Soil Classification

Soil classification and mapping based on soil surveys in the field were begun in the U. S. in 1899 by Milton Whitney of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

...IOWA

Mrs. E. B. Abbott and Billy returned Tuesday, June 7, from Camas, Wash., after a 6 weeks visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Graham and daughter, Vicki Mae.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Eckardt attended the wedding of his sister, Miss Dorothy Eckardt to Joe Allen in Leon Sunday. Virgil gave his sister away in marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Scott and daughter of Estherville were Monday evening dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Eckardt. The Scotts were enroute to their home from attending the wedding of their sister in Leon.

Difficult to Cultivate

Although rhododendrons and azaleas are favorite plants of many flower-lovers, they are among the most difficult to grow and respond only if given soil and climatic conditions favorable to their development. They are comparatively easy to grow in the southern states where the climate is less rigorous, but in the northern states they are grown with difficulty, and some of the tender Asiatic species cannot be grown outdoors the year around. In the North the evergreen species often suffer from windburn in the winter and drought in the summer.

Muskrat Houses

Muskrat houses are made from marsh plants, which the muskrat assembles from the area about it. They are made both for winter shelter and for housing of the young. Cavities or rooms are located near the top, and above water level while one or more tunnels connect the rooms with the water below.

Burning Rubbish

Safety officials warn against burning rubbish in open piles. Sudden gusts of wind, they point out, often carry flaming particles to dry rooftops where many destructive fires break out. The recommended method of burning rubbish calls for the use of galvanized steel rubbish burners. These containers permit rubbish to burn rapidly inside of a safe, all metal framework.
