The Iowa congressman recently returned from a trip to El Salvador and has been promoting a human rights policy on the part of the United States toward other nations.

He claims the situation in El Salvador is caused by years of poverty, plus the military, and said the best things the United States can do now is support the president of El Salvador in his efforts to remove problem people from the military.

theatre will present the Norman Holland play, "Princess Ascending," at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, March 6, at the Atlantic High School auditorium.

Actresses in the touring theatre play are students from Cottey College, a two-year liberal arts college for women owned and supported by the PEO Sisterhood, an international philanthropic educational organization of 210,000 members, including two local chapters. Cottey is located in Nevada, Mo., about 100 miles south of Kansas City.

This year's Cottey Touring Theatre is appearing in several cities in Iowa. Following the play, students and local PEO members will be available to answer questions about the college.

"Princess Ascending" deals with the relationship of Princess Elizabeth and her half-sister, Queen Mary, before Elizabeth becomes Queen Elizabeth I of England. The play dramatizes the confrontations these two women of history had with each other, and how they affected the people of their nation. The cast of 12 women includes ladies-in-waiting, a jailor who tends to Elizabeth in the Tower of London, a court jester who prides comic relief and Lady Jane Grey, who is beheaded.

The play is designed and directed by Alfred Frenske, Cottey drama instructor.

A free-will offering will be taken and no admission will be charged.
