The Catch

The catch—as far as party partisans are concerned—is that redistricting can be taken to court if it violates the one man-one vote principle.

"You can't comply with the Constitution and make everybody happy," said State Senator Tom Riley (Rep., Cedar Rapids), chairman of the Senate subcommittee on redistricting.

Added Riley, who advocates the plan that throws Smith and Kyl into the same district (it's the twelfth plan of 12 drawn by a computer):

"If there were any way we could preserve the five Republican congressmen without doing violence to the basic rules of good redistricting, I would do everything I could to accomplish it."

Under the plan, Smith's home county — Polk, the state's most heavily populated — is put into a district containing several counties now represented by Kyl, whose home is Bloomfield in sparsely-populated Davis County.

Republican critics of the plan say the district would be Democratic because of Democratic

Inch of Snow Hinders Driving

Winter dumped an inch of new snow here Saturday, but a warming trend throughout most of the day softened the blow a bit.

The temperature in Des Moines climbed from a low of 2 above at 7 a.m. to a high of 19 at 4 p.m. The snow began in the early evening and continued into this morning, making driving a slippery affair.

Hazardous driving conditions were reported throughout most of Iowa Saturday night as warring street and highway maintenance workers went to work clearing and sanding the roads.

STATE SENATOR SULLIVAN DIES

tack here Saturday.

Sullivan had attended a meeting with other local lawmakers when he was stricken at a service station about 12:30 p.m. He was dead on arrival at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital.

A Republican, Senator Sullivan, owner-operator of nursing homes here, was chairman of the Senate's Social Services Committee and a member of the Legislative Tax Study Committee.

He was elected to the Senate by a 16-vote margin in 1968 after serving one term in the Iowa House.

He was a native of Indiana and moved to Sioux City in 1940. He was a former investigator for the Woodbury County Attorney's office and once worked for the Iowa Tax Commission.

Senator Sullivan was a Baptist and the speaking experience he gained from nine years of evangelical work (1950-59) served him well in legislative debate.

He was regarded as one of the best-dressed members of the Senate and also one of the most outspoken when it came to protecting the Senate's decorum and tradition.

Lt. Gov. Roger Jepsen, who presides over the Senate, issued a statement saying: "Senator Sullivan's death is a great personal loss to those of us who knew him well. He was a man of deep convictions, a man who did not hesitate to take a stand."

Senator Sullivan is survived by his wife, a son, a daughter and five grandchildren. Services are pending at the Manning O'Toole Funeral Home in Sioux City.

O. T. Scoops The Town

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Hard facts on the current unpleasantness in Laos were pretty hard to come by around here last week. Everybody was going around not talking.

But, for a knowledgeable, experienced Washington reporter, information was available.

While everyone else was complaining about the news embargo on Laos, I went out and scooped the town. I'd have written the story earlier but I just haven't had a minute to myself, what with the wild parties and all.

WHAT I DID was, I went straight to State Department headquarters and presented myself to the receptionist there.

"How do you do," I said. "I'd like to speak with the State Department spokesman please."

"The who?" she responded. "You know, the guy they always quote in stories that begin 'a State Department spokesman said today . . .'"

"Oh him. Do you have an appointment?"

"No, but I think he'll see me," I said, flashing my press card signed by Des Moines Police Chief Wendell Nichols.

"COME WITH me, Mr. Nichols," she said.

She led me through the corridor and down three flights of stairs into a small, white cubicle occupied by a confessional cell. She seated me in the cell and said, "The spokesman will be with you in a moment."

In a moment, I heard a voice coming out from the other side of the lattice work.

"That's the stuff what do you want to

"Are we invading?" "Don't be silly. We're not invading. Whatever gave you like that?"

"All those troops border of Laos."

"Yes, but those Vietnamese troops, And their purpose invade Laos but to iz the war there."

"Are you sure the more interested in izing Laos?"

"That rumor's been for 200 years. The truth in it. The So name are a pea people. Just look at trouble we've had get them to defend t country. This is a pr retaliatory-counter-in- police action desi shorten our long-t volve ment in the a Southeast Asia — v or."

"What exactly do y by honor?"

"That's when you the enemy surround fire to his building him to come out hands up."

"THEN HOW doe dent Nixon's p withdrawal differ fro dent Johnson's policy ing a coonskin up wall?"

"I'm glad you asked question. It's a two-pa tion and, to make crystal clear, I'd like to it in three parts: One President Nixon was to office—by secret might add—there we American troops in than you could shake at . . ."

State Sen. Sullivan of Sioux City Dies

State Sen. Charles K. Sullivan of Sioux City was dead on arrival at a Sioux City hospital after being stricken at a service station Saturday.

Cause of death was an apparent heart attack.

Sen. Sullivan, 62, who had just completed a speaking engagement at a morning meeting of the Woodbury County legislative delegation and the Sioux City Chamber of Commerce legislative committee at the Chamber Building, had stopped for gasoline when stricken.

He was midway through his first term in the Iowa Senate and had served in the Iowa House from 1967 to 1969.

Sen. Sullivan first entered public life in 1964 with an unsuccessful bid on the Republican ticket for state representative from Sioux City's 8th Precinct.

Elected to House

In 1966 he sought and won convention of precinct officers in the district to select a nominee. The winner of the special election will serve the remainder of Sen. Sullivan's term, which expires in 1972.

Sen. Sullivan was born Aug. 14, 1908, at Clifford, Ind., and moved to Sioux City in 1940.

He worked for the Iowa Tax Commission in 1941 and then was special investigator for the Cigarette and Beer Division in northwest Iowa for two years.

Laud Sullivan for His Service as Legislator

Following news of the death of State Sen. Charles K. Sullivan two prominent persons voiced praise of the dead senator.

U.S. Rep. Wiley Mayne, telephoning from Washington, said: "I am, of course, shocked and saddened by the sudden passing of my good friend Sen. Charles Sullivan. He was a courageous and dedicated legislator who carried out the duties of his high office conscientiously and well, putting the demands of public service ahead of personal considerations of health and convenience.

"He made his indelible mark on the Senate and all Iowans interested in good government will mourn the untimely loss of this doughty champion of the democratic process."

Woodbury County Republican Chairman David Holmes said, "He was a good, hard working Republican and a really good spokesman for the conservative cause and the GOP. We are going to miss him."

Terms Nixon's Improvement, t

WASHINGTON (AP) — The little or Democratic National Committee's chief economist, Gardner Ackley, said Saturday President Nixon's revised "economic game plan" is an improvement over the old one but is still inadequate.

Ackley

Ackley, head of the presidential Council of Economic Advisers under President Lyndon B. Johnson, gave his views as chairman of the Democratic Policy Council Committee on Economic Affairs. He now is professor of economics at the University of Michigan.

Saying he believes his views represent those of many of his committee members, Ackley said Nixon's plan could bring the disappointment of extravagant expectations" and react unfavorably on future economic decisions.

Bold Targets

Ackley described as bold targets the Nixon goal of a 7 per cent unemployment rate in 1971, an unemployment rate down to 4.5 per cent

The chairman of Kansas second-guest him as "chitects of that President but surely end."

the balanced-budget objective, which Ackley said "is long overdue and welcome."

But on the other side, Ackley said:

"The President fails to recognize that new tools are needed to help slow down the present 5 1/2 per cent rate of inflation.

"The idea that a balanced full-employment budget will automatically produce full employment without inflation is oversimplified and misleading.

"The sense of priorities displayed in the revision of depreciation rules is deplorable, given the competing needs for budgetary resources to solve urgent social problems.

The inevitable exposure of the error of some of the premises and promises of the new game plan could undermine much of the improvement that might otherwise be achieved."

Important Question

Ackley said "the important question is whether the combined fiscal and monetary policies of the administration and the Federal Reserve will sufficiently stimulate the economy so that the unemployment rate will soon begin to move steadily and strongly downward."

He said even Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers appears to have doubts about the President's GNP forecast.

"The Council's report," Ackley said, "says only that the GNP 'could be as high as $1.085 trillion.' But it also refers to the 'danger of a letdown' in the second half of 1971 once the steel inventory boom is over, and it raises a long string of highly relevant questions about whether the expansion will be sufficiently strong and well maintained to reach the administration's targets."

LLOYD THURSTON

MR. PRESIDENT: Your committee, appointed to prepare a suitable resolution commemorating the life, character and public service of the late Honorable Lloyd Thurston, begs leave to submit the following memorial:

Lloyd Thurston was born in Osceola, Iowa, March 27, 1880, the son of Soloman and Margaret Malloy Thurston, received his formal education in the schools of Clarke County and was graduated from the University of Iowa Law School in 1902. On graduation he began practicing law in Osceola, and on January 13, 1910, he married Louella Bolibaugh.

He was well known in state circles for his active participation in politics both at the state and national levels and as National Commander of the Spanish-American War Veterans.

An active Republican, he served as Clarke County Attorney for four years before entering state politics. He was elected to the Iowa Senate in 1919 and served during the Thirty-ninth, Fortieth and Fortieth Extra General Assemblies. He was elected to the United States Congress in 1925 and served in that capacity until 1939.

He was a veteran of the Spanish-American War, Philippine Insurrection and World War I. He was active in the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Rotary, Barracks, and National Commander of the Spanish-American War Veterans.

Mr. Thurston served on the Osceola Library Board for fifty years. He was affiliated with the Methodist Church, and was a member of the Iowa State Bar Association.

He passed away at the Veteran's Hospital in Des Moines, May 7, 1970, following an extended illness. Surviving him are his widow, Louella of Osceola; a nephew, Jim Wade of Osceola; a great niece and a great nephew.
