DEATH OF DR. SHRADER

PROFESSOR HERE FOR MANY YEARS.

Was One Time Dean of Medical College—A Veteran of Civil War.

Dr. J. C. Shrader died yesterday morning at three o'clock.

He had been in feeble health for several months, but his illness did not become acute until about ten days ago.

The funeral services will be held on Thursday at 2:00 p. m., from the family residence.

Dr. Shrader had been connected with the University for many years,
term of service going back to 1869.
He passed through the Civil War,
entering as captain of a company.

He was later promoted to be assistant surgeon, and later to be surgeon of his regiment. After the war he was first president of the 220th Iowa Association.

Coming to Iowa City, Dr. Shrader became one of the organizers of the College of Medicine. He was one of its first professors, and for a time
was Curator of the Anatomical Museum. From 1891 to 1895 he was Dean of the College. His active work continued until 1898, when he became Professor Emeritus. In addition to his many professional honors he was for a time State Senator from this district. He was also identified with many of the solid financial institutions
of this city.

In all the wide field in which his activities were felt, Dr. Shrader's influence was beneficial. He helped to make the world better. His death is deeply mourned by the University; she will honor his memory
as being one of the men who have made her what she is.

W. F. F. Junger, Ph. G. '99, of Reinbeck, Ia., who has property in Cana-

likewise now is the time to subscribe.

Dr. John Clinton Shrader, a physician and surgeon of much more than statewide fame, died in Iowa City on the morning of October 30, aged 76 years, 6 months and 6 days. He was a native of the Buckeye state, a graduate of the famous Marletta, Ohio, Academy, and he brought to Iowa in his early manhood a strong, healthy body, an untiring energy and an acute, well disciplined mind. In 1862 he was commissioned captain of Co. H, 22nd Iowa volunteers, and later was made regimental surgeon. He served with distinction as operating surgeon under Gen. Phil Sheridan in the Shenandoah campaign and was in all its engagements. We are here quoting from the Iowa City Daily Republican which further says: "He was hospital director at Manchester and proved his valor at Port Gibson, Champion Hill, Black River Bridge and at the capture of Vicksburg, as well as at many other points." At the close of the war he came to Iowa City where he built up an extensive practice. His medical and surgical diplomas were from the Keokuk, Iowa, College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Long Island, N. Y., College Hospitals at both of which institutions he graduated at the head of his classes. He was one of the organizers of the Medical department of the Iowa State University, a leading professor in that college for 28 years, during much of which time he was dean of the faculty. His high standing in the profession is shown by the fact that he held honored membership in the British Medical Association, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and had been—or was at the time of his death—president of the Iowa Medical Society, the State Board of Health and State Medical Examiners. Dr. Shrader was an uncle of Mrs. Dr. Hurd of this city and of Druggist H. E. Gray of Keosauqua. He has visited Northwood on several occasions, always on errands

Our subject was at Illinois College, in Jacksonville, Illinois, two or three years, but did not graduate, and left in 1860. His desire was to acquire a business education, and not long after returning from Jacksonville he secured a situation in the Des Moines County Savings Bank, an institution doing business in Burlington under the management of W. W. White. In 1864 he received the appointment of assistant treasurer of the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad Company, where he remained until the spring of 1866, when he became cashier of the National State Bank, at that time under the presidency of his father's old partner, F. W. Brooks. After the death of Mr. Brooks, in the spring of 1869, Mr. E. D. Rand was elected president, and he was succeeded by Mr. Peasley in the spring of 1871. Mr. Peasley went into the banking business from choice, and has been very successful, and though still young, takes rank as one of the leading bankers and financiers of the state.

In politics, he is a republican, though he is in no wise a politician, never having filled a public office.

He was married on the 10th of October, 1866, to Miss Louisa S. Green, of Lawrenceville, New Jersey.

JOHN C. SHRADER, M.D.,

IOWA CITY.

WHILE the lives of self-made men seldom abound in sensational incidents, there is an energy, a perseverance and an underflow of character that lends them a charm, an attractiveness and worth that merits admiration and careful thought. We need not look among those of royal blood to find lives worthy to be recorded. Among us they are the outcome of a stern conflict with opportunities made and conquered to oneself, and are at once the support and the proud result of this grand American civilization.

Dr. Shrader began his career a poor boy, and has by his own effort risen to an honorable position both in professional and social life. He was born in Washington county, Ohio, on the 24th of April, 1830. His parents were John and Eliza Ann (Melvin) Shrader. His mother was a descendant of the old Dearborn family, of New Hampshire. John's boyhood was spent on the farm, and he was raised, as were the families of that day, to habits of economy and industry. Owing to the illness of his father, on him, as eldest son, mainly devolved the support of the family, which denied him much opportunity for early education. A college education was begun, but abandoned for lack of means to complete it. But native talent and earnest study in later life have made the lack of college training imperceptible, and placed him the compeer of men with the culture of schools.

While young, he had the desire to devote himself to the profession of medicine, and to this end all his energies were bent. While at home he pursued his studies under the direction of Dr. John Hemphill, and filled the hours between teaching with studious application to his work of medicine. Removing to the west in 1855, he located in Linn county, Iowa, and engaged in farming and stock raising. This he continued successfully till the crisis of 1857-8, which wrecked him along with thousands of others in the west. Leaving the farm, he assisted in the organization of Western College, in Linn county, afterward becoming one of its first instructors. His new occupation afforded him the opportunity of resuming his studies with renewed vigor, under the direction at first of Dr. Crouse, and afterward under that of Dr. Parmenter, then a professor in the college. He resigned his place in the school, attended medical lectures, and was fairly at work in a rapidly increasing business when he was commissioned, by Governor Kirkwood, captain in the 22d Iowa Infantry (Colonel Stone's regiment). While serving with his regiment as captain he was detailed for duty on General Fitz-Henry Warren's staff, and served for a time in 1864 as provost-marshal general of Texas. Returning to his regiment, he was soon afterward appointed its surgeon, with rank of major, by Governor Stone, and on the removal of his regiment to the eastern department, was chosen one of the operating surgeons of the second division, nineteenth army corps. After the battle of Winchester he had charge of one of the largest hospitals in Winchester, Virginia. After rejoining his regiment he remained with it till it was mustered out. He was presented in the name of his regiment with a complete set of surgical instruments, on the several cases of which was engraved:

J. C. Schrader

Presented to Surgeon John C. Shrader, by the officers and men of the 22d regiment, Iowa Infantry; in appreciation of his skill as a physician and surgeon, and as a tribute of love and esteem from his comrades in arms.

On leaving the service he entered upon the practice of his profession at Iowa City, where he has by successful practice made himself one of the leading physicians of the city, and has built up a large and remunerative business. Upon the establishment of the medical department of the University of Iowa he was appointed, by the board of regents, professor of obstetrics and diseases of women and children. He still holds his position in the department, which is becoming so justly popular in Iowa and the northwest. He is a physician to the board of health of Iowa City, member of the Iowa City Medical Society, the Iowa and Illinois Central District Medical Society, the Eastern Iowa District Medical Society, the Poweshiek County Medical Society and the Iowa State Medical Society.

He was made a Mason in December, 1864, at Hiram Lodge No. 21, at Winchester, Virginia, one of the oldest lodges in the United States. He was recommended by General Washburn and General Granger, then commanding the second division, nineteenth army corps. Since, he has held offices in Royal Arch Chapter and as Knight Templar, and is now eminent commander of Palestine Commandery No. 2, at Iowa City. He also belongs to the order of Knights of Pythias and the Ancient Order of United Workingmen.

The doctor is a member of no church, and is liberal in his religious opinions.

He has been a republican since the organization of that party, but his profession engrosses his time and leaves none for political matters.

He has been twice married: on the 1st of January, 1852, to Miss Lydia P. Evans, of Washington county, Ohio, who died in 1871. His second wife was Miss Maggie A. Carter, of Iowa City.

Such is the brief outline of the life of one who, struggling through trials, has worked his way from obscurity to a place of high esteem; who has performed a work the influence of which shall live in the hearts of those who have known him.

ANTOINE LE CLAIRE,

DAVENPORT.

ANTOINE LE CLAIRE, one of the founders, and during his life-time the leading citizen, of Davenport, was born on the 15th of December, 1797, at Saint Joseph, Michigan. His father, Antoine Le Claire, was a French Canadian, whose ancestors settled in Canada during the time of its colonial relationship to the French crown. His mother was a full-blooded Indian, and the granddaughter of a Pottawatomie chief. At this time the territory of the northwest, out of which half-a-dozen mighty states have been formed, was peopled almost exclusively by the red-man, with here and there a "pale-face," who was fearless enough to brave the perils of a frontier life among the dusky denizens of the wilderness.

The father of Antoine Le Claire was one of these hardy pioneers of civilization. In 1808 he established a trading post at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, exchanging manufactured articles for various kinds of furs. In the following year he enlarged his operations, taking into partnership with him John Kinzie, of Chicago (then Fort Dearborn), Illinois, and for several years did a profitable business in that line.

In 1812, though surrounded with the Indian tribes with whom he was trading, and who, through the influence of British emissaries, were generally hostile to the United States. Mr. Le Claire espoused the American cause, and engaged actively in the service. He was in the contest at Peoria, where, with others, he was taken prisoner and confined at Alton, Illinois, but was released during the same year.

At this period, at the solicitation of Governor Clarke, of Missouri, Antoine Le Claire, our subject, entered the government service, and was placed at school, that he might acquire a proper knowledge of the English language, the French being his vernacular. In 1818 he acted as interpreter under Captain George Davenport, at Fort Armstrong (Rock Island), with whom he was afterward intimately associated in the founding and developing of the city of Davenport. In the same year he removed to Portage Des Sioux, Saint Charles county, Missouri, where he married the granddaughter of the Sac chief, Acoqua (the Kettle), and was soon after sent to Arkansas to watch the movements of the Indians in that locality, where he remained several years; was returned to engaged in farming and stock-raising. In 1857 he assisted in organizing Western College in Linn county near Shueyville, Johnson county, and was a teacher in that institution, and under Dr. Crouse & Dr. Parmenter he resumed the study of medicine. He attended medical lectures in Brooklyn, and was but fairly established in his medical profession when Governor Kirkwood recognized in him the proper spirit and element for a captain in the Union army, and gave him a commission for the Twenty-second Iowa. He served in General Fitz Henry Warren's staff as provost marshal general of the state of Texas in 1864. On his return to his regiment he was commissioned surgeon, May 1, 1864, with the rank of major, and was one of the operating surgeons of the second division, nineteenth army corps, and after the battle of Winchester, Virginia, he had charge of a general hospital at that place. When he was mustered out of the service at the close of the war, his comrades presented him with a complete set of surgical instruments. On the several cases is engraved the following: "Presented to surgeon John C. Shrader, by the officers and men of the Twenty-second Regiment Iowa Infantry, in appreciation of his skill as a physician and surgeon, and as a tribute of love and esteem from his comrades in arms." After the war he entered upon his profession in Iowa City. Upon the organization and opening of a Medical Department to the State University of Iowa, he was chosen to the chair he now occupies. He is attending surgeon at Mercy Hospital, and was very active in establishing that institution. He is a member of all the medical societies of the city, county, state and nation, and a prominent member in all the Masonic bodies in Iowa City, and of various other secret societies. He is a republican in politics, and has been honored by his party with the office of State senator, to which he was elected in 1879, in democratic Johnson county, over his opponent to the office, John P. Irish, the most aggressive and fearless democrat in Johnson county, by a majority of seventy-three votes, and was a very prominent candidate for Congress in 1882, and partially to repay him for the gallant and successful fight he made for senator in a democratic county he ought to have received the nomination. He was married in January, 1852; his wife dying in December, 1871, and in September, 1872, he married Miss Margaret A. Carter, of Iowa City. He received the degree of A. M. at Western College, June 20, 1877.

MISS SUSAN F. SMITH is the lady that fills the Chair of English Language and Literature and teaches German in the State University of Iowa. She came to that honorable position at the request of the Board of Regents, in the spring of 1881, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Miss Sudlow. The subject of this sketch was born May 31, 1849, at Glasgow, Missouri. She graduated from the St. Louis high school in 1867. In 1873 she traveled extensively in Europe, where she learned to speak the French, German and Italian languages. She filled

Description:
 This database is an index to individuals enumerated in the 1900 United States Federal Census, the Twelfth Census of the United States. Census takers recorded many details including each person's name, address, relationship to the head of household, color or race, sex, month and year of birth, age at last birthday, marital status, number of years married, the total number of children born of the mother, the number of those children living, birthplace, birthplace of father and mother, if the individual was foreign born, the year of immigration and the number of years in the United States, the citizenship status of foreign-born individuals over age twenty-one, occupation, and more. Additionally, the names of those listed on the population schedule are linked to actual images of the 1900 Federal Census. Learn more...
