Senator Kirketeg was a member of the Presbyterian church, the Masonic and Eastern Star orders, and a Republican.

CHARLES EDWARD MALONE, farmer, seedman and legislator, died March 22, 1945, at his home in Atlantic, Iowa; born on a farm near Wiota in Cass county, Iowa, on October 24, 1881, the son of B. F. and Rebecca Malone; educated in the rural schools; engaged in farming, making a specialty of seed corn and other grains for over thirty years; operated a seed business at Atlantic; served as assistant superintendent of the Iowa agricultural exhibit at the St. Louis Exposition in 1903; married to Edna E. Harris, of Atlantic, April 18, 1906, and they have two sons, Claude and Cecil, who with their mother survive, the sons conducting the seed business in Atlantic founded in 1904 by the deceased.

Senator Malone served as county treasurer in Cass county for two terms, from 1914 to 1918, and as county supervisor for three terms from 1924 to 1930; represented the farmers of Iowa and the Middle West in Chicago in 1931 at the installation of new equipment by the Rock Island railroad; was honored with a long legislative service for the district consisting of Cass and Shelby counties as senator in the Forty-sixth and as representative in the Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth General Assemblies. At the time of his death he was serving as postmaster of Atlantic.

J. E. McIntosh, lawyer and banker, died at his home in West Liberty, Iowa, December 26, 1944; born on a farm in Goshen township near Atalissa, in Muscatine county, Iowa, October 15, 1868, the son of Alexander and Mary Dallas McIntosh, residing upon the farm until seventeen years of age; educated in the country school and Atalissa high school, later in the law school at the University of Iowa, from which he graduated in 1892; practiced law in Des Moines one year before removing to West Liberty where he has since resided, and practiced law for fifty-one years; married Mary Wilshire at Atalissa in 1890, who died in 1913, and in 1923 he married Agnes McEwan of New London, Iowa, who survives with one daughter, Mary Dallas McIntosh, and one step-daughter, Mrs. Charles Welch at West Liberty, a son preceding him in death.

He has been president of the Citizens Savings Bank continuously since 1908 and was for twelve years mayor of West Liberty; served as representative in the Forty-second, Forty-second extra and Forty-third General Assemblies; a Republican and a member of the Masons, Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias and Modern Woodmen orders.

Homer A. Fuller, attorney and jurist, died at his home in Mount Ayr, Iowa, March 7, 1945; born July 20, 1877, on a farm near Warren, Ohio, the son of Leroy and Elizabeth Fuller; attended rural school until removal with his parents to Mount Ayr; worked on a farm and attended the Mount Ayr schools graduating in 1894; then was employed in a store at Bethany, Missouri, until he entered the University of Iowa in 1896, graduating from the law college in 1898 at the age of twenty years and on account of his minority the oath of attorney at law was not administered until August 3, that year.

He began the practice of law with his brother, Frank F. Fuller in Mount Ayr and was active in the courts until his appointment as district judge on August 7, 1917, and served continuously until his death, enjoying a long and notable career on the district bench. Judge Fuller at one time served as Mayor of Mount Ayr and during that period the city waterworks system was established and pavement laid. He married Eleanor Swain on January 24, 1906, who with two daughters survive him.
