Prominent Russell Man Passed Away

All of Russell was shocked and saddened last Friday morning to learn of the death of C. D. Smith who passed away at Des Moines on Thursday September 10th at the M. E. Hospital where he had been taking treatments. Until just shortly before his death he was not considered in any danger. Doctors stated he was in a rundown condition and only needed treatment. Last week he became much worse and his ultimate death resulted from hardening of the arteries.

Russell lost a fine citizen and his family lost a wonderful husband and father.

Funeral services were held at the Methodist church at 2 p. m. on Sunday, conducted by Rev. Clark. Interment was made in the Russell cemetery.

remainder of their lives on the old homestead, which is now in the possession of Charles Kilbourn, their son. Mrs. Cobb was born on the 20th of March, 1861, and is the second in order of birth in a family of three. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Cobb, as follows: Itasca, who died at the age of eight months; Arlo B., who was born on the 5th of January, 1889, and was graduated from the Allerton high school with the class of 1909, following which he took a course in the Capital City Commercial College at Des Moines; Olra A., who was born on the 4th of November, 1891, and was graduated from the Allerton high school with the class of 1913; Rola R., whose birth occurred on November 25, 1893, a high school student; Lora M., who was born on the 6th of July, 1897, also attending high school; and Laro F., whose natal day was the 13th of September, 1901, in grammar school.

In matters of citizenship Mr. Cobb is public-spirited, taking an active interest in all movements affecting the general welfare or progress of the community. He is one of the active members of the Wayne County Farmers' Institute, and was president of this organization for two years, while for several years he was president of the Allerton Chautauqua Association. His political support he gives to the republican party and cast his first vote for President Garfield. He has served with efficiency in various local offices, having been trustee or clerk of Warren township for sixteen years, while for four he was a member of the school board. Mr. Cobb is a man of good judgment and keen discernment in matters of business and has met with more than average success in the development of his interests. He holds stock in various local enterprises and is numbered among the representative citizens of the town. Progressive in his ideas, trustworthy in his business methods and honorable and upright in his private life, Mr. Cobb is accorded the confidence and esteem of a large circle of acquaintances and is considered by those who know him a worthy representative of one of the county's honored pioneer families.

CLINTON D. SMITH.

One of the most successful men of Washington township and even of Lucas county, is Clinton D. Smith, who with few interruptions has made his home in the aforementioned township since 1864. Along various lines prosperity has come to Mr. Smith, for he is not only one of the foremost farmers and stock-raisers of his district, marketing more hogs than any other farmer in Washington township, but he also owns conjointly with his brother, E. A. Smith, three hundred acres of choice land in Benton township and property in Russell, where he is also a director and vice president of the Russell State Bank. Moreover, Mr. Smith is gifted with an inventive mind, being the first man to receive a patent on a road drag, and he now owns a factory in Russell for the manufacture of these implements. Prosperity, even wealth, has come to Mr. Smith entirely through his own efforts, for he started in a humble way and what he has achieved well entitles him to that distinction of which an American is most proud, the right to be called a self-made man.

While Mr. Smith has made large personal gains, he has been a constructive factor in the development of agriculture and industries in Lucas county, and his attainments are largely to be considered public assets. Ever interested in the general welfare and material as well as moral and intellectual advancement, he has given readily of his time and means to promote worthy public enterprises or private enterprises which contribute to the resources of the section.

Clinton D. Smith was born in Muskingum county, Ohio, August 5, 1857, a son of Jacob and Emmeline (Vogel) Smith, the father born in Muskingum county in March, 1827, and the mother a native of Germany. In 1862 the parents with their family, including Clinton, who was then but five years of age, came overland to Wapello county, Iowa, and made settlement in Blakesburg, where they resided until 1864, when a removal to Washington township was made. The father died at Russell on the 26th of April, 1890. The mother, who had more claim to be called an American than a German, for she was brought to this country when only a few months old, also passed away in Russell. Mr. and Mrs. Smith became the parents of six children: Augusta, born November 2, 1853, who married Thomas C. Thorne, a prosperous agriculturist, who operates a fine farm on section 16, Union township, and of whom more extended mention is made on another page of this work. Mrs. Adelia Thornbrue, who was born March 12, 1855, and who makes her home in Des Moines, Iowa; Clinton D., our subject; E. A., born April 22, 1859, also a resident of Russell and owning valuable land in partnership with our subject in Benton township; Mrs. Violet Coen, whose birth occurred on February 15, 1861, and who makes her home in Afton, Iowa; and Mrs. Adessa Plotts, born January 25, 1866, who resides in Des Moines.

Clinton D. Smith was brought by his parents to Wapello county, Iowa, in 1862, and in 1864 removed with the family to Washington township, of which he has ever since been a continuous resident, barring some extended trips and vacations which he took at various times to Oklahoma, California, Texas and other places. An ox team was used when the family made the overland journey to Iowa and Mr. Smith still has the yoke and chain in his possession. In the acquirement of his education he attended the pioneer schools of Washington township and it is worthy of mention that his first teacher was John A. Logan. Acquiring such knowledge as the crude educational facilities of the time permitted, he laid aside his text-books at the usual age and early in life began to earn his own support. In his early days in Washington township he drove six yoke of oxen, breaking the prairie and preparing land for cultivation. Conditions were most primitive at the time and wild animals were yet to be found here. Rattlesnakes were plentiful and troublesome. His first wages after attaining manhood were fifteen dollars a month, but as he was frugal and saving he succeeded in laying away a portion of his earnings, judiciously investing his money. Mr. Smith was one of those who at one time sought the opportunities Oklahoma offered to the new settler and was among the first to take up residence at Oklahoma City, turning the primitive press from which was issued the first edition of the Oklahomanian. He was the fifth white man in the Arapahoe and Cheyenne reservations in Oklahoma at the time they were opened. The other four members of the party were General James B. Weaver, Captain Couch, the postmaster of Oklahoma City, and the United States land commissioner. There were present at the time twelve Indian chiefs. As the years have passed Mr. Smith has become one of the most successful farmers, one of the largest stock-raisers, and one of the wealthiest business men of the county. Beginning by earning his wages in a humble way, he has amassed a fortune and his prosperity is to be ascribed entirely to his energy and perseverance. Mr. Smith owns in partnership with his brother, E. A. Smith, three hundred acres of choice land in Benton township with one set of improvements, which include substantial and modern buildings and the most up-to-date farm machinery. Mr. Smith also owns over two hundred and fifty-five acres in Washington township, upon which he lives, and considerable property in Russell. Moreover, he is connected with financial interests of the city, being a director and vice president of the Russell State Bank, in the management of which he is helpful by virtue of these positions. Mr. Smith has also been successful along another line, having received a patent on a road drag, which he now extensively manufactures in his own plant at Russell. This drag has been used in many parts of Iowa and Missouri and has proven successful from the start. However, Mr. Smith gives most of his attention to his stock-raising interests. On his farm of two hundred and fifty-five acres, located on section 4, Washington township, which is one of the most valuable properties in the entire county and modernly improved, can be found many barns and sheds for the great number of head of live stock that he cares for each year. He has full-blooded Duroc-Jersey swine and handles a good grade of other classes of stock. He enjoys the reputation of raising more hogs in Washington township than any other man engaged along that line.

In Wayne county, Iowa, on May 7, 1896, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Betty M. Wilson, who was born at Warsaw, that county, July 3, 1868. She grew to womanhood in that locality and there attended common school. Being particularly gifted, she studied music at Allerton, this state, and afterward at Kansas City. She also acquired a serviceable business education, taking a course in stenography and typewriting at Des Moines, Iowa. Her parents, Greenberry and Mary Jane (Rankin) Wilson, were among the early pioneers of Wayne county and natives of Indiana and Ohio respectively. The father died in Wayne county, passing away in early manhood at the age of thirty-eight years, but the mother now resides in Des Moines. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson became the parents of the following children, all of whom were born in Wayne county: Mrs. Cora O. Palladay, born May 11, 1867, who died in Oklahoma in 1906; Mrs. Clinton D. Smith; and Elmer F., born December 16, 1871, who died at Allerton, June 23, 1894. Mrs. Wilson married again, her second union being with John W. Rankin, their home now being in Des Moines. Of this union was born, in 1880, one son, Charles Glenn Rankin, a resident of Spencer, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have four children: Vogel Wilson, born January 24, 1898; Lorita Colette, born March 31, 1900; Dorothy Margaret, January 4, 1902; and Theodore J., born September 1, 1904. Miss Lorita Smith was born in El Paso, Texas, where the parents then sojourned, but the other children are natives of Washington township. All have been reared in Russell and are at present attending the public schools of the city.

Mr. Smith took a prominent part in the campaign of 1836, using his influence for the election of Samuel J. Tilden for president. He is a democrat in his political beliefs and adheres to the principles of the party. Public-spirited and progressive, his attention has been given to public office and he has been a member of the school board and school treasurer of Washington township for twenty-four years. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Russell and takes an active and helpful interest in its work. At various times he has traveled extensively over the western and southern sections of the United States, visiting Oklahoma, California, Texas and other divisions of this great country. He has thereby greatly enhanced his outlook upon life and has gathered valuable information and experience which have helped him to attain that position which he now occupies as one of the wealthiest men of the county. His interest in agricultural matters is also evident from the fact that he is a life member of the Farmers' National Congress. Mr. Smith is also one of the men known as commissioners from whose ranks the executive committee of the Farmers' National Congress is chosen. Mr. Smith is the member of that committee from Iowa. The foregoing is but a brief account of what Mr. Smith has achieved in Lucas county, but those who can read between the lines readily perceive the chief characteristics which have led him to success. These are honest and fair methods, frugality, self-control, energy, perseverance and incessant watchfulness for opportunities, of which he has taken advantage as they have presented themselves. There is no one in Lucas county who begrudges Mr. Smith his attainments and who does not recognize that they have been fairly won and are well merited. They are what every American citizen tries to achieve, and that he has reached the goal is proof of his extraordinary qualifications. It must not, however, be presumed that Mr. Smith has viewed his plans only from the point of his own progress, for he has always considered others and is much guided by the effect of his actions upon the general welfare. He has contributed much toward the satisfactory conditions that now prevail in Lucas county and Washington township, and his name will find a place in the annals of the history of this county among those men who have labored for feasible and lasting achievements. His citizenship is highly commendable and should serve as an example to the present and coming generations.

J. H. CLARK.

J. H. Clark, who has lived in this section of the state for almost six decades, is one of the prosperous and popular citizens of Corydon, where for a number of years he was engaged in the mercantile business. During the past few years, however, he has been employed as a traveling salesman for Chicago, Pennsylvania and Iowa wholesale houses and in this connection has also won a gratifying measure of success.

Mr. Clark was born near Fort Wayne, in Adams county, Indiana, on the 28th of April, 1850, his parents being John and Elizabeth (Little) Clark. The father was born in Scott county, Indiana, on the 22d of February, 1817, while the mother's birth occurred in Muskingum county, Ohio, in August, 1820. In 1852 they made the overland journey to the west and on the 24th of October, 1854, spent on the home farm and his education being acquired in the rural schools of his day. He became a pioneer settler of Union County, where he was first engaged in general farming, but later centered all of his activities in the grain and live stock business, in which he was successfully occupied for a long period of years, but at present is living in comfortable retirement at Creston, Iowa. He still has large interests and is accounted one of the substantial men and good citizens of his community. He is a Republican in politics and an active member of the Congregational Church. In Iowa Mr. Gault was united in marriage with Miss Madge Long, who was born in Pennsylvania, a daughter of Rev. David Long, also a native of the Keystone State, and for many years a minister of the United Brethren Church. Mrs. Gault died February 11, 1902, in the faith of the Congregational Church, having been the mother of four children: Roy B., of this review; George B., a livestock buyer and shipper at Creston; Earl, who is engaged in the stock business at Des Moines; and Grace, the wife of Earl Trenholm, cashier of the Gas and Electric Company, of Lincoln, Nebraska.

The public schools of Creston furnished Roy B. Gault with his educational training, and his first employment was with his father in the grain and livestock business, which he followed until the United States entered the World war. He had become a member of the Iowa National Guard at the age of eighteen years, and in 1917 went with his command to Camp Mills. In November of that year he went overseas with the One Hundred and Sixty-eighth Infantry, Forty-second Division, A. E. F., and remained with that outfit until March, 1918, when he was transferred to the Division Headquarters, and served until the close of the war, with the rank of captain. On his return to the United States he rejoined the One Hundred Sixty-eighth Infantry, but again was transferred to Division Headquarters, and still is a member of the Iowa National Guard.

Upon resuming the duties of civilian life Mr. Gault again engaged in business with his father, which he followed until 1924, when he was appointed United States marshal, following the duties of this office for one term. He then took charge of the motor vehicle department of the State of Iowa, and since March 1, 1928, has centered his entire abilities and activities in discharging its responsibilities. He has established an excellent record for steadfast and intelligent handling of the duties of his department, and has the confidence of the public and the respect and esteem of his associates. Mr. Gault is a member of the Congregational Church, and as a fraternalist is a Knight Templar Mason and a Shriner, and is also a past exalted ruler of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He is a past commander of Champaign Post, American Legion, at Creston, occupying this office for one and one-half years, and under his administration the general condition of the post was greatly improved, and its financial affairs placed upon a firm and substantial basis. He also served as president of the Creston Chamber of Commerce, and took an active part on the civic welfare of the community.

On June 22, 1922, Mr. Gault was united in marriage with Miss Maude Heflen, who was born on a farm in Union County, Iowa, a daughter of Frank Heflen, a railroad engineer in the service of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. Mr. and Mrs. Gault have no children.

CLINTON D. SMITH, of Russell, Lucas County, was brought to Iowa when five years old, and has lived in Lucas County since 1865. His active life has brought him an unusual range of interests and activities. He has always been identified with lands as an owner and practical farmer, is a banker at Russell, is a former member of the Legislature and has filled many posts of honor and trust in his community.

Mr. Smith was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, August 5, 1857, son of Jacob and Emeline (Vogle) Smith. His father was also a native of Ohio, was a blacksmith and wagon maker, and after coming to Iowa settled on a farm and became one of the influential citizens in his locality. Clinton D. Smith has a brother, Eugene, who also lives at Russell, and a sister, Mrs. Dessie Plotts, of Des Moines.

It was in September, 1862, while the Civil war was in progress, that the family started from their home in Southern Ohio and with covered wagon and oxen crossed the country to Wapello County, Iowa. The youngest of the six children was six weeks old. It was a time of pioneer transportation facilities, and many times the family had to cross swollen streams on the backs of the mules. From Wapello County the family in 1865 moved to Lucas County. Here Clinton D. Smith made that preparation for life which is obtained from schools and books. He attended a country school a few weeks in the year, studying the old time textbooks, associating with boys and girls from other farms in the neighborhood, and with frequently a teacher whose qualifications of learning were only a little better than those of the older scholars themselves. When he was nine years of age he was given a practical responsibility in the routine of work on the farm when he and an older sister rode the range herding their father's cattle.

The day he was twenty-one Mr. Smith started out for himself, to quote his own words, "bare-footed, without a penny, pocket knife or bandanna handkerchief." He hired out to work for a neighboring farmer for fifteen dollars a month. It was a humble beginning, in which his unbounded energy, courage and determination were his chief assets. In a few years he had put himself in the ranks of independent farmers, and steadily through the years has kept in touch with farming and stock raising in Lucas County, and in his business and public career he has been a representative of the agricultural attitude of his section of the state.

Mr. Smith for twenty-two years has been associated in the banking business, being vice president of the Russell State Bank. For ten years he was director of the Iowa Packing Company of Des Moines. In 1924 he was appointed by Judge Wade as special master of chancery at the sale of the company's plant to Swift and Company. Mr. Smith for eleven years was a stockholder in the Iowa National Fire Insurance Company.

During the past thirty-eight years he has acted as reporter of crops and other agricultural statistics from his section to the Iowa Department of Agriculture at Des Moines. Mr. Smith has contributed his bit to road making, having received a patent for the first adjustable road drag in the United States—an implement that has been put to successful use. Politically he has been a staunch supporter of the Democratic party, and he served in the Fortieth General Assembly, attending the extra session when the state code was revised. He has for thirty-eight years been treasurer of his home school board. He and his family are active in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Russell.

Among other interesting memories of his boyhood Mr. Smith recalls the time when his locality was thrown into a furore of excitement by the activities of the famous Jesse James gang from Missouri. His contact with frontier men and conditions was greatly enlarged when in the spring of 1889 he and four other young men started with mules and covered wagons to participate in the opening of the original Oklahoma lands to settlement. They pitched their tents on the bank of the Canadian River on ground now covered by Oklahoma City, but which was then a city of tents, the only building being the station of the Santa Fe Railway. While there Mr. Smith turned the crank in the printing of the first newspaper published in what is now the State of Oklahoma's capital city, and he still has in his possession a copy of the first issue that came from the press. A little later he came in still closer touch with an official event which had an important bearing on the further opening of the old Indian Territory to settlement. The commissioner of Indian affairs had come on from Washington to make a treaty with the Cherokees and the Fox and Sac Indians for the sale of their land, known as the Cherokee Outlet. Mr. Smith was called to bring some water to the Indians in the council chamber, it being a very hot day. In that way he was the fifth white man in the building when the treaty was made, the other four being the commissioner from Washington, Hon. Jim Weaver, of Iowa, who was acting as United States marshal, Captain Couch, the famous leader of the Oklahoma "Boomers," and the postmaster of Oklahoma City.

Mr. Smith married in 1896, at Allerton, Iowa, Miss Betty M. Wilson, daughter of Greenwood and Mary J. Wilson, who came to Iowa from Indiana. Her father was a soldier in the Civil war and was wounded in the battle of Shiloh, a wound that eventually caused his death. Mrs. Smith is a graduate of the Des Moines 4 C's Business College and attended the Kansas City School of Music. For many years she acted as organist of her church, and has used her knowledge of harmony and her artistic inspiration in composing. A number of her compositions have been published. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have traveled extensively and have enjoyed life as they have gone along. They have four children. Their son Vogel, now in partnership with his father, was registered at the time of the World war, but was not called to the colors. The daughter Colette is the wife of Richard Werts, of Lucas County, and has two children, Donald and Wayne E. Dorothy is the wife of Earl Clayton, of Chariton, Iowa, and has a son, Bennie. The other son, Ted, is also a partner with his father in business.

WILLIAM F. POORMAN is one of the well known insurance actuaries in the Middle West, and his abilities have attracted him to the capital of the Iowa insurance world at Des Moines, where he is actuary for the Central Life Assurance Society.

Mr. Poorman was born near Livingston, Montana, January 17, 1897, son of Jacob L. and Nona (Cole) Poorman. His father was born in Wisconsin and his mother in Missouri, and his father went out to Montana in the early days and became a rancher and cattle man. He died in 1902 and his wife in 1908. He was a Republican in politics, a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and his wife was a Methodist, while he belonged to the Christian denomination. Of their three children two are living, William F. and Mildred, the latter the wife of Walter A. Fouts, a Montana cattle man.

William F. Poorman graduated from the Park County, Montana, High School. In the spring of 1918, when he was twenty-one years of age, he was called to the colors and was in training with the Coast Artillery Corps at Fortress Monroe, Virginia, until after the armistice. He now has rank as second lieutenant in the Officers Reserve Corps. After leaving the army he returned to the University of Michigan, and was graduated with the A. B. degree in 1921 and with the Master of Arts degree in 1922. His first experience in the insurance business was with the Lincoln National Life Company of Fort Wayne, Indiana, with which he was employed for six months before graduating from the University of Michigan. For three years he was actuary for the Farmers National Life Insurance Company of Chicago, and in December, 1925, removed to Des Moines as actuary of the Central Life Assurance Society.

Mr. Poorman is a member of the Actuarial Society of America, the American Institute of Actuaries and the Casualty Actuary Society.
