Long-time Albia banker J.E. King dies at

J.E. King watched his beloved Michigan Wolverine football team win the Rose Bowl Friday. "He watched the entire game and was really pleased with the outcome," said his son, Jim King of Albia.

On Saturday, the 92-year-old banker died quietly in his sleep, leaving behind a lifetime of community

King was one of the first six people inducted into the Albia Hall of Fame when it began in 1983. When you talk about the Albia Industrial Development Corp., the Albia Area Chamber of Commerce, the Monroe County Fair Board, Rathbun Lake and any number of other community organizations still functioning in Monroe County, you'll likely find the name J.E. King as a founding member.

King was born in Kings, Ill. (named for his grandfather), grew up on a farm and attended the University of Michigan, majoring in banking and finance. He had hoped to join his uncle's bank in Kings, but a cousin was taken into the bank instead and King returned to the farm.

He farmed around Kings for four years before heading to Des Moines in 1924 to begin an 11-year career as a bank liquidator. He wound up in Albia in 1935 and bought the Peoples National Bank (located at that time in the Lundy Building) from John Canning, paying $13,000 for the bank which had $25,000 in capital. The bank moved to a new location on the comer of Washington and Main in 1952.

King was a founder of the Albia Industrial Development Corp. and, in fact, helped finance Brick Kness when Kness arrived in Albia promoting a better mousetrap. He helped develop the Monroe County 4-H Fairgrounds, served on the Waterworks Board, the Monroe County Hospital Board, was a 48-year member of Rotary Club (in Albia and Tuscon, Ariz.) and served in practically every capacity as a member of the Chamber.

An avid Republican, King served one term as representative in the 62nd Iowa General Assembly. When

J.E. King

Eisenhower made a whistlestop train tour of the country, King road with him through Iowa discussing farm policy.

King used his political savvy to lobby for the construction of Rathbun

King never lost his love for farming and had an intense interest in farm finance and farm policy. He was a member of the Iowa State Foundation Farm, a forerunner of the Iowa State University Extension experimental farms, and encouraged development of many of the practices which embraced the "Green" revolution which changed the face of farming after WWII.

He was also a devoted member of Trinity United Methodist Church, purchasing the land for the new church and erecting the bell tower in memory of his first wife, Helen, who died in 1972.

"A lot of people have called to share their condolences and have mentioned J.E.'s smile," said his daughter-in-law, Pat King. "He carried that smile and sense of humor with him throughout his life."

Helen Tierney of Melrose, whose father, a farmer, was a long-time friend of J.E. King, may have stated it best when she said, "J.E. helped my father raise his family."
