

281—56.14 (259) Rehabilitation technology.

56.14(1) Rehabilitation technology services are available at any point in the rehabilitation process, except to those job candidates on the waiting list. Such services include, as appropriate, an evaluation of the ability of the individual to benefit from rehabilitation technology services. Areas in which rehabilitation technology services may be of assistance include seating and positioning, augmentative communication, computer access, environmental controls, mobility equipment, and modification of the job site or home. The rehabilitation technology is that which is required by the disability. It is not considered to be a device, such as a computer, that is required to work by any individual regardless of disability as that is the responsibility of the individual or the business. The software to make the computer accessible is the rehabilitation technology, and the computer is the conduit used in all occupations.

56.14(2) Unless a written exception is approved by a supervisor, the following division contribution limits apply:

- a.* The division shall pay for no more than the established rate in division policy.
- b.* The division shall not pay anything toward the modification of a second living unit.

[ ARC 2844C , IAB 12/7/16, effective 1/11/17]