The developers predict up to 3 million square feet of buildings in the area and construction worth an estimated $100 million to $200 million over a decade or so. They have no estimate of how many jobs will be created.

Edgemont plans to start work on a speculative building of perhaps 50,000 square feet immediately and then concentrate on 25-acre projects at a time. The city is planning a commercial park of up to 1,000 acres for the area, but could get options to buy only 266 acres initially.

run for the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate, said: "Even as a kid you could tell George was going to go somewhere, that he was going to be a success. I idolized him."

Milligan, who retired last year as chairman and chief executive officer of Norwest Bank of Des Moines, "was the kind of decent, thoughtful person that you'd like to have for a friend or neighbor," Gov. Terry Branstad said.

Milligan was born in Des Moines and graduated from Roosevelt High School, Washington and Lee University and Drake University Law School.

Milligan entered the banking business and went to work for Norwest in 1961 after graduating from law school. He embarked on a political career with his election to the Iowa House of Representatives in 1966. He served two terms in the House, then served in the Iowa Senate from 1970 to 1974.

Milligan was known at the Statehouse as a man who championed the causes of women, minorities and children.

"I could always count on George to care about people," said former Gov. Robert Ray. "George was just an enlightened soul. He was ahead of his time. He had a lot of courage. He took a position for what he believed in and fought for it."

Former Lt. Gov. Arthur Neu, now practicing law in Carroll, said Milligan was "a guy you couldn't help but like. . . . He was very bright and conscientious — and he was very effective."

In 1974, Milligan sought the U.S. Senate seat that was being vacated by Harold Hughes. Milligan was defeated in the primary.

Milligan rose to chairman and chief executive officer of Norwest Bank of Des Moines and regional president of Norwest Corp.'s Iowa banking group. Health concerns forced him to take an early retirement in February 1989.

Norwest officials credited Milligan's leadership with the company's strong earnings of the last few years.

Milligan was a member of Plymouth Congregational Church, the Iowa and American Bar Associations, the Iowa and American Bankers Associations, Rotary Club, Army Reserve and the Civil War Club.

He was a past president of the Des Moines Community Playhouse and Des Moines Health Center Board. He also served on the boards of the Des Moines Symphony, Simpson College, Planned Parenthood and Homesteaders Life Insurance Company.

Milligan is survived by his wife, Judy; a daughter, Lisa Maser of Le Mars; a son, George D. Milligan of West Des Moines; his father, David O. Milligan of Des Moines; a brother, Jim Milligan of Washington, D.C.; and four grandchildren.

Memorial services will be 2 p.m. today at Plymouth Congregational United Church of Christ in Des Moines. The body was cremated. Memorial contributions may be made to the church, the Des Moines Art Center or the Animal Rescue League.
