Harsh, James Birney, 1845 - 1923

Son of Daniel and Nancy McKay Harsh. Born Sept 8, 1845 near Sabina, Clinton Co., Ohio.

Creston Morning American June 15, 1915: "Centenial Celebration of Mrs. Nancy Harsh was taken to Pittsburg; then

Nancy McKay was born in Mercer County, Pa. June 14, 1810. When she was four years of age her parents removed with her to Washington, Pa. and here she Spent her girlhood days. She attended the school for girls, which was at that time a department of the Washington and Jefferson College at that place. She remained in Washington until after her marriage, removing from there in 1837. She traces her paternal lineage back to the north of Ireland, and she claims as her nationality, Scotch -Irish. Her father war a Maylander and traced his lineage back to the James River settlement. He was a slaveholder like other southern men of that day.

She was married in 1833 at at age of 23 years to Mr. Daniel Harsh, a Pennsylvania-Dutchman, in Washington, Pa. They moved to Ohio becoming pioneers and almost frontiersmen, settling in the thickest of the forest and commencing a long hard task of clearing the soil for cultivation. The home of the young bride and groom was in Clinton, County, near Sabina, Ohio and it was there that four of their seven children were born. Daniel Harsh died in Ohio and Mrs. Harsh with her children moved to Bureau County, Illinois. In 1861 accompanied by her sons, Philip and Alexander, and her daughter, Jennie, they moved to this county(Union County, Iowa) settling on section 35 in Highland Tshp where she again began pioneer work in a new country. At that time the nearest railroad station was Ottumwa, the nearest mill where the farmer's wheat could be ground into flour was on Grand River, twenty five miles distant. The land where Creston now stands was a prairie wilderness, the home of the prairie wolf and the prairie chicken.

She has seen the county develop from a wild prairie to the garden spot of the world. For years after she came here such a thing as a buggy or carriage was never seen. The means of conveyance were by horseback and the big lumber wagons, and the mails were carried in a stage coach from Ottumwas to Council Bluffs. She has seen the advent of the railroad, the telegraph line, the sewing machine, the telephone, the automobile and the flying machine, and she is yet a woman of great energy and a strong personality.

During the later years of her life she has made her home with Senator Harsh of this city and with her daughter, Mrs. Donlin, of Hopkins.

The following relatives were present yesterday:

Children: A. F. Harsh, Lowell, Neb.; Mrs. Mary Donlin, Hopkins, Mo.; J. B. Harsh, Creston, Iowa.

Grandchildren: Mary Sargent, Hopkins, Mo.; Ada Hewitt, Burlington, Iowa; W. J. Donlin, Council Bluffs, Ia.; F. D. Harsh, Des Moines, Ia.; Wm. Oliver, Russell, Kansas; Mary Harsh-Atwood, Eugene, Oregon; Ed Oliver, Wakeeney, Kas; H,F Harsh, Lowell, Nebr., Grace S. Harsh, Creston, Ia. Great grand children- etc
