ANOTHER PATRIARCH GONE TO HIS REWARD

HON. JAMES PATTERSON

Friday afternoon, February 1, at 2:30 o'clock, the spirit of Hon. James Patterson, long resident of Iowa county, left its tenement of clay and took its flight to the realm of mystery.

The illness which preceded his passing was not of long duration—indeed, a decided change for the better had been noted—but the claim of the death angel would not be denied, and the end came peacefully, as he was surrounded by his sons and daughters assembled to do him service.

Thus another member of that mighty army which marched to its country's call in the hour of necessity has passed out from among us, leaving behind a record of service and loyalty and honor that will be cherished by all who know him.

Alabama, where they were kept for three months and then released on parole, pending an exchange, which was later effected, and Mr. Patterson resumed active service. He was present at the siege of Vicksburg and at the surrender, participating in the operations that led up to the event. Soon afterwards he was transferred to the 35th Iowa, then about to join the Red River expedition, and took part in the fighting of that strenuous but ineffective campaign.

The term of his enlistment having expired, and ill health developing, he did not re-enlist, but came home and engaged for a time in the milling business at Boone Grove, but soon returned to his father's farm, mighty army which marched to its country's call in the hour of necessity has passed out from among us, leaving behind a record of service and loyalty and honor that will be cher-

James Patterson was born on a farm in the county of Miami, Ohio, Oct. 22, 1837, and was, therefore, at the time of his death 86 years, three months and 9 days of age.

He was the son of Alexander and Sarah Templeton Patterson and lived with his parents until his seventeenth year, when the family came to Iowa, he coming with them. They settled on a farm in what then was Honey Creek township, Iowa County, and made themselves a home, where they were living when the Civil War threatened the life of the nation.

When Mr. Patterson was still a youth, his own mother died and his father married a second time to Melissa Nicholson. The love and affection which she showed toward her stepchildren was very remarkable and deeply endeared her to them.

In the autumn of 1861, James enlisted in Co. G., Eighth Iowa Infantry, and partook of its fortunes during the major portion of his term of service. The regiment formed a part of the Hornet's Nest brigade, the famous body of men under the command of Gen. Prentiss, who stemmed the onslaughts of the Confederate army on the first day of the battle of Shiloh, April 6, 1862, holding their position behind the "sunken road" until nightfall, when their supports on both wings giving way, they were surrounded by the enemy and forced to surrender. During the heat of the battle Mr. Patterson threw away his haversack that bore his name. It was afterward picked up near the body of a soldier who also was named Patterson, and he was reported among the slain—a report which was believed for many months by his relatives and friends.

The prisoners were taken to the Confederate prison at Tuscaloosa, in the operations that led up to the event. Soon afterwards he was transferred to the 35th Iowa, then about to join the Red River expedition, and took part in the fighting of that strenuous but ineffective campaign.

The term of his enlistment having expired, and ill health developing, he did not re-enlist, but came home and engaged for a time in the milling business at Belle Plaine, but soon returned to his father's farm, where he lived until he was married.

On January 1, 1868, he was married to Mary Adaline Beem, daughter of John C. and Margaret Beem, owners of the adjoining farm. This happy union continued until the death of Mrs. Patterson, which occurred on May 2, 1903. Thirteen children, two of whom died in childhood, were born to them, ten of whom still survive, one daughter, Mrs. Agnes Walker, having died in 1913. The remaining sons and daughters are Dr. C. L. Patterson, West Side, Iowa; Mrs. Chas.
 S. Wilcox, Des Moines; Mrs. Lina Henderson, Marengo; Mrs. N. H.
 Smith, Glendale, California; Mrs. W.
 B. Parker, Helena, Montana; Dr. J.
 C. Patterson, Marengo; Mrs. C. J.
 Way, Bussey, Iowa; A. B. Patterson, Haines, Oregon; Dr. S. T. Patterson, Breda, Iowa; Mrs. W. B. Ince, Des Moines. There are 21 grandchildren.
 Also surviving are two brothers John Patterson, of Santa Fe, New Mexico, and Samuel Patterson; of Marengo, and two sisters, Mrs. J. L. Rader, Howard Kansas, and Mrs. Sarah Sherman, Ladora, Iowa. Two brothers, Lemuel and Alexander, and two sisters, Jennie Patterson and Mrs. William Dye, have preceded their brother in death.

In the year 1907 Mr. Patterson left the farm and came to live in Marengo, which was his home until death claimed him as above stated.
 With the exception of his military service he has lived in Iowa county for more than 69 years.

Mr. Patterson early showed an interest in political matters, being first active in school affairs of his home township. Having been denied the benefits of an early education, he was determined that his children should not lack such opportunities.

Later in 1892 he stood as democra-

A TRIBUTE TO WOODROW WILSON

At this hour of the death of Woodrow Wilson his loved ones mourn over the pathetic weakness which succeeded his great strength. We think now only of the goodness and greatness that was in him.

The son of a minister, with a Scotch-Irish ancestry on both sides, he came into a comparatively easy world with a rich heritage of mental strength and moral firmness. Always he was a leader among his fellows. Constantly he went upward; and he found the climbing much to his liking.

Enslaved somewhat coldly in the granite of his own ego he took but little note of the busy barks that were blown hither and thither by the winds of public opinion, in the great ocean of thought around him. After long years of service as a professor in various institutions it was natural that when he entered public life, as Governor of New Jersey and later as President of the United States he should regard other men much in the same way that he had looked upon students in his class rooms.

But he was an able governor of New Jersey and a great President of the United States. Always a firm believer in peace, he exerted himself to the utmost to keep this nation out of the world war. But when he saw that our entry was inevitable he gave clearer and more convincing reasons why we should and must enter than had been given by any other man.

Yet he yearned for peace. He prosecuted the war with the utmost diligence and zeal and it was largely due to his efforts that the part America played in that war was so magnificent. But always his eye was across the ocean and his ear at the end of the cables to catch the first sight and sound of some significant token that the bloodshed might be stopped. And it was largely due to his efforts that peace came months before. Perhaps it would have been a little better had it not come so soon. Who can tell?

All through the war the full power of his intellect had been working up on the problem of world peace. When the war was over he went across the sea with a plan that held within its fourteen points hope for the healing of all the hurts of the world. But his exalted idealism was not appreciated by the representatives of the old world nations who gathered around the conference table at Vertic candidate for state representative and was elected, and again in 1894. He sponsored and secured the passage of the measure that requires the deposit of public funds by county treasurers, the interest accruing to be paid into the county treasury.

Rapids Republican.

He also supported every other measure that in his opinion was for the best interests of the state and of the taxpayers.

Though unswerving in his support of democratic principles, he did not countenance radical or visionary propositions, even though some of them were written into the party platforms.

He had a great admiration for the historic leaders of his party. Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson being especially esteemed as approaching his ideal.

He was a deep student of American history and a keen observer of current events; and the opinions he formed, in keeping with the policies he favored, were tenaciously held.

Mr. Patterson was a noted hunter. During the early days in Iowa the family larder was seldom without flesh or fowl that fell prey to his prowess, and as late as his seventieth year his friends in Marengo were treated to venison from a deer he slew in the wilds of Minnesota that season.

Personally he was courteous and affable, humorous to a degree, and withal a loyal and true friend to those favored with his affection. Indeed, loyalty was one of his outstanding characteristics—loyalty to his family, his friends, his country, himself.

He was a member of no organization but the G. A. R., nor a member of any church, though reared in the Presbyterian faith and leaning towards its teachings. His life was pure—he was honest, manly, patriotic—surely the reward will be great which he has gone to receive.

Funeral services were held at the Patterson home on Monday afternoon, February 4, by Rev. H. B. Allen of the Presbyterian church, who drew a fine lesson for all from the life just ended. The body was taken to the Koszta cemetery and there laid away in the family plot among those of his kindred who have gone before.

A detachment from Walter A. Wandling Post braved the raging storm and made the trip to the cemetery where they with their bugler performed the rite which proclaimed the closing of a brave and serviceable career.

Funeral services were held at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. W. Cronbaugh at Oak Grove Farm, which the deceased originally entered from the Government and which had been his home for more than 70 years. Rev. J. Allen Hicks officiated. The music was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Gates, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Bosley and Mrs. R. V. Curfman. Interment was made by the side of his wife in the Koszta cemetery.

MARQUIS BARR was born in White County, Indiana, August 14, 1844, and died at Oskaloosa, Iowa, September 29, 1923. His parents were Alfred and Maria Barr. The family removed to a farm in Adams Township, Mahaska County, Iowa, in 1854. Marquis enlisted in Company I, Forty-seventh Iowa Infantry, on May 7, 1864, and was mustered out, September 28, 1864, at the expiration of his service. He became a farmer and remained in that vocation until he was elected sheriff of Mahaska County in the fall of 1877. He was re-elected three times, serving eight years. On January 27, 1886, the General Assembly elected him warden of the State Penitentiary at Anamosa. He assumed the office the following April 1, was twice re-elected, and served until April 1, 1892. He then returned to Oskaloosa and became an adjuster of claims for the Iowa Central Railway Company, later called the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad. The penitentiaries having come under the care of the Board of Control Mr. Barr was recalled to Anamosa as warden on November 1, 1906. On July 1, 1907, the Anamosa Penitentiary became the State Reformatory, with its character somewhat modified. Mr. Barr used rare and sympathetic intelligence in complying with the reform. He served as warden until January 1, 1912, when he again went to Oskaloosa and resumed his work as adjuster of claims for the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad, which work he continued nearly to the time of his death.

HARRY S. DUGAN was born near Dallas Center, Iowa, October 26, 1884, and died at Perry, Iowa, May 1, 1924. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Dugan, removed to near Minburn in 1893 and to near Rippey in 1900. Harry attended public school in those towns and was graduated from the Law Department of Drake University in 1907, when he was admitted to the bar and began practice at Perry. He served as county attorney of Dallas County in 1915 and 1916 and was elected a judge of the district court of the Fifth Judicial District in 1918, serving from 1919 to 1922 inclusive. He then resumed practice in Perry.

JAMES PATTERSON was born in Miami County, Ohio, October 22, 1837, and died at Marengo, Iowa, February 1, 1924. Burial was at Koszta, Iowa. He came with his parents, Alexander and Sarah Templeton Patterson, in their removal to Honey Creek Township, Iowa County, Iowa, in 1854. He enlisted in Company G, Eighth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, September 3, 1861, was taken prisoner at Shiloh, April 6, 1862, confined in Confederate prison at Tuscaloosa, Alabama, three months, paroled, later exchanged, and mustered out at Davenport, Iowa, September 28, 1864. Farming was his vocation. He held several local offices and in 1891 was elected representative, and was re-elected two years later, serving in the Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth general assemblies. He retired and removed to Marengo in 1907.
