ey was when they replaced their badly torn ousers by helping themselves to those worn by ad soldiers.

While in the Confederate army he took part in e Battle of Bull Run under General Thomas itor (all) Jackson in which the Union was retreat.

The experiences of the eleven deserters were any and varied. The last camp they made gether was between Lookout Mountain and ft. Raccoon in Tennessee. They never met gain.

He next found himself mixed up with a band of ushwhackers and to save his life and to keep rom being returned to the Confederacy as a eserter, had to pretend an interest in their nefar-ous activities.

While getting away from the bushwhackers he was really escaping two dangers: Several times while getting to the Union lines he donned a ress and a sunbonnet and plowed in the fields as he farm women did whose husbands were in the army.

It was in the fall of 1863 when the nineteen ear old boy surrendered to the commander of he 4th Ohio Cavalry. He was placed in the guardhouse, but was given a parole provided he would enlist. On December 12, 1863 he enlisted in Company E, 12th Tennessee Calvary at Nashville, Tennessee. He was also a bugler. He served in his unit until the close of the war.

It was forty-three years after the war before Alabama Jim went back to his old home, and then found only four of his old friends still living.

When the war was over, because of his desertion of the South, he came north with the Flynn boys from Fulton, Iowa. Six months later he married the Flynn's daughter, Sidney Ann. Her father, Martin Flynn, gave her a 50 acre farm about a mile south of Fulton where they lived for many years. Ten children were born to them: Wylie, Hadden, Charles, Glen, Mary, Sarah, Lillie, and Elma. Two boys died in infancy.

While living on the farm, Alabama Jim drove a team of mules on the stagecoach between Fulton and Maquoketa. One time a granddaughter asked her mother, Lillie Wilcox, how she learned to sew with such fine, even stitches. She replied that when she was a young girl it was her job to keep Grandpa's well-worn mittens patched and she always tried to do it just as well as she could.

Alabama Jim had a crippled forefinger thought to have been injured by a shell, and he had one eye injured by a powder blast. For this reason he was issued a pension for the blind.

While in the army he had a beautiful tattoo of the American flag and an eagle put on his arm, and if a grandchild asked to see it, he would roll up his sleeve and show it to her.

In his retirement years he and his wife moved first to Fulton and then to Maquoketa, making their home with son Glen and his wife, Myrtle.

He enjoyed belonging to the G.A.R. (Grand Army of the Republic) in which he was an officer.
He liked to march with the other civil war veterans led by the fife and drum corps in the Memorial Day Parade.

He also enjoyed a group of old friends, known as the whittling club, who gathered at the Burrows Livery Stable where they entertained each other by spinning yarns of long ago days.

In his younger days he enjoyed fox hunting, even as far from home as Seldom Seen, three miles east of Andrew. It is interesting to note that in the 1800's he hunted foxes on land that is now owned by granddaughter, Alice Wilcox Cornelius and her family.

Alabama Jim died October 6, 1938 at the age of ninety-six at the home of his daughter Mrs.
Lillie Wilcox in Maquoketa, Iowa. He was buried with military honors in the Esgate Cemetery.

JACK AND SHIRLEY (BURKLAND) TABOR

Each Memorial Day, Ella Tabor would load her white Thunderbird full of flowers and grandchildren and head for the cemetery for an annual session on family history.

The story always started with Andrew Jackson "Uncle Jack" Tabor who rode on horseback from Jackson County, Indiana with his twin brother to settle in Monmouth Township, Jackson County, Iowa. He was born in 1831, married Nancy Cooley in 1854, and died a year after the turn of the century.

His son George Washington Tabor was born and lived in the stone house north of Baldwin.
George brought his bride Ella Gilmore to live there as well. George helped establish the Baldwin Savings Bank. He also served in the Iowa Legislature and was eventually defeated by the first woman to serve in the Iowa Senate.

His son Howard carried on the family beef and grain farming operation and lived across the garden from the stone house with his wife Ella Petersen Tabor. Howard served in the Navy in World War I and also carried on the family's tradition in Democratic politics in the Iowa Legislature.
He was also proud of his efforts in founding the Baldwin-Nashville telephone company. Howard died in 1968.

Ella was a practical nurse in the Maquoketa area and belonged to the Baldwin Fantasy Art Club and Jackson County Hospital Auxiliary.
Ella and Howard were long-time members of the Baldwin Methodist Church. Ella lived out her days planting trees and tending beautiful flower and vegetable gardens on the family farm until her death in 1986.

Their son Jack was born in 1924 in the same stone house and grew up attending the Baldwin and Monmouth schools. He attended Iowa State University before enlisting and serving in the Army in World War II. He returned to farm with his father and met Shirley Burkland when his cousin Jane Tabor (Proctor) brought her home for Thanksgiving dinner from Cornell College.
Shirley, who grew up in Chicago, married Jack in 1949. They belong to the United Church of Christ in Maquoketa.

Jack has served on the board of the Jackson County Public Hospital and the Baldwin Savings Bank board. Shirley was a leader in the local 4-H club for many years. They have raised four children in the same stone house.

The oldest, Paul, is a microbiologist. He and his wife Martha have three energetic children: Ben, Kate and Meg. They live in Dubuque. Paul has gotten the family interested in planting a vineyard on the homestead with hopes of a future winery. The next oldest, Anne, is a nutritionist and active in peace and social justice issues. She has two beautiful daughters, Emily and Maureen. They live in Davenport. Eric, a lawyer, is the third oldest. He farms and has carried on the family political tradition by running for Congress. He and his wife Jonna Jensen have one special son named Noah. The youngest, Mary, has been involved in politics, journalism and law. She and her husband, Phil Roeder, have two busy children, Oliver and Hannah. Jack

THE TAYLOR FAMILY

James Lock Taylor, born June 15, 1819, died December 10, 1899, came from western Pennsylvania to Iowa in 1842. His wife Maria Daniels Taylor, was born April 9, 1822, and died May 24, 1890. They took up land in Jackson County, Jackson Township, from the government. They endured the hardships of pioneer life in their early years, but success came to them in their later years. Mr. Taylor was a Justice of the Peace for many years and was called Squire Taylor. They were the parents of eleven children: Isaac, James Polk, Peggy Jane, and Sarah Jane, who died young; Mary A., Matilda, Melissa, Elizabeth; Smith, and Benton, who died as young men; and Douglas. Most of the children were farmers and remained in Jackson County.

Douglas was born January 11, 1863 and died September 22, 1945. He married Mary Daniels on March 20, 1890. She was born February 11, 1872 and died in September 1929. They were parents of eight children: Elma, Elsie, Myra, Otilie, James L., Zola, Mary Madge, and Lester Douglas. After his marriage, Douglas rented the homestead for some years and then bought it. All the daughters were school teachers at some time.

Son James, born June 11, 1898, enlisted in the U. S. Army in World War I and served two years, one year overseas. He took part in the battles of Ainse, Meuse, Argonne Woods, Fismes, and Chateau Thierry. After returning from the service, he worked as a barber for a few years. In 1923 he married Rose Belle Stemmer, born December 24, 1903. In 1935 he established a garage and a Chrysler-Plymouth dealership in Northwood, Iowa, which he continued until 1965. He served as a member of the Northwood City Council for several terms, belonged to the Elks, VFW, Legion, and the Northwood Country Club. His wife worked as a bookkeeper in the business; she is a member of a study club, likes to garden and sew, plays golf, and is a charter member of the Iowa Genealogical Society; she has done research on both families.

Lester Douglas Taylor enlisted in World War II and served as a Navy gunner on a destroyer; he was in many battles in the Pacific. He earned a Silver Star, ten bronze stars, and three campaign ribbons. He married Avelda Betcher on June 7, 1934. They have one son, William.

Jean Taylor, the only child of James and Rose Belle, attended Grinnell College, graduated from Iowa State Teachers' College, and has a Masters degree from Mankato State University. She teaches business education at North Central Schools at Manly, Iowa. Her husband is Lemoyne Ellingson; he was a fighter pilot on an aircraft carrier in World War II and served in the Pacific area. Jean and "Lem" are both licensed pilots and have their own airplane. Jean flew copilot in the Powder Puff Derby in 1976. They have two daughters, Pamela Jo and Kimberly Jean. They have three grandsons.

As of October 1988, the only surviving children of Douglas Taylor and Mary Daniels Taylor are James L. and Zola. Mrs. James L. Taylor
