CALLED TO REST.

Death of General Warner Lewis. General Warner Lewis expired last evening at 10:45. The death of so prominent and highly respected citizen casts a gloom over the city. He was among the oldest inhabitants of Dubuque and his history is so closely interwoven with it that it cannot be separated. His demise is mourned by all who knew him for his grand and noble qualities of head and heart, and his memory will be cherished for his personal worth. General Lewis was born in Goochland county, Virginia, in 1805, and sprang from one of the first families of that State. He emigrated to St. Louis in 1818, and in 1828 came to the upper lead mines of what was then known as Wisconsin. He was a valiant soldier in the Blackhawk war, in 1832. At the close of the war General Lewis settled in Iowa, and took a very prominent part in the political affairs of the State. He served several terms in the State legislature, and was speaker of the House for a number of sessions. He was Register of the State Land office under President Polk, and later Surveyor General of Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota under President Pierce. For twenty-four years he has held the office of County Recorder in Dubuque, a position he held at the time of his death and would have been re-elected had he lived until this fall.

Gen. Lewis was united in marriage in 1831 to Miss Caroline C. Fennimore. From this union there were born nine children of whom Mrs. Sarah Van Pelt, who is connected with a Chicago journal, Henry Dodge Lewis and Miss Caroline Virginia Lewis, who has for a number of years attended to the Recorder's office, alone survive their aged father. Through all the vicissitudes of his eventful life, amid the trying struggles of early life and the honors that were subsequently given him, he has borne an unblemished and spotless character, free from the contamination of political intrigues and official corruption, and his whole career is a monument of integrity and honesty. The funeral announcement will be made in tomorrow's issue of THE TIMES.

The aged wife, who for nearly fifty-seven years has been a faithful com-

Card of Thanks.

The Stationary Engineers Association No. 4, of Dubuque, desires to return its thanks to all who so ably and generously assisted it in its effort to secure needed legislation during the last session of the General Assembly. The press, by its encouragement and influence, and a host of people realize the importance of affording human life every possible protection, generously assisted it in many ways. To all it returns its heartfelt thanks, and particularly does it desire to express its gratitude to Mr. Frank Sheridan, editor of the Industrial Leader of this city, for the interest he took in the work undertaken by the Association, and unselfish and unsolicited aid rendered by him. To all of its friends the Association is truly grateful.

Rhomberg-Hintrager Fight a Draw.

A lively set-to occurred between J. A. Rhomberg and Wm. Hintrager yesterday morning. The occasion for the difference was over a piece of land to which both claimed the right of ownership. Finding that they could not settle the matter by discussing it they peeled their coats and went in for a rough and tumble scrapping match. The first pass made by Rhomberg was a broken inkstand and spilling of ink, Hintrager sent out his left duke and knocked four pens into Rhomberg's ear. By mutual consent the fight was brought to a close and the pens were extracted. After a mutual understanding and a personal explanation the fight was called a draw and the real estate difference was amicably settled.

In 1890 he was made an Assistant United States Geologist. He has given his attention chiefly to glacial geology, considering the deposits both in their economic and scientific phases. In 1892 he spent some time in the service of the Illinois Board of World's Fair Commissioners, preparing an exhibit of the soils of the State. His scientific publications began in 1884 and he has since contributed numerous valuable articles to scientific publications, among which may be mentioned the "Water Resources of Illinois," and two monographs published by the United States Geological survey, the first on the "Illinois Glacial Lobe," and the second "Glacial Formations and Drainage Features of the Erie and Ohio Basins."

LORENZO D. LEWELLING, was born in Salem, Iowa, December 21, 1846. His father, William, was a Quaker minister, who died when his son was a small boy. Lorenzo worked for farmers in the neighborhood, went to district school in the winter and later graduated from Whittier College. When sixteen years of age he began work at bridge building, drove cattle in the quartermaster's department in Tennessee during the war and again became a member of a company of bridge builders. He was a teacher under the Freedman's Aid Society in Missouri after the close of the war. Mr. Lewelling served some time as assistant superintendent of the State Reform School and in 1870 established a paper at Salem. He and his wife were employed in the Girls' Industrial School at Mitchellville for a number of years and later he was president of the State Normal School. In 1880 Mr. Lewelling removed to Des Moines and established the Iowa Capital. In 1887 he removed to Kansas, locating at Wichita, where he took an active interest in politics, espousing the cause of the new Populist party and becoming one of the most eloquent advocates of its principles. In 1888 he was nominated by that party for Secretary of State but was defeated at the election. In 1892 the Democrats and Populists united upon a ticket and Mr. Lewelling was the fusion candidate for Governor. After a spirited canvas he was elected over the Republican candidate by a plurality of over 5,000. He was renominated in 1894 but was defeated at the election.

X WARNER LEWIS, one of the pioneers of northern Iowa, was born in Goochland County, Virginia, in November, 1805. He emigrated to the mining region of Michigan Territory in 1827 and was appointed clerk of the United States District Court of that Territory. He served in the Black Hawk War and in 1833 removed to Dubuque. At the first session of the Wisconsin Territorial Legislature Mr. Lewis served as chief clerk of the House of Representatives. Upon the creation of Iowa Territory in 1838 he was elected to the Council of the First Legislative Assembly where he took a prominent part in framing the first laws. In 1841 he was again a member of the Assembly and was chosen Speaker of the House. In 1850 he was elected to the State Senate where he served four years. He was appointed by Governor Lucas Major-General of the Iowa militia and assisted in its organization. In 1845 he was appointed Register of the United States Land Office at Dubuque. In 1853 he was appointed by President Pierce Surveyor-General for Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota and at the expiration of his term was reappointed by President Buchanan. He served twenty-four years as recorder of Dubuque County. Mr. Lewis was a prominent member of the Democratic party during all of his mature life and died in Dubuque, May 4, 1888, at the age of eighty-three.

W. R. LEWIS was born in Muskingham County, Ohio, October 12, 1835. In April, 1857, he removed to Poweshiek County, Iowa, which has since been his home. He worked at carpentering and taught school until 1861, and during hours not otherwise employed studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1866. Mr. Lewis held a number of positions in his home county and in 1880 was elected judge of the Circuit Court. This position he held six years until that court was abolished. He was then elected judge of the District Court, retiring from the bench in 1890, and resuming the practice of law. In 1897 he was elected to the State Senate, serving in the Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth General Assemblies.

JAMES R. LINCOLN was born in Maryland, February 3, 1845, and was educated at Landon Military Academy in his native State, and in the Pennsylvania Military College. When the Civil War began he enlisted in the Confederate army serving through the war. In 1867 he came to Iowa, locating at Boonsboro where he was superintendent of a coal mining company, and served as mayor of the city. He removed to Ames in 1884 and was elected Professor of Military Tactics in the State College of Agriculture when General Geddes was displaced by the trustees. In 1892 he was steward of the college and later Professor of Commercial Law and Mining Engineering. He was Inspector-General of the Iowa National Guard when the Spanish War began and was placed in command of Camp McKinley at Des Moines. In May, 1898, he was promoted to Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

CHARLES LINDERMAN was born in Orange County, New York, on the 4th of February, 1829, and was educated in the common schools and at Bloomingburg and Clinton Academies. In 1855 he removed to Iowa, locating at Davenport, where he has been engaged in banking and farming. He removed to Page County before the beginning of the Civil War and upon the organization of the Eighth Iowa Cavalry was commissioned second lieutenant of Company A, serving to the close of the war, having been promoted to first lieutenant. He served as clerk of Page County from 1860 to 1863, and in 1865 was elected on the Republican ticket Rep-
