Second Crippled Children's Clinic Held In Waukon, 69 Are Examined

Last Thursday 69 children of Allamakee county took advantage of the State Services for Crippled Children clinic which was held in Waukon at the high school.

The children, all recommended by their attending physician, had the opportunity of being examined by some of the best doctors available from the University of Iowa medical college.

Each child, accompanied by his parents, was examined and a case record was studied. Results of the examination will be sent to the child's physician together with recommended care and treatment.

There were two pediatricians, Doctors R. R. Rembold and J. W. Berg and two orthopedic surgeons, Doctors I. V. Ponseti and J. C. Mulier at the clinic. Incidentally Dr. Ponseti is a native of Spain but is on the staff at SUI and Dr. Mulier is a Belgian doing some advanced work and is a SUI staff member.

Miss Jo Simonson, a speech and hearing consultant and Mike Freil, a speech student, were in charge of that section of the work. Helen Steele was the physical therapist with the clinic. John Taylor and Richard Low, both psychologists from the state division of child welfare were members of the clinic personnel.

The medical social consultants were Dorothy Ryan and Idella Nicholas. Mary Smith was the nutritionist, Janet Burnham the dental hygienist, and Betty Amelon, Bernadeen Laues, Darlene Crouch and Evelyn Black, he medical secretaries.

Four registered and one practical nurse from the county assisted at the clinic. They included Mrs. Bernice Moore and Mrs. Stacia Hartley, both registered nurses from New Albin; Mrs. C. G. Bray, Mrs. Esther Buntrock, both registered nurses and Mrs. Edna Lippe, practical nurse from Waukon.

In addition to these there were 4 who assisted at the clinic either by helping at the school serving lunches to the children and to the clinic personnel or in driving automobiles. Those children requiring laboratory work or x-ray work were transported to the Waukon Veterans Memorial hospital for that work.

These volunteer workers included: Frances Brophy, Lansing; Mrs. Bernard Houlihan, Mrs. Dorothy Schrupp, both of Harpers Ferry; Mrs. Gil Beeler, New Albin; Mrs. Gordon Lau, and Mrs. Roy Nelson, Waterville; and Mrs. W. W. Owen, Mrs. Louis E. Hull, Darlene Kelley, Shirley Stock, Mrs. B. H. Graeber, Mrs. Jarr, and Mrs. Curtis Strug, and Mrs. Cletus Huffman, of Waukon.

There are 32 of these clinics held throughout the state each year beginning in February and continuing through to November. This is the second straight year that such a clinic has been held in Waukon. Honeymooners Not Happy on Iowa Roads

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ogeburn, who were on a honeymoon trip after being married in Chicago, have a very poor impression of the highway system in Iowa.

The Ogeburns, who live in Maryland, were going south on Highway 13 from Waukon Sunday when they struck some of the blacktop which had broken up during the recent months after the winter months.

Their car spun around and wound up with a broken rear axle and other damage which slowed their honeymoon trip until they had necessary repairs made in Waukon.

Carrier Boys To Des Moines Monday

A special bus started from Waukon early Monday morning bound for Des Moines carrying creation director, announced Tuesday that registration for all boys and girls wishing to participate in the program will be held Friday morning at 9 a. m. at the swimming pool. Registration for swimming, golf, tennis, midget baseball and any other sports desired will be taken at that time. The boys playing in the Junior Legion baseball team will not have to register. Kolarik said.

Hey kids!

Would you like to learn to swim, play golf, tennis or baseball or softball? Would you like to have a complete recreation program in Waukon under capable and trained supervision?

Undoubtedly the answer is yes but there is a big IF. There is a matter of a few dollars to be raised to carry out such a program. In fact there is a matter of $300.

At the present time it has been said that some $500 is needed to carry out to a successful conclusion an eight-week program. To help matters along $200 has been pledged to help such a program and Al Kolarik, popular high school coach, has agreed to serve as supervisor.

Now listen kids. If you would like to be able to go to the swimming pool three mornings a week to learn or be a better swimmer, then spend a couple mornings a week playing golf and the afternoon hours of each day in learning to play softball or baseball and tennis then ask your mother and dad for $1.00 or more.

Bring those dollars or mail them to the Waukon Newspapers in care of the recreation fund and be assured of such a program.

Kolarik said the municipal swimming pool is available on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday forenoons from 9 until 11 a. m. He said that he could give lessons to non-swimmers on Tuesdays and Fridays and lessons to those who are just beginners on Mondays are in the making to provide golf lessons at the Waukon Thursday forenoons. Arrange golf course on Monday and Wednesday forenoons.

Al added that he would give baseball instruction at the athletic field during the afternoons and is already planning to organize a Junior Legion team composed of high school players.

As for tennis instruction that too will be given if there are enough boys and girls wanting to play tennis. Courts are available at the city park for such play. Kolarik added that basketball standards have been erected on one of the tennis courts and there is a possibility that basketball will be added.

This program is open to all boys and girls in Waukon and surrounding area and would continue until some time in August. But listen kids it is up to you to see that this program is a success.

You must do two things in order to see the program gets rolling along smoothly:

1. You must help us raise $300. Any donations from $1.00 up is acceptable. Have checks made payable to the Waukon Recreation Fund and send them to the Waukon Newspapers.

2. Then you must get out and join in the fun, that is important. If you raise the money then you should help enjoy the benefits of it but then you wouldn't be boys in the fun.

Remember if the program gets going it will be to your benefit

This land is situated in Ludlow Township west of Waukon. He then returned to Illinois and worked on a farm for wages and to learn to speak English more fluently. Fredrick also spent each winter in Missouri cutting wood for the river boats for needed cash. church and the latter is active in church and Sunday school work. A resident of this section for fifty-six years and continuously identified with its growth and development, Mr. Sherman has become widely and favorably known in the locality as a man enterprising in business, progressive in citizenship and faithful to all the ties and obligations of life—one of Allamakee county's most honored pioneers.

O. J. HAGER.

O. J. Hager occupies a notable place in financial circles of Waukon as president of the First National Bank, while his connections with other leading institutions through investment or official service make him also one of the country's most conspicuously successful financiers. He is a native son of Iowa, born in Allamakee county April 7, 1867, a son of Fred Hager, who was among the early settlers in Iowa and who came to this section of the state in 1849. He married here Miss Wilhelmina Helming and after the wedding took up a claim some six miles beyond Waukon which he cleared, broke and fenced and upon which he made many substantial improvements, replacing his original farm dwelling by a good brick residence and making his property one of the finest and most valuable in the section. When he left the farm he moved into Waukon and there spent the last years of his life, passing away November 4, 1909, having survived his wife since 1891.

O. J. Hager was reared upon his father's farm and acquired his primary education in the public schools, supplementing this by a three years' course in Decorah College. After laying aside his books he taught for four years but at the end of that time came to Waukon, where he aided in organizing the First National Bank with a capital stock of fifty thousand dollars. Mr. Hager was made cashier and he served in that capacity for five years, advancing afterward to the position of president, an office which he still holds. The bank purchased an old building which they tore down and replaced by the present modern and commodious structure which is complete in furnishings and equipment and a worthy competitor with the finest financial institutions in the state. The capital stock has been increased to one hundred thousand dollars and an extensive and growing patronage has been built up, much of the success of the concern being due to Mr. Hager's able and far-sighted management. He is connected in an important way with various other banks in this vicinity, being president of the Waterville Savings Bank; vice president of the New Albin Savings Bank, and a stockholder and director in the Dorchester Savings Bank. He is connected in a similar way with the Brownsville State Bank of Brownsville, Minnesota, and has come to be known as one of the authorities on finance in this part of the country, his standing being based on twenty years of able work along financial lines.

Extensive and important as are his banking interests, Mr. Hager has yet found time to devote to other lines of activity and during the period of his residence here has been prominently connected with many profitable business enterprises. He is a real-estate dealer on an extensive scale, buying and selling Iowa and Minnesota lands and specializing in improved and unimproved farm properties, in which he has valuable holdings.

On September 20, 1900, Mr. Hager married Miss Ella Stevens, who was born, reared and educated in Waukon. She is a daughter of Peter Stevens, one of the original settlers in Allamakee county and for a number of years a prosperous farmer. He later moved to Waukon. Mr. and Mrs. Hager are the parents of two daughters, Helen and Anna. The family are members of the Presbyterian church and are well known in religious and social circles. They occupy a modern and beautiful residence in Waukon which Mr. Hager erected and which they have made a center of hospitality for their charming circle of friends. Fraternally Mr. Hager is connected with the Knights of Pythias and his political allegiance is given to the republican party. A man of high worth and sterling integrity, he is widely known throughout Allamakee county, a community which has known him during his entire life.

HON. JOHN F. DAYTON.

There is scarcely a phase of legitimate activity in Allamakee county in which Hon. John F. Dayton is not successful and prominent and to the advancement which he has not by his ability, industry and enterprise made substantial contributions. He is one of the county's political leaders, an able and successful member of the bar, a force in the development of the fruit growing industry and each year of his activity since he came to Waukon in 1873 has witnessed his growing prominence in all of these fields of endeavor.

Mr. Dayton was born in Saratoga county, New York, January 10, 1849, and is a son of Dr. Simon N. and Lydia (Houghton) Dayton, natives of New York. Dr. Dayton spent his youth and early manhood in that state and afterward moved to Illinois, locating in Rockford, where he engaged in the general practice of medicine until 1890, when he returned to New York and located in Corinth, where he spent the last years of his life, dying there in the fall of 1899. His wife survived him only a few months, passing away in February, 1900.

John F. Dayton grew to manhood in Rockford, Illinois, and acquired his education in the public schools, graduating from the Rockford high school with the class of 1867. He was afterward a student in Beloit College for three years and when he left that institution read law in Rockford. In 1873 he came to Iowa and settled in Waukon, where he was admitted to the bar. In the same year he formed a partnership with his uncle, Hon. Henry Dayton, and their association has continued since that time, the firm being today one of the strongest in the county, connected through its patronage with much important litigation. Mr. Dayton served as county attorney for two years and in public life proved as able, far-sighted and progressive as he is in the private practice of his profession.

Aside from his work in the general practice of law Mr. Dayton is also well known in Allamakee county as an extensive fruit grower. In 1878 he planted most forty acres of land in grapes, strawberries and raspberries and later led a nursery, where he specializes in raising apple trees and others bearing

STORY OF THE
KARL KRUEGER FAMILY

Our grandfather, Karl Krueger, was born in the German province of Lippe-Detmold about 1830. Lippe-Detmold was one of the low provinces near the Netherlands border. At that time each of these little German provinces had its own dialect, called Low-German. The official or state language of Germany was that of the Prussian conquerors and was known as High-German. This was the language of the government and of the schools. The dialects spoken in the various provinces differed enough so that people had difficulty in understanding one another. Many learned to speak High-German as well. Our grandparents on both sides of the family spoke a very correct High-German.

Karl was apprenticed to a draper in his early teens and worked at that trade for seven years. He told us of making many swatches for a wealthy landowner's daughter. She was to be married and said that her order would be a big one. Karl took great pains with her project but she ended up with ordering only one tablecloth. The young weaver was disgusted. Among our childhood memories is that of a hand-woven linen tablecloth he had made. Unfortunately this cloth was lost through various loanings and movings. It should have been kept as a family heirloom.

In his later teens Karl spent several summers in The Netherlands, cutting hay and grain with a scythe, to earn a bit of cash. An apprentice received no wages. The skill he developed here served him well in later years.

He had one brother and one sister older than he. Even in his childhood he rebelled at the regimentation of life in Germany. His stories about the arrogant German schoolmasters of that day and about the pompous Prussian drillmasters of the army entertained and fascinated his grandchildren. He was a master storyteller and his tales always packed a good laugh. They never grew old with re-telling.

At 18 he was required to take military training. The years covered the hardships of those army days with a veil of humor that we all loved. A favorite story was that about a minor officer who had stopped to reprimand him for a slight error in his salute when he met him on the parade grounds. As the man turned to go he stepped into a mud puddle and fell flat. The story always ended with "Potz, da lag er" and a twinkle of glee in his eye that made the narrative even more vivid.

Before another year of army life, Karl's innermost being rebelled so completely that he decided to go to America. He had very little money but some friends were going and they were able to help him finance the trip. To evade army service it was necessary for them to cross the border and embark from Holland.

They landed in New York. There were four of them; Karl's companions were Konrad Helmings (meur), Heinrich Rueggermeier, and Frederick Hager. Like many other young immigrants, they found work on the farm lands of New York state. Karl's first job was to gather wood for the huge fireplace. He told us that the first English word he learned was "backlog" which he pronounced "beklog". At harvest time there was another new word which he learned the hard way, "hurryup". He was the first of several men who were cutting a field of grain with scythes. The men back of him were constantly trying to annoy him by telling the young Dutchman to hurry up. Finally, he realized what they meant and applied the strength and skill he had acquired in Holland and was soon around the field and back of the others where he could tell them to "hurry up".

The four friends were industrious and frugal and were soon able to heed the call of the day "Go West, Young Man". They purchased a small stock of thimbles, needles, pins, etc., and set out....bartering for meals and lodging with their stock of notions which pioneer women everywhere needed. They forged on to the Chicago area. Chicago was then the State's second largest city, located in the damp swampy region along the south end of Lake Michigan. It was not a healthy spot. Without drainage and without pure water, ague, typhoid, and other diseases of damp swampy places were prevalent. Land could have been bought for 1 - 5 dollars per acre in what is now Chicago's loop and lake shore area, but the young Germans wanted none of it. They wanted good farm land with pure water and ample fuel. They had carried wood and water far in the homeland where soil was poor.

Again they headed West. This time with axes and an oxteam and again armed with trinkets and notions like those that had served them so well on their previous trip. Galena, Illinois, the booming lead mining center of the 50's and 60's, in the hill country near the Mississippi River, beckoned. However, the land hungry young compatriots passed through Galena, crossed the Mississippi and pushed on into northeastern Iowa. Here among the unglaciated limestone hills and bluffs of Allamakee County, they found wonderful stands of timber and springs of pure water. This was what they were looking for. Each selected a farm site near present Waukon and began clearing land and building his log cabin.

They were soon able to plant small plots of ground, but needed cash. For this they shouldered their axes and made their way down to the timber lands of Missouri to chop wood for the belching fires of the river boats (We still have an axe Grandfather brought with him from Germany). In the spring they returned to their farms, tilled their small plots and cleared more land.

On these co-operative excursions Karl seems to have been the chief cook for the bachelor establishment. This was before the days of commercial yeast. A starter had to be kept for the next baking. Once the young cook lost this starter through some mishap. He walked ten miles to get a new one....so far because nearer neighbors, largely French and Spanish, made only soda biscuits and he and his friends wanted good old yeast bread. He got his starter and the good woman told him that thereafter, he should save at least a crust of bread. From this, she said, he could make his own starter. He told us he never walked 20 miles for a starter again.

Life was primitive. Beds were made by driving a stake into the dirt floor, to this they nailed two saplings which reached the wall and rested on logs of the cabin there. They stretched rope or leather thongs over these saplings to serve as springs. There was no storage space, so meat and other supplies were hung high in the trees, suspended by long thongs or ropes to keep them safe from marauding bears. Bread was stored in their one kettle which was used for baking, cooking, and washing as well as for protection from squirrels and other rodents.

After some years of hard labor and frugality Karl was able to help his brother's family, the Henry Kruegers, later of Baxter, Iowa, to come to America. He started them with a 40-acre plot of ground as a home site and, realizing that their small children must have milk, he started toward Dubuque in search of a cow. He finally located one he could buy twenty miles from home. It was the time of spring freshets and, on his return trip with the cow, he found the Turkey River overflowing its banks. A young lad was on hand at the ford with a boat, hoping to collect a small fee for carrying people across the river. They started out with Karl and the boy in the boat and the cow swimming behind. Before they reached midstream, however, the boat capsized. In telling the story to us he used to say, "I couldn't swim but the cow could and we were luckily headed in the right direction, but I never got a chance to pay that boy."

About this time ^{Simon} Konrad Helming persuaded his three sisters to come to America. They had heard of the rigors of Iowa winters and packed good old German feather ticks, made of homespun linen into their large wooden chests strapped with iron and equipped with rope handles (One of these chests is in our attic at the present time and the homespun ticking is also there). They took passage down the Weser River, across the Atlantic to New Orleans and up the Mississippi to McGregor, Iowa. Unfortunately, the river was low and the pilot did not know his channel as well as he should have known it and the boat was marooned on a sand bar. This necessitated the unloading of the boat and our German immigrants had to rustle their own luggage. With such delays the journey took 13 weeks and before they landed at McGregor, all food was spoiled and drinking water was long used up.

The feminine companionship of ^{Simon's} Konrad's sisters was a welcome addition to the somber lives of the young pioneers. In time Carolina, a pretty blonde, decided to accept the modest home offered her by Karl Krueger. One sister married Heinrich Rueggenmeier and the other married Frederick Hager.

Carolina was an ideal complement to the serious and ambitious young Karl. In the homeland she had worked as a maid in the home of a very devout couple. These people belonged to the group that was then known as pietists, followers of Count Zinzendorf and later known as Moravian Brethren. The sincere religious atmosphere of this home made a deep impression on the young girl, which stayed with her through life. There she gained a new spiritual outlook as well as the money for her equipment and passage to America. With this background the home of our grandparents was soon a haven for the Methodist circuit riders who came to the new settlements west of the Mississippi River. These dedicated young men were both a religious and a cultural influence. They followed literally John Wesley's commission to "join knowledge and vital piety". They preached Jesus Christ as Lord of the mind, remembering that the founder of Methodism in his ardent campaign against illiteracy in England once said "Every blockhead is a knave."

Abernathey, Mildred Arlene Convis (Mrs. Donald Ray) [Helming]; ed. Vernon P. Helming, 1990. vi, 320.

Caroline Wilhelmine Henrietta Helmingsmeier, b. 24 Mar (or May) 1837 in Langenholzhäusen. Lippe-Detmold, m. Simon Friederich Hager, 8 July 1858, Waukon, Iowa. had 8 daughters and 4 sons.

Simon Friederich Hager, b. 16 May 1830, in Rafeld, Lippe-Detmold, m. Caroline, d. 5 November 1909 in Waukon.

Simon Friederich was one of founders of Zalmona Presbyterian Church in Ludlow Twp, Allamakee Co. Like his three fellow immigrants in the quadrumvirate, he left Lippe-Detmold partly to escape military service in Germany (also for economic reasons). On his way to Iowa he detoured to Sheboygan, Wis. where his employer offered him a choice between a lot in what is now the Loop in Chicago, and wages for work in Waukon. He chose the wages. Having bought land near Waukon, he took time to become fluent in English by living in Bloomington, Ill., where people did not speak German, but where three of his siblings had settled permanently. (between 1846 and 1849.) After his marriage to Karoline Wilhelmine he "took up a [soldier's] claim some six miles beyond [west of] Waukon which he cleared, broke [with his plow] and fenced and upon which he made many substantial improvements, replacing his original farm dwelling by a good brick residence and making his property one of the finest and most valuable in the section. When he left the farm he moved into Waukon and there spent the last years of his life...."

He was a very wealthy man in those days, and gave each of his eight daughters $10,000 when she married (as dowry).

John was the seventh child (and third son). He was born 30 August 1871, married Grace Falby 14 June 1905, and died 10 June 1952.

The four who came to Iowa for similar reasons, staying close together, were: Hager, Heinrich Conrad [Adolph] Helming[meier], Heinrich [Christoph] Ruggenmeier, and Karl Krueger. After they started their farming operations, Helming[meier] persuaded his three sisters to come to America--Christine Sophie Charlotte married Krueger, Sophie Kterina Charlotte married Ruggenmeier, and Karoline Wilhelmine Henriette married Hager.
