Whom we live again. On that faith the church's whole action is based. Her prayers plead for pity and mercy for divine consideration that the soul may not suffer the loss of God eternally. That great truth gives the best meaning to our mortal years. By every act and deed we are building up the hope for a blessed hereafter. It is the unwise man who exaggerates the present, forgetting the hereafter, the hope of which gives the only comfort when he must go. To those of faith this parting is but a reunion with those they love, but above all with Him Who calls them home.

Had Advantages.

"Mr. Schrup gave himself with great care and success to the duties of the present, and his life was exceptionally successful from that point of view. He had the advantages of the old fashioned training. His briefer schooling was more intense with no tendency to effeminacy or weakening of character. He was a sturdy man of manly character, due probably in part to inheritance and to the preparation in boyhood for a manly life. His whole career was colored by a deep faith especially noticeable in his last days. He felt a solicitude in the things of the day, but when he faced the great issue he dismissed all thoughts of business. The faith of years energized his every faculty and his whole vision was of the future. He devoted all to God, into whose presence he was to go. The church gives the only immortality we have here. Daily prayers are offered by every person whose loved ones are gone. This is the beautiful link that binds us to those who have result of any change in the present policy of the prohibition department to ferret out and prosecute home brewers who exceed the legal alcoholic limit in their brewing. It was asserted today by department officials.

From the attitude of the department of justice and the prohibition bureau, it appeared that the Hill decision will be to all intents and purposes "ignored" by the prohibition enforcement authorities.

Attorney General Stone said it was extremely unlikely the government would take any appeal in the case.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 11.—(By The Associated Press.)—Representative John Philip Hill, of Baltimore, was acquitted by a jury in United States court today of violating the Volstead law by manufacturing intoxicating wine and cider at his home, No. 3 West Franklin street.

The fifth and sixth counts of the indictment, which charged Colonel Hill with maintaining a common nuisance at his home, were dismissed under instructions from Judge Morris A. Soper, who presided at the trial. The trial was the result of a test case forced by Colonel Hill, who maintained the Volstead law gave the farmer a right to manufacture cider and wine, but withheld from the city men the right to manufacture beer.

The trial brought from Judge Soper the opinion that the clause of the Volstead act defining beverages of more than half of one per cent alcoholic content as illegal did not apply to home made wines and cider, provided the product is non-intoxicating "in fact."

Judge Soper also indicated by his rulings and his charge to the jury that the burden rested upon the government to show that such home products were intoxicating in fact, and a violation of the law.

Members of the Columbia college vested choir, under the direction of Rev. Father Dress, sang the mass. Miss Doris McCaffrey presided at the organ.

At the conclusion of the mass, His Grace, the Most Rev. J. J. Keane, archbishop of Dubuque, delivered the sermon.

The Archbishop's Sermon.

The archbishop commented at length on the career of the deceased, bringing to the congregation which completely filled the church his constant theme of the nearness of death to life.

"Faith in the immortality of the soul and in life after death is our sole comfort," declared the archbishop, who went on to say that despite the stings of this life below, virtue is rewarded in the end. We both make our home here and above, he asserted, adding that the church's whole activity is based on this faith.

"Going is ever a parting," said the eminent speaker, "and all of us rebel at having to go, but we should remember the words of the apostle that all shall live again in Christ, the dogma of the Christian faith in a few words. We inherit human bodies by nature, subject to certain dissolution, and despite this fact we resent this necessity even though we should realize that we are born to death and that this life with its stings and increasing shadows but brings us to death."

Commenting more directly on the life of Nicholas Schrup, the archbishop touched upon the difference between the education of today and that of yesterday. "Today," the speaker declared, "there is too much refinement in the whole of our educational effort. Not so when Mr. Schrup was a boy. His early training and his early efforts made him hardy and sturdy, manly. It also gave him a deep faith so that as the end approached, even though in life having been a successful man and necessarily interested in the things of the present, he put aside all solicitude for things of today and prepared himself for the future life."

All Live Again.

"As all in Adam die, so all shall live again in Christ. This fact, universally experienced, expressed in the tersest terms, is a dogma of Christian faith. We inherit human bodies and because of our mortality are destined to die. Our very nature is subject to dissolution, yet we resent the dissolution and seek to prolong the present."

Pass Resolutions On Death of N. J. Schrup

Resolutions of regret at the recent death of Nicholas Schrup, prominent Dubuque financier, were adopted Wednesday evening by local Dubuque insurance men and by members of the Iowa Fire Underwriters' Club. The resolutions by the local insurance men follow:

"Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God to call to His Eternal Home Nicholas J. Schrup, our friend and fellow worker in the field of fire insurance;

"And whereas, we had recognized in him a pioneer of fire insurance in Dubuque and the State of Iowa, developing himself and his interests by his vision, exceptional business judgment and constant application to all details to the end that he passed away a national figure in the insurance world, a success in business, with his companions standing as monuments to his indomitable characteristics;

"And whereas, through the years he had always co-operated with the local insurance fraternity, evidence his friendship by counsel and encouragement;

"And whereas, we feel that his death has terminated a remarkable career and has removed from the city of Dubuque and our own immediate associations a sterling citizen;

"Be it Resolved, by the Fire Insurance Agents of Dubuque, assembled this twelfth day of November, 1924, that they deplore the death of Nicholas J. Schrup most keenly and that they express to the saddened family their deepest sympathy;

"And be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records and a copy sent to the family."

Resolutions adopted by the Iowa Fire Underwriters' Field club follow:

"The Great Shadow in its relentless forward march has removed from among us a truly remarkable man, Nicholas J. Schrup—one known throughout the country not only in his chosen field, but in legislative and financial circles as well. His personal interest in our business, his enviable reputation as an underwriter, his exceptional ability as an executive, won for him not only success in business but that greatest of all things worth while, the love and admiration of those who came within his field of endeavor.

"Be it resolved, therefore, that in his passing we recognize the loss of a progressive leader, an honest competitor and a true friend. And be it further resolved that his home folks be given every assurance that we are sharing their sorrow with them this day.

We look upon death as something untrue. We are born to die and life is darkened by the shadow of death. Though gray hairs and wrinkled faces warn us of the coming dissolution, we still rebel. The seeming conflict springs from the deep truth but a few ventures to question, that our life does not end at the grave."

"Faith gives us the only comfort in the belief that virtue will be rewarded and that an absolutely just judgment awaits us. We are wonderfully made with the power to fashion our own destiny, with the help of Him in Whom we die and in

He was a simple, honest man who spoke the truth, who paid his debts, and did his work thoroughly and was satisfied with what he earned.

A descendant of the old stock of Ireland who fought against oppression is bound to be free at any cost. He hated tyranny in any form. The poet says:

"I honor the man who is ready to sink
Half his present repute for the freedom to think;
And when he is through, be his thought strong or weak,
Will sink t'other half for the freedom to speak,
Caring naught for what vengeance the mob has in store—
Let that mob be the upper ten thousand, or lower."

That was the spirit of a typical Senator. That is the spirit that is needed now. Never has it been needed more than it is today—to guard our land against the oppression of the demagogue.

While such a man lives, his fellowship is a blessing and when he dies his memory is sacred.

The resolution was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

NICHOLAS J. SCHRUP

MR. PRESIDENT: Your committee which was appointed to report a resolution commemorating the life, character and services of the late Nicholas J. Schrup, begs leave to submit the following report and moves its adoption:

The death of Hon. Nicholas J. Schrup deprived Iowa of one of the valued pioneer citizens, whose career is typical of the unwavering purposefulness of the early settlers of mid-western America.

Nicholas J. Schrup was born in Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, August 23, 1853. Two years later his parents emigrated to America and settled on a farm in Mosalem township. Here their son was brought up and here he spent his youth. At seventeen he entered the St. Francis Normal School, Milwaukee, from which he was graduated in 1874. For a time he followed the profession of teaching, first at Cascade, Iowa, later at Mattoon, Illinois. This was to be but a stepping-stone, however, to the business career for which he was eminently fitted, and of which he made a marked success. It was during his leisure hours at this time that he began writing insurance for the Old German Insurance Company of Freeport, Illinois, thus laying the corner stone of his future business career. In 1883 he resigned the lucrative post of Deputy County Auditor to organize the Dubuque Fire and Marine Insurance Company.

In 1884, Mr. Schrup was married to Mary A. Kransz, a pioneer of the North Side of Chicago. Four children were born to them, Charles J., William M., Rosalyn M., and Oliver—all of whom are still living.

Although Mr. Schrup was pre-eminently the business man, rather than the statesman, he found time to serve the community in various capacities, first as a member, then as president of the Board of Education. Later, in 1910, he became State Senator from Dubuque county, an office to which he was re-elected in 1914. To his public service Mr. Schrup brought the shrewd foresightedness that made him successful in business. Brought up on a farm, educated for and practicing a profession for a time, he nevertheless found expression for his abilities in the sharp give-and-take of the modern business world. He never failed in any of his undertakings. His word was as good as his bond. Men anxious to succeed were eager for his advice. His quiet self-confidence inspired in others confidence in him and in themselves. These qualities made him an invaluable member of senatorial financial committees. His confidence and his experience outweighed any speeches that could be made and matters under his advice were practically settled in committees before they reached the floor.

In his private business capacity, he was the president of the Dubuque Fire and Marine Insurance Company for many years, and, at the time of his death was chairman of its Board of Directors. He was President of the National Reserve Insurance Company, of the Pioneer Trust and Savings Bank, and the American Trust and Savings Bank. He was a director of the Consolidated National Bank and of a number of Dubuque corporations. He was a member of the Dubuque Chamber of Commerce, and a Regent of Columbia College. In 1923 he was honored by King Albert of Belgium, who conferred upon him Knighthood, Order of the Crown.

Mr. Schrup was also active in local organizations. He belonged to the Dubuque Golf Club, the Elks, and the Knights of Columbus.

Although for several years Mr. Schrup had not been in his customary good health, his last illness was only of ten days' duration. All members of his family were present at his bedside when he died, and he was comforted by the last rites of the Catholic church, of which he was a life-long member. He died at 9:00 p. m. on Monday, November 24, 1924. He is survived by his wife and the children, and his grand daughter, Eleanor Mary.

Senator Schrup had a great influence in the good management of public and private business affairs. He was never willing to sacrifice a principle in order to gain a place, and as time goes on he will always be referred to as one of the outstanding figures of his part of the state. With him Iowa loses a notable figure in her list of worthy citizens.

Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved By the Senate of the Forty-first General Assembly of Iowa, that the Senate take this occasion to express its high appreciation of his lofty character and faithful public service, and adopt this memorial in the name of the public of Iowa as a tribute to his name and memory.

Be It Further Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions appear in the Journal of the Senate, and that the secretary be directed to send an engrossed copy thereof to his family.

Senator Horchem spoke in part as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT and GENTLEMEN: I believe that the resolution explains better than I can tell you the qualities of Mr. Schrup.

I remember the first time I met Mr. Schrup. It was when I declared myself a candidate for county superintendent of schools. I was advised by friends to see Mr. Schrup. I remember how I entered his office and how he received me. He apparently was a hard man to get acquainted with. He let me do all the talking. After I had told him my story he said, "Now, my boy, I can see that you are not experienced in politics. May I ask you by what name you are known?" And I told him "Ben." He said, "Well, Ben, let me tell you something. Don't tell everybody everything you know. It is all right as long as you are talking to friends to tell all you have told me, but be sure you know who you are talking to. You will find after you get along a little in politics that the newspapers will say things about you that you do not like, but never pay any attention to them. Just go ahead as if nothing had happened." He then gave me a list of names and told me to tell them that Nick Schrup said that I should see them. He said, "I shall do all I can for you." This was my personal experience.

I have known hundreds of boys that have been advised by him in different ways. I personally have sent many a boy to Mr. Schrup for advice. I remember an occasion when the board of supervisors called a meeting in the rooms of the school board, we were talking about the days of real sport, and the question up before us was what had been the best day of our lives and while we were in the midst of the discussion the secretary of the board spoke out from the adjoining room and said, "I shall never forget the happiest day of my life. It was the day Mr. Nick Schrup came to me and told me I would be the next county auditor. When Mr. Schrup said that I felt so relieved, for I knew that if he had so much confidence in me I would be elected." Everyone knew that Nick Schrup could be relied upon for good sound judgment and advice.

We always heard people asking, "Did you ask Nick Schrup?" "What does Nick Schrup say?" or "Did you see Nick Schrup?"

Mr. Schrup was a devout man, he was a man of few words. Everybody in Dubuque feels that much of the success of that city is due to the industry and good sound business sense of Nick Schrup. He aided and helped to mould the destiny of that city.

The resolution was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.
