Russian Threat Growing

Dr. George Braunlich of Davenport, Ia., urged the AMA to let one bill be sent in such cases. He said the patient wants to know his total expense in one bill. "Too often the patient is broke before he gets the last bill," Dr. Braunlich said. However, Dr. John W. Cline of San Francisco, a surgeon and past president of the AMA, offered a substitute resolution affirming the AMA's "unalterable opposition to see splitting in any guise whatsoever."

The AMA became embroiled in a controversy with the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis when it adopted a Texas resolution scolding the foundation for initiating the Salk vaccination program. The resolution stated the AMA was "surprised and put in a difficult situation so far as public relations were concerned" when without "any official consultation with any qualified group of the AMA" the foundation launched its program to test the serum

Highway 30 Group Renews Officers

en through twice Wednesday and 40 homes were flooded.

But none of the breaks was major.

No Serious Break
If the Riverview dike gives way, only the lightly populated park area will be inundated, City Public Works Director John Tippee said.

"All major levees are holding," Tippee said. "There are some defects but they are not too serious."

Tippee said "quite a battle" was going on in the Riverview area and reinforcements were rushed to the zone to help hundreds of volunteers slam new sandbags into the cracks.

Optimistic Report
The Des Moines River was running at 30.19 feet at 9 a.m., 7.19 feet over official flood stage. The levees averaged 28 feet in height and as many as 5,000 men, women and children worked at one time to build the embankments to a height of 30 feet or more.

"The situation actually looks pretty good right now," Tippee said.

Raccoon Crest Rolling In
Tippee said the threat won't be over for a day or two, until the Raccoon River—which joins the Des Moines River here—crests and begins to recede.

The Des Moines Weather Bureau said the Raccoon should crest at 6 p.m. Friday at 16 1/2 to 17 1/2 feet, five to six feet above bankful. It was at 14.2 feet at 9 a.m.

Col. Nelson Le Clair, Jr., Army district engineer, reported to Washington that two million dollars' damage had been done by the rampaging waters in the Des Moines River valley, mostly to rural areas. He estimated 50,000 acres of rich farmland in the area were inundated.

Water ran over the approaches to four of the 11 bridges spanning the two rivers in the city. The four were closed to traffic.

Tippee estimated 100 houses had been flooded, including 40 in the Riverview area, 25 to 30 in southwest Des Moines below the junction of the two rivers and the rest "scattered up and down" along the river.

However, the Red Cross estimated 1,000 families had been evacuated as a precautionary measure. It set the number of homeless in Des Moines at about 3,000 although other reports said as many as 7,500 were out of their homes.

Says Bayonets Weren't Fixed
During the night, about 30 National Guardsmen aided police in driving away about 1,000 spectators from a downtown levee. Maj. Gen. Fred C. Tandy, state adjutant general, denied reports the guardsmen had used fixed bayonets to drive the onlookers away.

A land-filled levee protecting the entire east side business district appeared in good shape. Officials said they had thrown up 16 inches of free board over the muddy waters and the levee
