DEATH COMES TO PIONEER WOMAN

MRS. CATHERINE KELLY PASSES AWAY AT HER HOME IN JACKSONVILLE

Mrs. Catherine Kelly, an aged lady residing north of New Hampton passed away at her home last Wednesday evening, Dec. 3, 1919, at the age of 83 years, five months and 10 days.
Her death was due to the weakness of age.

The maiden name of the deceased was Catherine Sheridan. She was born in County Meath, Ireland, May 24, 1836. She came to America when she was 22 years of age and settled at Sycamore, Illinois, where she was united in marriage with John R. Kelly fifty-three years ago. Mr. Kelly died ten years ago.

They came to Chickasaw forty-five years ago and settled on a farm in Jacksonville township eight miles north of New Hampton and lived there ever since.

Mrs. Kelly was the mother of nine children, eight of whom survive her.
A daughter, Marcella Carroll, preceded her in death. The living are John Kelly of Williston, N. D., Mrs.
John Connors of Republic, Hugh Kelly of Devon, Mrs. J. J. Wandro and Mrs. William Long of New Hampton; William Kelly, residing near the old home and Mathew Kelly and Mrs. Anna Conry, at home.

Solemn Requiem High Mass was celebrated at St. Joseph's church in this city Saturday forenoon at 10 o' clock. The officiating clergymen were Rev. Fr. M. H. Carey, rector of St. Joseph's church; Rev. Fr. B.
H. Forckenbrock of St. Mary's this city; and Rev. Fr. Neenan of Jerico.
Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery beside the grave of her husband.

Those from a distance at the funeral were Michael Dwan of Genoa, Ill., and J. J. Brennan of Clare, Ill., nephews of the deceased.

Their mother's gentle voice is hushed;
Her warm true heart is still;
And on her pale and peaceful face
The shadows of death are deep and black.
They have kissed her marble brow;
And in their aching hearts they know

HON. JOHN FOLEY CALLED BY DEATH

PROMINENT BANKER AND BUSI- NESS MAN DIES FROM HEART TROUBLE

On Thursday last, Dec. 4, 1919, was called from our midst a man whose long and useful and honorable life left a deep impression on this community. Finis had been written on the life page of the Hon. John Foley.

Mr. Foley had been ill from heart trouble for some time, yet was able to be down town on Tuesday. On Wednesday the family noted the rapidly increasing evidences of weakness. Soon afterward the slumber of death came upon him and, so sleeping, he passed to the great beyond.

His age was 78 years, two months and 21 days.

John Foley was born in County
Galway, Ireland, August 14, 1841, the son of Thomas and Catherine Lyder Foley. The family came to America about the year 1846 and settled in the city of Baltimore. His father died in 1852, and in 1857, when he was in his seventeenth year, he came with his mother to Chickasaw county, settling on a farm in Jacksonville township. Though but a youth, he took up with energy and ambition the toilsome life of the pioneer, striving mightily to fit himself for a life of usefulness in larger spheres. His company through the long evenings were his books, and thus by his own help and a meager schooling he fitted himself to teach, following that profession in the rural schools intermittently for some years.

In 1867 he was united in marriage with Miss Mary Conley, and they resided on the farm until 1872, when he was elected county treasurer and they came to make their home in New Hampton. The records disclose that his service as treasurer was so notably successful as to stamp him as a man of unusual business ability and integrity. The county finances, then at a low ebb, became established, through his efforts, on that firm basis which has endured to the present time. His reward was re-election to the office successively for three more terms. In 1882 Mr. Foley engaged in the retail lumber business in New Hampton, continuing till 1900. Here he again and continuously showed the qualities of the able business man coupled with the utmost fairness and fidelity in dealing with his customers. During those years he served the city of New Hampton as mayor, and was several years a member of the board of education.

In 1889 he was chosen vice president of the Northwestern Lumbermen's association, composed of 2,000 retail dealers, and a year later was elected its president.

In 1899, at the organization of the State Bank of New Hampton, he assisted in that work, became a heavy stockholder and was elected its president, a position he held until his death.

During this time his larger political career was developing. He was elected to the lower house of the Iowa legislature, and later served a four-year term as state senator from the Chickasaw-Floyd district. The Democrats of the state nominated him for state treasurer and the party honored him with the nomination for congress from the Fourth district. Throughout all these years he was prominent in the councils of his party in the state and nation and his advice was sought many times. He had a remarkably wide acquaintance with the big men of the Democratic party throughout the United States and made and retained many warm friendships among them.

But with all his business and political activities and the encroachments they made upon his time, the home life of Mr. Foley was his real life. Here he displayed those tender qualities of filial devotion and friendly hospitality in a measure unusual. The guest in his home was made to feel that it was his home while he was there. Without ostentation or fulsomeness he made the dweller under his roof know that he was truly welcome. And in this fine hospitality he was equaled by his life companion, to whom now this charming comradeship of the home can be but a tender and beneficent memory.

Mr. Foley, during all his life, was a devout member of the Catholic church and assisted liberally in the upbuilding of St. Joseph's church and school. He was a fourth degree member of the Knight of Columbus and adhered with fidelity to the tenets of his order. Its members recognized in him a brother Knight of high worth and one who reflected great credit upon their organization.

Mr. Foley is survived by his wife and an adopted daughter, Mrs. Charles Reilly, of this city. He also leaves two grandchildren, John Foley Reilly and Mary Jane Reilly.

The funeral was held yesterday morning at St. Joseph's church with the celebration of Solemn Requiem High Mass. The Rev. Fr. M. H. Carey, pastor of St. Joseph's was the celebrant; The Rev. B. H. Forckenbrock of St. Mary's was deacon; and the Rev. T. F. O'Brien of Lawler was sub-deacon. Fr. Carey delivered a fitting sermon. The Knights of Columbus attended the services in a body and accompanied the remains to their resting place in St. Joseph's cemetery.

A large number of teachers have reported very successful meetings in which the parents manifested great interest and decided to continue community meetings. A few teachers were rather discouraged with their attempts as but few parents responded only one or two being present. The teacher, however, is to be given credit as she did her part in furthering the interest of her school.

I was present at a very successful meeting that day. Every family in the district was represented, the children did their work very creditably, a social luncheon was partaken of and it was decided to continue community meetings after the holidays. As one woman remarked "I look forward to these meetings with keen interest and consider them an uplift in a community."

Due to present conditions there is more need of co-operation between home and school today than ever before. The responsibilities of the school in child training have multiplied since the home and church find the task more difficult of accomplishment under the pressure of modern conditions than it was in the old household economy period. The lack of co-operation and mutual understanding between parents and teachers has been detrimental to the children.

The home and school must be brought in closer relations, the parents and teachers must be made to co-operate more intelligently in the education

MARCUS C. WOODRUFF,

DUBUQUE.

JOURNALISM, long followed, is a liberal education. The biographical history of this country abounds in instances of men who, educated at the printer's case, or editor's desk, or both, have thus found the stepping-stones to eminence. A list of the names only of this class would make a portly volume. Among the rising men of Iowa, in middle life, largely self-taught, and owing much in this respect to journalistic pursuits, is Marcus C. Woodruff, whose modesty shrank from appearing in a work like this, but whose habits of industry, great improvement in writing, and noble bearing, at the head of one of the leading daily journals of Iowa, embody a lesson worth perpetuating.

Mr. Woodruff was born at Aurora, Erie county, New York, on the 21st of March, 1831. He received the rudiments of education at the common school of his native village, and for a short time he attended the Aurora Academy, a respectable institution of its class thirty years ago. At the age of eighteen he taught school one season in his native town, and then went to Buffalo and spent three or four years in book-keeping in a wholesale house. He then listened to the advice of an older journalist, Horace Greeley, and came west, halting in Boone county, Illinois, and teaching school three years. Not having a thorough relish for this profession, in 1855 he came farther west, locating in Hardin county, Iowa, selecting the picturesque little village of Iowa Falls for his home. Here he pursued the business of land agent for several years. In February, 1856, he issued the first call for a republican convention in that county, and in compliance with the call a meeting was held, and the party was formally organized on the 22d of that month.

In 1863 Mr. Woodruff purchased the "Sentinel" newspaper establishment at Eldora, the county seat, and managed it there for two years, when he moved it to Iowa Falls, enlarged the paper, and conducted it with increased and marked ability. In May, 1870, he disposed of the "Sentinel," and, in partnership with Charles Aldrich, purchased the Waterloo "Courier," of which he was the sole editor most of the time for nearly four years. In February, 1874, he disposed of his property in Waterloo, purchased one-half interest in the Dubuque "Times," and has been its chief editor to this time. Though an ardent republican, he is courteous to contemporary journalists of the opposite party; is dignified in the tone of his leaders; is a clear thinker and an able writer.

Mr. Woodruff was chief clerk of the Iowa house of representatives of the twelfth general assembly in 1868, and postmaster at Iowa Falls when he left Hardin for Black Hawk county.

On the 7th of April, 1861, he was married to Miss Eliza E. Weller, of Norwich, New York.

JOHN FOLEY,

NEW HAMPTON.

IF there is a self-made man in Chickasaw county, Iowa, that man is John Foley. He came to this state a poor boy twenty years ago; worked hard on a farm, and educated himself largely by studying during the evenings, fitting himself for a teacher and for general business.

Mr. Foley is a native of Ireland, and was born in the county of Galway on the 14th of August, 1840. His parents were Thomas and Catherine (Lyden) Foley, who immigrated to this country when John was a child. His father died in Baltimore, Maryland, in 1852, and his mother in Iowa in the spring of 1877. John came with her to this state in June, 1857, and settled on a farm in Jacksonville township, ten miles from New Hampton. There he worked until 1871, being very industrious in his manual labor, and commencing to teach during the winters as soon as he could fit himself. This he did by giving to study hours which many young men give wholly to amusements, and some to dissipation.

Six years ago he was nominated for the office of treasurer of the county, and elected by a fair majority. So well did he discharge his duties that he has been three times reelected, each time by a vote which showed that the people had an increasing knowledge of his eminent fitness for the office. After he had served the county nearly two years, the New Hampton "Courier" of the 4th of October, 1873, thus spoke of his official work:

Attentive to the duties of this office, cordial in his intercourse with the taxpayers, and correct in his business, he has made scores of friends, and not a single enemy. It is infinitely to his credit that, without fear, without favor, and without prejudice, he has sought to perform the duties of the place rather than to build up a clique who should conspire to keep him in office. A man of the people, he has faithfully performed the people's work, with an eye single to their interest.

He found the finances of the county embarrassed, its credit depressed, and distrust of its financial condition and management universal. When he took possession of the treasurer's office county warrants had not been redeemed over its counter for years, but had been hawked about the streets, and peddled from hand to hand till they finally found their way into the hands of the money brokers at a discount, to the people, of from ten to thirty per cent.

His advent in the treasurer's office changed all this in a single day. Public confidence rose as by magic. The ability of the county to meet its obligations promptly was no longer doubted. County warrants commanded their face in greenbacks on the street and in the treasurer's office. They have continued to do so up to this hour.

The people of Chickasaw county owe Mr. Foley a debt of gratitude. He has done their work ably, faithfully, and for the compensation fixed by law. In his official capacity he has known no friends, and no enemies. He has favored no organized rings, and sought to build up no special interests; but with rigid impartiality has dealt honorably with all. More than this, at the time of his election he was perhaps the only man in the county upon whom all the elements of opposition to treasury misrule could have been concentrated. He accepted the office of treasurer at a positive sacrifice of his private business interests.

Prior to holding the office of treasurer Mr. Foley had been a member of the board of supervisors for one term, and was for nine years connected with the school board of his town. He is an ardent friend of education, and labors assiduously for its advancement.

Mr. Foley was reared in the Catholic faith, and steadfastly adheres to the religious teaching of his ancestors.

HON. JOHN D. HUNTER,

WEBSTER CITY.

AMONG the self-made men of Iowa, whose education was acquired largely at the printer's case, and who have risen to considerable prominence in the state, is John D. Hunter, of Hamilton county. He was born at Knoxville, Jefferson county, Ohio, his father being a farmer, and now residing in Mahaska county, Iowa. His mother, before her marriage, was Nancy Day. The son spent his early youth on a farm, devoting but a few months yearly to attendance at school. At fifteen he became a printer's apprentice in Ashland, Ohio, completing his education in the "art preservative" at Bryan, in the same state. On the day he was twenty years of age he started a paper, in partnership with another man, at Angola, Indiana. That town was then small; the paper was not well patronized, and at the end of one year, without having essentially replenished his exchequer, he returned to Bryan.

In the autumn of 1856, Mr. Hunter came to Iowa, halting a few weeks at Marion, Linn county, and settling at Eldora, Hardin county, in December of that year. For a short time he worked as a journeyman printer on the "Sentinel," then the only paper in the county. He soon after purchased a half interest in the office, and in about two years owned the establishment. He conducted the paper until the 1st of January, 1864, when he sold out to M. C. Woodruff, now of the Dubuque "Times."

In 1865, in connection with other parties, he opened a store in Iowa Falls. Eighteen months later, in December, 1866, he removed to Webster City and purchased the Hamilton "Freeman," a paper which, with the exception of one year, he has continued to publish, and which he has made the leading journal in the Boone valley.

Mr. Hunter was chosen treasurer and recorder of Hardin county in 1863, and, after serving eight months, resigned to enter the military service. He
