E. P. McMANUS IS SUDDENLY STRICKEN

Postmaster and Prominent Citizen of Keokuk Expires This Afternoon at 2:40 O'clock Sitting in His Office.

WAS BORN IN KEOKUK

Served Two Terms as State Senator From Lee County—Was Prominent in City and State.

Edward P. McManus, postmaster and prominent citizen of Keokuk, former state senator from Lee county, died this afternoon at 2:40 o'clock. He was sitting in his chair in his office at the postoffice, when he was stricken and fell. Employees in the office rushed to his assistance and picked him up, but he expired within a couple of minutes from the time he was stricken. His death was due to an attack of heart failure.

Mr. McManus was one of the most prominent men in Keokuk. He was of splendid character, upright and honest and one of the most influential and splendid men in Keokuk. In his home relation he was loving and kind, and to his friends in this city he was known far and wide as a sincere, big-hearted man. His sudden passing cast a shadow over hundreds of his friends, and their deepest sympathy goes out to the bereaved members of his family. Wherever the word was spread that Senator McManus was dead, it brought an expression of sorrow and grief.

Born in Keokuk, Edward P. McManus was born in Keokuk, June 26, 1859. His parents who were both natives of Ireland, were among the earliest settlers of

FARMER SHOT JACK RABBIT

Nice Sleek Fellow Weighing Nine Pounds—He Was Nearly White and Hard to See in Snow.

Victor Peters shot a jack rabbit this morning on his farm, two miles from Keokuk, on the Hilton road. He brought it to town this afternoon and was exhibiting it to his friends. It is a fine fat animal, weighing about nine pounds. Mr. Peters says it belongs to the species known as northern jack rabbits. These are past-masters at the camouflage act, as they are nearly white in winter and very hard to see when there is snow on the ground. In warm weather they are gray. Mr. Peters followed this one four or five miles before he got a shot at it. They are very scarce in this section.

SAVINGS BANK HAS MEETING

Officers and Directors of Keokuk Savings Bank Were Elected at Session Yesterday.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Keokuk Savings bank was held yesterday at the bank. The officers elected were: A. E. Johnston, president; Howard L. Connable and James C. Davis, vice presidents; F. W. Davis, cashier; Howard W. Wood and Walter V. D. Mass, assistant cashiers.

The directors chosen were A. E. Johnstone, B. L. Auwerda, F. W. Davis, Hazen I. Sawyer, Edward K. Johnstone, Howard L. Connable, James C. Davis.

STORM CAUSES TRAFFIC HALT

Chicago Mail Failed to Show Up in Keokuk This Morning—Snow Storm Makes Trains Late.

There was no Chicago mail in Keokuk this morning. The south-bound train missed the fast mail out of Chicago, and it was said that the snow storm of yesterday and Sunday caused the delay in service out of the Windy City.

Trains were reported at the station here to be running late, but to be getting through. The additional snow today, however, may make rail-roading burdensome again.

HOTEL IOWA MEETING

this part of the state and were married in Keokuk where the family has always resided. He graduated from the common schools, afterwards taking a course in business at the Bayliss Commercial college. Leaving school he engaged in school teaching for about three years. From this work he entered the employe of a Keokuk firm, and served as book-keeper for three years, and then went on the road as traveling salesman for three years.

For eight years he successfully followed the occupation of stock man and agriculturist. He gave up this work to become part of the firm of which his father was head, a contracting firm. At the death of his father he associated himself with George S. Tucker under the firm name of Tucker & McManus. The firm has extensive interests and a large quarry near Keokuk. Since Mr. Tucker withdrew from active business a few years ago, Mr. McManus has been at the head of the concern.

Democrat in Politics.

Mr. McManus has been in the public eye more or less during the recent years of his lifetime, serving in the state senate for two terms as senator from Lee county, and was serving at the time of his death as postmaster. He has always been a democrat in politics and one of the most faithful men in his party. He was elected as state senator from Lee county first in 1906 and a second time in 1910. Two years ago Mr. McManus was appointed postmaster in the Keokuk postoffice, succeeding Dr. S. W. Moorhead.

Senator McManus was a member of St. Francis de Sales Catholic church, and was a faithful and devoted christian.

He is survived by his wife, three sons, Edward W. McManus, deputy county attorney, J. C. McManus and Thomas McManus, and one daughter Mrs. Kate McManus Hemmy. One daughter, Mrs. Anna McManus Cochran, died two years ago. Mr. McManus is survived also by his mother Mrs. Patrick McManus, and two sisters, Mrs. J. H. Breheny and Miss Mary McManus. A brother, Thomas F. McManus, died about four years ago.

PRUSSIAN WAR SPEECH

General Von Lieb Says Belgium Must Be Held and France, Already Cursed, Bled White.

[United Press Leased Wire Service] ZURICH, Jan. 8.—“We must recognize only one principle, that might is right and must know neither sentiment nor consideration of humanity or compassion,” said General Von Lieb in a speech before the conservative congress in which he declared Germany must have Courland, Belgium and northern France.

The speech, according to the dispatches received here today, was delivered before the congress meeting at Halle, Prussia.

“We will incorporate Courland, bringing in sixty million Russians and the Slavs nightmare will then ride us no longer,” General Von Lieb asserted.

“We must have Belgium and northern France,” he continued. “The curse of God is upon the French. Portuguese possessions must disappear.

“France must pay until bled white. “You may call me jingo, chauvinista, or anything you like, but we must have a strong peace.”

Journal of the Senate

OF THE

Therefore, Be It Resolved, That in the death of Gilman L. Johnson the state and county in which he resided lost a worthy and upright citizen, a valient soldier and and an honored statesman, and we hereby extend to the bereaved family and friends our sincere sympath.

And Be It Further Resolved, A copy of these resolutions be printed in the journal of the Senate and that the Secretary of the Senate be directed to forward an engrossed copy to the family of the deceased.

A. L. BROXAM,

A. M. PARKER,

H. C. WHITE.

The resolutions were adopted unanimously by a rising vote.

In moving the adoption of the resolution, Senator Broxam spoke in part as follows:

I believe that I am the only member of this senate that was personally acquainted with Mr. Johnson, and I feel at this time there is nothing that I might say that will add to the luster and glory of Mr. Johnston' life.

As a lawyer he was a leader in his profession, always standing for what he thought was right regardless of public opinion or what other people might think. Politically, he was a democrat of the old school, always loyal and true, and now that he has gone to that great beyond, that Home not built by hand, eternal in the heavens, the greatest tribute I can pay to him at this time is that to know him was to honor and love him.

EDWARD P. McMANUS.

Senator Frailey, from a special committee, submitted the following report and moved its adoption:

MR. PRESIDENT—Your committee appointed to prepare resolutions commemorating the life, character and public services of Edward P. McManus, beg leave to submit the following report:

Edward P. McManus, member of the Iowa Senate from Lee county in the Thirty-second, Thirty-third, Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth General Assemblies, was born at Keokuk, Lee county, Iowa, on the 20th day of June, 1857, and died at Keokuk on the 8th day of January, 1918. His death came suddenly and without warning while engaged in his duties as postmaster at Keokuk postoffice. The last days of his life were the busiest. In addition to his official duties as postmaster and his private affairs, he devoted much time and labor to various war activities, being chairman of the Lee County Council of Defense and county food administrator. The exactions of these manifold duties contributed in no small degree to his untimely death.

The life of Edward P. McManus was crowded with many and varied activities. He was successively traveling salesman, farmer, country school teacher, state senator, managing head of successful stone quarries and postmaster. Throughout his entire life he evinced a keen interest in politics. It was the game and not the spoils that appealed to him. Always a staunch democrat, it was only in the later years of his life that he sought or would accept preferment for himself.

Few men in Iowa had a larger acquaintance or more friends than he. His warm Irish heart beat in sympathy with all of God's creatures. His generous nature rejoiced in the triumphs and pleasures of others and suffered in their misfortunes. The old and the young, the rich and the poor, came to him with their troubles and sought his counsel and guidance. A hundred stories might be told of his tender regard for the aged and friendless; of the young men who have found a new spirit and resolution in his words of encouragement; of the poor and destitute whose appeals his generous heart never ignored. To his funeral came the old crippled woman whom others had thoughtlessly passed, but he had left his work to help her down a dangerous stair; came the victim of drink or circumstances who had gone to him in despair and left with courage to make the fight anew; came the little boys and girls who loved him because he loved them and noticed them and played with them. All of these passed by his open casket and dropped a flower or a tear, knowing that each had lost a friend.

Brann, the iconoclast, once said that the place to find the true worth of a man is at his fireside, for there he lays his mask aside and you may tell whether he be imp or angel, king or cur. Edward P. McManus wore no mask. The gentleness that marked his relation with his fellow man was emphasized in his home. The qualities that won the regard and affections of neighbors and friends, made him thrice loved by his family. His home life was ineffably beautiful. His happiest hours were those spent in the family circle rollicking with his grandchildren, and imparting from his pure and wholesome spirit a perpetual benediction.

Optimism was the touchstone of his life. He was an evangel of good cheer who carried the gospel of sunshine into hearts that were desolate and weary. He loved his fellow man. He believed in him and trusted him and found virtues where others could find nothing but fault. No man ever reached that state of wretchedness or degradation that he could not find some redeeming part in him.

With these rare qualities of heart and mind he combined a native wit and an eloquent tongue. Although he avoided public speaking, his fame as an orator was more than local. Nature endowed him with a deep resonant voice, and that rarest of faculties, the power to move men from laughter to tears. His public addresses, like his private utterances bristled with humor and he could touch heights of fancy and sentiment that poetry seldom reaches.

No man loved the beautiful things of nature and life more than he, and none more thoroughly detested the vulgar. His scrap book contains a rare collection of literary gems culled with discriminating taste from his reading. He loved to preserve and commit to memory beautiful passages from poetry and prose which he would frequently recite to the delight of his family and friends. His nature was so sensitive to suffering and pain, he others that he studiously shunned hospitals, for the sight of a fellow in misery affected him keenly and often brought tears to his eyes.

Of all the qualities that he possessed, none so thoroughly marked him with his nobility as his veneration for womanhood. He idolized his wife; his mother he deified. The unsung heroism of motherhood awakened in him an appreciation that he frequently expressed in public and in private. Upon more than one occasion he has taken his pen in hand and written an anonymous tribute to some poor mother who had died unnoticed after a life of silent sacrifice. His sense of justice was shocked that such a life should pass unmentioned, while extravagant praise was heaped upon the less worthy.

Is it strange that when this noble spirit left its earthly abode, it seemed to take with it out of the world a part of the joy and happiness of life? Is it strange that the flowers are not quite so fragrant, that there is a touch of sadness in the song of the bird, and that the sun itself, has lost some of its radiance to those he loved?

(Signed)

JOSEPH R. FRAILEY,
A. V. PROUDFOOT,
BYRON W. NEWBERRY,
Committee.

The resolutions were adopted unanimously by a rising vote.

In moving the adoption of the resolutions, Senator Frailey spoke as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT AND SENATORS—When those whom we hold dear have reached the end of life and laid their burdens down, it is but natural for us, their friends, to pay our tribute of respect and love, to tell their virtues, to express our sense of loss and speak above their sculptured clay some word of hope.

And so we meet tonight. This is a time of sorrow and of memory and of love, that by the strength of its undying faith, brushes away the burdens of the years and lives again amid the sweet and saddened scenes of yesterday. It is a day sacred to our dead, who deathless linger in the country of the spirit, where the mystery and the pain and the yearning of this life is infinitely satisfied or infinitely quieted. No pen can trace its portent; no tongue can tell its pathos; it is a time for heart and soul whose fullest speech is silence.

Edward P. McManus was my immediate predecessor in this Senate. The resolution that has just been read but briefly epitomizes the record of a great and noble soul. He was my friend for many, many years—a friend that never failed in fidelity, in counsel or in need.

When he was called to higher responsibilities in private and official life, I succeeded him in this Senate. Purely as a matter of sentiment, that probably he alone could understand, I selected here the very desk that was his for eight years. Many is the time, after his retirement, that he has sat here by my side and that I have profited by his wisdom and experience and advice.

Even now, after a lapse of more than a year, it is hard, indeed, to realize that he is dead, and tonight his sweet and virile spirit and his stainless activity seem to abide here like a living flame in this chamber where he teacher, and wrought so honestly and so well.
