JAMES BURGESS

James Burgess, 69, of 1801 Whitehouse, a retired real estate man and a former state representative, died Friday afternoon in a hospital. He had been ill several months of a heart ailment.

Mr. Burgess was born July 12, 1870, in Ray county, Mo., and resided in LaCrosse, Wis., and Kansas City before moving to Sioux City 38 years ago.

Mr. Burgess built many homes between Court and Virginia and Twenty Fifth and Twenty Seventh streets, and some 80 homes for packinghouse workers. He was instrumental in the development of the Floyd Park and Marks additions and sold the city land for the Floyd park golf course.

Mr. Burgess organized the former Hawkeye Building and Loan company here in 1919 and served as its president. For many years he was manager of the Hawkeye Land company and president of the Sioux City Real Estate board during 1928 and 1929 and for several years was the board's secretary.

For some time up to his retirement three years ago, Mr. Burgess was a government appraiser for the FHA. He left active business to devote his time to his wife, who suffered a paralytic stroke. She is in serious condition in a hospital.

Survivors include the widow, Pearl M., and a nephew, Darwin D. Morse of Kansas City.

The body was taken to Christy's funeral home in Morningside.

come and leave as they please. A memory room, labeled "Memory Haze and Craze of Other Daze," containing school trophies, pictures and other memorabilia, has been arranged.

When Mr. Bovee went to Whittier, the school, now the third largest grade institution in the city, was nine years old. The first four rooms of the school were built in 1904; another four in 1908, and, during the time he has been principal, an addition in 1915 and another in 1929. Preparations are now underway for another $25,000 remodeling program to fireproof the school.

During World war 1 and shortly after, Mr. Bovee was principal of Longfellow as well as Whittier. Before going to Whittier, he was two years at Hawthorne school and two years at Cooper.

After his arrival in Sioux City in 1909, from Mason City, Ia., where he had been principal two years, Mr. Bovee completed academic work and was graduated from Morningside college in 1912 with an A. B. degree.

He began in rural and town schools in Michigan. At one time after he began teaching in rural schools in 1891, he taught in a rural school which he had attended.

In 1897 he entered Central State Normal school, Mount Pleasant, Mich., and in 1904, after alternately attending and teaching school, he received a life teaching certificate from the institution. He also attended summer sessions at the University of Michigan and Drake university.

Besides Mason City, Mr. Bovee has taught at various places in Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Iowa before coming here.

The current war makes one remember World war repercussions which Mr. Bovee encountered as a school principal—the influenza epidemic, the school gardens, the coal shortages—but Mr. Bovee out of his 27 years at Whittier remembers, as does a pupil, the little incidents:

The time he spanked a boy who had matches in his back pocket, and the lad's trousers caught fire; the time his watch was broken while spanking the same boy. (The boy was a schoolmate of the writer but the writer was not that incorrigible, really. Yes, the writer was sent to the office—the first time for fencing across the aisle with a classmate, using rulers for folsy).

Enrollment in Whittier has declined to 450 from the 603 peak reached in 1935, but the families have not changed so much.

At the present time there are 60 pupils in Whittier whose parents, one or both, were pupils in Whittier under Mr.
 Bovee.

'Marriage Meddlers'

BY ADELE GARRISON

A New Scheme to Smash Noel's and Mary's Happiness

With a "thank you," thrown over my shoulder at Dicky, I scurried away. But I did not need his tip as I went stealthily down the stairs and made my way to my little study off the library where I had permitted Noel to conceal himself and listen to Mary's triumph at the rehearsal. I had no desire to have either his wife or his father see him until I had reduced him to reason.

I heard Lillian's voice and that of Phillip Veritzen in animated colloquy in the library as I passed the door, and felt reasonably safe in going on to my little study. I did not dare to knock for fear of being overheard, but when, with infinite caution, I pushed aside the door and entered, I found Noel ranging up and down the room as if he were a caged animal, knocking against chairs and tables, patiently with no thought that he could easily be overheard.

I closed the door after me noiselessly, then went to him, and clutched his arm with my right hand while the fingers of my left were placed against his lips.

"Are you insane?" I whispered. "Your father is in the next room. You must not let him guess that you are here. He'll be quite furious!"

He halted in his stride, perforce, for I had his arm in a firm grip and turned hot resentful eyes upon me.

"What does it matter?" he asked, but I noted with relief, that his voice was muted. "I'm going in there in a second or two and tell him what he ought to be told. Can't you see what he's planning on doing?"

I touched his lips with my fingers, and with a still firm grasp I opened the door.

"Quiet!" I whispered.

every other room in the either occupied, or, as with the one which, Dicky were leaving, hearing of the library Lillian was holding Phillip in conversation.

I shut the door behind me on one trunk, and Noel to another.

"Now, what is trouble I asked, trying to make sound as though he were duly concerned. "Didn't Mary's glorious triumph your father's surprise?"

"Mary was wonderful she?" he said his face suddenly enthusiastic. were flat again.

A New Veritzen Plot

"My father saved him in time before you were spring that surprise on him," he said. "But you well as I do that his planning to deprive Mary's role was because he thought it silly enough, that if he told her that way, she'd be sent out on me, he'd have parted us, I planned to do ever since
