Lawyer/lobbyist from Iowa slain in Minnesota

The estranged husband of a woman also shot to death is a suspect in the case.

By WILLIAM PETROSKI and THOMAS A. FOGARTY REGISTER STAFF WRITERS

E. Kevin Kelly of Johnston, a lawyer and lobbyist who served eight years in the Iowa Legislature in the 1970s, was found shot to death along with a female friend in a posh suburb of Minneapolis, friends said Friday.

Kelly's body was found with that of Barbara Lund, 55, the estranged wife of businessman Russell T. Lund Jr., 59, whose family owns a chain of grocery stores in the Twin Cities area, according to Kelly's friends in the Des Moines area.

The Lunds reportedly had been going through a bitter divorce in proceedings that began three or four years ago.

Anonymous Call

The bodies were found by police at Russell Lund's residence in suburban Minnetonka.

Minnetonka police told reporters Friday that they received an anonymous call about 7 p.m. Thursday informing them that two deaths may have occurred at 2301 Sherwood Hills Road in Minnetonka. Investigators entered the home at about 11 p.m. and found the bodies.

Russell Lund Jr. is a suspect in the slayings, police said. He was undergoing psychiatric care Friday night, police said. Arrangements were being made to question him.

The slayings occurred in a secluded modern brick house in a wealthy neighborhood. The area was cordoned off by police Friday.

Sioux City Native

Kelly, 49, was a Sioux City native who served two years in the Iowa House and six years in the Iowa Senate as a Republican from 1971 to 1978, when he decided not to seek re-election. He was an assistant Woodbury County attorney from 1968 to 1971, and from 1970 to 1974 was state chairman of the Iowa Young Republicans.

In recent years, Kelly was a well-known and well-liked lobbyist at the Iowa Statehouse. He switched party affiliation in 1988 to become a Democrat.

In Iowa, the moves mean a streamlining of the Des Moines division, which covers most of the state.

By MARK SIEBERT REGISTER STAFF WRITER

A major restructuring announced Friday by the U.S. Postal Service will result in about 500 fewer employees in Iowa, including a 27½-year veteran who has spent most of his career playing Mrs. Claus at Christmas. Postmaster General Marvin Runyon announced the move at a news conference in Des Moines.

Corbin and others at the Des Moines office had heard rumors of the coming changes ever since Runyon took over as postmaster general in July. The former auto executive and head of the Tennessee Valley Authority came aboard with a cost-cutting reputation that earned him the nickname "Carvin' Marvin."

Friday, Runyon announced he was trimming the number of senior postal managers from 42 to 24. He also said he would reduce the number of

TRIAL MOVED BACK

Caspar Weinberger's Iran-Contra trial was put off by a federal judge Friday until Jan. 5 — a two-month delay. It will give the former secretary of defense unusually quick access to the previous statements of government witnesses. The huge volume of paperwork requires abandoning the tentative Nov. 2 trial date, said U.S. District Judge Thomas Hogan.

ber 1990 while on a skiing trip to Aspen, Colo., according to Iowa friends. Twice divorced, Kelly had maintained a long-distance relationship with the woman since then, friends said Friday.

Neighbors told a Minneapolis newspaper that Russell Lund was a reclusive man who seldom mixed with other residents.

"He didn't look like a rich guy at all," one neighbor told the Star Tribune. "His clothes were kind of strange, like brown and raggedy. You would wave to him and he wouldn't wave back."

Attended Iowa Wedding

Kelly and Barbara Lund attended a wedding in Iowa last week, friends told the Star Tribune.

Kelly told friends in Des Moines earlier this week that he would be going to the Twin Cities to promote one of his new business ventures, Active Times Magazine, a publication dealing with the lifestyles of people age 50 and older.

The Aspen-based publication is designed to be distributed as an insert to newspapers, and Kelly said he wanted to talk to Twin Cities newspaper executives, friends said.

Records show that during the past legislative session, Kelly's clients included AT&T, the Iowa Defense Counsel Association, Chicago Northwestern Corp., and the Iowa Association of Cemeteries. Friends said he had been active in Ducks Unlimited and had served as a national trustee of the wildlife organization.

Kelly was an avid competitive swimmer, and in 1991 participated with Des Moines banker J.C. "Buz"

Kelly is survived by two daughters, both in their 20s. Tracy Ann, who was living with her father for the summer, is a student at Iowa State University, friends said. An older sister, Timory Lynn, lives in the East, friends said.

"He was always a straight shooter and a good citizen of Iowa," said Uhl.

He was a graduate of Sioux City Central High School, received a bachelor's degree from Gonzaga University in Spokane, Wash., and was a 1968 graduate of South Dakota Law School.

"This is a shocker," said Lee Dallager of Des Moines, a longtime friend of Kelly. "I just saw Kevin walking across the street the other day. Kevin was a good guy."

David Archie of Des Moines, publisher of The Iowan magazine, said he last talked to Kelly on Monday about his pending trip and some business matters. Archie said he'll remember Kelly for his diverse range of interests — music and ballet, athletics and conservation causes.

Competitive Swimmer

Ed Campbell of Des Moines, a veteran legislative lobbyist, said he had known Kelly for more than 20 years. "He was a hell of a good guy. He was an excellent swimmer and had swam at tournaments around the Midwest."

Frank Burnette, a Des Moines lawyer, said he and lawyer Burns Davidson had shared office space with Kelly since January.

"Kevin was an excellent lawyer and a fine athlete. I knew him more from the YMCA and his mastery of swimming than anything else. He swam at noon frequently and I ran at noon."

Judge may dismiss L.A. officer's retrial

Los Angeles, Calif. (AP) — The retrial date for a policeman who clubbed and kicked Rodney King was abandoned Friday by a judge who suggested the state case against the officer should be dismissed if a federal prosecution goes ahead.

"I don't think it's in anyone's interest to have three trials on the same subject matter involving the same defendant," Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg said.

Weisberg had planned to hold officer Laurence Powell's retrial on Oct. 19 on a single count of assault under color of authority. But a federal grand jury's indictment Tuesday of Powell and three fellow officers changed everything, he said.

Los Angeles Times
San Diego, Calif. — Declaring that "we've had our wake-up call," Tailhook Association officials offered their first public apology Friday to the more than 25 women harassed and assaulted at the group's 1991 convention.

In a four-page letter to acting Secretary of the Navy Sean O'Keefe, Tailhook Chairman W.D. Knutson admitted the group was at least partly responsible for sexual misconduct at the Las Vegas convention, where women, some of whom were Navy officers, were groped, fondled and sexually assaulted by drunken Navy aviators in a hotel hallway.

Washington, D.C. (AP) — Ex-CIA spymaster Clair George "purposely, willfully" hid the fact he had met arms middleman Richard Secord from senators investigating the Iran-Contra affair, a former senator charged Friday.

George, the former chief of all CIA operations in the Middle East, admitted with lying when he said he had never met Secord.

Police query husband of slain woman

Minnetonka, Minn. — Russell T. Lund Jr. went to police with his attorney Saturday, two days after his estranged wife, Barbara, and former Iowa lawmaker E. Kevin Kelly were found shot to death at Lund's home in this posh Twin Cities suburb.

No charges have been filed, but Lund remains the primary suspect in the slayings, Police Chief Richard Setter said Saturday.

Minnetonka police were releasing little other information about the questioning of Lund.

High-Powered Lawyer

Some Twin Cities media reported that Lund had checked into the psychiatric unit of a hospital under an assumed name Friday, but authorities wouldn't confirm those reports.

"He was brought to our office. We do not know where he was staying or where he will be staying," said Lt. Mike Olson of the Min-

Lund is being represented by Joseph Friedman, a well-known Minneapolis defense lawyer.

"He takes the big ones," Olson said of Friedman.

Investigators will meet with the Hennepin County attorney's office Monday to review the case.

Olson wouldn't say whether a weapon had been recovered or what type of gun had been used. He also wouldn't comment on where the bodies had been found in the house.

Vehicle Sought

The Associated Press said Saturday that police are still looking for a 1987 Chevrolet Suburban with several radio antennas.

Olson said authorities also want to talk to Kelly's daughters, who are believed to be in the Minneapolis area making funeral arrangements.

Kelly, of Johnston, told friends in Des Moines last week that he would be going to the Twin Cities to promote one of his new business ventures, Active Times Magazine, a publication dealing with the lifestyle of people age 50 and older.

He had said he hoped to meet with newspaper executives in the area about the publication.

Authorities also want to find out why Barbara Lund and Kelly were at Russell Lund's residence.

"That's what we're looking at. Was it just happenstance that she was there? Or was it a prearranged meeting?" Olson said.

Woman Lived in Orono

Barbara Lund was living in the family home in Orono, Minn., an exclusive suburb in the western Twin Cities area. She also had possession of the family home in Aspen, Colo., where she had been spending much of her time and where she and Kelly first met in 1990.

Friends told the Associated Press that she typically stayed at the Orono home, but it was not unusual for her to visit the home in Minnetonka, an isolated house on top of a ridge that neighbors said Russell Lund chose for the clear reception it provided for his hobby in amateur radio, friends said.

The Minnetonka home was equipped with a security system, but it was not on when police broke day night. There were no signs of

The $385,000 home in Minnetonka is in a secluded and wooded area designed to ensure privacy. It is difficult to see the house from the street, although a 36-foot-long motor home that authorities say Russell Lund Jr. would take on extended trips was visible in the driveway.

Lund's father and namesake founded the Lunds chain of upscale grocery stores. Russell Lund Jr. was not active in running the company, leaving that to his son from his first marriage, Russell Lund III.

Barbara Lund was a skiing enthusiast who tried out for the Olympic team several years ago. She was a successful real estate agent and a former Miss Minneapolis. She served for several years as president of the Minnetonka Art Center. She was originally from Duluth.

Kelly, 49, was a Sioux City native who served two years in the Iowa House and six years in the Iowa Senate as a Republican from 1971 to 1978. Recently, he has been a lobbyist at the Statehouse for several interests.

The fire is still under investigation, Kirkpatrick said.

Authenticity was the goal. Union men walked around in hot, blue wool pants made to exact specifications, even down to the stitching. No air conditioners or electric fans were in sight, despite the 90 degree, humid weather.

But anachronisms could be found if one looked hard enough. Modern-day conveniences such as Coleman coolers were hidden in wooden boxes. The coolers are necessary to prevent dysentery, a disease that claimed more soldiers' lives in the Civil War than battle wounds, Olsson said.

860s Meal

The food, however, was cooked over hot campfires — not microwaves.

In charge of the cooking were the women, of course. Re-enactors strolled around the camp in hoop skirts and aprons, preparing an authentic 1860s meal.

Kyle Good, an over-the-road truck driver from Eldora who leads a battalion of partisan guerrillas for the Confederates, said the re-enactments are his perfect idea of a vacation.

What brought former Iowa lawmaker E. Kevin Kelly and his Twin Cities girlfriend, Barbara Lund, to the secluded Minnesota home of her estranged husband last week?

Minnetonka, Minn., police say that information is key to the investigation into the shooting deaths of Kevin Kelly and Barbara Lund.

Russell Lund
His house

Their bodies were found Thursday night in separate rooms in the home of Lund's estranged husband, Russell T. Lund Jr. of Minnetonka.

Barbara Lund did not belong in the home so it is critical to the investigation to find out why she was there, said Minnetonka Police Lt. Mike Olson.

Not Charged

Russell Lund Jr., 59, son of the founder of Lunds grocery store chain, is considered a suspect in the case but no charges had been filed by Monday.

John Kelly Jr. of Sioux City, brother of the victim, said he had heard that Russell Lund Jr. asked his wife to come to his house to look over legal papers and even indicated that she should bring Kevin Kelly because he was a lawyer and could help her understand the documents.

John Kelly Jr. was quick to add, however, that it was only something he had heard — perhaps even from a reporter — and he could not confirm any of it. "To tell you the truth I don't remember who said that," he said.

Asked about that scenario, Olson said: "We've heard similar things up here. But you can't put third-hand information in a warrant."

A Happy Couple

Friends and relatives have been stunned and are difficult to talk to in the initial stages of the investigation, officials said.

Barbara Lund, 55, mother of seven, former Miss Minneapolis, successful real estate agent, avid skier, flier of Learjets, artist and former president of a suburban art museum, lived at Orono. She'd met Kelly about 18 months to two years ago in Aspen, Colo.

According to longtime friend Peggy Watson, Barbara's friends liked Kelly "almost immediately" after meeting him.

association memberships, and set a goal of reducing membership costs by one-third.

At their meeting Monday, Executive Council members agreed that the one-third cut may be unattainable. In many cases, the value to state government of the information or services provided by the associations far exceeds the cost of annual dues, they said.

"We have to use some common sense in this approach," Branstad said in cautioning against drastic reductions in state memberships.

Wide Array of Cuts

The list presented to the council provides a wide array of potential cuts. For example, the state Department of Public Defense pays $95 a year to belong to the Johnston Chamber of Commerce. The Department of Transportation pays $90 to belong to a group called the Association for Information and Image Management.

Not all association memberships come that cheaply, according to the list. For example, the Department of Transportation pays $66,070 to belong to the Transportation Research Board.

Other high-priced memberships include the Council of State Governments, $65,700; the Education Commission of the States, $43,100; and the Conference of State Bank Supervisors, $29,450.

Memberships held by the DOT and the Department of Education account for nearly one-third of the state membership costs.

other so much. As well as being emotionally compatible, they provided intellectual stimulation for each other," Watson said.

"Barbara was happy, Kevin was happy," Watson said Monday after a memorial service for Lund in Minnesota.

During the service, Watson said, "I went from a feeling of horror to a feeling of sadness."

Iowa Memorial Service

A memorial service for Kelly, 49, will be at 11 a.m. today at Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church in Sioux City.

John Kelly Jr. said his brother's car was being repaired while his brother was in the Twin Cities last week and he apparently had been riding in Barbara Lund's car. Lund's light-blue Mercedes was towed from the driveway of Russell Lund's "Ridgetop" home last Friday.

John Kelly Jr. said his brother intended to pick up his car and return to the Des Moines area and Barbara Lund planned to catch an airplane for Aspen. But they went to the home of Russell Lund before their departure.

Shot Repeatedly

Officials say Kevin Kelly and Barbara Lund were shot repeatedly, but they would not say what type of firearm was used. Asked about the location of the gunshot wounds, a spokesman for the Hennepin County medical examiner's office said the wounds were "scattered."

Russell Lund has been questioned by police in the presence of his lawyer but later was released without charges. He had been separated from Barbara Lund about three years.

Russell Lund's father died earlier this year. Police say they are interested in any possible "dollars and cents" case and they have already immediately sought a will or divorce information.

As well as being emotionally compatible, they provided intellectual stimulation for each other.

Minnetonka police said they knew who reported the homicides but would not disclose that identity.

The police were first alerted to the homicides about 7 p.m. Thursday. A spokesman for the medical examiner's office placed the time of death at several hours before the bodies were discovered at 11 p.m. Thursday.

When police went to the house at 7 p.m. it was locked and they could not find any evidence of an intrusion or crime. But, acting on information from the telephone call, authorities obtained a search warrant and entered the home four hours later and discovered the bodies.

After enduring year from her husband, Darl stabbed the man to death with a butcher knife when he threatened to kill her. Her defense lawyer said Tuesday she saved her life.

"She did what she had to do to save her life," James Williams said in a Polk County jury verdict that sentenced Daniels, 29, to life in prison.

But Assistant Polk County Attorney Nan Horvat said Tuesday night of May 26, 1991, that she was "as the judge, the jury and the executioner."

"She will ask you to let her live in this case to give her a chance to live," Horvat told the jury.

Daniels is charged with first-degree murder in the death of her common-law husband Williams, 37, who was shot once in the heart. If convicted on that charge, she faces a life in prison.

Daughter's Testimony

Daniels' 8-year-old daughter, Marva, took the witness stand and told a hushed courtroom that she saw her father killed at the family's apartment at 624 Walker St. the night of her mother's death.

The presence of a child in the courtroom seemed jarring in contrast to the panoramic view of violence presented in the courtroom. The child sat next to her mother, with whom she lives, when she walked to the witness stand.

Later, her feet dangled from the edge of the chair behind her.

SLAYING INVESTIGATION HINDERED

Police say families uncooperative

A Kelly family member says there is no conspiracy, just a desire to get through memorial services.

By TOM ALEX

Relatives of the two people shot to death at a posh suburban home near the Twin Cities last week aren't cooperating with the investigation, police said Tuesday.

Richard Setter, chief of the Minnetonka, Minn., police department, said there appears to be a systematic effort on the part of family members of Russell T. Lund Jr., Barbara Lund and Kevin Kelly not to speak with the police department.

"It's very bizarre," Setter said.

A Kelly family member says, however, there is no conspiracy to avoid police, just a desire to get through memorial services and initial stages of the grieving process.

Barbara Lund, 55, of Orono, Minn., and her boyfriend, Kevin Kelly, 49, of Johnston, Ia., were found dead in the home of her estranged husband Russell Lund, in Minnetonka, Minn., last Thursday. The Lunds were in the process of a divorce and had been separated for three years.

Lund, the primary suspect in the homicides, is reported to have checked into a hospital in the Twin Cities area and Minnetonka police have been told they'll need a court order just to view the admission records.

Asked about the charge that family members had been avoiding police, Kevin Kelly's brother, John Kelly Jr. of Sioux City, said: "I have to believe they are talking about

Families Were Friendly

He said his brother's daughters, especially Tracy, had become good friends of Russell Lund's son, Russell Lund III, and his family. Kelly said he believes that his nieces stayed with the Lund III family in the days following the tragedy.

Kelly said members of the Lund family and his brother's two daughters likely would be cooperating with Minnetonka police today. "They just wanted to get through these services," he said.

Although police were called to Russell Lund's posh home at 7 p.m. last Thursday, they did not obtain a search warrant to enter the residence until four hours later. Setter said on Tuesday that while police were being notified of the deaths at 7 p.m., last Thursday, Lund family members also were being informed of the deaths.

Police earlier said they know who reported the shooting deaths but would not release the identity.

Contacted Attorney

Setter said police contacted members of the Lund family through an attorney following the shootings, seeking an interview with family members, and presumably Kelly family members as well.

"The attorney called back and said the family doesn't want to talk to you," the police chief said.

He said unconfirmed sources told officers that Kelly family members were staying with the Lund III family or "at least nearby."

MINNESOTA MURDER CASE

Police await key detail in slaying of lawyer

At issue is when a suspect in the killings checked into a Minneapolis hospital.

By TOM ALEX

REGISTER STAFF WRITER

Law officers in Minnesota say they may soon know when the suspect in the homicide of a Johnston, Ia., lawyer and his Minnesota girlfriend checked into a Minneapolis hospital.

Russell Thomas Lund Jr. is believed to have been admitted to the Fairview Riverside Medical Center in Minneapolis about the time the bodies of Kevin Kelly of Johnston and Barbara Lund of Orono, Minn., were found in Russell Lund's Minnetonka, Minn., residence on Aug. 6.

Officers served a search warrant at the medical center on Thursday for sealed information. The records were given to police and will be turned over to Judge Andrew W. Danielson for private review. He will determine what information will be made available.

Both defense lawyers and prosecutors were expected to meet with the judge at the time of the review.

Police want to know whether Russell Lund, the key suspect in the case, was a patient at the hospital at the time of the slayings or whether he checked in after they occurred.

Police also want to know whether he was allowed to check in and out of the facility, and if so, whether records were kept.

The Lunds were in the process of getting a divorce when Barbara Lund and Kelly were shot to death at Russell Lund's home. Russell Lund had lived alone at the residence for about three years, and his estranged wife lived in Orono and at a residence in Aspen, Colo.

Also Thursday, Minnetonka police said that a handgun, which was recovered in the case and listed as a possible murder weapon, has been traced to Russell Lund. Police added, however, that the firearm has not been established as the murder weapon.

Minnetonka Police Chief Richard Setter said in a press release Thursday that both Kelly and Lund family members have cooperated in the investigation. Setter criticized family members earlier, saying they had refused requests for interviews.

Lund lawyers knew of double homicide hours before police

Family members say one victim's husband may have been in the house with the bodies after the shootings.

By TOM SUK
REGISTER STAFF WRITER

Lawyers for supermarket heir Russell Lund Jr. knew hours before police that the bullet-riddled bodies of Lund's estranged wife Barbara and Iowa lawyer Kevin Kelly were in Lund's secluded house in the affluent Minneapolis suburb of Minnetonka.

The slayings also may have occurred long before Lund's lawyers knew about them. Lund family members have told friends they believe Russell Lund was in the house with the bodies after the shootings on the afternoon of Aug. 5 while writing and dictating letters, the Minneapolis Star-Tribune reported Friday.

It was not until the next day that the lawyers arranged to meet the police chief of the suburb at a hotel, which touched off the investigation of the killings. Police also were handed the suspected murder weapon at the meeting, court documents released Friday show.

A Mystery

Although a stainless-steel revolver that appeared to be blood-stained was handed over to police, the whereabouts of Lund, 59, remained a mystery. At the same time police were being told of the killings, the lawyers indicated that members of Russell Lund's family also were being notified, the documents state.

Minnetonka Police Chief Richard Setter met with the lawyers of Russell Lund at the Radisson Hotel at Ridgedale at 6:45 p.m. Aug. 6, more than two hours after receiving a call from a man identifying himself as attorney David Rosten.

Rosten told Setter he had some information of "an extreme, urgent nature" that he would not discuss over the phone. What Setter didn't know at that time was that Rosten knew about the deaths of Barbara Lund and Kelly, a lawyer and lobbyist from Johnston, Ia.

When he arrived, Setter found Rosten, prominent defense attorney Joseph S. Frieberg and private detective Michael Grostyan at the hotel.

Setter was told the trio had information on a double homicide that had occurred at the Russell Lund residence. Court documents said that Setter was told by the attorneys "they could not state where Russell Lund was at this time but that he was not one of the victims."

When Setter asked who the victims were, the lawyers identified the victims as "Mrs. Russell Lund and the second party was an individual by the name of Kevin, with last name unknown."

Setter called other investigators to the home, and after they arrived, Grostyan went to his car, took the gun from the trunk and gave it to police. The revolver "had a splattering of a red substance along the barrel and cylinder," the court papers say.

Attorneys' Role

At the meeting, Rosten, Frieberg and Grostyan would not say whether they represented any suspect in the case. The next day Frieberg confirmed that he was representing Russell Lund, police said.

Acting upon the information supplied to them by Lund's lawyers, police obtained search warrants for Lund's residence and found the bodies of Kelly and Barbara Lund.

Last Saturday, Lund, who reportedly was admitted to a Minneapolis hospital psychiatric unit under an assumed name, went to the Minnetonka police station for about 45 minutes. At that time he refused upon the advice of Rosten to answer questions. Lund reportedly remained under psychiatric care Friday. He had not been charged in the slayings.

trendy these days, which disgusts Ganzel and his friends.

Lawyers and accountants and other yuppie types love to buy expensive bikes and outfit themselves in leather to play dress-up bikers for the weekend.

Bogart says most bikers don't deserve their bad reputations — "I let the Hell's Angels play with my 4-year-old granddaughter." He rather enjoys the biker image. And his business enables people to equip themselves with earrings, belt buckles and T-shirts with all the classic bad-biker motifs: skeletons, skulls, dragons, snakes, crucifixes, grenades.

For the little ones, the Bogarts keep a pet python. "We love it when kids come up and pet it," says Carl, surrounded by black leather corsets and women's lingerie in near-fluorescent colors. "Then that's one less thing they have to be scared of."
