West Union political and business leader, Larry Heying, dies at 86

By Mike Van Sickle Union News Writer

Former Iowa Senator Larry Heying died Thursday, Jan. 25, at the West Union Good Samaritan Center after a 10-year battle with Parkinson's Disease, The prominent West Union man was 86 years

Hilarius Louis Ludwig (Larry) Heying was labeled many things during his lifetime, including farmer, businessman, politician, statesman, and maverick. "A number of people did not agree with all of his beliefs over time, but he: earned the respect of those who truly came to know him" according to his wife Jo Heying.

"Larry always put family and church first, and it was these priorities that helped him develop a moral code of trust and honor in politics," said longtime friend and the senator's former campaign manager, Steve Story.

"The next time you go to the Volga Lake area or drive by the area vocational-schools at Calmar and Peosta, just say a thank-you to Senator Heying in his memory, added Story. "He was a leader among those who fought for those projects and lived to see them not only become reality, but also become greatly appreciated by northeast Iowa citizens.'

The youngest of 14 children, Heying was named after an English Bishop, St. Hilary, He criticed the Festina Parochial School and continued his education at Columbia University in Dubuque.

H. L. Heying

Ahead of his time

Heying had already established himself as a successful businessman when he decided to enter the political arena. He was first elected in 1964 at the age of 49. He represented the 8th District, which included Winneshiek, Howard, Bremer, Chickasaw, and Fayette counties.

The first Democratic Senatorelected from Fayette County would take the Senate floor by storm. Many constituents tagged him as a maverick, as he voted for what he felt was right for northeast Iowa. Sometimes he crossed over party lines into Republican territory or to a territory all

It was during his second term that Heying stepped to the forefront in an attempt to develop a super lakepark, of which all Iowans could be proud. This eventually became the Volga River Recreational Area.

Serving as chairman of the Agricultural and Natural Resources committees, he was a strong defender of the project's original plans, Initially, the recreational area was to include 5,000 acres of public land, including a 1,000-acre Volga Lake. The property would have actually stretched within one mile of the Upper Iowa University campus in

Accompanied by UIU President Gene Garbee and Gene Harvey of the State Bank of Fayette, state conservation employee Sherrie Fisher presented the plans to the Heyings on their living room floor in June 1964.

The Iowa Senate passed the appropriations for a big lake three times, but the House repeatedly voted against it.

Heying contended the only reason the state decided to build the eventual 100-acre lake was to avoid lawsuits by landowners for the buying of property under false pretenses.

Further proof that Heving was ahead of his time are the recent developments in the Iowa Department of Natural Resources. The DNR has requested $1 million for a one-year study to develop a $40-$80 million "destination" park at Lake Rathbun in Appanoose County.

One of the first bills Senator Heying ever introduced was a tax bill. The bill called for tax escalation based on the rich paying more taxes and the poor, fewer. It also did away with inventory tax on business and private enterprise and eliminated per-

Heying conducted a study of every farmer that lived in a 30-mile radius of West Union, From the data, he calculated what it cost each of them in taxes.

The debate on the bill never occurred until Heying was later. picked to introduce a bill to raise the minimum wage. Upon taking the floor, Heying said he deferred the minimum wage increase back to the leadership until his tax bill was considered.

Many Democrats were shocked by Heying's determination, but the bill eventually passed, albeit indirectly, with a revised education-funding bill.

Heying also made noise at the Statehouse when he moved to kill a committee bill on corporate farming. The agri-businessman stunned the Senate with a bill of his own.

The original proposal required farmers to report every piece of property they owned. The bill was designed to find out who owned the property and to curb corporate farm

Many politicians were outraged when Heying wrote 40 amendments to the bill, proposing in each that all professionals and businessmen be required to report the same as farmers. Never before in state history had a senator terminated a committee bill.

Business leader

Prior to displaying his political prowess, Heying was an established businessman. In-1940, he

He also pointed out that the year was a good one for beef

Public hearing on Assessor's budget

The Fayette County Conference Board has set Wednesday, Feb. 21, 7 p.m., at the courthouse in West Union, as the date, time and location for a public hearing on the Fayette County Assessor's budget.

The proposed budget is $289,255 for fiscal year 2002. This includes an estimated amount of $182,109 to be raised by taxation.

The proposed taxation rate, per $1,000 valuation, will be $.49835. This will be an increase of about sixteen cents over the current rate of $.34329.

Assessor Joe Flores said the increase reflects the cost to finish the commercial-industrial property reappraisal. The reappraisal was started in December of 2000 and is expected to be finished sometime this fall.

The budget also reflects a $2,800 raise (about six percent) in salary for Flores, which would put his salary at $47,800.

Flores said he did not receive a raise in salary last year. His current salary is $45,000.

Any resident or taxpayer may present objections to, or arguments in favor of, any part of the proposed budget.

and his wife, Jo, first heard about the chick-sexing business. Hatcheries. were beginning to sell the male and female chicks separately and were paying a fee, comparable to a doctor's fee, for the chick-sexing.

Heving traded some duck eggs to a hatchery for a two-week course to learn the trade. He later gained his apprenticeship from Clyde Johnson of Cedar Falls.

After the birth of their son Terrance (Terry) in 1940, they purchased a 155-acre farm (the Mill Farm) near West Union. The business originally struggled, but things quickly changed. Five years later the Heyings formed their own route. which soon featured 18 hatcheries.

Heying was hired as the district sales supervisor for Hy-Line Poultry of Des Moines in 1950. He serviced nine Iowa and Minnesota counties. while Jo assumed the sexing routes.

Four years later, Hy-Line awarded Heying the Hy-Line Chick franchise he had previously been supervising. Along with the business, he inherited a sales force of approximately 60 part-time salesmen and four service hatcheries.

The original hatchery was built on the 10-acre Hope Farm west of West Union in 1959. An egg-processing plant, pullet-growing business, feed mill and franchise to sell poultry equipment were later implemented on the property.

The Heyings and West Union egg producers are credited with shipping the first semi-load of quality cooled eggs out of Iowa to Washington, D.C. Heying soon tied in with the Quaker Oats program for marketing and shipping eggs to Chicago and New York.

The family operation eventually. became one of the largest egg production and marketing programs in Iowa. Larry was president of Heying Firms, Jo presided over Heying Enterprises, and Terry was in charge of Heying Foods, Inc., later named Sunnytime, Inc.

Larry was also a member of the West Union Holy Name Catholic Church, Rotary International, Knights of Columbus, a charter member of the West Union Ambasadors and a founding member of Iowans for Tax Relief.

Senator Heying is survived by his wife, Jo; two sons, Terry and Sherrie Heying of Willmar, Minn., Charles and Lois Heying of Portland, Ore, two daughters, Sondra and Robert Whaley, Burr Ridge, Ill., and Therese and Robert Slack, West Union; nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.
