English Duke Seeks to Have Vanderbilt Marriage Nullified

(By The Associated Press)
LONDON, Nov. 11.—It is reported that the Duke of Marlboro is seeking to have his marriage with the former Consuelo Vanderbilt of New York nullified by Pope Pius. The Westminster Gazette says that it understands the duke, whose present wife was the former Gladys Marie Deacon, daughter of Edward Parker Deacon of Boston, desires to embrace the Roman Catholic faith.

Charles Richard John Spencer Churchill, ninth duke of Marlboro, in 1895 married the daughter of the late William K. Vanderbilt. The ceremony in New York cost the Vanderbilt family $1,000,000. The couple lived together for 12 years. Then there was a disagreement and the duchess sued for divorce on the grounds of desertion and misconduct. The duke did not contest the suit and the divorce was granted.

Two sons were born of the union—the Marquis of Blandford and Lord Ivor Spencer-Churchill. The duchess is now married to Jacques Balsan, a Frenchman. The duke married Miss Deacon in Paris in 1921. A Presbyterian minister officiated. He read the church of England service but left out the word "obey."

Brookhart, who for thirty years has been prominent in the life of the Washington community and for the last eight years served as state senator from this district, passed away at his home on East Washington street this afternoon at one o'clock. For a month or more he had been making a valient struggle against death, but for several days had been in a state of coma and attending physicians realized that his death was a matter of a short time.

No funeral plans had been made this afternoon, awaiting word from two brothers who live in Idaho and may be able to come for the services.

Senator Brookhart was born in Scotland county, Missouri, Sept. 9, 1871. He came to Washington in 1894. ORGANIZATIONS IN COUNTRY
HAVE OPPORTUNITY TO AID A WORTHY CAUSE

Stating that it did not seem possible to have the country districts near Washington organized as completely as in town for a Red Cross roll call, Chairman J. Reade McCrory suggests that possibly some of the enterprising women's clubs in the country might undertake the campaign in their own groups and neighborhoods.

There are several strong and influential women's clubs in the country near Washington, and they are always on the lookout for worthy objects on which to concentrate their activities. Mr. McCrory, realizing this situation, believes the club women should be given an opportunity to aid in the drive.

If any of the leaders in these clubs are interested, the county chairman asks that they notify him, and he will see that the material for a membership campaign is forwarded to them immediately. He can be reached by telephone or by mail at his home here.

Mr. McCrory says that if all the clubs respond to this suggestion, it may develop that the country surrounding Washington will report more members than the town. Washington now has 500 Red Cross members, but the chairman hopes this number will be materially increased for the next year. Membership costs one dollar a year.

The roll call in Washington is to be accomplished next Tuesday by forty women in four groups. The nation-wide canvass for memberships begins today and ends Thanksgiving day.

Senator Brookhart was born in Scotland county, Missouri, Sept. 9, 1871. He came to Washington in 1894. He taught a country school when he was 17 years old and worked on farms during his summer vacations. In 1896 he was graduated from Washington academy. While he served as principal of a Washington grade school, he studied law in the office of his brother, and was admitted to the bar in 1898. The same year, he was appointed county attorney to fill the unexpired term of his brother during the latter's service in the Spanish-American war. That was the only public office he held until elected to the state senate for his first term in 1918.

The senator was a Mason and a member of the Knights of Pythias. Mrs. Brookhart, who survives him, with a daughter, Miss Margaret, five brothers and four sisters, was Miss Nellie Noble of Selma, Iowa.

The brothers and sisters are Col. S. W. Brookhart, T. L. Brookhart, Mrs. Myrtle Poole and Mrs. James Quinn of this community; Newton Geo. W. and Miss Lillian of Pocatello, Idaho; O. E. Brookhart of Des Moines, and Miss Della Brookhart of Chicago.

Supported Public Economy

James L. Brookhart during his two terms in the state senate, was an active member of a group pledged to strict public economy. During the last session of his senate service this group styled itself the "progressive" bloc and was, for a time, in virtual control of the upper chamber. Mr. Brookhart was chairman of one of the important judiciary committees during his last term.

In legislative matters, Senator Brookhart's factions followed a course somewhat similar to that of his brother, Col. Smith W. Brookhart, his proposals looking in general, to lower taxation, sharp curtailment of public expenditures, cooperative banking and decentralization of public power.

Legislative Record

He was a co-author of the act passed in the 41st general assembly, under which the state levies upon public fund deposits of the counties to create a fund with which to Masonic history in Washington was dwelt upon yesterday at the Temple building by members of the order who celebrated the granting of a charter to Washington lodge and Accepted Masons progress of the order in this city, from the time the first man became master of the order to the present. The speaker emphasized the importance of the order in the development of the city.

An appeal for the development of Masonry in Washington was made by Prof. John Grinnell, who is the principal addresser of the program. He enlarged upon the principles of Masonry and stressed the opportunity which comes to those who are true to their principles.

Not the least interesting part of the program was the address made by George G. Grinnell, who has been a member of the Washington lodge for many years, and who not only has served at the lodge here, but has also served in the Iowa grand lodge. He went on to praise the pioneers who organized the lodge and the progress of the order in this city.

Other talks were given by Charles A. Dewey, chairman of the meeting, and Alex Eastwood and Alex I. spoke quite briefly. The program was a success and the local lodge, now being placed on the list of local lodges, has only as far as Mt. Pleasant to engine and tire to his best wishes to the

A little inter-denominational group of present and former army chaplains who conducted the religious services at the tomb when the unknown five years ago was laid beneath the great granite slab that covers his resting place. The president's aide, Captain Leven C. Allen, placed upon it a wreath from the commander in chief and Mrs. Coolidge, not forgotten in the departures for the Missouri ceremonies.

Little else marked the day visibly in Washington. At President Wilson's tomb a group of his friends planned to meet to honor the war president and there was prospect of much reverent coming and going in the cathedral where he sleeps.

But aside from that the special guards around the Unknown's tomb, the brief military salute at the Fort Meyer garrison post, and lying principles stressed the opportunity which comes to the sons. Not the least in program was the made by George has been a member of the lodge for years, and who no Norman Chipman, who has served at lodge here. Legislative Record

He was a co-author of the act passed in the 41st general assembly, under which the state levies upon public fund deposits of the counties to create a fund with which to reimburse counties that lost money through bank failures. He also supported the bill in that session proposing guarantee of all individual bank deposits and offered a co-operative banking measure of his own.

Senator Brookhart's hardest fights in the senate perhaps were on issues relating to the state highway commission which he repeatedly attempted to divest of blanket authority in highway matters. His chief criticism of the commission was that it attempted to force counties to adopt road building programs which were beyond the requirements of the county concerned in an effort to build a state and interstate road system.

The senator was a candidate in the 1926 primary for re-nomination. He did not make an aggressive campaign because of his ill health, and was defeated by Will Carden of Winfield.

AINSWORTH—Mrs. W. H. Anderson received word recently of the death of her nephew, Walter Sweet. Mr. Sweet was employed in a paper mill at Spokane, Wash. Smoke came into the room where he was working and he with other men left the building, and no one saw him re-enter, which he did as his lifeless body was found where he had been over come with smoke. He was 52 years old and made the most of it. The touch-down came in the third quarter on a forward pass from Bowen to Blaul.

Layton was the best ground gainer for Washington, and with the aid of the line which opened up big holes for him, was responsible for several of Washington's first downs. It was a snappy game all the way, with Burlington having rather the best of it, but not coming anywhere near outclassing the locals.

The game was played on a sticky field, which had once been sowed to grass, which had come up sparsely, leaving the surface a smear of clay mud yesterday. It is believed that Washington would have had considerably more chance on a dry field, for the Burlington line was apparently easy to smash, in spite of the insecure footing.

In an account of the Armistice day parade, the Burlington Hawkeye yesterday had the following to say about the Washington high school band: "The Washington high school band in black and gold uniforms created considerable comment with their snappy playing." The uniforms are orange and black, however. In its account of the game, the
