Merchandise Truck Goes Into Ditch When Front Tire Blows

A large Nash-Finch merchandise truck, loaded to capacity with various items, plunged over the north of the Yates farm, north of Moulton, Friday. The driver out with only a few scratches while there was considerable damage to the contents, the truck was damaged but little consideration was given to the deep drop over the fill.

A recapped front tire was given the cause of the wreck. The driver stated that he was traveling Moulton from the four corners had reached the big fill at the of the reservoir when the right tire blew out. This threw the wheel of the truck into the soil and from that point on there was nothing he could do. The truck rolled over the 20 foot fill and landed on its top. It is thought the truck might have turned again but a telephone pole stopped its progress.

The remarkable thing about the accident was that the driver escaped unharmed. The only mark he received was a slight bump on his head and a small scratch on his arm.

That afternoon a highway contractor's grader was used to right the truck and pull it up the steep bankment.
