Dr. Glendenning Is Dead.

The Loved and Revered Old Doctor, Minister and Honored Citizen Passes Away.

Ne'er to the mansions where the virtuous rest, Since their foundation, came a worthier guest Nor to the bowers of bliss was e'er conveyed A nobler spirit or a gentler shade.

Dr. Glendenning, whose probable fatal illness was noted in last week's TRIBUNE died at his home on East Third street about 6 o'clock Thursday evening. He had been unconscious since Tuesday with little change except the gradual weakening of his life's forces, until Thursday evening when he passed away as gently and painlessly as a child falls to sleep. Although his last illness had been brief his thousands of friends in this community among whom he had been a conspicuous figure for nearly half a century had noted with sorrow and foreboding his falling strength and the near approach of the day when he would be called from among them.

To the hosts of these friends throughout this section of country, with whom he has been intimately associated as a physician and a minister of the gospel, to whose homes he was always welcome, his death comes as a personal bereavement and loss. To all these people he had ever been a sympathizing friend and a wise counsellor. To all who knew him his stainless private and public life was an inspiration and his high character one to be emulated. To few men are given the opportunity for doing good as were given to Dr. Glendenning, and fewer still are those who would have used them to their utmost nobly and unselfishly. On all questions and on matters affecting the interest and welfare of the community, he saw and divinely divine the right and the truth and he held his hand.

Dr. Glendenning believed and was enough for them, and he was seldom wrong. Only a few weeks ago he was met on the street by a prominent old citizen older than the good Dr. residing a few miles from Lineville. He grasped the Dr. by the hand and said very earnestly: "Dr. Glendenning, I have known you for more than fifty years. In at the close of the services where they lay embowered in a profusion of beautiful and fragrant flowers and were viewed by the people as they filed from the church. Few eyes were undimmed by tears as they looked for the last time upon the form of the venerable doctor whom they had known so long and loved so well. At the close of the church services the remains were taken in charge by the Masonic fraternity and conveyed to Evergreen Cemetery, followed by a large procession of carriages and people, where they were tenderly laid to rest with the ceremonies of the order. Dr. Glendenning had attained to the rank of Royal Arch Mason. The following beautiful closing words of the Worshipful Master found a warmest response in every heart of the throng of mourning relatives and friends who surrounded the open grave:

"May the earliest buds of spring unfold their beauties over this, your resting place, and here may the sweetness of summer's last rose linger longest! Though the cold blasts of Autumn may lay them in the dust and for a time destroy their loveliness, yet the destruction is not final, and in the springtime they shall surely bloom again. So in the bright morning of the world's resurrection, you shall spring again into newness of life, and expand in immortal beauty, in realms beyond the skies. Until then, dear brother, until then, farewell!"

Elijah Glendenning, was born in Rush county, Indiana, August 31, 1831, a son of John and Elizabeth Glendenning, both deceased, the father a native of Rush county, Mo., and the mother born in Tennessee. His grandfather, Henry Glendenning, was a soldier in the war of 1812, his great grandfather being a native of Scotland, coming to America when a young man, and fought in the Revolutionary War. His paternal grandfather, Elijah Carters who fought the Indians and built the fort at Carter's Station, Tennessee, in the early history of the United States. E. Glendenning was reared on a farm, receiving his education at the common schools of his neighborhood, and at Grand River College at Edinburg, Mo. he having come to Gentry county, Mo. with his parents in 1841. After leaving college he was an itinerant minister of heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, friends and neighbors in the loss of as good, kind and great a friend and brother as we ever knew.

No Paper Next Week.

All hands connected with the TRIBUNE will take a holiday vacation next week and no paper will be issued from the office. The next issue will be published on the 7th.

Misses Grace and Lottie Weatherford arrived from Kirksville last Saturday to spend the holidays with their parents, Rev. and Mrs. L. Weatherford.

Miss Emma Henderson arrived Saturday from La Plata, Mo. for a holiday visit, a couple of weeks with her mother and Lineville friends. Miss Henderson is teacher in the seventh grade of the La Plata public schools.

Mrs. Nora Henry, accompanied by her three boys, departed Monday to join her husband I. P. Henry, at Enid, Okla., who has been there several weeks engaged in the meat market business. We hope they will thrive and prosper in their new home.

Among the home comers for the holiday season is Mr. Guynn Hawkins, of Des Moines, who arrived last Sunday afternoon on a visit to his mother and sister and many Lineville friends. Guynn has a good position as salesman in Cleveland's retail grocery establishment, one of the largest concerns in the city.

Virge Moore bought Jack Cress' half blood Shetland pony last week as a Christmas present for his two bright little sons Verne and Wayne. Jack sent the pony out to Mr. Moore's farm to have him wintered and the boys fell in love with the gentle little fellow and held him up to buy for their own.

 "Dr. Glendenning, I have known you for more than fifty years. In those early days you believed that human slavery was wrong. I was born in the South and did not agree with you. You believed that the sale and use of intoxicating liquor as a beverage was wrong, and I did not agree with you in that. But now I can see clearly that in both you were right and I was wrong." Several citizens witnessed this incident and nothing could have more impressively illustrated the steadfast adherence to right principles which was the key note of Dr. Glendenning's life and character. It was a tribute and an homage paid by an old man to another in acknowledgement of the clearer vision than his own to see and divine the right. Thus it is that such a life leaves the world better for having been lived.

In his ideal home he was the central
 viser, rather than the arbitrary master and his death is the rending of the tenderest ties of love and affection.
 The profound sympathy of the community goes to those who were nearest and dearest to him, and share with them their sorrow and grief.

The funeral was held on Sunday having been delayed awaiting the arrival of Miss Lulu Miles from Boise, Idaho, a grand daughter of the deceased. Family services were held at the residence at 10 a. m. only the family and relatives and a few immediate friends being present. Presiding Elder Miller, of Osceola, who arrived on Saturday assisted by Rev. Stevenson, pastor of the Lineville M. E.
 Church, conducted these services. At the close the remains were escorted to the M. E. Church where public funeral services were held, conducted by the Presiding Elder assisted by Rev.
 Stevenson and Hyatt. The church was filled to its fullest capacity, large numbers being present from the surrounding country and neighboring towns, among them several physicians who came to pay their earnest tributes of respect to the life and character of the deceased. The remains were conveyed to the vestibule
