or such alien heirs have not become residents of this state, such lands shall revert and escheat to the state of Iowa, and it shall be the duty of the county attorney in the counties where such lands are situated to enforce forfeitures of all such lands as provided by this act.

Right to own and hold property: The provisions of Const., art. I, § 22, that foreigners who are or may hereafter become residents of the state shall enjoy the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment and descent of property as native-born citizens, does not change the common-law rule as to non-resident aliens, and a resident alien, to take advantage of its provisions, must be such at the time of descent cast: Stemple v. Herminghouser, 3 G. Gr., 408.

But this provision does not restrict the power of the legislature to extend the same privileges to other foreigners than those named: Purcell v. Smidt, 21-540.

It confers upon resident aliens the right to transmit as well as to acquire real property by descent: Ibid.

At common law an alien could not acquire real estate by purchase so as to convey a good title to his vendee: Ibid.

The act of 1858, respecting aliens (Rev., §§ 2488-2493), so far as it relates to personal property, is probably only declarative of the common law, and in this state, as at common law, aliens are capable of acquiring, holding and transmitting movable property in like manner as citizens: Ibid.; Greenheld v. Morrison, 21-538.

Taking by descent or devise: Prior to the adoption of the state constitution of 1846, the common-law rule was in force, and although it was then provided by statute that real property should descend in equal shares to the children, nevertheless an alien child had no inheritable blood and could not take by de-sent; and the subsequent constitutional provision above referred to only changed the rule as to aliens who were aliens at the time of descent cast: Stemple v. Herminghouser, 3 G. Gr., 408; Krogan v. Kinney, 15-242.

Also, held, that the provisions of the Revision above referred to were intended to apply only to residents in this state or the United States, except in the single instance of a devise by will to a non-resident alien who should afterwards become a resident: Krogan v. Kinney, 15-242; Rheim v. Robbins, 20-45.

Such provision giving aliens, wherever resident, the right to take or acquire property by bequest or devise, upon condition, in case of non-residents, that they shall become residents of this state, was retrospective as well as prospective: Purcell v. Smidt, 21-540.

The judges of the court were divided on the question as to the capacity of a non-resident alien to acquire real estate in this state by descent under the statutory provisions above referred to: Greenheld v. Stanforth, 21-595.

Such statutory provisions gave aliens resident in the United States who had declared their intention of becoming citizens, and all aliens resident in this state, the right to acquire real property by descent or purchase, the word purchase meaning acquisition by bargain and sale for a consideration; and this provision was prospective: Purcell v. Smidt, 21-540.

This statutory provision also gave every alien, wherever resident, the right to acquire real estate by bargain or sale from persons holding an absolute title, provided he in good faith sold the same within ten years to a person capable of holding an absolute title. And the heirs at law of the non-resident alien purchaser took a valid title subject to the same necessity of selling. This provision was retrospective: Ibid.

Subsequently to this decision the court united in adhering to the doctrine that under the statutory provision referred to a non-resident could not inherit: Brown v. Pearson, 41-481.

Under the statutory provisions just referred to, under which it was decided that an alien non-resident could not take lands in this state by inheritance, held, that the non-resident alien heirs of such owner could not inherit any share of such property, but that the whole would pass to heirs who were resident citizens of the state: King v. Ware, 53-97.

Under these provisions an alien resident could take nothing by will unless he, subsequent to the making of the bequest, became a resident: Ware v. Wisner, 4 McCrary, 66.

Granting of lands to: The disposal of the public land within the state being expressly reserved to the United States, a grant by the United States to an alien will confer upon him an inheritable estate: King v. Ware, 53-97.

Dower: The provisions of the Revision gave an alien married woman the same rights of dower as if a resident, provided her husband was capable, at the time of his decease, of holding an absolute title to lands in this state: Purcell v. Smidt, 21-540.

3074. Conditions. 22 G. A., ch. 85, § 2. Any non-resident alien may acquire and hold real property to the extent of three hundred and twenty acres, or city property to the amount of ten thousand dollars in value, providing that within five years from the date of purchase of said property the same is placed in the actual possession of a relative of such purchaser the occupant being related to such owner within the third degree of kindred or the husband or wife of such relative, and further provided, that such occupant become a naturalized citizen within ten years from the purchase of said property as aforesaid.

3075. Duty of county attorney. 22 G. A., ch. 85, § 3. It shall be the duty of the county attorney of the county in which such lands are situated to proceed by information in the name of the state of Iowa, against such alien in the district court of the county and summons may issue or service to be had upon such alien by publication as provided by statute for equitable proceedings and the court shall have power to hear and determine such information and declare such lands escheated to the state, and when such forfeiture is declared by the district court it shall be the duty of the clerk of the court to notify the governor of the state that the title to such lands is vested in the state by the decree of the said court, and the clerk of the court shall present the auditor of the state with the bill of costs incurred by the county in prosecuting such case and the auditor shall issue a warrant to the clerk of the court on the state treasury to repay the county for such costs incurred, and the lands shall be sold in the manner provided for the sale of school lands in chapter twelve, title twelve of the code, and the proceeds of such sale shall become a part of the permanent school fund of the state.

3076. Limitation of time. 22 G. A., ch. 85, § 4. No suit for the recovery of property after the execution and recording of the patent or conveyance by the state shall lie, unless said suit shall have been commenced within five years after the title to such property became vested in the grantee of the state, and all persons who fail to bring their suits within the time limited are forever barred, saving however to infants and persons of unsound mind, the right to bring suit at any time within five years after disabilities cease or have been removed; providing, however, that the grantee of the state, immediate or remote, shall have the right to demand such restitution for improvements as provided by chapter seven title thirteen, of the code of Iowa.

3077. Sale of lands. 22 G. A., ch. 85, § 5. Any non-resident alien who owns land in this state at the time this act takes effect may dispose of the same during his life to bona fide purchasers for value and may take security for the purchase money with the same rights as to securities as a citizen of the United States.

3078. Holders of liens. 22 G. A., ch. 85, § 6. This act shall not prevent the holders of liens upon or interest in real estate heretofore or hereafter acquired from holding or taking a valid title to the real estate in which he has such interest, or upon which he has such lien, nor shall it prevent any alien from enforcing any lien or judgment from any debt or liability which may hereafter be created, or which he may hereafter acquire, or which may hereafter be adjudged in his favor or from becoming a purchaser at any sale by virtue of such lien or judgment, provided, however, that all lands so acquired shall be sold within ten years after the title shall be perfected in him under such sales, or in default thereof the same shall revert and escheat to the state as provided in this act.

3079. Resident aliens. 22 G. A., ch. 85, § 7. This act shall not apply to aliens who are residents of the state of Iowa, who shall have the same right to acquire, hold and dispose of property as natural-born citizens of the United States.

3080. 22 G. A., ch. 85, § 8. Sections one thousand nine hundred and eight and one thousand nine hundred and nine, chapter one, title thirteen of the code are hereby repealed, and all acts or parts of the acts in conflict with this act are hereby repealed.

CHAPTER 2.

OF TITLE IN THE STATE OR COUNTY.

3081. Conveyance to. 1910. Whenever, to secure the state or any county therein from loss, it shall become necessary to take real estate on account of a debt, either by bidding off the same at a sale on execution or otherwise, the conveyance thereof to the state, or to any county, shall vest in such grantee as complete a title as if such grantee were an actual person. [9 G. A., ch. 32, § 1; 14 G. A., ch. 103.]

[The word "any" before "county," in the first line, is erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

3082. Bidding in at execution sale. 1911. The proper person to bid off such real estate shall be:

1. The attorney-general, or the proper district [county] attorney, in case the judgment is in the name of the state, and the proceeds thereof are payable into the state treasury;

2. In case the proceeds of the judgment are, by law, payable into the county treasury for the use of the county revenue, or the school or other fund of the county, the district [county] attorney of the district [county], or the president of the board of supervisors of the county, or any attorney employed or authorized by the board of supervisors to prosecute such claim. [9 G. A., ch. 156, § 1.]

3083. Appraisal; bid. 1912. In all cases where property is sold as above provided, it shall first be appraised in the manner provided by law for the appraisement of property levied on under execution, and the said officers shall bid upon and purchase said property for the lowest sum possible. If no other person shall bid therefor, they shall bid at least two-thirds of the appraised value thereof, or the full amount of the judgment and costs, if the same is less than two-thirds of such appraised value. [11 G. A., ch. 110, § 1.]

3084. Costs and expenses. 1913. In cases where the state becomes the purchaser of real estate, under execution issued upon judgments rendered in favor of the state, all costs and expenses attending the same shall be audited and allowed by the executive council, and paid out of any money in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated, whenever such costs and expenses cannot be collected out of the defendant in such judgments, and if the property is purchased by a county, the costs and expenses in like cases shall be paid by such county. [Same, § 3.]

3085. Lands may be leased. 1914. Whenever the state or any county holds any such lands undisposed of, it may, by its proper agent, lease and control the use of the same, as shall, in the opinion of the executive council, if belonging to the state, and the board of supervisors, if belonging to the county, be for the best interest of such owner; and the proceeds of such use shall belong to the fund to which the debt on which the land was taken belongs. [9 G. A., ch. 32, § 6.]

3086. Buildings insured. 1915. The officers invested with the control and management thereof, shall have full power, and shall keep any valuable buildings thereon insured against fire, for the benefit of the state or county, in some responsible insurance company or companies; and the expense of such insurance shall be paid out of the rents of such property or the proceeds thereof when sold. [11 G. A., ch. 110, § 2.]

3087. Executive council. 1916. In any case where the title to any real estate is vested in the state as above provided, the executive council shall have the care, custody, and management thereof, and may sell the same for such sum and upon such terms as to them seems best, and may take such adequate security for any deferred payments as they see proper; and the proceeds of such sale shall be paid to the proper officer and credited to the fund to which the debt on which such real estate was taken belonged. A patent shall be issued to the purchaser of such real estate. [9 G. A., ch. 32, § 3.]

3088. Board of supervisors. 1917. In cases where the title to any real estate is vested in any county as above provided, it shall be competent for the board of supervisors to sell and dispose thereof, as in their judgment shall be for the best interest of their county; if the same is sold on time for any part of the purchase money, the board shall require adequate security for the payment thereof besides the responsibility of the purchaser; and the proceeds of sales of all such lands shall belong to the fund to which the debt on which the land was taken belonged. [Same, § 4.]

3089. Conveyance by. 1918. In case of any such sale and conveyance by such board of supervisors, the resolution making the sale shall be entered on the minutes of the board, and the yeas and nays on the passage thereof shall be also there entered with the date; such resolution shall express the consideration paid for such land, and such a description thereof as shall be necessary to make a deed therefor; and a transcript of such proceedings relating to said sales, the resolution and yeas and nays on its passage made and certified under the hand of the county auditor and the seal of the said board, shall be a sufficient deed of conveyance by the said county, and shall be entitled to be recorded or received in evidence without further proof. [Same, § 8.]

3090. Sale; contract; security. 1919. The state, or county, on selling such lands, may, at the option of the officer making such sale, execute a contract of sale, or an absolute conveyance thereof, and may take notes, mortgages, contracts, or other securities, payable to the grantor, which shall be as valid as if made to an actual person. [Same, § 7.]

CHAPTER 3.

OF PERPETUITIES AND LAND IN MORTMAIN.

3091. Power of disposition. 1920. Every disposition of property is void, which suspends the absolute power of controlling the same for a longer period than during the lives of persons then in being and for twenty-one years thereafter. [R., § 3199.]

A lease for nine hundred and ninety-nine years held not invalid under this section: Todhunter v. Des Moines I. & M. R. Co., 58-205.

3092. Churches may lease; taxation. 1921. Church organizations occupying property granted to them by the territory or state of Iowa, may lease the same for business purposes, and occupy other property with their church edifice; provided, that all of the income derived from such leased property shall be devoted to maintaining the religious exercises and ordinances of the church to which the grant was originally made, and to no other purpose; and such church and its affairs shall remain in the control of a board of trustees regularly chosen in accordance with its charter; but property so leased, shall, in all cases, be subject to taxation the same as the property of individuals. [13 G. A., ch. 133.]

CHAPTER 4.

OF THE TRANSFER OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

3093. Conditional sales; recording. 1922. No sale, contract, or lease, wherein the transfer of title or ownership of personal property is made to depend upon any condition, shall be valid against any creditor or purchaser of the vendee, or lessee in actual possession obtained in pursuance thereof, without notice, unless the same be in writing, executed by the vendor or lessor, acknowledged and recorded the same as chattel mortgages. [14 G. A., ch. 63.]

Prior to the passage of the act embodied in this section it was held that if the purchaser of personal property acquired possession under such a sale, but failed to acquire title by reason of failure to comply with the conditions on which the sale was to become absolute, the purchaser from him, although in good faith and without notice, acquired no title to the property as against the original owner unless the original transaction was fraudulent: Bailey v. Harris, 8-331; Robinson v. Chapline, 9-91; Baker v. Hall, 15-277; Moseley v. Shattuck, 43-540.

Therefore, held, that where property was delivered to vendee under a contract reserving to the vendor the title in the property until paid for, the vendee had a claim thereon prior to that of an assignee for the benefit of creditors, at least in a case where the assignee had actual knowledge of the conditions of the sale: Warner v. Jameson, 52-70.

It was doubtless to prevent the injustice that parties were sometimes enabled to practice under the rules established by these cases that this statutory provision was enacted. To bring a case within this statute and take it out of the former rule there must be a purchaser from or creditor of the vendee who, at the time his interest in the property accrued, had neither actual nor constructive notice of the interest reserved in the vendor by the condition of the contract, and the vendee must, at the time the interest accrued, have been in actual possession under the contract. Therefore, where the vendee was not in actual possession of the property, but it was still in the possession of a common carrier, through whom it had been shipped to the vendee, held, that the provisions of the statute were not applicable: Warner v. Johnson, 65-126.

The absence of notice, etc., does not render the sale invalid as to creditors and others. It is only the condition that is void: Pash v. Weston, 52-675.

Where one sold a wind-mill to a railroad company on condition that the seller should retain possession, and it was not alleged that the contract under which the sale was made was in writing, held, that the presumption was that it was not in writing, and was not valid against creditors without notice: Taylor v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 4 Dillon, 570, 580.

Mortgagees are creditors within the protection of the statutory provision above referred to: Ibid.

A conditional sale, although not binding as to subsequent creditors because not in writing or recorded, is nevertheless the taking of security so as to defeat the right of a mechanic's lien: Ibid.

This statutory provision is applicable in favor of execution or attaching creditors, but not in favor of a general creditor or a prior mortgagee: Myer v. Car Co., 102 U. S., 1.

Where a contract of sale is to be fully executed by both parties at a subsequent time, and until fully executed the title to the property is not to pass, the fact that the intended vendee gains possession of the property does not bring the case within the statutory provision: Budlong v. Cottrell, 64-234.

Where a party has possession of property under a contract of conditional sale, by the terms of which the ownership of the property is not to be vested in him until it is paid for, such contract or conditional sale will be invalid as against a purchaser having no notice thereof, it not being acknowledged and recorded: Moline Plow Co. v. Braden, 71-141.

Where property was in the possession of a party on trial, with the agreement that at the expiration of a certain time he should have the privilege of buying, if satisfactory, held, that until the expiration of that time there was no conditional sale or contract such as would render the property liable for his debts; that the "contract" referred to in the statutory provision is one creating the relation of vendee or lessee: Mowbray v. Cady, 40-604.

It is competent to show by parol evidence that a written lease of a sewing machine, providing for periodical payments, is part of a transaction in which it was contemplated that upon completion of payments the title should vest in the lessee, and such transaction would constitute, therefore, a conditional sale, which cannot be enforced against a purchaser or lienholder without notice, in the absence of the execution and recording of a written instrument evidencing such transaction: Singer Sewing Machine Co. v. Holecomb, 40-33.

One who has had possession of a sewing machine under lease, with contract to become its owner upon fulfillment of certain conditions, has no such ownership as to entitle him to recover the property by replevin: Hunt v. Winkel, 55-623.

The statutory provision does not apply to a transaction in which property is placed by the principal in the hands of his agent for disposition, no transfer of the title being made, and in such case a purchaser from the agent without knowledge of the agency is not protected: Conable v. Lynch, 45-84.

Where lumber was shipped to a person to be sold by him in his own name, as agent, he to receive, as compensation for his services, a share of the profits, held, that until a sale was made there was no transfer of the property from the original owner, and that after the sale the title passed to the purchaser, and that the transaction was not a conditional sale to be recorded in order to be valid as against a purchaser without notice: Crooker v. Brown, 40-144.

This section is not retrospective and does not apply to conditional sales made before it took effect: Knoultton v. Redenbaugh, 40-114; Moseley v. Shattuck, 53-540.

3094. Sales or mortgages; recording. 1923. No sale or mortgage of personal property, where the vendor or mortgagor retains actual possession thereof, is valid against existing creditors or subsequent purchasers, without notice, unless a written instrument conveying the same is executed, acknowledged like conveyances of real estate, and filed for record with the recorder of the county where the holder of the property resides. [R., § 2201; C., '51, § 1193.]

Change of possession: A change in the "actual possession," which will be sufficient under the statute to render the mortgage valid as to third persons without recording, must be something to indicate the change of ownership; if the property be left with the seller, whose relations to it continue unchanged, so far as the world may know from the acts of the parties, the possession will be regarded as continuing in him: Boothby v. Brown, 40-104; Sutton v. Ballou, 46-517; Hickok v. Buell, 51-655; McAfce v. Busby, 69-328.

Therefore, held, that where cattle were bought and separated from others on the range and then left with the balance of the herd in care of the same party to be herded, there was not such change of possession as to constitute a notice to creditors and purchasers, and the transaction was void as to them: Sutton v. Ballou, 46-517.

Where a sewing machine was sold to B, and put in his house and by him sold to plaintiff, his servant, who allowed it to remain there, held, that in the absence of a recorded bill of sale such transfer would not be valid against a creditor: Hickok v. Buell, 51-655.

The use of the term "actual possession" implies that a change of possession sufficient to constitute a delivery and pass the property as between the parties may not be sufficient to impart notice to others. To take a case out of the statute, something must be done to impart such notice. Therefore, where there was a sale of a field of corn standing on the farm of the vendor, the vendee not taking immediate charge of the corn nor control of the field, held, that the vendor retained actual possession within the meaning of the section: Smith v. Champney, 50-174; Nuckolls v. Pence, 52-581.

There must be an actual change of possession: McKay v. Clapp, 47-418.

The statute requires such transfer of dominion over the property as to imply notice to persons dealing with reference to the property that the title has been transferred; or such possession as will put such persons in possession of facts leading to inquiry as to the ownership. The possession need not necessarily be such as to imply notice to the public generally, but is sufficient if it implies notice to those who intend to purchase the property or deal with reference to it: Deere v. Needles, 65-101.

The question of possession of property in any case must of necessity depend upon its peculiar facts. All articles of personal property cannot be subject to the dominion and control of the owner in the same manner and to the same extent. When the owner exercises control over the property in the manner and to the extent usual in case of property of like character, and holds possession over it to the extent to which it is capable of being possessed according to the ordinary manner of using and handling such things, it is to be regarded as in his legal possession: Pope v. Cheney, 68-563.

Therefore, where the purchaser of corn in the crib was given formal possession thereof by the seller, who proceeded to nail up openings in the crib, held, that there was a sufficient change of possession under the statutory provision: Ibid.

An instrument assigning a judgment need not be recorded to be valid as to third parties. The chose in action so assigned cannot be regarded as in the possession of the assignor at the time of the transfer, or as retained in his possession afterward: Howe v. Jones, 57-130.

Not necessary where property is in the hands of third persons: Where the property is not in the actual possession of the mortgagor or vendor, or in his custody so that there may be manual delivery, an actual delivery is not necessary to the validity of the transaction. If the property is placed in the power of the purchaser that is sufficient: Barrows v. Harrison, 12-588.

Where personal property is not in the possession of the vendor, but in that of a third party, the statutory provision requiring a change of possession or notice to render the sale valid as to creditors or purchasers does not apply: Case v. Burrows, 54-679.

If the property at the time of the sale or mortgage is in the possession of a lessee, and remains in his possession, the vendor does not retain the "actual possession" of the property, so as to render recording necessary: Thomas v. Hillhouse, 17-67.

So held, also, where the goods were in the hands of a common carrier: Alsberg v. Latta, 30-442.

Where the property at the time of the sale is in the actual possession of a third person as lessee or the like, a sale without notice and without change of possession is valid, and it is wholly immaterial in such cases whether or not the owner has the right to the immediate possession: Campbell v. Hamilton, 63-293.

Where a landlord assigned his lease to his creditor, who thereupon became entitled to the landlord's share of the crops on the premises, held, such assignment was valid without record as to creditors and purchasers from the assignor without notice of the assignment, there being no retention of possession by the landlord: Lufkin v. Preston, 57-28.

Retention of possession by mortgagor not fraudulent: The retention of the mortgaged property by the mortgagor does not, as matter of law, render the mortgage fraudulent and void: Torbert v. Hayden, 11-435; Jessup v. Bridge, 11-572; Fromme v. Jones, 13-474; Wilhelmi v. Leonard, 13-330; Smith v. McLean, 24-332, 330.

Possession retained by vendor or mortgagor after recording the instrument is strictly lawful and not fraudulent or a badge of fraud, unless such retention is a part of the consideration of the sale: Jordan v. Lendrum, 55-478.

To make a bill of sale, duly recorded, valid as against subsequent purchasers as contemplated by statute, it is not necessary that it contain any express stipulation that the vendor is to retain possession of the property. Being recorded, the instrument is to have the same effect as if accompanied by actual delivery: Kuhn v. Graves, 9-303.

The mere retention of the possession of personal property by the mortgagor thereof, when the mortgage is duly recorded, is no longer either per se fraudulent or a badge of fraud in law, although it may be a circumstance with others to prove fraud in fact: Hughes v. Cory, 20-399.

The right given by statute to the mortgagor to retain possession of personal property implies the right to a reasonable use thereof, especially when the act of using does not necessarily consume it: Ibid.

Right to sell in ordinary course of trade: A chattel mortgage which contains a reservation by the mortgagor of the right to sell the mortgaged property in the usual course of retail trade, with an agreement to keep up the stock to its original value, and a reservation of the right to retain the avails of the sales under an agreement to apply a portion thereof to the payment of the mortgage, is not fraudulent per se, as a matter of law, and whether fraudulent in fact, or not, must be decided upon all the evidence: Ibid; Meyer v. Gage, 65-606; Maish v. Bird, 22 Fed. Rep., 576.

Nor does the fact that the mortgage provides that the debtor shall remain in possession of the goods, receiving the proceeds and paying the same to the creditor's banker, render the mortgage void. Such fact might be considered in determining the question of fraud, but it is not fraud per se: Adler v. Claffin, 17-89.

The provision that the mortgagor shall have the right to retain possession and carry on the business in the usual retail way for one year, paying costs and expenses of running the business and keeping up the stock to about what it was at the time of the execution of the mortgage, held not sufficient to render the mortgage fraudulent in law, although no provision was made for an application of the profits to the satisfaction of the mortgage debt. It might be otherwise if the mortgage should provide for sales that would exhaust the stock without any provision for such application: Jaffray v. Greenbaum, 64-492.

The fact that there is no agreement to account to the mortgagee for the proceeds of sales of the mortgaged property in the course of trade does not affect the validity of the mortgage: Clark v. Hyman, 55-14.

Reservation of the right to sell in the ordinary course of trade and apply the proceeds to the mortgagor's own use will not render the mortgage fraudulent in law: Sperry v. Ethridge, 63-543; Meyer v. Evans, 66-179.

Nor will the fact that the chattel mortgage containing such agreement with reference to reservation of possession and right to sell in the ordinary course of trade and apply the proceeds to mortgagor's own use, if given after the mortgagor becomes insolvent, render the mortgage necessarily fraudulent: Sperry v. Ethridge, 63-543.

In the federal courts it is held that a mortgage of chattels which permits the mortgagor to remain in possession until default in payment of the debt secured, with power to sell the goods as theretofore, is fraudulent and void in law, and cannot be enforced by a court of equity. This being a matter outside the state statute, the decisions of the United States supreme court will be followed independently of the state decisions: Crooks v. Stuart, 2 McCrary, 13; Wells v. Langbein, 20 Fed. Rep., 183.

Although the rule in the federal courts is that reservation by mortgagor of the right to sell in the usual course of trade renders the mortgage fraudulent and void as to creditors, yet a plaintiff who in proceedings in the federal courts levies upon such mortgaged property as that of the mortgagor, treating the mortgage as invalid, becomes liable in the state court to an action for trespass: Meyer v. Gage, 65-606.

Circumstances indicating fraud: The provisions as to application of the proceeds and the fact of insolvency may be considered as tending to prove that a mortgage reserving right of sale to mortgagor was executed with the intent to defraud or delay other creditors: Sperry v. Ethridge, 63-543.

The mere fact that creditors who are secured by chattel mortgages are intimate friends or relatives of the debtor does not necessarily show that their mortgages are fraudulent: Jaffray v. Greenbaum, 64-492.

Fraud in fact: Compliance with the provisions of the recording acts does not preclude the transaction being attacked on the ground that it is actually fraudulent as against creditors: Singer v. Sheldon, 56-354.

If the parties to the mortgage have a fraudulent intent, in creating the loan, to hinder and delay other creditors, and thereby confer advantages upon the mortgagor which he would not otherwise possess, this will be a fraud in fact which will render the mortgage void. The fact of fraudulent intent must, however, be shown by extrinsic evidence and found by the verdict of the jury. It cannot be inferred from the mere provisions of the mortgage: Torbert v. Hayden, 11-435.

If possession by mortgagor is accompanied by the power of disposition or use in any way inconsistent with the object of securing the rights of the mortgagee, that fact would be a badge of fraud, not absolute but prima facie, requiring explanation. Whether possession by the mortgagor with a right to deal with the property as his own is fraudulent constitutes a question of intent, and will depend entirely upon the circumstances explaining such acts of ownership: Ibid.

The fact that a chattel mortgage is filed for record by the mortgagor, if under circumstances showing good faith, is not evidence of fraud: Mason v. Franklin, 58-506.

The fact of a variance between the true consideration and that expressed in the instrument is at most but a badge of fraud, proper to be submitted to the consideration of the jury as a fact bearing upon the question of fraudulent intent: Ibid.

The fact that a mortgage is given by an insolvent person for more than is due, and that such insolvency is known to the mortgagee, is a badge of fraud, but not conclusive: Wood v. Scott, 55-114.

That fact, however, casts on the mortgagee the burden of showing that the mortgage was executed in good faith and for an honest purpose, and of satisfactorily explaining why the amount named was greater than the actual indebtedness: Lombard v. Dows, 66-243.

A chattel mortgage in a certain case, given by the debtor to his brother to secure existing indebtedness, held not fraudulent as to other creditors: Clark v. Hyman, 55-14.

The burden of establishing the invalidity of the chattel mortgage is upon the one who opposes its enforcement. This may be done by showing either that the provisions of the mortgage are such as to prove that the parties thereto intended to commit a fraud upon the rights of others, or by showing that the acts of the parties have been such that fraud is the necessary inference: Maish v. Bird, 22 Fed. Rep., 576.

Delay in recording the mortgage was held to be sufficiently explained by the fact that the mortgagor was trying to secure a large loan in New York, and if successful in so doing was then to pay off the mortgage before it was put on record, the mortgage debt not being created by the mortgage but already existing: Ibid.

Failure to record a chattel mortgage taken on a stock of goods, whereby other creditors are misled to give the mortgagor a credit which does not belong to him, will invalidate the mortgage as against such creditors without notice: Simon v. Openheimer, 20 Fed. Rep., 553.

After an assignment by the debtor, such mortgage is on a like footing with other creditors without notice, of a date prior to the recording of the mortgage: Rumsey v. Town, 20 Fed. Rep., 553.

The federal courts do not differ from the state courts in regard to the effect of the state statute, but even under the state decisions actual fraud, which may be inferred as matter of law from the facts of the case, including the provisions of the mortgage, will render it void. Delay of mortgagee to put his mortgage on record, or his allowing mortgagor to sell the property and apply the proceeds to his own use instead of reducing the mortgage debt, so as to defraud creditors, will constitute fraud such as to deprive the mortgagee of the priority of his claim: Lyon v. Council Bluffs Savings Bank, 29 Fed. Rep., 566.

Subsequent purchasers: A mortgagee of chattel property is a purchaser within the protection of the provisions requiring the recording of bills of sale or chattel mortgages: Manny v. Woods, 33-265.

Creditors without notice: The term "existing creditors" applies not only to creditors existing at the time the sale or mortgage of the chattel was made, but also to those who become such before change of possession, recording of the instrument, or giving of notice: Fox v. Edwards, 38-215.

The words "without notice" apply as well to creditors as to purchasers, and an unrecorded chattel mortgage is valid as against existing creditors with notice thereof at the time of its execution: Allen v. McCalla, 25-464; Miller v. Bryan, 3-58; Crawford v. Burton, 6-476.

The validity of a chattel mortgage is not made to depend solely on the fact of its being recorded before levy by the creditor; actual notice to the creditor is sufficient to give the mortgagee, by virtue of his unrecorded mortgage, duly executed, a preference over the claims of such creditor: McGavran v. Haupt, 9-83.

Such actual notice is just as effectual as due record of the instrument in charging the creditor or the officer making the levy with notice of the prior right of mortgagee: Gordon v. Hardin, 33-550.

Persons who become creditors of the vendor by a levy before change of possession or recording of the written instrument of sale or actual notice given are protected as existing creditors: McAfee v. Busby, 69-328.

A creditor who does not secure a levy under attachment or execution before notice of an unrecorded sale or mortgage is not protected: Allen v. McCalla, 25-464; Cragin v. Carmichael, 2 Dillon, 519; Crooks v. Stuart, 2 McCrary, 13.

The phrase "without notice" contemplates not only actual notice of the contents of the instrument, but also any notice sufficient to put a reasonable man upon inquiry: Allen v. McCalla, 25-464.

Notice such as will render a transaction valid without recording must be either actual or constructive. Such notice as to put a party on inquiry is actual notice; but if he does not have actual notice, negligence on his part in failing to make inquiry is immaterial unless, possibly, it amounts to fraud. A party is not to be affected by notice for the reason that he could have obtained knowledge of the transaction by the exercise of diligence: Moline Plow Co. v. Braden, 71-141.

If the bill of sale or chattel mortgage is executed and duly filed for record before levy under attachment or execution the creditor is affected with notice thereof: Kuhn v. Graves, 9-303.

To bind an officer levying an attachment with notice of an existing unrecorded mortgage thereon, it is not necessary that such notice be received by him subsequent to the writ being placed in his hands: Stewart v. Smith, 60-275.

The right of a creditor without notice of a sale or chattel mortgage not evidenced by recorded instrument, and where possession remains in vendor or mortgagor, attaches when he levies upon the property covered thereby, and notice after levy and before sale will not defeat his right to hold the property or transfer title thereto by a sale under such levy: Boothby v. Brown, 40-104.

Where a claim is asserted to property by reason of a purchase thereof, the right of the property as against the former owner is dependent upon the single fact of the sale; but, as against the creditors of such owner, who have caused it to be seized under process, it is dependent upon not only the fact of sale, but also the fact of notice of sale to the creditor before seizure, and the claimant of the property is not entitled to recovery in replevin against the sheriff who has seized it under process until he has established each of these facts: West v. St. John, 63-287.

An attaching creditor who makes a levy without notice of an unrecorded mortgage is protected against such mortgage although he receives notice thereof before the sale under his levy. (Overruling Kessey v. McHenry, 54-187): Bacon v. Thompson, 60-284.

Although a mortgage is given to secure an existing indebtedness, and no extension of time of payment is given, yet, if the mortgagee enter immediately into possession, he assumes a new responsibility, and the mortgage is not deemed to be without consideration: Clark v. Barnes, 72-563.

With notice: A chattel mortgagee having knowledge affecting him with notice of the ownership of the property by a third person cannot assert his claims as against the rights of such third person: Bray v. Flickinger, 69-167.

Actual notice of a mortgage void for uncertainty will not affect a person with liens or claims thereunder: Barr v. Cannon, 69-20.

Reference in a mortgage of both real and personal property to a mortgage of record in another county, held not sufficient to put mortgagee on inquiry as to an unrecorded bill of sale: Clark v. Barnes, 72-563.

A recital in a chattel mortgage that it is subject to a prior mortgage will prevent the recording of the second giving it precedence: Simon v. Openheimer, 20 Fed. Rep., 553.

Facts in a particular case held sufficient to affect the attachment creditor with notice of a chattel mortgage before the levy of his attachment: Jaffray v. Thompson, 65-323.

Where a manufacturer of buggies made a chattel mortgage upon buggies in his possession not quite finished, held, that the mortgagee acquired thereby a prior claim to that of a person for whom one of such buggies was being manufactured, and who advanced the purchase price thereof, the chattel mortgagee having notice that the buggy was being manufactured for such person, but not that the price had been paid: Hesser v. Wilson, 36-152.

Sufficiency of description: The recording of a chattel mortgage upon animals described by color, age and name, but not stating the present or past ownership thereof, nor the place where they are or have been kept, will not impart notice: Warner v. Wilson, 73-719.

If a chattel mortgage describes a certain number of head of cattle, giving the ownership, possession and location, it will be sufficient, although in fact there are not so many cattle corresponding to the description as the mortgage calls for: Kenyon v. Tramel, 71-693.

Where the description of the property covered by the mortgage was "all the cut and growing and having grown on the" premises described, held, that the description was too uncertain to be of any validity against an officer who had levied upon the property, and that the court would not insert or understand the word "crops" for the purpose of curing the defect: Cray v. Currier, 62-535.

The description of the mortgaged property as "one oscillation thresher, size 6, 30-inch cylinder, and also one Chicago Pitts ten-horse power," held insufficient: Hayes v. Wilcox, 61-732.

A chattel mortgage upon "sixty head of hogs," without other description, does not contain anything which would justify inquiry leading to the identification of the property, and therefore the record of such mortgage is not notice to a subsequent purchaser of the property intended to be mortgaged: Everett v. Brown, 61-420.

A mortgage which is so indefinite as to the description of property that the record thereof would not constitute sufficient notice to a purchaser may, nevertheless, be valid as between parties who are aware of the facts. Therefore, held, that a description of the property in the mortgage as "eleven Smith farm wagons, four Ketchum farm wagons," was sufficient as between parties who were aware of the facts, it appearing that the mortgagor had only that number and description of wagons at that time: Clapp v. Trowbridge, 74-550.

It is not a sufficient location of property to say that it is in a county named: Warner v. Wilson, 73-719.

A chattel mortgage upon a horse, making no reference to future earnings, held not to cover earnings by way of premiums at a fair: McArthur v. Garman, 71-34.

A mortgage of crops already growing is not void for uncertainty in failing to designate the year in which the crops are to be grown: Luce v. Moorehead, 73-498.

A mortgage on crops to be grown in the future may be valid when the crops come into existence: Norris v. Hix, 74-524.

While a chattel mortgage will not be deemed to cover after-acquired property unless the intention that it should is clearly expressed, yet where the property is described as all crops grown during certain years on premises specified, and it is executed at such a time that no crops could be completely grown at that time, it will be sufficient to cover crops grown during that year: Ibid.

A chattel mortgage may be valid as to property sufficiently described and void for uncertainty of description as to other property: Luce v. Moorehead, 73-498.

Mortgage of fixtures: Whether fixtures which are a part of the realty as between the vendor and vendee are, in law, severed and made personalty by the execution of a chattel mortgage thereon, quere. But the chattel mortgage, when recorded and indexed as such, does not constitute constructive notice to a subsequent purchaser of the realty: Bringholff v. Munzenmaier, 20-513.

Where a saw-mill was erected upon leased ground, the boiler being encased in brick and the shed covering the mill resting on blocks, it being possible to remove both shed and mill without injury to the realty; and the mill was then mortgaged as personal property, held, that as between the mortgagor and his grantees and the mortgagee and his assignees, the mill must be regarded as personal property, and that the fact that the owner of the land became owner of the mill after the execution of the mortgage thereon would not merge the ownership of the mill with that of the realty so as to defeat the chattel mortgage: Denham v. Sankey, 38-269.

Where the owner of real property executes a mortgage upon chattels, which may properly be made fixtures, and subsequently affixes them to the realty, a person purchasing or acquiring a lien upon such real property with knowledge of the facts takes subject to the mortgage; and held, that the mechanic who attached such fixtures to the realty was affected with notice by the recording of such chattel mortgage, and his lien was subject thereto: Sowden v. Craig, 26-156.

Where a chattel mortgage is executed on machinery not yet annexed to the mill in which it is intended to be placed, it becomes a prior lien as against a mortgage of the realty: Miller v. Wilson, 71-610.

Nursery trees planted by the owner of real estate become a part of the realty, and pass as such to the purchaser at the foreclosure of a mortgage executed by the owner, although the trees were planted after the execution of the mortgage: Price v. Brayton, 19-309.

A mortgagee of real property on which nursery trees are standing, who purchases such property at foreclosure sale, is entitled to the trees as against a chattel mortgage thereon given subsequently to the execution of the real property mortgage, but recorded before the foreclosure sale: Adams v. Beadle, 47-439.

Place of recording: The mortgage must be filed in the county where the mortgagor resides. It is not sufficient that it is filed in the county where the property is situated: Stewart v. Smith, 60-275.

Where the mortgaged property is in the possession of an agent of the mortgagee, an officer levying an attachment thereon is bound to take notice of the possession of such mortgagee, although the mortgage is not properly filed for record: Ibid.

A chattel mortgage will be valid in any county to which the property is removed, although not recorded there, if duly recorded in the county where the owner of the property resides. And the same holds true where a mortgage is duly recorded in another state, and the property is subsequently brought into this state and sold: Smith v. McLean, 24-322.

In determining the validity of a chattel mortgage made in another state upon property in that state, the courts will follow the interpretation which the courts of that state give to its statutes in relation to the validity of such mortgages: Fisher v. Friedman, 47-443.

A mortgage of personal property, properly executed and recorded in another state where the property is, has the same force when the property is removed to this state as under the laws of the state where executed, and will be enforced here, and the possession of the property by the mortgagor beyond the time stipulated, against the consent of the mortgagee, and in spite of his efforts to recover it, will not defeat his rights thereto: Simms v. McKee, 25-341.

Effect of recording: Mere recording will not constitute a delivery, and the lien of the mortgage will not attach until there is an acceptance: National State Bank v. Morse, 73-174.

No presumption arises from the execution of a mortgage that the mortgagee owns the property therein described or that such property is in existence: Warner v. Wilson, 73-719.

An unrecorded bill of sale or mortgage is admissible in evidence against a subsequent purchaser, it being proper to introduce it for the purpose of following it with proof of notice: Scharfenberg v. Bishop, 35-60.

The fact that under the statute requiring the recording of a bill of sale it is defective on the ground of uncertainty will not preclude its being received in evidence: Singer v. Sheldon, 56-354.

3095. Index. 1924. The recorder must keep an entry book or index for instruments of the above description, having the pages thereof ruled, so as to show in parallel columns, in the manner hereinafter provided in case of deeds for real property:

1. The mortgagors or vendors;
2. The mortgagees or vendees;
3. The date of the filing of the instrument;
4. The date of the instrument itself;
5. Its nature;
6. The page and book where the record is to be found. [R., § 2202; C., '51, § 1194.]

[As to indexing, recording, etc., see notes to § 3115.]

3096. Note time of filing. 1925. Whenever any written instrument of the character above contemplated is filed for record as aforesaid, the recorder shall note thereon the day and hour of filing the same, and forthwith enter in his entry book all the particulars required in the preceding section, except the sixth; and from the time of said entry, the sale or mortgage shall be deemed complete as to third persons, and have the same effect as though it had been accompanied by the actual delivery of the property sold or mortgaged. [R., § 2203; C., '51, § 1195.]

3097. Recording. 1926. The recorder shall, as soon as practicable, record such instrument, and enter in his entry book, in its proper place, the page and book where the record may be found. [R., § 2204; C., '51, § 1196.]

3098. Mortgagee entitled to possession. 1927. In the absence of stipulations to the contrary in the mortgage, the mortgagee of personal property is entitled to the possession thereof. [R., § 2217; C., '51, § 1210.]

The mortgagee under a chattel mortgage is not, in this state, the absolute and unqualified owner of the mortgaged property before default in payment of the money secured by the mortgage: Kern v. Wilson, 73-490.

Under Revision, § 2217, providing that the mortgagee should hold the legal title as well as the right to possession, held, that the legal title was in him for the purpose of enabling him to enforce his lien, but that the ownership remained in the mortgagor: Hubbard v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 33-325, 333, 341. Also held, that the mortgagor of personal property had no interest therein which could be levied upon and sold under execution: Campbell v.

Leonard, 11-489; Gordon v. Hardin, 33-550; Porter v. Knight, 63-365. But see § 4189.

The mortgagor of personal property has no such interest therein as can be levied upon and sold. If the mortgagee is in possession the rights of the mortgagor may be reached by garnishment, and there is no occasion to appoint a receiver: McCounell v. Denham, 72-494.

If mortgagee has the right to take possession, he may do so even after levy, and leave no interest in the mortgagor subject to levy: Wells v. Chapman, 59-658.

The mortgagor of exempt personal property may maintain an action for damage where the same has been wrongfully seized and sold upon execution: Evans v. St. Paul Harvester Works, 63-204.

A mortgagor of personal property has a right to redeem, even after condition broken, and the mortgagee, although in possession after such breach, is liable to garnishment by creditor of mortgagor for any surplus remaining in his hands, in case of a sale of the property, beyond what is necessary to pay his claim: Doane v. Garretson, 24-351. But a mortgagee not in possession cannot be garnished. See note to § 4200.

The equity of redemption of the mortgagor of personal property after conditions broken is subject to sale or transfer as other property, and passes under a general assignment. After such general assignment the assignee is not subject to garnishment in a suit against the mortgagor: Gimble v. Ferguson, 58-414. So, also, where, by agreement between mortgagor, mortgagee and an attaching creditor, it was agreed that the mortgaged property be sold in bulk and the proceeds, after satisfying the mortgage, be applied upon the attachment, held, that this agreement transferred the mortgagor's equity of redemption and took priority over a subsequent attachment of such proceeds by another creditor: Phelps v. Winters, 59-561.

CHAPTER 5.

OF REAL PROPERTY.

3099. Who deemed seized. 1928. All persons owning lands not held by an adverse possession, shall be deemed to be seized and possessed of the same. [R., § 2207; C., '51, § 1199.]

This presumption of seizin continues until the owner is disseized: Barrett v. Love, 48-103.

3100. Estate in fee-simple. 1929. The term "heirs," or other technical words of inheritance, are not necessary to create and convey an estate in fee-simple. [R., § 2208; C., '51, § 1200.]

Applied: Barlow v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 29-276.

3101. Conveyance passes grantor's interest. 1930. Every conveyance of real estate passes all the interest of the grantor therein, unless a contrary intent can be reasonably inferred from the terms used. [R., § 2209; C., '51, § 1201.]

A conveyance passes any equitable interest the grantor may have in the land, although he have no legal interest: White v. Butt, 32-335, 345.

The dower interest of a wife is relinquished by a deed in which she joins with her husband in the granting clause and covenants, although there is no express relinquishment of dower: Edwards v. Sullivan, 20-502.

The fact that a conveyance is voluntary does not create a trust in the grantee in favor of the grantor: Butler v. Nelson, 73-732.

3102. After-acquired interest. 1931. Where a deed purports to convey a greater interest than the grantor was at the time possessed of, any after-acquired interest of such grantor, to the extent of that which the deed purports to convey, inures to the benefit of the grantee. [R., § 2210; C., '51, § 1202.]

This provision does not apply where a deed conveys the estate which the grantor at the time actually possessed, and he subsequently acquires a greater estate: Collamer v. Kelley, 12-319, 326.

Where the title which the grantor claimed when the first conveyance was made was absolutely void by reason of facts of which the grantee was affected with notice, held, that a court of equity was not bound to consider a subsequently acquired title as having inured to such grantee, who never made any claim to it, rather than to a subsequent grantee: Viele v. Van Steenberg, 31 Fed. Rep., 249.

In order that a conveyance may operate to pass an after-acquired title, it must be so executed that it would have passed such title at the time of execution if the grantor had then had such title: Heaton v. Fryberger, 38-185.

Where the wife simply joins with the husband in a conveyance for the purpose of relinquishing her dower, an interest afterward acquired by her will not inure to the benefit of the grantee in such conveyance. (See § 3108): Childs v. McChesney, 20-431; O'Neil v. Vanderburg, 25-104.

Where A. conveyed property to B. without having title thereto, and subsequently C., the owner of the title, conveyed to A., taking from him a mortgage for a part of the purchase money, held, that although the title thus conveyed to A. vested at once in B., nevertheless

C. would be allowed to enforce his mortgage against the property in B.'s hands: Morgan v. Graham, 35-213.

A mortgage will attach to an after-acquired title: Rice v. Kelso, 57-115.

3103. Adverse possession. 1932. Adverse possession of real property does not prevent any person from selling his interest in the same. [R., § 2211; C., '51, § 1203.]

As things in action are assignable under our law the reason of the common-law rule, which prohibited a sale of property in the adverse possession of another, ceases, and it may well

3104. Future estates. 1933. Estates may be created to commence at a future day. [R., § 2212; C., '51, § 1204.]

A grant of an estate to commence in futuro would give the grantee a present interest in the property; therefore, held, that an instrument purporting to convey premises in the usual form of a deed, but containing the stip-

3105. Declarations of trust. 1934. Declarations, or creations of trusts or powers, in relation to real estate, must be executed in the same manner as deeds of conveyance; but this provision does not apply to trusts resulting from the operation or construction of law. [R., § 2213; C., '51, § 1205.]

An agreement of the trustee of a resulting trust to hold as such, though not in writing, will not deprive such trust of the character imposed upon it by law: Cotton v. Wood, 25-43.

The conveyance of real property to a partnership in the name of the partners creates a resulting trust in such partners for the benefit of the partnership: Paige v. Paige, 71-318.

Where a note and mortgage were executed by a parent to a third person with the parol agreement that it should be held for the benefit of the child of the mortgagor, held, that a trust was thereby created which was not affected by this statutory provision. A trust relating to a chose in action, and not to real estate, is not within the purview of this sec-

3106. Married women. 1935. A married woman may convey or encumber any real estate or interest therein belonging to her, and may control the same, or contract with reference thereto, to the same extent and in the same manner as other persons. [R., § 2215; C., '51, § 1207.]

A married woman may encumber or convey real property owned in her own separate right: Samborn v. Casady, 21-77.

The mortgage of a married woman upon her separate property, to secure her husband's debt, if executed for a valuable consideration, would be binding: Green v. Scranage, 19-461.

Previous to the present statutory provision (§ 3397) declaring that a conveyance, transfer or lien executed by either husband or wife in favor of the other shall be valid to the same extent as between other persons, it was held that a conveyance from wife to husband in connection with an agreement to separate, for the relinquishment of dower, would be upheld if supported by a consideration and free from fraud: Robertson v. Robertson, 25-350.

But it was also held that, aside from an agreement to separate, neither husband nor wife had any interest in the property of the

be doubted whether the rule itself, independently of this section, should longer apply: Foster v. Young, 35-27, 40.

ulation that the grantee "shall have no interest in the said premises as long as the said grantor shall live," did not transfer any estate to the grantee: Leaver v. Gauss, 62-314.

In such case the person for whose benefit the trust is made might maintain action thereon in his own name: Patterson v. Mills, 69-755.

The conveyance of land to be converted into money, and the entire proceeds to be paid out by the grantor, creates a trust in the grantee, and an agreement as to the disposal of the proceeds should be in writing: McGinness v. Barton, 71-644.

Though the conveyance to the trustee is absolute in form, a purchaser from the trustee, with knowledge of the trust, takes subject thereto: Sleeper v. Iselin, 59-379.

Section applied: McHenry v. Painter, 58-365.

other which could be the subject of conveyance between them: McKee v. Reynolds, 26-578.

And by § 3394, any agreement between husband and wife, relative to any contingent interest of either in the property of the other, is void: Linton v. Crosby, 54-478.

The power of a married woman to acquire by purchase, and contract with reference to real property, discussed and previous cases cited: Shields v. Keys, 24-298.

For the history of previous legislation as to the power of a married woman to convey, and the method of executing instruments in such cases, see Simms v. Hervey, 19-273.

Where husband and wife agreed to sell the wife's interest in certain real estate, after which the husband alone executed, without delivering, a deed thereto, and received payment of the consideration with the wife's knowledge and consent, and she, after the husband's death, voluntarily executed and delivered the deed, held, that the wife's title was thereby divested: Pursley v. Hayes, 22-11.

Where the title is in the wife, and she joins her husband in a warranty deed conveying it, the addition of a clause releasing her right of dower will not limit the estate conveyed by her to her dower interest: Grapengether v. Fejervary, 9-163.

A wife joining with her husband in a conveyance of his property merely to relinquish her dower right does not become bound by the covenants of such deed: Childs v. McChesney, 20-431, 436; Lyon v. Metcalf, 12-93.

And, therefore, an after-acquired title of the wife does not inure to the grantee in a previous deed of the husband without title, in which deed the wife has simply joined to relinquish dower: Childs v. McChesney, 20-431; O'Neil v. Vanderburg, 25-104; Thompson v. Merrill, 58-419; Edwards v. Davenport, 4 McCrary, 34.

Since the enactment of the Code of '51, conveyances by married women are to be executed as in other cases, and acknowledgment is not necessary to their validity: Simms v. Hervey, 19-273.

Under this section it seems that a wife may contract with the purchaser of property from her husband to relinquish her dower interest by a separate contract from that of the conveyance: Dunlap v. Thomas, 69-358.

3107. Conveyance by husband and wife. 1936. Every conveyance made by a husband and wife shall be deemed sufficient to pass any and all right of either in the property conveyed, unless the contrary appears on the face of the conveyance. [R., § 2255.]

Where the title is in the wife and she joins her husband in a warranty deed conveying it, the addition of a clause releasing her right of dower will not limit the estate conveyed by her to her dower interest: Grapengether v. Fejervary, 9-163.

3108. Covenants. 1937. In cases where either the husband or wife joins in a conveyance of real property owned by the other, the husband or wife so joining shall not be bound by the covenants of such conveyance, unless it is expressly so stated on the face thereof.

As to the wife, this is the rule generally recognized, aside from statute: Childs v. McChesney, 20-431, 436.

The fact that the land conveyed is not owned by the husband does not render the wife liable to any greater extent under the covenants of the deed than if it had been owned by him, in case the title is not in her, and such covenants will not work an estoppel as to her: Thompson v. Merrill, 58-419.

Section applied: Lyon v. Metcalf, 12-93.

3109. Mortgagor retains possession. 1938. In the absence of stipulations to the contrary, the mortgagor of real property retains the legal title and right of possession thereto. [R., § 2217; C., '51, § 1210.]

The interest of the mortgagor in lands mortgaged is an estate of inheritance: White v. Ritzenmyer, 30-268.

The mortgaged property in the mortgagor's hands possesses all the incidents of real estate. It may be sold, will descend to heirs, and is subject to dower: Barrett v. Blackmar, 47-565.

The mortgagee does not have an estate in the land, but simply a specific lien or charge thereon to secure his debt: Newman v. De Lorimer, 19-244; McHenry v. Cooper, 27-137, 144.

A mortgagee is, at common law, entitled to the benefit of covenants running with the land, and that right is not affected by this section: Devin v. Hendershott, 32-192.

The mortgagor is not by this section placed in any different position nor has he any greater rights than he had or would have independently of these provisions: Porter v. Green, 4-571.

3110. Tenancy in common. 1939. Conveyances to two or more in their own right, create a tenancy in common unless a contrary intent is expressed. [R., § 2214; C., '51, § 1206.]

When an estate is held by two or more in their own right, nothing being expressed to the contrary, the tenancy is in common, and this rule applies in case of husband and wife: Hoffman v. Stigers, 28-302.

Where property is deeded to a partnership in the individual names of the partners it is held by them in trust for the firm: Paige v. Paige, 71-318.

3111. Vendor's lien. 1940. No vendor's lien for unpaid purchase money shall be recognized or enforced in any court of law or equity after a conveyance by the vendee, unless such lien is reserved by conveyance, mortgage, or other instrument duly acknowledged and recorded, or unless such conveyance by the vendee, is made after suit brought by the vendor, his executor, or assigns to enforce such lien. But nothing herein shall be construed to deprive a vendor of any remedy now existing against conveyances procured through the fraud or collusion of the vendees therein, or persons purchasing of such vendees with notice of such fraud.

How reserved: A contract to convey does not defeat a vendor's lien under this section: Noyes v. Kramer, 54-22; Thropshire v. Lyle, 31 Fed. Rep., 694.

A mortgage by vendee is not a conveyance in such sense as to prevent the enforcement of the vendor's lien. In such case the mortgage will take priority, but the vendor's lien may be enforced against the equity of redemption: Tinsley v. Tinsley, 52-14.

In particular cases, held, that there was not sufficient reservation of the vendor's lien to preserve it: Rotch v. Hussey, 52-694; Dean v. Scott, 67-233.

An assignment for the benefit of creditors is a conveyance within the meaning of this section, and cuts off any vendor's lien not preserved therein: Prouty v. Clark, 73-55.

When the vendor of real estate makes a conveyance and delays taking his mortgage for the purchase money until after a mortgage is made to another party without notice, the vendor's mortgage will be postponed to the other: Davis v. Lutkiewicz, 72-254.

This provision limiting the vendor's lien, as against third persons, to cases where it is reserved in a deed or mortgage, is unconstitutional so far as it applies to liens existing before its enactment: Jordan v. Wimer, 45-65; Webster v. McCollough, 61-496.

Priority: A mortgagee having knowledge that the purchase money was unpaid could not, before the enactment of this section, acquire a prior lien to that of vendor for such purchase money, whether he knew how much there was unpaid or not, it being his duty to inquire and ascertain the amount unpaid: Jordan v. Wimer, 45-65.

A mortgage made subsequently to a deed, for money advanced by a third party to pay the purchase price of the property, does not confer priority over a judgment existing against vendee at the time of the purchase of the property. The mortgagee is not entitled in such case to be subrogated to the rights of the vendor. Whether a simple vendor's lien is paramount to the lien of a judgment obtained without notice of the rights of the vendor, quere: Gilman v. Dingeman, 49-308.

Where the legal title is held subject to an agreement to convey, in the nature of a title bond, a judgment against the holder of such legal title does not become a lien thereon: Scott v. Mewhirter, 49-487.

The vendor's lien does not have priority over the lien of a judgment against vendee, in favor of a party who has no notice of the vendor's rights: Cutler v. Ammon, 65-281.

A purchaser under foreclosure of a vendor's lien, which was not commenced until after the execution of a mortgage of the property by vendee, which was recorded subsequently to the commencement of the foreclosure, but prior to sale thereunder, held not to have acquired priority over such mortgage: Henry County v. Bradshaw, 20-355.

The vendor's lien is superior to the claim of the widow of vendee for dower: Noyes v. Kramer, 54-22.

Cancellation of a bond for a deed, and sale of the property to another, will defeat any claim of the person from whom the property was purchased under such bond, as against the subsequent purchaser: McMillen v. Rose, 54-522.

Assignment: A lien passes to the assignee of notes given for the purchase money as an incident thereof: Blair v. Marsh, 8-144; Rakestraw v. Hamilton, 14-147; Paramore v. Nabers, 42-659.

And such lien will be sufficient consideration for a mortgage executed in recognition thereof, and to make it a matter of record: Reynolds v. Morse, 52-155.

Waiver: The taking of a mortgage on the same property is a merger or waiver of the vendor's lien: Stuart v. Harrison, 52-511; Escher v. Simmons, 54-269.

The taking of a mortgage upon other property to secure unpaid purchase money is a presumptive waiver of the vendor's lien, and casts upon the vendor the burden of proving that no waiver was intended. Evidence in a particular case held not sufficient to overcome such presumption of waiver: Gnash v. George, 58-492.

The taking of distinct security is evidence that the vendor does not rely upon his lien, but intends to waive it, and this is true where the vendor accepts the note of a third person indorsed by the vendee, even though it afterwards appears that at the time the maker of such note was insolvent, if the parties supposed the security to be good at the time of the purchase: Kendrick v. Eggleston, 56-128.

Where the vendor of real estate takes collateral security for the purchase money he thereby waives presumptively his vendor's lien, and the fact that the security thus taken is of no value, or afterwards becomes valueless, does not defeat the waiver: Akers v. Luse, 56-346.

Where the vendor, without relying upon his lien, obtains judgment at law for the purchase money, and buys in the property at a sale thereof under execution, he does not thereby lose his superiority over liens that are inferior to his, but may, by an action in equity against such lienholders, have his title quieted: Patterson v. Linder, 14-414.

The fact that vendor's claim for purchase money has been presented to the administrators of vendee's estate, and a portion of the amount thereof has been received, will not operate as a waiver of the lien: Hayes v. Horine, 12-61.

Where the vendor conveyed title to the vendee, accepting payment of the debt in money and negotiable securities, which he transferred, held, that the vendor's lien was waived and could not be enforced by the purchaser of such securities: Porter v. Dubuque, 20-440.

In equity an unpaid vendor who has not waived it will be entitled to a lien, and no waiver obtained by fraud will be effectual to destroy such lien. Accordingly held, that in an exchange of lands, the purchase money having failed in part by reason of fraudulent representations as to the land exchanged, a vendor's lien could be enforced against the land for which it was taken as payment: McDole v. Purdy, 23-277.

The taking of a note upon which, through fault of vendee, nothing is realized, does not constitute a waiver of the vendor's lien: Johnson v. McGrew, 42-555.

Where, as part consideration of a conveyance of real property, a bond for a deed was taken for the conveyance by the vendee to the vendor of another piece of real property, and subsequently the obligor in such bond induced the obligee to accept a valueless railroad bond in lieu thereof, held, that the delivery of such bond did not satisfy the purchase price of the property first conveyed, which was to have been satisfied by the conveyance of the property covered by the bond for a deed, and that the obligee in such bond might enforce a vendor's lien on the land originally conveyed by him: Brown v. Byam, 65-374.

Under particular circumstances, held, that a mortgage never accepted by the vendor would not defeat his right to a vendor's lien: Huff v. Olmstead, 67-598.

Against whom available: Aside from statutory provisions, the right of vendor to a lien for unpaid purchase money is well settled. It is an equitable mortgage and does not contemplate any writing to evidence it. It follows the property into the hands of the heir or future vendee with notice: Pierson v. David, 1-23.

A vendor's lien for unpaid purchase money may be enforced against the vendee and his heirs and other privies in estate as well as against subsequent purchasers, even where the title has passed to the vendee, and much more readily will this relief be granted when the title is still in the vendor, who has only given title bond for conveyance. Purchasers of vendee's right to the title bond are purchasers of an equity only and take with notice of the vendor's lien: Blair v. Marsh, 8-144.

Prior to the adoption of the present Code vendor had a lien upon the premises for any part of the purchase money which he might enforce against any purchaser with notice: Webster v. McCollough, 61-496.

In a particular case, held, that the evidence did not charge the grantee of property with knowledge of the existence of the vendor's lien thereon: Harkleroad v. Waterhouse, 69-702.

Nature of the right: Under the statutes existing prior to the present Code, the vendor's lien was recognized, and was not limited to cases where a bond for a deed had been executed: Johnson v. McGrew, 42-555; Jordan v. Wimer, 45-65.

The fact that by agreement vendor continues to reside upon the premises during life will not deprive him of his lien, it appearing that there was no reservation in his favor of any interest in the land: Webster v. McCollough, 61-496.

Where a party claims the vendor's land under an agreement or contract which is not a technical mortgage, a court of equity will recognize and sustain it, whenever it appears from the contract that it was so intended: Whiting v. Eichelberger, 16-422.

A vendor's lien upon real estate is not based upon contract, nor is it an equitable mortgage, nor a trust resulting to the vendor from non-payment of purchase money. It is a simple equity raised by courts of chancery, and not depending upon any particular facts: Porter v. Dubuque, 20-440.

A vendor's lien is a mere naked equity raised and administered by courts, to be enforced between the parties, where no counter-equities arise, but it is never to be allowed to override or take priority of equities or rights of third persons which have attached in ignorance of such vendor's equity: Allen v. Loring, 34-499.

A consolidation of railroad companies by which the stockholders in one acquire stock in the other, and real property belonging to one is transferred to the other, does not entitle such stockholders to a vendor's lien on such real property: Cross v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co., 58-62.

The interest of vendor in real estate conveyed is not real estate but personal estate, and in case of his death it will descend to his administrators, and not to his heirs: Baldwin v. Thompson, 15-504.

In proposing this section the Code commissioners say: "The so-called vendor's lien owes its existence to peculiarities of the English law of real estate which have never been adopted by us; and it not only lacks any reason for its perpetuation, but is directly at variance with the whole spirit and interest of our system of land records. On these grounds it has been refused recognition by some American courts, even without legislative interposition, and although it has been sustained in Iowa ever since the important case of Pierson v. David, 1 Iowa, 23, yet the objections to it have been strongly stated in the recent case of Porter v. City of Dubuque, 20 Iowa, 440. Most of the Iowa cases usually cited to sustain it are not authorities for the vendor's lien in the proper sense of the words, but only for the right which a vendor has to enforce payment after he has delivered possession, but before conveyance. With this latter right we of course do not propose to interfere. The amendment suggested only cuts off the secret lien, after an absolute conveyance, enforced in equity. The language of the court in Porter v. City of Dubuque certainly throws enough doubt over the doctrine to call for the interposition of the legislature to settle the question one way or the other, and we think there cannot be much hesitation in which way this should be." Code Com'rs' Rep., p. 62.

CHAPTER 6.

THE CONVEYANCE OF REAL PROPERTY.

3112. Instrument affecting, recorded. 1941. No instrument affecting real estate is of any validity against subsequent purchasers for a valuable consideration, without notice, unless recorded in the office of the recorder of the county in which the land lies, as hereinafter provided. [R., § 2220; C., '51, § 1211.]

I. EFFECT OF RECORDING.

Not essential to validity: Recording is not essential to the validity of the instrument, as to parties and those having notice, nor to its competency as evidence: Clark v. Connor, 28-311.

The recording laws were not designed for the benefit of the immediate parties to a conveyance, but as a protection and shield to third persons: Hopping v. Burnam, 2 G. Gr., 39.

As between the parties a mortgage of real property is binding without being recorded: Brewer's Estate v. Crow, 4 G. Gr., 520.

After the delivery of a properly executed conveyance the title of the vendor is completely and entirely divested, although the instrument is not recorded: Norton v. Williams, 9-528.

As to effect of instruments not properly acknowledged, see notes to § 3113.

Presumption from recording: The presumption is that a deed, beneficial to the grantee, properly acknowledged and recorded, has been delivered, and the knowledge and assent necessary to a valid delivery will be presumed in the absence of a negative showing: Robinson v. Gould, 26-89.

In such a case the burden of proof is upon the party claiming non-delivery to clearly rebut the presumption arising from the acknowledgment and recording: Craven v. Winter, 38-471.

Therefore, held, that delivery of a deed of voluntary conveyance to the wife of grantee, who was a son of grantor, would be presumed to be a delivery to the son: Ibid.

While the recording of a conveyance is not proof of its delivery, yet execution of the instrument, and delivery to the recorder in good faith and at the instance of the grantee, may constitute a delivery; but the presumption of delivery would not arise from the fact that the instrument is found recorded, if the grantee has done no act recognizing its existence or validity: Foley v. Howard, 8-56.

The fact that a grantor in a deed delivers it to the recorder for record may be a circumstance, with others, tending to show fraud, but does not, of itself, as a matter of law, make the deed fraudulent or void: Ward v. Wehman, 27-279.

Assent of the grantee to the conveyance will not relate back to the delivery of the deed to the recorder for record where it was without the knowledge of the grantee, and without previous agreement to execute a conveyance of the property referred to: Day v. Griffith, 15-104.

Subsequent acceptance by the grantee of an instrument delivered to the recorder without his knowledge will not relate back to such delivery so as to cut out the rights of an intervening attaching creditor: Ibid.

Filing a deed for record cannot be considered as a delivery unless it is filed in pursuance of a previous agreement: Deer v. Nelson, 73-186.

Record notice: The fact that a purchaser is charged with record notice of one lien does not affect him as to others not recorded. Though not a bona fide purchaser as to the one he may be as to the others: Koons v. Grooves, 20-373.

A fraudulent deed acquires no validity by recording, and does not bind a subsequent purchaser who has not actual notice: Gardner v. Cole, 21-205.

A grantor who becomes liable on covenants running with the land is charged with notice of subsequent conveyances or incumbrances of record, and cannot, by settlement with his immediate grantee, cut off the claims of subsequent parties: Devin v. Hendershott, 32-192.

The filing for record is notice to the world of grantee's rights, and a party claiming a right of action as against the conveyance on account of fraud is deemed to have had notice of such fraud from the date of the recording: Laird v. Kilbourne, 70-83.

A person having constructive notice of an instrument is affected with all that it contains, and if thereby put upon inquiry he is bound to take notice of all that he might have learned by pursuing the path indicated: Thomas v. Kennedy, 24-397.

The rights conferred by an instrument of which a subsequent purchaser has constructive notice only are to be determined by the instrument itself as recorded and indexed, and not by facts aliunde or other instruments not recorded: Miller v. Ware, 31-524; Disque v. Wright, 49-538.

II. WHAT INSTRUMENTS.

Assignment of mortgage: The recording laws are applicable to transfers of mortgages as well as to the mortgages themselves, and the assignee of a mortgage must record his assignment in order to protect himself against the act of the mortgagee in releasing the lien of such mortgage or subordinating it to the lien of another mortgage: Parmenter v. Oakley, 69-388; Bank of Indiana v. Anderson, 14-544; McClure v. Burris, 16-591; Cornog v. Fuller, 30-212; Bowling v. Cook, 39-200; Van Gorder v. Hanna, 72-572.

Where an assignment of a mortgage is not recorded, and a subsequent purchaser of the premises releases a mortgage which he holds upon other land in consideration of the release by the mortgagee of the mortgage which has been assigned, such release will extinguish the mortgage as to the property, and it cannot be foreclosed by the assignee: Daws v. Craig, 62-515.

Although a release by the mortgagee who appears by record to be still the owner of the mortgage will be binding upon the assignee of the mortgage or a note secured thereby, yet the mere payment to the mortgagee, who has ceased to be owner of the notes and mortgage, will not extinguish the mortgage to that extent. A mortgagor can, by taking ordinary care, protect himself by requiring the mortgagee to produce and account for the notes upon which payment is made: Brayley v. Ellis, 71-155.

Although it is held that one who purchases property after satisfaction of the mortgage thereon has been entered of record by the mortgagee takes it discharged of the claims of the assignee of the mortgage, if the assignment was not recorded at the time of the purchase, and he had no actual notice of the rights of the assignee, yet this rule is not applicable where there is no change in the relation of the parties in reliance upon the satisfaction of record: Rand v. Barrett, 66-731.

Where the attorney of a party foreclosing a mortgage has knowledge before the foreclosure is terminated that a third person holds, by assignment, one of the notes secured by mortgage, such plaintiff should make such assignee a party to the proceedings or the decree will not bar the equity of redemption in such assignee: Walker v. Schreiber, 47-529.

Agreement as to real property: The record of an agreement reserving to mortgagor's grantor a continued interest in the land covered by the mortgage, which is indexed in the name of the mortgagor as grantor and the former owner as grantee, imparts constructive notice to the mortgagee: Paige v. Lindsey, 69-593.

Public land claims: The provisions of the state registration law have no application to conflicting entries of public lands. The recording of a certificate of purchase from the United States or of a transfer thereof is unnecessary. The regulations established by congress will govern until the title has passed from the government by patent: Klein's Heirs v. Argenbright, 26-493; David v. Rickabaugh, 32-540; Harmon v. Clayton, 51-36.

III. SUBSEQUENT PURCHASERS.

Independent title: The term subsequent purchaser in this section is used to describe purchasers claiming under some common grantor, that is, under the same chain of title. The recording laws have no application as against an independent title distinct from that upon which the recorded instrument is based: Rankin v. Miller, 43-11.

The record of a deed from a person not connected with the record chain of title will not charge a subsequent purchaser with notice of the rights of such grantor: Huber v. Bossart, 70-713.

Mortgagee: A mortgagee of real property is a purchaser within the meaning of the provisions relating to recording: Porter v. Green, 4-571; SeEVERS v. Delashmutt, 11-174; Hewitt v. Rankin, 41-35; Koon v. Tramet, 71-132.

From the moment the mortgagee parts with his money on the strength of the mortgage he is considered as occupying as high ground as an absolute purchaser, and is within the protection of the statute as a purchaser: Barney v. McCarty, 15-510.

So, where a prior mortgage, given to secure a joint note of mortgagor and another who was in fact a surety, was paid off by such surety, held, that although between the surety and the mortgagor the former was entitled to subrogation under such mortgage, yet a subsequent mortgagee without knowledge of that fact had a right to regard the payment by the surety as satisfaction, and such subsequent mortgagee would be protected against the mortgage: Patton v. Eberhart, 52-67.

Attaching creditor: An attachment lien does not take precedence over a prior unrecorded conveyance of which the creditor had no notice: Norton v. Williams, 9-528; Savery v. Browning, 18-246; First Nat. Bank v. Hayzlett, 40-659; Eldred v. Drake, 43-569.

It is otherwise as to chattel mortgages: See notes to § 3094.

Judgment creditor: The holder of a judgment lien is not a purchaser, and his claim is subject to prior equities and unrecorded instruments: Norton v. Williams, 9-528; Bell v. Evans, 10-353; SeEVERS v. Delashmutt, 11-174; Hays v. Thode, 18-51; Chapman v. Coats, 26-288; Stuart v. Hines, 33-60, 100.

A judgment lien does not take priority over an unrecorded mortgage, even though such unrecorded mortgage, by mistake, does not describe the land therein intended to be mortgaged: Welton v. Tizzard, 15-495.

A deed unacknowledged and unrecorded conveys title paramount to a subsequent judgment, and the same rule applies to an assignment for the benefit of creditors not acknowledged or recorded. A creditor cannot set up the fact of the want of registry of the deed of assignment to defeat assignee's title, for the reason that invalidity on that ground arises only as against a subsequent purchaser for value without notice: Munson v. Frazer, 73-177.

A judgment creditor or the assignee of a judgment is not protected against a prior equity if an action to enforce it is brought before the sale: Rider v. Kelso, 53-367.

Under a statute providing that no deed should be valid except between the parties, or between those having actual notice thereof until recorded, held, that the levy of an attachment or the lien of a judgment would take priority over an unrecorded conveyance: Brown v. Tuthill, 1 G. Gr., 189; Hopping v. Burnam, 2 G. Gr., 39.

The purchaser at judicial sale is bound to take notice of instruments recorded up to date of sale, although they may have been executed prior to the levy: Chapman v. Coats, 26-288; Thomas v. Kennedy, 24-397; Norton v. Williams, 9-528.

A third person purchasing at a sale under a judgment is protected as fully as if he had purchased and taken a deed from the judgment debtor: Evans v. McGlasson, 18-150; Jones v. Brandt, 59-332.

The judgment creditor purchasing at the sale is entitled to protection as any other purchaser: Weaver v. Carpenter, 42-343.

At least this is true in the absence of any controlling equities: Evans v. McGlasson, 18-150; Halloway v. Platner, 20-121; Butterfield v. Walsh, 21-97; Wallace v. Bartle, 21-346; Walker v. Elston, 21-529; Gower v. Doherty, 33-36.

If strong and controlling equities intervene they may perhaps be recognized by a court of equity as against the judgment creditor purchasing at his sale: Walker v. Elston, 21-529.

But this rule by which a purchaser at judicial sale is protected applies only in case of a sale of the legal title. When the sale is of an equity, the purchaser takes only such equity, if any, as the defendant may actually have: Wallace v. Bartle, 21-346; Churchill v. Morse, 23-229.

Heir: A purchaser from the heir is protected against a prior unrecorded deed of the ancestor: McClure v. Tallman, 30-515.

The heir himself is not protected against unrecorded deeds of his ancestor: Morgan v. Corbin, 21-117.

The heir takes subject, also, to an unrecorded contract to convey, made by his ancestor: Montgomery v. Gibbs, 40-652.

Devisees of the owner of the naked legal title, who have full knowledge of the possession of the property by one having the equitable title thereto, can occupy no better position than their testator, and will take subject to the same equities existing against him: Peters v. Jones, 35-512.

IV. FOR VALUABLE CONSIDERATION.

Purchasers for a consideration: This section implies that, except as to subsequent purchasers for a valuable consideration, instruments affecting real estate are not rendered invalid for the reason that they have not been recorded. To entitle a purchaser to priority over a prior purchaser who has failed to record his deed, the subsequent grantee must have purchased for a valuable consideration and without notice of the rights of the first purchaser: Sillyman v. King, 36-207.

Payment before notice: In order that the purchaser may hold property discharged of a prior lien or charge he must have paid the purchase money before notice: Cummings v. Tovey, 39-195.

A subsequent mortgagee will have priority over an earlier mortgagee only where he has not had notice of such prior mortgage until after the completion of the contract or the payment of the money. The fact that the terms of the transaction have been agreed upon before notice is received by him will not entitle him to protection: English v. Waples, 13-57.

Extension of time: Where a purchase money mortgage, by reason of defective description, did not affect a subsequent mortgagee with notice, and such subsequent mortgagee, although taking his mortgage for a precedent debt, in consideration thereof extended the time of payment, and also bought in another mortgage on the same property, held, that the second mortgagee had a prior lien: Port v. Embree, 54-14.

Where a mortgage is given as security for an antecedent debt, and the time is extended, such extension will be sufficient consideration to constitute the mortgagee a purchaser for value, and entitle him to protection: Sullivan Savings Institution v. Young, 55-132; Davis v. Lutkiewitz, 72-254; Koon v. Tramel, 71-132.

Surrender of security: The surrender of a security for an indebtedness due from the grantor to the grantee is sufficient to make the grantee a purchaser for value as against third parties: Seymour v. Harrison, 20-592.

Pre-existing indebtedness: Where a mortgage is given to secure a pre-existing indebtedness and not in consideration of any extension of time, the mortgagee, even without notice of a prior unrecorded mortgage, does not acquire any rights superior thereto: Phelps v. Fockler, 61-340.

The mere expense of recording the mortgage will not be sufficient to render the holder thereof a holder for value: Ibid.

Actual payment is in general necessary to the character of a bona fide purchaser for value. The giving of security and executing a bond is not sufficient: Kitteridge v. Chapman, 36-348.

The execution of notes and a mortgage securing them will not constitute payment if the notes, though negotiable, remain in the hands of the person from whom title was acquired: Rush v. Mitchell, 71-333.

One who purchases property agreeing to pay a mortgage thereon as a part of the purchase money does not thereby acquire priority over the lien of a judgment upon the premises, even though such lien is subsequent to that of the mortgage paid: First Nat. Bank v. Thompson, 72-417.

Payment after notice: A purchaser of property who gives a mortgage back for the entire purchase money, and before making any payment thereon has notice of the title of a prior purchaser by unrecorded deed, cannot be protected as against such title. He is in a condition to refuse payment, and if he makes payment must be regarded as having made it voluntarily and with notice: Brady v. Otis, 40-97.

The fact that a purchaser in good faith has paid only a part of the purchase price cannot render him liable in any manner different from the liability which he assumed as to his grantor, but he may as to the purchase money unpaid, upon being indemnified against any liability, be required to pay the consideration to the person equitably entitled thereto: Macomber v. Peck, 39-351.

A party claiming under one who has assumed and paid a mortgage as part of the purchase price of the land cannot set up such claim as against the lien of a judgment of which the parties both had constructive notice: Goodyear v. Goodyear, 72-329.

Partial payment of the purchase money before notice, although not sufficient to vest the vendee with the character of a bona fide purchaser as regards the entire estate, will entitle him to invoke the aid of equity to the extent of reimbursement for the amount actually paid: Kitteridge v. Chapman, 36-348.

The claimant of a lien who has not paid any value therefor cannot be regarded as a good faith purchaser, but if he has paid a portion of the amount for which he claims a lien he may assert his lien to the extent of the sum paid: O'Brien v. Harrison, 59-686.

Recital of consideration in deed: The grantee of a fraudulent purchaser has the burden of proof cast upon him to show that he purchased in good faith and for a valuable consideration, and the recital of a valuable consideration in the deed is not evidence of payment thereof as against the person relying upon the fraud to defeat the conveyance. Such a recital is evidence only as between the parties and parties claiming through or under them: Sillyman v. King, 36-207; Falconbury v. McIlravy, 36-488; Rush v. Mitchell, 71-333.

The recital in a warranty deed that a consideration named was paid by grantee to grantor is not sufficient as against the holder of a prior title, who is a stranger to the conveyance, to show that the grantee is a purchaser for value: Hogton v. Green, 56-733.

Burden of proof as to payment of consideration: Where the grantee of one who has purchased in fraud of the rights of a prior purchaser claims to be a bona fide purchaser without notice and for value, the burden of proving the payment of the consideration before notice of the fraud is upon him: Sillyman v. King, 36-207; Throckmorton v. Rider, 42-84; Light v. West, 42-138; Anderson v. Buck, 66-490.

So where plaintiff relied upon an unrecorded deed, and alleged that defendant, a subsequent purchaser, had notice thereof, held, that plaintiff's deed made a prima facie case, and that the burden was upon defendant to show that he paid a valuable consideration in order to defeat plaintiff's title: Nolan v. Grant, 53-392.

A purchaser claiming protection against a previous conveyance not properly recorded has the burden of proving that he is an innocent purchaser for value: Fogg v. Holcomb, 61-621.

If a purchaser is affected with notice the burden is upon his vendee, claiming to be an innocent purchaser, to show his own good faith and that he paid value: Davis v. Nolan, 49-683; Hume v. Franzen, 73-25.

A party claiming to be an innocent purchaser for value without notice has the burden to prove such facts: Gardner v. Early, 72-518.

Where in an action to foreclose a mortgage a subsequent grantee is made a party, and he, by cross-bill, sets up the fact that he had no notice, actual or constructive, of the existence of the mortgage, and the plaintiff in answering such cross-bill avers that the mortgage was properly acknowledged and recorded, and that defendant had notice thereof, the fact that defendant was a purchaser for value, not being put in issue, will be presumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary on the part of the plaintiff: Jones v. Berkshire, 15-248.

Also held, that if it had been alleged by plaintiff that defendant, the subsequent purchaser, was not a purchaser for value, and the answer had denied such allegation, the burden of proof would have been upon the plaintiff to establish it: Ibid.

Where by mistake a mortgage is executed upon different property than that intended to be covered, so that it cannot be enforced against the property intended until corrected by the parties or reformed in equity, the mortgagee under a subsequent mortgage upon the property does not have the burden of proving consideration and want of notice in order to establish his priority over the mortgage intended to have been executed on the same property: Davis v. Lutkiewicz, 72-254.

V. WITHOUT NOTICE.

Actual notice: A person having actual knowledge of an unrecorded instrument is bound thereby as fully as if the same were properly recorded: Dussaume v. Burnett, 5-95, 104; Wilson v. Holcomb, 13-110; Coe v. Winters, 15-481.

Actual notice of an outstanding conveyance takes the place of an acknowledgment and recording: Miller v. Chittenden, 2-315, 360.

A grantee having actual notice of an outstanding mortgage cannot take advantage of any defects in the recording thereof: Coe v. Winters, 15-481.

A purchaser who, upon examination of the records, would have seen that the party from whom he purchased had no title to convey, and that the attorney in fact who attempted to convey had no power to do so, held not to be an innocent purchaser: Switz v. Black, 45-597.

In order that a purchaser may be protected against a proceeding to set aside the conveyance of the property to his grantor as being in fraud of creditors, he must not only have paid a valuable consideration, but must have bought in good faith and without notice of the defects in the title: Cooley v. Brown, 30-470.

A mortgagee with knowledge of the existence of a prior unrecorded mortgage cannot, by assignment of his own mortgage after the record of such prior mortgage, confer upon his assignee equities superior to that of the prior mortgage: Sims v. Hammond, 33-368.

The fact that a mortgagee placed his own mortgage on record before the recording of an earlier one gives him no priority if he has actual notice of such prior mortgage: Bell v. Thomas, 2-384.

Where a purchaser of land from one having the apparent title had notice of a mortgage executed to such person, by another, upon the same land, held, that by such knowledge he was affected with notice of an unrecorded conveyance to the person by whom such mortgage was executed: Clark v. Holland, 72-34.

What sufficient notice: A purchaser will be affected by such notice as would be sufficient to put a reasonable man upon inquiry: English v. Waples, 13-57.

Notice is either knowledge or having the means of knowledge, although such means may not be used: Aetna L. Ins. Co. v. Bishop, 63-645.

Statements made to a grantee by parties claiming to have prior unrecorded deeds to the property will constitute notice, although such statements are not believed: Hamilton v. Smith, 57-15.

Facts in a particular case held sufficient to impute notice to a subsequent mortgagee that the indebtedness under a prior mortgage, though changed in form, was not paid: Heively v. Matteson, 54-505.

Facts in a particular case held sufficient to prove that a purchaser had notice of a prior unrecorded conveyance: Davis v. Nolan, 49-683.

In a particular case, held, that the fact that the grantee had notice that another person set up a claim to the premises, although not informed of its precise extent and nature, was sufficient to affect him with notice of a resulting trust in favor of such person: Zuver v. Lyons, 40-510.

The fact that a party takes a mortgage upon property from one claiming to be the owner of such property under an unrecorded deed will not put him upon inquiry as to the rights of other persons in the premises: Davis v. Lutkiewicz, 72-251.

Vague rumors and suspicions, or general assertions made by strangers to the title, upon hearsay, will not be sufficient. The notice must be such as to bind the conscience of the party and put him upon such inquiry as would lead to the knowledge of the rights with which he is to be affected. But if he know of such rights, or fraudulently abstain from knowing them, he is not a bona fide purchaser: Wilson v. Miller, 16-111.

A simple disclaimer, by execution defendant, of having any interest in the property levied upon as his, will not put the officer upon inquiry as to its ownership: West v. St. John, 63-287.

Under a former statute making an unrecorded instrument valid only as between the parties thereto and such persons as should have actual notice thereof, held, that something more than mere rumor or knowledge of facts calculated to put a party on inquiry was required to constitute actual notice: Wilhelm v. Mertz, 4 G. Gr., 54.

And under the statute last referred to, held, that the actual notice therein required could only be communicated by express information to, or personal service upon, the party interested in the notice, and that constructive or implied notice from possession or acts of ownership were not sufficient: Hopping v. Burnam, 2 G. Gr., 39.

Further as to what constitutes notice, see notes to § 3094.

Attachment: A purchaser in good faith for value from one to whom property has been fraudulently conveyed is not affected by an attachment in a suit against the grantor in such fraudulent conveyance: Eldred v. Drake, 43-569.

An entry in the incumbrance book of an attachment of an equitable interest in land, which interest does not appear of record, will not constitute notice to a vendee or mortgagee of the person holding the legal title: Farmers' Nat. Bank v. Fletcher, 44-252.

Grantee of bona fide purchaser: A purchaser from a grantee who has taken a conveyance in good faith for value without notice of equities or defenses will be protected even though he himself had notice of such equities or defenses: Ashcraft v. De Armond, 44-229.

One who holds title as an innocent purchaser free from equities as against his grantor may convey to a purchaser who has knowledge of such equities as good a title as he himself has: Mast v. Henry, 65-193; Chambers v. Hubbard, 40-432; Rogers v. Hussey, 36-664; East v. Pugh, 71-162.

To affect a purchaser with fraud in a conveyance through which he claims title, it must appear that the respective grantees intervening between the fraudulent conveyances and the grantee in question had notice of such fraud: Brace v. Reid, 3 G. Gr., 422.

Assignee of mortgage: A mortgagee with knowledge of the existence of a prior unrecorded mortgage cannot, by assignment of his own mortgage after the record of such prior mortgage, confer upon his assignee equities superior to that of the prior mortgage: Sims v. Hammond, 33-368.

Purchaser by quitclaim: A purchaser by quitclaim deed is not entitled to be considered a bona fide purchaser, and does not, therefore, acquire priority over equities or unrecorded conveyances which are valid against his grantor: Smith v. Dunton, 42-48; Wightman v. Spofford, 56-145; Kaiser v. Waggoner, 59-40; Laraway v. Larue, 63-407; Fogg v. Holcomb, 64-621; Butler v. Barkley, 67-491; Bradley v. Cole, 67-650; Postel v. Palmer, 71-157; Rush v. Mitchell, 71-333. But apparently contra, see Pettingill v. Devin, 53-344, 354.

A purchaser by quitclaim from the holder of a tax title which is void for fraud cannot claim protection against such fraud as an innocent purchaser: Watson v. Phelps, 40-482; Besore v. Dosh, 43-211; Springer v. Bartle, 46-688.

A party holding under a quitclaim deed is chargeable with notice of all the infirmities of the title acquired thereby: Besore v. Dosh, 43-211.

A party purchasing simply the right which his grantor has takes subject to all claims against such grantor: Arnold v. Grimes, 2-1.

A purchaser of property receiving conveyance of it by quitclaim deed for a consideration very much less than its value, with notice at the time that the land is claimed by another who has paid taxes thereon from the date of his conveyance, which is of record, takes with notice of such conflicting conveyance: Ross v. Loomis, 64-432.

A quitclaim deed to a person who knows that his grantor has no title to or interest in the property does not vest in the grantee any right whatever: Curtis v. Smith, 42-665.

A purchaser by quitclaim deed for an amount much less than the actual value of the property is not protected as a bona fide purchaser. Neither is the purchaser from him thus protected who has knowledge of the nature and consideration of the deed under which his grantor holds: Hume v. Franzen, 73-25.

A deed which does not purport to convey the property, but quitclaims the grantor's right, title, interest and estate therein, is a quitclaim deed, and the grantee therein cannot be regarded as a purchaser without notice of equities affecting grantor's title: Wightman v. Spofford, 56-145.

Purchaser by warranty from quitclaim purchaser: A purchaser by warranty deed from the grantee in a quitclaim deed is entitled to protection, and is not affected by unrecorded conveyances or outstanding equities of which he has no notice: Winkler v. Miller, 54-476; Raymond v. Morrison, 59-371; Huber v. Bossart, 70-718.

Notice to agent: Notice acquired by an agent previous to the time of agency and while negotiating with reference to property for himself, and not shown to be present in the mind of the agent at the time of acting as such, in reference to the same property, will not be deemed notice to the principal: Lunt v. Neeley, 67-97; Yerger v. Barz, 56-77.

The person for whom land is purchased by an agent or trustee is charged with notice of equities with which the agent or trustee is affected: Butler v. Barkley, 67-491.

Notice imparted by possession; rights and equities of possessor: One who purchases land while it is in the actual possession of another takes it with notice of all the existing rights and equities of the person in possession: Sears v. Munson, 23-380; Eli v. Gridley, 27-376; Harper v. Perry, 28-57; White v. Butt, 32-335; Phillips v. Blair, 38-649; Day v. Loun, 51-364.

The possession of a vendee under parol contract of purchase operates as constructive notice of his rights: Baldwin v. Thompson, 15-504; Watrous v. Blair, 32-58.

A purchaser of real estate in the possession of a third person is bound to take notice of such person's title to the possession, whether such title be legal or equitable: Moore v. Pierson, 6-279.

The principle upon which one buying real estate in actual possession of a third person takes it subject to his equities is that good faith and reasonable prudence in dealing require the purchaser to inquire of such person what claim he asserts to the property, and the law conclusively presumes that the purchaser has acquired all the information which a timely and prudent inquiry would have given him: Rogers v. Hussey, 36-664.

Where a mortgagee took his mortgage with knowledge of possession by a third person, and of the fact that deeds were missing from the chain of title assumed by the record, held, sufficient to affect him with notice that the title was not perfect: Jewell v. Reddington, 57-92.

The purchaser of land in the possession of one who holds an equitable title thereto, and has erected valuable improvements thereon, has constructive notice of the latter's rights and equities: Van Orman v. Merrill, 27-476.

A subsequent purchaser is affected with notice of the title of a person in possession, although the conveyance under which he claims, by mistake in the record, does not afford constructive notice: Hubbard v. Long, 20-149.

Possession under a deed is constructive notice to all parties of the rights of the grantee to the same extent as if the deed had been duly placed on record: Simmons v. Church, 31-284.

Possession by grantee under an unrecorded deed held sufficient notice to a subsequent mortgagee of grantor, whose mortgage by mistake covered the premises conveyed: Gum v. Equitable Trust Co., 1 McCrary, 51.

What sufficient possession: Possession of a portion of a tract of land imparts notice of the claim to the whole tract covered by the title or equity under which the land is held: Watters v. Connelly, 59-217; Nolan v. Grant, 51-519.

Possession of a tract of prairie land under a conveyance covering such land and a small tract of uninclosed woodland, held not to amount to constructive possession of the woodland: Zent v. Picken, 54-535.

L. sold two lots to D., and executed his bond for a deed, which was not recorded; D. built a house upon one lot, and a shed or stable in the alley near the line of the other; neither lot was fenced, and both were used together; while the property was in this condition, L. sold the two lots to T., who had no actual notice of the rights of D.; held, that there was no constructive notice to T. of D.'s equities in the unimproved lot: Dickey v. Lyon, 19-544.

There may be possession in fact of unimproved and uninclosed land: Langworthy v. Myers, 4-18.

Where a person claiming land exercises acts of ownership over it, by the use of it for the purposes to which it is adapted, such possession is sufficient to affect a purchaser with notice of his rights: Clement v. Perry, 34-564.

Where a person claiming land goes upon it and plows a furrow around it, which act is regarded as an assertion of claim in the neighborhood, he has such possession as to constitute notice to a subsequent purchaser: Buck v. Holt, 74-294.

Timber land: In a particular case, held, that the circumstances were such as to affect a subsequent purchaser with notice of the rights of an owner in timber land not actually occupied by him, the conveyance of which did not constitute constructive notice by reason of a mistake in the deed and record: Hubbard v. Long, 20-149.

Facts in a particular case, such as that plaintiff drove trespassers from timber land, took wood cut by them, etc., held sufficient to establish possession in him which would operate as notice to subsequent purchasers: Nolan v. Grant, 51-519.

Such use of timber land as it is susceptible of, such as cutting timber therefrom, etc., is sufficient possession to constitute notice: Spiller v. Scofield, 43-571.

Possession by a tenant is sufficient to put a subsequent purchaser upon inquiry as to the rights and equities of the landlord: Nelson v. Wade, 21-49.

Possession by a tenant is constructive notice of the title of the landlord: Dickey v. Lyon, 19-544.

Right of lessee in possession: Under particular facts, held, that a party contracting with reference to real property was affected with notice of the rights of a lessee in possession: Leebrick v. Stahle, 68-515.

Possession by lessee under a mining lease, indicated by his having windlasses, tools, etc., on the premises for the prosecution of his business, held sufficient to constitute notice to a purchaser; and held further, that leave obtained by such lessee from such purchaser, to work the mine to a limited extent, did not amount to a relinquishment of his full rights under the lease, such consent having been obtained on account of a threat of the purchaser to stop further work: Chamberlain v. Collinson, 45-429.

Possession notice of what: Possession under a recorded conveyance is not notice of rights existing prior to and independent of the conveyance: Rogers v. Hussey, 36-664.

Therefore, held, that a purchaser at judicial sale under a judgment antedating the conveyance of the legal title from the judgment debtor to the party in possession was not affected with notice of an equitable title in the party in possession, existing prior to the judgment: Bonnell v. Allerton, 51-166.

Where a vendee of property in the possession of another made inquiry of the party in possession as to the claims upon the property, and such party disclaimed any right or interest therein, and the fact of such possession was accounted for by facts stated by the vendor showing no interest or right of possession in such party, held, that the vendee was not affected with notice of any equity in such possessor: Cavin v. Middleton, 63-618.

While possession of realty is notice to purchasers at least so far as to put the vendee upon inquiry to ascertain upon what right the occupant holds, this rule is not extended so far as to give notice of the defects in his title nor of the defects in the title paramount to the person in possession: Suiter v. Turner, 10-517.

Possession after foreclosure: Where a party originally holding under a deed was found in possession after the sale of the property under foreclosure of a mortgage and the expiration of the time for redemption, held, that such possession was sufficient notice of a claim adverse to the deed made in pursuance of the sale: Wrede v. Cloud, 52-371.

Under conveyance from tenant in common: Although possession is to be construed with reference to the right under which the person in possession claims to hold, yet, where a grantee from one tenant in common of a portion of the common premises by metes and bounds had shown by unequivocal acts that he understood and claimed his right to the premises to be absolute, held, that a purchaser from the tenant in common with knowledge of the facts and circumstances was affected with notice of the adverse claim of the person in possession: Laraway v. Larue, 63-407.

Continuance in possession by a party who, as owner, has executed a conveyance, will not constitute notice of his want of capacity to make such conveyance: Ashcraft v. De Armond, 44-229.

The rule that possession is constructive notice of the rights of the party in possession applies only to a case where the equities of the parties are independent of or adverse to the legal title or record, and possession by the grantor after a full conveyance is not constructive notice to subsequent purchasers of any right reserved in the land of the grantor: Koon v. Tramel, 71-132.

Possession by husband or wife: Where the purchaser of real estate pays the purchase money and enters into actual possession of the property, a subsequent mortgagee of the vendor will be charged with notice of the rights of such purchaser, whether such possession be by the husband or wife: Humphrey v. Moore, 17-193.

Where the husband is in possession and control of land, such possession will not constitute notice of a claim of the wife to the land, although he is, in fact, acting as her agent: Thomas v. Kennedy, 24-397.

Possession by married woman: The rule that a wife's possession jointly with her husband will not impart notice of equities which she holds against him, to one acquiring title from the husband, does not apply to a possession by a married woman where another member of the family, such as a son, holds the legal title. Such possession will be notice of her rights: Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. King, 58-598.

Easement: Where at the time of the purchase of land a ditch was being constructed thereon by a railway company for the improvement of its right of way, held, that a purchaser was affected with knowledge of the contract between his grantor and the railway company: Cook v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 40-451.

Recitals in title deeds: A purchaser is charged with notice of anything appearing in any part of the deeds or instruments which prove and constitute the title, which is of such nature that if brought directly to his knowledge it would amount to actual notice: State v. Shaw, 28-67; Clark v. Stout, 32-213.

A grantee in a mortgage with notice of the recitals and conditions of the deed under which his grantor claims title, although there is a mistake in such recitals, provided it contains enough to put a prudent man upon inquiry: Mosle v. Kuhlman, 40-108.

The mortgagee is bound to know of recitals in the conveyances to the mortgagor, affecting the title of such mortgagor, whether the mortgagee see such conveyances or not: Ætna L. Ins. Co. v. Bishop, 69-645.

The reference in a mortgage by way of exception to another mortgage of a certain amount affects the mortgagee with notice of a prior mortgage for that amount, although the prior mortgage is not recorded: Clark v. Bulard, 66-747.

Where the conveyance by which a mortgagor holds title refers to a contract, the mortgagee will be held affected with notice of the terms of such contract and any equity arising therefrom: Hall v. Orvis, 35-366.

Where property was incorrectly described in a conveyance under which a grantor claimed title, but was there designated by the same description as in a prior recorded mortgage upon the property, held, that the grantee of such grantor had notice of the identity of the property in both instruments, and was therefore affected with notice of the mortgage: State v. Shaw, 28-67.

The fact that one of the notes covered by a mortgage is omitted in the record thereof will not relieve the purchaser from the lien of the mortgage as to the amount of such note, where the aggregate amount of the lien as recited in his deed referring to such mortgage is correct: Dargin v. Beeker, 10-571.

The grantee is affected with notice of a stipulation in a conveyance to his grantor that such conveyance is made subject to the lien of a mortgage, which the grantee in such prior conveyance does not undertake personally to pay: Iowa Loan & Trust Co. v. Mowery, 67-113.

Recitals not constituting notice: Where a deed recited the existence of a trust deed upon the property, and that it was paid and satisfied, held, that such recital did not charge the grantee with notice of a lien arising under such trust deed: Newman v. Samuels, 17-528.

The fact that a mortgage contains covenants of warranty does not amount to notice that it is to have priority of lien over another mortgage which is prior in time and first recorded: Vandercook v. Baker, 48-199.

A statement in a deed that it was made "per agreement of" a certain date does not constitute a sufficient incorporation of such agreement into the deed as to make the terms of the agreement binding upon a subsequent grantee of the property conveyed: Close v. Burlington C. R. & N. R. Co., 64-149.

Purchaser without notice: A bona fide purchaser for a valuable consideration without notice may acquire an interest in land free from any equity or trust with which it was charged in the hands of the grantor: Hewitt v. Rankin, 41-35.

One who purchases from the holder of the legal title and takes a conveyance without notice of outstanding equities, paying a valuable consideration, takes the property divested of such equities or any liens thereon. So held as to a vendee from the holder of the legal title subsequent to a judgment against the equitable owner, but without notice of such equitable ownership: Farmers' Nat. Bank v. Fletcher, 44-252.

Under evidence in a particular case, held, that the purchaser of real property from the vendee thereof took without notice of fraud in the original conveyance from vendor to vendee, and should be protected: McDonald v. Hardin, 55-620.

Under the facts in a particular case, held, that the assignee of a mortgage which was in fact, and as shown by the record, filed prior to the filing of another mortgage which by agreement of the parties was to have been the first recorded and treated as a first lien, was not chargeable with notice of the agreement between such parties, and was entitled to priority: Cook v. Stone, 63-352.

The failure to record a town plat until after the date and record of a mortgage on lots therein, held not sufficient to put a party upon his inquiry so as to charge him with knowledge of facts within the possible range of such inquiry: Stewart v. Huff, 19-557.

The fact that the grantee in a conveyance, made in accordance with a plat not yet recorded, has knowledge of a change in the plat before the recording thereof, does not estop him from claiming the land originally conveyed: Watrous v. Blair, 32-58.

A mortgage subsequent in date will take priority over any earlier mortgage unless the mortgagee had notice of such prior mortgage. Facts in a case considered and held insufficient to prove notice: Brazleton's Adm'r v. Brazleton, 16-417.

Deed absolute in form: A purchaser from the grantee under a deed absolute upon its face, who takes without knowledge of any equities between the original parties, is protected, although the instrument itself merely constituted a trust: Gray v. Coan, 40-327.

A purchaser with notice of equities in a third party takes subject to such equities: Harris v. Stone, 15-273.

A purchaser with notice of a right in another is in equity liable to the same extent and in the same manner as the person from whom he made the purchase: Phillips v. Blair, 38-649.

One who purchases an estate after notice of a prior equitable right thereto makes himself a mala fide purchaser, and will not be enabled by getting the legal title to defeat the equitable interest: Mitchell v. Peters, 18-119.

A purchaser will not be protected against a prior deed which misdescribes the property, if he had actual notice of the prior grantee's equities, or such notice as would put a prudent man upon inquiry: Nelson v. Wade, 21-49.

Trusts: The purchaser of land with notice that his grantor holds the same in trust takes subject to the trust, and will be required to restore the estate for the purposes thereof: Zuver v. Lyons, 40-510.

Though the conveyance to a trustee is absolute in form, a purchaser from the trustee, with knowledge of the trust, takes subject thereto: Sleeper v. Iselin, 62-583.

Mortgage: One purchasing subject to a mortgage of which he has knowledge, and the amount of which is dependent upon the amount of the indebtedness remaining unpaid after the exhaustion of a prior mortgage, cannot claim to be an innocent purchaser free from the lien of such mortgage: Kellogg v. Frazier, 40-502.

A subsequent mortgagee with notice of the prior mortgage does not acquire priority by the fact that the mortgagor fraudulently applies the money received from such junior mortgagee to the satisfaction of another mortgage of which the junior mortgagee has no notice, instead of to the mortgage of which he has notice: Barber v. Lyon, 15-37.

Notice of invalid claim: One who acquires a legal title to lands with notice of an equity held by another who has the land subject to such equity, and conversely one who acquires a legal title without notice of an outstanding equity, holds the land free from the equitable title; but one who acquires an invalid legal title will not hold the land against another who has a valid legal title accompanied by the right in equity to the land on the ground that the first had no notice of the legal title and equity of the last: Fallon v. Chidester, 46-588.

Burden of proof as to notice: A party claiming to be protected as an innocent purchaser without notice and for value has the burden of proving such allegation: Kibby v. Harsh, 61-196.

Where the defendant in an action to foreclose a mortgage set up a prior unrecorded mortgage, alleging that the plaintiff had notice of such prior mortgage, held, that the defendant alleging the fact of notice had the burden of proof: McCormick v. Leonard, 38-272.

In a contest between a mortgagee claiming to have taken his mortgage without notice of a prior unrecorded mortgage, and the prior mortgagee, the burden of showing notice on the part of the subsequent mortgagee is upon such prior mortgagee: Hoskins v. Carter, 66-638.

A similar principle is applicable as between the mortgagee and the holder of a mechanic's lien whose statement has not been filed within the time required by law: Ibid.

The burden of showing bad faith on the part of a purchaser by warranty deed sufficient to affect him with notice of unrecorded conveyances is upon the party asserting such bad faith: Raymond v. Morrison, 59-371.

The evidence in a particular case held not sufficient to show bad faith: Ibid.

Whether, if payment of consideration is shown by a subsequent purchaser claiming to 3113. Acknowledgment. 1942. It shall not be deemed lawfully recorded, unless it has been previously acknowledged or proved in the manner herein prescribed. [R., § 2221; C., '51, § 1212.]

While the acknowledgment is necessary for the admission of the instrument to record, it is not essential to its validity as between the parties or as to persons having notice in fact: Gould v. Woodward, 4 G. Gr., 82; Miller v. Chittenden, 2-315, 360; Blain v. Stewart, 2-378; Dussacume v. Burnett, 5-95, 104; Brinton v. Seavers, 12-389; Haynes v. Seachrest, 13-455; Carleton v. Byington, 18-482; Summs v. Hervey, 19-273, 287; Lake v. Gray, 30-415; Morse v. Beall, 68-463.

As to what is sufficient to constitute notice in fact, see notes to preceding section.

If an instrument is defective in the acknowledgment the recording thereof does not impart constructive notice: Willard v. Cramer, be without notice of a prior conveyance, want of notice will be presumed, quære: Nolan v. Grant, 53-392.

Where a purchaser has taken with actual notice of a prior unrecorded deed, the burden of proof is upon his vendee, claiming to be an innocent purchaser without notice, to show his own good faith and that he paid value: Davis v. Nolan, 49-683.

36-22; Woods v. Banks, 34-599; Reynolds v. Kingsbury, 15-238; Brewer's Estate v. Crow, 4 G. Gr., 520.

The fact that the recorder, in recording an acknowledgment which is defective by reason of the omission of an essential word, inserts such word so that the record appears perfect, will not cure the defect: Newman v. Samuels, 17-528.

The want of an acknowledgment cannot be made the ground for objecting to the introduction of the instrument in evidence. It would be valid as between the parties and also as to third parties, provided notice could be brought home to such third party: Jones v. Berkshire, 15-248.

3114. Index. 1943. The recorder must keep an entry book or index, the pages of which are so divided as to show in parallel columns:

1. The grantors;
2. The grantees;
3. The time when the instrument was filed;
4. The date of the instrument;
5. The nature of the instrument;
6. The book and page where the record thereof may be found;
7. The description of the land conveyed. [R., § 2222; C., '51, § 1213.]

See notes to next section.

3115. Entries. 1944. The recorder must indorse upon every instrument properly filed in his office for record, the time when it was so filed, and shall forthwith make the entries provided for in the preceding section, except that of the book and page where the record of the instrument may be found, and, from that time, such entries shall furnish constructive notice to all persons of the rights of the grantee conferred by such instrument. [R., § 2223; C., '51, § 1214.]

Failure to index or record: Although the instrument is filed, yet if, through fault of the officer or otherwise, it is not indexed or duly recorded, it will not constitute notice: Barney v. McCarty, 15-510; Barney v. Little, 15-527; Whalley v. Small, 25-184; Miller v. Bradford, 12-14; Noyes v. Horr, 13-570.

The language of the acts of 1839 and 1840, providing that from the time the instrument "is filed in the recorder's office for record," it shall constitute notice, simply fixed the time from which notice should date, but did not render the filing alone sufficient to affect third persons with notice in case the further steps of indexing and recording, as required by statute, were not taken: Ibid.

Indexing; what sufficient: If the grantor's and grantee's names are given in the index with the book and page where the instrument is recorded, and the instrument is in fact there recorded, this, so far as the object of the recording act is concerned, is a substantial, though it may not be in all respects a literal, compliance with the law. The record book and the index book are not to be considered as detached and independent books, and if the index makes the requisite reference the party will be affected with notice of any facts which either book contains with respect to the title of the proposed grantor: Barney v. Little, 15-527.

If an ordinarily diligent search of the records will bring to the inquirer knowledge of a prior incumbrance or alienation, he is presumed to know of it, assuming the instrument to be one which may properly be recorded. The law charges the proposed purchaser with a knowledge or all facts which ordinary examination of the records would have made him cognizant of: Ibid.

Where the instrument is sufficiently indexed the defendants are charged with constructive notice of whatever appears of record, provided the instrument is one which, according to the statute, can be deemed lawfully recorded: Greenwood v. Jenswold, 69-53.

Failure to index: Where there is an entire failure to index the filing and recording will not constitute notice: Barney v. McCarty, 15-510; Gwynn v. Turner, 18-1.

Mistake in reference: But where there was a mistake in the reference in the index to the page of the record, and the examination of the index and the page of the record referred to would have led to a discovery of the correct page of the record, held, that the record would constitute notice: Barney v. Little, 15-527.

Description in the index: It is not essential to the validity of the indexing that a particular description of the property should be entered in the column for that purpose. An entry, such as "see record," or "part of lot," etc., will be sufficient: Calvin v. Bowman, 10-529; Bostwick v. Powers, 12-456; White v. Hampton, 13-59; Hodgson v. Lovell, 25-97; Peirce v. Weare, 41-378.

If the instrument covers two or more pieces of property, and in the column of the index for description only one of them is entered, the record will not be constructive notice as to the piece or pieces not entered or referred to: Noyes v. Horr, 13-570; Stewart v. Huff, 19-557.

Where an agreement, by which A. was to convey his interest in certain lands to B. was duly recorded, A. being named in the index as grantor and B. as grantee, and in the column headed "Character of Instrument" the entry was "Agreement," and in the entry headed "Description" the entry was "with regard to swamp and overflowed lands," held, that such indexing affected a subsequent purchaser with notice: American Emigrant Co. v. Call, 22 Fed. Rep., 765.

Mistake in description: Where the index misstates the section, township, or range, the record will not constitute notice even though in addition to the statement of the index a reference is made to the record for a fuller description: Breed v. Conley, 14-269.

So where a mortgage contained an entirely mistaken description and the index contained the same description, held, that a purchaser might rely upon the index and was not chargeable with notice of the mortgage although there were recitals therein which showed that it related to the land purchased: Scoles v. Wilsey, 11-261.

If a party is not charged with constructive notice by what appears in the index book he is not bound to look further and is not affected by what appears of record. So held as to a judgment lien where there was a mistake in the entry of the name in the index of judgments: Thomas v. Desney, 57-58.

Where the index erroneously describes the property, a subsequent purchaser will not be affected with notice, even though the examination of the record of the instrument would have disclosed facts which might have put him upon inquiry: Peters v. Ham, 62-656.

Names in index: Where the legal title was in W. T. B., the wife, and both husband and wife joined in a mortgage, which was indexed under the name of W. H. B., the husband, as grantor, held, that the index was sufficient to put a searcher of title upon inquiry, and therefore would impart notice: Jones v. Berkshire, 15-248.

A conveyance signed J. A. S. was indexed and entitled in the caption of the record as made by A. J. S., and it appeared that the property was conveyed to the party as A. J. S., and she was in the habit of signing her name in either way. Held, that the record constituted notice: Huston v. Secley, 27-183.

A mortgage executed by "Furman" was indexed in the name of "Freeman;" held, that the record did not constitute notice, and that a purchaser need not look beyond the index: Howe v. Thayer, 49-154.

"Elen" and "Ellen" are not the same Christian name, and an index entry in the name of one does not impart notice of a lien against the other: Thomas v. Desney, 57-58.

In case of a conveyance of the homestead, in which the wife joins, it is not necessary that the index show the name of the wife as well as that of the husband: Hodgson v. Lovell, 25-97.

Indexing without recording: Where a mortgage, after being filed with the recorder and indexed, was withdrawn and not recorded for two years, held, that the indexing alone did not impart constructive notice to persons acquiring liens without other notice thereof. The index alone only amounts to constructive notice for the time intermediate the indexing and recording in the usual manner, while the instrument remains on file with the recorder: Yerger v. Barz, 56-77.

Sufficiency of recording: See notes to § 3117.

Priority: Where two mortgages are delivered to the recorder by substantially the same act the secret intention that the one first delivered shall have priority will not give it that effect, there being no prevailing equities in favor of such mortgage, and the two mortgages will be entitled to their pro rata share in the proceeds of the property; nor will the fact that the record of one of the mortgages is defective give priority to the other: Koevenig v. Schmitz, 71-175.

Where two mortgages were executed on the same day, and subsequently one of them was transferred to plaintiff before maturity of the note secured thereby, and at the time of such transfer both mortgages were recorded, the mortgage thus transferred having been recorded first, it not appearing from the record which mortgage was first executed, held, that plaintiff, as transferee of the mortgage first recorded, had priority over the other mortgage, there being nothing to indicate that the mortgage last recorded was intended to have priority in lien: Powers v. Lafler, 73-283.

3116. Arranged alphabetically. 1945. The entries in such entry book shall show the names of the respective grantors and grantees arranged in alphabetical order. [R., § 2224; C., '51, § 1215.]

3117. How recorded. 1946. Every such instrument shall be recorded, as soon as practicable, in a suitable book to be kept by the recorder for that purpose; after which he shall complete the entries aforesaid, so as to show the book and page where the record is to be found. [R., § 2225; C., '51, § 1216.]

What sufficient recording: It is not essential that the record should be a literal copy, in every respect, of the instrument in order to constitute notice, but it is essential that it should embody every material part of the instrument, and that the language of the instrument be so nearly copied into the record as that the subject-matter can be identified with certainty from the record itself: Fogg v. Holcomb, 64-631.

In a particular case, held, that although there was an omission of a portion of the instrument in the record, yet as the words omitted were not material the record was sufficient to constitute notice: Ibid.

But if essential parts are omitted, then the record imparts notice, if at all, only of an invalid instrument. If the instrument itself is valid, then the recording is defective and does not impart notice: Greenwood v. Jenswold, 69-53.

Knowledge of the record of a prior mortgage on real estate, with the same description except as to one word, held, if not of itself actual notice of the mortgage of the land correctly described, at least sufficient to put an ordinarily prudent person upon inquiry, and to charge him with notice of facts which such inquiry would develop: Jones v. Bamford, 21-217.

In recording an instrument, the record of the filing may as well be made in the margin of the record as preceding or following the record of the instrument, and the recorder, in giving a certified copy of the record, may authenticate the whole, including the record of the filing: Laird v. Kilbourne, 70-83.

Mistake in recording: Where the instrument is erroneously transcribed it will constitute notice only as recorded. Although the deed will itself, during the reasonable time between the date of filing and recording, constitute notice, yet when recorded it is the record which is the notice: Miller v. Bradford, 12-14.

Recording defective instrument: Where a chattel mortgage is not valid by reason of insufficient description, and delivery of the property to the mortgagee is not made, the mortgagee acquires no rights which will prevail as against persons having no notice of the transaction: Barr v. Cannon, 69-20.

Failure to transcribe: Under the provisions of the Code of '51, requiring the filing and record of plats, held, that failure on the part of the officer to record a plat until the lapse of some years, and until after the death of the grantor, would not enable those claiming under him to defeat a dedication therein made: Scott v. Des Moines, 64-438.

Erroneous description: A subsequent purchaser acquires priority over the lien of a prior mortgage in which the property is described by an erroneous description, and of which the subsequent purchaser had no actual notice: Halloway v. Platner, 20-121.

The record of an instrument in which property was described as "Lot and six," held not sufficient to impart constructive notice to a purchaser of "Lot one, block six:" Nelson v. Wade, 21-49.

A purchaser in a particular case, held not charged with constructive notice of a mortgage covering certain lots upon a town plat not recorded, which lots were described by different numbers in a plat subsequently recorded: Stewart v. Huff, 19-557.

That a lot described in a mortgage was occupied by a building of a certain description, held not sufficient to charge the mortgagee with notice of a senior mortgage upon the same lot and building in which the building was generally described, the lot being described by a different number, and the evidence not showing that the building was the only one answering to the same description in the town: Ibid.

The recorded instrument imparts constructive notice only of what might have been learned by an examination of the record. If the description is defective, third persons will not be bound although they did not read the record and were therefore not misled by the description: Ivins v. Hines, 45-73.

Instrument blank as to grantee: The recording of a mortgage in which the name of the mortgagee is left blank does not constitute notice: Disque v. Wright, 49-538.

Impeaching record: The record may be impeached by oral testimony, but will be held false and fraudulent only upon clear and satisfactory evidence: Vandercook v. Baker, 48-199.

Purchaser not affected with facts aliunde: The rights conferred by an instrument of which a subsequent purchaser has constructive notice only are to be determined by the instrument itself as recorded and indexed, and not by facts aliunde or other instrument not recorded: Miller v. Ware, 31-524.

Therefore, where the description in an instrument gave the number of the lot, and the addition in which it was situated, but did not give the number of the block in that addition, held, that the record did not impart constructive notice, although an examination of the other records in the recorder's office would have shown that two of the five blocks in that addition had been vacated, and of the other three only one contained a lot of the number given in the instrument: Disque v. Wright, 49-538.

But a person having constructive notice of an instrument is affected with all that it contains, and if thereby put upon inquiry he is bound to take notice of all that he might have learned by pursuing the path indicated: Thomas v. Kennedy, 24-397.

As to the effect of record notice, see, further, notes to § 3112.

Entry of decree of cancellation: It is record of such deed in the recorder's office: not error in a decree canceling a deed to direct Fenton v. Way, 44-438. the entry of such fact on the margin of the

3118. Town lots. 1947. The recorder shall record all deeds, mortgages, and other instruments affecting town lots in cities or villages, the plats whereof are recorded, in separate books from those in which other conveyances of real estate are recorded. [R., § 2241.]

RECORDING LAND-GRANT TITLES.

3119. By railroads. 18 G. A., ch. 186, § 1. Each and every railroad company which owns or claims to own lands in the state of Iowa granted by the government of the United States or the state of Iowa, to aid in the construction of its railroad, where it has not already done so, shall place on file and cause the same to be recorded within three months after the taking effect of this act, in each county wherein the land[s] so granted are situated, evidence of its title or claim of title, whether the same shall consist of patents from the United States, or certificates from the secretary of the interior or governor of the state of Iowa, or the proper land office of the United States or state of Iowa. Where no patent was issued, reference shall be made in said certificate to the act or acts of congress, and the acts of the legislature of the state of Iowa granting such lands, giving the date of said acts, and date of their approval, under which claim of title is made; provided, that where the certificate of the secretary of the interior or the patents, as the case may be, contain lands situated in more than one county, that the register of the state land office shall, upon the application of any railroad company or grantee, prepare and furnish to be recorded, as aforesaid, a list of all the lands situated in any one county, so granted, patented or certified, and when so recorded said records, or a duly authenticated copy thereof may be introduced in any court as evidence as provided in section three thousand seven hundred and two of the code [§ 4953.]

3120. Duty of recorder. 18 G. A., ch. 186, § 2. Such evidence of title shall be filed with the recorder of deeds of the county in which the lands are situated, and it shall be the duty of the recorder to record the same and shall place an abstract thereof upon the index of deeds so as to show the evidence of title, and the evidence thereof shall be constructive notice to all persons as provided in other cases of entries upon said index, and the recorder shall receive same fees as for recording other instruments.

TRANSFER AND INDEX BOOKS.

3121. County auditor to keep. 1948. The county auditor shall keep in his office, books for the transfer of real estate, which shall consist of a transfer book, index book, and book of plats. [11 G. A., ch. 61, § 1.]

3122. Form of. 1949. Said transfer book shall be ruled and headed substantially after the following form; and entries thereupon shall be in numerical order, beginning with section one. [Same, § 2.]

SECTION NO. —, TOWNSHIP —, RANGE —.

Grantee.	Grantor.	Date of instrument.	Description.	Page of Plats.
.....

THE INDEX BOOK THUS.

3123. Book of plats. 1950. The auditor shall so keep the book of plats as to show the number of lot and block, or township and range, divided into sections and subdivisions as occasion may require, and shall designate thereon each piece of land or town lot, and mark in pencil the name of the owner thereon in a legible manner. Said plats shall be lettered or numbered so that they may be conveniently referred to by the memoranda of the transfer book, and shall be drawn on a scale of not less than four inches to the mile. [Same, § 3; 12 G. A., ch. 160, § 3.]

The plat book here referred to is not admissible in evidence for the purpose of establishing title in the party whose name is entered on the plat as the owner of the premises in controversy: Heinrich v. Terrell, 65-25.

3124. Entries of transfers. 1951. Whenever a deed of unconditional conveyance of real estate is presented, the auditor shall enter in the index book, in alphabetical order, the name of the grantee, and opposite thereto the number of the page of the transfer book on which such transfer is made; and upon the transfer book he shall enter in the proper columns, the name of the grantee, the name of the grantor, date of instrument, the character of the instrument, the description of the property, and the number or letter of the plat on which the same is marked. [11 G. A., ch. 61, § 4.]

3126. Essential to recording. 1953. The recorder shall not file for record any deed of real property, until the proper entries have been made upon the transfer books in the auditor's office and indorsed upon the deed. [12 G. A., ch. 160, § 3.]

3127. Corrections. 1954. The auditor shall correct the transfer books from time to time, as he shall find them incorrect. [11 G. A., ch. 61, § 8.]

ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF CONVEYANCES OR INCUMBRANCES.

3128. Before what officers. 1955; 22 G. A. ch. 99. Any deed, conveyance, or other instrument in writing, by which real estate in this state shall be conveyed or incumbered, if acknowledged within this state, must be so before some court having a seal, or some judge or clerk thereof, or some justice of the peace or notary public, or before the county auditor or his deputy. [R., §§ 201, 2226; C., '51, § 84.]

An acknowledgment before a deputy clerk acting in the name of his principal is good: Abrams v. Ervin, 9-87.

An acknowledgment certified to by an officer interested therein (as a member of the firm of grantees) is void, and the record of such instrument will not impart notice: Wilson v. Traer, 20-231.

While the acknowledgment of an instrument taken before the grantee as an officer will not be valid, yet the mere fact that the person for whom the acknowledgment is taken has an interest in the property conveyed will not necessarily render the acknowledgment void, although it might be a circumstance tending to show fraud: Dussaume v. Burnett, 5-95.

As to who may take acknowledgments, see also § 364.

3129. Out of state. 1956. When made or acknowledged out of this state but within the United States, it shall be acknowledged before some court of record or officer holding the seal thereof, or before some commissioner appointed by the governor of this state to take the acknowledgment of deeds, or before some notary public or justice of the peace; and, when made by a justice of the peace, a certificate under the official seal of the proper authority of the official character of said justice, and of his authority to take such acknowledgments and of the genuineness of his signature, shall accompany said certificate of acknowledgment. [R., § 2245.]

When no seal of the officer or certificate as to his official character is attached to the certificate of acknowledgment, as here contemplated, it is not valid: Jones v. Berkshire, 15-248.

3130. When out of the United States. 1957. When made or acknowledged without the United States, it may be acknowledged before any ambassador, minister, secretary of legation, consul, charge d'affaires, consular agent, or any other officer of the United States in a foreign country who is authorized to issue certificates under the seal of the United States. Said instruments may also be acknowledged or proven before any officer of a foreign country who is authorized by the laws thereof to certify to the acknowledgments of written documents; but the certificate of acknowledgment by a foreign officer must be authenticated by one of the above-named officers of the United States, whose official written statement that full faith and credit is due to the certificate of such foreign officer, shall be deemed sufficient evidence of the qualification of said officer to take acknowledgments and to certify thereto, and of the genuineness of his signature or seal if he have any. All instruments in writing already executed in accordance with the provisions of this section are hereby declared effectual and valid in law, and to be evidence in any court of this state. [11 G. A., ch. 46; 14 G. A., ch. 32.]

3131. Certificate of acknowledgment. 1958. The court or officer taking the acknowledgment, must indorse upon the deed or other instrument, a certificate setting forth the following particulars:

1. The title of the court or person before whom the acknowledgment was taken;
2. That the person making the acknowledgment was personally known to at least one of the judges of the court, or to the officer taking the acknowledgment, to be the identical person whose name is affixed to the deed as grantor, or that such identity was proved by at least one credible witness, naming him;
3. That such person acknowledged the instrument to be his voluntary act and deed. [R., § 2227; C., '51, § 121.]

Form of certificate; what sufficient: The exact language of the statute need not be followed by the officer in his certificate, but words of the same import are sufficient: Wickersham v. Reeves, 1-413; Tiffany v. Glover, 3 G. Gr., 387; Caveader v. Smith's Heirs, 5-157.

Therefore, held, that the words "well known" were sufficient in place of "personally known," and the words "the within named," etc., sufficiently referred to the parties as being "the identical persons whose names are affixed," etc.: Bell v. Evans, 10-353.

A certificate which does not state that the party acknowledging the instrument was "personally known" to the officer "to be the identical person," etc., or use words of similar import, is fatally defective: Reynolds v. Kingsbury, 15-238; Brinton v. SeEVERS, 12-389.

The omission of the word "personally" before "known" renders the certificate defective: Gould v. Woodward, 4 G. Gr., 82.

But such omission is not fatal where the other words used necessarily imply personal knowledge in the official: Todd v. Jones, 22-146; Rosenthal v. Griffin, 23-263.

The word "voluntary" is of the essence of the acknowledgment, and in the absence of that or an equivalent word the certificate will be invalid: Wickersham v. Reeves, 1-413; Newman v. Samuels, 17-528.

But the fact that the party acknowledged the instrument to be his voluntary act and deed may be shown by the tenor and form of the certificate, as well as by the use of the very words of the statute: Dickerson v. Davis, 12-353.

The essentials of a certificate of acknowledgment considered generally: Bell v. Evans, 10-353.

The omission of even an essential word, where it is apparently a mere clerical error, will not invalidate the certificate: Scharfenburg v. Bishop, 35-60.

The certificate is not to the genuineness of the signature, but to the fact that the party acknowledged the instrument, and the acknowledgment is sufficient although the signature may have been written by another for the grantee: Morris v. Sargent, 18-90.

Evidence: The certificate is prima facie evidence of the fact of acknowledgment, but is not conclusive, and may be overcome by other evidence, the burden being upon the party seeking to rebut the effect of the certificate: Ibid.; Van Orman v. McGregor, 23-300; Borland v. Walrath, 33-130.

If a mortgage is duly acknowledged, the introduction thereof in evidence, accompanied by the notes referred to therein as executed by the same party, is prima facie sufficient to establish the execution of the mortgage and also of the notes: Mixer v. Bennett, 70-329.

The certificate of the officer, and his testimony as to the acknowledgment, are entitled to great weight. The presumption is very strong in his favor: Bailey v. Lanthingham, 53-722.

The certificate of the notary public as to the acknowledgment by the grantor, and the positive testimony of such officer as to the fact of such acknowledgment, will prevail over the denial, on the part of the grantor, of the fact of making such instrument. Deeds, mortgages and other instruments requiring an acknowledgment before an officer should not be set aside without clear and satisfactory evidence, and the seal and acknowledgment of the officer should in such cases be given proper consideration: Herrick v. Musgrove, 67-63.

Parol evidence: It is not proper to show by parol evidence, for the purpose of sustaining an acknowledgment, that matters required by statute to be done were done, although not shown by the certificate: O'Ferrall v. Simplot, 4-381.

But parol evidence may be introduced to show fraud in obtaining an acknowledgment, or when the certificate is alleged to be false, to show that the deed never was acknowledged: Ibid.

If the certificate does not recite the essential facts it is not competent to prove such facts by extrinsic evidence: Ibid.

Therefore, under the provisions of the act of 1846, requiring the certificate of acknowledgments by married women to show that the wife was made acquainted with the contents of the conveyance, and that she relinquished her dower, held, that a conveyance by a married woman, in which the acknowledgment did not show such facts, was void as to her, and that the requisite facts could not be shown by parol testimony: O'Ferrall v. Simplot, 4 G. Gr., 162.

Official title: The official title of a notary public is "A. B., a notary public for — county," etc., and a failure to set forth the name of the county renders the certificate void. The fact that the name of the county appears from the impression of the seal will not remedy the defect: Willard v. Cramer, 86-22.

Notaries public in this state have jurisdiction only within the respective counties for which they are appointed, and the title of each must be defined to be a notary public of some county, naming it. The certificate must show the county of the notary public making it, and the failure of the certificate to so state will not be cured by the fact that the county appears in the seal, which is not required to show that fact: Greenwood v. Jensenoid, 69-53.

But this rule does not apply to the official signature to the jurat of an affidavit: Stoddard v. Sloan, 65-680.

While the certificate should set forth the title of the court or officer before whom the acknowledgment is made, there is no requirement that the name of the officer shall be set out in the body of the certificate: Fogg v. Holcomb, 64-621.

Where the body of the certificate recites that the officer is a notary public in and for the county named it is not necessary that the name of the county be appended to his signature: Colby v. McOmber, 71-469.

When no seal of the officer or certificate as to his official character is attached to the certificate of acknowledgment, as contemplated by statute, it is not valid: Jones v. Berkshire, 15-248.

Amendment of certificate: Whilst a notary continues in office it is competent for him to amend his certificate of acknowledgment to supply a defect by making a new one, provided it is in accordance with the real facts: Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Lewis, 53-101.

Attorney in fact: Prior to the act of 1858 an acknowledgment of a chattel mortgage by an attorney in fact as his voluntary act and deed would be the acknowledgment, in law, of his principal: Sowden v. Craig, 26-156.

Municipal officer: Where a deed offered in evidence purported to have been executed by one Q., as mayor of the city of D., having the seal of the city affixed and duly attested by the recorder, and was properly acknowledged and recorded, the certificate of the officer taking the acknowledgment showing that Q. was personally known to him as the identical person whose name was affixed to the deed as president pro tempore of the city council, and acting mayor of the city of D., held, that such deed was prima facie proof that Q. was at the time acting mayor of the city, and, coupled with what the court might take judicial notice of on this subject, rendered the introduction of the deed in question competent without further proof as to the official character of the said Q.: Middleton Savings Bank v. Dubuque, 19-467.

Officers of corporation: Where an assignment of a judgment in favor of a bank was signed by persons designating themselves as president and secretary, but the acknowledgment thereof did not state that they were such officers, held, that the assignment was not sufficient to establish the official character of the persons whose names were attached thereto or show that they had authority to act for the bank: Klemme v. McLay, 68-158.

By married woman: Where the certificate of acknowledgment to a trust deed appeared regular and in due form, but the evidence showed that the notary had certified to the acknowledgment of the same by the wife without requiring her personal presence, but upon a previous verbal authority given by her, held, that the validity of the deed could not be questioned for that reason by the wife as against parties who had loaned money upon the strength of the security, regular upon its face: McHenry v. Day, 13-445.

As evidence of date: The date of an acknowledgment will be accepted as that of the execution of an instrument: Henry County v. Bradshaw, 20-355.

A strong presumption exists in favor of the certificate of acknowledgment as indicating the date of the execution of an instrument: Bird v. Adams, 56-292.

In a particular case, held, that the date of the certificate of acknowledgment should prevail over oral evidence of loose and random conversations and admissions in determining the date of the execution: Ibid.

Effect: That acknowledgment is only necessary in order that the instrument may be recorded and import constructive notice, and is not essential to its validity as between the parties, see notes to § 3113.

3132. Proof of execution and delivery. 1959. Proof of the due execution and delivery of the deed or other instrument may be made before the court, or officer authorized to take acknowledgments, by one competent person other than the vendee or other person to whom the instrument is executed in the following cases:

1. If the grantor die before making the acknowledgment;
2. Or, if his attendance cannot be procured;
3. Or, if having appeared, he refuses to acknowledge the instrument. [R., § 2228; C., '51, §§ 1220-21.]

[The words "may be" before "made," in the second line, are erroneously omitted in the printed Code.]

3133. Certificate; must state what. 1960. The certificate indorsed by them upon the deeds thus proved must state:

1. The title of the court or officer taking the proof;
2. That it was satisfactorily proved that the grantor was dead, or that for some other reason his attendance could not be procured in order to make the acknowledgment, or that having appeared he refused to acknowledge the deed or other instrument;
3. The names of the witnesses by whom proof was made, and that it was proved by them that the instrument was executed and delivered by the person whose name is thereunto subscribed as a party. [R., § 2230; C., '51, § 1222.]

3135. Attorney in fact. 1962. The execution of any deed, mortgage, or other instrument in writing, executed by any attorney in fact, may be acknowledged by the attorney executing the same. [R., § 2251.]

3136. Certificate. 1963. The court or person taking the acknowledgment, must indorse upon such instrument a certificate setting forth the following particulars:

1. The title of the court or person before whom the acknowledgment was taken;
2. That the person making the acknowledgment was personally known to at least one of the judges of the court, or to the officer taking the acknowledgment, to be the identical person whose name is subscribed to the instrument as attorney for the grantor or grantors therein named, or that such identity was proved to him by at least one credible witness to him personally known and therein named;
3. That such person acknowledged said instrument to be the act and deed of the grantor or grantors therein named by him as his or their attorney thereunto appointed, voluntarily done and executed. [R., § 2252.]

3137. Liability of officer. 1964. Any officer, who knowingly misstates a material fact in either of the certificates above contemplated, shall be liable for all damages caused thereby, and may be indicted and fined any sum not exceeding the value of the property conveyed or otherwise affected by the instrument on which such certificate is indorsed. [R., § 2232; C., '51, § 1224.]

The fact that a notary makes a false certificate as a result of negligence will not render him liable. Whatever liability there is exists by reason of statute: Scotten v. Fegan, 62-236.

In an action against a notary for damages under the statute, it must be alleged that he knowingly misstated a material fact: Ibid.

The officer is only liable for such damages as are caused by his wrongful act and necessarily connected with it: Wyllis v. Haun, 47-614.

Where it does not appear that the officer taking the acknowledgment knowingly misstated a material fact, as, for instance, that the person making the acknowledgment was the identical person whose name was affixed to the instrument, the officer will not be liable. The law does not make the officer taking the acknowledgment a guarantor that the person signing the instrument is the person who is the owner of the land referred to therein: Browne v. Dolan, 68-645.

3138. Subpœnas. 1965. Any court or officer having power to take the proof above contemplated, may issue the necessary subpœnas, and compel the attendance of witnesses residing within the county by attachment if necessary. [R., § 2233; C., '51, § 1225.]

CONVEYANCES LEGALIZED.

3139. By laws of other states. 1966; 20 G. A., ch. 203, § 1. All deeds and conveyances of lands lying and being within this state heretofore executed, and which said deeds have been acknowledged or proved according to and in compliance with the laws and usages of the state, territory, or country, in which said deeds or conveyances were acknowledged and proved, are hereby declared effectual and valid in law to all intents and purposes as though the same acknowledgments had been taken or proof of execution made within this state and in pursuance of the acts and laws thereof; and such deeds so acknowledged or proved as aforesaid, shall be admitted to be legally recorded in the respective counties in which such lands may be, anything in the acts and laws of this state to the contrary notwithstanding; and all deeds and conveyances of lands situated within this state, which have been acknowledged or proved in any other state, territory, or country, according to and in compliance with the laws and usages of such state, territory, or country, and which deeds and conveyances have been recorded within this state, be and the same are hereby confirmed and declared effectual and valid in law to all intents and purposes as though the said deeds or conveyances, so acknowledged or proved and recorded, had, prior to being recorded, been acknowledged or proved within this state. [13 G. A., ch. 160, § 1; 14 G. A., ch. 110, § 1.]

3140. To what applicable. 20 G. A., ch. 203, § 2. This act shall apply to all deeds, mortgages and conveyances made, filed, recorded and proved as contemplated in section one of this act [§ 3139] prior to the first day of January, 1884.

Similar sections in Revision held only to apply to instruments acknowledged before they took effect: Reynolds v. Kingsbury, 15-238; Jones v. Berkshire, 15-248.

3141. When recorded without acknowledgment. 1967. That the acknowledgments of all deeds, mortgages, or other instruments in writing, taken and certified previous to the thirtieth day of April, A. D. 1872, and which have been duly recorded in the proper counties in this state, be and the same are hereby declared to be legal and valid in all courts of law and equity in this state or elsewhere, anything in the laws of the territory or state of Iowa in regard to acknowledgments to the contrary notwithstanding. [Same chs., § 2.]

A curative act of this kind is not unconstitutional as interfering with vested rights, but it can only affect rights of third persons accruing after its passage and not those prior thereto: Brinton v. Seevers, 12-389; Newman v. Samuels, 17-528; Ferguson v. Williams, 58-717.

The phrase "duly recorded" does not mean "legally recorded" but "actually recorded:" Brinton v. Seevers, 12-389.

In a particular case, held, that the instrument was duly recorded so as to be within the effect of the legalizing act, although some immaterial words were omitted in the recording: Fogg v. Holcomb, 64-621.

Notwithstanding the fact that a conveyance by the grantor to a third person is executed before the taking effect of the curative act, the burden is upon such purchaser to prove that he is an innocent purchaser of the premises for value, in order to defeat the previous conveyance defectively recorded: Ibid.

Before an instrument can be regarded as duly recorded under this statute, it must appear from the record of the instrument that every material part of it has been transcribed into the record, and where the record fails to show a valid conveyance because no consideration is expressed for it, and it is not signed by the grantor, such defect will not be cured by these provisions. If it should appear from extrinsic evidence that the instrument was duly signed, then the record would be invalid, because the instrument has not been duly recorded: Greenwood v. Jenswold, 69-53.

A deed, the acknowledgment of which is legalized by this statute, is to be regarded as having the same effect from the day of its record that it would have had if it had been properly acknowledged: East v. Pugh, 71-162.

As the act to legalize defective acknowledgments applies only to cases where there was a legal deed antecedent to any attempt to acknowledge, it has no effect to render valid a tax deed which was previously invalid for want of acknowledgment: Goodykoontz v. Olsen, 54-174.

Section applied: Buckley v. Early, 72-289.

3142. When no seal affixed. 1968. All deeds, mortgages, or other instruments in writing, for the conveyance of lands which have heretofore been made and executed, and the officer taking the acknowledgment has not affixed his seal to the acknowledgment, such acknowledgment shall, nevertheless, be good and valid in law and equity, anything in any law heretofore passed to the contrary notwithstanding. [13 G. A., ch. 160, § 3.]

3143. Acknowledgments by deputy clerks, auditors and deputy auditors. 17 G. A., ch. 164, § 1; 18 G. A., ch. 103. All acknowledgments of deeds, mortgages, and contracts heretofore taken and certified by any county auditor, deputy county auditor, or deputy clerk of the district court within this state, are hereby declared to be as legal and valid as though the law had authorized such acknowledgments at the time they were made.

POWER OF ATTORNEY.

3144. Recording; revocation. 1969. All instruments containing a power to convey, or in any manner to affect real estate, shall be held to be instruments affecting real estate; and no such instrument, when certified and recorded as above prescribed, can be revoked as to third parties by any act of the parties by whom it was executed, until the instrument containing such revocation is acknowledged and filed for record in the same office in which the instrument containing such power is recorded. [R., § 2234; C., '51, § 1226; 9 G. A., ch. 123.]

FORMS OF CONVEYANCES.

3145. What sufficient. 1970. The following or other equivalent forms, varied to suit circumstances, are sufficient for the purposes therein contemplated:

FOR A QUITCLAIM DEED.

For the consideration of — dollars I hereby quitclaim to A. B. all my interest in the following tracts of land (describing it).

FOR A DEED IN FEE-SIMPLE WITHOUT WARRANTY.

For the consideration of — dollars I hereby convey to A. B. the following tract of land (describing it).

FOR A DEED IN FEE WITH WARRANTY.

The same as the last preceding form, adding the words "and I warrant the title against all persons whomsoever" (or other words of warranty as the party may desire).

FOR A MORTGAGE.

The same as deed of conveyance, adding the following: "To be void upon conditions that I pay," etc. [R., § 2240; C., '51, § 1232.]

The general covenant of warranty specified in the form for a warranty deed includes and implies the usual covenants in a deed of conveyance in fee-simple including one against incumbrances: Frank v. Cresswell, 5-62. And under this covenant the grantee has all the rights he would have had if the conveyance had contained express covenants of seizin, freedom from incumbrance, right to convey, and the like: Van Wagner v. Van Nostrand, 19-422.

RECORDS TRANSCRIBED.

3146. When ordered. 1971; 18 G. A., ch. 142. The board of supervisors of any county, whenever they shall deem it necessary and expedient, may have transcribed, indexed, and arranged, any deed, probate, mortgage, court, or county record or government survey belonging to said county, and have made a complete index thereof as contemplated by section nineteen hundred and forty-three of this chapter [§ 3114]; and may have correctly transcribed or copied any index of deeds, mortgages, or other records, and may have the said transcripts or copies compared and certified by the officer to whose office the original record belongs, but the provisions of this section shall not apply to any county which has been specially authorized to have such transcribing done. [14 G. A., ch. 60.]

3147. By new counties. 1972. Whenever any new county shall have been formed from other original and organized counties, or shall have been attached to another county for judicial or other purposes, and shall afterwards be fully organized and detached, and when any records of the kind mentioned in the preceding section are in the original county or counties which properly belong to such new county, the board of supervisors of such new or attached county shall have authority to have transcribed, indexed, and arranged, such records, or any of them, for the use of such new county. [R., § 2259.]

3148. Compensation. 1973. The board of supervisors may employ any suitable person to perform the labor contemplated in the two preceding sections; the amount of compensation therefor to be previously fixed by them, not exceeding six cents for each one hundred words of the records proper, and twelve and one-half cents for each one hundred words of indexing; such compensation to be paid out of the treasury of the county for which the records are transcribed and to be audited as other claims. [R., § 2260.]

3149. Officer to compare and certify. 1974; 18 G. A., ch. 142. When any such records as are contemplated in section nineteen hundred and seventy-two [§ 3147] are so transcribed the officer to whose office the original records belong, shall compare the copy so transcribed with the original; and, upon the same being found to be correctly transcribed, shall make a written certificate in each volume or book of such transcribed records, certifying that such transcribed records have been compared with the original by him, and are true and correct copies of the original records. [R., § 2261.]

This section will not authorize the making of a new set of tax books for the purpose of enabling officers in territory which has been separated from the county to which it was annexed for taxing purposes to collect such taxes: Hilliard v. Griffin, 72-331.

3150. Force and effect. 1975. Such transcribed records so certified, shall have the same force and effect in all respects as the original records, and be admissible as evidence in all cases, and of equal validity with the original records. [R., § 2262; 14 G. A., ch. 60.]

[Duly certified copies of records, etc., receivable in evidence, see § 4953.]

CHAPTER 7.

OF OCCUPYING CLAIMANTS.

3151. Proceedings. 1976. Where an occupant of land has color of title thereto, and in good faith has made any valuable improvements thereon, and is afterwards in a proper action found not to be the rightful owner thereof, no execution shall issue to put the plaintiff in possession of the property after the filing of the petition hereinafter mentioned, until the provisions of this chapter have been complied with. [R., § 2264; C., '51, § 1233.]

Occupant: It was not necessary in order that the party be an "occupant of the land" that he be in personal possession, a possession by tenant being sufficient: Parsons v. Moses, 16-440.

But a party out of possession cannot maintain the action. The right is lost by yielding the occupancy: Webster v. Stewart, 6-401; Claussen v. Rayburn, 14-136.

To entitle a claimant to the benefit of these provisions the possession under and during which the improvements were made must have been adverse to the holder of the paramount title: Keas v. Burns, 23-235.

Good faith: Constructive notice of an adverse claim, especially such as is imparted by a lis pendens or record, does not exclude good faith in the claimant: Read v. Howe, 49-65.

It is sufficient if the claimant has an honest belief that he has a good title and has no actual notice of an adverse claim: Ibid.

Purchaser pendente lite: One who purchases land pending an action with constructive notice thereof is bound by the judgment, and must at his peril take notice of the service of the writ of possession and make his claim for improvements at the proper time: Blanchard v. Ware, 43-530.

The effect of these statutory provisions is to make an occupant of land practically the owner of his improvements, even though he be not the owner of the land on which they were made. The occupant in such a case is not to be considered a mere trespasser wantonly thrusting himself or his property in the way of danger. In an action for the injury of such property, it is immaterial, therefore, who was the owner of the land: Milwaukee, etc., R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S., 469.

Counter-claim: Claims for improvements cannot be pleaded by way of counter-claim, but only after the question of title has been fully adjudicated: Walton v. Gray, 29-440; Fogg v. Holcomb, 64-621; Buck v. Holt, 74-294.

In an equitable action to redeem from tax sale under § 1378, the question of improvements is to be determined in the case: Serrin v. Brush, 74-489

Claimant under pre-emption certificate: A party who, by satisfactory showing to the land office, has received a certificate that he is entitled to pre-empt land, has color of title thereto. One believing that he has title and making improvements on the land makes them in good faith and is consequently entitled to receive the value thereof: Wells v. Raley, 2 Dillon, 566.

So held as to occupants of Des Moines river lands: Ibid.; Litchfield v. Johnson, 4 Dillon, 551.

Occupant with notice: One who, cognizant of the facts, occupies land under title bond given by the assignee of a title bond from the original owner, is not entitled after foreclosure and sale under the first bond to the benefit of the occupying-claimant act for improvements made thereon: Jones v. Graves, 21-474.

Color of title, who deemed to have, see §§ 3157, 3158, and notes.

For what improvements allowed: The claim for improvements is assignable, and the occupant may recover for improvements made by those under whom he claims: Crayton v. Wright, 16-133; Parsons v. Moses, 16-440.

The occupying claimant is not entitled to compensation for improvements made after judgment against him in the main action, and after his proceedings under the occupying-claimant law are commenced: Crayton v. Wright, 16-133.

An occupying claimant is to be allowed the amount which the improvements have actually augmented the value of the property and not their cost: Childs v. Shower, 18-261.

Setting off rents and profits: As against the claim for improvements, the owner may set off rents and profits of the land accruing prior to the six years to which his recovery in the action for the possession of the property is limited by § 4491, and also rents and profits subsequent to the judgment in such action, and pending the action by the occupying claimant for improvements: Parsons v. Moses, 16-440.

The occupant is not to be charged with the rent of improvements made by him, but with the rent of the land, estimated, however, not upon its rental value as he took it, but upon what the land has been worth to him, as brought into cultivation and made suitable for raising crops by his labor: Dungan v. Von Puhl, 8-263; Wolcott v. Townsend, 49-456.

Removal: The proceeding by the occupying claimant is ancillary to the main suit, and cannot be removed to the federal court as separate from such main action: Chapman v. Barger, 4 Dillon, 557.

Appeal: Plaintiff having obtained judgment for possession and the defendant having filed his claim for improvements, held, that plaintiff was not entitled to writs of possession in disregard of the petition for improvements, although defendant had taken the case by writ of error from the state supreme court to the supreme court of the United States, where it was still pending: Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Tharnish, 54-690.

Remedy exclusive: A party who has made improvements upon the land of another cannot recover the value thereof from the owner, even when made by him in good faith and under color of title. His only remedy is under the statutory provisions in behalf of occupying claimants, which provisions are not available to a party not in possession. But if the owner has wrongfully taken possession, the claimant may recover such possession by action of forcible entry and detainer, and then against any legal proceedings to dispossess him may assert his right to compensation for improvements: Webster v. Stewart, 6-401.

By the common law there was no liability on the part of the property owner to pay for improvements made by an occupying claimant of property who had no title thereto when they were made. All improvements annexed to the freehold become part thereof and pass with its recovery. The right to recover for improvements thus made is based entirely upon statute: Lunquest v. Ten Eyck, 40-213.

If, therefore, an occupying claimant asks to recover for improvements made upon the land of another, he must see that the steps provided by statute to entitle him to such recovery are taken: Blanchard v. Ware, 43-530.

3152. Petition. 1977. Such petition must set forth the groundson which the defendant seeks relief, stating with other things, as accurately as practicable, the value of the improvements upon the lands, as well as the value of the lands aside from the improvements. [R., § 2265; C., '51, § 1234.]

3153. Issues. 1978. All issues joined thereon must be tried as in ordinary actions, and if the value of the land or the improvements is in controversy, such value must be ascertained on the trial. [R., § 2666; C., '51, § 1235.]

The court in this proceeding has no authority to render a personal judgment against the owner of the land for the value of the improvements: Dungan v. Von Puhl, 8-263; Wolcott v. Townsend, 49-456.

3154. Plaintiff may elect. 1979. The plaintiff in the main action may thereupon pay the appraised value of the improvements, and take the property. [R., § 2267; C., '51, § 1236.]

During the time when the owner has the election to pay for the improvements the claimant in possession is a tenant at will: Reilly v. Ringland, 39-106.

The occupying claimant is entitled to have possession of the land until his claim is paid, for such uses as he may deem proper, but without making any additional improvements thereon: Webster City & C. C. R. Co. v. Newson, 70-355.

3155. Defendant may take land. 1980. Should he fail to do this after a reasonable time, to be fixed by the court, the defendant may take the property upon paying the value of the land aside from the improvements. [C., '51, § 1237.]

3156. Tenants in common. 1981. If this be not done within a reasonable time, to be fixed by the court, the parties will be held to be tenants in common of all the land, including the improvements, each holding an interest proportionate to the value of his property as ascertained by the appraisal above contemplated. [C., '51, § 1238.]

A prior statute relating to the same subject, which authorized a money judgment against the owner of the land for the value of the improvements, on which, if not paid within three years, a general execution might issue, held unconstitutional: Childs v. Shower, 18-261.

3157. Color of title. 1982. The purchaser in good faith at any judicial or tax sale made by the proper person or officer, has color of title within the meaning of this chapter, whether such person or officer had sufficient authority to sell or not, unless such want of authority was known to such purchaser at the time of the sale. And the rights of such purchaser shall pass to his assignees or representatives. [R., § 2268; C., '51, § 1239.]

The grantee is an "assignee" within the meaning of this section: Childs v. Shower, 18-26.

When the tax deed relied on to show color of title shows a sale in gross of distinct tracts, evidence aliunde may be received to show that the several tracts were not sold for a gross sum: Ibid.

A tax deed void on its face is sufficient to give color of title: Colvin v. McCune, 39-502.

3158. Occupancy. 1983. Any person has also such color of title, who has occupied a tract of land by himself, or by those under whom he claims, for the term of five years, or who has thus occupied the land for a less term than five years, if he, or those under whom he claims have, at any time during such occupancy, with the knowledge and consent, express or implied, of the real owner, made any valuable improvements thereon, or if he, or those under whom he claims have, at any time during such occupancy, paid the ordinary county taxes thereon for any one year, and two years thereafter have elapsed without a repayment or proffer of repayment of the same by the owner of the land, and such occupancy is continued up to the time at which the suit is brought by which the recovery of the land is obtained as above contemplated; but nothing in this chapter shall be construed to give tenants color of title against their landlords. [R., § 2269; C., '51, § 1240.]

Occupancy in the claimant's own right for a term of five years gives the color of title required by § 3157. Such possession need not be based on any kind of right or title to the land: Lunquest v. Ten Eyck, 40-213.

A lessee of premises from one holding a life estate does not have color of title as against the reversioner, nor will the payment of taxes give him such color of title if made in accordance with the terms of the lease: Wiltse v. Hurley, 11-473.

The vendee of real estate holding under a bond for a deed cannot take advantage of these provisions to recover from the vendor the value of improvements made while so holding: Jones v. Graves, 21-474.

A claimant having color of title by five years' occupancy at the time judgment is recovered against him may recover for his improvements, although they were made before the expiration of the period of possession necessary to constitute such color of title: Litchfield v. Johnson, 4 Dillon, 551.

Where defendant occupied the land when judgment was obtained, and at that time more than two years had elapsed since he had paid the tax on the land, and plaintiff at no time offered to pay the taxes, held, that defendant had color of title: Finnegan v. Campbell, 74-158.

3159. Settlers. 1984. When any person shall have settled upon any lands within this state, and shall have occupied the same for three years under or by virtue of any law of said state, or any contract with its proper officers for the purchase of said land, or under any law of, or by virtue of any purchase from the United States, and shall have made valuable improvements thereon, and shall have been, or shall hereafter be, found not to be the true owner thereof, or not to have acquired a right to purchase the same from the state or the United States, such person shall be deemed an occupying claimant within the meaning of this chapter. [13 G. A., ch. 88.]

3160. Waste by claimant. 1985. In the cases above provided for, if the occupying claimant has committed any injury to the land by cutting timber or otherwise, the plaintiff may set the same off against any claim for improvements made by such claimant. [R., § 2270; C., '51, § 1241.]

[As to setting off rents and profits, see notes to § 3151.]

3161. Execution. 1986. The plaintiff is entitled to an execution to put himself in possession of his property in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, but not otherwise. [R., § 2272; C., '51, § 1243.]

3162. Removal of improvements. 1987. Any person having improvements on any land heretofore granted to the state in aid of any work of internal improvement, including what is known as the Des Moines river lands, whose title to such land is questioned by another, shall be entitled to remove such improvements owned by him without injury otherwise to the land, at any time before he is evicted therefrom, or he may claim and have the benefit of this chapter by proceeding as herein directed. [14 G. A., ch. 85.]

CHAPTER 8.

THE HOMESTEAD.

3163. Exempt. 1988. Where there is no special declaration of the statute to the contrary, the homestead of every family, whether owned by the husband or wife, is exempt from judicial sale. [R., § 2277; C., '51, § 1245.]

[As to exemption of homestead procured with pension money, see § 4306.]

Who entitled to exemption: The surviving widow of the owner of the homestead is as much the head of the family and entitled to control the rents and profits of the homestead as was the husband when living: Floyd v. Mosier, 1-512.

A widower without children acquiring and occupying property as a homestead for himself and mother, whom he supported, held to be entitled to the homestead right: Parsons v. Livingstone, 11-104.

So held, also, as to an unmarried woman who had accepted, protected and was providing for the children of a deceased sister: Arnold v. Waltz, 53-706.

The fact that a divorce is granted to the wife, allowing her the custody of the only child, will not deprive the husband of the right to hold a homestead exemption: Woods v. Davis, 34-264.

In what property: Purchase, payments, and possession under a bond for deed, constitute sufficient ownership to make the property the homestead of such purchaser: Stinson v. Richardson, 44-373, 375.

A tenant in common may have a homestead right in his interest in the undivided premises: Thorn v. Thorn, 14-49.

And this is true even when he has only an equitable title thereto: Hewitt v. Rankin, 41-35, 44.

Nature of the interest: The wife's homestead interest in property owned by the husband is present, fixed and substantial, and not merely possible, remote and contingent, and is not in general liable to be affected by the omission, neglect or default of the husband: Adams v. Beale, 19-61.

Her interest in the husband's property used as a homestead is real property within the meaning of a former statute providing for the redemption from tax sale of the property of a married woman: Ibid.

The right of the wife in the homestead is of a higher character, and more in the nature of a vested interest or title, than is the dower right in the other real estate of her husband: Chase v. Abbott, 20-154.

The legal title to the homestead, upon actual occupancy by the husband and wife, does not vest jointly in them. The homestead title is one of exemption rather than one conferring affirmative rights: Burns v. Keus, 21-257.

Exemption, part of the contract: The homestead law in force at the time a contract is made enters into and becomes a part of it, and a subsequent repeal of the law will not impair the rights of parties thereunder: Bridgman v. Wilcut, 4 G. Gr., 563.

Pertains to remedy: The homestead exemption is a part of the remedy, and is not to be regulated by the law of the place of contracting: Helfenstein v. Cave, 3-287.

There may be a homestead right in a leasehold interest in real estate so as to render the assignment of the lease, by the husband alone, invalid: Pelan v. De Bevard, 13-53.

Where there is an exchange of homesteads, and one of the parties remains temporarily, after the exchange, in his former homestead, at the will of the other party, his right is less than and antagonistic to the possession required to constitute a homestead: Windle v. Brandt, 55-221.

One partner cannot acquire a homestead exemption in real estate belonging to the firm in which he is a member as against either the claims of firm creditors or copartners, even though he holds the legal title of the property: Drake v. Moore, 66-58; Hoyt v. Hoyt, 69-174.

One who purchases a pre-emption claim to public lands and takes possession thereof does not, before acquiring title from the government, have such an interest in the property as to support a homestead exemption: De Land v. Day, 45-37.

Where the house used as a home is situated upon lands of the wife the homestead may also include land owned by the husband. It is entirely immaterial whether the legal title be in the husband or wife, or whether one of them holds the title to one tract and the other to another tract, where the two tracts are used as a homestead: Lowell v. Shannon, 60-713.

A conveyance of the homestead property by the husband to the wife does not destroy its character as a homestead nor change the time to which the exemption dates: Green v. Farrar, 53-426.

Exemption: A judgment under which a homestead is not liable to sale does not attach as a lien thereon, and a conveyance of such homestead to a third person passes title free from such judgment: Lamb v. Shays, 14-567; Cummings v. Long, 16-41.

But when, by abandonment, the homestead loses its character, the liens of prior judgments attach in the same manner as the lien of a judgment attaches to property subsequently acquired by the judgment debtor: Lamb v. Shays, 14-567.

A voluntary conveyance of the homestead will not be fraudulent as to creditors having no lien thereon: Delashmut v. Frau, 44-613; Officer v. Evans, 48-557; Aultman v. Heiney, 59-654; Butler v. Nelson, 72-732.

As to liability for purchase money and antecedent debts, see notes to § 3167. As to liability under contract, and enforcement of the same by foreclosure, etc., see notes to § 3168.

Proportional liability: Where a husband has contributed a portion of the purchase price of a homestead, the title of which is in the wife, the creditors of the husband under claims antedating the acquisition of the homestead may subject such property, to the extent of the husband's contribution thereto, to the payment of their claims, such proportion being treated as equitable assets and sold to satisfy judgments on such claims: Croop v. Morton, 49-16; S. C., 53-599; Hamill v. Henry, 69-752.

Earnings of the wife not derived from separate property or business, but acquired in connection with her husband's property and in the management of the family affairs, do not become the wife's separate property in such sense that when invested in a homestead that proportion thereof thus procured is exempt from indebtedness to which the homestead in the hands of the husband is liable: Hamill v. Henry, 69-752.

Taxes and repairs: A husband who occupies with his family a homestead owned by his wife may pay taxes and interest on incumbrances thereon, as well as make expenditures for repairs, without becoming a creditor of the wife and acquiring any claim against the property which can be enforced by his creditors: Ibid.

Decree for divorce: Where a decree of divorce merely gives the wife a personal judgment for alimony, the homestead, which the husband still continues to occupy as the head of the family, cannot be sold to satisfy the judgment: Byers v. Byers, 21-268; Whitcomb v. Whitcomb, 52-715.

3164. Family defined. 1989. A widow or widower, though without children, shall be deemed a family while continuing to occupy the house used as such at the time of the death of the husband or wife. [R., § 2278; C., '51, § 1246.]

Granting a divorce to the wife and giving her the custody of the children, held not to render the homestead in the hands of the hus-

The homestead is for the benefit of the family and not of the husband alone, and the law of homestead has no application in a suit for divorce and alimony. The court in adjusting the rights of the parties may make such provision or disposition of it as may appear just and equitable, and the attachment authorized in actions for alimony (§ 3418) may therefore be levied on the homestead: Daniels v. Morris, 54-369.

Violation of liquor law: By reason of the provision of § 2419 the homestead, or that part of it used as a saloon, is subject to judgment obtained for violation of the laws against the sale of intoxicating liquors: Arnold v. Golshall, 71-572.

Exemption of proceeds: Where a portion of the homestead is, by proper proceedings, condemned for right of way, the damages allowed are exempt from execution. Whether the proceeds of a voluntary conveyance by the husband of a portion of the homestead for right of way would be exempt, quære: Kaiser v. Seaton, 62-463.

The right of action against a railway company for damages caused to the homestead property by fire negligently set out by such company is exempt from execution for a reasonable time, to the same extent that the homestead is, and the railway company cannot be garnished for such indebtedness under a judgment which could not be enforced against the homestead: Mudge v. Lanning, 68-611.

The proceeds of the sale of the homestead are not exempt from execution unless the sale is for the purpose of procuring a new homestead (under § 3175): Huskins v. Hunton, 72-37.

band liable to sale on execution: Woods v. Davis, 34-264.

3165. Conveyance or incumbrance. 1990. A conveyance or incumbrance by the owner is of no validity unless the husband and wife, if the owner is married, concur in and sign the same joint instrument. [R., § 2279; C., '51, § 1247.]

Consent of both husband and wife necessary: Neither the husband nor the wife can by any separate act affect the homestead rights of the other and change the homestead character of the property. When the right of a homestead is once attached to the property it can be relinquished or divested only by a joint conveyance or by an abandonment of the property as a homestead by both husband and wife: Lunt v. Neelcy, 67-97.

But the subsequent purchaser without notice that property conveyed by the husband or wife holding the legal title thereto was made to be a homestead property was invested with the homestead character is not affected with notice of the invalidity of such conveyance, and will be protected: Ibid.

Where an unmarried man, owning and occupying property as a home, made application for a loan secured by mortgage upon the land, and before the execution of the mortgage, but without the knowledge of the lender, was married, held, that the mortgage was subsequent to the wife's homestead right: Tolman v. Leathers, 1 McCrary, 329.

A mortgage upon the homestead by the husband alone, even though given to secure a debt antedating the homestead, held void, and the record thereof not sufficient to constitute notice to a subsequent purchaser. The creditor whose claim antedates the homestead right has no lien as against a purchaser without notice until he recovers judgment on his claim: Higley v. Millard, 45-586.

A sale and conveyance of the homestead by husband and wife will transfer a valid title to the purchaser as against a prior sale by the husband alone, although the second purchaser had knowledge of the first conveyance: Garlock v. Baker, 46-334.

A contract by the husband to convey property which has been acquired by him in exchange for the homestead, with the intention of occupying it for a new homestead within the period reasonably required for making a removal, will be void, although the property acquired has not yet been actually occupied: Cowgell v. Warrington, 66-666.

Where the homestead right exists in property, the whole of which is greater in amount than can be claimed under the homestead law, the boundaries of the homestead not having been established, the owner of the fee cannot, by conveying a portion of the property by an instrument in which the other does not join, limit the homestead right to another portion thereof. No valid sale of any portion can be made until the provisions of law as to platting have been complied with: Goodrich v. Brown, 63-247.

The rights of the wife and family in the homestead cannot be affected by the fraudulent acts of the husband: Eli v. Gridley, 27-376.

The subsequent adoption of property as a homestead will not affect conveyances previously made: Yost v. Devault, 3-345.

Where, prior to the execution of a mortgage on real estate, no part thereof is occupied as a homestead, and an adjoining tract is used and held out as such, third persons being influenced by such representations, the mortgagor's wife, though not joining in the mortgage, cannot afterwards set out the homestead by plat, and record it so as to include part of the mortgaged premises: Lucas v. Pickel, 20-490.

Incumbrances: Under a statute not forbidding the incumbrance of the homestead, but only the conveyance thereof by one party alone, held, that a mortgage was a conveyance: Babcock v. Hoey, 11-375.

Assignment, lease or contract: Where premises held under a lease are occupied as a homestead, an assignment of the lease by the husband alone will not be valid: Pelan v. De Bevard, 13-53.

The rights of a wife in the homestead cannot be prejudiced by a lease made by her husband or by a holding by him in recognition of a mortgagee's title as against him: Morris v. Sargent, 18-90.

Where the title to the homestead is held under a contract of purchase, the husband having such contract cannot, without the consent of the wife, make an assignment thereof so as to divest the homestead right: Drake v. Moore, 66-58.

The verbal assent of the wife to a conveyance of the homestead or an assignment of the title bond under which it is held will not make it binding: Donner v. Rodenbaugh, 61-269; Stinson v. Richardson, 44-373.

An oral agreement by the parties to execute a mortgage upon the homestead, for money borrowed to redeem the same from execution, cannot be specifically enforced, nor can the mortgage so advanced be made a lien upon the premises by judicial decree: Clay v. Richardson, 59-483.

The fact that the wife has knowledge of and approves the sale of the homestead, and even an express agreement on her part to convey the same, if it is not in writing, will not render a contract of sale by the husband alone valid: Anderson v. Culbert, 55-233.

Ratification: Where there is an attempt to execute a proper instrument, which, however, is void by reason of defects in form, the parties may bind themselves by a ratification of such instrument, either express, or presumed from their acts: Spufford v. Warren, 47-47.

Where it was attempted to show ratification by the wife of a parol contract to convey the homestead, made during the life-time of her husband, held, that mere acceptance of the benefits of such parol contract during the three or four weeks of ill-health following the death of the husband was not sufficient to prove such parol ratification: Clark v. Everts, 46-248.

Duress: Where the concurrence of a wife in the mortgage of a homestead is procured by duress it cannot be enforced: First Nat. Bank v. Bryan, 62-42.

Insanity: Where the wife is insane at the time of a conveyance in which she attempts to join for the purpose of conveying the homestead, it will be void for want of her consent: Alexander v. Vennum, 61-160.

The fact that the wife, at the time of making a note secured by mortgage on the homestead, was mentally unsound, will not defeat the mortgage in the ordinary course of business, if the transaction is fair and reasonable, and the mental condition of the wife was not known to the other party: Abbott v. Creal, 56-175.

Fraud: If the wife actually signs an instrument of conveyance or incumbrance, she will not be allowed to dispute its validity on the ground that she was ignorant of its contents or that she was induced to do so by fraud or deception of her husband, in the absence of a showing that the grantee or mortgagee was cognizant of such deception and fraud: Edgell v. Hayens, 53-223; Van Sickles v. Town, 53-259; Kubelman v. Rummel, 72-40.

The fact that a wife's signature to a mortgage of the homestead is obtained by fraud and misrepresentation on the part of her husband will not defeat the mortgage, where no knowledge of the fraud can be imputed to the mortgagee: Ætna. L. Ins. Co. v. Franks, 53-618; Miller v. Wolbert, 71-539.

Where the husband, to whom the wife owning the fee of the homestead intrusted the entire control of the business, secured a loan thereon upon the representation that he would furnish a valid mortgage upon the property signed by the wife and himself, and afterwards furnished such security, held, that the wife was estopped by his action from relying upon a defense to such mortgage based upon erasures and interlineations claimed by her to have been made by her husband, but not readily apparent upon inspection: Sawyer v. Perry, 62-238.

Mortgage for husband's debts: The wife may join in a mortgage of the homestead for the payment of a note of her husband and will be bound thereby to the extent of the property mortgaged, but she would not thereby become entitled to the proceeds of the loan effected or property purchased therewith: Rock v. Kreig, 39-239.

The homestead is bound by a mortgage executed by the husband and wife to secure their joint note, it being expressly stipulated that the intention is to bind the homestead: Low v. Anderson, 41-476.

A purchase-money mortgage given at the time of the acquisition of the homestead, to the vendor, is valid, though executed alone by the party taking the legal title: Christy v. Dyer, 14-433.

B. having become bound as surety for one L. L. to A. L., and being at the same time indebted by mortgage for the purchase money of land which included the homestead, an arrangement was made by which B. assumed the payment of the debt to A. L., securing it by a mortgage on the same property, and the amount thus assumed was, by the procurement of L. L., indorsed upon the purchase money notes; held, that A. L. could not claim to be the assignee of a portion of the purchase money, or of the vendor's rights, and took the mortgage subject to the unpaid residue of the first mortgage and subject to the homestead rights of B.'s wife, who had not joined in the mortgage: Burnap v. Cook, 16-149.

The renewal by the husband of a debt, by an admission or new promise sufficient to take the case out of the statute of limitations, will also keep in force a mortgage given on the homestead to secure the same, although such renewal is without the wife's consent: Mahon v. Cooley, 36-479.

A conveyance for right of way by the husband, owner of the legal title of the homestead, in which the wife does not join, is not necessarily invalid: Chicago & S. W. R. Co. v. Swinney, 38-182.

A husband can convey the right of way over the homestead without the concurrence or signature of the wife to the deed, if it does not defeat the enjoyment of the homestead as such: Ottumwa, C. F. & St. P. R'y Co. v. McWilliams, 71-164.

Damages assessed for the taking of a right of way through the homestead are exempt from execution. Whether the proceeds of a voluntary conveyance by the husband for that purpose would be exempt, quære: Kaiser v. Seaton, 62-463.

A license to mine upon the homestead, executed by the owner alone without concurrence of the wife, is not necessarily invalid, and even if her assent should be considered necessary, it would be presumed from knowledge on her part that work was being done thereunder or expenses incurred to which she made no objection: Harkness v. Burton, 39-101.

A lease to a mining company of the right to mine coal from the homestead does not constitute a severance such as to subject the unmined coal to judicial sale: Sibley v. Lawrence, 46-363.

How conveyance made: An instrument in which the wife only joins for the purpose of releasing her dower is not such a joint instrument as is required to convey or encumber the homestead: Sharp v. Bailey, 14-387; Fuller v. Hunt, 48-163; Wilson v. Christopherson, 53-481; Eisenstadt v. Cramer, 55-753; apparently contra: Reynolds v. Morse, 52-155.

It is not necessary that the conveyance or incumbrance should specifically state that the property sought to be conveyed or incumbered is the homestead: Babcock v. Hoey, 11-375; O'Brien v. Young, 15-5; Reynolds v. Morse, 52-155; Van Sickles v. Town, 53-259; Waterman v. Baldwin, 68-355.

A conveyance of the homestead property from the husband to the wife will not vest in her such title that she alone can make a valid conveyance thereof: Spoon v. Van Fossen, 53-494.

In a conveyance of the homestead by the husband to the wife, joinder of the wife is not necessary: Harsh v. Griffin, 72-608.

As to the rule under a different statutory provision, see Luther v. Drake, 21-92.

Effect of conveyance by one party alone: An agreement to convey, made by the husband or wife alone, is absolutely void, and a specific performance thereof cannot be enforced: Yost v. Devault, 9-60.

A mortgage upon the homestead executed by the husband alone while his wife is living is not binding upon him even after the death of the wife: Larson v. Reynolds, 13-579.

Where one party alone enters into a contract to convey the homestead no damages can be recovered for the breach of such contract from the party executing it: Barnett v. Mendenhall, 42-296; Clark v. Everts, 46-248; Cowgell v. Warrington, 66-666.

Where the husband enters into a contract to convey, to which both parties expect to secure the assent of the wife, but such assent is not secured, the purchaser cannot recover from the husband the excess in the value of the land over the purchase price. The case is not one of fraud, and it is doubtful whether anything can be recovered except the purchase money paid and interest: Donner v. Rodenbaugh, 61-269.

The invalidity of a mortgage on the homestead executed by the husband alone may be set up by a junior mortgagee, in a proceeding to foreclose the senior mortgage, although such defense is not interposed by the owners: Alley v. Bay, 9-509.

Specific performance: Where the husband caused the homestead to be advertised for sale at auction and it was sold, held, in the absence of any consent to such sale by the wife, specific performance could not be enforced: Garlock v. Baker, 46-334.

Subsequent abandonment of the homestead will not make a conveyance or mortgage by the husband alone, while the property was occupied as a homestead, valid: Bruner v. Bateman, 66-488; Lunt v. Neeley, 67-97.

Improvements by purchaser in good faith: Where a party takes possession of a homestead under a void transfer thereof, but in good faith, believing that he has acquired a good title, and makes improvements which are judicious and necessary and not inconsistent with the circumstances of the owner, he is entitled to allowance for such improvements: Stinson v. Richardson, 44-373.

Rents and profits: Whether in such case the wife of the party who has attempted to convey the homestead can maintain action for rents and profits against the person thus taking possession under such conveyance, quere; but held, in a particular case, that a decree applying such rents and profits on a judgment against the homestead was proper: Ibid.

Where plaintiff's husband before his death assigned to defendant a bond for a deed by which he held a tract of land, including the homestead, defendant agreeing to pay certain judgments and other considerations, in which assignment plaintiff did not join, held, that upon this being set aside, at the suit of plaintiff, and defendant declared entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the holder of the judgments which he had paid off in a supplemental proceeding by the wife after the husband's death, the rents and profits of the portion of the premises which was the homestead should be applied to the satisfaction of these judgments, but not the rents and profits from the portion not a part of the homestead, and that a like application should be made of the value of a horse given to defendant by plaintiff's husband in the trade: Stinson v. Richardson, 48-541.

3166. Liable for taxes. 1991. The homestead is liable for taxes accruing thereon, and, if platted as hereinafter directed, is liable only for such taxes and subject to mechanics' liens for work, labor, or material, done or furnished exclusively for the improvement of the same, and the whole or a sufficient portion thereof may be sold to pay the same. [R., § 2280; C., '51, § 1248; 9 G. A., ch. 173, § 9.]

[For similar provisions as to taxes, see § 1358.]

3167. For debts antedating purchase. 1992. The homestead may be sold on execution for debts contracted prior to the purchase thereof, but it shall not in such case be sold except to supply the deficiency remaining after exhausting the other property of the debtor liable to execution. [R., § 2281; C., '51, § 1249.]

Unpaid purchase money: The homestead right is subordinate to the right of the vendor for unpaid purchase money: Christy v. Dyer, 14-438; Cole v. Gill, 14-527; Burnap v. Cook, 16-149; Hyatt v. Spearman, 20-510; Campbell v. Maginnis, 70-589.

In such case a general judgment and execution is the proper method of enforcing the vendor's lien: Bills v. Mason, 42-329.

The assignment of a note given for the purchase money of property constituting a homestead carries with it the vendor's lien and all the equities and rights which the vendor would have had if he had never parted with the debt: Ibid.

The satisfaction of a part of the judgment for the purchase money does not affect the lien of such judgment so far as the amount remaining unpaid is concerned: Campbell v. Maginnis, 70-589.

Fraud: Where the title to property has its inception in fraud, its homestead character cannot be set up to defeat the claims of the person from whom it was obtained: Muir v. Bozworth, 44-499.

Debts contracted prior to acquisition: The homestead is liable, under the statute, for debts contracted prior to its acquisition and occupancy as such, provided no other property is found subject to execution: Greeley v. Sample 22-333.

The provision that "the homestead may be sold for debts contracted prior to the purchase thereof" means that it may be thus sold for debts contracted prior to the time when the homestead right attaches by virtue of actual occupancy as a homestead. Debts contracted after the purchase of the property, but before it acquires the homestead character by occupancy as such, may be enforced against the property: Hale v. Heaslip, 16-451; Hyatt v. Spearman, 20-510; Elston v. Robinson, 23-208.

The entry of land under the United States homestead laws, which is afterwards occupied as a homestead, constitutes the purchase of the homestead within the meaning of this section. The exemption dates from such entry and not from the issuance of a patent: Green v. Farrar, 53-426.

A homestead is liable to foreign as well as domestic debts created prior to its acquisition: Laing v. Cunningham, 17-510; Brainard v. Van Kuran, 22-261.

Where a debt contracted prior to the acquisition of the homestead has become barred, and is renewed by a new note given subsequently to such acquisition, the homestead remains liable: Sloan v. Waugh, 18-224.

Where a party has derived a pecuniary advantage from a wrong done by him, and it is competent for the person suing thereon to waive the tort and maintain action on an implied promise, the obligation to pay is a debt within the meaning of the statutory provision above referred to, from the time of the wrong; but if the wrong results in no pecuniary advantage and the action must be in tort, and sound only in damages, then the obligation is not a debt until ascertained by judgment: Warner v. Cammack, 37-642.

The homestead being liable for debts created before its acquisition, the execution of a mortgage thereon to secure such a debt creates no additional burden so far as the rights of the wife are concerned, and, therefore, such mortgage executed by the husband alone would be valid as to the wife, but it would not be valid as to innocent purchasers before judgment on the debt secured, and the recording of such a mortgage would therefore not affect them with notice: Higley v. Millard, 45-586.

The liability of the homestead to debts contracted before it acquires the homestead character attaches at the time they are contracted, and not merely from the time judgment is rendered thereon: Bills v. Mason, 42-329.

Where a voluntary conveyance of the homestead was made to another, but such conveyance was not fraudulent as to creditors for the reason that their claims were not liens thereon, and afterward, the premises having remained in the possession of the grantor, they were reconveyed to him by quitclaim, held, that such homestead was liable for debts contracted prior to such reconveyance: Butler v. Nelson, 72-732.

Lien of judgments: As between the parties, or as against persons chargeable with notice of the character of the debt, a judgment upon a debt contracted prior to the time when the property acquired a homestead character, although not rendered until after that time, becomes a lien upon the homestead, and a party claiming under the homestead right (as by mortgage) is bound to ascertain when such right began, and whether it was prior to the debt on which the judgment was rendered: Hale v. Heaslip, 16-451.

And where it does not appear from the judgment itself that the debt was contracted prior to the acquisition of the homestead, that fact may be shown by evidence abunde: Delavan v. Pratt, 19-429; Phelps v. Finn, 45-447.

A judgment defendant who is surety for his co-defendant has such an interest, as against his co-defendant, that he may show that the judgment is for a debt antedating the acquisition of the homestead of his principal: Delavan v. Pratt, 19-429.

It is not sufficient, in order to make a judgment a lien upon the homestead otherwise than as a mechanic's lien, to show that it was for material furnished and labor performed upon the homestead property, unless the indebtedness arose before its acquisition as a homestead: Ibid.

A judgment for a debt antedating the homestead right is a lien on the homestead in such sense that the holder thereof may redeem from an execution sale by a senior creditor, and, as against such senior creditor purchasing at his own sale, may show by evidence abunde that his debt antedates the homestead: Phelps v. Finn, 45-447.

A creditor whose claim antedates the homestead has no lien as against a purchaser without notice until the recovery of his judgment: Higley v. Mullard, 45-586.

The homestead being subject to the lien of a judgment for a debt contracted before its acquisition from the time such judgment is rendered, a purchaser after the lien attaches takes subject thereto, and in case of sale of the property under such judgment has no other right than that of making statutory redemption from the sale: Kimball v. Wilson, 59-638.

That judgments in general are not liens on the homestead, see notes to § 3163.

Exhausting other property: It is the policy of the law to require all other property of the defendant in execution to be exhausted before the sale of the homestead: Twoood v. Stephens, 19-405.

The phrase "other property of the debtor liable to execution" applies to his interest in partnership property: Lambert v. Powers, 36-18.

Where the homestead is sold before other property is exhausted the sale may be set aside and a resale ordered: Lay v. Gibbons, 14-377.

Where the holder of a senior mortgage on property, including the homestead, took a conveyance of the entire property without releasing his mortgage or otherwise indicating his intention that it should be merged in his legal title, held, that as to junior mortgages he had the right to have his mortgage debt satisfied first, if possible, out of the portion not included in the homestead, to the exclusion of junior liens which were not a lien upon the homestead: Linscott v. Lamart, 46-312.

Where a mortgage upon land, a portion of which constituted a homestead, was foreclosed and the land was all sold together, held, that a judgment lienholder whose judgment was a lien upon a portion of the property constituting the homestead, and who was not made a part to the foreclosure, could redeem the portion of the land on which his judgment was a lien upon paying the amount bid for the whole premises less the value of the homestead: Sutherland v. Tyner, 72-232.

A party claiming that the homestead is not liable because other property has not been exhausted must make such fact appear. It is not necessary to negative that fact in the first instance in order to make the sale valid: Hale v. Heaslip, 16-451; Stevens v. Myers, 11-183.

The fact that a judgment creditor, under a claim prior to the homestead, has delayed until the other property of the debtor has been otherwise exhausted, will not release the homestead from his claim: Denegre v. Hawn, 14-240.

The right to compel a creditor to exhaust other property subject to his mortgage before subjecting the homestead does not exist in favor of a third person who has purchased the homestead after the execution of the mortgage under which the sale is had: Barker v. Rollins, 39-412; Kemerer v. Bournes, 53-172.

If the mortgagor has sold the other property which might have been applied to the satisfaction of the debt, he cannot require that it be proceeded against in the hands of a third party before the homestead is sold: Dilger v. Palmer, 60-117.

When a mortgage is given covering the homestead and other land, and then a second mortgage is executed upon the same land so far as not included in the homestead, and the second mortgage is foreclosed and the land covered by it sold to the mortgagee therein, such mortgagee cannot insist that the homestead be first subjected to the payment of the first mortgage, but the mortgagor may insist, on the foreclosure of the senior mortgage, that the property covered thereby not included within the homestead shall first be applied to the satisfaction of such mortgage: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Gleason, 62-277.

Although by § 4559 a junior mortgagee is entitled to pay off a senior mortgage covering the same premises and other property, and have an assignment thereof and enforce it first as against the property not covered by his junior mortgage, yet if the property thus embraced in the senior mortgage and not covered by the junior is the mortgagor's homestead, the junior mortgagee is not entitled to such assignment, as the homestead cannot be first subjected to the satisfaction of the senior mortgage: Grant v. Parsons, 67-31.

Where the sheriff at a sale on foreclosure of a mortgage covering the homestead and other tracts offers the land not included in the homestead in separate tracts without receiving bidders, that is a sufficient exhausting of other property as required by statute, and a subsequent sale of the entire property including the homestead is not irregular: Burmeister v. Dewy, 27-468; Eggers v. Redwood, 50-289; Brunbaugh v. Shoemaker, 51-148.

If the officer's return of the execution recites the sale of the whole for a certain sum, but does not state whether the portion not included in the homestead was first offered separately, it will be presumed that the officer did his duty, and that the portion not included in the homestead was first offered: Eggers v. Redwood, 50-289.

The debtor cannot restrain the sale of the homestead under execution upon the ground that his other property has not been exhausted without an averment or showing that he has other property: Stevens v. Myers, 11-183.

The right to compel a sale of other property before the homestead is sold is not to be enforced by a cross-action, but by a special direction in the execution, and the right may be set up in the answer or obtained upon a summary supplemental showing: Barker v. Rollins, 30-412.

Where a party who has the right to insist that other property before the homestead shall be applied to the satisfaction of the debt has notice of the proposed sale of the homestead and makes no objection thereto he will be regarded as acquiescing, and cannot afterwards object to the sale on that ground: Foley v. Cooper, 43-376.

The fact that land not included within the homestead, which is offered for sale, is bid in for a sum much below its value, will not entitle the parties to have the sale set aside in an action in equity: Sigerson v. Sigerson, 71-476.

Where a party attacked a judicial sale of his property on the ground that he owned no interest subject to execution, and it appeared incidentally merely that part of the premises were occupied as a homestead, but it did not appear whether the homestead right was acquired subsequently to the date upon which the judgment was rendered or not, held, that the sale of the property in a lump without setting off the homestead was not void: McCleary v. Ellis, 54-311.

Where it does not appear that defendant has other property subject to execution the sale of the homestead which is liable to the indebtedness will be valid unless defendant points out other property: Owens v. Hart, 63-620.

As to plating before sale on execution, see § 3173 and notes.

3168. Debts created by written contract. 1993. The homestead may be sold for debts created by written contract, executed by the persons having the power to convey and expressly stipulating that the homestead is liable therefor, but it shall not in such case be sold except to supply the deficiency remaining after exhausting the other property pledged for the payment of the debt in the same written contract. [R., § 2281; C., '51, § 1249.]

Written contract: The phrase "created by written contract" has reference to the manner in which the creation of the debt is to be evidenced rather than to the time when the liability arises. This section applies as well to debts evidenced by written contract subsequently to their creation as to debts so evidenced at the very time they are contracted: Stevens v. Myers, 11-183.

The written contract here specified need not be a mortgage or other conveyance; any writing containing necessary stipulations and executed by the proper persons is sufficient: Foley v. Cooper, 43-376.

The homestead cannot be rendered liable for the debts of its owner by mere verbal agreement to charge it with the payment thereof and to execute a writing to that effect, which by mistake is not done: Rutt v. Howell, 50-535.

A provision in a confession of judgment that execution might be issued thereon "against any property belonging to said defendants, homestead included," held not sufficient to render the homestead liable: Ibid.

The fact that the husband and wife execute a mortgage upon their homestead to secure a particular creditor does not subject it to the payment of the claims of other creditors, nor can a general creditor be subrogated to the rights of the mortgagee. If the owner afterwards makes a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, the holder of the mortgage is entitled to a pro rata share with the other creditors, and the homestead is only liable for the balance remaining unpaid: Dickson v. Chorn, 6-19.

Foreclosure of incumbrances against the homestead: The wife cannot be affected by any decree foreclosing a mortgage on the homestead to which she is not made a party: Burnap v. Cook, 16-149.

The lien of a mortgage of the homestead, executed by the owner before marriage, is prior to any claim the wife may have by the subsequent marriage; but in a foreclosure suit the wife must be made a party in order that the judgment be binding upon her, and that a sale thereunder may cut off her dower rights: Chase v. Abbott, 20-154.

Where a mortgage is invalid because not joined in by the wife, who afterwards dies, and the mortgagor, at the time of foreclosure, has a second wife, her rights cannot be cut off unless she is made a party: Larson v. Reynolds, 13-579.

But the wife is not a necessary party in every action affecting the homestead: Ibid.

Even where more property than can be held as a homestead is occupied, no foreclosure can be had as to any part thereof under a mortgage not joined in by the wife; and therefore a foreclosure of such a mortgage cannot be had against the husband alone: Goodrich v. Brown, 63-247.

Where the occupancy of property as a homestead commences subsequently to the commencement of an action to foreclose a mortgage executed by the husband, before the property acquired the homestead character, a sale under such foreclosure cuts off the wife's homestead rights, although she is not made a party thereto. She has no rights in such homestead which she can assert as against the mortgage, even to compel plaintiff to first exhaust other property: Kemerer v. Bournes, 53-172.

Receiver: An application for the appointment of a receiver pending proceedings to foreclose a mortgage on a homestead may properly be refused where the amount due under the mortgage is in dispute: Callanan v. Shaw, 19-183.

Whether in any case a receiver should be appointed to take possession and charge of a mortgagor's homestead pending proceedings to foreclose, quere: Ibid.

Failure to set up homestead right in the foreclosure proceeding bars any such right: Larson v. Reynolds, 13-579.

And it cannot afterwards be set up against the purchaser at a sale under the judgment recovered under such proceeding: Haynes v. Meek, 14-320.

Where a defendant failed to set up his homestead right in an action to charge his property with a lien, held, that he could not, after judgment, maintain an action to prevent the enforcement of such lien on the ground that he was ignorant of his rights; and held also that his minor children had no interest which could be interposed in that manner: Collins v. Chantland, 48-241.

Where a homestead was sold under special execution and the surplus in the sheriff's hands was applied upon other executions against the defendant, and it was shown that such other executions were not upon judgments which could be enforced against the homestead, but such application of the surplus was made without objection on the part of plaintiff, held, that he could not recover such surplus in an action against the sheriff: Brumbaugh v. Zollinger, 59-384.

Where, in an action for divorce, the wife asked alimony, and a certain amount was granted and made a special lien on land otherwise involved in the suit, which land was afterwards sold to satisfy the decree, held, that the husband could not afterwards contest the sale on the ground that the property was his homestead. The homestead right should have been set up before the decree: Hemenway v. Wood, 53-21.

3169. What constitutes. 1994. The homestead must embrace the house used as a home by the owner thereof, and if he has two or more houses thus used by him at different times and places, he may select which he will retain as his homestead. [R., § 2282; C., '51, § 1250.]

Occupancy: The exemption of the homestead is based upon its actual occupancy as such, and is not dependent upon the marking out and platting: Yost v. Devault, 9-60.

Such marking and platting alone do not give property the character of a homestead; use by the family as a home is essential: Cole v. Gill, 14-527.

Assent of the wife to the action of the husband in fixing the homestead is not essential. If he adopts it as his home, the fact of absence of his wife will not make it any the less his homestead: Williams v. Sweetland, 10-51.

The homestead character does not attach to property until it is actually occupied and used by the family as a home. The mere intention to occupy, though subsequently carried out, does not make the premises a homestead until there is actual residence: Charles v. Lamberson, 1-135; Christy v. Dyer, 14-438; Elston v. Robinson, 23-208; Givans v. Dewey, 47-414.

But where a portion of the furniture was placed in a house which was undergoing repairs, and the family moved to the neighborhood expecting to occupy it, but on account of repairs not being completed did not actually sleep and eat in the building, held, that it became invested with the homestead character: Neal v. Coe, 35-407.

Property acquired as a homestead in exchange for another homestead will remain exempt for a reasonable time for the purpose of effecting the removal of the family from the old homestead, although the new one is not yet actually occupied: Cowgell v. Warrington, 66-666.

If under the same roof with the homestead there shall be a floor or floors, room or rooms, which are not used for the purpose of a homestead, they are no more exempt than if under another roof; and if a portion of the building shall come within the definition of a homestead, and a portion not, then the one portion may be exempt and the other not. The use of other portions of the building cannot make that portion liable which would otherwise be exempt: Rhodes v. McCormick, 4-368.

So where the upper story or stories of a building in a city are used by the owner as a home and the first story is rented for store purposes, the portion rented as store-rooms may be sold under execution, while the portion used as a home will be exempt: Ibid; Moyfield v. Maasden, 59-517.

Where the owner of a lot and building thereon used the first and fourth floors and the cellar for business purposes, the value of such portion of the premises being greatly in excess of the value of the shop which he would be entitled to hold exempt in connection with the homestead under § 3172, and occupied the second and third stories for a residence, held, that the portions occupied for business purposes might be sold under execution: Johnson v. Moser, 66-536.

In such case, held, that the purchaser of the portion of the premises including that part of the cellar not used as the homestead could not have an action of partition to determine the respective rights of himself and the owner of the homestead: Johnson v. Moser, 72-523.

After a portion of a building has thus been sold and the owner remains in occupancy of the other portion as a homestead, the owners of the two portions are not tenants in common but are adjoining tenants possessing separate and distinct interests: McCormick v. Bishop, 28-233.

Where a two-story frame building, with cellar, was originally erected for a dwelling-house and occupied exclusively by the owner, who used the first floor for business purposes and the cellar jointly in connection with his business and residence, held, that the whole building was exempt: Wright v. Ditzler, 54-620.

In such case the exemption of the portion used for business is allowed on the same principle as where a shop situated within the requisite distance of the dwelling of the person occupying it is exempt as a part of the homestead: Smith v. Quiggans, 65-637.

In such case held, also, that the fact that the use of the lower story for business purposes passed to another person than the owner, the stock being taken possession of to be sold out by such other person, would not defeat the homestead exemption in such lower story, the intention of the owner being to abandon its use for business purposes and occupy it as a part of the residence: Ibid.

The building and the lot on which it is situated may be partly a homestead and partly subject to execution, depending on the purpose for which the respective parts are used: Arnold v. Gotshall, 71-572.

Abandonment: An actual removal from the homestead with no intention to return will forfeit the homestead right, even though no new homestead be acquired; but where the removal is temporary and with intention to return, unless others have been misled thereby to their prejudice, it will not work a forfeiture of the homestead right. Facts discussed, held to indicate an intention to return: Fyffe v. Beers, 18-4.

An averment that the party has abandoned the homestead and is a non-resident, and a resident of another state, is sufficient to make out a prima facie case of abandonment; such fact would not be conclusive if there were an intention of returning, but such intention should be set up in the answer and need not be negated in the petition: Orman v. Orman, 26-361.

However, the premises do not lose the homestead character by being left for a merely temporary purpose: Davis v. Kelley, 14-523.

In such case they will remain exempt even though in the absence of the owner they are rented to a tenant: Robb v. McBride, 28-386.

A removal from the homestead for a temporary purpose will not amount to abandonment where no prejudice has resulted therefrom: Morris v. Sargent, 18-90.

In a particular case, held, that the fact that the wife left the homestead with the husband for a temporary purpose, with the intention of returning and occupying, did not constitute an abandonment by her: Bradshaw v. Hurst, 67-745.

In such case, held, also, that the intention to return must have existed and would be presumed to continue until a contrary intent was shown: Ibid.

The length of time of the absence is not conclusive as to abandonment, but it is an important fact in determining the intention to return, where there are no other acts or circumstances indicating such intention: Dunton v. Woodbury, 24-74.

Stronger proof of abandonment is required, where the lien set up is claimed to have attached during actual occupancy, than where it arises when the party claiming the premises was not in actual possession: Ibid.; Davis v. Kelley, 14-523.

Absence of the husband while working at his trade, and the wife while boarding their only child during his attendance upon school, the homestead farm being in the meantime leased with the reservation of two rooms for storing household goods, there being an intention to return, held not to constitute an abandonment of the homestead: Shirland v. Union Nat. Bank, 65-96.

The fact that the head of the family is absent from home does not deprive the property occupied by the family during his absence of the character of a homestead: Griffin v. Shelley, 55-513.

The homestead exemption being for the benefit of the family, so long as the family desires to retain the homestead as such, and does actually occupy it, it remains exempt, although the head of the family may have gone to another state and acquired property and a residence there with the intention of subsequently removing his family: Savings Bank v. Kennedy, 58-454.

The removal of the husband, even with intent to abandon the property, does not affect the homestead right so long as the wife, having the right to occupy, remains in such occupancy: Lunt v. Neeley, 67-97.

A subsequent abandonment will not render valid a conveyance by the husband or wife alone: Ibid.; Bruner v. Bateman, 66-488.

A conveyance by the husband to the wife does not destroy its character as a homestead nor change the time to which the exemption dates: Green v. Farrar, 53-426.

Conveyance of the homestead standing in the husband's name by the husband and wife to a third party in trust, to be reconveyed to the wife, is not an abandonment or fraudulent conveyance rendering the homestead subject to debts contracted subsequent to its acquisition and before such transfer: Huginin v. Dewey, 20-368.

Where the husband, being the owner of the fee, conveyed the homestead to a third party who afterwards reconveyed it to the wife, the occupancy remaining unchanged, held, that such conveyance amounted to an abandonment, it not appearing that the conveyance was for the purpose of vesting the title in the wife and without intention of abandoning the homestead right: Jones v. Currier, 65-533.

Where the family did not cease to occupy the homestead, but another party took possession of a portion thereof under a transfer which was invalid, held, that the facts did not constitute an abandonment: Stinson v. Richardson, 44-373.

Where a wife, holding the title to a homestead under a voluntary conveyance from her husband, which is void for fraud as to creditors, dies, and the husband and children afterwards abandon the homestead, it becomes liable to the claims of such creditors: Gardner v. Baker, 25-343.

Where the owner leaves the premises and acquires a new home it will be presumed that he intended to abandon the old homestead: Davis v. Kelley, 14-523.

An actual removal from the homestead, with no intention to return, will amount to a forfeiture of the homestead right as against purchasers and creditors, even when a new homestead has not been gained: Newman v. Franklin, 69-244.

While the length of a person's absence may not be conclusive proof of his intention to abandon his homestead, yet where such absence is continued for some years, and there is no circumstance or act which indicates his intention to return and occupy the homestead, in such case the length of his absence may become a controlling circumstance: Ibid.

Absence from the homestead for about three years without any manifest intention to return, with repeated offers to sell or trade the property and frequent expressions of a purpose not to return to it, one of these being made at the time of the incurring of liability, held sufficient to constitute an abandonment as to the party to whom such liability was incurred: Dunton v. Woodbury, 24-74.

Where it appeared that a party owning and occupying a farm as a homestead moved to town to practice law, with the intention of pursuing his profession permanently if he was able to make a living by it, held, that the intention was such as to constitute an abandonment of the homestead: Kimball v. Wilson, 59-638.

Where the owner, though absent from the premises for seven years, had during that time retained possession of a portion of the house for the storage of household goods, held, that his absence did not constitute abandonment: Repenn v. Davis, 72-548.

Where the owner with his family removed permanently from the property, resided in different places, voted at elections where so residing, and had no definite intention of returning to the property, but intended to exchange it for another homestead when possible, held, that the facts showed an abandonment. Abandonment may be shown without proof of the acquisition of a new homestead: Cotton v. Hamil, 58-594.

The fact that the owner removed with his family to another county and repeatedly voted there, held conclusive evidence of the abandonment of the homestead: Ross v. Hellyer, 26 Fed. Rep., 413.

Tesimony of the party claiming a homestead right as to his intention to return is admissible and entitled to consideration, though not conclusive as to such intent. If the homestead is left for the purpose of obtaining support for the family an intent to abandon permanently should not be inferred. An intent to return must always exist when the removal was made for a temporary business purpose: Boot v. Brewster, 75-631.

Upon sale of the portion of the homestead upon which the house is situated, without intention to build upon and occupy the residue as a homestead, the remaining portion loses its homestead character: Givans v. Dewey, 47-414; Windle v. Brandt, 55-221.

The mere intention to place the remainder of the property in condition for occupancy at a future time will not continue the homestead character: Givans v. Dewey, 47-414.

Continuing to occupy the house as a tenant at will after its conveyance will not continue the homestead right: Windle v. Brandt, 55-221.

Evidence that at the execution of a mortgage upon property which had been the homestead, by the wife alone, she being owner of the fee, she stated that she was not living upon it and did not intend to do so, held admissible to show that at the execution of a subsequent mortgage the homestead right did not exist, there having been no occupation of the premises in the meantime to a homestead: Van Bogart v. Van Bogart, 46-359.

Where the wife, while absent from the homestead, requested a creditor of the husband to levy an attachment thereon, held, that she thereby abandoned her homestead right and could not insist upon it as against such attachment: Parsons v. Cooley, 60-268.

A lease to a mining company of the right to mine coal from the homestead does not constitute such severance of the unmined coal as to subject it to judicial sale: Sibley v. Lawrence, 46-563.

Where defendant sets up a homestead right the burden of proving abandonment is upon plaintiff: Bradshaw v. Hurst, 57-745.

But where it is claimed that surrender of possession is not voluntary and does not constitute an abandonment, the burden of proof is upon the party claiming the homestead right to establish his intention to return: Newman v. Franklin, 69-244.

A homestead when acquired will be presumed to continue until the contrary appears, the burden in this respect being on the general creditor seeking to show abandonment. In case a judgment which is sought to be enforced against a homestead on the ground of its abandonment was rendered during the time the premises were occupied as a homestead, the proof of the intent to abandon should be clearer and more satisfactory than when the judgment relied on was obtained after the homestead had ceased to be actually used as such: Boot v. Brewster, 75-631.

Where a divorce is granted to a wife, even with the custody of the children, the homestead in the husband's hands remains exempt: Woods v. Davis, 34-264.

Facts in particular cases, as bearing upon the question of abandonment, considered: Stewart v. Brand, 23-477; Leonard v. Ingraham, 58-406; Baker v. Jamison, 73-698.

3170. Embraces what. 1995. It may contain one or more lots or tracts of land, with the buildings thereon and other appurtenances, subject to the limitations contained in the next section, but must in no case embrace different lots and tracts unless they are contiguous, or unless they are habitually and in good faith used as part of the same homestead. [R., § 2283; C., '51, § 1251.]

The homestead may contain tracts not contiguous, but it must appear that they are "used as part of the same homestead." It is not sufficient for that purpose to show that the owner "used, worked and occupied them:" Reynolds v. Hull, 36-394.

3171. Extent. 1996. If within a town plat it must not exceed one-half an acre in extent, and if not within a town plat it must not embrace in the aggregate more than forty acres. But if, when thus limited, in either case its value is less than five hundred dollars, it may be enlarged till its value reaches that amount. [R., § 2284; C., '51, § 1292.]

The value is to be ascertained on the basis of the fee-simple title. The fact that a person claiming a homestead has less than the fee-simple title does not authorize the exemption of his interest in a larger amount of property: Yates v. McKibben, 66-357.

The statutory limitation as to the size of a homestead within a town plat does not apply unless the homestead is situated within the platted portion of a town, and if it is within the limits of a town, but remains unplatted, it may be of the same extent as though not within town limits: McDaniel v. Mace, 47-509.

So held where the limits of a town were so extended as to include a homestead previously existing and which was not platted: Finley v. Dietrick, 12-516.

To constitute a town plat in this sense the plat must be that of a city or incorporated village. The plat of an unincorporated village is not a town plat so as to limit the homestead right therein to one-half acre: Truax v. Pool, 46-256.

In an action attacking a sale on the ground of homestead exemption in the property sold, the party setting up the exemption must make such allegations as to the value of the property, and its not being within the limits of a city or town plat, as are necessary to show its exemption as a homestead: Helpenstein v. Cave, 3-287; Helpenstein v. Cave, 6-374.

Where the owner seeks to have exempt a tract of more than one-half acre within a town plat the burden is upon him to show that its value is less than five hundred dollars: Boot v. Brewster, 75-631.

3172. Dwelling; appurtenances. 1997. It must not embrace more than one dwelling-house, or any other buildings except as such are properly appurtenant to the homestead as such; but a shop or other building situated thereon, and really used and occupied by the owner in the prosecution of his own ordinary business, and not exceeding three hundred dollars in value, may be deemed appurtenant to such homestead. [R., § 2285; C., '51, § 1253.]

A stable kept for domestic use, in connection with the house, is appurtenant to the homestead, and exempt without regard to value: Wright v. Ditzler, 54-620.

The homestead cannot include buildings used as shops, etc., rented to tenants and a source of revenue: Kurz v. Brusck, 13-371.

A building or a portion of the building used in the prosecution of the business of keeping a saloon cannot be deemed exempt as a part of the homestead, under this section: Arnold v. Gotshall, 71-572.

A portion of the dwelling, used by the owner for business purposes, may be exempt on the same principle as a shop is exempt: Smith v. Quiggans, 65-637.

3173. Selecting; platting. 1998. The owner, or the husband or wife, may select the homestead and cause it to be marked out, platted, and recorded, as provided in the next section. A failure in this respect does not leave the homestead liable, but the officer having an execution against the property of such a defendant, may cause the homestead to be marked off, platted, and recorded, and may add the expense thence arising to the amount embraced in his execution. [R., § 2286; C., '51, § 1254.]

Failure to plat and record the homestead does not defeat the homestead right: Sargent v. Chubbuck, 19-37; Nye v. Walliker, 46-306; Linscott v. Lamart, 46-312.

Nor does the failure to plat deprive the parties of the right to claim more than forty acres by reason of the value not reaching the statutory limit: Green v. Farrar, 53-426.

To render a selection and platting of the homestead valid the plat must be recorded: White v. Rowley, 46-680.

A sale under execution of a tract of land in a lump, which includes the homestead or a part of it, without the homestead being platted by the owner or by the officer making the sale, is void: Linscott v. Lamart, 46-312; Goodrich v. Brown, 63-247; Visek v. Doolittle, 69-602.

A sale by the officer of any portion of the property which might have formed a part of the homestead without such platting is invalid: White v. Rowley, 46-680; Lowell v. Shannon, 60-713.

It is immaterial in such cases that no objection to the sale of the homestead en masse without platting is made: Owens v. Hart, 62-620.

The fact that the sale is made under a special execution is immaterial in this respect: Ibid.

Failure of the owner and the sheriff to select and designate the homestead before execution sale of property in which the homestead is included does not render the sale void. The statute is directory: Newman v. Franklin, 69-244.

It may be that in such case the sale is voidable; but where it appeared that after the sale the homestead was abandoned, held, that the trustee of the owner of the homestead could not maintain an action to set it aside: Ibid.

Where a portion of defendant's farm, upon which he resided, was sold without platting a homestead, but the dwelling and more than enough land for a homestead were left, held, that the sale might be set aside as between the parties, but was not void: Martin v. Knapp, 57-336.

Where a tract of land including the owner's homestead was sold on special execution in a lump, after first having been offered in forties, held, that there was no prejudice to the owner resulting from failure of the sheriff to mark out and plat the homestead: Brumbaugh v. Zollinger, 59-384.

Even though a homestead right may exist in the undivided interest of a tenant in common, yet, in case of an execution sale of such tenant's interest, it is not proper for the officer to set off any specific portion as a homestead: Farr v. Reilly, 58-399.

Failure to plat a homestead will be immaterial in case of a conveyance thereof, in which the husband and wife both join: Quinn v. Brown, 71-376.

3174. Description; recording. 1999. The homestead shall be marked off by fixed and visible monuments, and in giving the description thereof, the direction and distance of the starting point from some corner of the dwelling-house shall be stated. The description and plat shall then be recorded by the recorder in a book to be called the "homestead book," which shall be provided with a proper index. [R., § 2287; C., '51, § 1255.]

3175. Changes. 2000. The owner may, from time to time, change the limits of the homestead by changing the metes and bounds, as well as the record of the plat and description, or may change it entirely, but such changes shall not prejudice conveyances or liens made or created previously thereto, and no such change of the entire homestead, made without the concurrence of the husband or wife, shall affect his or her right or those of the children. [R., § 2288; C., '51, § 1256.]

A change of the homestead is permitted, and the new homestead will be exempt from execution to the extent in value of the old, as against an indebtedness contracted during the occupation of the latter, but such change cannot prejudice previous liens and conveyances: Sargent v. Chubbuck, 19-37.

The lien of a judgment which has already attached cannot be affected by a change of the homestead to property upon which it is a lien: Elston v. Robinson, 21-531.

Where the owner of two pieces of property changed his homestead from one to the other, held, that a judgment lien existing on the second would become a lien on the first; but that the homestead right in the second would be superior to such judgment lien, to the same extent that it was in the first: Furman v. Dewell, 35-170.

Where a party sells his homestead with the intention of purchasing a new one, he will be allowed a sufficient time within which to exercise that right, and, if he does not gain credit on account of the transaction, debts contracted in the interim cannot be enforced against the new homestead: Benham v. Chamberlain, 39-358.

The acts of acquiring a new homestead and moving into it cannot be simultaneous. After the purchase the owner should be allowed a reasonable time to make the change and to remove the family to his new home, and during the time intervening between the purchase of the new house and actual occupation it is exempt as a homestead: Cowgell v. Warrington, 66-666.

The new homestead is liable for debts contracted prior to the acquisition of the old one: Bills v. Mason, 42-329.

But not for those contracted subsequently and not put in judgment before the acquisition of the new one: Pearson v. Minturn, 18-36; Robb v. McBride, 28-386.

The purchase of a second homestead with the proceeds in part of the first and other means entitles the owner to hold it exempt from debts contracted subsequently to the occupancy of the old homestead, where the value of the second homestead does not exceed that of the first: Lay v. Templeton, 59-684; Benham v. Chamberlain, 39-358.

It is not necessary that the old homestead be sold for cash which is immediately invested in a new one. The sale may be on time, and if the intention is to invest the proceeds, when realized, in the new, such proceeds will be exempt: State v. Geddis, 44-537.

Where plaintiff owned a homestead and also a half-interest in other property subject to execution, and exchanged the homestead for the other half-interest in such property, held, that the half-interest originally owned remained liable to be sold under execution on a judgment for a debt existing at the time of the exchange: Thompson v. Rogers, 51-333.

Where defendant relies upon the fact that his homestead was procured with the proceeds of a previous homestead in order to establish its exemption from a claim which antedates the last homestead, the burden of proof to establish that fact is upon him: First Nat. Bank v. Baker, 57-197; Paine v. Means, 65-547; First Nat. Bank v. Thompson, 72-417.

Where a farm exceeding in extent the amount which could be held exempt, and incumbered for a portion of its value, was exchanged for another tract of land no greater in value than was capable of exemption as a homestead, and the latter was occupied as such, held, that as it was not practicable to establish what portion of the value of the original tract was exempt, no portion of the new homestead could be held exempt from a debt existing at the time of the exchange: Paine v. Means, 65-547.

The proceeds of the homestead when invested in a new homestead in another state do not remain exempt. Therefore, where a party sold his homestead in Iowa and purchased one in Missouri, and thereafter sold his homestead in Missouri and invested the proceeds in a homestead in Iowa, held, that he could not hold the last homestead in Iowa exempt from debts existing at the time of its purchase, even though they did not antedate the first homestead: Rogers v. Raison, 60-355.

Where a debtor holding a homestead exempt from execution for his debts exchanged the same for other property which he procured to be conveyed directly to his wife, held, that the property thus conveyed to the wife did not become subject to payment of his debts, and that such conveyance to the wife was not fraudulent: Jones v. Brandt, 59-332.

The change of metes and bounds which is authorized by statute has no reference to a conveyance or mortgage of a portion of the land which may be claimed as a homestead, and a change cannot be effected in that way without the consent of the husband or wife, unless it be for the acquisition of a new homestead: Goodrich v. Brown, 63-247.

Under particular facts, held, that a new homestead, practically of the same value as the old, remained exempt, but that other property, acquired and used in connection with the homestead, but not procured with the proceeds of the former homestead, was not exempt from prior indebtedness: Atkinson v. Hancock, 67-452.

Under particular facts, held, that the intention to change the homestead was not shown: Coad v. Neal, 55-528.

Money arising from the sale of the homestead is not exempt from garnishment unless the sale was in pursuance of a design to purchase another homestead: Huskins v. Hanton, 72-37.

3176. New homestead exempt. 2001. The new homestead, to the extent in value of the old, is exempt from execution in all cases where the old or former homestead would have been exempt, but in no other, nor in any greater degree. [R., § 2289; C., '51, § 1257.]

See notes to preceding section.

3177. Referees to determine exemption. 2002. When a disagreement takes place between the owner and any person adversely interested, as to whether any land or buildings are properly a part of the homestead, the sheriff shall, at the request of either party, summon nine disinterested persons having the qualification of jurors. The parties then, commencing with the owner of the homestead, shall in turn strike off one juror each and shall continue to do so until only three of the number remain. These shall then proceed as referees to examine and ascertain all the facts of the case, and shall report the same with their opinion thereon to the next term of the court from which the execution or other process may have issued. [R., § 2290; C., '51, § 1258.]

The reference here contemplated is not for the purpose of making a selection of the homestead, but to determine whether certain land claimed to be exempt really is so: White v. Rowley, 46-680, 682.

This section contemplates the case where it is conceded that the claimant of the homestead rights has rights of that character which he is entitled to set up, but there is a controversy as to where the line is to be drawn between what is exempt and what is not. It does not apply to a case where it is a question as to whether the debtor has any homestead rights at all as against the claims of the creditor: McCrackin v. Weitzel, 70-723.

3178. How selected. 2003. If either party fail to strike off jurors in the manner directed in the last section, the sheriff may strike off such jurors [R., § 2291; C., '51, § 1259.]

3179. Referring back. 2004. The court may also, in its discretion, refer the whole matter, or any part of it, back to the same referees, or to others to be selected in the same manner, or as the parties otherwise agree, giving them directions as to the report that is required of them. [R., § 2292; C., '51, § 1260.]

3180. Action of court. 2005. When the court is sufficiently possessed of the facts of the case, it shall make its decision, and may, if expedient, direct the homestead to be marked off anew, or a new plat and description to be made and recorded, and may take any further step in the premises which, in its discretion, it may deem proper for attaining the objects of this statute. It shall also award costs as nearly as may be in accordance with the practice observed in other cases. [R., § 2293; C., '51, § 1261.]

These provisions apply where the party claims more than forty acres exempt as a homestead: Green v. Farrar, 53-426.

3181. Change of circumstances. 2006. The extent or appurtenances of the homestead as thus established, are liable to be called in question in like manner, whenever a change in value or circumstances will justify such new proceeding. [R., § 2294; C., '51, § 1262.]

3182. Survivor to occupy. 2007. Upon the death of either husband or wife, the survivor may continue to possess and occupy the whole homestead until it is otherwise disposed of according to law. [R., § 2295; C., '51, § 1263.]

Upon the death of the wife the husband is entitled to possess and occupy the whole homestead regardless of whether he or the wife is owner of the fee, or whether or not there is issue of the marriage: Burns v. Keas, 21-257.

Upon the death of the husband the wife, though she marries again, may continue to occupy the whole homestead, and it is not liable to partition at the suit of the husband's heirs at law: Nicholas v. Purezell, 21-265.

A survivor electing to retain the homestead in lieu of the distributive share has only the right to use and occupancy during life, and has no interest which can survive to a second husband or wife: Stevens v. Stevens, 50-491.

The survivor thus occupying cannot change the homestead for another: Size v. Size, 24-580.

The surviving widow is entitled to control the rents and profits of the homestead while she remains in possession thereof: Floyd v. Mosier, 1-512.

A widow continuing to occupy the homestead belonging to her former husband has such right to occupancy as to entitle her to sue for injuries to her enjoyment of the property by a wrong-doer, although it may not appear but that her right to the property is subject to be divested at any time: Cain v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 54-255.

The rights of occupancy and possession on the part of the survivor do not confer any title which can be conveyed or can become subject to the lien of a judgment: Meyer v. Meyer, 23-359; Butterfield v. Wicks, 44-310; Smith v. Eaton, 50-488.

A judgment against a surviving wife, recovered after the death of the husband, does not become a lien upon the homestead in her hands: Briggs v. Briggs, 45-318; Nye v. Waliker, 46-306.

The right of the wife to occupy the homestead after the death of the husband is not a right or interest in his estate which she takes by inheritance, but a mere personal right unaccompanied by title or property interest: Mahaffy v. Mahaffy, 63-55.

Therefore, held, that a stipulation in an antenuptial contract, by which the wife accepted the provision therein made in lieu of dower and inheritance, did not constitute a relinquishment of the right to occupy and possess the homestead during her life: Ibid.

The right of the survivor may be lost by abandonment of the homestead: Butterfield v. Wicks, 44-310.

And after such abandonment it ceases to have the homestead character, and the survivor becomes a tenant in common with other heirs: Orman v. Orman, 26-361.

And partition among such heirs may then be had: Size v. Size, 24-580.

While the survivor is entitled to occupancy the heirs cannot interfere therewith, nor claim partition: Dodds v. Dodds, 26-311.

3183. Election to retain; descent; exemption. 2008. The setting off of the distributive share of the husband or wife in the real estate of the deceased, shall be such a disposal of the homestead as is contemplated in the preceding section. But the survivor may elect to retain the homestead for life in lieu of such share in the real estate of the deceased; but if there be no such survivor, the homestead descends to the issue of either husband or wife according to the rules of descent, unless otherwise directed by will, and is to be held by such issue exempt from any antecedent debts of their parents or their own. [R., § 2296; C., '51, § 1264.]

Setting off distributive share: The right of occupying the homestead or any part of it cannot be retained in addition to the distributive share: Meyer v. Meyer, 23-359 (explaining Nicholas v. Purezell, 21-265); Butterfield v. Wicks, 44-310.

The survivor has only the right to retain such occupancy in lieu of so much of the distributive share, or such share may be set off to include the homestead: Whithead v. Conklin, 48-478.

The homestead right does not become exinct until the distributive share has been finally set off: Burdick v. Kent, 55-583.

Commencement by the heirs of action for partition of the estate, and the execution of a will by the widow devising her share, and her subsequent death, held not to constitute such a setting apart of the distributive share that it would pass to devisee: Mobley v. Mobley, 73-654.

Election to hold in lieu of dower: The survivor is entitled to occupy the homestead for a reasonable time in which to make an election whether to retain such possession for life, or take a distributive share of the property: Cunningham v. Gamble, 57-46.

During occupancy for such reasonable time the survivor should be allowed to receive the income and profits therefrom. So held as to rent of coal mine on premises: Ibid.

Where the entire homestead exceeds in extent the dower interest of the wife, and she continues occupying it for ten years without making claim to have dower admeasured, she will be regarded as having elected to take the homestead for life in lieu of the distributive share: Conn v. Conn, 58-747.

The occupancy of the property as a homestead will be considered as an election to hold it as a homestead and not merely a part of it as dower: Butterfield v. Wicks, 44-310.

The acts of a surviving husband in retaining possession of the homestead after his wife's death, where its value was greater than his one-third interest in her property would have been, held an election to occupy the homestead during life in lieu of dower: Stevens v. Stevens, 50-491.

While continued occupancy of the homestead in the absence of an election to take dower will be deemed an election to hold the homestead, the widow ought not to be compelled to make such election until the question of the indebtedness of the estate is determined, and it is known whether any portion, and if so how much, of the real property must be sold for debts, so that she may know what her distributive share would amount to. And proceedings among the heirs for partition or for admeasurement of dower should be postponed until the estate, as to the debts against it and legacies, may be found upon adjudication to be fully settled: Thomas v. Thomas, 73-657.

While the surviving husband is occupying the homestead in the absence of an election to take a distributive share, it is not competent for a court to dispose of his right to occupancy by forcing upon him in lieu thereof a distributive share. His continued occupancy as a survivor will be deemed an election to occupy as survivor, even though the distributive share should appear to be the more valuable: Holbrook v. Perry, 66-286.

The occupancy of a homestead under a devise of a life estate of land including the homestead will not be considered as an election defeating the widow's right to dower: Blair v. Wilson, 57-117.

The survivor electing to retain the homestead for life relinquishes his distributive share, but such relinquishment applies only to the one-third which the survivor is entitled to, where there are children or other descendants entitled to inherit, and not to the additional portion (one-sixth) which the survivor may be entitled to as heir at law, where there are no children: Smith v. Zuckmeyer, 53-14.

If the widow is entitled as heir at law to one-half of her husband's property the other heirs cannot, in the partition of the realty, insist that she include the homestead in her share: Nicholas v. Purczell, 21-265.

Where a widow has her distributive share in the real property of her deceased husband set out to her from the homestead she can continue to hold the same free from the lien of a judgment against her, not antedating the original homestead right: Briggs v. Briggs, 45-318; Knox v. Hanlon, 48-252.

Descent: The legal title of the homestead property, upon the death of the owner thereof, descends to the heirs of such owner, subject to the right of occupancy in the surviving husband or wife: Burns v. Keas, 21-257; Cotton v. Wood, 25-43.

Minor children have no such interest in their parents' homestead during the life of the latter as the law will enforce against the contracts or acts of the parents: Collins v. Chantland, 48-241.

Devise: A wife may devise the homestead in which she holds the legal title, and the right thereto will pass to the devisee subject to the rights of the surviving husband: Stewart v. Brand, 23-477.

A mortgage given by the devisee creates a lien and may be foreclosed, subject, however, to the homestead rights of the surviving husband or wife: Ibid.

Exemption in hands of heirs: The heir holds the property free from any debts of the ancestor which could not have been enforced against it in his life-time, but it remains liable to debts contracted by the ancestor prior to its acquisition as a homestead: Moninger v. Ramsey, 48-368.

It remains exempt in the hands of the heirs even from charges and expenses of the last sickness and funeral expenses: Knox v. Hanlon, 48-252.

Occupancy of such property by the heirs as a homestead is not essential to its exemption in their hands from antecedent debts: Johnson v. Gaylord, 41-362; Baker v. Jamison, 73-698.

Where the widow abandons the homestead it descends as free from the debts of the ancestor as if there had been no widow: Johnson v. Gaylord, 41-362.

Where, at the time of the death of the wife, owning the fee of the homestead, she and the husband were absent from the homestead, but without having as yet abandoned it, held, that there could not subsequently be an abandonment by the husband of his life interest, except by a setting off of a distributive share, and that upon his death the property descended to the heirs free from his debts: Bradshaw v. Hurst, 57-745.

After the death of the husband or wife there cannot be an abandonment of the homestead by the survivor, if the title was in the deceased, except by setting off the distributive share of said survivor in the real estate of the deceased: Darrah v. Cunningham, 12-113.

Where the husband or wife surviving the owner of the fee elects to take a distributive share instead of the right of occupancy as a homestead during life, but such distributive share is not yet set off and the possession of the homestead continues in the survivor until death, the property descends or passes by devise free from the debts of such survivor: Burdick v. Kent, 52-583.

Where a conveyance of the homestead was made by the husband and wife to their son, subject to the right of either grantor to occupy during life, and the husband surviving re-ided until death with his son, who did not reside on the homestead, hel!, that the son did not acquire the property as a homestead and that it was not exempt from his debts: Reifenstahl v. Osborne, 66-567.

3184. When sold. 2009. If there is no such survivor or issue, the homestead is liable to be sold for the payment of any debts to which it might at that time be subjected if it had never been held as a homestead. [R., § 2297; C., '51, § 1265.]

3185. Devise. 2010. Subject to the rights of the surviving husband or wife, as declared by law, the homestead may be devised like other real estate of the testator. [R., § 2298; C., '51, § 1266.]

CHAPTER 9.

OF LANDLORD AND TENANT.

3186. Apportionment of rent. 2011. The executor of a tenant for life, who demises real property so held, and dies on or before the day on which the rent is payable, and a person entitled to rent dependent on the life of another, may recover the proportion of rent which had accrued at the time of the death. [R., § 2299; C., '51, § 1267.]

3187. Tenant holding over. 2012. A tenant giving notice of his intention to quit the demised premises at a time named, and afterwards holding over, and a tenant or his assignee wilfully holding over the premises after the term, and after notice to quit, shall pay to the person entitled thereto the double rental value of the premises during the time he holds over. [R., § 2300; C., '51, § 1268.]

[The word "double" is inserted in the fifth line in accordance with the list of "errata" given in the printed Code, although it does not occur in the original rolls.]

3188. Attornment to stranger. 2013. The attornment of a tenant to a stranger is void, unless made with the consent of the landlord, or pursuant to or in consequence of a judgment at law or in equity, or to a mortgagee after the mortgage has been forfeited. [R., § 2301; C., '51, § 1269.]

A tenant will not, during the existence of the tenancy, be allowed to deny the title of his landlord. He may contest the title of the lessor if he has been evicted or has yielded the possession to one having a paramount title, but not when the adverse title has been asserted by his own procurement or bad faith: Stout v. Merrill, 35-47.

A tenant cannot, before the expiration of his lease, and while in possession under it, deny his landlord's title: Bowditch v. Dubuque, 38-341.

Where a party has possession as a mere trespasser, and afterwards, by compromise, accepts a lease of the premises of the real owner, his possession is to be deemed derived from the landlord in such sense that he cannot afterwards set up title against the landlord in an action for possession of the premises: Ibid.

In an action on a note given in consideration of a lease defendant may show that there was no consideration for the reason that plaintiff had no title to the leased premises, and deendant did not and could not have obtained possession under such lease. Such defense is not precluded by the rule that defendant cannot dispute the landlord's title: Andrews v. Woodcock, 14-397.

As the mortgagee has the right of possession until foreclosure and the expiration of the right of redemption, the tenant cannot attorn to the mortgagee until the expiration of that time. "After the mortgage has been forfeited" means after the right of possession of the mortgagor has been cut off by the expiration of the period of redemption: Mills v. Hamilton, 49-105; Mills v. Heaton, 52-215.

A tenant holding under an executor, and having, as tenant, paid rents to such executor, is estopped from denying the executor's right to recover a balance due on rent: Sullivan v. Finn, 4 G. Gr., 544.

Fraud on the part of the landlord in obtaining the lease cannot be set up for the purpose of defeating the landlord's title: Simons v. Marshall, 3 G. Gr., 502.

3189. Tenant at will. 2014. Any person in the possession of real property with the assent of the owner, is presumed to be a tenant at will until the contrary is shown. [R., § 2216; C., '51, § 1208.]

Continuance in possession by the tenant with consent of the landlord after the expiration of his term of years implies, in the absence of express agreement, that the premises are held on the former terms, but want of consent on the part of the landlord prevents the application of this rule. A tenant in possession under an agreement to lease, without having paid rent, is a tenant at will, and so is one who, after his lease has expired, is permitted to continue in possession pending a decree for a further lease: Dubuque v. Miller, 11-583.

Where property is bought in at execution sale under such circumstances that there is no right of redemption, but the execution defendant is allowed to remain in possession during the year following the sale and thereafter, he becomes a tenant at will: Dobbins v. Lusch, 53-361; Huron v. Plummer, 59-120.

All the right and interest of a tenant is terminated by judicial sale without right of redemption made under a judgment which was a lien on the premises prior to the lease, and if the tenant continues in possession after the sale, and notice to him by the purchaser, he does so not as tenant under his lease, but as tenant at will of the purchaser, and is liable to account to the latter for the use of the premises after the sale: Kane v. Mink, 64-34.

A person in possession under a parol mining lease is a tenant at will and entitled to the notice to quit provided for in such cases by the next section: Bush v. Sullivan, 3 G. Gr., 344; Beatty v. Gregory, 17-109.

Where notice was served to terminate a tenancy at will, but the defendant continued in possession for some years thereafter, held, that he did not stand in any different position after such notice: Newell v. Sanford, 13-191.

A person in possession not recognizing the owner as landlord cannot be regarded as a tenant at will: Martin v. Knapp, 57-236.

Possession of premises by grantor after execution of conveyance thereof, though such conveyance be voluntary, is presumed to have been under a tenancy at will: Butler v. Nelson, 72-732.

3190. Notice to quit. 2015. Thirty days' notice in writing is necessary to be given by either party, before he can terminate a tenancy at will; but when, in any case, a rent is reserved payable at intervals of less than thirty days, the length of notice need not be greater than such interval between the days of payment. In case of tenants occupying and cultivating farms, the notice must fix the termination of the tenancy to take place on the first day of March; except in cases of field tenants or croppers, whose leases shall be held to expire when the crop is harvested; provided, that in case of a crop of corn it shall not be later than the first day of December, unless otherwise agreed upon. But where an express agreement is made, whether the same has been reduced to writing or not, the tenancy shall cease at the time agreed upon, without notice. [R., § 2218; 13 G. A., ch. 98.]

Where a tenancy is to cease at an agreed time, the tenant is not entitled to the thirty days' notice to quit: Shuver v. Klinenberg, 67-514.

Where a tenant was in possession under an agreement to occupy as long as he was in the employ of the landlord, held, that after leaving such employ he was a tenant holding over after the expiration of his lease and not a tenant at will, and therefore was only entitled to three days' notice to quit before action of forcible entry and detainer: Grosvenor v. Henry, 21-269.

A tenant holding over after the expiration of his lease does not become entitled as tenant at will to thirty days' notice to terminate the tenancy, but only to three days' notice before expulsion by action of forcible entry and detainer: Kellogg v. Groves, 53-395.

A notice to quit the house is sufficient notice to quit the land upon which the house is situated: Kuhn v. Kuhn, 70-682.

The provision that a field tenant's lease shall terminate not later than the first day of December does not establish a rule for the government of parties in making their contract, but simply fixes the time at which, in the absence of express agreement to the contrary, the lease shall terminate. The time thus fixed by statute for the termination of the lease does not become a part of the contract with reference to the time for the payment of rent where no express time is stipulated: Johnson v. Shunk, 67-115.

Where notice was served to terminate a tenancy at will, but the defendant continued in possession for some years thereafter, held, that he did not stand in any different position after such notice: Newell v. Sanford, 13-197.

A person in possession under a parol license to mine is a tenant at will and entitled to the thirty days' notice to terminate the tenancy required in other cases: Bush v. Sullivan, 3 G. Gr., 344; Beatty v. Gregory, 17-109; Harkness v. Burton, 39-101.

3191. How served. 2016. When such tenant cannot be found in the county, the notice above required may be given to any subtenant or other person in possession of the premises, or if the premises be vacant, by affixing the notice to the principal door of the building, or in some conspicuous position on the land if there be no building.

3192. Landlord's lien. 2017. A landlord shall have a lien for his rent upon all crops grown upon the demised premises, and upon any other personal property of the tenant which has been used on the premises during the term, and not exempt from execution, for the period of one year after a year's rent or the rent of a shorter period claimed falls due; but such lien shall not in any case continue more than six months after the expiration of the term. [R., § 2302; C., '51, § 1270.]

Possession: The same virtue exists under statutory liens in which the possession does not pass as under common-law liens accompanied by possession: Grant v. Whitwell, 9-152.

To what property applicable: The provisions as to landlords' liens apply to leases of town property as well as to those of agricultural land: Ibid.

Lien covers what: The phrase "used on the premises" is only intended to imply such use as is incident to the nature and purpose of the occupation of the premises and the object of the tenancy: Ibid.

Therefore, held, that the lien attached to cloths and goods of a merchant tailor, used for the purpose of selling and making up into garments for customers: Ibid.

A landlord has no lien upon property of third persons, although it may have been used by the tenant upon the premises during the term of the lease. So held as to household property belonging to the wife used in a hotel leased by her husband: Perry v. Waggoner, 68-403.

A lien attaches to all crops grown upon the demised premises, whether grown by the tenant or by others claiming under him: Houghton v. Bauer, 70-314.

Where a grocer used horses and wagons in connection with his business, but did not keep them on the premises leased for a grocery, held, that the landlord owning such premises did not have a lien upon such horses and wagons: Van Patten v. Leonard, 55-520.

The landlord does not, under the statute, acquire a lien upon notes, drafts, accounts, etc., kept upon the leased premises: Ibid.

Priority: A creditor of the tenant cannot, by levy on a growing crop, acquire priority over the landlord's lien for rent: Atkins v. Womeldorf, 53-150.

Where the rent is payable in a share of the crops the landlord has a lien for such share, and when the tenant is to gather such share and does not, the landlord has a lien, also, for the value of the labor necessary to gather the same: Serrest v. Stivers, 35-580.

While the right of property in growing crops planted on the shares is, as between landlord and tenant, in the tenant until division is made, yet a creditor of the tenant cannot seize upon the whole crop to the exclusion of the landlord's lien for rent: Atkins v. Womeldorf, 53-150.

The lien of the landlord is inferior to that of a recorded mortgage of personal property executed before such property is brought or used upon the leased premises, even when the mortgagee took his mortgage with notice that the property was to be so used: Jarchow v. Pickens, 51-381; Rand v. Barrett, 66-731.

Where, at the time of the acquisition by the tenant of title to chattel property used by him upon the leased premises, the landlord had notice of a mortgage thereon, held, that his lien for rents was inferior to the lien of the mortgage: Perry v. Waggoner, 68-403.

Where a chattel mortgage was executed by the tenant during the term of the lease, and afterwards, before the expiration of the term, a new lease was executed covering the remainder of the term and an additional period, held, that, for rent accruing during the unexpired term of the old lease, the landlord's lien remained paramount to the chattel mortgage: Rollins v. Proctor, 56-326.

A landlord cannot claim a lien prior to that of a mortgage, where he did not at the time of the execution of the mortgage have a subsisting contract by virtue of which the rent claimed was to accrue: Thorpe v. Fowler, 57-541.

The fact that the landlord consents to the substitution as lessee of a party who has been guarantor of a note of the first lessee, secured by chattel mortgage on the property prior to the landlord's lien, such mortgage appearing to be canceled, but being in fact the property of the guarantor who has paid it, will not entitle him to priority over such mortgage: Rand v. Barrett, 66-731.

A landlord cannot, by collusion with the tenant and antedating the lease, render his lien prior to that of a deed of trust previously executed upon the tenant's property: Gray v. Hudson, 5-534.

Following property into hands of purchaser: A lien exists upon crops raised by the tenant, and such crops may be followed by the landlord into the hands of the purchaser: Holden v. Cox, 60-447.

The lien of the landlord can be enforced against a purchaser from the tenant of property which in the ordinary course of business of the tenant is kept for use and not for sale, such as the team of horses used in cultivating a farm: Richardson v. Petersen, 58-724.

Where it appeared that the property of the tenant was purchased from him at a time when he was not in arrears for rent, and when he was not, in fact, upon the premises, although he had been there before, and there was no evidence of fraudulent purpose or knowledge on the part of the purchaser, who paid a consideration, held, that he took the property free from the landlord's lien: Nesbitt v. Bartlett, 14-485.

In case of a stock of goods kept for sale the lien is upon the stock en masse and not in detail, and does not attach to such goods as are sold in the ordinary course of business: Grant v. Whitwell, 9-152; Gilbert v. Greenbaum, 56-211.

When the lien attaches: The lien of the landlord is a security existing beforehand for the payment of the rent as it comes due. It attaches at the commencement of the lease or when the property is brought on the demised premises, and not simply on the commencement of an action or on maturity of the rent: Grant v. Whitwell, 9-152; Carpenter v. Gillespie, 10-592; Doane v. Garretson, 24-351; Gilbert v. Greenbaum, 56-211.

For entire term: Under the statute the landlord acquires a lien for the rent of the entire term from the commencement of the lease upon all the property of the tenant then upon the premises, and upon all other property of his afterwards brought thereon, commencing as soon as it is brought: Martin v. Stearns, 52-345.

The lien of a landlord attaches to the property of a tenant used upon the premises for the rent of the entire term: Gilbert v. Greenbaum, 56-211.

However, the landlord can only enforce his lien for rent due: Merritt v. Fisher, 19-354.

Assignment of lien: The assignment of a lease carries with it the lien of the landlord, and all the remedies for its enforcement: Haywood v. O'Brien, 52-537; Lufkin v. Preston, 52-235.

Continuance of lien: While the claim for rent is held by the landlord, and within the term of one year after it falls due, the lien is in force for his benefit: Farwell v. Grier, 38-83.

Waiver of lien: The taking of personal security merely raises the presumption of a waiver of the landlord's lien, which may be rebutted by evidence that the landlord still relied upon the lien as security and did not intend to waive it: Rollins v. Proctor, 56-326.

A landlord's lien is not waived or forfeited by taking security which is such that it cannot be enforced against third parties, it appearing that such lien was not relied upon: Pilkin v. Fletcher, 47-53.

Negotiation of a note which is given for rent does not prevent the landlord (payee), who is afterward compelled to take up the note as indorser, from enforcing his lien for the rent for which the note was given: Farwell v. Grier, 38-83. And see German Bank v. Schloth, 59-316, 323.

If the landlord proceeds under the general attachment law for rent not due, he will be 3193. Attachment. 2018. The lien may be effected by the commencement of an action within the period above prescribed for the rent alone, in which action the landlord will be entitled to a writ of attachment, upon filing with the proper clerk, or the justice, an affidavit that the action is commenced to recover rent accrued within one year previous thereto upon premises described in the affidavit. [R., § 2303; C., '51, § 1271.]

The remedy by attachment is strictly statutory and takes the place of the common-law right of distress. It only applies to real property, and cannot be used to enforce a claim for damages for failure to till, for breach of covenants, etc.: Merritt v. Fisher, 19-354.

A landlord's lien may be enforced, by attachment, against all property subject thereto, whether belonging to the tenant or others: Houghton v. Bauer, 70-314.

The word "effected," as used in this section, must be regarded as the same as "enforced:" Nickelson v. Negley, 71-546.

The landlord may bring his action for rent confined to the remedy there given, and cannot claim the benefit of his landlord's lien: Clark v. Haynes, 57-96.

Remedy for enforcement: The landlord may have an injunction to restrain the tenant from any wrongful or fraudulent acts tending to destroy his security, as by removing or disposing of property on the demised premises: Garner v. Cutting, 32-547.

But the fact that the landlord has a lien upon a stock of goods does not necessarily give him the right to have the goods held until the end of the term of the lease, or sold only in the course of retail trade. A court of equity has jurisdiction to make such order with reference to the disposal of the goods as will protect the plaintiff's right and at the same time do no injustice to other parties interested; and where such goods were the property of a partnership in the hands of a surviving partner who was proceeding to wind up the business, he himself being amply responsible, held, that an injunction to restrain the sale of the stock otherwise than in the usual course of trade should not be allowed: Milner v. Cooper, 65-190.

A landlord cannot have an injunction against the tenant to prevent disposal of property to secure rent already due, he having already a right under such circumstances to an attachment: Rotzler v. Rotzler, 46-189.

The landlord may maintain an action at law for the wrongful conversion of property on which he has a lien for the security of his rent: Scallan v. Wait, 64-705.

The landlord may set up a claim to property under his lien in a replevin suit therefor, brought by a third party against the tenant: Edwards v. Cottrell, 43-194.

Where the claim for a landlord's lien was set up in the answer to a replevin suit within six months after the termination of the lease, held, that this constituted an assertion of such lien within the proper time: Ibid.

Failure to bring an action within six months after the expiration of the term against a person who has bought from a tenant property subject to the lien will defeat any such action: Nickelson v. Negley, 71-546.

As to the remedy by attachment, see notes to the next section.

and have his lien established without asking or having an attachment: Bartlett v. Gaines, 11-95.

Where it appears that nothing was due at the time of suing out the landlord's attachment, the party whose property is seized is entitled to recover the damages sustained: Harger v. Spofford, 46-11.

A landlord's attachment against a tenant will not give the court jurisdiction against the property of an assignee of such tenant not made party to the suit: Wells v. Seguin, 14-143.

CHAPTER 10.

OF WALLS IN COMMON.

3194. On neighbor's land. 2019. In cities, towns, and other places surveyed into building lots, the plats whereof are recorded, he who is about to build contiguous to the land of his neighbor, may, if there be no wall on the line between them, build a brick or stone wall at least as high as the first story, if the whole thickness of such wall above the cellar wall does not exceed eighteen inches, exclusive of the plastering, and rest the one-half of the same on his neighbor's land; but the latter shall not be compelled to contribute to the expense of said wall. [R., § 1914.]

The provisions of this chapter give to the owner, building upon his own land, an easement upon the land of his neighbor for the purpose of resting one-half his wall thereon, and give to the other party an easement in the wall upon paying one-half its value, but until such payment by the latter the original builder is the owner of the entire wall. The party building and owning the wall cannot so deal with it as to diminish its capacity for serving as a wall in common without the consent of his neighbor upon whose land it partly rests, and he cannot, therefore, make openings in it: Sullivan v. Graffort, 35-531.

The resting of one-half of a party wall upon a vacant lot does not constitute an incumbrance thereon. In such a case it will be presumed that the wall belongs to the party building and using it, but when the owner of such lot builds thereon and makes use of the wall it will be presumed on conveyance that he has paid for his share thereof: Bertram v. Curtis, 31-46.

When the owner of a lot on which a party wall is partially rested by an adjoining owner, who makes use of such wall without making payment therefor, afterwards conveys to a grantee who has knowledge that the amount due by the grantor for such wall has not been paid, such grantee will be liable for the payment of the amount: Pew v. Buchanan, 72-637.

The right to the one-half of the wall which stands on the neighboring lot, when the owner thereof has not contributed to its erection or paid for it, is a right not personal with the builder, but passes by a conveyance of the lot on which the building is erected, and such grantee, and not the original builder, may maintain action for the value of a half interest in the wall against the owner of the adjoining lot, who subsequently makes use thereof: Thomson v. Curtis, 28-229.

A pilaster may constitute a portion of a party wall: Molony v. Dixon, 65-136.

It is probable that a party who has erected a party wall may prevent an adjoining owner from making use of such wall until payment for one-half the value is made; but if such use is permitted without payment and without objection, and the adjoining owner recognizes the rights of the proprietor of the wall by paying for the use thereof, the statute of limitation against an action to recover does not commence to run until the owner's rights are denied: Crapo v. Cameron, 61-447.

A party building a wall is not bound to build it stronger than sufficient to support another building like his own: Gilbert v. Woodruff, 40-320.

These provisions as to party walls are probably but declaratory of the common law: Zugenbuhler v. Gilliam, 3-391.

This chapter as to walls in common is taken from the civil code of Louisiana: See note to Bertram v. Curtis, 31-46.

3195. Contribution by owners. 2020. If his neighbor be willing, and does contribute one-half of the expense of building such wall, then it is a wall in common between them; and if he even refuses to contribute to the building of such wall, he shall yet retain the right of making it a wall in common, by paying to the person who built it one-half of the appraised value of said wall at the time of using it. [R., § 1915.]

3196. Openings in; presumption. 2021. No wall shall be built by any person partly on the land of another with any openings therein, and every wall being a separation between buildings, shall, as high as the upper part of the first story, be presumed to be a wall in common, if there be no titles, proof, or mark to the contrary; and if any wall is erected, which, under the provisions of this chapter, becomes, or may become at the option of another, a wall in common, such person shall not be compelled to contribute to the expense of any openings therein, but the same shall be closed at the expense of the owner of such wall. [R., § 1916.]

3197. Repairs; expense apportioned. 2022. The repairs and rebuilding of walls in common are to be made at the expense of all who have a right to the same, and in proportion to the interest of each therein; nevertheless, every co-proprietor of a wall in common may be exonerated from contributing to the repairs or building, by giving up his right in common if no building belonging to him be actually supported by the wall thus held in common. [R., § 1917.]

3198. Beams, joists and flues. 2023. Every co-proprietor may build against a wall held in common, and cause beams or joists to be placed therein, and any person building such a wall, shall, on being requested by his co-proprietor, make the necessary flues, and leave the necessary bearings for the joists or beams, at such height and distance apart, as shall be specified by his co-proprietor. [R., § 1918.]

3199. Height of wall. 2024. Every co-proprietor is at liberty to increase the height of the wall in common; but he alone is to be at the expense of raising it, and of repairing and keeping in repair that part of the wall above the part so held in common. [R., § 1919.]

3200. Rebuilding. 2025. If the wall so held in common cannot support the wall to be raised upon it, he who wishes to have it made higher, is bound to rebuild it anew entirely and at his own expense, and the additional thickness of the wall must be placed entirely on his own land. [R., § 1920.]

3201. Sharing expense. 2026. The person who did not contribute to the heightening of the wall held in common, may cause the raised part to become common by paying one-half of the appraised value of such raising, and half of the value of the grounds occupied by the additional thickness of the wall, if any ground was so occupied. [R., § 1921.]

3202. Paying for share of adjoining wall. 2027. Every proprietor joining a wall, has, in like manner, the right of making it a wall in common, in whole or in part, by repaying to the owner of the wall one-half of its value, or the one-half of the part which he wishes to hold in common, and one-half of the value of the ground on which it is built, if the person who has built the wall has laid the foundation entirely upon his own ground. [R., § 1922.]

Where the owner of one lot uses as a party wall one built upon the adjoining lot by the owner thereof, he may be required to contribute to the expense of its construction although the wall may not be upon nor adjoining the division line. The agreement that the wall should be used as a party wall may be implied by the conduct and acts of the parties: Molony v. Dixon, 65-136.

If the party building into and using the wall already erected offers to pay one-half the expense, and the parties are unable to agree, then appraisers may be appointed to ascertain the cost of one-half of the wall, and the cost thus ascertained may be tendered, and thereupon persons making the tender will be authorized to use the wall: Ibid.

But where the wall has already been used, an action may be brought by the person thus using it for one-half the cost thereof, and no appraisal is necessary: Ibid.

3203. Cavities; fixtures. 2028. Neither of the two neighbors can make any cavity within the body of the wall held by them in common; nor can either affix to it any work without the consent of the other, or without having, on his refusal, caused the necessary precautions to be used so that the new work be not an injury to the rights of the other, to be ascertained by persons skilled in building. [R., § 1923.]

3204. Disputes; delay; bonds. 2029. No dispute between neighbors, as to the amount to be paid by one or the other, by reason of any of the matters treated of in this chapter, shall delay the execution of the provisions of the same, if the party on whom the claim is made shall enter into bonds, with security, to the satisfaction of the clerk of the district court of the proper county, conditioned that he shall pay to the claimant whatever may be found to be his due on the settlement of the matter between them, either in a court of justice or elsewhere; and the said clerk of the district court is hereby required to indorse his approval on said bond when the same is approved by him, and retain the same in his custody until demanded by the opposite party. [R., § 1924.]

3205. Agreements. 2030. This chapter shall not prevent adjoining proprietors from entering into special agreement about walls on the lines between them; but no evidence of such agreement shall be competent unless it be in writing, signed by the parties thereto, or their lawfully authorized agents, and whenever such proprietor is a minor, the guardian of his estate shall have full authority to act in all matters relating to walls in common. [R., § 1925.]

A contract which is the same in fact as that within the meaning of this section: Wickersham v. Orr, 9-253.
which the law makes for the parties is not Section applied: Cravo v. Cameron, 61-447.

CHAPTER 11.

OF EASEMENTS IN REAL ESTATE.

3206. Adverse possession; use. 2031. In all suits hereafter brought, in which title to any easement in real estate shall be claimed by virtue of adverse possession of the same for the period of ten years or by prescription, the use of the same shall not be admitted as evidence that the party claimed the easement as his right, but the fact of adverse possession shall be proved by evidence distinct from and independent of the use, and that the party against whom the claim is made had express notice thereof; and these provisions shall apply to public as well as private claims.

Use of a highway, following a dedication thereof, will be presumed to be under the dedication, and therefore adverse: Gerberling v. Wunnenberg, 51-125.

It is not sufficient, in order to prove a highway by prescription, to establish use alone. The fact of adverse possession must be shown by evidence distinct from and independent of the use, and it must be shown that the person against whom the claim is made had express notice thereof: Zigefoose v. Zigefoose, 69-391; State v. Mitchell, 58-567.

The statutory provision that use shall not be admitted as evidence of adverse possession does not apply to highways existing by prescription before the statute took effect: Baldwin v. Herbst, 54-168.

An instruction as to the amount of use necessary to establish prescription and dedication, to the effect that no particular amount of travel would be necessary, and that the use would be sufficient if the highway was traveled as much or about as much as it would have been had it been laid out according to statute, and traveled as much as the circumstances of the surrounding population and their business required, held correct: Ibid.

The effect of this section is to require proof that the use of the real estate by the party claiming an easement was adverse and under a claim of right, and it provides that the use itself is not competent evidence of such fact: State v. Birmingham, 74-408.

Where a dedication of highway is claimed to have been made by the owner of the land over which it passes, proof of use may be considered competent to show an acceptance, and such proof is admissible although the use has not extended to ten years, in connection with other facts such as the conduct of the land owner tending to show dedication: Ibid.

Continued use of a stairway and hall under claim of right will not give rise to an easement: Willard v. Calhoun, 70-650.

This and the four following sections are taken from a statute in force in Massachusetts and Rhode Island: Code Com'rs' Rep.

3207. Light and air. 2032. Whoever has erected, or may erect, any house or other building near the land of another person with windows overlooking such land, shall not, by mere continuance of such windows, acquire any easement of light or air, so as to prevent the erection of any building thereon.

3208. Footway. 2033. No right of footway, except claimed in connection with a right to pass with carriages, shall be acquired by prescription or adverse use for any length of time.

3209. Use terminated by notice. 2034. When any person is in the use of a way, or other easement or privilege in the land of another, the owner of the land in such case may give notice in writing to the person claiming or using the way, easement, or privilege, of his intention to dispute any right arising from such claim or use, and such notice served and recorded as hereinafter provided shall be deemed an interruption of such use, and prevent the acquiring of any right thereto by the continuance of such use for any length of time thereafter. Such notice, signed by the owner of the land, his guardian, or agent, may be served like a notice in a civil action, on the party, his agent, or guardian, if within this state, otherwise on the tenant or occupant, if there be any; such notice, with the return thereon, shall be recorded within three months thereafter in the recorder's office of the county in which the land is situated, and a copy of such record, certified by the recorder to be a true copy of the record of said notice, and the officer's return thereon shall be evidence of the notice and service of the same.

3210. Effect of. 2035. When notice is given to prevent the acquisition of a right to a way or other easement as aforesaid, such notice shall be considered so far a disturbance of such right or claim, as to enable the party claiming to bring an action for disturbing the same in order to try such right, and if the plaintiff in such suit prevails he shall recover full costs.

3211. Not retrospective. 2036. The provisions of this chapter shall not apply to easements already acquired.

TITLE XIV.

3213. Yard. 2038. The unit or standard measure of length and surface from which all other measures of extension, whether they be lineal, superficial, or solid, shall be derived and ascertained, shall be the standard yard now in possession of the secretary of state and furnished by the government of the United States. [Same, § 2.]

3218. How divided. 2043. The avoirdupois pound, which bears to the troy pound the ratio of seven thousand to five thousand seven hundred and sixty, shall be divided into sixteen equal parts called ounces; the hundred weight shall consist of one hundred avoirdupois pounds, and two hundred weight shall constitute a ton. The troy ounce shall be equal to the twelfth part of a troy pound. [Same, § 7.]

All contracts hereafter made within this state for work to be done, or for anything to be sold or delivered by weight or measure, shall be taken and construed according to the standards of weight and measure hereby adopted as the standard of this state. [Same, § 12.]

[The words "or delivered," in the second line, are omitted erroneously in the printed Code.]

Where a written contract for masonry work stipulated that it should be done at $3.50 per perch, held, that it was not proper to show a custom that a perch should be reckoned at sixteen and one-half cubic feet: Harris v. Rutledge, 19-388.

3225. Bushel by weight. 2049; 16 G. A., chs. 52, 89; 17 G. A., ch. 42; 18 G. A., ch. 21. A bushel of the respective articles hereafter mentioned will mean the amount of weight in this section specified; that is to say:

- Of wheat, sixty pounds;
- Of shelled corn, fifty-six pounds;
- Of corn in the cob, seventy pounds;
- Of rye, fifty-six pounds;
- Of oats, thirty-two pounds;

3226. Perch; mason work. 2050. The perch of mason work or stone, is hereby declared to consist of twenty-five feet cubic measure. [R., § 1777; C., '51, § 939.]

Aside from statute the amount of a perch is quite uncertain. The express provisions of the statute as to quantity control local cus- tom. (See § 3324, and note): Harris v. Rutledge, 19-388.

3227. Hop boxes. 2051. The standard size for all boxes used in packing hops, shall be thirty-six inches long, eighteen inches wide, and twenty-three and one-fourth inches deep, inside measure. [12 G. A., ch. 195, § 4.]

[Same, § 22.]

3237. Expenses. 2061. All expenses directly incurred in furnishing the several counties, cities, and incorporated towns with standards, or in comparing those that may be in their possession, shall be borne by the respective counties, cities, and incorporated towns for which such expenses shall have been incurred. 3238. Deliver to successor. 2062. In case of the death of any such sealer of weights and measures, his representatives shall, in like manner, deliver to his successor in office such beams, weights, and measures. [Same, § 25.]

3239. Penalty. 2063. In case of refusal or neglect to deliver such standards entire and complete, the successor in office may maintain an action against the person or persons so refusing or neglecting, and recover for the use of such county, city, or incorporated town, double the value of such standards as shall not have been delivered. And in every such action in which judgment shall be rendered for the plaintiff, he shall recover double costs. [Same, § 26.]

3240. Using false weights or measures. 2064. If any person or persons shall hereafter use any weights, measures, beams, or other apparatus, for determining quantity of commodities, which shall not be conformable to the standards of this state, in any counties whose standards have been obtained by the board of supervisors, or in any city or incorporated town after such standards have been obtained therein, whereby any person shall be injured or defrauded, he shall be subject to a fine not exceeding five dollars for each offense, to be sued for and collected by the city, county or town sealer. He shall also be subject to an action at law, in which the defrauded person shall recover treble damages and costs, and every person keeping any store, grocery, or other place, for the sale or purchase of such commodities as are usually sold by weight or measure, shall once in each year, procure the weights and measures used by him to be compared with the standard herein provided; and he shall be subject to a fine of five dollars for every neglect to comply with this provision, to be recovered by any one who shall prosecute therefor. [Same, § 27.]

3241. Oath. 2065. All persons keeping public scales, before entering upon their duties as weighmasters, shall be sworn before some person having authority to administer an oath, to keep their scales correctly balanced; to make true weights; and to render a correct account to the person or persons having weighing done. Every scale shall be deemed a public one for the use of which a charge is made. [10 G. A., ch. 56, § 1.]

3242. Correct weights; certificate. 2066. [Same, § 2.]

3243. Standard for testing. 2067. Weighmasters, or keepers of public scales kept for the purpose of weighing stock or grain, shall provide and keep a standard of weight not less than fifty pounds avoirdupois for the purpose of testing such scales, and they shall at least once a month, or oftener if requested, make a satisfactory test of the correctness of such scales. [14 G. A., ch. 129, § 1.]

3244. Penalty. 2068. Any weighmaster, or keeper of public scales, violating any of the provisions of the two preceding sections, upon complaint made before any justice of the peace having jurisdiction of the offense, may, upon conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not more than twenty dollars and not less than five dollars for each offense, and shall be liable to the person or persons injured, for the full amount of damages by them sustained. [10 G. A., ch. 56, § 3; 14 G. A., ch. 129, § 2.]

OF THE INSPECTION OF SHINGLES AND LUMBER.

3245. Inspector appointed. 2069. The board of supervisors of each county, as often as may be necessary, shall appoint one inspector of lumber and shingles, who shall have the power to appoint one or more deputies to act under him. For the conduct of the deputies, the principal shall be liable. [R., § 1906.]

3246. Oath; bond. 2070. Before any inspector, or deputy inspector, shall enter upon the duties of his office, he shall take an oath or affirmation that he will faithfully and impartially execute the duties required of him by law; and each inspector shall, moreover, enter into a bond with sufficient security to be approved by the county auditor, in such sum as the board of supervisors may require, made payable to the state of Iowa, which bond shall be deposited with the treasurer of the county, conditioned for the faithful and impartial performance of his duties, as required by law. [R., § 1907.]

3247. Suit on bond. 2071. Any person who may think himself aggrieved by the incapacity, neglect, or misconduct of such inspector or his deputy, may institute a suit on a copy of the bond certified by the treasurer in his own name. And in case the persons suing shall obtain judgment, he may have execution as in other cases; but the suit shall be commenced within one year after the cause of action accrues. [R., § 1908.]

3248. Duties. 2072. The inspectors or their deputies, within their respective counties, shall inspect all lumber, boards, and shingles, on application made to them for that purpose; and when inspected, stamp on the lumber, boards, and shingles, with branding-irons made for that purpose, the name of the state and county where inspected, and the kind and quality of the articles inspected, which branding-iron shall be made and lettered as directed by the board of supervisors. And every inspector shall make, in a book for that purpose, fair and distinct entries of articles inspected by him or his deputies, with the names of the persons for whom said articles were inspected. [R., § 1909.]

§249. Penalty for counterfeiting. 2073. If any person shall counterfeit the aforesaid brands or marks, or either of them, upon conviction thereof, he shall be deemed guilty of forgery, and shall be punished accordingly. [R., § 1911.]

See § 5241.

§250. Size of shingles; qualities of lumber; branding. 2074. A lawful shingle shall be sixteen inches in length, four inches wide, and half an inch thick at the butt end; and all lumber shall be divided into four qualities, and shall be designated clear, first common, second common, and refusal. Shingles shall be clear of sap, and designated as first and second quality. The shingles to be branded on each bundle with the quality and the name of the inspector. [R., § 1912.]

CHAPTER 2.

MONEY OF ACCOUNT AND INTEREST.

§251. How expressed. 2075. The money of account of this state is the dollar, cent, mill, and all public accounts and the proceedings of all courts in relation to money, shall be kept and expressed in money of the above denomination. [R., § 1785; C., '51, § 943.]

§252. Terms of contract. 2076. The above provisions shall not in any manner affect any demand expressed in money of another denomination, but such demand, in any suit or proceeding affecting the same, shall be reduced to the above denomination. [R., § 1786; C., '51, § 944.]

§253. Rate of interest. 2077. The rate of interest shall be six cents on the hundred by the year, on:

1. Money due by express contract;
2. Money after the same becomes due;
3. Money lent;
4. Money received to the use of another, and retained beyond a reasonable time without the owner's consent, express or implied;
5. Money due on the settlement of matured accounts from the day the balance is ascertained;
6. Money due upon open accounts after six months from the date of the last item;
7. Money due, or to become due, where there is a contract to pay interest, and no rate is stipulated. In all of the cases above contemplated parties may agree in writing for the payment of interest not exceeding ten cents on the hundred by the year. [R., § 1787; C., '51, § 945.]

[The word "rate," in the first line, is erroneously printed "rule" in the Code.]

When recoverable: Interest is chargeable upon all debts, unless exempted therefrom by contract. When money is paid for the use of another, imposing an obligation upon the party who receives the benefit of the payment to reimburse the party paying, interest is recoverable from the date of the payment: Goodnow v. Litchfield, 63-275; Goodnow v. Wells, 67-654.

When the payment exceeds the interest, calculate interest on the principal up to the date of payment, add this interest to the principal and then deduct the payment. If the payment falls short of the interest due, calculate the interest on the principal up to the time when the payments will exceed the interest due on the principal debt, and then deduct the payment, so as to avoid taking interest upon interest: Huner v. Doolittle, 3 G. Gr., 76.

To recover interest on an account it should be averred in the declaration and specified in the bill of particulars: David v. Conard, 1 G. Gr., 336.

As to whether a debt due from a resident of a loyal state to a resident of a state in secession continued to draw interest while payment was rendered impossible by reason of the war, the court were equally divided: Griffith v. Lovell, 26-226.

An attorney who receives money for his client, and neither puts it upon deposit nor keeps it ready for demand, but uses it as his own, will be chargeable with interest thereon: Mansfield v. Wilkerson, 26-482.

Where money was paid into court to await its order, and there detained because of the erroneous order of the court, held, that the party finally found entitled thereto could not recover interest for the time of detention, it not appearing that the opposite party had not acted in good faith: Van Gordon v. Ormsby, 60-510.

Where it was agreed by the mortgagee that the mortgaged premises should be reconveyed to him in satisfaction of the mortgage, and by fraud of the mortgagee's agent, and without wrong on the part of the mortgagee, such reconveyance was made to the agent instead of to the mortgagee, held, that although the reconveyance was void and the mortgage still in force, yet the mortgagee could not recover interest subsequent to the date that the reconveyance was made: Hart v. Ensign, 61-724.

In an action against a railway company for double damages for stock killed, it is error to allow interest in addition to the damages allowed: Brentner v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 58-625.

A debtor under a deed of trust was found to have assented to certain settlements made during the existence of the trust deed, by which settlements he allowed compound interest at short rests, and also certain attorneys' fees, for the purpose of preventing a sale of the trust property at inopportune times and at a sacrifice. Held, that the debtor was not concluded by the settlements so made, but that he should be charged with simple interest compounded only according to the legal rule at each payment exceeding the interest then due: Fockler v. Beach, 32-187.

As the consideration of a note, illegal interest, unlike usury, cannot be urged against an innocent assignee before maturity: Burrows v. Cook, 17-436.

Where damages result from breach of a contract of bailment, the value of property lost becomes an indebtedness from the day of the loss, and interest is recoverable thereon: Note v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 27-22.

This is so where the amount of damages is capable of exact computation, as in the case of destruction of grain of a certain grade and quality: Arthur v. Chicago, R. I. & P. L. Co., 61-648.

Where notes had been given for the purchase price of personal property and had passed out of the possession of the vendor, held, that the rate of interest to be allowed on a sum recovered for breach of warranty in such sale was that borne by the notes: Pitsinowsky v. Beardsley, 37-9.

Interest is a common and legitimate element of damage, and, in the absence of proof to the contrary, it will be presumed that the jury took it into consideration in computing the damages resulting from false representations in the sale of real estate as to its location and quality, when the fact of such false representations is set up by defendant as a counterclaim in the foreclosure of a purchase-money mortgage: McNally v. Shobe, 22-49.

In an action for unliquidated damages, interest should not be allowed eo nomine and assessed as a part of the damages, but may be considered as an element of damage under the rule which permits its allowance in order to arrive at that which will be a just and lawful compensation for the injury sustained: Richmond v. Dubuque & S. C. R. Co., 33-422, 502.

While the jury in assessing damages in an action for injury to property caused by negligence of a railway company may include interest in their verdict, it is error in the court to render judgment for an amount additional to the verdict for the purpose of including interest: Garrett v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 36-121.

Interest upon interest: Where the interest upon a note is made payable annually, each instalment of interest will draw interest at six per cent. from the time it is payable: Mann v. Cross, 9-327; Preston v. Walker, 26-205; Burrows v. Stryker, 47-477; White v. Savery, 50-515.

If the interest is not made payable annually or at a specified time it will not draw interest even from the time of the maturity of the principal: Aspinwall v. Blake, 25-319.

The parties may, by contract, stipulate that interest which is made payable annually, quarterly, or otherwise, shall bear interest at the rate of ten per cent. from the time it is due: Ragan v. Day, 46-239.

A contract providing for interest at the rate of ten per cent., payable semi-annually, and that the semi-annual instalments of interest shall draw interest at the rate of ten per cent. after they become due, is not usurious: Hawley v. Howell, 60-79.

Interest upon annual instalments of interest may be collected under the decisions of this state, and it matters not that the contract itself was made under the laws of a state where interest on instalments of interest was not allowed or collectible: Burrows v. Stryker, 47-477.

Rate: A note providing for interest at ten per cent. per annum from date draws interest at that rate after as well as before maturity: Hand v. Armstrong, 18-324; Lucas v. Pickel, 20-490.

Where it was provided in a contract that a sum of money advanced and invested in behalf of one party by the other should be repaid within one year with interest thereon, held, that upon a subsequent waiver of the provisions of the contract requiring repayment to be made within a year, the sum of money advanced continued to draw interest at the same rate until repaid: Warren v. Ewing, 34-168.

Where a party holding a bond for a deed accepted, in conditional payment of the purchase money provided for therein, obligations of third parties which were not paid, and afterwards brought suit against the other party to the bond to recover the amount thus remaining unpaid, held, that he might thus recover the rate of interest stipulated in the bond: Huse v. McDaniel, 33-406.

Where a note stipulated that if interest was not paid annually the same should become a part of the principal and bear the same rate of interest, and the mortgage contained the condition that if default should be made in the payment of the sums of money specified therein or any part thereof, principal or interest, then the whole amount of the indebtedness should become due, held, that payment of annual interest was not required, and that the whole amount of the indebtedness did not become due on failure to pay such interest annually: Wood v. Whisler, 67-676.

In an action on a bond to indemnify an officer for a levy of an execution upon property claimed by a third person, the measure of liability is the value of the interest of claimant in the property at the time the damages are paid, and the judgment should therefore bear the rate of interest borne by notes secured by mortgages upon the chattels sold: Rand v. Barrett, 36-731.

Under a contract not in writing to pay ten per cent. interest, the plaintiff may set up and recover upon a contract to pay six per cent. interest: Brockway v. Haller, 57-368.

When commences to run: When money is paid for the use of another, imposing an obligation upon the party who receives the benefit of the payment to reimburse the party paying, interest from the date of the payment is recoverable: Goodnow v. Litchfield, 63-275; Goodnow v. Wells, 67-654.

When county warrants or orders are drawn with words of limitation as to payment, interest is allowed thereon from date; but if payable out of a particular fund not otherwise appropriated, interest will not commence to run until after such fund shall be exhausted: Brown v. Johnson County, 1 G. Gr., 486.

A note providing for "ten per cent. interest if not paid when due" draws interest from date if not paid at maturity: Parvin v. Hoopes, Mor., 294.

The custom of a creditor, known and acquiesced in by the debtor, to charge interest on accounts after the end of the year, may be shown as evidence of an agreement to pay interest: Veiths v. Hagge, 8-163, 182.

The custom of banks that interest shall be charged on balances due the bank from the dates of monthly settlements will be upheld where known to the debtor, and such computation will not be objectionable on the ground of allowing compound interest, even though the interest on the previous balance is carried into the next month's account: Isett v. Oglevie, 9-313.

While it may be that the presentation of an account showing a balance due to which the person charged makes no objection will raise a presumption of its liquidation, and that interest thereon will be chargeable afterwards, yet continuous dealings represented in one account cannot be divided into separate accounts, which will be presumed liquidated simply by presenting bills of items covering parts of the transaction so that interest will run on the balance of such separate bills: Raymond v. Williams, 40-117.

For labor performed: In an action for money due on contract or for labor performed the amount should draw interest from the filing of the petition: Swails v. Cissna, 61-693.

3254. On judgments and decrees. 2078. Interest shall be allowed on all moneys due on judgments and decrees of any competent court or tribunal, at the rate of six cents on the hundred by the year, unless a different rate is fixed by the contract on which the judgment or decree is rendered; in which case the judgment or decree shall draw interest at the rate expressed in the contract, not exceeding ten cents on the hundred by the year, which rate must be expressed in the judgment or decree. [R., § 1789; C., '51, § 946.]

It is necessary that the rate of interest be "expressed in the contract" in order to authorize a judgment bearing a greater rate of interest than six per cent.; therefore, held, that, although, as it seems, coupons made in Iowa but payable in New York, in which no rate of interest is specified, would draw interest from maturity at seven per cent. (the rate in the latter state), yet a judgment in Iowa upon such coupons could only draw interest at the rate of six per cent.: Rogers v. Lee Co., 1 Dillon, 529.

Judgment on a contract stipulating for the payment of interest will draw interest at the same rate as that stipulated in the contract: Wilson v. King, Mor., 106.

But so far as the judgment covers interest only, in the absence of any agreement in the contract that interest shall draw interest, the judgment will draw interest only at six per cent.: Burkhart v. Sappington, 1 G. Gr., 66.

Ten per cent. should not be allowed upon a judgment where the contract specifies no rate: Easley v. Redpath, 9-300.

Where a member of a partnership which had previously been dissolved paid a portion of a judgment against the partnership which the other partner, by the terms of the dissolution, was bound to pay, and then sought to recover from such other partner the amount so paid, held, that the rate of interest to be allowed was not the rate drawn by the judgment paid, but merely the legal rate, there being no evidence of an agreement to pay any particular rate: Myers v. Smith, 15-181.

Unless a different rate of interest is expressed in the judgment or the decree, but six per cent. can be collected thereon, although the contract on which the judgment is rendered bears ten per cent. If the failure to express the higher rate of interest in the judgment is owing to mistake or oversight of the clerk, the judgment may be corrected in that respect by timely and proper proceedings. But after the amount of judgment with six per cent. interest thereon has been paid, the judgment cannot be enforced for an additional amount against the property upon which it was a lien: Rice v. Huibert, 67-724.

Prima facie the rate of interest upon a foreign judgment is governed by the law of this state. If it is claimed that the rate of interest is different in the state in which the judgment is rendered that fact must be averred and proved: Crafts v. Clark, 38-237.

It is incompetent for the court to allow a higher rate than six per cent., even as damages on a money demand, unless the parties otherwise agree in writing: Vennum v. Gregory, 21-826.

3255. Illegal rate prohibited. 2079. No person shall, directly or indirectly, receive in money, goods, or things in action, or in any other manner, any greater sum of value for the loan of money, or upon contract founded upon any bargain, sale, or loan of real or personal property than is in this chapter prescribed. [R., § 1790.]

In contracts of sale: This section applies not only to contracts for loans, but also to any contract of purchase or sale of property where an unlawful rate of interest is provided for: Callanan v. Shaw, 24-411.

But a party may lawfully sell on time for a larger sum than his cash price, with lawful interest thereon to the time of payment, would amount to: therefore, held, that a sale of sheep for a sum to be paid at a future day, wherein it was agreed to pay annually two pounds of wool per sheep until time of payment (the value of the wool being greater than legal interest on the sum to be paid), was not usurious, in the absence of any showing that there was any intention to evade the usury law: First Nat. Bank v. Owen, 23-185; Gilmore v. Ferguson, 28-220.

Penal: The law of usury is in its nature penal, and is therefore to be strictly construed: Dickerman v. Day, 31-444.

Intent: Where there is no evidence of an intent or agreement to contract for usurious interest, a jury would not be justified in finding usury: Jones v. Berryhill, 25-289.

Sale of commercial paper: Statutes against usury are aimed against the receiving or contracting to receive a greater rate of interest than authorized upon a loan or forbearance of money, and do not apply to the sale of a note or any other vendible commodity which may, in good faith, be sold or transferred for any price fixed by agreement of the parties. Where the contract is neither a loan nor a contract for extension of time on a note already due, but a sale of commercial paper without any corrupt or unlawful intent, it cannot be held usurious simply because the paper is an accommodation note: Dickerman v. Day, 31-444.

Purchase and repurchase of realty: Where land was purchased by A. without any previous agreement to hold it for B., and afterwards A. agreed to sell it to B. at an agreed time for an amount which was more than the purchase price with the legal rate of interest, held, that such a contract of sale would not amount to usury: Casady v. Scallen, 15-93.

Contract to reconvey: Where an absolute conveyance was made as security and the grantee executed an agreement to reconvey on payment of the debt at maturity, held, that an indorsement on the contract by which the grantee agreed to receive payment at thirty-seven and one-half per cent. on the face of the bond from its date to time of payment, without any other evidence or explanation, though both parties were witnesses, would not raise

Where the jury are directed to allow interest, without any instruction as to the amount, it will be presumed that they understand that interest is to be allowed at six per cent.: Davis v. Walter, 70-465.

Affidavits of jurors are receivable to show whether or not the jury included interest in their verdict: Swails v. Cisna, 61-693.

the presumption of usury: Brush v. Peterson, 54-213.

A bona fide purchaser of a note or bond may take it at any rate of discount without violating the statute of usury, but if the note is made to be negotiated, and the intention is to arrange the transaction so as to place the subsequent transferee who has knowledge in the possession of an innocent holder, and thus avoid the statute of usury, the payee giving no consideration and being a mere go-between, the contract will be deemed usurious if the amount of the discount is greater than ten per cent., and is taken for the purpose of usury: Nichols v. Lucas, 10-257.

Under particular facts, held, that a deed absolute in form was intended as a mortgage and included usurious interest: Johnson v. Smith, 59-549.

Evidence in an action in which usury was set up held not sufficient to sustain the specific findings of the jury: First Nat. Bank v. Elliott, 54-419.

Exchange: The charging of exchange in addition to the legal interest in discounting foreign bills of exchange is not usury unless resorted to for the purpose of covering up a usurious transaction, but it is otherwise as to domestic bills: Burrows v. Cook, 17-406.

Additional loan: Where a party, in order to raise an additional loan of money, agreed that if the person who already held his note and mortgage for a certain sum would sell it and then take another loan under a mortgage for a similar amount, the bearer would repay to him whatever discount he was compelled to suffer in selling the first note and mortgage, held, that such a transaction was not usurious: Comstock v. Wilder, 61-274.

Usurious balance: A note given in payment of a balance due on a usurious note is itself usurious: National Bank v. Eyre, 52-114; Callanan v. Shaw, 24-441; Garth v. Cooper, 12-364.

Extension of time: Where the maker of a note drawing ten per cent. interest after maturity desired an extension of time, which was granted for a definite period upon the execution of a note, in addition to the ten per cent. embraced in the original note, as consideration for the extension of time, it was held that the note given in extension was usurious: Ferrier v. Scott's Adm'rs, 17-578.

The extension of time of a loan is a loan within the meaning of the usury laws, and a new note given by the surety to obtain an extension of time on the original undertaking would be usurious: Kendig v. Linn, 47-62.

An agreement, after the maturity of the note, to pay more than a legal rate of interest for forbearance does not, alone, affect the note, but such contract itself is usurious, and anything paid thereon will be applied as a general payment on the note: Mallett v. Stone, 17-64.

Partial revival: Where a usurious indebtedness has been paid in full and discharged, notes subsequently given in partial revival of such indebtedness will not be usurious: Hoopes v. Ferguson, 57-39.

Note including usurious interest: Facts in a particular case held sufficient to show that the maker of a note bearing ten per cent. interest executed and delivered the same in consideration of a loan of a less amount of money, and that the transaction was therefore usurious: Goodhue v. Teetshorn, 65-403.

The fact that notes are dated and bear interest from a time preceding the receipt of the money thereon by the mortgagor will not be sufficient to show usury, it appearing that the date of the notes corresponds to the time of negotiating and making the loan, and it not appearing what was the cause of the delay in paying the money nor that there was any corrupt agreement: Waterman v. Baldwin, 68-255.

Renewed promise: Where a note is given for money advanced, to be used in the repurchase of property, which has been sold under a mortgage covering usurious interest, and the property has been bought in by the mortgagee, the note is subject to the defense of usury: Switz v. Platts, 15-298.

Where the plaintiffs purchased a usurious note, and subsequently the defendant, who was the maker, promised plaintiffs to pay the same, held, that such promise did not estop the maker from setting up the defense of usury in an action on a promise to pay the note, plaintiffs having parted with nothing on the strength of the promise: Allison v. Barrett, 16-278.

Transfer from old to new firm: Where there was a change in the membership of a firm and a settlement made of plaintiff's account, which was transferred to the new set of books, and paid by the new to the old firm, it was held that this did not affect the question of usury between the parties prior to the change: Burrows v. Cook, 17-436.

Money borrowed to pay usury: If A. executes a security to B., for the purpose of raising money to pay C. a usurious debt, B. will not be affected by the question of usury. Nor would the case be altered by an agreement between A., B. and C., that in case the paper is not sold, B. shall retain it as evidence or that amount of indebtedness to C.: Ibid.

It money be borrowed to pay off a usurious debt, the lender, even if with notice, is not affected with usury in the original debt: Wendlebone v. Parks, 18-546; Mason v. Searles, 56-532; Cottrill v. Southwick, 71-50.

Where the promisor in a usurious contract makes it the consideration of a new contract with a third party, not party to the original contract or to the usury paid or reserved, if the new contract is not a contrivance to evade the statutes against usury, it will not be illegal or usurious: Call v. Palmer, 116 U. S., 98.

Where the maker of a usurious note, which was secured by a deed of trust, borrowed money of a third person to pay the same, and, instead of executing new securities for the money so borrowed, caused the note to be transferred by the payee to the lender as evidence and security of the new debt, held, that the note was not tainted with usury in the hands of the second holder: Ibid.

Attorneys' fees: A stipulation for reasonable attorneys' fees, to be taxed up as a part of the costs in case of suit, does not constitute usury: Nelson v. Everett, 29-184; Weatherby v. Smith, 30-131.

Commissions to agent: The act of an agent for a loan in exacting a commission for himself beyond the legal rate of interest, without authority or consent of his principal, will not render the loan usurious: Gokey v. Knapp, 44-32; Brigham v. Myers, 51-397.

But a party making a loan to another in person cannot, under the name of commission, exact more than a legal rate of interest: Fond v. Waterloo Agl. Works, 50-596.

Under the facts in a particular case, held, that a note in suit did not appear to be given for usurious interest, but for advances and commissions to maker's agent, and was not therefore usurious: Wyllis v. Ault, 46-46.

Where a person loans money for another party, retaining a sum in addition to legal interest for his own services, the transaction is not usurious. But where a person contracts with the debtor to pay interest coming due on such loan, and takes notes in excess of the amount of interest so paid and legal interest thereon, the transaction is usurious, and the additional amount cannot be considered as commission: White v. Lucas, 46-319.

The payment of the lender's traveling expenses in going to view the property offered as security will not constitute usury: Smith v. Wolf, 53-555.

The fact that the agent of the lender divides the commission received by him in excess of the legal interest with the agents of the borrower will not constitute usury: Dickey v. Brown, 56-426.

Where the plaintiff negotiated the loan in person, and under the guise of commission exacted more than the legal rate of interest, held, that he was chargeable with usury: Fond v. Waterloo Agl. Works, 50-596.

Facts in a particular case considered, and held not to show usury in connection with the payment of commission to a loan agency: Hawley v. Howell, 60-79.

Usury by agent; principal's knowledge: When an agent who is authorized by his principal to lend money for lawful interest exacts more than the legal rate without the authority or knowledge of his principal, the loan is not thereby rendered usurious. It is immaterial in such a case whether the agent discloses his authority or not: Call v. Palmer, 116 U. S., 98.

Where the agent is the husband of the principal, although knowledge on the part of the wife would perhaps be assumed on slighter evidence than in other cases, yet the same rule is applicable, and knowledge on her part will not be presumed without evidence: Brigham v. Myers, 51-397.

The facts in a particular case held not sufficient to show that the party with whom the usurious transaction was had was the agent of the party whose money was loaned: Weiser v. McKay, 51-417.

Where a note for borrowed money is given to an agent without knowledge of the agency, but supposing the agent to be the lender, it will be usurious if it includes illegal interest, although it might not be usurious between the borrower and the principal if the principal had been disclosed: Erickson v. Bell, 53-627.

Gold premium: A note and mortgage given for a loan of gold coin, in which a greater per cent. premium was allowed for gold than its market value, held, under the circumstances, to have been a cloak for usury: Austin v. Walker, 45-527.

Agreement to pay more than debt: A transaction in a particular case by which one party redeemed certain property from sale and gave title bond to the wife of the original owner, held to be in the nature of a loan, and that the amount mentioned in the title bond being greater than the amount paid in redemption with the legal interest, the transaction was usurious: Wormley v. Hamburg, 46-144.

Penalty for non-payment: A note providing for an illegal rate of interest from and after the maturity of the indebtedness is not usurious: Wight v. Shuck, Mor., 425; Shuck v. Wight, 1 G. Gr., 128; Gower v. Carter, 3-244; Wilson v. Dean, 10-432; Conrad v. Gibson, 29-120.

But in such cases the court will not allow a recovery, either by way of penalty or liquidated damages, for more than the legal rate of interest for failure to pay when due: Gower v. Carter, 3-244; Vennum v. Gregory, 21-326.

A provision in a note that, if not paid when due, the principal shall draw ten per cent. interest from date, will not constitute usury unless it be shown that interest is included in the face of the note. But if interest is so included, the parties will not be allowed, by thus liquidating the damages for the mere non-payment of money, to evade the usury law: Fisher v. Anderson, 25-28.

As to interest on premium in building association, see notes to § 1786.

As to interest on interest, see notes to § 3253.

Purging usury: Before petitioner in a court of equity can obtain relief upon a contract including usury he must aver and show a willingness to abandon the usurious part of the contract: Phelps v. Pierson, 1 G. Gr., 121.

If by consent of both parties to a usurious contract the unlawful interest already paid is refunded with the agreement that thereafter lawful interest only shall be charged, the contract is thereby purged of usury: Phillips v. Columbus City Building Ass'n, 53-719.

The word contract, as used in this section, refers to the entire transaction in which usurious interest has been reserved. The substitution of one contract for another, or the substitution of a new note for an old one, will not purge the usury: Smith v. Coopers, 9-376; Campbell v. McHarg, 9-354.

However it may be covered by changes and substitutions, if usury be found to exist in the contract, directly or indirectly, its taint continues and affects all the parts through which it runs. The substitution of one contract for another, or the taking of a new note for an old one, will not purge it: Garth v. Cooper, 12-364.

If it satisfactorily appears that the parties at the time of making the second note intended to purge the contract of its usurious taint, and to so reform and correct it that no part of the original illegal consideration entered into the new note, such new note will not be affected by the previous usury; but if it is designed merely to cover up the usury the taint attaches to it: Ibid.

Consent of debtor: A contract may be purged of usury only by making substantially a new contract with the consent of the debtor. The indorsement of usurious interest on the note as a payment, without the assent of the debtor, will not have that effect: National Bank v. Eyre, 52-114.

Usurious payments: Usurious interest voluntarily paid cannot be recovered back: Nichols v. Skeel, 12-300; Quinn v. Boynton, 40-304.

Where there is no contract for an illegal rate of interest the mere receiving of such interest will not render the contract itself usurious, but the receiving of the usurious interest is itself unlawful, and the amount so received will be presumed to be applied to the payment of the debt and legal interest thereon: Saxton v. Murdock, 36-516.

Whether, after the lapse of two years from the payment of usurious interest, an action can be maintained to recover it back, or an application thereof to the extinguishment of the principal debt can be enforced, quære: National Bank v. Eyre, 52-114.

If money is paid on a usurious indebtedness it shall be applied on the discharge of what the debtor was owing legally, and not that which (so to speak) he was owing illegally. Therefore, where it appears in a usurious transaction there has been a renewal of notes, in which interest was included, and also at the time separate notes were given for usurious interest, all the payments will be applied to the extinguishment of the legal indebtedness: Smith v. Coopers, 9-376.

Usury once paid cannot be recovered back. If two notes are given in separate transactions, both usurious, and one is paid, the unlawful interest thus paid cannot be set up in an action on the note remaining unpaid: Phillips v. Gephart, 53-396.

A note given in payment of a balance due on a usurious note is itself usurious, for the debtor has the right to have all the payments made on the original note in discharge of usurious interest applied upon the principal: National Bank v. Eyre, 52-114; Callanan v. Shaw, 24-441; Garth v. Cooper, 12-364.

Where deposits were made from time to time by a debtor with his creditor, such creditor being a bank which held his notes, and from time to time balances were struck and new notes were given, usurious interest being included in the computation, held, that the deposits must be regarded, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, as having been applied pro rata upon interest and principal, notwithstanding the entry upon the books of the bank showing application of such payments to the extinguishment of the interest: Kinser v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 58-723.

Usurious interest paid on a note afterwards put in judgment cannot subsequently be applied as payment on other notes. In the absence of collusion or attempt to cover usury, a judgment is conclusive between parties and privies: Philips v. Gephart, 53-396.

Where usurious indebtedness has been paid in full and discharged, notes subsequently given in partial revival of such indebtedness will not be usurious: Hoopes v. Ferguson, 57-39.

If, after payment of the valid portion of the indebtedness, a note is given, which includes usurious interest, such note does not represent any legal indebtedness. If the other notes were given for the purchase price of real property, the purchaser will be entitled to a conveyance of the property without payment of the note given solely for usurious interest: Knight v. Judd, 34-483.

Conflict of laws: Where a contract is made in one state to be performed in another, the interest will be computed according to the law of the place of performance, but the parties may stipulate that interest shall be calculated according to the laws of the place where the contract is made: Butlers v. Olds, 11-1.

In such cases the parties may adopt the rule of either state as to interest; and where the note was executed in one state, to be performed in another, and the maker resided in still another state, and the property pledged as security was there situated, held, that the law of that state might be adopted as to interest, provided such provision was not resorted to merely as a means of evading the usury law: Arnold v. Potter, 23-194.

While the courts of this state will not enforce the penal statutes of another state, yet where a contract made with reference to the laws of another state is usurious there, the forfeiture provided by such laws will be enforced: Ibid.

A note executed and dated in Missouri, but delivered and the consideration thereof received in Iowa, is an Iowa contract and subject to the Iowa law of usury: Hart v. Wills, 52-56.

Where a resident of Iowa negotiated a loan in Massachusetts from a resident thereof, executing a promissory note dated in Iowa and payable in New York, securing the same by a trust deed on real estate in Iowa to a trustee there resident, held, that if the parties in good faith, without intending to evade the usury laws, stipulated for the rate of interest allowable in Iowa, although greater than the legal rate in Massachusetts or New York, the contract should be enforced: Arnold v. Potter, 22-194.

In such case the form of the transaction is immaterial, the cardinal inquiry being, did the parties resort to it as the means of disguising usury in violation of the laws of the state where the contract was made or to be executed: Ibid.

Effect on contract: A contract reserving usurious interest is not void: Higuard v. Ailee, 1 G. Gr., 44; Shack v. Wight, 1 G. Gr., 128.

3256. Usury; penalty. 2080. If it shall be ascertained in any suit brought on any contract, that a rate of interest has been contracted for greater than is authorized by this chapter, either directly or indirectly, in money or property, the same shall work a forfeiture of ten cents on the hundred by the year upon the amount of such contract, to the school fund of the county in which the suit is brought, and the plaintiff shall have judgment for the principal sum without either interest or cost. The court in which said suit is prosecuted, shall render judgment for the amount of interest forfeited as aforesaid against the defendant, in favor of the state of Iowa for the use of the school fund of said county, whether the said suit is contested or not; and in no case where unlawful interest is contracted for, shall the plaintiff have judgment for more than the principal sum, whether the unlawful interest be incorporated with the principal or not. [R., § 1791.]

Who may set up usury: The defense of usury is personal to the debtor, and cannot be interposed by one who is not a party nor privy to the usurious contract: Drake v. Lowry, 14-125; Sternburg v. Callanan, 14-251; Cornichuel v. Bodjsh, 32-418; Miller v. Clarke, 37-325.

An agent with whom money is deposited by his principal, to be loaned on terms constituting usury, cannot set up usury by way of defense in an action by his principal for the balance in his hands: Sternburg v. Callanan, 14-251.

The defense of usury cannot be set up by one who has converted a note and collected the full amount, when sued by the true owner for the amount so collected: Allison v. King, 25-56.

The grantee of land mortgaged to secure a usurious debt cannot interpose the defense of usury in an action to foreclose: Green v. Turner, 38-112; Greither v. Alexander, 15-470; Hollingsworth v. Swickard, 10-385; Frost v. Shaw, 10-491; Perry v. Kearns, 13-174; Burlington Mut. Loan Ass'n v. Heider, 55-424.

The grantee of mortgaged land who assumes the payment of the mortgage cannot set up the defense of usury: Sullivan Savings Institution v. Copeland, 71-67.

A judgment creditor of an insolvent cannot set up usury in behalf of his debtor in a proceeding to which he is not a party: Cornichuel v. Bodjsh, 32-418.

A junior mortgagee, in an action to redeem from the judgment in a foreclosure proceeding to which he was not made a party, and in which usury was not pleaded, cannot set up the defense of usury and compel the holder of the judgment to accept less than the amount of his lien: Powell v. Hunt, 11-430.

In an action on a copartnership note, either partner, without the consent of the other, may set up usury, and so may a partner who has undertaken to pay the firm debts, in a suit brought against him alone after dissolution. If usury is set up by either partner the penalty should be enforced against both: Archinists' Bank v. Krum, 15-19.

A renewal of a partnership note by one of the partners will not deprive him of the right to set up usury as to such note: Ibid.

Whether the usurer is liable to any one but his immediate assignee, discussed but not decided: Brown v. Walco, 15-414.

In an action to foreclose a mortgage, a subsequent purchaser of the premises cannot plead usury, but he may show payment of the debt, and hold the mortgagee liable for neglect in collecting rents: Huston v. Stringham, 21-36.

In an action to foreclose a mortgage upon the homestead, given by the husband and wife to secure a note of the husband, the plea of usury may be set up by the wife: Lyon v. Welsh, 20-578.

Where R., having mortgaged certain premises, conveyed the same to O., who agreed to pay the mortgage debt, held, that O. could not set up usury in an action to foreclose, where personal judgment against R. was expressly waived by the mortgagee. The fact that O. had an action pending against R. for the purpose of setting aside the mortgage as fraudulent, held not to alter the case: National L. Ins. Co. v. Oimsted, 52-354.

A surety may avail himself of the defense of usury to the same extent that the principal can, and so may a guarantor, guarantors being deemed sureties: Conger v. Babbett, 67-13; Kenwig v. Linn, 47-62.

But the surety may pay the usurious debt when it becomes due, and need not wait until suit is brought, so as to set up usury; and, in an action by him to recover from the principal the amount so paid, the principal cannot plead usury: Culver v. Wuborn, 48-6.

However, a surety who has paid a portion of the original usurious debt, and given his own note for the balance, cannot as against his own note interpose the plea of usury: Ibid.

Where the surety takes up the note of his principal and gives his own note it must be regarded as payment or purchase and not as a renewal, and the surety cannot in such case interpose the plea of usury to such a new note: Ibid.

Action by national bank: Although no penalty can be enforced against a national bank for taking usury except as provided by the national banking act, and that perhaps only in a federal court, yet, in an action by such bank in a state court, the defendant may deny the validity of the claim by showing that it is for usurious interest: National Bank v. Ely, 52-114.

Usury may not only be relied upon as a defense, but may in proper circumstances be made a ground of affirmative relief, and in such case the party is not required to tender the principal sum and legal interest. (Overruling Phelps v. Pierson, 1 G. Gr., 121): Morrison v. Miller, 46-84.

Neither the rights of the defendant nor the duty of the court to enter up judgment in favor of the school fund should depend upon the form of the proceeding: Ibid.

As affecting third parties: Usury may be pleaded against a bona fide holder for value of a negotiable instrument as well as against the payee: Bacon v. Lee, 4-492.

But illegal interest as a consideration, unlike usury, cannot be urged against an innocent transferee before maturity: Burrows v. Cook, 17-136.

A bona fide purchaser of a note or bond may take it at any rate of discount without violating the statute of usury, but if the note is made to be negotiated, and the intention is to arrange the transaction so as to place the subsequent transferee who has knowledge in the position of an innocent holder, and thus avoid the statute of usury, the payee giving no consideration and being a mere go-between, the contract will be deemed usurious if the amount of discount is greater than ten per cent, and is taken for the purpose of usury: Nichols v. Levens, 15-362.

The payee of a promissory note, who has acquired the right to sue the maker thereof, may dispose of it at any rate of discount from its face, and the purchaser will have the right to enforce its full amount against the maker without any defense on the ground of usury: Duckerman v. Day, 31-444.

No defense of usury can be set up against the purchaser of an accommodation note taken at a greater amount of discount than legal interest, unless such purchaser have knowledge of the character of the paper: Ibid.

Where a creditor is enforcing collection of collaterals pledged to him for the security of a usurious debt, the debtor may enjoin him from transferring such collaterals as are not necessary for the security of the legal indebtedness: Bimford v. Boardman, 44-53.

Where the assignee of a usurious note procured the same to be taken up by the maker and a new note made payable to him directly, and then transferred it to another, held, that the last assignee was limited in his right to recover to his immediate assignor, and could not recover from the assignor of the first note: Brown v. Wilcox, 15-414.

An indorsee who takes with knowledge that the note is tainted with usury is not to be protected by § 3257, which protects bona fide assignees without notice of the usury: Ibid.

Under the facts of a particular case, held, that the transferee of a note which included usurious interest had knowledge of the fact of usury, although the maker advised him that the note was all right, and that no defenses to it existed: Watson v. Hoag, 40-142.

Where the holder of a note takes it upon the representations of the maker that it is not usurious, the latter will be estopped from setting up the plea of usury against such holder: French v. Rowe, 15-363; Cattanan v. Shaw, 24-441.

But if the transaction is merely a device to evade the usury law, to which the assignee is privy, he will not be protected: Nichols v. Levins, 15-362.

How pleaded: Where usury is apparent upon the face of a bill in equity, and a decree including usury is prayed for, a demurrer to the bill will lie: Phelps v. Pierson, 1 G. Gr., 121.

Usury may be set up as a defense in an equitable action without first tendering the amount legally due. The maxim, "He who seeks equity must do equity," is not applicable in such case: Kulmer v. Butler, 11-419; Cox v. Douglas, 12-185.

The question of usury may be raised in a proceeding for the foreclosure of a chattel mortgage, which is by action of injunction transferred to the court: Hanlin v. Parsons, 33-207.

Usury cannot be shown as a defense in the foreclosure of a mortgage, when the debt itself is reduced to judgment: Kendig v. Marble, 58-539.

Where an action is dismissed before answer, there is no right, either in the behalf of the defendant nor of the school fund, to interpose a plea of usury: Tufts v. Bauserman, 46-241.

Evidence. The burden of establishing the defense of usury is upon the party setting it up: Hough v. Hamlin, 57-359.

Where the execution of a lost note is shown, and there is a conflict in the evidence as to the rate of interest stipulated therein, the burden of proving that the rate was usurious is upon the party affirming it: Richards v. Burden, 59-723.

Evidence of a usurious contract is admissible under an answer which alleges that the payee of a note received a greater rate of interest than the law allows: Kurz v. Holbrook, 13-562.

Evidence of the intemperance and financial embarrassment of the borrower and of the lender's acknowledgment thereof is not competent and relevant on the subject of usury: Woodford v. Blood, 32-600.

The indorser of a promissory note is a competent witness to prove usury in the inception of the note: Richards v. Marshman, 2 G. Gr., 217.

Usury, as other frauds, may be shown by any evidence, in other respects competent, tending to establish the real character of the transaction. The conditions, covenants and recitals of any and all instruments under which usury is hidden may be contradicted, impeached and assailed by evidence, parol or written, in order to disclose the real facts and uncover the usury: Seckel v. Norman, 71-264.

Under the provisions of Revision, § 1791, that the person contracting to pay unlawful interest should be a competent witness to prove that the contract was usurious, such witness was competent, notwithstanding the provisions of Revision, § 3982, which rendered the party incompetent to testify in a proceeding when the adverse party was the executor of a deceased person and the facts to be proved transpired before the death of such deceased person: Rinehart v. Buckingham, 34-409.

But this section of the Code omits the provision of Revision, § 1791, as to the person contracting being a competent witness to testify.

If he falls within the provisions of § 4889, relating to actions by or against executors, administrators, etc., he is not now competent: Wormley v. Hamburg, 40-22.

"In such cases," the Code commissioners say, "the party agreeing to pay the usurious interest should pay what he agreed to, rather than make an exception to the general rule:" Code Comm'rs' Rep.

Forfeiture: In computing the forfeiture, the ten per cent. interest should be reckoned on the balance of the original sums loaned remaining unpaid, in the same manner as if the interest was going to the plaintiff; and not upon the entire sum originally loaned: Smith v. Coopers, 9-376.

It should be computed up to the date of judgment and not simply to the maturity of the contract: Ficklin v. Zwart, 10-387.

Computation should be made from the time the money was borrowed, notwithstanding the fact that the form of the indebtedness has been changed to that of a note bearing a later date: Drake v. Lowry, 14-125.

In computing the penalty which is to go to the school fund, the amount due is to be calculated exactly as between the borrower and the lender, and proper indorsements of credit allowed: Sheldon v. Mickel, 40-19.

The forfeiture is not a lien upon the premises mortgaged to secure the usurious debt, but becomes a lien only from date of judgment therefor: Leuis v. Barnby, 14-88.

In an action on a copartnership debt, if usury is set up by either partner, the penalty should be enforced against both: Machinists' Bank v. Krum, 15-49.

It is not on the plea or for the benefit of the borrower that the court decrees a forfeiture; but whenever usury is brought to its knowledge: Ibid.

And when the usury is found, the penalty in favor of the school fund will be enforced although the parties agree in asking a different judgment: Burrows v. Cook, 11-436.

The judgment in favor of the school fund for the penalty should be against the surety as well as against the principal, and it seems that the surety, if compelled to pay, may have action against the principal for reimbursement of such penalty, or against his co-surety for contribution, and may be subrogated to the rights of the state with respect to the judgment and any security held by it: McIntosh v. Likens, 25-555.

The state, representing the school fund, has no absolute or vested right to the forfeiture. Its right is qualified and incidental, and accrues only when an unpaid usurious contract is brought before the court for adjudication, and the usury is in a legitimate way brought to the knowledge of the court. Where suit was brought for a balance of usurious interest, the principal and legal interest having been paid, held erroneous to render a judgment against the defendant in favor of the school fund for ten per cent. of the amount originally loaned: Easley v. Brand, 18-132.

It is not competent for parties to settle a suit in which usury appears, in such a manner as to deprive the state of a judgment on account of the usury: Reynolds v. Babcock, 60-289.

While the courts of this state will not enforce the penal statutes of another state, yet where a contract made with reference to the laws of another state is usurious there, the forfeiture provided by such laws will be enforced: Arnold v. Potter, 22-194.

Judgment: On appeal in an action in which usury was pleaded, held, that plaintiff might, in the supreme court, remit the usury and have judgment entered there for the principal, judgment being also entered there in favor of the school fund for the penalty, and the costs in the court below, and on appeal being taxed to the plaintiff: Thompson v. Purnell, 10-205.

Usurious interest paid on a note afterwards put in judgment cannot subsequently be applied as a payment on other notes. In the absence of collusion or intent to cover usury a judgment is conclusive as between parties and privies: Philips v. Gephart, 53-395.

The proceedings and adjudication with reference to the judgment in favor of the school fund may be subsequent to the rendition of judgment against the debtor in favor of the creditor. If the case is reversed for error in the judgment as between the parties and is remanded for new trial the question of liability to judgment in favor of the school fund will again arise if the issues of the case involve the question of usury: Seckel v. Norman, 71-264.

Confession of judgment: The defense of usury must be set up before judgment, and a judgment by confession cannot be attacked on the ground that usurious interest is included therein: Troxel v. Clarke, 9-201; Two-good v. Pence, 22-543; Müller v. Clarke, 37-325.

3257. Assignee. 2081. Nothing in this chapter shall be so construed as to prevent the proper assignee, in good faith and without notice, of any usurious contract, recovering against the usurer the full amount of the consideration paid by him for such contract, less the amount of the principal money, but the same may be recovered of the usurer in the proper action before any court having competent jurisdiction. [R., § 1792.]

An assignee cannot have recourse against his assignor in such cases until he has sustained loss by reason of the usurious character of the note: Cuiver v. Wilbern, 43-26.

But a confession of judgment entered into for the purpose of evading the usury laws is void as between the parties so far as the amount in excess of the sum the plaintiff may lawfully recover is concerned: Mullen v. Russell, 46-386; Ohm v. Dickerman, 50-671.

The answer of the defendant in an action on a confession of judgment alleging that the confession was a fraudulent device to evade the statute against usury, held sufficient on demurrer. It matters not at what time the confession is made so that it be a device or part of a plan for evading the statute: Kendig v. Marble, 55-386.

The existence of usury in the note, upon which a judgment by confession is rendered, does not alone authorize the conclusion that the parties caused the judgment to be entered for the purpose of concealing it or evading the statute against it: Kendig v. Marble, 58-529.

A written statement authorizing entry of judgment upon a note does not, before judgment is entered, estop the party making it from setting up the plea of usury: Lyon v. Welsh, 20-578.

Costs: Costs are not to be recovered by the party making the loan: Binford v. Boardman, 44-53.

Although there is no declaration that judgment shall be rendered against the plaintiff for costs, yet where the defendant on the issue joined as to usury is successful, the costs may be taxed to plaintiff. It was not intended to leave each party to pay his own costs in such cases: Garth v. Cooper, 12-364.

Attorney's fee: The plaintiff in an action on a usurious note should not be allowed to recover an attorney's fee provided therein: Miller v. Gardner, 49-234.

CHAPTER 3.

OF NOTES AND BILLS.

3258. Negotiable. 2082. Notes in writing, made and signed by any person, promising to pay to another person or his order or bearer, or to bearer only, any sum of money, are negotiable by indorsement or delivery in the same manner as inland bills of exchange, according to the custom of merchants. [R., § 1794; C., '51, § 947.]

A provision in a note making it negotiable and payable at a certain place does not restrict its negotiability elsewhere, nor is demand at the specified place necessary in order to charge the maker: Soharie, etc., Bank v. Bevard, 51-257.

Where a note payable to payee or order is transferred without indorsement, the trans-ferree, although he may bring action in his own name (§ 3748), is not an indorsee, but an assignee, and as such is subject to equities existing against his assignor (§ 3751): Younker v. Martin, 18-143; and see note to § 3260.

As to what the transferee after maturity takes subject to, see notes to § 3751.

3259. Action. 2083. The person to whom such sum of money is made payable, may maintain an action against the maker, and any person to whom such note is so indorsed or delivered, may maintain his action in his own name against the maker or the indorser, or both of them. [R., § 1795; C., '51, § 948.]

[As to joint action against maker and indorser, see notes to § 3755.]

3260. Assignment of non-negotiable instruments. 2084. Bonds, due bills, and all instruments in writing, by which the maker promises to pay to another, without words of negotiability, a sum of money, or by which he promises to pay a sum of money in property or labor, or to pay or deliver any property or labor, or acknowledges any money or labor or property to be due, are assignable by indorsement thereon or by other writing, and the assignee shall have a right of action in his own name, subject to any defense or counter-claim which the maker or debtor had against any assignor thereof before notice of his assignment. [R., § 1796; C., '51, § 949.]

The indorsement of a non-negotiable note is equivalent to the making of a new note, and is a direct undertaking, and not a conditional one. Demand on the original maker, and notice thereof, are not necessary in order to charge such assignor, and the holder may write an absolute guaranty or a waiver of demand and notice over the blank indorsement of the assignor and hold him thereunder: Wilson v. Ralph, 3-450; Long v. Smyser, 3-266.

Where parties on the one part in a contract, without notice of any assignment, make an agreement with the original parties on the other part for the alteration of the terms of such contract, such agreement will be binding upon the assignees of the latter parties. The want of such notice is a matter to be shown by the parties claiming to have been relieved from liability by the new contract, to be shown as a matter of defense when their liability, under the terms of the old contract, is sought to be established by such assignees: Steele v. Mills, 68-406.

The assignee of a judgment takes subject to equities against his assignor: Burtis v. Cook, 16-194; Ballinger v. Tarbell, 16-491.

The assignee of a non-negotiable note is subject to any defense or counter-claim which the maker had against the assignor before notice of the assignment: Sayre v. Wheeler, 31-112.

The assignee of negotiable paper stands in the same position as the assignee of a non-negotiable instrument and is subject to the same defenses: Franklin v. Twogood, 18-515.

And therefore such assignee is subject to any defense or set-off existing in favor of the maker against the assignor at the time of notice of assignment: Younker v. Martin, 18-143.

As to defenses available against an assignee of negotiable paper transferred after maturity, see notes to § 3751.

If, after an assignment of which the debtor has no notice, another person obtains a second assignment, and first gives notice of his right, he will be preferred to the first assignee: Merchants, etc., Bank v. Hewitt, 3-92.

An instrument of guaranty is assignable: First Nat. Bank v. Carpenter, 41-518, 521.

So is an attachment bond: Moorman v. Collier, 32-138.

So is a judgment: Burtis v. Cook, 16-194; Ballinger v. Tarbell, 16-491.

A policy of insurance, the assignment of which is expressly prohibited, is assignable after loss, the same as any other debt: Walters v. Washington Ins. Co., 1-404; Mershon v. National Ins. Co., 34-87.

Although a mining lease makes no provision for assignment, it is nevertheless assignable: Steele v. Mills, 68-406.

An assignment of a lease carries with it all the rights of the grantee, as well where the words "or assigns" are omitted after the grantee's name as where they are inserted: Frederick v. Callahan, 40-311.

In a particular case, held, that a certain contract did not import or contain a promise on the part of one of the makers to pay to the other any money or property, and was therefore not assignable: Sales v. Kier, 50-699.

A time-check, drawn in the form of an account against a railroad company in favor of a contractor, signed by a subcontractor, and indorsed, does not transfer to the indorsee any claim against the contractor: Nash v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 62-49.

A license to keep a grocery store under statute requiring such licenses, and providing that it should be issued only upon giving bond, etc., held not assignable: Lewis v. United States, Mor., 199.

The statutory provisions do not limit the assignability of claims to those specifically mentioned: Weire v. Davenport, 11-49.

3261. What negotiable. 2085. Instruments by which the maker promises to pay a sum of money in property or labor, or to pay or deliver property or labor, or acknowledges property or labor or money to be due to another, are negotiable instruments with all the incidents of negotiability, whenever it is manifest from their terms that such was the intent of the maker; but the use of the technical words "order" or "bearer" alone will not manifest such intent. [R., § 1797; C., '51, § 950.]

The use of the words "without defalcation," held sufficient to manifest the intent of the maker that the instrument should be negotiable: Council Bluffs Iron Works v. Cuppey, 41-104.

A note payable "in currency" or "in current funds" is not prima facie a negotiable instrument, even though made payable at a banking house: Rundskoff v. Barrett, 11-172; Huse v. Hamblin, 29-501; but it may be shown by parol evidence that by those words the parties meant "money," and that therefore the instrument is negotiable: Haddock v. Woods, 46-433.

The use of the words "or bearer" held not sufficient to make the instrument negotiable: Peddicord v. Whittam, 9-471; and so held also, in regard to the use of the words "or order" in a receipt for corn: Merchants', etc., Bank v. Hewitt, 3-93.

3262. Assignment prohibited. 2086; 20 G. A., ch. 183, § 1. When by the terms of an instrument its assignment is prohibited, an assignment of it shall nevertheless be valid, but the maker may avail himself of any defense or counter-claim against the assignees, which he may have against any assignor thereof before notice of the assignment thereof is given in writing to the maker of such instrument. [R., § 1798; C., '51, § 951.]

The assignment of a policy of insurance, by the terms of which an assignment thereof is expressly prohibited, would, under this section, be valid: Merchon v. National Ins. Co., 34-87.

A stipulation in an agreement to convey, that no assignment of the premises by the vendor should be valid unless indorsed on the agreement and countersigned by the vendee or his assignees, held, to be for the benefit of the vendee and not enforceable by his assignees: Wilson v. Reuter, 29-176.

This section does not render assignable a railway ticket issued to a particular person by name and expressly made non-transferable, and another person attempting to ride upon such ticket would be guilty of fraud: Way v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 64-48.

As to what causes of action are assignable, see notes to § 3730.

3263. Open account assignable. 2087; 20 G. A., ch. 183, § 2. An open account of sums of money due on contract may be assigned, and the assignee will have the right of action in his own name, but subject to the same defenses and counter-claims as the instruments mentioned in the preceding section, before notice of such assignment is given in writing by the assignee to the debtor. [R., § 1799; C., '51, § 952.]

The assignment of an open account as here contemplated must be in writing. An assignment by delivery or in parol will not be sufficient: Andrews v. Brown, 1-154; Williams v. Souther, 7-435, 448.

The mere drawing and delivery of an order by one person upon another for money due will not constitute an assignment, giving the right of action against the drawee, in the absence of any acceptance or even presentment: Poole v. Carhart, 71-37.

Save for this section, an open account is not assignable, and it was therefore wholly immaterial under the section, as it stood prior to the amendment, whether a debtor had a defense against an assignor, when he received notice of the assignment, or whether such defense arose afterwards, for the reason that the statute created no right, by reason of notice. The point of time fixed by the statute was the commencement of suit. If at that time the debtor had a defense against the assignor he might interpose it against the assignee: Wing

v. Page, 62-87; Zugg v. Turner, 8-223; Reynolds v. Martin, 51-324.

While the debtor under such statute might voluntarily pay the assignor at any time before action brought, and thus avoid liability to the assignee, he was not under obligation to do so, and the assignor could not enforce such payment: Bailey v. Union Pacific R. Co., 62-354.

The rights of parties under a mining lease, providing for monthly payments of royalty, do not constitute an open account under the statutory provisions referring to the assignment of such account: Steele v. Mills, 68-406.

Under the statute, the assignment of an open account for money due on contract passes to the assignee the legal title to the account assigned: Knadler v. Sharp, 36-232.

The assignor of an account loses all legal interest therein: Platt v. Hedge, 8-392.

As to what is an account, see notes to § 3736.

3264. Assignor liable. 2088. The assignor of any of the above instruments, not negotiable, shall be liable to the action of his assignee without notice. [R., § 1803; C., '51, § 956.]

This section does not limit the action of an assignee in such cases to his immediate assignor: Huse v. Hamblin, 29-501.

A guarantor by written instrument, as well as an assignor, is liable without notice: Henderson v. Booth, 11-212.

GUARANTY.

3265. Blank indorsement by one not party. 2089. The blank indorsement of an instrument for the payment of money, property, or labor by a person not a payee, indorsee, or assignee thereof, shall be deemed a guaranty of the performance of the contract. [R., § 1800; C., '51, § 953.]

This section and the one following do not apply to an express guaranty entered into otherwise than by the blank indorsement of a person not a party to the instrument: Peddlicord v. Whittam, 9-471.

An indorsement in full, made by one who is not payee, indorsee or assignee, makes such person an indorser within the rules of commercial paper, and not a guarantor as here contemplated: Stout v. Noteman, 30-414; and so of an indorsement not in blank and made by an indorsee: Greene v. Thompson, 33-293.

An indorsement such as is here referred to imports a consideration, and an accommodation indorser, although not bound in the absence of consideration as between the immediate parties, cannot raise the defense of want of consideration as against a good-faith purchaser for value, even when such party took with full knowledge of that fact: Jones v. Berryhill, 25-289.

The contract of guaranty contemplated in this and the following sections is different from that of suretyship: Robinson v. Reed, 46-219.

These provisions are not applicable to other forms of guaranty: Griffin v. Seymour, 15-30; Peddlicord v. Whittam, 9-471; Sabin v. Harris, 12-87.

This statutory provision is not affected by § 3258 as to notice of non-payment of negotiable paper: Sibley v. Van Horn, 13-209.

3266. Notice. 2090. To charge such guarantor, notice of non-payment by the principal must be given within a reasonable time; but the guarantor is chargeable without notice, if the holder show affirmatively that the guarantor has received no detriment from the want of notice. [R., § 1801; C., '51, § 954.]

Demand of the maker is not necessary to hold the guarantor: Marvin v. Adamson, 11-371; Knight v. Dunsmore, 12-35.

Proof of the maker's insolvency at maturity of the note and continuously afterwards is prima facie sufficient to show that the guarantor has received no detriment from want of notice: Knight v. Dunsmore, 12-35.

This section only applies to a person deemed a guarantor as contemplated in the preceding 3267. Diligence. 2091. A guarantor, as contemplated in the two preceding sections, is also liable to the action of an indorsee, assignee, or payee, if due diligence in the institution and prosecution of a suit against the maker or his representative has been used. [R., § 1802; C., '51, § 955.]

Due diligence, in the absence of peculiar facts, would require the assignee of the note to bring suit at the first regular term of court after maturity, and obtain judgment and execution thereon as soon as practicable by the

Where a person becoming guarantor by blank indorsement of an instrument to which he was not a party, afterward indorsed an extension of time on such guaranty, held, that such second indorsement did not change the nature of his liability: Picket v. Fauces, 14-460.

This section and the following applied: Rodaugh v. Pitkin, 46-544.

In the absence of such statutory provision, such an indorsement renders the indorser liable in accordance with the contract, in pursuance of which the indorsement is made, and the blank indorsement may be filled up accordingly. If that contract is one of guaranty, proof of demand and notice is not necessary, but want of demand and notice may be set up as a defense, to the extent to which such guarantor can show himself to have been injured by want of such demand and notice: Fear v. Dunlap, 1 G. Gr., 331.

Where there is testimony tending to show affirmatively that the guarantor by blank indorsement of an instrument to which he is not a party received no detriment from want of notice, that question should be left to the jury: Mt. Pleasant Branch, etc., Bank v. McLeran, 26-306.

A blank indorsement imports a consideration: Veach v. Thompson, 15-380.

A guarantor generally is liable without proof of demand and notice, or of diligence, but he may show by way of defense that he has been damaged by the want of such notice or the failure to use diligence in prosecuting the claim: Sabin v. Harris, 12-87; Griffin v. Seymour, 15-30.

The provisions of this section as to notice are not modified by § 3268: Sibley v. Van Horn, 13-209.

ordinary rules and practice of the court: Vorhies v. Ailee, 29-49.

The facts constituting due diligence must be averred: Leas v. White, 15-187.

GRACE — PROTEST.

3268. Grace; notice. 2092. Grace shall be allowed upon negotiable bills or notes payable within this state, according to the principles of the law merchant; and notice of non-acceptance or non-payment, or both, of said instruments shall be required according to the rules and principles of the commercial law. [R., § 1813.]

Where exemption from liability on a bill of exchange was asserted under a statute of another state which changed the rule of the law merchant as to days of grace, held, that the defendants must show themselves within such statute to obtain its exemption: Mt. Pleasant Branch, etc., Bank v. McLeran, 26-306.

Non-negotiable instruments are not entitled to days of grace: Peddicord v. Whittam, 9-471.

Notes payable in property are not entitled to days of grace, unless they are negotiable within the provisions of § 3261, allowing such notes to be made negotiable in terms: McCartney v. Smalley's Adm'rs, 11-85.

A note is not overdue until days of grace are passed. Therefore, held, that a transfer on the second day of grace was before maturity: Goodpaster v. Voris, 8-334.

An action on a promissory note brought before the expiration of the days of grace cannot be maintained: Seaton v. Hinneman, 50-395; Whitney v. Bird, 11-407.

A note payable in current funds is not prima facie negotiable; but evidence of custom or an understanding among the parties that by such term is meant money may be received to impart to it the attributes of negotiability. And thereby it will become subject to days of grace: Haddock v. Woods, 46-433.

The law merchant having generally been recognized by courts of this country will be considered as existing until it is shown not to prevail. The courts will take notice of the usage of allowing three days of grace, and in the absence of proof to the contrary will presume that such was the understanding of the parties: Hudson v. Matthews, Mor., 94.

3269. What entitled to. 16 G. A., ch. 81, § 1. All bills of exchange, drafts and orders payable within this state, except those drawn payable on demand, shall be entitled to grace.

A draft or bill in which no time for payment is mentioned, is payable on demand and therefore not affected by this statute, and is not entitled to grace: First Nat. Bank v. Price, 52-570.

3270. Demand. 2093. A demand at any time during the days of grace, will be sufficient for the purpose of charging the indorser. [R., § 1804; C., '51, § 957.]

3271. Holidays. 2094; 18 G. A., ch. 31. The first day of the week, called Sunday; the first day of January; the thirtieth day of May; the fourth day of July; the twenty-fifth day of December; and any day appointed or recommended by the governor of this state, or by the president of the United States, as a day of fasting or of thanksgiving, shall be regarded as holidays for all purposes relating to the presenting for payment or acceptance, and the protesting and giving notice of the dishonor of bills of exchange, bank checks, and promissory notes; and any bank or mercantile paper falling due on any of the days above named, shall be considered as falling due on the preceding day. [9 G. A., ch. 116.]

3272. Notice of protest. 2095. In case of a demand of payment of any promissory note, bill of exchange, or other commercial paper, by a notary public, and a refusal by the maker, drawer, or acceptor, as the case may be, the notary making said demand may inform the indorser or any party to be charged, if in the same town or township, by notice deposited in the nearest postoffice to the parties to be charged on the day of demand, and no other notice shall be necessary to charge said party. [R., § 213.]

Aside from this statutory provision, a notice sent by mail to a party living in the same town is not good unless it appears that he actually received it: Grunman v. Walker, 9-426.

But an agreement between parties that notice through the mail should be deemed sufficient may be shown by proving usage to that effect known to the party to whom notice is to be given: Ibid.

Where a notary after making demand, instead of notifying an indorser residing in the same place, either personally or by notice deposited in the postoffice there, returned to a neighboring town and from there mailed a notice to the indorser, held that the notice was not sufficient under this section: Falmestock v. Smith, 14-561.

This section adds another method of giving notice when the party resides in the same town: Ibid.

3273. Damages. 2096. The rate of damages to be allowed and paid upon the non-acceptance or non-payment of bills of exchange, drawn or indorsed in this state, when damage is recoverable, shall be as follows: If the bill be drawn upon a person at a place out of the United States, or in California, Oregon, Nevada, or any of the territories, five per cent. upon the principal specified in the bill, with interest on the same from the time of the protest; if drawn upon a person at any other place in the United States other than in this state, three per cent. with interest. [R., § 1812; C., '51, § 965.]

This section relates to foreign and not inland bills: First Nat. Bank v. Owen, 23-185.

CONTRACTS.

3274. Payable in property; demand. 2097. No contract for labor, or for the payment or delivery of property other than money, in which the time of performance is not fixed, can be converted into a money demand, until a demand of performance has been made and the maker refuses, or a reasonable time is allowed for performance. [R., § 1806; C., '51, § 959.]

If the time of payment is fixed, the property should be tendered, as provided in the next section, and no demand is necessary: Barker v. Brink, 4 G. Gr., 59.

Where an order is given by one person upon another for property, demand thereof must not only be made of the drawee, but also of the drawer, before suit can be brought thereon against the latter: Whipple v. Abbott, 4 G. Gr., 66.

Where the time and place of delivery are fixed in the contract, if the debtor set apart the property at the time and place stipulated, although the creditor is not there to receive, or refuses to accept, the property tendered, the title passes to him, and the debt is discharged: Games v. Manning, 2 G. Gr., 251; Hambel v. Tower, 14-530.

Where the instrument provided for the payment of a certain sum in cabinet furniture at the maker's shop, no date for the payment being specified, held, that action thereon could not be maintained without demand being shown: Frederick v. Remking, 4 G. Gr., 56.

Where a lease to a field tenant provided that the tenant should pay a portion of the crop raised as rent, but there was no stipulation as to the time when such payment should be made, held, that there could be no action for a money judgment upon failure of the tenant to deliver the portion of the crop due as rent until demand therefor had been made, even though by the terms of statute such a lease terminates upon the first day of December of the year for which the lease is made: Johnson v. Shank, 67-115.

3275. Tender. 2098. When a contract for labor, or for the payment or delivery of property other than money, does not fix a place of payment, the maker may tender the labor or property at the place where the payee resided at the time of making the contract, or at the residence of the payee at the performance of the contract, or where the assignee of the contract resides when it becomes due. [R., § 1807; C., '51, § 960.]

Where defendant notified plaintiff of his readiness to deliver the property as provided in the contract, and plaintiff refused to receive it, held, that by such refusal defendant was released from the necessity of any further tender: Williams v. Triplett, 3-518.

3276. Exception. 2099. But if the property in such case be too ponderous to be conveniently transported, or if the payee had no known place of residence within the state at the making of the contract, or if the assignee of a written contract has no known place of residence within the state at the time of performance, the maker may tender the property at the place where he resided at the time of making the contract. [R., § 1808; C., '51, § 961.]

3277. When contract assigned. 2100. When the contract is contained in a written instrument which is assigned before due, and the maker has notice thereof, he shall make the tender at the residence of the holder if he resides in the state, and no farther from the maker than did the payee at the making thereof. [R., § 1809; C., '51, § 962.]

3278. Effect of tender. 2101. A tender of the property as above provided, discharges the maker from the contract, and the property becomes vested in the payee or his assignee, and he may maintain an action thereto as in other cases. [R., § 1810; C., '51, § 963.]

3279. Perishable property. 2102. But if the property tendered be perishable, or require feeding or other care, and no person be found to receive it when tendered, the person making the tender shall preserve, feed, or otherwise take care of the same, and he has a lien on the property for his reasonable expenses and trouble in so doing. [R., § 1811; C., '51, § 964.]

3280. Holder absent from state. 2103. When the holder of an instrument for the payment of money is absent from the state when it becomes due, and when the indorsee or assignee of such an instrument has not notified the maker of such indorsement or assignment, the maker may tender payment at the last residence or place of business of the payee before the instrument became due, and if there be no person authorized to receive payment and give the proper credit therefor, the maker may deposit the amount due with the clerk of the district court in the county where the payee resided at the time it became due, paying the clerk one per cent. on the amount deposited, and the maker shall be liable for no interest from that time. [R., § 1805; C., '51, § 958.]

CHAPTER 4.

OF TENDER.

3281. When not accepted. 2104. When a tender of money or property is not accepted by the party to whom it is made, the party making it may, if he sees fit, retain in his own possession the money or property tendered; but if afterwards the party to whom the tender was made see proper to accept it and give notice thereof to the other party, and the subject of tender be not delivered to him within a reasonable time, the tender shall be of no effect. [R., § 1815; C., '51, § 966.]

What constitutes: A mere readiness or proposition to pay a certain sum does not, without more, amount to a tender: Eastman v. District T^o, 21-590.

One who pleads tender must prove a tender in full. So, where it was proposed to prove that defendant had in good faith tendered what was believed to be the value of a colt killed on its track, held, that such evidence was properly rejected: Helphrey v. Chicago & E. T. R. Co., 29-480.

Evidence of a mere offer to pay is not sufficient to establish a tender: Collins v. Jennings, 42-417.

How kept good: A tender is lost by a subsequent demand and refusal: Hambel v. Tower, 14-530.

A tender once made will not stop interest accruing thereafter unless it be shown that defendant was always ready and willing to pay: Jones v. Mullinix, 25-198.

To keep a tender good after suit brought the money must be paid into and remain in court. The statutory provision as to tender does not change the rule in that respect: Johnson v. Triggs, 4 G. Gr., 97; Freeman v. Fleming, 5-460; Mohn v. Stoner, 11-30; S. C., 14-115; Warrington v. Pollard, 21-381; Shugart v. Pattee, 37-422.

Where, however, the indebtedness is conditional and dependent, and the party is under no obligation to make payment until the performance of some act on the part of the other party, the showing of readiness and ability to perform is sufficient without the tender being kept good by the deposit of the money in court: McCuneid v. Kimbrell, 3 G. Gr., 335.

A tender of property to plaintiff in an action of replevin is not sufficient unless it is continued and the property brought into court or placed under its control and subject to its order: Hayden v. Anderson, 17-158.

A reasonable time is to be allowed defendant for bringing the money into court in order to keep his tender good; and where a tender had been properly made in an action before a justice of the peace, and on appeal the justice failed to turn over the amount in his hands to the clerk, held, that the appellant was not in fault for such failure of the justice in the absence of any showing that he did not exercise reasonable diligence in procuring an order upon the justice to send up the money: Waide v. Joy, 45-282.

Where a tender is pleaded, the party pleading it must show a continued readiness to pay, and that the money is brought into court to keep the tender good: Long v. Howard, 35-148.

Tender must be specially pleaded. Such a plea must not only aver an offer to pay, but show a continued readiness to keep good the tender made: Barler v. Brink, 5-481.

An objection that a plea of tender is not supported by payment of money into court should be raised before going to trial and not for the first time on the final hearing: Freeman v. Fleming, 5-460.

In equity: The rule that in order to entitle a party to rely upon a tender he must bring the money into court is of questionable propriety in view of the statutory provisions, even in a case at law. In an equitable proceeding such a rule is not applicable: Hayward v. Munger, 14-516.

There is not the same necessity for tender in actions in equity as at law, and a court of equity having control over the subject may so mould the decree as to costs and the conditions under which relief will be granted as to fully guard and protect the interests of all parties, although no formal tender is made before the bringing of suit: Jones v. Hartsock, 42-147.

In equitable actions a formal tender of performance by plaintiff of that which he is required to do before he is entitled to performance from defendant is not thought necessary. It is sufficient that a readiness and willingness to perform be averred: Taylor v. Ormsby, 66-109.

In an equitable action the party who offers and avers willingness to pay whatever is found due in order to redeem securities from a usurious loan may recover, although he does not make actual tender in advance: Binford v. Boardman, 44-53.

A party entitled to redeem who does not show a tender of the amount necessary, but merely expresses readiness and willingness to pay such amount, will be required to pay the costs of the action to recover possession of the land, which is defeated by the establishment of the right to redeem from the title therein set up by the plaintiff: Shoemaker v. Porter, 41-197.

In the foreclosure of an equitable interest in real estate existing under an agreement to convey, tender of deed before suit brought is not essential when the decree gives authority to execute one upon payment of the purchase money: Barnett v. Dean, 21-423.

Unliquidated damages: As to whether the provisions as to tender apply in an action for unliquidated damages, quære: Gruengerich v. Smith, 36-537.

Legal tender: Whatever is constitutionally made a legal tender for all debts by congress must be received in payment of a debt, and a party cannot, by inserting an obligation to pay in one rather than another of such legally equivalent values, compel payment in the coin or currency so named: Wornibold v. Schlichting, 16-243.

An offer to pay in bank bills and not in legal tender is not a tender, and when made in payment of a note does not entitle the one who offers the money to demand the delivery of the note to him: Jones v. Mullinix, 25-198.

Where the lease of a market stall was sold by a city at auction, with the stipulation that the payment should be made in cash, held, that the tender of city scrip was not a compliance with the contract: Dubuque v. Miller, 11-583.

Costs: A tender after suit brought, which does not include costs then accrued, is not sufficient: Freeman v. Fleming, 5-460; Warington v. Pollard, 24-281; Barnes v. Greene, 20-114; Young v. McWaid, 57-101.

In order to make a sufficient tender after action brought, the amount tendered should be sufficient to cover the sum admitted to be due and costs accrued at the time: Martin v. Whisler, 62-416.

Effect: A tender does not operate to discharge the debt: Mohn v. Stoner, 11-30.

But if kept good, tender stops interest and saves cost: Johnson v. Triggs, 4 G. Gr., 97.

Where defendant deposited with the clerk a sum sufficient for the payment of a judgment and costs entered against him, held, that it was the duty of the clerk, at the request of defendant, to so apply the money in his hands, and defendant was entitled to an injunction preventing issuance of execution on such judgment: Fisher v. Moore, 19-84.

Admits indebtedness: A tender admits plaintiff's cause of action to the amount of the tender, and plaintiff is entitled to judgment to that amount: Johnson v. Triggs, 4 G. Gr., 97; Phelps v. Kathron, 30-231; Gray v. Graham, 34-425; Sheriff v. Hull, 37-174; Frank v. Coe, 4 G. Gr., 555; Babeock v. Harris, 37-409.

Where before or at the commencement of suit defendant makes a tender of an amount he believes to be due he is bound thereby: and if a trial ensues plaintiff is entitled to recover at least the amount of the tender, but without costs: Fisher v. Moore, 19-84.

A tender may not be in the way of a compromise or settlement of a disputed claim, but for the discharge of the obligation under the contract and for the payment of the indebtedness arising thereon. Such tender is an admission of liability to the amount of the indebtedness: Rand v. Wiley, 70-110.

A tender is an admission that the amount tendered is due to the party in whose favor the tender is made, and it is error not to render judgment in favor of such party to the amount of such tender: Wright v. Howell, 35-288; Rump v. Schwartz, 56-611; Brayton v. Delaware County, 16-44.

A judgment against the party making the tender in favor of the party to whom it is made, for the amount tendered, cannot be questioned: Wilson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 68-673.

Where a tender is pleaded plaintiff is entitled to a verdict for that amount, and in a particular case, held, that a verdict by a jury which failed to award to plaintiff the amount due was cured by judgment of the court for that amount, and that the error in the verdict was therefore without prejudice: Sheriff v. Hull, 37-174.

Where a tender is pleaded as to one branch of a counter-claim, leaving undetermined the original action and another branch of the counter-claim, there is no ground for rendering judgment for defendant on such tender: Wolmerstadt v. Jacobs, 61-372.

The pleading of a tender by defendant does not admit allegations of plaintiff's petition, but only that the amount is due on a cause of action included in the suit: Griffin v. Hariman, 74-436.

3282. Offer in writing. 2105. An offer in writing to pay a particular sum of money, or to deliver a written instrument, or specific personal property, if not accepted, is equivalent to the actual tender of the money, instrument, or property, subject, however, to the condition contained in the preceding section; but if the party to whom the tender is made, desire an inspection of the instrument or property tendered, other than money, before making his determination, it shall be given him on request. [R., § 1816; C., '51, § 967.]

This statutory provision simply dispenses with the production and actual tender of the money. In other respects the rule of the common law prevails and the tender must be unconditional. If it be in full of all demands, or condition that a receipt be given, or if it be offered by way of bonus with a denial that any debt is due, or accompanied by a threat of consequences to follow upon its refusal, it cannot be regarded as sufficient: Kuhns v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 65-528.

The offer here contemplated must be in writing; otherwise it does not dispense with the necessity of producing the money: Casady v. Bossler, 11-212.

As the tender may be made in writing, a person knowing the residence and address of another may make him a tender although he is beyond the state: Crawford v. Paine, 19-172.

A party making a tender in writing, if sued, must, to keep his tender good, pay the money into court: Shugart v. Pattee, 37-422. And see notes to preceding section.

Where defendant in a cross-petition offers to pay a sum of money, it amounts to a tender, and judgment should be rendered against him for that amount: Corbin v. Woodbine, 33-297, 301.

3283. Receipt. 2106. The person making a tender may demand a receipt in writing, duly signed, for the money or article tendered, as a condition precedent to the delivery thereof. [R., § 1817; C., '51, § 968.]

3284. Objection. 2107. The person to whom a tender is made, must, at the time, make any objection which he may have to the money, instrument, or property tendered, or he will be deemed to have waived it. [R., § 1818; C., '51, § 969.]

By "objection to the money" is meant objection to the kind of money, and the phrase has no reference to the amount. Want of objection as to the amount would not preclude recovery of the amount actually due: Chicago & S. W. R. Co. v. Northwestern U. Packet Co., 38-377.

A party making no objection to the amount of the tender cannot afterwards set up that the tender was insufficient: Sheriff v. Hull, 37-174.

A tender of less than the amount due will be sufficient as a tender unless objection be made to the amount, and will relieve the party from liability for interest and costs, but will not prevent a recovery by the other party

Where a contract for the delivery of butter provided that such delivery should be made within a specified time upon demand, held, that in the absence of demand within the time specified, a written offer in accordance with this provision was sufficient, although the party making the offer had not at the time any butter on hand with which to fill the offer: Hott v. Brown, 63-319.

Where defendant notified plaintiff of his readiness to deliver the property as provided in the contract, and plaintiff refused to receive it, held, that by such refusal defendant was released from the necessity of any further tender: Williams v. Triplett, 3-518.

Where the time and place of delivery are fixed in the contract, if the debtor set apart the property at the time and place stipulated, although the creditor is not there to receive, or refuses to accept the property tendered, the title passes to him and the debt is discharged: Games v. Manning, 2 G. Gr., 251; Hambel v. Tower, 14-530.

Under the plea of tender in the contract for the delivery of property, coupled with an averment of readiness and willingness to perform, the party may introduce evidence to show that the property was set apart for the use of the promisee: Hambel v. Tower, 14-530.

for the actual amount due: Hayward v. Mungcr, 13-516; Guengerich v. Smith, 36-587.

Where the party to whom the tender is made does not object to the amount, it will be presumed that the amount tendered was that which the party making the tender offered to pay: McDaniel v. Kambrell, 3 G. Gr., 335.

The party objecting to the terms of an instrument tendered must specify what terms he requires: Gilbert v. Mosier, 11-498.

The clerk of the court is liable for money paid into court by way of tender whether it was paid in legal tender money or not. The objection to the kind of money can be raised only by the party against whom the tender is sought to be established: Billings v. Teeling, 40-607.

CHAPTER 5.

OF SURETIES.

3285. May require creditor to sue. 2108. When any person bound as surety for another, for the payment of money or the performance of any other contract in writing, apprehends that his principal is about to become insolvent, or to remove permanently from the state without discharging the contract, if a right of action has accrued on the contract, he may, by writing, require the creditor to sue upon the same, or to permit the surety to commence suit in such creditor's name and at the surety's cost. [R., § 1819; C., '51, § 970.]

The statutory provisions as to notice to the creditor to sue are in abrogation of the common law. A surety relying upon a discharge by reason of them should show that he has complied with the statute with reasonable strictness: Hill v. Sherman, 15-365; Moore v. Peterson, 64-423.

Therefore a notice given by the surety to the creditor to begin suit against the principal debtor for the amount due, or notice to permit such surety to begin suit in the name of the creditor, is not enough. The notice should require the creditor to bring suit upon the contract against the parties liable thereon (including the surety) or permit such suit to be brought: Moore v. Peterson, 64-423; Harriman v. Egbert, 36-270.

Under the above section there must be a request or notice to bring suit, but where the guarantor's attorney merely requested the creditor to send a copy of the bond guaranteed, and stated that if the creditor did not have an attorney or collector to collect the indebtedness the writer would do so, held, that this was not notice to sue as required by the statute: Davis Sewing Machine Co. v. McGinnis, 45-538, 545.

The notice by the surety must be in writing: Stevens v. Campbell, 6-538.

Failure to object to oral evidence of a notice to the creditor to sue does not waive the requirement of the statute: Davis v. Payne, 45-194.

The creditor has the right of election to sue in his own name or permit the surety to do so. A notice requiring him to sue will not release the surety if such notice is not complied with: Hill v. Sherman, 15-365.

3286. Refusal. 2109. If the creditor refuse to bring suit, or neglect so to do for ten days after the request, and does not permit the surety so to do, and furnish him with a true copy of the contract or other writing therefor, and enable him to have the use of the original when requisite in such suit, the surety shall be discharged. [R., § 1820; C., '51, § 971.]

After making the demand upon the principal in writing, the surety has nothing further to do, and, if not notified by the principal within due time of his permission to sue, he is discharged: First Nat. Bank v. Smith, 25-210.

The fact of the surety's apprehension of his principal's insolvency cannot be put in issue. The existence of the fact of insolvency or removal is not necessary to give the surety the right to make the demand upon the creditor: Ibid.

The personal right of a surety to be discharged from a note upon failure of the creditor to sue upon notice cannot be taken away by his official relation to the creditor, it not appearing that it was his official duty to institute suit, or that he had custody of the note, or was guilty of fraud or negligence in the transaction. Ibid.

A joint maker of a note who is in fact a surety may have the benefit of these provisions: Piper v. Newcomer, 25-221.

Before a right of action has accrued on the contract against the principal the provisions of these sections are not applicable: Dennison v. Soper, 33-183.

Where a principal makes a note payable at a fixed future time as collateral to a bond, and the creditor reserves his right to an immediate action on the bond, and it is expressly agreed that the remedy on the bond is not suspended by the note, the sureties can, notwithstanding the acceptance of the note, require the creditor to commence suit on the bond as provided under the above sections: Jones v. Sarchett, 61-520.

The fact that before the giving of the notice by the surety to the creditor the principal has been insolvent, and has removed from the state, will not defeat the object of the notice, it not appearing that the principal is insolvent at the time the notice is given: Graham v. Rush, 73-451.

Under these provisions a surety may, by giving proper notice, compel the creditor to sue, and § 4267 gives him the right, when he and the principal are joined in a suit, to have the judgment on his motion specify him as surety, the effect of such judgment then being to exempt the surety's property from execution until the principal's property is exhausted. But where a surety has failed to act under either of these provisions, and both principal and surety are joined in a suit, the creditor may dismiss as to the principal, and pursue the surety alone: Dorothy v. Hicks, 63-240.

The election to sue or to allow the surety to sue is a right of the creditor incident to the debt itself, and passes to an agent authorized to collect the debt. If not exercised by him on notice from the surety it is lost and the surety discharged: Thornburgh v. Madren, 33-380.

When the surety serves his notice on the creditor to sue, the creditor must see that suit is actually commenced within the time fixed by statute, otherwise the surety will be discharged. Thus where a creditor, on receipt of a notice from the surety, directed a justice to bring suit and the justice failed to do so within the ten days, held, that the creditor was chargeable with the neglect of the justice and the surety was discharged: German Am. Bank v. Denmore, 58-137.

3287. Surety may sue. 2110. When the surety commences such suit, he shall file his undertaking to pay such costs as may be adjudged against the creditor, and the suit shall be brought against all the obligors, but those joining in the request to the creditor shall make no defense to the action, but may be heard on the assessment of the damages. [R., § 1821; C., '51, § 972.]

3288. Executor; official bonds. 2111. The provisions of this chapter extend to the executor of a deceased surety and holder of the contract, but they do not extend to the official bonds of public officers, executors, or guardians. [R., § 1822; C., '51, § 973.]

CHAPTER 6.

OF PRIVATE SEALS.

3289. Abolished. 2112. The use of private seals in written contracts, except the seals of corporations, is abolished; and the addition of a private seal to an instrument in writing, shall not affect its character in any respect. [R., § 1823; C., '51, § 974.]

3290. Consideration implied. 2113. All contracts in writing, signed by the party to be bound, or his authorized agent or attorney, shall import a consideration. [R., § 1824; C., '51, § 975.]

A consideration is implied in a written contract, and none need be expressed: Peddicord v. Whittam, 9-471.

A written contract implies a consideration, and want or failure of consideration must be averred and shown by way of defense: Goodpaster v. Porter, 11-161.

Such a contract imports a consideration in the same manner that sealed instruments formerly did: Jones v. Berryhall, 25-289, 297.

So held as to a written guaranty: Sabin v. Harris, 12-87.

A covenant in writing imports a consideration: Arnold v. Kreutzer, 67-214.

It is not ground of demurrer to a petition on a written instrument that no consideration is alleged or appears on the face thereof. Such objection must be set up as a defense: Linder

v. Luke, 6-164; Towsley v. Olds, 6-526; Goodpaster v. Porter, 11-161; Henderson v. Booth, 11-212; State v. Wright, 37-522.

The consideration need not appear upon the face of the contract; it may be proved by parol, or inferred from the terms and obvious import of the agreement: Attie v. Pelan, 5-336.

Parol evidence is admissible to show a consideration other than that expressed on the face of the contract: Taylor v. Wightman, 51-411.

The consideration of a written contract may be shown by parol, and if such consideration is found in an unwritten agreement it may be proved by oral testimony: Simpson Centenary College v. Bryan, 59-293.

3291. Failure of; fraud. 2114; 22 G. A., ch. 90. The want or failure, in whole or in part, of the consideration of a written contract, may be shown as a defense total or partial, as the case may be, except to negotiable paper transferred in good faith and for a valuable consideration before maturity. Provided, that if said paper shall have been procured by fraud upon the maker thereof, no holder of such paper shall recover thereon of the maker a greater sum than he paid therefor with interest and costs. [R., § 1825; C., '51, § 976.]

While a written contract imports a consideration, it is competent to aver and prove that there was in fact no consideration: Briggs v. Downing, 48-550; Byers v. Harris, 67-685.

Although a written contract imports a consideration, it is competent to show a failure of consideration to defeat the contract, the burden of proof being upon the defendant: University of Des Moines v. Livingston, 57-307.

The phrase "value received" does not necessarily import a consideration, and evidence is competent to show that no consideration has been in fact received: Osgood v. Bringolf, 32-265.

Extrinsic evidence of a consideration to a written contract adverse to that expressed upon the face thereof is incompetent: Gelpcke v. Blake, 19-263.

A defendant relying on want of consideration in a written contract must aver and show not only that he did not receive the consideration specified therein, but also that he did not receive any other consideration: Taylor v. Wightman, 51-411.

This section relates to the remedy, and is not unconstitutional as impairing a contract when applied to an instrument made in another state, where the common-law rule as to the conclusiveness of a seal upon the question of consideration is still in force: Williams v. Haines, 27-251.

CHAPTER 7.

OF ASSIGNMENTS FOR CREDITORS.

3292. Must be general. 2115. No general assignment of property by an insolvent, or in contemplation of insolvency, for the benefit of creditors shall be valid, unless it be made for the benefit of all his creditors in proportion to the amount of their respective claims. [R., § 1826; C., '51, § 977.]

The language of the statute clearly implies a trust and contemplates the intervention of a trustee, and the transfer of property by the debtor to the creditor in payment of indebtedness is not an assignment within the terms of such statute, and is not thereby rendered invalid, although it is not for the benefit of all the creditors: Cowles v. Ricketts, 1-582.

Under the common law, in both England and America, a debtor in failing circumstances might dispose of his property in trust for the benefit of his creditors, and by such conveyance or otherwise give preference in payment to one creditor before another: Lampson v. Arnold, 19-479; Cowles v. Ricketts, 1-582.

The statute does not make general transfers of a debtor's property invalid, but relates only to general assignments, and uses the latter word in its technical sense: Lampson v. Arnold, 19-479.

The debtor may, if he acts without fraud, transfer property in payment of debts to certain creditors before making a general assignment, and such transfer will be valid even though made in contemplation of insolvency: Ibid.; Van Patten v. Burr, 52-518.

A sale of property to a creditor in payment of his debt is valid, although other creditors remain unpaid: Hutchinson v. Watkins, 17-415.

The statutory provision has no application where a debtor, without fraud, sells property to a creditor absolutely for a fixed consideration, a portion of which is the discharge of a debt due such creditor, and the balance is money paid to the debtor and to other creditors in discharge of debts due them: Johnson v. McGrew, 11-151.

An absolute sale in good faith for a valuable consideration of the entire property of an insolvent corporation will not be held to be void as a general assignment: Buell v. Buckingham, 16-284.

A debtor may in good faith secure the claims of a creditor at any time without reference to the claims of other creditors, and for that purpose may give a chattel mortgage: Fromme v. Jones, 13-474.

A trust deed not purporting to be a general assignment, made to secure a present loan of money, held not void: Whittaker v. Lindley, 14-598.

The execution of a mortgage to one or more creditors is not made void by the fact that the mortgage is executed in contemplation of insolvency and that the mortgagor immediately afterwards executes a general assignment: Lyon v. McIlvane, 24-9.

Therefore, held, that a mortgage of property in this state was not rendered invalid by the fact that a general assignment of all the debtor's property was on the same day executed in another state: Ibid.

A debtor may give all his property in payment or security to one of his creditors without violating the statutory provision, provided the transaction is free from fraud: Davis v. Gibbon, 24-257; Farwell v. Howard, 23-381.

Knowledge by the creditor who is preferred that other creditors are left unprovided for will not render the transaction void: Cowles v. Ricketts, 1-582.

A partial assignment in good faith, preferring certain creditors, is not void: Gray v. McCallister, 50-497; Cole v. Dealham, 13-551.

An insolvent debtor may lawfully make such a disposal of the property as to entitle one or more creditors to a preference over others. This he may do by mortgage, sale or conveyance, and the fact that such mortgages, sales and conveyances embrace all his property does not necessarily constitute the transaction a general assignment. And where the creditors secured by mortgages and deeds were bona fide creditors, whom the parties had contemplated securing from the time their debts were contracted, and who accepted the security offered, held, that the transaction was valid: Aulman v. Aulman, 71-124.

A debtor in failing circumstances may mortgage the whole of his property for the security of a portion of his creditors, even though the effect of the transaction is to defeat the collection of his debts: Southern White Lead Co. v. Haas, 73-399.

Where a party executes a chattel mortgage to secure creditors under the belief that the property will be more than sufficient to satisfy the claims of such creditors, even though it may appear that in this respect he was mistaken, he cannot be deemed by such chattel mortgage to have made complete disposition of his property nor to have thereby intended a general assignment: Van Patten v. Thompson, 73-103.

Where an insolvent debtor made transfers of specific portions of his property, and for the payment and security of specified creditors respectively, who accepted the provisions thus made for them, and on the following day made a general assignment, held, that such transfers were valid: Bolles v. Creighton, 73-199.

If the assignment does not cover all the insolvent's property it will not be a general assignment, even though it purports to be general: Meeker v. Sanders, 6-51.

Where several instruments are executed consecutively, each one subject to those preceding, and together constituting a disposition of all the debtor's property for the benefit of his creditors, but not in proportion to the amount of their claims, the various instruments will be considered as constituting one transaction and as therefore void under the statute: Burrows v. Lehndorff, 8-96.

So held, also, as to mortgages and a general assignment executed at the same time: Cole v. Deathman, 13-551; Van Patten v. Burr, 52-518.

So held, also, as to an assignment and a deed in fee executed on the same day: Moore v. Church, 70-208.

To justify the court in finding that a mortgage may be taken in connection with some other instrument as constituting an assignment, it should appear that the mortgagor, at the time he made the mortgage, had the intention to make an assignment: Perry v. Vezina, 63-25.

The fact that mortgages and an instrument purporting to be a general assignment were all made on the same day, acknowledged before the same officer, and delivered to the recorder by the same person, held not sufficient to show that the mortgages were a part of the assignment, it being proved by positive evidence that the mortgages were executed in the forenoon, when the party did not contemplate making the assignment, and that the purpose to do so was conceived after noon, when the parties to whom the mortgages were given had separated. To render the instruments in such cases void as constituting a general assignment not for the equal benefit of all creditors it must appear that they were all parts of the same transaction: Furwell v. Jones, 63-316.

Where chattel mortgages and assignments to secure particular creditors are followed by a general assignment, and it appears that the instruments were executed with the bona fide intention of securing such creditors, the law will not give to such acts a different character from that intended: Gage v. Parry, 69-605.

Therefore, where chattel mortgages and the assignment of books of account were executed to different creditors, and within an hour after their execution a general assignment was made, and it was shown that the general assignment was not contemplated at the time of the execution of the other instruments, but that such general assignment was executed when the debtor was advised that the recording of the prior instruments would probably cause a levying of attachment, held, that the various instruments should be deemed valid: ibid.

Where a debtor conveyed a stock of merchandise to his wife, who thereupon, and in consideration thereof, executed a chattel mortgage upon the same to secure the payment of her husband's indebtedness, in which mortgage certain creditors were preferred to others, held, that the transaction was in the nature of a general assignment and therefore void: Van Horn v. Smith, 59-142.

The question whether a conveyance by a debtor of all his property for the benefit of a portion of his creditors shall be regarded as an assignment for the benefit of creditors or a mortgage for the security of particular debts is to be determined by the intention as it may be ascertained from the circumstances of the transaction. If the conveyance is to a trustee, and the debtor intends to divest himself, not only of the title of the property, but of all control over it, for the purpose of securing the distribution of all his property among his creditors, or a portion of them, it is an assignment for the benefit of creditors, no matter what name the parties may have given it. On the other hand, if the intention of the debtor is merely to secure his debt to one or more of his creditors, and the conveyance is not intended as an absolute disposition of his property, but he reserves to himself a right therein, the conveyance will be treated as void, even though the debtor is insolvent at the time and it covers all his property, and but a portion of his debts are secured by it: Cadwell's Bank v. Crittenden, 66-237.

A chattel mortgage, though executed by an insolvent person, and covering all his property, is not necessarily an assignment. Whether it is to be construed as such or not depends upon the intent with which it is made. It is not to be considered an assignment where there is nothing to indicate that the mortgagor intended anything but the giving of security: Kohn v. Clement, 58-589.

A chattel mortgage given to one creditor to secure his claim will not operate as a general assignment, it appearing that none of the parties intended at the time that it should have such an operation, and that it does not include all of the property of the debtor: Carson v. Byers, 67-606.

The execution of a mortgage by the directors of a corporation to secure its indebtedness, although at a time when the corporation had become insolvent, held not to constitute a general assignment for the benefit of creditors so as to be void because not for the benefit of all: Garrett v. Burlington Plow Co., 70-697.

The fact that in an instrument or instruments making general disposition of all the debtor's property for the benefit of his creditors no trustee is appointed will not prevent its being an assignment, and therefore void as such, if not made for their benefit proportionally: Burrows v. Lehndorff, 8-96.

Under the facts in a particular case, held, that mortgages to creditors were not shown to be intended as a full disposition of the debtor's property, and therefore were not to be treated as an assignment: Jaffray v. Greenbaum, 64-492.

That a conveyance of real estate to one creditor in payment or security of his debt was executed by the debtor at the same time he executed a general assignment for the benefit of his creditors does not make the two conveyances parts of one transaction: Lamson v. Arnold, 19-479.

The fraudulent intent of the assignor in a general assignment for the benefit of creditors will render the assignment invalid, notwithstanding the assignee was not a party to such intent: Ibid.

In order to render void an instrument of general assignment on the ground that it was made to defraud creditors, it is not necessary to show knowledge of the fraud on the part of the assignee: Eubie v. McDonald, 18-193.

To render a sale to a creditor invalid, as constituting a preference, it must appear not only that the debtor was insolvent, but also that the sale was with intent to give such preference: Graves v. Alden, 13-573.

It is competent for the assignor after making a deed of assignment to make a new promise in writing which will have the effect of reviving a debt barred by the statute of limitations and subject the property assigned to the payment of such debt: Hellman v. Kiene, 73-448.

If it appears that the debtor has kept back a portion of his property not exempt from execution, the assignment will be treated as void although sufficient in form: Moss v. Humphrey, 4 G. Gr., 443.

No assignment is valid which contains a reservation or condition for the benefit of the assignor, such as requiring an absolute discharge upon part payment or partial distribution: Williams v. Gartrell, 4 G. Gr., 287.

An assignment is not rendered invalid by the fact that a reservation is therein made as to property exempt from execution: Perry v. Vezina, 63-25.

Where the intention of the grantor can be ascertained with reasonable certainty, the want of minute accuracy of language and the disregard of the usual forms will not render the instrument void: Meeker v. Sanders, 6-61.

The fact that the deed contains no schedule of the debts intended to be secured, that no inventory is given of the property intended to be conveyed, that the rights of the creditors are not distinctly defined, and that no specific directions are given to the trustee as to the time within which the property is to be converted into money, will not be sufficient to render the deed void: Ibid.

The fact that a party is unable to pay his debts according to the usage of trade, or proceed in business without general arrangement with his creditors or indulgence by way of extension of time of payment, is sufficient to constitute an insolvency, so that he may rightfully make an assignment for the benefit of creditors: Savery v. Spaulding, 8-239.

An assignment may be void as made in contemplation of insolvency if it is not for the benefit of all the creditors proportionally, although the assignor was not at the time actually insolvent: Loving v. Pairo, 10-282.

The validity of assignments, so far as they affect real property, must be judged by the law of the place where the property is situated: Ibid.; Moore v. Church, 70-208; King v. Glass, 73-205.

A deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors may be made in a sister state by a non-resident of this state, and if executed and acknowledged in accordance with our statutes it is valid, and the powers of the assignee being derived directly from the assignor, and not by reason of the appointment of the court,

3293. Assent presumed. 2116. In the case of an assignment of property for the benefit of all the creditors of the assignor, the assent of the creditors shall be presumed. [R., § 1827; C., '51, § 978.]

The assent of the creditors to a general assignment for their benefit will be presumed: Price v. Parker, 11-144.

The assent of creditors will not be presumed to a conditional assignment: Williams v. Gartrell, 4 G. Gr., 287.

may be exercised outside of the state in which it was made: King v. Glass, 73-205.

An assignment by one partner without the consent of his copartner, who might be consulted and is capable of giving assent or dissent, is void, and does not prevent attachment by a creditor, although no proceedings are taken by the partner not consenting to set the assignment aside: Loeb v. Pierpoint, 58-469.

But if both partners have agreed to an assignment it will be valid though signed by but one: Osborne v. Barge, 29 Fed. Rep., 725.

A direction to the assignee to sell the property when convenient, and as soon as it can be done without material sacrifice, will not constitute conclusive badge of fraud: Wooster v. Stanfield, 11-128.

An assignment executed for the payment of debts "as fast as they become due," held not to necessarily imply a payment otherwise than pro rata and therefore not void: Meeker v. Sanders, 6-61.

It seems that a provision in the assignment authorizing the assignee to sell for credit will render it void, but authority to dispose of property upon such terms as in his judgment seem best will not have that effect: Ibid.; Berry v. Hayden, 7-469.

Nor will a provision authorizing the assignee to compound with debtors render the assignment void: Ibid.

A creditor or a co-debtor may be made assignee: Wooster v. Stanfield, 11-128.

The fact that the assignee is offering to sell the goods on credit or to exchange them will not render the conveyance void. No neglect of duty by the assignee, and no misapplication of the trust fund by him can have that effect. The remedy for such negligence or misfeasance is by application to the court: Meeker v. Sanders, 6-61.

Failure of the assignee to report the amount and condition of the assets will not affect the validity of the assignment: Savery v. Spaulding, 8-239.

The fact that the grantor in a deed of assignment is employed in the business by the assignee in the capacity of clerk will not in itself be evidence of fraud in making the assignment: Ibid.

Delivery of the assignment to the attorney of the assignor with direction to file it for record is, in effect, delivery to the assignee: American v. Frank, 62-202.

It has been held by our supreme court as sound in principle, and in the absence of an authoritative adjudication by the United States supreme court, in accordance with the weight of authority, that the enactment of the federal bankrupt law did not operate to nullify, supersede or suspend the insolvent laws of the states: Reed v. Taylor, 32-209.

Where a debtor transferred a note to a creditor, with the understanding that he should collect it and apply so much of the proceeds as should be necessary for the satisfaction of his own claim, and pay the balance upon another claim, held, that the provision in favor of the second creditor as to the balance did not constitute an assignment to him, he not being a party to the agreement, and therefore the excess remained in the hands of the first assignee liable to garnishment by other creditors: Witter v. Little, 66-431.

Where certain accounts were by the debtor assigned to a trustee to be collected and applied pro rata to the payment of debts due certain creditors, held, that the trustee in such assignment was not subject to garnishment at the suit of other creditors, and that assent of the creditors of the assignor would be presumed, they having been notified of the arrangement and having made no objection thereto: Van Winkle v. Iowa Iron, etc., Fence Co., 56-245.

3294. Inventory; effect; recording. 2117. The debtor shall annex to such assignment an inventory, under oath, of his estate, real and personal, according to the best of his knowledge, and also a list of his creditors and the amount of their respective demands; but such inventory shall not be conclusive as to the amount of the debtor's estate; and such assignment shall vest in the assignee the title to any other property belonging to the debtor at the time of making the assignment. Every assignment shall be duly acknowledged in the same manner as conveyances of real estate and recorded in the county where the person making the same resides, or where the business in respect of which the same is made has been carried on. [R., § 1828.]

Recording: The provision as to recording the assignment is intended for the protection of subsequent purchasers. Where the assignment was duly executed and acknowledged, and the assignee consented to accept the trust before the levy of an attachment, the failure to record it until thirty seconds after the writ of attachment came into the sheriff's hands, held, not to render it invalid: American v. Frank, 62-202.

An assignment for the benefit of creditors though unacknowledged and unrecorded takes priority over a judgment rendered after its execution: Munson v. Frazer, 73-177.

What passes by assignment: The right of action for damages for the wrongful suing out of an attachment upon property subsequent to a general assignment thereof is in the assignee, and not in the person making the assignment: Rumsey v. Robinson, 58-225.

The equity of redemption of a mortgagor of personal property passes by an assignment. Gimble v. Ferguson, 58-414.

The assignee may maintain an action for possession of personal property of the assignor as against third parties, although it is covered by a chattel mortgage conferring upon the mortgagee the right of possession: Goldsmith v. Willson, 67-662.

By a general assignment, the property of which the assignor is at the time possessed is passed to the assignee for the benefit of creditors; therefore, held, that such general assignment would destroy a partial assignment by an instrument intended to secure a creditor and made prior to the execution of the general assignment, but not delivered until after general assignment: Gage v. Parry, 69-605.

A deed of assignment headed "General Assignment," and deeding "all the lands and all the personal property of every name and nature whatsoever of the said party of the first part, more particularly enumerated and described in the schedule hereto annexed and marked Schedule A." etc., held, an assignment of the property mentioned in the schedule merely, and not to include property not mentioned therein; so that if any property of the assignor was omitted from the schedule the assignment was not a general but a special one: Bock v. Perkins, 28 Fed. Rep., 123.

An assignment for the benefit of creditors is a conveyance cutting off any vendor's lien not preserved therein as provided by § 3111: Prouty v. Clark, 73-55.

Rights of assignee: The assignee and the creditors have no higher rights under the assignment than the assignor had. The assignee cannot question a prior chattel mortgage on the ground that it was given to secure an antecedent indebtedness: Meyer v. Evans, 66-179.

The assignee may maintain an action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance by his assignor and subject the property thus conveyed to the payment of the creditors' claims. The debtor who has made a fraudulent conveyance must be deemed, as to the creditors, to have an interest in the property which passes to the assignee: Schuller v. Wright, 70-667.

While an assignee cannot, either at the common law or under the statute, set aside a conveyance made by his debtor on the ground of fraud, he may defeat the enforcement of a mortgage against the realty of the assignor, the title of which is in the assignee, by showing that the mortgage is a mere sham, given without consideration and in fraud of creditors: Sandwich Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 22 Fed. Rep., 631; Rumsey v. Town, 20 Fed. Rep., 558.

Under the Code a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors does not confer upon the assignee the right to enforce special equities on behalf of one or more creditors, so as to deprive a creditor of his right to assert, in his own name and right, such equity against a third party: Rumsey v. Town, 20 Fed. Rep., 558.

An assignee holding under a deed of assignment cannot deny and defend against the validity of chattel mortgages which, though not recorded, yet represent a valid subsisting indebtedness, in the interest of general creditors. Such right is confined to creditors having a lien upon the property, or having a judgment at law with a right to perfect their lien upon property they may discover: Simon v. Openheimer, 20 Fed. Rep., 553.

3295. Inventory and appraisement; removal of assignee. 2118; 21 G. A., ch. 115, § 1. The assignee shall also forthwith file with the clerk of the district [or circuit] court of the county where such assignment shall be recorded, a true and full inventory and valuation of said estate, under oath, so far as the same has come to his knowledge, and shall, then and there, enter into bonds to said clerk, for the use of the creditors, in double the amount of the inventory and valuation, with one or more sufficient sureties, to be approved by said clerk, for the faithful performance of said trust, and the assignee may thereupon proceed to perform any duty necessary to carry into effect the intention of said assignment. Provided, however, that on application of two-thirds of the creditors, in number and amount, the court shall remove the assignee and appoint in his stead a person as assignee approved by the creditors in number and amount as aforesaid; and, when any assignee is removed, he shall immediately turn over to the clerk of the district court, or any person appointed by the court, all money and property of the estate in his hands. [R., § 1830.]

If an assignee take possession of property it is evidence of an acceptance, and he may bring action in relation to such property even before filing an inventory and bond: Price v. Parker, 11-144.

Where the assignee filed a valuation, signed and sworn to by other disinterested persons, instead of by himself as required by statute, held, that such inventory should not be treated as a nullity: Drain v. Michel, 8-438.

The court can appoint another assignee only where the one appointed refuses to serve: Ibid.

Jurisdiction of proceedings to test the validity of an assignment is not exclusive in the court in which the assignee files his bond and inventory, but exists in any court, state or federal, of otherwise competent jurisdiction: Kohn v. Ryan, 31 Fed. Rep., 636.

3296. Notice. 2119. The assignee shall forthwith give notice of such assignment by publication in some newspaper in the county, if any, and if none, then in the nearest county thereto, which publication shall be continued at least six weeks; and shall also forthwith send a notice by mail to each creditor of whom he shall be informed, directed to their usual place of residence, and notifying the creditors to present their claims, under oath, to him within three months thereafter. [R., § 1829.]

The assignee should give the creditor sufficient opportunity to present proof of his claim within the time allowed, but that duty is discharged if the assignee is at his usual place of business during business hours and receives all proofs of claims presented to him during that time. If the plaintiff relies upon the mail for the delivery of his proof of claim he does so at his own risk, and the receipt of the letter containing such proof of claim directed to the assignee at the postoffice of the latter after business hours, and not received by or delivered to him until the next day and after expiration of the time for filing claims, will not entitle the creditor to have his claim allowed in the same class with those filed within proper time: Conlee Lumber Co. v. Meyer, 74-403.

A creditor under a general assignment, who has a special security, may be required by the other creditors to resort to this, and can only claim a dividend upon the amount remaining unpaid after exhausting the property upon which he has such special lien: Wurtz v. Hart, 15-515.

The provisions as to requiring security for costs from a non-resident plaintiff are not applicable in proceedings under an assignment for the benefit of creditors: Meyer v. Evans, 66-179.

3297. List of creditors. 2120. At the expiration of three months from the time of first publishing notice, the assignee shall report and file with the clerk of the court, a true and full list, under oath, of all such creditors of the assignor as shall have claimed to be such, with a statement of their claims, and also an affidavit of publication of notice, and a list of the creditors, with their places of residence, to whom notice has been sent by mail, and the date of mailing duly verified. [R., § 1831.]

The report and proof by assignee of the service of notice can be taken notice of by the court without its being formally introduced in evidence: Conlee Lumber Co. v. Meyer, 74-403.

3298. Objection to claims. 2121. Any person interested may appear within three months after filing such report, and file with said clerk any exceptions to the claim or demand of any creditor; and the clerk shall forthwith cause notice thereof to be given to the creditor, which shall be served as in case of an original notice, returnable at the next term; and the said court shall at such term proceed to hear the proofs and allegations of the parties in the premises, and shall render such judgment thereon as shall be just, and may allow a trial by jury thereon. R., § 1832.]

There being no provision for pleadings in contesting claims, further than exceptions by creditors objecting to claims of other creditors, it is quite probable that no further pleadings are required by the statute: In re Assignment of Guyer, 69-585.

The court having jurisdiction of proceedings in an assignment for the benefit of creditors has authority to determine priority among creditors, and a party objecting to the right of the creditor should make such objection in that proceeding. An order of the court as to the jurisdiction of the property will be an adjudication, binding in a collateral proceeding, although erroneous: Perry v. Murray, 55-416.

An original and independent action in equity may be brought in the same or another court for the purpose of determining equities and priorities of the creditors to the fund in court under the assignment. Therefore, held, that where the validity of a chattel mortgage was involved in determining the rights of creditors, an independent action with reference thereto might be brought in another court and transferred to a federal court, and that the adjudication of the federal court on such question, of which it had jurisdiction, would be final: Knoxville Nat. Bank v. Hanrick, 67-583.

The fact that a deed of assignment has been executed, and that the assignee gives bond and files the proper schedules and inventory in the state court, does not ipso facto confer upon that court the exclusive jurisdiction to hear and determine all questions existing between the creditors of the assignor: Rumsey v. Town, 20 Fed. Rep., 558.

Any one whose legal rights are affected thereby may contest the validity of an assignment, and to that end invoke the aid of the state courts; and if he is a citizen of another state, and the amount exceeds five hundred dollars, he may invoke the aid of the United States circuit court: Fleisher v. Greenwald, 20 Fed. Rep., 547.

An order made by a state court in an action of replevin, wherein it was found that several mortgages were valid liens upon the property, paramount to the assignment, and entitled to be first paid out of the proceeds realized from a stock of goods, held not an adjudication binding on the complainants in the federal court who were not parties to the proceedings in the state court, whose right to contest the validity of the mortgages was not derived from the deed of assignment, and was not represented by the assignee: Ibid.; Rumsey v. Town, 20 Fed. Rep., 565.

An order made by a court having control of assignment proceedings, approving payment of a mortgage debt by the assignee, is not an adjudication of the validity of the mortgage as against creditors not appearing in the assignment proceedings, and whose rights, as against the mortgage, are not conferred by the deed of assignment: Rumsey v. Town, 20 Fed. Rep., 558.

3299. Dividends; account; compensation. 2122. If no exception be made to the claim of any creditor, or if the same have been adjudicated, the court shall order the assignee to make, from time to time, fair and equal dividends among the creditors of the assets in his hands, in proportion to their claims, and as soon as may be, to render a final account of said trust to said court, who may allow such commissions to said assignee in the final settlement as may be considered just and right. [R., § 1833.]

3300. Claim for services. 20 G. A., ch. 124, § 1. Upon making order for the distribution of the assets in the hands of the assignee of an insolvent, as provided in section two thousand one hundred and twenty-two of the code, [§ 3299], the court shall order to be paid in full, as a preferred claim, the earnings of any creditor for his personal services rendered to the assignor at any time within ninety days next preceding the execution of the assignment.

3301. Unclaimed dividends. 20 G. A., ch. 124, § 2. If upon the making of the final dividend to the creditors of the estate of an insolvent by the assignee, he shall be unable, after proper efforts, to ascertain the place of residence of any creditor, or any person who is authorized to receive the dividend due such creditor, he shall report the same to the court, with evidence showing diligent attempt to find the creditor, or person authorized to receive the dividend. Whereupon the court may, in its discretion, order the distribution of the unclaimed dividend among the other creditors.

3302. Reports; settlement. 2123; 21 G. A., ch. 115, § 2. The assignee shall at all times be subject to the order and supervision of the court or judge, and the said court or judge may, by citation and attachment, compel the assignee, from time to time, to file reports of his proceedings, and of the situation and condition of the trust, and to proceed in the faithful execution of the duties required by this chapter. The assignee shall dispose of all personal property, and divide the proceeds of the same among the creditors, as they may be entitled thereto, within six months of the date of the assignment, and shall dispose of real estate within one year from the date of assignment, and make full settlement at that date unless the court, or judge, for good reason shown, shall extend the time within which such disposition shall be made. [C., §§ 1834, 1842.]

3303. Not void; citation to debtor. 2124. No assignment shall be declared fraudulent or void, for want of any list or inventory as provided in this chapter. The court or judge may, upon application of the assignee or any creditor, compel the appearance in person of the debtor before such court or judge forthwith, or at the next term, to answer under oath such matters as may then and there be inquired of him, and such debtor may then and there be fully examined under oath as to the amount and situation of his estate, and the names of the creditors and amounts due to each, with their places of residence; and may compel the delivery to the assignee of any property or estate embraced in the assignment. [R., § 1835.]

Assignment not void for want of inventory: Wooster v. Stanfield, 11-128; Price v. Parker, 11-144.

3304. Additional inventory. 2125. The assignee shall, from time to time, file with the clerk of the court, an inventory and valuation of any additional property which may come into his hands under said assignment after the filing of the first inventory, and the clerk may thereupon require him to give additional security. [R., § 1836.]

3305. Claims not due. 2126. Any creditor may claim debts to become due as well as debts due, but on debts not due a reasonable abatement shall be made when the same are not drawing interest, and all creditors who shall not exhibit their claim within the term of three months from the publication of notice as aforesaid, shall not participate in the dividends until after the payment in full of all claims presented within said term and allowed by the court. [R., § 1837.]

Claims entitled to share in the first dividends are only those filed within three months from the first publication of notice: In re Assignment of Holt, 45-301.

It is the duty of the assignee to resist the payment of a claim filed after the expiration of three months until the claims filed within that time are fully paid, although no objection or exception to such claim is made by any creditor: Conlee Lumber Co. v. Meyer, 74-403.

A claim filed after the expiration of the time allowed cannot share in the divisions of the estate with the claims filed in time, although it is actually presented to the assignee in time to be considered with the other claims: Ibid.

Where the claim is not filed within the requisite time after the publication of notice and after the report of the assignee, the creditor cannot participate in the benefits of the assignment, and there is no provision by which such a creditor can have equitable relief from the bar thus created: Ibid.; McKendley v. Nourse, 67-118.

3306. Sale of property. 2127. Any assignee as aforesaid, shall have as full power and authority to dispose of all estate, real and personal, assigned, as the debtor had at the time of the assignment, and to sue for and recover in the name of such assignee everything belonging or appertaining to said estate, and generally do whatsoever the debtor might have done in the premises; but no sale of real estate belonging to said trust shall be made without notice, published as in case of sales of real estate on execution, unless the court shall order and direct otherwise. [R., § 1838.]

The sale of real property by an assignee is a judicial sale, and cuts off contingent right of dower in the property: Stidger v. Evans, 64-91.

Where defendants had foreclosed a chattel mortgage, invalid as to the general creditors of the mortgagor, who had made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, held, that a decree in equity would be rendered declaring the mortgage void, and estopping the defendants from any prior right to the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged property at the suit of a creditor, who, without delay, after the assignment, procured judgment at law against the mortgagor, and brought his action in equity against the mortgagees, although the mortgagees would thereby be deprived of all security for their debt: Rumsey v. Town, 20 Fla. Rep., 558.

If the assignee procures money for the purpose of paying creditors by a pledge or mortgage of the property assigned, the assignor has no right to complain, provided, as between him and the assignee, such a power under the assignment existed and the proceeds thereof have been properly applied, and it was for the interest of the assignor that the money should be so procured instead of by a sale of the property: Waterman v. Baldwin, 68-255.

In general, as to rights of assignee, see notes to § 3294.

3307. Death or failure of assignee. 2128. In case any assignee shall die before the closing of his trust, or in case any assignee shall fail or neglect for the period of twenty days after the making of any assignment, to file an inventory and valuation, and give bonds as required by this chapter, the district [or circuit] court, or any judge thereof, of the county where such assignment may be recorded, on the application of any person interested, shall appoint some person to execute the trust embraced in such assignment; and such person, on giving bond with sureties as required above of the assignee, shall possess all the powers conferred upon such assignee, and shall be subject to all the duties hereby imposed, as fully as though named in the assignment; and in case any security shall be discovered to be insufficient, or, on complaint before the court or judge, it should be made appear that any assignee is guilty of wasting or misapplying the trust estate, said court or judge may direct and require additional security, and may remove such assignee and may appoint others instead; and such person so appointed, on giving bond, shall have full power to execute such duties and to demand and sue for all estate in the hands of the person removed, and to demand and recover the amount and value of all moneys and property or estate so wasted and misapplied which he may neglect or refuse to make satisfaction for, from such person and his sureties. [R., § 1839.]

Where the inventory is merely imperfect or defective, the court does not possess the power to appoint another assignee. The statute only contemplates cases where there is such failure as to amount to a refusal to accept: Drain v. Michel, 8-438.

3308. Priority of taxes. 16 G. A., ch. 14, § 1. Hereafter in all assignments of property for the benefit of creditors, whether under chapter seven, of title fourteen, of the code, or at common law, assessments or taxes levied under the laws of the state, including municipal corporations, shall be entitled to priority or preference and be first paid in full.

A tax levied upon personal property, at least if subsequent to the assignment, should be paid by the assignee, rather than allowed to become a lien upon real property as against a mortgagee: Brooks v. Eighmey, 53-276.

It is the duty of the assignee, to the extent of the property which comes into his hands, to devote the same to the payment of taxes, subject possibly to the payment of expenses of executing the trust. No claim for taxes is required to be filed, nor need any demand be made. The assignee must, at his peril, inquire whether the property or fund in his hands is liable for assessments or levies of taxes: Huiscamp v. Albert, 60-421.

Under this provision, although its primary object is the protection of the public revenue, it would doubtless be the duty of the assignee to protect the purchaser of the property of the estate against taxes levied upon it before the sale. It would also be his duty to protect the mortgagee of real estate against taxes upon other property of the estate which under the law have become a lien upon the mortgaged property. But it clearly would be competent to sell the property subject to the lien of the taxes: Brown v. Kiene, 72-342.

This statute does not apply to property in the hands of a receiver: Howard County v. Strother, 71-683.

CHAPTER 8.

OF MECHANICS' LIENS.

[Secs. 2129 to 2146 are repealed by the following act:]

3309. Repealing clause. 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 1. Chapter eight, of title fourteen of the code, titled "Of Mechanics' Liens," is hereby repealed; provided, that this repeal shall not effect [affect] any contract already made, executed, or executory, or impair any right whatever, arising under the law hereby repealed.

Liens arising prior to the taking effect of this act must be enforced under the law as it then stood: Brodtt v. Rohkar, 48-36; Conrad v. Starr, 50-470.

3310. Collateral security. 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 2. No person shall be entitled to a mechanic's lien, who, at the time of executing or making the contract for furnishing material or performing labor, as hereinafter provided, or during the progress of the work, erection, building or other improvement, shall take any collateral security on such contract. But after the completion of such work, and when the contractor or other person shall have become entitled to claim, or have a lien, the taking collateral or other security shall not affect the right to such mechanic's lien, unless such new security shall be by express agreement given and received in lieu of the mechanic's lien. [C., '73, § 2129; R., § 1845; C., '51, § 1009.]

Collateral security may be a separate obligation guarantying the performance of a contract, or a transfer of property or other contracts to insure such performance; but the contract, promise or property must have been intended and accepted as collateral security: Mervin v. Sherman, 9-331.

Taking a mortgage on the same property upon which the lien is claimed will not defeat the right to a lien, unless it appears to have been the intention to look to such security and not to the lien: Gilcrest v. Gottschalk, 39-311; Hale v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 2 McCrary, 558.

Nor will the taking of a promissory note, in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, have that effect: Ibid.; Greene v. Ely, 2 G. Gr., 508; Mix v. Ely, 2 G. Gr., 513; Logan v. Altiss, 7-77.

But if the note be actually negotiated, the lien will be lost: Scott v. Ward, 4 G. Gr., 112.

The mere attempt, however, to negotiate such note will not discharge or waive the lien: Hawley v. Warde, 4 G. Gr., 36.

Where the person entitled to a lien takes a negotiable note for the amount of his claim and negotiates it, but upon its dishonor is compelled, as indorser, to take it up, he may enforce his original right to a lien: German Bank v. Schloth, 59-316.

The acceptance of bonds of a railway company, secured by a mortgage upon a branch line covering rolling stock, is a waiver of a mechanic's lien for the construction of such branch line: Hale v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co., 2 McCrary, 558.

Where one who holds a mechanic's lien participates by petition of intervention in a foreclosure sale, alleging therein that "no mechanic's lien is claimed," purchasers will be justified in assuming that none will be claimed: Ibid.

A mechanic's lien is waived by taking security in the form of a conditional sale, although the instrument is not recorded so as to be valid as to creditors or purchasers: Taylor v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 4 Dillon, 570, 580.

Where, in accordance with stipulations in a contract under which machinery was furnished, a sum of money was deposited as security, held, that such stipulation, acted upon by the parties, waived a mechanic's lien for such machinery: Harrison, etc., Iron Co. v. Council Bluffs Water Works Co., 25 Fed. Rep., 170.

Facts in a particular case, held to show the taking of collateral security defeating a lien: Shickle, etc., Iron Co. v. Council Bluffs Water Works Co., 33 Fed. Rep., 13.

Provision in a contract for the building of a railroad, that all the money specified should be paid by the citizens of the county through which the road was to be built, held not to amount to taking collateral security: Delaware R. Const. Co. v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co., 46-406; Meyer v. Construction Co., 100 U. S., 457.

Where a contract was made for the wife owning the land by her husband for the erection of a building, and the contractor took a joint note of the husband and wife, held, that this did not constitute taking collateral security such as would waive a lien: Bissell v. Lewis, 56-231.

The object of the provision that collateral security shall not be taken until after the completion of the work and the party has become entitled to a lien is doubtless to prevent any one from obtaining a lien who takes security for the amount due or to become due at any time before he completes his contract. Where the material to be furnished by the contract of a person agreeing to furnish material had all been delivered, held, that the taking of collateral security at that time did not waive the lien, although the building remained still incomplete: Ibid.

The statutory provision against taking collateral security may be waived by agreement, 3311. Who may have lien. 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 3. Every mechanic, or other person, who shall do any labor upon, or furnish any materials, machinery, or fixtures for, any building, erection or other improvement upon land, including those engaged in the construction or repair of any work of internal improvement, by virtue of any contract with the owner, his agent, trustee, contractor, or subcontractor, upon complying with the provisions of this chapter, shall have for his labor done, or materials, machinery or fixtures furnished, a lien upon such building, erection or improvement, and upon the land belonging to such owner on which the same is situated, to secure the payment of such labor done, or materials, machinery, or fixtures furnished. [C., '73, § 2130; R., § 1846; C., '51, §§ 981, 1010.]

Under contract with the owner: If there has been no contract with the owner of the land, no lien can attach by virtue of labor done or material furnished in the erection of a building thereon. The amount of interest held by the owner does not seem to be material, but the lien will attach only to such interest: Redman v. Williamson, 2-488.

The statute gives no mechanic's lien upon any interest except by virtue of a contract between the mechanic and the owner of such interest, and the acceptance by the owner of land of improvements placed thereon under a contract with a person having no interest therein does not give the right to a lien as against such owner, the improvements having been made for the benefit of the person in possession and not for the benefit of the owner: Wilkins v. Litchfield, 69-495.

It is only under contract with the owner that a party can be allowed a lien as an original contractor: Templin v. Chicago, B. & P. R. Co., 73-548.

The contract under which the services were performed or material furnished should be set forth in the petition to enforce the lien: Logan v. Attix, 7-77.

It must be shown that the materials for which a lien is claimed were furnished upon a contract especially for the purpose of being used for or about a building; but the particular building for which they were to be used need not be mentioned or understood: Cotes v. Shorey, 8-416.

Parol evidence is admissible to show the purpose for which the material was furnished, even where the contract is in writing: Neilson v. Eastern Iowa R. Co., 51-184.

Implied contract: In order to entitle a party furnishing material to a lien it is not necessary that it appear that there was an express contract that the material should be furnished, or that it should be used in the construction of the building or improvement on which the lien is claimed: Ibid.

While the work must be performed or the material furnished under a contract it is not necessary that every item should be contemplated and specifically named: Jones v. Swan, 21-181; Stockwell v. Carpenter, 27-119.

It need not be expressly understood that the or the owner of the building may by his acts estop himself from objecting to a lien on that account: Getchell v. Musgrove, 54-744.

The fact that a mechanic agrees to take his pay in property will not defeat his right to a lien: Keiley v. Ward, 4 G. Gr., 21.

mechanic is to have a lien: Jones v. Swan, 21-181.

Improvements on wife's land by contract with husband: Where the title to land is in the wife, a mechanic cannot have a lien thereon for material furnished the husband, without the acquiescence of the wife, to erect a building upon such land; and it will not be presumed from the marital relation alone that the husband is authorized to act in the matter as the agent of the wife: Miller v. Hollingsworth, 33-224; S. C., 36-163; Price v. Seydel, 46-696; Nelson v. Cover, 47-250.

A wife's premises cannot be charged with a lien for improvements erected thereon by her husband against her protest. If she knows or has reason to suspect that material is being bought by her husband in her name, it may be her duty to notify the person from whom it is bought that she repudiates the agency, but where the material is bought by her husband in his own name, she is under no obligation to take any action: Getty v. Tramel, 67-288.

In such case the person furnishing the material can have no lien upon the improvements: Ibid.

If the wife's acquiescence is shown, an equitable lien may be established: Miller v. Hollingsworth, 36-163.

A subcontractor having no direct contract with the wife on whose property the labor and material are used, and who has not taken the steps required by statute for securing his mechanic's lien, cannot assert an equitable lien against the property of the wife: Nelson v. Cover, 47-250.

However, if the material is furnished for the use and benefit of the wife, and at the request of the husband acting as her agent, a lien may be had upon the property of the wife: Kidd v. Wilson, 23-464; Burdick v. Moon, 24-418.

The property of a married woman will be subject to a mechanic's lien for improvements made under a contract with herself and husband jointly: Greenough v. Wiggington, 2 G. Gr., 435.

Where a contract is made for the wife holding the legal title by her husband acting as her agent, a lien may be established as against her property: Bissell v. Lewis, 56-231.

In a particular case, held that the evidence did not show that the husband was contractor for the erection of the building for the wife on her property, and plaintiff a material-man under such contractor, but rather that plaintiff furnished the material under contract made with the husband and wife jointly or with the husband as agent for the wife: Rand v. Parker, 73-396.

Co-tenant: Where defendant had a life estate and a one-third interest in fee, held, that he could create a mechanic's lien against the property only to the extent of his right and interest therein: Conrad v. Starr, 50-470.

Who deemed owner: A party in possession under contract of purchase, or a bond for a deed, is an "owner," as contemplated by the statute: Monroe v. West, 12-119; Stockwell v. Carpenter, 27-119.

Proof that defendant contracted for material for the erection of a building, and procured it to be erected or has since its erection used it as a place of residence, is sufficient as against him to constitute prima facie evidence of ownership: Lewis v. Saylor, 73-504.

Ratification: Facts in a particular case held sufficient to show acquiescence in improvements made thereon by contract with another, and the adoption and recognition of his contract for the material as made in behalf of the owner: Burdick v. Moulton, 53-761.

Lien upon improvements: Although material furnished for or labor performed upon an improvement upon land, under contract with one having no interest therein nor authority to contract for the owner, will not give any lien upon the land, the right of a lien upon the improvements may exist in such case, and for that purpose it is immaterial whether or not the person with whom the contract was made had any right to improve the land: Lane v. Snow, 66-544.

Equitable interest: A mechanic's lien will attach upon an equitable title, and will follow the title into whosoever hands it may pass, and a mere substitution of another contract for that under which the property is held will not defeat the lien if the new contract was given as evidence of the same rights which were held under the old: Clark v. Parker, 58-509.

Extent of lien: A lien which has attached to the land will remain thereon after the materials have been destroyed or removed: Ibid.

The lien attaches to the building and not to the material furnished; a purchaser of such material, even with knowledge that it is not paid for, takes free from any lien: Heaton v. Horr, 42-187.

A party furnishing material for a building or improvement under contract has a lien for all the material furnished whether used or not: Neilson v. Iowa Eastern R. Co., 51-184; S. C., 51-714.

The rolling stock of a railway is not a part of the realty, and a party furnishing ties for the construction of the road does not acquire any lien upon such rolling stock: Ibid. (But the statute now provides otherwise.)

Public buildings or improvements: The provisions of the statute are only intended to apply to property which may be sold on execution, and a mechanic's lien cannot be enforced against public property, such as public buildings, bridges, etc., which are exempt from execution sale under § 4273: Loring v. Small, 50-271; Lewis v. Chickasaw County, 50-234; Charnock v. District T'p, 51-70; Whiting v. Story County, 54-81; Breneman v. Harvey, 70-479.

It is not proper, where it is attempted to enforce a lien against a public building or improvement, to render a judgment not a lien, to be enforced in the usual way by a tax. The lien can be enforced only in the manner prescribed: Loring v. Small, 50-271; Whiting v. Story County, 54-81.

As to whether a mechanic's lien can be placed upon the property of a private water company engaged in supplying the inhabitants of a city with water, quere: Harrison, etc., Iron Co. v. Council Bluffs Water Works Co., 25 Fed. Rep., 170.

As to provisions for enforcing claims of contractors or subcontractors for work or materials on public buildings or bridges, see §§ 3324-3329.

For what improvements or materials: Breaking the sod is not such "improvement upon land" as to entitle the person performing such labor to a mechanic's lien: Brown v. Wyman, 56-452.

A person who furnishes and erects lighting-rods attached to a house or other structure is entitled to a mechanic's lien therefor: Harris v. Schultz, 64-539.

A mechanic or material-man does not acquire a mechanic's lien upon property by doing work upon and furnishing material for a sidewalk upon a street in front of such property: Coenen v. Staub, 74-32.

Where material is furnished for the erection of two buildings, and the person furnishing it is not able to designate what items were sold for one and what for the other, all the material being sold under a single contract for the two buildings, a lien on both buildings for the entire amount may be claimed: Bowman Lumber Co. v. Newton, 72-90.

It is not necessary for plaintiff to designate either in his sworn statement of the account or in his petition the particular material which goes into each of two or more buildings for which material is furnished. It is, however, not thereby intended that a person furnishing material will be entitled to a lien upon one building for material which it is shown went into another; all that is intended is that, so far as the question is of any materiality to the defendant, the burden is upon him to show in what building the materials were used: Lewis v. Saylor, 73-504.

To whom lien allowed: Proof of performance of labor upon a building is sufficient to entitle a party to a lien; he is not required to show a special agreement that the labor was to be performed about that building. An implied contract will support a lien: Foerder v. Wesner, 56-157.

A party should not be denied a lien for labor performed merely from the fact that, in addition to the performance of the labor, he rendered services as overseer of the work: Foerder v. Wesner, 56-157.

A laborer employed for days' wages in the construction of a railroad is entitled to a lien on the road for such wages: Mornan v. Carroll, 35-32.

A subcontractor under a subcontractor is also entitled to a lien: Mears v. Stubbs, 45-675.

Where a railroad is a unit in every respect except in its construction, a subcontractor who builds only a part of the road has nevertheless a right to a lien on the whole road: Brooks v. Railway Co., 101 U. S., 443.

A creditor is not entitled to a lien for money paid out for the use of a debtor, although embraced in the same account with charges for services rendered: Stubbs v. Clarinda, C. S. & S. W. R. Co., 65-513.

Indebtedness for work or material: Where there was an exchange of property, and one party agreed to build a house for the other as a part of the contract, while the latter undertook to satisfy a mortgage, held, that upon failure of the latter to satisfy the mortgage, the former could not claim a mechanic's lien for the building of the house, the indebtedness not being for the work or material, but for failure to perform the contract with reference to the mortgage: Brown v. Rodocker, 65-55.

Nature of the interest: A mechanic's lien is an insurable interest: Carier v. Humboldt F. Ins. Co., 12-287.

A mechanic's lien is not an interest in real estate; it is the right to a remedy against the property whereby the real estate may be subjected to a specific lien for the payment of the claim: Andrews v. Burdick, 62-714.

3312. Extent of lien. 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 4. The entire land upon which any such building, erection, or other improvement is situated, including that portion of the same not covered therewith, shall be subject to all liens created by this chapter, to the extent of all the right, title and interest owned therein by the owner thereof, for whose immediate use or benefit such labor was done or things furnished, and when the interest owned in said land by such owner of such building, erection or other improvement is only a leasehold interest, the forfeiture of such lease for the non-payment of rent, or for non-compliance with any of the other stipulations therein, shall not forfeit or impair such liens so far as concerns such buildings, erections and improvements, but the same may be sold to satisfy said lien, and be moved within thirty days after the sale thereof by the purchaser. [C., '73, § 2140; R., § 1854.]

Where defendants, lessees of a mill under verbal lease for five years, put in machinery and fixtures, and afterward gave a chattel mortgage thereon, held, that the plaintiffs who furnished such machinery, and filed their statement within proper time, had a mechanic's lien upon such machinery, and were prior to the claims of the chattel mortgagee. Although, as between lessor and lessee, such machinery and fixtures were chattel property, yet in connection with a leasehold interest they were subject to the lien: Nordyke v. Hawleye Woolen Mills Co., 53-521.

3313. Extent of lien on work of internal improvement. 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 5. And when such material shall have been furnished or labor performed, in the construction, repair, or equipment of any railroad, canal, viaduct, or other similar improvement, the lien therefor shall extend and attach to the erection, excavations, embankments, bridges, road-bed, and all land upon which the same may be situated, including the rolling stock thereto appertaining and belonging; all of which, except the easement or right of way, shall constitute the building, erection or improvement provided and mentioned in this statute.

3314. Filing statement. 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 6. Every person, whether contractor or subcontractor, who wishes to avail himself of the provisions of this statute shall file with the clerk of the district court of the county in which the building, erection or other improvement to be charged with the lien is situated, a just and true statement or account of the demand due him after allowing all credits, setting forth the time when such material was furnished or labor performed, and when completed, and containing a correct description of the property to be charged with the lien, and verified by affidavit. Such verified statement or account must be filed by a principal contractor, within ninety days, and by a subcontractor within thirty days from the date on which the last of the material shall have been furnished, or the last of the labor was performed. But a failure or omission to file the same within the periods last aforesaid, shall not defeat the lien, except against purchasers or incumbrancers in good faith without notice, whose rights accrued after the thirty or ninety days, as the case may be, and before any claim for the lien was filed; provided, that where a lien is claimed upon a railway, the subcontractor shall have sixty days from the last day of the month in which such labor was done or material furnished, within which to file his claim therefor. [C., '73, § 2137; R., § 1851; 9 G. A., ch. 11.]

What statement sufficient: A simple statement that a sum is due the person claiming a lien is not the "statement or account" required by statute to be filed. It should show the account whereon the demand is founded. The claim should show that the party is entitled to a lien, and the nature of the demand, and the time when it accrued should therefore appear: Valentine v. Rawson, 57-179.

It is not required that the name of the owner of the property against which the lien is claimed should be mentioned in the statement. Where the owner had died before the filing of the statement for a lien, held, that the statement was sufficient if made out against the estate, though the names of the heirs owning the property were not mentioned: Welch v. McGrath, 59-519.

Where the claim shows a contract between a contractor and the owner of property for the building of a house thereon, and the purchase by the contractor of the lumber to be used in building the house and the furnishing of such lumber by the party claiming the lien, such claim sufficiently shows the use of the lumber in building the house: Ewing v. Folsom, 67-65.

The statement for the mechanic's lien should contain a bill of particulars: Greene v. Ely, 2 G. Gr., 508.

If the bill of particulars is as definite as the circumstances of the case will allow it will be sufficient: Mix v. Ely, 2 G. Gr., 513.

If all the items constitute in fact parts of one account, that is, relate to one and the same transaction, respecting which the contract to furnish material was made, they may be included in one statement, although intermediate balances may have been struck in the account: Lamb v. Hanneman, 40-41.

One who furnishes material to a contractor to be used in making an improvement may make a claim in a single lien for all the material furnished for a single building, although the work performed by the contractor upon such building may be under different contracts. It would be a great hardship upon a subcontractor to require him to take notice of, and bear in mind at his peril, precisely where, in the construction of a building and use of material, one contract ends and the other begins. In such cases service of notice by subcontractors made within thirty days after the furnishing of the last material is sufficient: Jones, etc., Lumber Co. v. Murphy, 64-165.

Application of payments: Where a contractor, indebted to a lumber dealer on two accounts for material furnished for two different buildings on premises of distinct owners, made a payment which was at first applied by the creditor on one account, but afterward charged to the other, held, that it not appearing that the first application was made by mistake, the lien under the first account was thereby released to that extent as to the property covered thereby, and was not revived by the subsequent change in the application: Chicago Lumber Co. v. Woods, 53-552.

What part of account: Where the account for material amounted to $800 and had been carried along with a reasonable continuity, and afterwards an item of $4.45 was charged more than seven months after the other items, held, that such item was not to be deemed a part of the account: Gilbert v. Tharp, 72-714.

Sufficiency of affidavit: An affidavit for a mechanic's lien commencing "A. B., agent for C. D., being duly sworn, says that on, etc., he made a parol contract, etc., to furnish material, etc., for which he claims a mechanic's lien," etc., held sufficient to support a mechanic's lien in behalf of C. D.: Lamb v. Hanneman, 40-41.

Incorrect statement: The party filing the statement for the mechanic's lien should be held to the strictest exercise of good faith, and if it appears that he has included within his statement items of account for which he is not entitled to a lien, for the purpose of securing a lien for such items, his entire claim for the lien should be rejected: Stubbs v. Clarinda, C. S. & S. W. R. Co., 65-513.

Therefore, where items for money expended were included in an account in such way as to make it appear that they were for services rendered, held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a lien, even for services which he had rendered: Ibid.

Mistake in description of property: The fact that in the statement a lien is claimed upon a larger tract of land than that owned by the person contracting for the improvement, but including the tract upon which the improvement is made, and owned by the person making the contract, will not defeat the lien as to the property properly subject thereto: Bissell v. Lewis, 56-231.

A mistake in the description of the property in the account filed is not irremediable, and a lien may still be claimed by filing a new account containing a correct description. The foreclosure of a lien misdescribing the property will not so merge the account but that it may furnish the basis for a claim for a lien upon the property for which the material was furnished: Gray v. Dunham, 50-170.

As a failure to file a statement does not defeat a lien except as against purchasers and incumbrancers, such statement, even if filed, will not limit the right of recovery against the person with whom the contract is made: Neilson v. Iowa Eastern R. Co., 51-184.

Where the filing of a statement is not necessary to a lien, the filing of an incorrect statement will not defeat it: Bissell v. Lewis, 56-231.

The description of the property to be charged as "thirty lengths of corn-cribbing at Mills Station," held too indefinite: Roose v. Billingsly, 74-51.

Who may file statement: The holder of a claim which is in his hands may constitute the foundation of a lien, or one bound by a contract to furnish labor or material, may do all things necessary to enforce the lien allowed by law; therefore, held, that where a firm made a contract to furnish, and did furnish, materials, and a part of the members of the firm afterward transferred their interest in the partnership to others, one of such members had authority, in the name of the original firm, to perfect the lien for the material so furnished, and the assignee of such firm might enforce the lien thus perfected: German Bank v. Schloth, 59-316.

An assignee for the benefit of creditors may enforce a mechanic's lien existing in favor of the assignor: Ibid.

Whether a statement filed subsequently to the assignment of the claim, but in the name of the assignor, would be sufficient, quere: Ford v. Independent Dist., 46-294.

Method of filing: Under the statutory provisions for filing, requiring the clerk to make an abstract of the statement in a book by him to be kept for that purpose and properly indexed, held, that the requirement that the clerk's abstract shall contain the name of the person against whose property the lien was filed amounts to no more than that it shall contain the name of the person against whom the account is filed and the claim for the lien is made, and it does not require, by inference, that the claim shall state the name of the owner of the property against whom the lien is claimed: Welch v. McGrath, 59-519.

Therefore, held, that where the person against whom the lien existed was dead the claim for a lien was properly filed against the administrator of the estate without naming the heirs who were the owners of the property against whom it was sought to establish a lien: Ibid.

Where it appears by the signature of the clerk that the claim is filed, and by a jurat to the claim that the person thus filing it is the clerk of the district court, it is sufficiently shown that the claim is filed in the district court: Ewing v. Folsom, 67-65.

Time for filing statement: The proviso that, where a lien is claimed upon a railway, a subcontractor shall have sixty days from the last day of the month in which the labor was performed or material furnished in which to file his claim for a lien, means that he shall have sixty days from the last day of the calendar month: Sandval v. Ford, 55-461.

But this distinction between railroad subcontractors and others as to time for filing claims does not release the former from the other provisions of the statute as to the time within which such subcontractors must serve notice upon the owner of the filing of their claims: Ibid.

The time for filing statement in order to effect notice is not within ninety days from the time of each item of work done or material furnished, but from the time of completion of the entire contract: Jones v. Swan, 21-181.

Where a lien is claimed on the ground that material furnished was used in a particular building within ninety days prior to the time of asserting the lien, such claim cannot be enforced against the purchaser of the property without proof that the material was used in the particular building as claimed: Roose v. Billingsly, 74-51.

The statute of limitations begins to run from the expiration of the thirty or ninety days allowed by statute for the filing of the statement for a lien, whether the statement be filed within that time or not: Squier v. Parks, 56-407; Dimmick v. Hinkley, 57-757.

Failure to file a statement does not defeat the lien as against the owner: Kidd v. Wilson, 23-464; Taylor v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 4 Dillon, 570.

An incumbrancer acquiring a lien upon the property within the ninety days allowed for filing a statement for a lien takes subject to the mechanic's lien, though no statement thereof has been previously filed; until the expiration of the ninety days no record notice of a mechanic's lien is necessary: Evans v. Tripp, 35-371; Lamb v. Hanneman, 40-41.

Judgment lien: Failure to file a statement for a lien within the ninety days allowed by statute will not defeat the lien as against a judgment creditor whose judgment was rendered after the commencement of the improvement and before the expiration of the ninety days: Curtis v. Broadwell, 66-662.

Notice: By failing to file his claim within the time provided by statute, the claimant loses his preference or priority over a purchaser or incumbrancer whose rights have accrued subsequently to the time within which the statement is directed to be filed, and who had no actual notice of the claim: Noel v. Temple, 12-276.

Notice to officer of corporation: A corporation purchasing a railroad at a foreclosure sale, held not to be affected with a notice of the claim for labor and material furnished prior to the mortgage under which the sale was had, but which had not been filed as a lien, although such claim appeared on the books of the receiver of the road, who afterwards became an officer of the corporation purchasing: Bear v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 48-619.

Burden of proof: As between a party claiming a mechanic's lien, who has not filed his statement until after the expiration of the ninety days allowed therefor, and a prior mortgagee whose mortgage was not executed until after the expiration of such period, the burden of proving that the mortgagee had notice at the time of taking his mortgage of the existence of a mechanic's lien is upon the person claiming such lien: Hoskins v. Carter, 66-638.

So a person claiming a mechanic's lien upon an open account has the burden of showing that his statement was filed within the ninety days, or that the mortgagee taking his mortgage after the expiration of the ninety days had notice at the time of the execution of the mortgage: Ibid.

Purchaser for value: A lien filed after the expiration of the ninety days cannot be enforced against one purchasing after the ninety days without notice, even though he has made no actual payment, but only executed his note for the purchase price: Weston v. Dunlap, 50-183.

3315. Notice by subcontractor. 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 7. To preserve his lien as against the owner and to prevent payments by the latter to the principal contractor or to intermediate subcontractors, but for no other purpose, the subcontractor must, within the thirty days as provided in section six [§ 3314] serve upon such owner, his agent or trustee, a written notice of the filing of said claim, which notices may be served by any sheriff or constable, or other person; and if the party to be served, his agent or trustee, is out of the county wherein the property is situated a return of that fact by the officers shall constitute sufficient service from and after it is filed with the clerk. But the lien of the subcontractor may at any time be vacated and discharged by the owner, contractor, or intermediate subcontractor, filed [filing] with the clerk of the said district court a bond in twice the amount of the sum for which the mechanic's lien is claimed and filed with two or more sureties to be approved by the clerk, conditioned for the payment of any sum for which the mechanic may obtain judgment upon the demand of which such statement or account has been filed. But if no claim for a lien is filed within the periods hereinbefore provided and the notice thereof is not served, or if such thing being done and the bond as above provided is filed, then the owner or contractor may thereafter proceed, make payments and adjust their claims, without regard to the lien of the subcontractor, and nothing in this act contained shall be construed to require the owner to pay a greater amount or in any other manner, or at earlier dates than those provided in his contract. But the liens created by this act are for the full enforcement thereof for the use and benefit of the holders of said liens. [C., '73, § 2131; 15 G. A., ch. 49; 13 G. A., ch. 140, § 1.]

The provisions of the statutes requiring notice to the owner by the subcontractor are intended to protect the owner from the payment of any sum greater than that contemplated in his contract. The lien of the subcontractor can be enforced against any sum due from the owner at the time of service of the notice provided for or thereafter becoming due under the contract: Cutler v. McCormick, 48-406; Brooks v. Railway Co., 101 U. S., 443.

Such notice should be in writing: Jeure v. Perkins, 29-262.

A laborer employed by a subcontractor cannot enforce a lien except so far as the contractor may be indebted to the subcontractor, even though the owner be still indebted to the contractor: Utter v. Crane, 37-631.

In the absence of an averment that something is due from the subcontractor to the laborer claiming a lien, the latter cannot recover in an action to foreclose his mechanic's lien as against the owner: Stubbs v. Clarinda, C. S. & S. W. R. Co., 62-280.

The owner cannot be made liable to a subcontractor in any other manner than he is, under his contract, liable to the principal contractor, and if, by his contract, the indebtedness is to be satisfied in property, the subcontractor is bound by such arrangement: Kilbourne v. Jennings, 38-533.

Where the contract between the owner and contractor stipulates that a claim by the owner against the contractor for professional services shall be accepted as part payment on such contract, such agreement is binding upon the subcontractor: Ewing v. Folsom, 67-65.

Where the contractor has the right under his contract to take note and mortgage in part payment of his claim, and does so, the sub-contractor cannot claim a lien inconsistent with the exercise of such a right by the contractor: Jones, etc., Lumber Co. v. Murphy, 64-165.

If the principal contractor by the terms of his contract is entitled to compensation in full before the work is completed, and this compensation is fully paid to him before that time, and without any notice of claims for liens, no liens can be enforced against the property owner or the property: Roland v. Centerville, M. & A. R. Co., 61-380; Nash v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 62-49.

If a subcontractor stand by and permit the owner to make full payment to the contractor without asserting his claim he will be estopped from afterward setting up a claim for a lien: Vieeland v. Ellsworth, 71-347.

The subcontractor is chargeable with notice of the contract between the owner and the principal contractor, and is bound by any payments made, even within the thirty days given him by statute to file his lien, if such payments are made according to the terms of the contract: Stewart v. Wright, 52-335.

But when the contract between the owner and contractor provides that subcontractors shall be paid by orders drawn by the contractor on the owner, and the owner knows that subcontractors have furnished material, he is liable for any liens of subcontractors of which he is duly notified before the expiration of the thirty days, although previous to the expiration of that period he has paid the contractor without actual knowledge of the indebtedness of the contractor to such subcontractor: Winter v. Hudson, 54-376.

Where an owner seeks to escape liability to a subcontractor of whose claim he has notice within the thirty days, on the ground that, before notice of such claim, he had settled with such contractor in accordance with the terms of his contract, the question as to whether he is to be protected in having made such settlement with the contractor is determined by whether he could probably, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, have discovered that the subcontractor was entitled to a lien; and where it appeared that the owner knew that the contractor had to buy material, although he did not know from whom he bought it, held, that if he might have ascertained that fact from inquiry, he should have done so, and would not be protected: Gilchrist v. Anderson, 59-274; Martin v. Morgan, 64-270.

It appearing that the owner of property before making the last payment under a contract had knowledge that the contractor had procured the materials used from the plaintiff, held, that as such owner could, in the exercise of ordinary care, have obtained knowledge of plaintiff's claim by inquiring whether the material had been paid for, the subcontractor might have his lien for materials furnished: Fay v. Orison, 60-136.

The court, liberally construing the statute so as to protect the owner, who in good faith pays the contractor within the thirty days in accordance with the agreement between them, has held that such payment to the contractor, made without knowledge of the claim of the subcontractor, will defeat the lien of the latter; but that if payment is made within the thirty days, with knowledge of the subcontractor's claim, even though such knowledge be merely through verbal notice, the lien of the subcontractor is not defeated: Andrews v. Burdick, 62-714.

Delay in the completion of the work under a contract, with acquiescence of the owner, will delay the time of the payment until the work is done and accepted. Where the contract provides for payment at the completion of the work, in case no time is fixed for payment, the price becomes due when the building as contracted is completed and accepted: Ibid.

Notwithstanding no notice has been served by the subcontractor before payment under the contract, and within the thirty days, the owner is not justified, if he has knowledge of the labor and material having been furnished by a subcontractor, or has knowledge of facts which should put him upon inquiry in making payment, and he is not thereby relieved from liability to the subcontractor: Othmer v. Clifton, 69-656; Chicago Lumber Co. v. Woodside, 71-359.

Where payments are made in strict accordance with the contract prior to the filing of the lien by a subcontractor or material-man, or service of notice that a lien is claimed, the owner is not liable for material purchased merely upon knowledge that the contractor had procured material from some person unknown unless it is stipulated in the contract that he has a right to pay liens of subcontractors or material-men: Fullerton Lumber Co. v. Osborn, 72-472.

It is immaterial whether such payment is made directly to the contractor or to other subcontractors who might establish liens if they had not been paid: Ibid.

After the expiration of the thirty days, if no notice be served upon the owner by a subcontractor, he may, of course, proceed to pay off the contractor, whatever his knowledge may be as to the claims of such subcontractor, for he will be justified in assuming that the right to the lien is waived: Jones, etc., Lumber Co. v. Murphy, 64-165.

Where a contractor is under obligation to pay all subcontractors, and the owner has paid such contractor in full according to the contract, a subcontractor who has served no notice of claim for a lien upon the owner until after the settlement and expiration of the time given by statute cannot recover from such owner: Robinson v. State Ins. Co., 55-489.

If the owner is not served with "written notice of the filing of said claim" he is not affected thereby, whatever notice he may have otherwise: Lounsbury v. Iowa, M. & N. P. R. Co., 49-255.

Where a subcontractor undertakes to enforce a lien against the owner he should show in his petition such indebtedness on the part of the owner to the contractor, either at the time the subcontractor's account commenced, or later, as will justify a court in decreeing a lien: Martin v. Morgan, 64-270.

Where the contractor gave bond for the discharge of his contract, and the owner paid him in full before the expiration of the time for filing liens by subcontractors, and was afterwards compelled to pay additional sums to satisfy such liens, held, that the owner could not recover such additional sums from the sureties on the contractor's bond, for the reason that the owner was guilty of laches in paying the contractor until the time for filing subcontractor's liens had expired: Lucas County v. Roberts, 49-159.

A failure to give a copy of the settlement to the owner and contractor at the time of performing the work, as required by a former statute, would not defeat the laborer's lien, the filing of the claim for a lien, which includes a copy of the statement, being sufficient notice to them: Bundy v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 49-207.

Under the same statute, also, held, that a lien claimed by a subcontractor upon the making and giving to the owner of his own statement could not be enforced when it appeared that the contractor had not refused to make such statement: Mcars v. Shobbs, 45-675.

3316. Subcontractor's claim, after thirty days. 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 8. A subcontractor may at any time after the expiration of said thirty days, file his claim for a mechanic's lien, with the clerk of the district court, as hereinbefore provided, and given written notice thereof to the owner, his agent or trustee, as provided in section seven [§ 3315], and from and after the service of such notice his lien shall have the same force and effect, and be prosecuted or vacated by bond, as if filed within the thirty days; but shall be enforced against the property or upon the bond, if given by the owner only to the extent of the balance due from the owner to the contractor at the time of the service of such notice upon the owner, his agent or trustee. But if in such case the bond is given by the contractor or person contracting with the subcontractor filing the claim for a lien, such bond shall be enforced to the full extent of the amount found due the subcontractor. [C., '73, § 2133; 15 G. A., ch. 49; 13 G. A., ch. 140, § 1.]

See notes to preceding section.

3317. Priority. 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 9. The mechanic's lien provided for by this statute shall take priority as follows:

First. As between persons claiming mechanic's liens upon the same property, according to the order of the filing of the statements and accounts therefor.

Second. They shall take priority to all garnishments upon the person of the owner for the contract debt, made prior or subsequent to the commencement of the furnishing of the material or performance of the labor, without regard to the date of filing the claim for mechanic's lien.

Third. They shall be preferred to all other liens and incumbrances which may be attached to or upon such building, erection or other improvements, or either of them, and to the land upon which they are situated, made subsequent to the commencement of said building, erection or other improvement. Provided, that the rights of purchasers, incumbrance[r]s and other persons, who acquire interests in good faith for valuable consideration, and without notice after the expiration of the time for filing claims for liens as provided in section six [§ 3314], shall be prior and paramount to the claims of all contractors or subcontractors, who have not, at the date such rights and interests were acquired, filed their claims for mechanics' liens.

Fourth. The liens for the things aforesaid or the work, including those for additions, repairs and betterments, shall attach to the buildings, erections or improvements for which they were furnished or done, in preference to any prior lien or incumbrance or mortgage upon the land upon which such erection, building, or improvement belongs, or is erected or put. If such material was furnished or labor performed in the erection or construction of an original and independent building, erection, or other improvement commenced since the attaching or execution of such prior lien, incumbrance, or mortgage, the court may in its discretion order and direct such building, erection, or improvement to be separately sold under execution, and the purchaser may remove the same within such reasonable time as the court may fix. But if in the discretion of the court such building should not be separately sold, the court shall take an account and ascertain the separate values of the land, and the erection, building, or other improvement, and distribute the proceeds of sale so as to secure to the prior mortgage or other lien, priority upon the land, and to the mechanic's lien, priority upon the building, erection, or other improvement. If the material furnished or labor performed was for addition to, repairs of, or betterments upon buildings, erections or other improvements, the court shall take an account of the values before such material was furnished or labor performed, and the enhanced value caused by such additions, repairs, or betterments, and, upon the sale of the premises, distribute the proceeds of sale so as to secure to the prior mortgage or lien priority upon the land and improvements as they existed prior to the attaching of the mechanic's lien, and to the mechanic's lien priority upon the enhanced value caused by such additions, repairs or betterments. In case the premises do not sell for more than sufficient to pay off the prior mortgage or other lien, the proceeds shall be applied on the prior mortgage or other liens. [C., '73, §§ 2139-41; R., §§ 1853-5; C., '51, § 981.]

Lien covers entire structure: Liens for material furnished or labor performed in the erection of a building attach in their order upon the whole structure, and not upon the particular part of the work performed or material furnished. So, if machinery is furnished to be attached to and used in the building, the person furnishing it acquires a lien upon the whole improvement, and does not retain a separate lien upon the machinery: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Slye, 45-615.

Leasehold interest: Where plaintiff furnished machinery to defendant to be attached to and used in connection with real property, of which defendant had possession under a verbal lease for five years, held, that plaintiff was entitled to a mechanic's lien on such interest, including the machinery, and might enforce such lien against an incumbrance executed within the ninety days after furnishing the machinery: Nordyke & Marmon Co. v. Hawkeye Woolen Mills Co., 53-521.

As to rights of lessor where a lien is sought to be enforced on improvements made by lessee, see Oswold v. Buckholz, 13-506, decided under former statutory provisions.

Portion of railway line: Where a contract for material was for a projected line, a part only of which was constructed, and a lien was claimed only on that part, held, that the road was not in such sense an entirety as that a lien on that part constructed might not be granted: Neulson v. Iowa Eastern R. Co., 51-184.

Priority over chattel mortgage: Where defendants, lessees of a mill under verbal lease for five years, put in machinery and fixtures, and afterward gave a chattel mortgage thereon, held, that the plaintiffs who furnished such machinery, and filed their statement within proper time, had a mechanic's lien upon such machinery, and were prior to the claims of the chattel mortgagee. Although, as between lessor and lessee, such machinery and fixtures were chattel property, yet in connection with a leasehold interest they were subject to the lien: Nordyke & Marmon Co. v. Hawkeye Woolen Mills Co., 53-521.

Mortgage: Priority of a mechanic's lien over the lien of a mortgage cannot be maintained unless it appears that the person with whom the contract was made was the owner of the property. Proof of possession alone will not be sufficient: Dierks v. Walrod, 66-354.

Interest and attorneys' fees: Where the contract on which a lien is claimed does not provide for interest or attorneys' fees, the parties cannot enter into a contract covering such items which shall be binding upon a mortgage executed after the lien attaches and prior to the making of such supplemental contract: Bissell v. Lewis, 56-231.

Vendor's lien: If a party goes into possession of property subject to a vendor's lien, a mechanic's lien for material subsequently furnished for improvements does not take priority of the lien of the vendor: Logan v. Taylor, 20-297.

Under a statute giving priority to the mechanic's lien as to the improvements, a vendor's lien for purchase money takes priority as to the land, but as to the building erected is inferior to the mechanic's lien: Stockwell v. Carpenter, 27-119.

A mechanic's lien does not acquire priority over a mortgage given in renewal of a vendor's lien held prior to the time that the mechanic's lien accrues: Thorpe v. Durbon, 45-192.

Merger of lien: If the holder of a mechanic's lien buys in the property at judicial sale under his judgment on such lien, the lien is not merged so as to render it subordinate to an intervening mortgage: Delaware R. C. Co. v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co., 46-406.

When the lien attaches: The mechanic's lien attaches at the commencement of his work, and the time for notice expires ninety days from the conclusion thereof: Jones v. Swan, 21-181; Delaware R. Const. Co. v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co., 46-406, 413.

The commencement of a building is the first work done upon the ground which is made the foundation thereof, and is to form part of the work suitable and necessary for its construction: Conrad v. Starr, 50-470.

Priority over liens acquired during progress of work: The mechanic's lien dates from the day that he commences work under his contract, or furnishes material, and attaches for all the work done and material furnished under such contract, whether before or after liens subsequently acquired by third persons, provided the work or delivery was commenced before: Monroe v. West, 12-119.

A mechanic's lien may attach under a contract to complete a partially erected building, which shall be superior to a prior mortgage executed upon the premises at a time when the building is in an incomplete condition: Bissell v. Lewis, 56-231.

A mechanic's lien has priority over a mortgage which was executed subsequently to the commencement of any building, erection or other improvement, though the particular work for which the lien is claimed was subsequent to such mortgage: Neilson v. Iowa Eastern R. Co., 44-71; Taylor v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 4 Dillon, 570; Myer v. Construction Co., 100 U. S., 457; Brooks v. Railway Co., 101 U. S., 443; Meyer v. Hornby, 101 U. S., 728.

The statement being filed within ninety days from the furnishing of the last item, the whole being furnished under one contract, a lien accrues binding the property, as against the mortgagee, for all the material furnished under the contract from the time of the furnishing of the first item, and such lien will be prior to a mortgage executed after the furnishing of the first item: Iowa Mortgage Co. v. Shanquest, 70-124.

Where one mortgage was executed less than ninety days after the last item, and a subsequent mortgage more than ninety days after such item, the last mortgage was held to be the first lien to the extent of the mechanic's lien, the measure of the rights of the first mortgage being a lien upon the property after the satisfaction of the mechanic's lien: Gilbert v. Tharp, 72-714.

Lien upon improvements: Under the provision that the lien should attach to the building, erection or improvement for which they were furnished or done, in preference to any prior lien or incumbrance upon the land upon which the same was erected or put, and that the person enforcing the lien might have the building, erection, or other improvement sold under execution, held, that the word improvement there used referred to an independent erection upon the land, and not to an addition or betterment of the building, and that the lien for such addition or betterment was subject to a prior mortgage on the premises: Getchell v. Allen, 34-559; O'Brien v. Pettis, 42-293.

And that a party furnishing material, etc., for the repair and enlargement of a building would get a lien subject to any liens already existing thereon, even though but little of the original building remained: Equitable L. Ins. Co. v. Slye, 45-615.

Under the same statute, held, that a mechanic's lien for repairs, such as new piers and abutments in a railroad bridge, which become integral parts of the road, would not attach to such bridge, piers, etc., as prior to a mortgage previously given on the whole road: Bear v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 48-619.

If a prior mortgage applies to land, rolling stock and buildings of a railroad, any lien of mechanics or material-men for repairs attaches from the time repairs are begun, and attaches against the prior mortgagee at the same time as against the owner. Repairs on a completed railroad do not give rise to a lien which will override a prior mortgage: Taylor v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co., 4 Dillon, 570 and 579.

The statutory provision for a lien upon improvements superior to the lien of a prior mortgage upon the land has no application where the mortgage has been foreclosed and the premises sold thereunder before the materials for which the lien is claimed have been furnished; in such case the statutory right to redeem is the only right which can be enforced: Shepardson v. Johnson, 60-239.

The provision giving priority of lien as to improvements, held not to be limited in its application to cases where improvements are made by a tenant on leased premises: Stockwell v. Carpenter, 27-119.

Sale and removal of improvements: Under a statute providing for enforcing the priority of a mechanic's lien as to the improvement by sale and removal, that is the only method allowed, and if the nature of the improvement is such that it cannot be removed, the lien of the mechanic must be postponed to that of prior incumbrances upon the land: Conrad v. Starr, 50-470.

Where, in a suit to foreclose a mortgage, certain parties were made defendants who had mechanics' liens upon buildings erected subsequently to the giving of the mortgage, and where the rights of all the parties accrued under the Revision, by which the rights of the holder of a mechanic's lien were to be determined by an action at law, held, that it was erroneous to decree a sale of the land and buildings together and the payment of a certain portion of the proceeds to the holders of the mechanics' liens. It seems that the same would be true under the Code, although the proceedings to enforce a mechanic's lien are now to be brought in equity: Brodt v. Kohkar, 48-36.

One asking the sale and removal of a building has the burden of showing that it would be proper, in view of all the circumstances: Miller v. Seal, 71-392.

Where the mechanic's lien attaches to the land as well as the building, and there is no prior incumbrance, it is the right of the owner to have the whole property sold for the satisfaction of the debt so that he may have opportunity of redeeming as in other cases of sale of real property, and it is error in such case to order the sale of the building alone, and its removal from the premises: Early v. Burt, 68-716.

Where a party had two liens, one prior and the other equal to a lien held by another, and foreclosed, making the other lienholder a party, and it was decreed that the plaintiff should take the property, if not redeemed, subject to the other lien, held, that the other lienholder should have the same right to redeem, and for the same time, as if not made a party, and that the latter had not a right to elect, instead of redeeming, to claim a proportionate share of the amount for which the property was sold above the amount of the first lien, the pleadings not being framed with a view to such relief: Phelps v. Pope, 53-691.

Sale upon execution against a lot and the building thereon, under a judgment on a mechanic's lien, held improper where the lien was upon building alone: Wilson v. Reuter, 29-176.

Apportionment: If the premises do not sell for more than enough to pay for the prior mortgage or other lien, the accounting or distribution of proceeds of sale is not required, and the entire proceeds are to be applied to the prior lien: German Bank v. Schloth, 59-316; Miller v. Seal, 71-392.

Were it not for the provision giving the mechanic's lien priority as to the improvement, and providing for an apportionment of the proceeds, where the court does not deem it expedient to allow the removal of the building or improvement, a prior mortgage would prevail in all cases against a subsequent mechanic's lien for buildings or improvements, which become a part of the realty, under the plain language of the statute. The same rule applies alike to improvements, betterments or additions to buildings, and to new and independent structures, and if the amount for which the property sells does not exceed the amount of the lien of the prior mortgage, no apportionment between the mortgagee and the holder of a mechanic's lien is required: Curtis v. Broadwell, 66-662.

In a case where the statute provided for enforcement of the mechanic's lien as a superior claim on the improvement as against a prior mortgage upon the land only by removal of the improvement, held, that it was error to decree the sale of the property as an entirety and the apportionment of the proceeds: First Nat. Bank v. Elmora, 52-541.

3318. Definition of "owner." 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 10. Every person for whose immediate use or benefit any building, erection, or other improvement is made, having the capacity to contract, including guardians of minors, or other persons, shall be included in the word "owner" thereof. [C., '73, § 2144; R., § 1866; C., '51, § 982.]

A party in possession under contract of purchase, or a bond for a deed, is an "owner" as here contemplated: Mouroe v. West, 12-119;

Stockwell v. Carpenter, 27-119. And see notes to § 3311.

3319. Definition of "subcontractor." 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 11. All persons furnishing things or doing work provided for by this act shall be considered subcontractors, except such as have therefor contracts directly with the owner, proprietor, his agent or trustee. [C., '73, § 2146; R., § 1871.]

A laborer employed by a subcontractor, when the latter has been paid in full by the contractor, cannot enforce a lien against the owner, although such owner be still indebted to the contractor. The rights of the parties in such cases are the same as though the subcontractor had contracted directly with the owner: Utter v. Crane, 37-631.

3320. Lien; how enforced. 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 12. Any person having filed a claim for a lien by virtue of this chapter, may at once bring suit to enforce the same, or upon any bond given in lieu thereof, in the district [or circuit] court of the county wherein the property is situated. [C., '73, § 2142; R., § 1856; 15 G. A., ch. 44.]

Foreclosure; petition: A mechanic's lien should not be decreed where the pleadings contain no averment that plaintiff furnished material or performed work for or upon the improvement, or that anything is due: Roberts v. Campbell, 53-675.

Redemption: A party who is entitled to a lien at the time of the foreclosure of a previous lien, and is not made party to such foreclosure, may maintain an equitable action to redeem from such prior lien; and this is true although the claim for a lien be not filed before the bringing of the action to foreclose the prior lien. So held where the action to foreclose was brought within the ninety days in which the mechanic might have filed his lien, and his lien was afterward filed within the ninety days: Jones v. Hartsock, 42-147.

Joinder of actions: It is improper in an action on a promissory note to allow an amendment joining therewith an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien, and in such case plaintiff may be required to elect on which cause of action he will proceed, or on his failure to do so the amendment may be stricken from the ides: Sweetzer v. Harwick, 67-488.

Parties: Where the owner of property on which there is a mechanic's lien conveys it, taking a mortgage to secure the purchase money, and dies, his administrator and not the heir is the proper party defendant to a proceeding to enforce the lien. Where suit was brought to enforce a mechanic's lien against property which had been conveyed by the owner subject to the lien, and a mortgage was taken for the purchase money, the administrator of the grantor being party defendant, held, that judgment in that action would estop such administrator from selling the property under a judgment of foreclosure of the junior mortgage, he having failed to assert the rights of a mortgagee in the action enforcing the mechanic's lien: Shields v. Keys, 24-298.

The owner of the property is a necessary party to an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien: Keller v. Tracy, 11-530.

The principal contractor is a necessary defendant in an action by subcontractor against owner: Vreeland v. Ellsworth, 71-347.

In an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien against the mains, etc., of a water company, the city is a necessary party: Harrison, etc., Iron Co. v. Council Bluffs Water Works Co., 25 Fed. Rep., 170.

Where, as in the above case, the contract was made with a construction company, and assigned to the water company, held, that the construction company was not a necessary party: Ibid.

Where the holder of a lien prior to the mechanic's lien was made a party to the foreclosure thereof, held, that plaintiff should have been required to pay off such prior lien free from costs before proceeding with the sale of the property, and in the event of failure to pay within a time to be named the lien should have been declared barred: Millard v. West, 50-616.

Time for bringing action: Under a statute requiring that action to enforce a mechanic's lien be brought by the person claiming it within thirty days after service upon him of notice by owner or contractor requiring him to so proceed, held, that where an attempt to commence action within the thirty days was made, but the steps taken were not sufficient by reason of defect in the notice of the action, another notice served after the expiration of the thirty days, to which defendant appeared, would not constitute a compliance with the statutory requirement, and a lien could not be established in such action: Jones, etc., Lumber Co. v. Boggs, 63-589.

Change of statute: Where the statute as to the mode of enforcing mechanics' liens was changed, held, that liens arising prior to the change should be enforced in accordance with the previous statute: Brodie v. Rohkar, 48-36; Conrad v. Starr, 50-470.

Evidence: Where, in the statement and affidavit filed for the purpose of preserving a mechanic's lien, it was alleged that the brakings upon which the labor was performed were situated on certain described lands, and that the person against whom the lien was claimed owned said lands, and in an action to foreclose such lien such allegations were denied, introduction in evidence of the statement and affidavit without proof that the buildings therein referred to were situated on the land described, or that defendant owned such land, held not sufficient to entitle plaintiff to foreclosure of his lien: Hutton v. Maines, 68-650.

Evidence in a particular case held sufficient to identify the property on which the lien was claimed as that upon which the work for which the lien was claimed was performed: Pease v. Thompson, 67-70.

An appeal from the judgment establishing a mechanic's lien and the filing of a superseas bond do not destroy or impair the lien: Julien Gas-light Co. v. Hurley, 11-520.

Limitation of action: A failure to enforce the mechanic's lien until it is barred by the statute of limitations will not defeat the right of the lienholder upon the debt which he has against any person bound therefor: Black v. Howell, 56-630.

As to time for bringing action, see § 3734, and notes.

3321. Demand for bringing suit; assignment. 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 13. Upon the written demand of the owner, his agent or contractor, served on the person claiming the lien requiring him to commence suit to enforce such lien, such suit shall be commenced in thirty days thereafter, or the lien shall be forfeited. The mechanics' liens are assignable, and shall follow the assignment of the debt; and where such lien is for personal services, the same shall be exempt from execution, as now provided for such services. [15 G. A., ch. 44.]

Where an attempt to commence action within the thirty days was made, but the notice served was void because not stating the term at which defendant was required to appear, held, that another notice served after the expiration of the thirty days, to which defendant appeared, would not constitute a compliance with this section, and a lien could not be established in such action: Jones, etc., Lumber Co. v. Boggs, 63-589.

Before the enactment of the statutory provision that the lien shall be transferable and assignable, it was held that the assignment of the debt alone would not operate to transfer the lien: First Nat. Bank v. Day, 52-680.

Under the statutory provision making the lien assignable, it was held that the mere assignment by a subcontractor of an order for one instalment of his claim before the completion of his main contract did not carry with it the right to a lien for such portion: Merchant v. Otumwa Water Power Co., 54-451.

Under a statute declaring that the lien is assignable and shall follow the assignment of the debt, held, that it is the lien which is assignable and follows the debt, and not the mere right to a lien which the mechanic has not yet availed himself of by filing a claim therefor as required by statute: Brown v. Smith, 55-31; Langan v. Sankey, 55-52.

The drawing of a draft by the holder of a mechanic's lien, upon a person lawfully bound for the payment of the lien, which draft is transferred to a third person and accepted by the drawee, does not constitute an assignment to such third person of the lien: First Nat. Bank v. Day, 64-118.

3322. Duty of clerk. 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 14. The clerk of the district court shall indorse upon every account or statement the date of its filing, and make the abstract thereof in a book by him to be kept for that purpose, and properly indexed, containing the date of its filing, the name of the person filing the lien, the amount of the lien, the name of the person against whom the lien is filed, and a description of the property to be charged with the same. [C., '73, § 2138; R., § 1852.]

Under the provisions of Revision, § 1852, similar to this section, held, that the requirement that the clerk's abstract shall contain the name of the person against whose property the lien was filed really amounts to no more than that it shall contain the name of the person against whom the account was filed and the claim for lien was made, and that it did not require, by inference, the claim should state the name of the owner of the property against which the lien was claimed. Therefore, held, that where the person against whom the claim existed was dead, the claim for a lien was properly filed as against the administrator of his estate, without naming the heirs, who were owners of the property against which it was sought to establish the lien: Welch v. McGraff, 59-513.

3323. Acknowledgment of satisfaction. 16 G. A., ch. 100, § 15. Whenever a lien has been claimed by filing the same in the clerk's office, and is afterwards paid, the creditor shall acknowledge satisfaction thereof upon the proper book in such office, or otherwise, in writing; and if he neglect to do so for ten days after the demand, he shall forfeit and pay twenty-five dollars to the owner or contractor and be liable to any person injured, to the extent of his injury. [C., '73, § 2145; R., §§ 1867-9.]

LIENS UPON PROPERTY OF POLITICAL CORPORATIONS.

3324. By bondholder. 15 G. A., ch. 23, § 1. Where a corporation has issued bonds in payment of an indebtedness exceeding five per centum on the value of the taxable property of such corporation for labor upon, and materials furnished in the erection and furnishing a building and making improvements for such corporation, the holders of said bonds or any of them, including the assignees thereof, shall have a lien upon such building and furniture and fixtures therein, and upon the land of such corporation on which such building and improvements are situated to the amount of such indebtedness.

3325. Enforcement of lien. 15 G. A., ch. 23, § 2. Any person having a lien by virtue of this act may enforce the same by equitable proceedings in any district [or circuit] court of the county where the property is situated, at any time before the maturity of said bonds, as though the action was for the labor done and materials furnished and used in and about the erection of said building. All persons owning such bonds shall be made parties plaintiffs or defendants, and if the names of such owners are unknown they shall be made parties defendant as provided by section twenty-six hundred and twenty-two of the code [§ 3828]. The plaintiff shall set forth and the court shall ascertain and determine the entire amount of the indebtedness on such bonds and order that the property be sold to pay such indebtedness, and the proceeds of the sale shall be paid to the court to be by it distributed pro rata among the holders of such indebtedness; but no money judgment shall be rendered against such corporation, and the clerk shall not pay the proceeds of such sale to the holders of such indebtedness until they deliver him their bonds which shall be by him canceled.

This act is unconstitutional as making the corporations referred to liable in an amount exceeding the limit of indebtedness fixed by Const., art. 11, § 3: Mosher v. Independent School Dist., 44-122.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS OR BRIDGES.

3326. Claim of subcontractor. 20 G. A., ch. 179, § 1. Every mechanic, laborer or other person who as subcontractor shall perform labor upon, or furnish materials for the construction of any public building or bridge or other improvement not belonging to the state, shall have a valid claim against the public corporation constructing such building, bridge or other improvement for the value of such services and material, in an amount not in excess of the contract price to be paid for the building, bridge or other improvement, nor shall any such corporation be required to pay any such claim, at any time before, or in any manner different from that provided in the principal contract.

3327. How made. 20 G. A., ch. 179, § 2. Such claim shall be made by filing with the public officer through whose order the payment is to be made, an itemized and sworn statement of the demand within thirty days after the performance of the last labor, or the furnishing of the last portion of the material, and claims shall have priority in the order in which they shall be filed.

There is no proceeding authorized for subjecting the indebtedness of the county to the contractor to the claim of the subcontractor or laborer for work done upon a county building or bridge under the contract: Breneman v. Harvey, 70-479.

Under this section, held, that a statement filed after the expiration of thirty days would not entitle the party filing it to any lien: Ibid.

3328. How adjudicated. 20 G. A., ch. 179, § 3. Any party in interest may cause the adjudication as to the amount, validity, priority and mode and time of payment of such claim by equitable proceedings in any court having jurisdiction. In such case the court may assess a reasonable sum to be taxed as attorney's fees against the party failing in such action in favor of such corporation.

3329. Release of claim. 20 G. A., ch. 179, § 4. The contractor may at any time release such claim by filing with the treasurer of such corporation a bond, to such corporation, for the benefit of such claimants in sufficient penalty with sureties to be approved by such treasurer, conditioned for the payment of any sum which may be found due such claimant. And such contractor may prevent the filing of such claim by filing in like manner a bond conditioned for the payment of persons who may be entitled to file such claims. Suit may be brought on said bond by any claimant within one year after the cause of action accrues, and judgment shall be rendered against the principal and sureties for any amount due said claimant.

CHAPTER 9.

OF LIMITED PARTNERSHIP.

3330. Authorized. 2147. Limited partnerships for the transaction of any lawful business within the state, may be formed by two or more persons, upon the terms, with the rights and powers, and subject to the conditions and liabilities herein described. [R., § 1874; 9 G. A., ch. 128.]

3331. General and special partners. 2148. Such partnerships may consist of one or more persons who shall be called general partners, and who shall be responsible as general partners; and of one or more persons who shall contribute in actual cash a specific sum as capital who shall be called special partners, and shall not be liable for the debts of the partnership beyond the funds so contributed. [R., § 1875.]

3332. Powers. 2149. The general partners only shall be authorized to transact business and sign for the partnership, and bind the same. [R., § 1876.]

3333. Certificate signed; what it must contain. 2150. The persons desirous of forming such partnership, shall make and severally sign a certificate, which shall contain:

1. The name or firm under which such partnership is to be conducted;
2. The general nature of the business intended to be transacted;
3. The names of all general and special partners interested therein, distinguishing which are general and which are special partners, and their respective places of residence;
4. The amount of capital which each special partner shall have contributed to the common stock;
5. The period at which the partnership is to commence, and the period at which it will terminate. [R., § 1877.]

3334. Certificate acknowledged. 2151. The certificate shall be acknowledged by the several persons signing the same, before some one authorized to administer oaths and take acknowledgment of deeds. [R., § 1878.]

3335. Filed and recorded. 2152. The certificate so acknowledged shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the district court of the county in which the principal place of business of the partnership is situated, and shall be recorded by him in a book to be kept for that purpose. If the partnership shall have places of business situated in different counties, a transcript of the certificate, and of the acknowledgment thereof duly certified by the clerk in whose office it shall be filed, shall be filed and recorded in like manner in the office of the clerk of the district court of every such county. [R., § 1879.]

3336. Affidavit attached. 2153. At the time of filing the original certificate, an affidavit of one or more of the general partners shall be attached thereto, stating that the sums specified in the certificate to have been contributed by each of the special partners, had been actually and in good faith paid in cash. [R., § 1880.]

3337. Effect of false statement. 2154. If any false statement be made in such certificate or affidavit, all the persons interested in such partnership shall be liable for all the engagements thereof as general partners. [R., § 1881.]

3338. Publication. 2155; 19 G. A., ch. 8. When the certificate and affidavit is filed, there shall be published forthwith, for six weeks, in two newspapers published in the senatorial district in which the business is carried on, to be designated by the clerk of the district court of the county where the certificate and affidavit is filed, a notice which shall contain the facts required to be set out in said certificate; and if such publication is not made, the partnership shall be deemed general. [R., § 1882.]

3339. Affidavits of publication. 2156. Affidavits of the publication of such notice by the printers of the newspapers in which the same shall be published, may be filed with the clerk of the district court directing the same, and shall be evidence of the facts therein contained. [R., § 1883.]
