The Old Philosopher says the nation's highways fall into two distinct classifications — overcrowded and under construction. A third one has been added this winter: full of pot-holes, due to so much ice, snow and freezing temperatures.

According to the National Parks magazine (March/April 1993) Congressional investigators have concluded that in 1990 and 1991, the Department of the Interior covertly altered a major National Park Service environmental document.

The conclusions came out of an investigation by the House subcommittee on civil service into allegations made by former NPS Rocky Mountain Regional Director L. Lorraine Mintzmyer. (Mrs. Mintzmyer is the former Lorraine Plowman of Adair.)

At a September 1991 subcommittee hearing, Mintzmyer charged that behind the scenes, Bush Administration officials ordered and carried out a drastic revision of "Vision for the Future: A Framework for Coordination in the Greater Yellowstone Area." In a December report, the subcommittee presented evidence supporting her claims. Some documents were previously released by the media and at a July 1992 NPCA press conference; others were new. "What the evidence shows is an astonishing degree of political pressure and manipulation to which the Park Service was subjected," said NPCA President Paul Pritchard, "which, in the final outcome, weakened protection for Yellowstone."
