Beware Itinerant Furnace Operators, Warns Chamber

Waukon Chamber of Commerce issued a notice this week warning local persons to beware of out-of-town furnace salesmen, cleaners or repairmen. The Chamber warning pointed out that, in this field there are often racketeer operators who visit an area and "clean up" without performing the services they promise. It is suggested that persons needing furnace work done should see local dealers before engaging a stranger to do this work.

Sullivan House Damaged Here

The Leo Sullivan residence on East Court street was damaged in a freak explosion about 3 p. m. Friday, but no one was injured in what could have been a tragic accident.

Mrs. Sullivan, her son and daughter were all on the second floor of their home at the time of the blast, and Mr. Sullivan was at the J. C. Penney store of which he has recently become manager here.

When the Sullivans moved here from Macomb, Ill., recently they purchased the A. G. Bahr home on East Court. They have been getting settled in recent weeks, and Mrs. Sullivan was hanging up some new curtains when the explosion occurred, thinking that the task of getting into their new home was nearly completed.

Waukon fire department, called when an explosion rocked the whole house, said that apparently fumes from a floor sealing compound which had been used on the basement floor had ignited when the furnace kicked in to activate the water heater. The explosion tore off a utility room door, breaking it and the casing, smashed basement windows, and apparently jarred the house on its foundation, as insulation stripping was blown out from the foundation into the yard.
