Iowans share Atlanta

By The Associated Press
Atlanta, Ga., is 900 miles away and a cultural step apart from Iowa, yet some residents of the Midwestern farm state share the fear and frustrations felt by Atlanta parents in the wake of the disappearance and deaths of 21 black children.

Activities have been held in several Iowa cities to draw attention to the growing nightmare in Atlanta, and to remind wearing armbands, but in Waterloo, an industrial city with one of the state's largest black populations, the foundation has been laid for a series of remembrances and for drives to raise money to assist Atlanta police and parents cope with the situation. The activities have been prompted by the comments of Waterloo black children who fear they, too, will become victims of the Atlanta killer or killers. The Waterloo efforts began Wednesday with a small rally on the University of Northern Iowa campus in neighboring Cedar Falls. Attended by both black and white college students, many of whom belong to a social concerns group, Concerned Christians Association, the rally included comments by Ruth Anderson, a UNI professor and the president village of Mineral Ridge, Ohio where they lived for twenty-three years where their children were born. They moved to Excelsior Mining Camp in Mahaska County, Iowa for three years leaving in 1884 to homestead near Bath, South Dakota. Their oldest son John J. Morgan remained at Excelsior Mining Camp, Iowa because he was engaged to be married on January 24, 1885 to Elizabeth Roberts. She was the daughter of William and Catherine Thomas Roberts of Wales who had migrated to America and settled in Mineral Ridge, Ohio. William Roberts and his little family moved to Bevier, Missouri. Catherine Thomas Roberts died in Canton, Illinois while the family was moving. Elizabeth Roberts had gone to Excelsior Mining Camp, Iowa to visit relatives when she met John J. Morgan in 1884.

Mr. Morgan continued to work in the mine and as time went on nine children joined the family. Mr. Morgan did not want his sons to work in the mines so he purchased a farm in Garfield Township on which they were raised. He took care of the business and work and Mrs. Morgan was truly a homemaker and took care of the children all of whom they could be justly proud. Mr. Morgan served on the Elm Grove School board and the Beacon (Iowa) school board after his retirement from the farm. He was also a Township Trustee for Garfield Township and served on the election board. They attended Elm Grove Sunday School services while on the farm and later the Beacon Baptist Church. The children grew in a family of love and discipline, willing to do their share of work. Each member could recall the memories of the happy days in the home as well as the heartaches and sorrow. As time went by each of the children left to work and marry to make his own home but on special occasions the families would gather at the parental Morgan home for the day. Their children were: Elizabeth (Mrs. David R. Williams), Jenkin Morgan, William R. Morgan, Margaret (Mrs. William R. Wilson), Jennie (Mrs. Homer W. Moffet), Edna (Mrs. D.W. Dayton), Llewellyn Morgan, Miss Leona Morgan and Ruth (Mrs. Paul W. Collins). When Mr. and Mrs. Morgan wanted to retire they sold their farm and moved to Beacon, Iowa where they lived until their deaths. Mr. Morgan died on September 22, 1934 and Mrs. Morgan died on May 9, 1950. They are both buried at the Forest Cemetery at Oskaloosa, Iowa. Most of the members of the John J. Morgan family remained in the Mahaska County, Iowa area among their families and friends. Now the younger members of the family are taking jobs in larger cities, following a career in the service, attending college with a career in a chosen field thus finding homes in various parts of the country. Wherever they locate you will find a family who will carry-on the traditions of his ancestors, a neighbor in time of need and a citizen true to his country.

MORGAN, ELDON MONK & ZANA IRENE WITT

F409

Eldon Monk Morgan, born July, 1890, was like his father Saul Hartley Morgan, born in February, 1853, a resident of White Oak Township. My father's grandfather, Lewis Bailey Morgan was born in Virginia in 1812 but moved with his father and mother, David Morgan and Francina Hartley Morgan, to Danville, Illinois where David was a Cooper (a barrel maker). John Morgan, the Raider, was a cousin of Lewis Bailey Morgan but to lighten the burden of that, Lewis' wife's mother, Lydia Beard was said to be related to William Jennings Bryan's family.

Lewis Bailey Morgan has always been considered one of the more interesting members of the family, whose origins are said to be in Wales. Lewis was co-owner of the Galena Lead Mines in Illinois with two partners, Antoine Lore and Selestine Keltback. Interestingly enough, he named two of his sons after his former partners, gave a third the name of Christopher Columbus, and only Saul Hartley had a non-attention-getting christening. Lewis sold his interests in the Galena mines, moved to Fairfield, Iowa and opened the first grocery store there. He sold that, bought out a family named Troy of White Oak Township and became the second settler and largest land owner in that part of Mahaska County. A Southern sympathizer, during the Civil War, Lewis buried gold coins in leather bags in an area around the family main house, then went to the barn and hung himself. According to legend he was not a man who feared to be different, so the suicide was inexplicable. I understand that people still come to the old Morgan land with electronic gear hoping to unearth the Morgan gold which, as far as the family knows, never surfaced. Lewis left his wife and sons well off, despite what he buried and after his wife, Sarah Ann Smith Morgan, a relative of Andrew Jackson, died in January, 1894, the family wealth declined. All the sons squandered their inheritances.

Eldon was the fourth child, third son of Saul Hartley Morgan and Mary Jane Monk Morgan. The Monk family were said to have left Scotland as religious refugees and lived in Holland.

After the Revolutionary War, the Monks immigrated to Canada, later Wisconsin, and finally Iowa, where Mary Jane Monk was born in May, 1856. She married Saul Hartley Morgan on January 1, 1882, and they lived and raised their family on the outskirts of Rose Hill where, I think it is safe to say, they became movers and doers in the area, goodness, generosity, and innate kindness which culminated in their son, my father, Eldon Monk Morgan.

Zana Irene Witt Morgan was born in August, 1895 to William J. Witt, born August 1846 in Knox County, Illinois and Annie Pierce Thomas Witt, born August, 1852 in Pennsylvania.

The Witt family history, earliest recorded, began with William Witt, born in France in 1675. The name is thought to have been De Wit and changed when William's family, Huguenots, fled from France in the 17th Century. William settled in Virginia and adopted his nephew, Richard Oney Witt, as his son. Richard was the progenitor of this branch of the Witt family.

His son, Hezekiah, had nine children; the eighth was Jesse Witt. Born in Virginia in May, 1760, Jesse was a private in the Revolutionary War, first serving under command of Colonel William Davies of the 10th Virginia Regiment, in January, 1777, and later transferred to the 14th Virginia Regiment, May, 1779, under command of Captain John Overton. Jesse Witt was discharged in September, 1779. He married a much younger woman, Ruth Whit, born in 1770. Jesse's father, Hezekiah, was said to have large land holdings near Raleigh, North Carolina. Jesse and Ruth left Virginia, lived in Rutherford County, North Carolina, then to Overton County, Tennessee and eventually to Henderson, Knox County, Illinois.

Richard Witt, a son of Jesse and Ruth, and his wife Mary, had ten children, one of whom was William Jasper Witt, Zana Irene Witt's father. He married Annie Pierce Thomas in September, 1873. Prior to that he had served in Co. A, 65th Illinois Infantry during the Civil War. He and Annie Pierce Thomas had five children of whom only two, Clara and Zana, survived. William Witt came to Iowa in March, 1868, settled in Mahaska County on a farm in Monroe Township until he moved with his family to Rose Hill in December, 1914.

Annie Pierce Thomas Witt, mother of Clara and Zana, died in May 1935 at her home in Rose Hill. Legend had it that she was descended from the family of General Benjamin Pierce whose second son, Franklin, became the 14th President of the United States. Annie Pierce Thomas was the daughter of Owen and Sarah Thomas of Norristown, Pennsylvania. A child of two, she came with her two brothers to Monroe Township, in Mahaska County.

Her daughter, Zana Irene, married Eldon Monk Morgan on May 18, 1918. They insisted that they did not elope; however neither set of parents were informed until after the ceremony. Nine days later Eldon followed his two older brothers into the army, saw duty in World War I in France, and was discharged in February, 1919. He and Zana, who taught school for many years, settled in Rose Hill, which was to be their home for the next 30 years. Eldon was a rural mail carrier with the second longest mail route in the United States, at the time of his retirement. At age 70 he ran for the Iowa Legislature, and won, as a Democrat—the first from Mahaska County since Iowa had become a state. Zana excelled at teaching, good works, church and family activities.

Zana died November 2, 1968 in Oskaloosa where she and Eldon had moved in the late 1940's. Eldon died March 7, 1981 in Connecticut where he had lived with the couple's only daughter, Kathryn Ann Morgan Ryan, for the last five years of his life.
