the site of a new swimming pool won city plan and zoning commission approval Thursday night.

The tract is located west of Forty-seventh street, approximately between Euclid and Ovid avenues.

According to the park board, the pool would be built at the north end of the property, and the southern part would be devoted to parking. Space would be provided for about 300 cars.

Park Board President Harold Teachout said the pool would be about the size of the present Birdland Pool.

The commission held up action on a park board request for approval of plans for buying a 6½-acre pool site just south of Watrous avenue, between S. W. Fourteenth and S. W. Thirteenth streets. Members ordered a staff investigation of the tract.
