One soldier died from injuries received in the mortar attack on the base, and 30 others were injured, including those from Iowa.

The identity of the dead soldier was not released, but authorities said he was not a member of an Iowa National Guard unit.

Doidge sustained injuries to the left side of his chest and the left leg below the knee, and was unconscious for a while, his family said.

He remains hospitalized today but his injuries are not life-threatening, said his

A journey of self-discovery

North Iowan's odyssey retracing her past in Guatemalan village has led to a new effort to help those still living there

By JULIE BIRKEDAL
Of The Globe Gazette

ALGONA — Denese Becker is in the midst of a journey to discover her past and its meaning for her future.

She began life as Dominga Sic Ruiz, a child who witnessed the massacre of her village in Guatemala.

Today, the Algona career woman and mother continues to unravel her life's story.

"It's not like how you make butter. There's step 1 through 10," she said.

"My story is so ongoing."

Becker, 31, was adopted by Brian and Linda Burck, then of Thompson, when she was 11 years old.

Her first return to her homeland occurred in June 2000. That's when Becker said she began to learn her own story.

Becker was born in the Maya Achi village of Rio Negro. In 1982, she went into the mountains to live with her 14-day-old baby sister after her mother and other villagers were slain.

After several months and her sister's death, a cousin took her to a convent and the nuns placed her in an orphanage.

After being adopted and growing up in Thompson, Becker went to La James College of Hairstyling and Cosmetology in Mason City. She graduated in 1994.

She married Blane Becker of Algona. They have two sons, Sturling, 10, and Skylar, 7.

"He's been with me twice" on trips to Guatemala, she

Long-time Fair Board member Curran dies

By DICK JOHNSON
Of The Globe Gazette

MASON CITY — Leigh Curran, who served on the North Iowa Fair Board for nearly 67 years, died Thursday at the Nora Springs Care Center at age 97.

Curran was Fair Board treasurer for almost 32 years until resigning late last fall, fair manager Katy Elson said.

He served as Fair Board president for 18 years, was an Iowa senator from 1960-72, a member of the Mason City Foundation board, an honorary capitol fund campaign co-chairman for The Music Man Square and an original 4-H youth leader in Cerro

Gordo County.

"He was a wonderful man," Elson said. "A gentleman. A person with deep feelings toward causes that he felt were important."

"I guess I'd have to say he was a legend in this community," said Jim Kuhlman, a former Cerro Gordo County Extension education director.

"Probably nobody has accomplished more in Cerro Gordo County than Leigh Curran did over his long lifetime. He was just a wonderful guy, and we're going to miss him."

Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Major Erickson Funeral Home, Mason City.
