braska; Christin, wife of Charles Campbell, of Ogle Alley, Neb. The father of these children died in 1881, and the mother is still living in Marion Township.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowers' family consists of four children: William G., born Dec. 29, 1863; Leroy C., born Sept 3, 1867, now attending school; Charles H., born Oct. 10, 1870; Black O., born Sept. 26, 1878. Mr. and Mrs. Bowers have given their children good educational advantages. They are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and are greatly interested in all church work. Mr. Bowers is politically, a Republican, and is held in high esteem throughout the county in which he has been so long a resident, and no one more justly deserves this esteem than does he. He has taken an active interest in all public affairs, and is an influential citizen.

JOHAN SAMPLE, deceased, a pioneer of Henry County, of 1839, and one of her most highly respected citizens, fell a victim to cholera June 5, 1851, his wife also dying two days later. Samuel D. Woodworth, a son-in-law of John Sample, and his two sons, all died within seven days of the appearance of the disease among them. Mr. Sample was born in Washington County, Pa., with the birth of the Republic in 1776, March 23, a few years prior to the issuing of the Declaration of Independence, and his childhood and youth were spent amid the stirring scenes of the great Revolution, from which has sprung the greatest Republic known in the history of the world. His father was an English emigrant, his mother a native of Germany, both worthy people. John Sample was apprenticed to a millwright, and served his time at that useful trade. In pursuit of employment he afterward wended his way to Butler County, Ohio, about the close of the last century, where he was married, Jan. 20, 1803, to Miss Ann Taylor, daughter of Henry Taylor. Mrs. Sample was born in Cincinnati April 10, 1783. Her father was a pioneer of Cincinnati, and a brother of hers was the first white male child born in that city. Mr. Sample removed to Randolph County, Ind., in 1818, where he engaged in building mills. In the spring of 1839 he set out with his family for the then "far west" of Iowa. Their mode of conveyance was by one-horse team and two ox-teams, with the usual covered emigrant wagons. He located land in Tippecanoe Township, the same land now forming a part of the farm of his son-in-law, William Davis. Mr. and Mrs. Sample were blessed with a numerous family, consisting of eleven children, seven of whom grew to maturity. Mary was born Jan. 1, 1804, and was the wife of S. D. Woodworth; she died in January, 1845. Jane H. was born May 14, 1812; she married Arthur Bull, Nov. 12, 1829, and died Sept. 26, 1831. William was born June 14, 1814; he married Amanda T. Goddard, and died of cholera June 9, 1851. Robert was born Oct. 13, 1816, and died Aug. 12, 1839; John was born Sept. 26, 1818, and died in September, 1842; Eliza A. was born Feb. 25, 1821.

Mr. Sample was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, and his wife was an earnest Methodist. He was a Whig in politics and his sons walked politically in his footsteps. While living in Randolph County, Ind., he was chosen one of the three judges who constituted the courts of that county, and served with honor and ability in that capacity. He was a man of positive views and of great force of character, upright and honorable in all his intercourse with his fellowmen, and he enjoyed in a marked degree the respect and esteem of all who knew him. He was a master mechanic and delighted in the exercise of his skill. His course westward was marked by mills of his erecting, and up to the time of his sudden death he was desirous of building another mill. His daughter, Eliza A., the wife of Mr. William Davis, is the only surviving member of that once large family.

CLARA J. SWAN, M. D., homeopathic physician, Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, was born in St. Paul, Minn. Her parents, Andrew and Margaret Swan, were natives of Sweden, who emigrated to America in their youth. They were honest and industrious, and died leaving Clara an orphan when she was but eight years old. She came

Cholera
From the Mt. Pleasant Observer

The following deaths have occurred west of Mt. Pleasant from this disease since our last issue, to wit:

— Robert Woodworth, near Rome.

The wife and son of Thos. Smith, near Rome.

Geo. Rice and daughter, 2 miles west of Mt. Pleasant.

Miss Penelope Glover, 1 mile west of Mt. Pleasant.

Marion Park, 4 miles west of Mt. Pleasant.

The whole number of deaths by cholera since it broke out (June 4th,) is twenty-two.

The last death took place on the 16th. Mrs. Kean was considered past recovery on Sabbath last but is now on the mend and will in all probability get well. The Rev. John Harris is the only individual in Mt. Pleasant that has been attacked with the past week- he is on the mend.

Mrs. Scott at Rome and Mrs. Berry near Rome died on the 16th, but not with cholera, if we have been rightly informed.

It is now the general opinion that the epidemic has ceased its ravages for the present. We hope its last victim has fallen and that the citizens of our county will again be blest with health. Already the excitement occasioned by the disease has died away, but it is painful, indeed, to reflect upon the ruin that has been wrought. We have lost a number of our best and most enterprising citizens.

THE SICKNESS IN HENRY COUNTY.—We saw J. T. MORTON, Esq., of Mount Pleasant yesterday. He informs us that there had been eleven deaths, from what was supposed to be cholera, in that vicinity, up to the time he left. The sickness can be traced to the house of Mr Semples, near Rome. It is very singular that all who died were known to have been there a short time previous. The sickness had abated, and hopes were entertained that the worst was over. As might have been expected, there was a general panic about Mount Pleasant. We all know the advantage ground those occupy, who can keep calm at such a time, and we hope our friends who have been thus unexpectedly visited with the scourge, will study to become so. A few drops of camphor will do more good than all the brandy that can be drank at such a time.

The Boston Transcript and six other papers were employed to print the City ordinances at a given compensation, and at a much lower rate than regular advertising charges. Some of the Council, deeming some of the ordinances of sufficient importance, ordered them to be published in some of the penny papers. The consequence was, that the same printing, which according to the rates paid to the City printers amounted to $20, amounted to $106, according to the charge of these casual papers, and was allowed out of the City Treasury. Just such another case occurred, in this place last year while we were city printers. A column of ordinances which we could easily have printed in an extra, was given to the Telegraph, and the consequence was that the City was obliged to pay just four times as much as they were paying us by contract.

Dr WM F. CHANNING of Boston has recently invented a new fire and police alarm bell, to be struck instantaneously, through magnetic contrivance. It is proposed to divide the city in-

Some early history;

"Every man's life is a fairy tale, written by God's fingers. I saw her first one hot day as she sat on her porch fanning, a dear old lady in a dainty white lace cap, looking so calm and satisfied that I asked her name. I found that she had lived in this vicinity since 1839, I was very much interested and I pressed. Our history record dates and names but there is no human element, local color you might call it and I knew that if Mrs. Eliza Sample Davis would talk to me she could tell me a story you might hunt for years and not find. So I asked her niece Mrs. George McMillan, if she might talk to her and this is her story. For my facts I am indebted to Mrs. Charles McMillan her niece and Mrs. George McMillan.

It was sometime before 1835 that Samuel Woodworth, a young surveyor living in Winchester, Indiana, had some possibilities in the great western county, and decided to investigate. He came on horseback all the way from Indiana just why he came to southern Iowa is not known. There were Indians here, many of them, but they frightened him not at all and he was particularly impressed with a farm lying west of here owned by Mr. Minter. The farm appealed to him for his newly acquired father-in-law was a miller and he thought he saw a good location for a mill. Very much impressed and with all the enthusiasm of a youth, he returned home full of ambition. His father-in-law was skeptical and when the young Samuel Woodworth insisted he go with him to see this wonderful country he consented, because he would not allow his pretty young daughter to go until he knew something of the country. So they made a second trip. In the meantime the wife of Mr. Minter had died and was buried on the farm, and the lonesome husband all by himself wanted to get away. He was glad to see 600 acres for a new country is very desolate when one is alone. Samuel Woodworth and his father-in-law returned to Indiana and began to make plans to return. It took a good while for they were prosperous farmers. They had a large home and a trip like that meant all sorts of hardships. They talked it over, they consulted their friends and were so much engrossed with the new country that finally two other families were persuaded to come. What a company it was, with a little imagination you can see them starting the six wagons, the heavier ones driven by ox teams. They brought their sheep, cows, horses, chickens and one large box contained geese for Grandmother Sample was a thrifty woman. It was in the spring, in April and it rained long and hard, but what did they care, even the grandparents were not old and all were so full of anticipation and ambition that they only laughed. There was pretty Eliza Sample, 18 years old and quite a belle. There was Mary Sample with her little six weeks old baby and her mother, who was noted for her doctoring. Her husband were known all over that part of the country, and everybody consulted her. They took their provisions with them, a clothes basket and a barrel of bread and how they ate. For meat they had home cured bacon and ham, and their chickens supplied them with eggs.

There were six loads, thirteen people in all, one grand glorious picnic it was for the young people. The sleep for the night, the pitching of the tents were experiences they never forgot. Mrs. Sample and her daughter the baby slept in the carryall, it is a part worth mentioning that the baby girl didn't even take cold. Can much be said for our modern ways of traveling and Pullmans?

There were snakes galore, all kinds and sorts, but the travelers weren't afraid and the rabbits and squirrels were not so tame as they are today. For variety the men shot some of them for food.

One boy died at Augusta. He had stopped to work and contracted a fever. One sister was sick at Burlington and the long walk down the river hunting buttermilk for her is another lingering memory.

Finally they arrived and settled on their farm, around the house grew ferns so high that the children played hide and seek among them. They had little furniture; one tall cupboard they had brought, a few chairs, or two and that was the most they had. For books they had their bibles and all read them. They had few pictures, the women had their samplers framed and hung these up. The one belonging to Eliza was on blue linen and contained all the records of the family, embroidered so beautifully it looked like fine script. They made the samplers in school in Indiana, and it was part of their training. Some of them had houses on trees and trees; they were embroidered in silk like most of them and every little girl was proud of her sampler. On the floors of the new home were home made rag carpets and the pretty old fashioned rag rugs, the ones which are so much in demand today. There were no screens and yet there seemed to be no more flies than now, one girl was always selected to brush the flies. There were no stoves, the cooking being done over ovens made down in the ground, of cement and a fire built under them. There has never been an oven which would bake like these did, they say. Nothing burned, everything baked evenly, and they can almost taste the pies, the memory of them is so vivid. Then there were the corn pones, baked all day. The recipe these has been left and it is matter of regret to the younger generation.

They bought their supplies many of them from Burlington, although there was a general store on the North East corner of the square kept by a Mr. Shanklin who was probably the postmaster also.

Mrs. McMillan tells of her life as a little girl in the new home, how they captured the young fawns and made pets of them, and later of the cabin which was built down the road for a school house, and she remembers night school which her father conducted in his own home. Little girls then wore their hair in two pigtailed their backs. Her hair, she said, was very heavy and her grandmother always braided it for her drawing it so tightly that it made narrow slits of her eyes. The hair combing time always came just when other exciting things were happening, she loved to see the older ones start on a trip, the mounting of the horses was an occasion for great fun, but she must not turn her head to the right or left when her hair was being plaited. Their dresses were calico with long pantalets to match. They were lonesome times no doubt, but all were busy to think of that, there was always excitement.

The snakes were so plentiful that very often when they went to retire they found the snakes had preceded them, and in the milk houses made of logs they were very common.

Fruit was dried not canned, wild grapes here were in abundance and wild plums, and they had pie every year in fruit season. Yet they were well, and none were poisoned from snake bites.

Mrs. McMillan likes to tell of the first circus she ever attended which was held in Mt. Pleasant, it was in 1846 and was held near the place where the court house now stands, and she says the word had come the day before that the circus was to come from the West, and that not a boy slept that night, for they had heard there to be a real elephant and their excitement knew no bounds. Next morning when she was sure enough that there were runny foot prints in the dust; she said the happiest day of her life was circus day. Mr. Burkley's daughter was the bare back rider and she was beautiful beyond description to her young admirers. The tent was purple and Burkley's circus made a great impression. Then comes the times, the days of the cholera plague, which is not my object to write about now, few of the Samples returned to Indiana after it was over.

Of Eliza Sample's marriage to Mr. Davis and their return to Iowa a great deal is not already known, nor can I tell of their experiences during war times, for the story would be altogether too long.

It was an enjoyable hour I spent with these ladies and one I shall never forget.

Original data: Seventh Census of the United States, 1850: (National Archives Microfilm Publication M432, 1009 rolls); Records of the Bureau of the Census, Record Group 29; National Archives, Washington, D.C.

Description:

This database is an index to individuals enumerated in the 1850 United States Federal Census, the Seventh Census of the United States. Census takers recorded many details including each person's name, age as of the census day, sex, color, birthplace, occupation of males over age fifteen, and more. No relationships were shown between members of a household. Additionally, the names of those listed on the population schedule are linked to actual images of the 1850 Federal Census.
