He credited that usage increase to signs installed along the roads by the state three years ago to guide travelers to Wilson Island. Seitz also said that the river- front use on boat ramps is higher this year, mainly because of Missouri River. Later, a family wanted to purchase it, Seitz said. That family went to the Iowa Executive Council circa 1930 to receive permission for the sale, which they received. However, the Council acted during the absence of Iowa Governor George Wilson. When Wilson returned, he did not approve of the sale, and asked the Council to reconsider. Succumbing to the Governor's plea, the Council rescinded the deal, and this is how the island was named. Seitz said that the Island has fallen under several different state commissions since then. Wilson Island was governed

While in Brussels, Belgium, many years ago, Ruth and Hugh visited the site of the Battle of Waterloo, and were told that a Marshall of France, Tamisier, was killed and is buried there. WILLIAM TATE FAMILY

Edward Tate came from England to Camanche, Clinton County, Iowa about 1861. There, he married Hannah Dannatt, daughter of a local farmer, and they had one son, William Thomas. In 1865, Edward met an untimely death in a fall from the back of a moving wagon. He was leading another team of horses, which became frightened by another vehicle, and jerked him from the wagon under their feet. His widow and son continued to live in Camanche where Hannah earned their living as a dressmaker and William became a farmer. William married Emma Haskins in 1884, but she and the baby died in childbirth later that year.

In search of a new beginning, William Thomas moved west to Harrison County in 1890. There, near the village of Reeders Mills, he met Nettie, the charming daughter of Nathaniel Vanarsdale, the local blacksmith, and his wife Margaretta. Grandpa Vanarsdale shod the horses of the local citizens, as well as those of the Mormons as they passed through on their westward trip. In 1893, William and Nettie were married and settled on a farm one and a half miles south of Reeders Mills in the Mount Hope school district. Nettie was a dressmaker and milliner by trade, and had graduated from Woodbine Normal School. William and Nettie farmed for nearly thirty years, and were active in the Progressive Farmer's Club, the Masons and the IOOF. To this union were born five children, John Horton dying in infancy. Before their parents retired to live in Logan, the three eldest children, Mary, Hattie, and Roy, established their own homes and families. After moving to town from the farm, William was the meat cutter at the Hetrick Grocery Store. Carmaleta, the youngest, graduated from high school, and attended business school in Omaha. After business experience there, she returned to Logan to be the bookkeeper at McKenney-Seabury Chevrolet, until she moved to Santa Cruz, California in 1956.

Mary married Jesse Haight and moved to Chicago. After his death in a train accident, in 1927, she became active in several ladies ready-to-wear stores. Their children are Rubert, married to Helene Erickson, and Lornis, married to Rudy Komuchar. Hattie married Ray Brownell. After he died in a car accident, she married Jesse Danielson, a native of Crisp. They made their home in Des Moines.

William LeRoy married Clara Ellerbeck, daughter of William and Hannah Mundt Ellerbeck in 1919. They farmed at Logan and Modale all their lives, and were active in church community activities. Their children are Deane, who married Patricia Canfield; Verda, who married Steve Wolfe; Helen, who married David Glidden; and Thelma, as Mrs. Calvin F. Johnsen is the only one of the Tate children to continue to live in Harrison County. This family is active in the church, school, farm and community activities in the Logan community.

DENNIS H. AND DELORES H. TEGTMEIER

Harrison County has long been the home of my family. My father, Wilson Holben's family has been here since Great-Grandpa Ehler emigrated from Germany and homesteaded the acres of Willow Creek bottomland near Magnolia in the 1870's. Grandpa Edwin Holben came from Canada with his parents at six months. Grandma Nellie Ehler Holben was born on the Willow Creek farm and lived there until she and Grandpa retired and moved to Logan. Dad Wilson was born on that same farm. My mother, Reva Boyd Holben's family settled here in the 1860's when Great-great-Grandpa Boyd came here from Crawford County, Pennsylvania. Great-Grandpa Huffaker moved to Harrison County from Mills County, Iowa, bringing his family.

I was born on September 16, 1940 at Beckwith Nursing Home in Woodbine. We lived on the Willow Creek farm with Grandpa and Grandma Holben and then down the road on the "Landee" farm. In 1945 we moved to Logan, where Dan and his brother Francis first opened the doors of the Logan Mill. I attended Logan School, graduating in 1958. Horseback riding, playing piano, and school activities kept me busy. I was baptized and confirmed into the Lutheran Church.

Nursing became my next goal. I received a BSN from the University of Nebraska in 1962 and MSN from University of Washington in 1965. I've been teaching nursing full or part-time most of the years since and am presently at the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha.

On September 6, 1964, Dennis H. Tegtmeier, son of Harvey and Edna Tegtmeier of Omaha, and I were married at First Lutheran Church in Missouri Valley. Dennis has put a lot of effort into educational endeavor and has a B.A. from University of Omaha, a B.D. from Concordia Theological Seminary, an M.A. from University of Hawaii, and an M. Div. from Concordia Theological Seminary. School and Ministry have required frequent moves. The culture, climate, and people of Hawaii are close to our hearts but my "roots" are in Harrison County.

We have three children. John Wilson was born in Omaha September 8, 1967. We were home for a family visit between semesters at University of Hawaii. Grandparents and Great-Grandparents had to be close for the event of his birth. De Anne Malia was born May 1, 1969, in Stockton, California. She brought comfort and joy into a time of grieving. Mother had died only one week earlier, April 24, 1969. Jason Harvey was born May 1, 1977, in Fremont, Nebraska. He went with me to faculty meetings at Midland Lutheran College — a joyful distraction.

At this time we all live in Papillion, Nebraska where Dennis is Senior Pastor at First Lutheran Church. We enjoy travel, photography, and water sports: swimming, sailing, and water skiing.
