3 To Appear On Felonies

Three men, all charged with felonies, were expected to enter guilty pleas this afternoon in District Court, County Attorney Si W. Rasche said today.

Rasche said he would file true informations charging embezzlement by baillee against Ted Goetsch, 39, of 514 S. 6th St., and Lee Van Preston, 22, of 432 2nd Ave. S. He said both have indicated they wanted to plead guilty.

Also to be arraigned is Dale Horton, Route 2, Clinton, who has been wanted on a forgery charge since 1959. Horton was taken in custody today.

Goetsch had pleaded not guilty when arraigned June 29 and posted $1,000 bond for his release. He is charged with embezzlement of an antique lamp owned by Laverge Veenstra, who said he had failed to return the lamp after taking it for repairs.

Preston was arrested Monday on a complaint signed by James McEleney, who said Preston had failed to return a 1962 Oldsmobile sedan which he had rented for one day on July 12. The automobile was in Preston's possession when he was picked up yesterday.

A desertion charge, also filed yesterday by Preston's wife Myrtle, was dismissed in Municipal Court today because of insufficient evidence.

Police said Horton, who is held on $1,000 bond on the forgery charge, was picked up on a warrant which charged him with forging the name of Glen Wall on a check for $82.50, drawn on a Sterling Bank.

Afternoon sessions of court are being held Tuesdays and Thurs-reception for Mrs. Nicolaysen from 3:30 to 5 p.m. Thursday at Hotel Savery.

JUDGE PATRICK B. WOLFE.

The present review is concerned with the life of a man whose character and ability are, by reason of his long and honorable connection with the practice of law, well known to the people of Clinton county and of the state of Iowa, and whose extensive familiarity with his own county made him especially fitted to serve as editor-in-chief of the history of Clinton county.

Patrick B. Wolfe was born in Chicago, Illinois, on October 7, 1848, the son of John R. and Honora (Buckley) Wolfe. John R. Wolfe was born in county Kerry, Ireland, in 1824, the son of Richard Wolfe, who was the agent having charge of the property of the Knight of Kerry. He received an excellent education. During his young manhood he helped to organize the "Young Ireland" party. He left Ireland in 1848, coming to America, first locating at Ottawa, Illinois. Here he remained on a farm until 1854, when he moved to Clinton county, Iowa, to land near Lost Nation, which he had entered the winter before, and lived there until his death in 1885, becoming one of the largest landholders and most successful farmers of his township. Mr. Wolfe did not take any great interest in politics. He was opposed to slavery. In religion he and his entire family were stanch Catholics, and active workers in the church.

John R. Wolfe was married in Ireland to Honora Buckley. She was a member of a family prominent in the church and at the bar, Michael Buckley, her brother, having been the leader of the Belfast bar for many years. The Wolfe family were also prominent in the church and in law, so that it was natural for the American descendants to turn to the bar in choice of a profession. Mrs. Wolfe died in 1888.

Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe were the parents of ten children, two of whom died in infancy, and those who grew to maturity are the following: James, a farmer near Lost Nation; Patrick B.; Johanna, who is now Sister Scholastica of the Order of Sisters of Mercy at Sioux City, Iowa; John, a farmer at Melrose, Monroe county, Iowa; Maurice, a farmer near Lost Nation; Margaret, now the wife of Dr. D. Langan, of Clinton; Katherine, the widow of Judge T. D. Fitzgerald, of Montana, at one time president of the Montana Senate, now living in Clinton; and Richard B., an attorney at De Witt, Clinton county, Iowa.

father Patrick B. Wolfe attended the common schools of Liberty township, Clinton county, for a time, then spent one year in the Christian Brothers Academy at La Salle, Illinois. He was a student in the academic department of Iowa State University for two years, then took a full law course from that institution, graduating with the degree of Bachelor of Laws in 1870. In January, 1871, he began the practice of law at De Witt, Clinton county, Iowa, and for a few years suffered the proverbial hardships of the young lawyer, but soon came into an extensive practice. In 1877 he formed a partnership with W. A. Cotton, under the name of Cotton & Wolfe, which continued until 1888. For four years he served as attorney for the town of De Witt, and was a member of the De Witt school board for fifteen years. In 1885 he was elected to the Iowa Senate, and served three sessions, resigning from his position in October, 1891, when he was appointed judge of the district court for the seventh judicial district, holding his first term of court in November of 1891. He served on the bench until September 1, 1904, when he resigned to form a partnership in the practice of law with his son. It is a unique fact that Judge Wolfe has resigned from every public office which he has held. In 1899 he was nominated for judge of the supreme court of the state of Iowa, and was defeated by a close margin. He is again a candidate in 1910. His law office was moved from De Witt to Clinton in May, 1891, and his residence was transferred in 1893. Mr. Wolfe was a member of the public library board of the city of Clinton.

Mr. Wolfe was married on May 1, 1878, to Margaret Connole, the daughter of Thomas and Hannah (Malone) Connole, who came from Ireland and located in De Witt. To this union three children were born. John L. Wolfe was born in 1879; graduated from the Clinton high school; took the classical course at St. Mary's College in Kansas, graduating with the degree of Bachelor of Arts; took a post-graduate course in Georgetown University, Washington, D. C., receiving there his Master of Arts degree, and then took the law course there, and received the degree of Bachelor of Laws. He spent a year in the University of Berlin, Germany, and in 1904 entered into partnership with his father. He is now serving on his second term as a representative in the lower house of the Iowa General Assembly. Mary Wolfe was born on June 27, 1881, and is a graduate of Sinsiniwa College, of Wisconsin, and Trinity College, in Washington, D. C. One child died in infancy.

CRAWFORD COUNTY

By E. F. TUCKER

IN compiling a history of Crawford County, it is necessary to briefly refer to histories of a local nature, and to cyclopaedias of early dates, and recite some biographies that have gone before. From these sources one gets more accurate and complete information. To begin this brief history we find: "Crawford, a co. in W. Iowa, intersected by Boyer River and the Chicago & North-Western railroad; 720 square miles; pop. 1890, 18,894. Co. seat Denison."—International Cyclopaedia, p. 337.

We are told it was DeSoto who discovered the Mississippi River in 1540, and thus was the first Caucasian blood to set eyes upon the waters that had laved the valleys of what was later to be known as "Crawford a co. in W. Iowa."

Again we are told that in 1673, Father Marquette, a missionary from France, a member of the Society of Jesus, and Joliet, a typical Canadian trader, glided down the wide river, and reaching the Father of Waters, first saw the shores of Iowa. Between that time until the Indians receded from the tide of encroaching whites much took place.

Can the present inhabitant picture Iowa without a house? A vast rolling prairie with grass waving higher than the heads of man, virgin forests with herds of buffalo and droves of deer, with only the curling smoke of the wigwam to show that man was near—yet such was Iowa.

The Sioux Indians were the first known who used what was eventually to become Crawford County as their hunting grounds. They established no villages and gave no evidence of any settled claim upon the land, save perhaps some mounds which were found years later near the present county home, west of Denison. The Pottawattamies being crowded westward, made their homes in the southern portion of Crawford County, calling it their reservation.

The foregoing may prove uninteresting, yet it is necessary to one who would know of the various steps by which Crawford County merged from the wilderness, and gradually became known as Crawford County.

When created January 15, 1851 Crawford County comprised 16 townships, in lieu of the 20 now within its borders. In naming the counties, members of the legislature seem to have gone by no fixed rule. For the most part the counties were named after statesmen. Crawford County was named in honor of William Harris Crawford, who was born in Virginia in 1772. In his life work Crawford was identified with the state of Georgia. He was a member of the United States senate, following the year 1807. Of impetuous southern blood, he was involved in two duels, in one of which he killed his opponent and in the other was wounded. He became a national figure and died in 1834.

Although having received its name and its boundaries being temporarily fixed, Crawford County still in effect was unorganized territory. It was attached to Shelby County for all judicial purposes, and it was not until the winter of 1854 that a petition was circulated, addressed to Honorable Mansel Wicks, judge of Shelby County, praying that the county be set off separate and apart, and requesting him to order an election for county officers, said election to take place the first Monday in April, 1855. The petition was granted, and the first voting in Crawford County took place at the house of one Nicholas Friend at what was then known as Friend's Grove, on a branch of Coon Creek, about five miles south of Denison.

The first officers were E. W. Fowler, county judge; A. R. Hunt, county treasurer; Thomas Dobson and B. F. Wicks tying for district clerk; Cyrus B. Whitmore, attorney; Samuel G. Kennedy, surveyor; D. J. Fowler, sheriff; R. D. Butterworth, coroner; John B. Bassett, drainage commissioner.

There were three influences, three separate of immigration which affected Crawford County. One was the natural oncoming of the pioneer; the continuance of the rush for land. The second was what may be termed a back
