Beautiful Custom Was Observed

When Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey's combined shows reached Des Moines a beautiful custom was observed by members of the great band that accompanies that show, that of keeping the memory of Arthur Cox for many years a clarinet player with the leading circuses. His body now rests in Laurel Hill cemetery. He was known to every circus musician as Coxy. Although never a member of the Ringling Brothers or Barnum and Balley bands, the members knew him and under the direction of Merle Evans, band leader with the world's greatest circus a wreath was placed on the lonely grave. In the cemetery at Jefferson, Greene county, is the grave of a member of the band that played with the original Yankee Robinson circus and every time a circus passes that way-the-band-makes-a-journey_to. the cemetery and renders a solemn requiem over the last resting place of the departed musician.

school buildings throughout the state or an average of nearly $200 for every boy and girl who will be enrolled in school this fall. The Iowa State Teachers Association which has been making a study of educational costs in Iowa, announces these facts. Teachers report that between 550,000 and 600,000 boys and girls. will enter the public schools of the state this fall. Of this number nearly 80 per cent will be in the elementary grades, Rural schools predominate in virtually every section of the state, so far as numbers are concerned. There are now nearly 10,000 rural scholls, over 500 graded schools and about 400 consolidated schools. There are approximately 25,000 teachers employed in the state, or about one teacher for every 20 pupils,

An inventory is now being taken in various Iowa communities in an effort to ascertain the status of the chautauqua guarantees that were made by enterprising citizens. James S. Francis, of Gravity, Taylor county, says that shoringe reported on towns averages from two to ten dollars for each member on the guarantee contract. Clarinda is the only one that reports a net balance in the local fund. The Clarinda papers says that they will have about $500 in the local treasury after til bills are paid. Clarinda is one of the few independent chautauquas, and their talent is not purchased from a bureau. Gravity held a home talent chautauqua this year for the first time, and cleared about $335. The towns of this territory, who have purchased chautauqua talent from bureaus, all have failed to pay out so far as we know. From this analysis it would appear that the home talent or the independent avatem has been the most successful from a financial viewpoint.

WEEKLY NOTES OF INTEREST COMPILED FOR YOUR INFORMATION

School days are here again and vacation has been transformed into a beautiful, lurid memory. The haze of that memory thickens to such an extent, sometimes that it blots out practically all interest-in studies. Of course the lower classmen are bothered more than the Seniors in that respect. And this holds true with the Freshmen Class especially, that fresh, blushing, bashful group of young hopefuls. Then there is the Sophomore Class, which might be called the Evergreens for they still retain a tint of the freshman color. We notice some of the boys of that class are attempt We notice some ing to introduce a new phase of shiekhood, by refusing to wear rubber heels. And next-is-the poor Junior Class. They are having a hard time keeping their members from following the ideals of the Sophomores. And despite their efforts we notice that one has discarded his rubber heels. Last but not least comes the mighty Senior Class. Great praise may be given them for they have proven themselves worthy of it. Ever since they started to school way back in the first grade. they have been a "howling success" and they intend to make this year the best ever. To sum it all up however the prospects of the school for this year are very bright.

This is the second week of school and everyone is beginning to realize that the years work has begun in earning. The work is progressing nicerota Not only have we put our efand lift. Farmers Entertain Town People

On several occasions the bustness men of Decorah and other towns in Winneshiek county, had entertained the farmers of that county at various functions and as a return courtesy the farmers proceeded to entertain town people at A "Know Neighbor" picnic in the park at Decorah, one of the most beautiful in all Iowa. A great crowd gathered for the occasion and it was a hapby event and evinced a cordiality that is creditable to the minds that conceived it. On a recent occasion the Kiwanis club in Des Moines conceived the idea of having each of the 180 members invite a farmer to be his guest at the noon luncheon at Hotel Fort Des Moines and the response, was thrilling. Prof. Murl McDonald, cf Iowa State college at Ames, delivered an address that was inspiring. Getting the town and country folks together is a meritorious procedure.

Chas. F. Widman retains his interest in the business, which is incorporated now under the name of the Widman Printing Company.

The Widman Book Bindery was started here in the seventies by the late Mr. J. F. Widman and has grown from a very modest affair to one of the most complete printing and binding concerns in Northeastern Iowa, and a very important part of the bushness life of McGregor.

A. J. and F. R. Widman have not completed plans for the future. We hone it will not mean their departure from McGregor, as they are substantial citizens we cannot afford to lose, Chas, Widman has had personal supervision of the Bindery and will con-

ROBERT POLLOK QUIGLEY 1928

Mr. President: Your committee appointed to prepare resolutions commemorating the life, character and public service of Robert Pollok Quigley of McGregor, Clayton county, Iowa, begs leave to submit the following report:

Robert Pollok Quigley was born at the home of his grandparents, John and Mary Griffith, in Millville, Clayton county, Iowa, December 31, 1844. His parents, Joseph Beatty Quigley and Nancy Griffith, were married there in 1838 by James Nilson, first chief justice of Iowa Territory. His early childhood was spent on Buck creek in Jefferson township. His first schooling was in the home under tutelage of Miss Esther Quigley, who came from Ohio to instruct her brother's children. Later they attended school at Ceres, on the highlands, three miles distant. The children frequently glimpsed wolves, deer or wildcats on the way.

When Robert was eleven years old his parents moved to a prairie farm in Highland township, where opportunities for schooling were better. In 1861 he enrolled in Upper Iowa University at Fayette where his brother and sister had already attended two years. In 1864 he left college with a group of fellow students to join the "hundred-day men" for Civil War service in the 46th Iowa. Mr. Quigley re-enlisted in the 15th Iowa and served to the end of the war.

In 1866 he entered the law office of Elizah Odell at McGregor. His legal training was received with him and with Judge John T. Stoneman. In 1869, before he was admitted to the bar, he was nominated for city attorney. He served the city in this capacity nearly forty years and was four years county attorney. He was a member of the State Senate from 1909 to 1917. In 1919 he closed his office after fifty years of active practice.

He was married November 24, 1875, to Blanche Jacobs. Four children were born to them-Iola, Georgia, Joseph Hale and Adaline (Mrs. I. D. Fox). Mrs. Blanche Quigley died May 17, 1911. One brother, George Washington Quigley, still lives in California.

Because of failing health Mr. Quigley went to the home of his daughters in Des Moines, October, 1925. He was in a local hospital for seven months before his death, September 10, 1926. Services were held at the Methodist church in McGregor, Rev. Richard Prescott officiating. The Odd Fellows, of which order Mr. Quigley was a member for fifty-four years, had charge of the ceremony at the grave.

Robert Quigley lived his life in the county in which he was born. His memories span the period of statehood. He had the sterling qualities of the pioneer; loyalty to his friends, kindness to his neighbors, were to him a gospel. He is sincerely mourned by the community which he served in many ways during his long career. Another of the old oaks has fallen. Strange it is that out of that peculiar and unique northeastern corner of Iowa have come so many men and characters that have guided the destiny of this state. From there came Henderson, Allison and Shiras, and in their lesser way in service to the state came those other stalwarts who have helped in their own way to mold the history of our commonwealth. Not least among these all was Robert Pollok Quigley. His friends and those who knew him loved him, and liked to call him "Bob." This was the accolade of his knighthood in the chivalry of friendship and affection. Men and women came to him with all their tribulations, and little children with their broken dolls and all their tearful tragedies of childhood, and ail found surcease.

He was a forceful character for years in his own community, a lawyer of the old school, forceful, able and scholarly. More than that, what every real lawyer should be, an advocate without charge or fee as a bulwark to protect the poor, the humble and the oppressed. His record cannot be written here. It is written upon the hearts of three generations who knew him and loved him. And so he died rich. Not rich perhaps as the modern world counts worldly wealth, but rich in good deeds, unselfish sacrifice; rich in little children's love and old men's prayers.

"And so, sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust, Approached his grave like one who wraps the mantle of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams."

Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the journal of the Senate, and that the secretary be directed to send an engrossed copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

C. A. BENSON, J. R. FRAILEY, E. E. CAVANAUGH,

Committee.

Senator Benson spoke as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT: The memorial that has just been read, and the record of which it will be a part, speak of Robert Pollok Quigley, the public official, the statesman. I would pay a simple tribute to "Bob" Quigley, as he was best known by those among whom he moved in more close and irtimate relationship, those whom he served so faithfully and so well—"Bob", the kindly neighbor, the devoted friend.

"Bob" Quigley rated and esteemed a man for what he did and what he was, not for what he professed or represented. To him there was no caste, no color; to him no class, no creed was superior to another; to him plain deeds and unostentatious acts appealed far more than beautiful words and eloquent phrases. His creed was found in that great fundamental doctrine "Do unto, others as you would have them do unto you." This creed he professed and, what is more, practiced. Truly it can be said of him that he would always "stand by his friend to the uttermost end, and fight a fair fight with his foe."

Born and bred under the rigorous demands of pioneer days of the middle west, there was developed in him that rugged personality which haracterized his private as well as his public life. He was imbued with, nd actuated by, a spirit of sympathetic helpfulness, and no demand upon him was too great, no sacrifice too severe if he thereby could lighten the burden of a fellow man. His happiness was a reflection of the happiness of others.
