DRINKING" was allowed. It was always just good music and good clean fun! Friends furnished food, sometimes a hog roast, and would use a hay rack to put the food on. People brought campers and came to dance, listen to and participate in the music.

These music festival jams were held for several years at the farm, then moved to the Oakley Park. The park is wired for electricity, and a hat is passed for expenses. There is a concrete slab to dance on and basketball for the youngsters.

One of the favorite numbers asked for when Frank was playing was "The East Tennessee Blues." One time we were asked to play at the Kirkwood Hotel in Des Moines for a reception. They said just wear your common good clothes, but when we walked in, they were dressed in long dresses, etc. We felt out of place, but the man that asked us said, "Start playin'!" And we did. Frank played his fiddle and a man started calling, and the girls went to their rooms and changed into jeans—a wonderful party!

When Frank was sick, Johnnie Stearns of Osceola brought a boy whom he was teaching, and they played for Frank who really enjoyed the music. After Frank died on November 8, 1994, we decided to continue the Oakley Music Festival and though many of the old group are gone and not many new "fiddlers" are coming along, we still have lots of good friends and good music.

MARION SIGLIN

In the 1960s I ran for the Legislature. I had always been interested in politics. Maxine didn't think that was too smart, but she went along with me all the way. I was the Lucas County representative in the beginning, but the next year the Supreme Court said that the districts had to be changed, and we went through that. I never represented the same district twice. I had parts of it, but they would take away or add to it. I ended in the northwest corner of a district that went clear to Moulton 100 miles away. I would have had to try to persuade all those people that I was better than their incumbent, and it got to be too big a job trying to run the farm and represent the people.

It was about this time that the church got involved in social issues, and there was a lot of controversy. They would come in and tell us how things ought to be done without knowing all the ramifications whereas we studied it for months. We've got a lot of dogooders, a lot of programs that are well intentioned. People get on the receiving end; they lose ambition to do for themselves and they get to be freeloaders, not all, but it takes a lot more money that somebody someday is going to have to pay.

Harold Hughes was governor during that time. I always admire him. He was an alcoholic, but he admitted it and licked it. He was elected to the United State Senate. I didn't like him as well as Governor Ray because he was a Democrat, and I have always been a Republican.

I voted the Democratic ticket once or twice. I voted the first time in 1932 when FDR (Franklin Roosevelt) was running. I was going to stick with Herbert Hoover, but he chose a fellow named Curtis to be his running mate. He was in northwest Iowa to give a talk. As usual, he opened the meeting for questions. An old fellow tried to ask a question and didn't get an answer. He had to ask three times, and finally the answer he got was, "Maybe you're just too danged dumb to understand." That made me mad, and I voted for Roosevelt.

I voted for Harry Truman who was a Democrat. Old Harry would say what he meant, and he meant what he said. I have difficulty finding that in some people these days. He would cuss people if he needed to. His daughter, Margaret, was a piano player, and some how criticized her and he told him off. I admired that. One of his expressions was, "The buck stops here." He had the last word for dropping the bombs on Japan. That took a lot of guts. I was for dropping the bombs. It killed millions, but it also saved millions.

I didn't get my way on every issue while I was serving. We had the death penalty in Iowa removed under Governor Hughes. I'm for the death penalty even today. At the time I talked to two clergymen, who happened to be Baptist, who said they wanted to keep it, and I felt that meant something. The sheriff of Kossuth County said, "We've got to keep the death penalty," so I voted to keep it, but lost that one.

Another issue was liquor by the drink, and we got it installed in Iowa. I lost that one, too. I lost another one—paramutal betting. There were a lot of people who were for it, and even people at home were saying, "Why should we have to go to Omaha? We should have it here." I stood in the way of passing that bill, but later, of course, they got it so today we have horse racing, casinos and lotteries. Sometimes somebody wins a million dollars, but I don't know how many never see any return on their money. It doesn't take any brains to play those games.

Reapportionment was a big issue at that time. Ward Reynoldson had become the chief justice of the Supreme Court. Everybody had their own private map for how it should be done. Finally they put it in the computer. I was on the board for the West Ward housing complex and met Ward at the dedication. He said, "Siglin, I'm sorry for what happened. We put it in the computer, and this is the way it came out."

The Legislature began every day with prayer. We were asked to invite our own preachers to come. I did that, and one day Rev. John McCallum gave the prayer.

I didn't do a lot of talking when I was serving—I was a rookie. I thought I had some good horse sense, but I could see that both sides had a lot of good points. I wouldn't want to serve again, and I don't approve of what is going on now. Both parties are politicizing everything. Both parties are guilty of saying something is good for the country or bad for the country when they are just trying to say what they think people want to hear. It is the most disappointing campaign I ever went through.

Maxine and I agreed on almost everything. She may be more radical than I in some ways, and Maxine agreed, "I hear something on the radio and would like to answer back!"

There are more important things than politics. I served on the Hospital Board, Mental Health Board and the church board when Rev. Ivan Bys was here. I had the privilege of burning the mortgage. Rev. Bys had known my brother in Perry when he served the church there. We went to church one day. Rev. Bys said before he started preaching, "Marion, you can wake up now." I don't think I was sleeping—I might have been, but I told him I was meditating.

PETER AND ELIZABETH (GILMORE) SHUCK

Peter Shuck was born in 1829 in Muskingum County, Ohio, the son of Christopher and Mary Ann (Livengood) Shuck who moved to Ohio from Pennsylvania. Christopher was in Ohio by 1807 and was hired by Jacob Livengood, Mary Ann's father, to build a mill for him on Salt Creek in Muskingum County. It was December 1, 1808, when Christopher Shuck and Mary Ann Livengood, daughter of Jacob Livengood, were married. Peter Shuck was one of the youngest of Christopher and Mary's children and was orphaned in 1834 when Mary Ann died of cholera; the cause of Christopher's death six months earlier is unknown, but drowning is suspected. Peter and his younger brother Samuel lived with relatives until they moved to Iowa.

First Samuel moved and located in Lucas County; Peter then moved to be near him. Samuel did not stay long, however, and decided to seek his fortune in Oregon. Peter stayed on in Lucas County. He served in the 6th Iowa Infantry during the Civil War and was medically discharged because of rheumatism following the measles. On September 9, 1864, shortly after his discharge from the Army, Peter married Elizabeth Francis Gilmore, born December 25, 1847, in Pulaski County, Kentucky. Her parents, James and Sara Jane (McQuary) Gilmore, had moved to Lucas County, Warren County, in 1855. Sara Jane (McQuary) Gilmore died in 1866, and Peter returned to Kentucky with his children, leaving only his daughter Elizabeth, who was by then married to Peter Shuck.

Peter was a schoolteacher, farmer, horse trainer and carpenter, and in the last years of his life he was a janitor for the high school in Derby. He died November 19, 1912.

Elizabeth (Gilmore) Shuck was a most admirable lady! She came in Rawlins, Wyoming.

Peter and Elizabeth (Gilmore) Shuck ca 1890

In 1914, two years after Peter died, Elizabeth, who was nearly 70 years old, went to Kimama County, Oregon, where her son Charlie was a sheriff and later had a general store. She homesteaded there, fighting to hold on to her land which was too arid to grow good crops. She lost her homestead to drought, and she and Charlie returned to Lucas County where they lived with her daughter Flora (Shuck) Conner until Elizabeth died in 1935. Peter and Elizabeth are buried in the Derby Cemetery, Derby, Iowa.

Peter and Elizabeth Shuck had five children: Flora Belle Shuck, born June 22, 1865, in Lucas County, who married Marion Conner, born 1859, died 1941 in Lucas County, son of Alfred and Harriet (Wade) Conner. Flora is buried at the Derby Cemetery, and Marion is buried at the Goshen Cemetery in Lucas County. Charlie Shuck, born March 9, 1873, and died 1947 in Lucas County, Iowa, never married. Charlie is buried in the Derby Cemetery. At one time he was the mayor of Derby, Iowa. Elnora Shuck, born May 28, 1867, and died 1939 in Lucas County, Iowa, married Frank DeSomber, born 1867 in Germany, died 1945. Both Elnora and Frank DeSomber are buried in the Derby Cemetery. Merritt Shuck married Evelyn Inches. They resided in Rawlins, Carbon County, Wyoming, in 1910 and had moved to Denver, Colorado, by 1935. Lillian Shuck, born 1871, died July 11, 1890, when she was 18 years old. She is buried in the Derby Cemetery.

MARION AND MAXINE SIGLIN

Marion was born June 21, 1910, to Jacob M. and Florence Siglin. He was the middle child of nine, four brothers and sisters on each side. Maxine was born September 27, 1913, to John and Lulu Jessen. She is the oldest of four children, one brother and two sisters. Marion remarked that the saying is "Beware of the middle child." Both began their schooling in a one-room country school and went to high school at Woodward—Maxine for two years, Marion for four. When Marion told his father he had a chance to play football, he was told, "If you've got any time on your hands, I can use you here," so he never went out for sports.

Marion became the spokesman for their story: We got married in 1934 and lived on the north edge of Dallas County. Maxine was 20, I was 24. Before that we couldn't afford to even think of getting married. Maxine was working for neighbors; I was working for $1 a day, but I got to thinking that I would never get anyplace at that wage. I didn't realize the big wide world was out there with other opportunities, but for most of them a college education was necessary. The folks couldn't afford to put me through college so I started farming. I got somebody to sign a note for $5,000. You could start farming for that amount in those days. Now it wouldn't even buy a secondhand tractor.

Maxine and Marion Siglin

My brother just older than I wanted to farm. So in 1939 we went together into cattle feeding for four years.

me alone on a big farm, and I didn't know what to do. We heard of a farm in Lucas County and came here to look at it. I made an offer. The manager of the farm, owned by the Equitable Life Insurance Company in New York, called me and said, "Meet me in Des Moines. You've bought a farm." That was in 1943.

During those years in Boone County our three sons were born. Larry, the oldest, is now 62. He is a farmer and also works for Hy-Vee. They live on the same farm as we do in a different house. He and his wife have a boy and girl who live in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Kynard, now 58, is a schoolteacher in Des Moines. They have one daughter who will also be teaching school.

The youngest son was David who would have been 54 at this time. He was a doctor in Princeton, Missouri, and was killed in a train-car collision when he was 52. He and his wife, who came from Kirksville, Missouri, have one girl the same age as Kynard's daughter.

David fought for his life for two weeks after the accident. They tried to save him by amputating both his legs, and it was almost a relief when we got word that he had passed away. It was the worst thing that had ever hit us. We'd seen hard times and problems before, but nothing like that. Money and other material things become meaningless at times like that.

The death of a son tests your faith in God, and you wonder why that had to happen, but when you think about it, similar things happen every day so you're not alone. At the funeral we met people we hadn't known. They told us how they loved and respected David—everybody who knew him. That counts for something.

Maxine and I hadn't decided where we would be buried. We had bought a plot in Perry, then when we moved to Lucas, we thought we might be buried out near our farm, but when David was buried in Kirksville that helped us make up our minds and we decided that is where we wanted to go also. We are going to order a stone that will have a four-leaf clover in one corner to honor the ten years Maxine spent in 4-H work and a Masonic emblem in another corner because I am a 50-year Mason.

Back to our move to Lucas County in 1943: The farm was owned by old Fred Kelly. He lost it during the Depression. We moved here on March 1, and Fred moved off the farm the same day. He left a fire in the stove for us. He was the father of young Fred Kelly who was married to Charlotte.

There was no running water or electricity in the house which will describe what our living was like in those days. We had always been Methodists, so one of the first questions we asked was if there was a Methodist Church in Lucas. We were told there was kind of a combination of Presbyterian and Methodist. The Methodist Church had been torn down, so we came to Osceola and joined this church.

We have been Farm Bureau members over 60 years. I was a Mason for 50 years, and I have been through all the chairs. When you are a 50-year member, you don't have to pay dues anymore.

We were chivareed for our 40th anniversary when the Bys were here. This was a custom when we were married, but we somehow never got chivareed. People nowadays wouldn't know, but in old times people would wait until 9-10:00 p.m. after everyone was settled for the night, drive in and make a lot of racket. The couple was to hand out candy bars and cigars. I never smoked a cigar until I went to a chivaree when I was about 16. I decided I was old enough to smoke it, but I swallowed it and got sicker than a dog.

Maxine and I have tried to take our turn serving the community in various ways. Maxine was on the Lucas Board of the American Cancer Society for years and worked in girls' 4-H for that same length of time. She would like to be more active in UMW (United Methodist Women), but we live too far away. She'd like to move to town where things would be more convenient, but Marion is dragging his feet. "I have to keep Maxine toned down just a little."

Now we have retired. We have farmed 62 years and have been forced into retirement. My health won't let me do what I want to do. We rented the farm to our oldest son who works for Hy-Vee. We divided all the proceeds. In 1994 he worked at night. Everybody has to sleep sometime, and I couldn't help like I used to. He was carrying too big a load, so we sold our cattle, 150 cows, and rented the pasture.

We are proud of our three sons and their families, and Maxine and I have many things to be thankful for, especially our family and friends. But we also have sad memories of losing our son, David, in his prime and with so much promise.

BENJAMIN LESLIE AND MARY S. (CLARK) SIMPSON

Born in Chariton, Iowa, October 17, 1882, Benjamin Leslie "Les" Simpson was the youngest of nine children of Joseph and Elizabeth (Myers) Simpson. By 1889 the family had moved to Watertown, South Dakota, where his father died that summer. The drought in the Dakotas had brought very difficult times, so in January 1895, Les, his mother and two brothers joined an older brother, Bert, in Red Lodge, Carbon County, Montana, where Elizabeth ran a boarding house for the coal miners.

Benjamin Leslie and Mary (Clark) Simpson with son Park, March 1908.

The Simpson family were among the early settlers of Carbon County and knew many of the miners and ranchers. It was still relatively untamed country, and Indian visitations were commonplace. Les grew to manhood in this county and personally knew, as a boy, the western legend, Jeremiah "Liver Eatin'" Johnson, among others. He had many interesting stories to tell his grandchildren.

On March 12, 1907, he married Mary (Smyth) Clark in Edgar, Montana. Serving as best man was Charles Parsons, another native of Chariton and cousin of Les. Mary was born April 26, 1885, in Glade Spring, Washington County, Virginia, the twin daughter of Thomas Chalmers and Mary Josephine Clark and had come to Montana to keep house for her brothers. They spent the majority of their lives in Carbon and Yellowstone counties of Montana. Les ranched, was in real estate and in later years worked for Billings Gas Company from which he retired. Mary died May 12, 1969, with Les following on August 12, 1969. Both are buried at Sunset Memorial Gardens, Billings, Montana.

Les and Mary's children are as follows:

Park Chalmers Simpson, born December 17, 1907, Edgar, Montana, married Margaret A. Connolly October 10, 1931, in Red Lodge, Montana, died July 15, 1996. Margaret died March 17, 1982. Both are buried at Sunset Memorial Gardens, Billings, Montana. Issue: Audrey A., W. J. "Jack."

Roy Erle Simpson, born June 8, 1910, Billings, Montana, married Betty Jean (Brayton) Burnett, February 1961, in Casper, Wyoming, died September 18, 1980, Sheridan, Wyoming, and buried at Sheridan Community Cemetery, Sheridan, Wyoming. Issue: Erle John.

Opal Elizabeth Simpson, born December 4, 1914, Waco, Montana, married Wallis C. Schallöck, January 31, 1941, in Big Timber, Montana, died March 22, 1997, Oceanside, California, and was buried at Big Timber, Montana. Issue: Larry Wallis, Eleanor Kay.

Musetta Lavonne Simpson, born September 25, 1918, Waco, Montana, married James M. Martin Jr., June 19, 1945, Billings, Montana. Issue: Rosalie Ruth, Mary Jane, James Marvin, John
