by an old Indian woman, who opened the door and seeing all the pupils xclaimed, "Heap much pappooses," evidently thinking the children were members of her family. Mrs. Hubbard taught for about four years and then in 1846, gave her hand in marriage to Dr. Leonard Truman Hubbard. He was born at Sacketts Harbor, New York, November 2, 1821, studied medicine at Frankfort, Kentucky, and later came to Jackson county, Iowa, locating in Maquoketa township, where he was engaged in practice for some time. In 1848 he removed to Monmouth, where he labored for the greater part of half a century. In 1850 he went overland to California, where he remained about eighteen months. He was successful in the hunt for gold, returning by way of the isthmus, and in 1880 he went to Colorado on a mining expedition. He did not sojourn in that state long, however, but came back to Monmouth; where he was engaged actively in the practice of medicine until 1894, when he suffered a paralytic stroke as the result of an accident. He did not recover from its effect and on the 22d of June, 1895, passed from this life. At that time he was the oldest physician in Monmouth and Maquoketa and had witnessed and participated in the great change the years had wrought. In 1848 he started the village of Coloma, which would be located on the west side of Division street in Monmouth, but at that time the latter town had not been laid out. In those early days he owned the greater part of the valley, disposing of his holdings as settlers flocked to this region.

In politics Dr. Hubbard was a whig, later a republican, and in the post bellum controversy over the money question he espoused the cause of the greenbackers. His was a hard and difficult life but through it all he maintained a cheerful spirit, which made him welcome and endeared him to those who had need of his professional services.

Six children were born to Dr. and Mrs. Hubbard, as follows: Adelaide, Leonard, Tertullus, Hannah, Katie and John. Hannah died in 1878, at the age of twenty-three years. But few of the associates of Mrs. Hubbard's young womanhood are now living, and of the eleven who spent the first winter in Jackson county in the old house in Maquoketa, only one other, a niece, now survives. The bleak prairies of that time are now rich agricultural districts, the two houses have been multiplied many fold, and Mrs. Hubbard, as she contrasts the past with the present, may well be proud and grateful that she has been an eye witness to the progress of civilization.

HON. LYMAN BRADLEY PARSHALL.

The safety of the republic depends not so much upon methods and measures as upon that manhood from whose deep sources all that is of permanent value in life must at last proceed, and in Hon. Lyman Bradley Parshall, agriculturist, educator and statesman, Jackson county has a citizen whose efforts have been of great worth in promoting its interests along material, intellectual and political lines. In every relation of life he has held himself above reproach and while he has won conspicuous success in the management of his private interests, no unworthy or unquestionable means have been employed in the attainment of this end, for on the contrary his course is one which at all times will bear close investigation and scrutiny.

Mr. Parshall was born in Interlaken, Seneca county, New York, June 28, 1845, and is a son of Caleb Halsey and Elizabeth Barlow (Bradley) Parshall. The Parshall family has been identified with American interests from early colonial days, for it is recorded that one of the name was the first white child born on Long Island. Caleb H. Parshall was a native of Suffolk county, New York, situated upon the eastern end of Long Island. During the years of his active life he followed farming and enjoyed the reputation of being the most enterprising, progressive and successful agriculturist of his locality, owning and cultivating one hundred acres of land, his labors in connection therewith netting him about four thousand dollars annually. His religious allegiance was given to the Dutch Reformed church, while in politics he was a democrat, save during the period of the Rebellion, when, in harmony with the effort to uphold the Union, he voted for the candidates and measures of the republican party. He spent his entire life in New York, as did his wife, who was also a native of the Empire state.

Lyman Bradley Parshall obtained his literary education at Northville, Long Island, and in 1865 matriculated in the Sheffield Scientific School, a department of Yale University, from which he received the Ph. D. degree in 1868. A short time thereafter he went to Chicago, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits for two years, at the end of which period he went to McPherson county, Kansas, where he engaged in driving cattle from Texas into that state. He was thus engaged until 1884, when he came to Iowa and purchased a tract of land on the border of Jones and Jackson counties. He has since made this section of the state his home and is one of the largest landowners and most prominent agriculturists. In addition to the work of tilling the soil, which is carried on under his direct supervision, he also gives his attention to the raising and shipping of cattle. In business affairs his judgment is sound, his discernment keen and his enterprise unflagging.

Mr. Parshall has not confined his attention alone to agricultural interests, however, but has found time and opportunity to respond to the call of his fellow townsmen who have sought his service in public office. In 1892 he was elected to the superintendency of the Jackson county schools, in which capacity he served for two terms, during which time he inaugurated improvements, the practical value of which has been demonstrated in the excellent work now being done by the schools throughout the county. In 1908 still higher political honors were conferred upon him in his election to the state senate. He has long been a close student of the questions of vital interest in state and national politics and his foresight into existing conditions and his understanding of public needs have enabled him to speak with authority upon many matters that engross general attention. In a canvass of the state in 1896, for state superintendent, the subject of his addresses was one which largely appealed to public thought, viz: "The Cause of the Rise of American Wages." It was his thesis that machinery was accountable for this rise and he gave proof that every advance in wages was due to a corresponding advance or improvement in labor saving devices, citing among other facts that with the aid of modern machinery a man could now cultivate forty-five acres of corn while in 1855 in the same length of time he could cultivate only eight acres. While still a resident of New York he has been a candidate for the state legislature, but was defeated by a small majority, owing to the fact that he was making the race on a democratic ticket in a republican county. Mr. Parshall at all times keeps abreast with the best thinking men of the age in his study of sociological, economic and political problems and his opinions on such subjects are of value, for he has been a keen observer and is a close reasoner.

In 1884 Mr. Parshall was united in marriage to Miss Ella Rebecca Smith, who was born in Linn county, Iowa, and they have two children: Genevieve, formerly a student in the Iowa State University and now at home; and Wilhelmina, a high school pupil in Maquoketa. Mr. Parshall is identified with the Knights of Pythias lodge at Maquoketa and with his family attends the Congregational church, contributing to its support. Throughout Jackson county and this part of the state he is spoken of in terms of admiration and respect. His life has been so varied in its activity, so honorable in its purposes, so far reaching and beneficial in its effects that it has become an integral part of the history of the county, where he has lived from pioneer times and so directed his efforts that his labors have been of notable value to the community, while at the same time in business circles he has given substantial proof of his keen discernment and capable management in the attainment of gratifying success.

PATRICK F. DOLAN.

Patrick F. Dolan, successfully carrying on farming and stock raising in Fairfield township, Jackson county, is a native of New England, his birth occurring in Vermont on the 23d of December, 1847. As the name indicates, he is of Irish descent, his parents, Martin and Bridget (Rudy) Dolan, having both been born and reared on the Emerald isle. They came to America in 1847 and took up their abode in Vermont, where for eight years the father followed railroading. The year 1854 witnessed the arrival of the family in Iowa, settlement being made in Clinton county, where the father purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land at a cost of five hundred dollars. To the cultivation of this farm he continued to direct his energies until the time of his demise, which occurred in the year following the death of his wife. He was very successful in his agricultural pursuits, accumulating a property of eight hundred and forty acres, which constituted him one of the extensive landowners of his section of the county. In his family were twelve children, eight of whom are still living.

Reared under the parental roof, Patrick F. Dolan acquired a good knowledge of the English language as a pupil in the common schools, and when not engaged with his text-books aided in the work of the fields. He remained at home, giving his father the benefit of his assistance, until 1863, when he ran away from home and. inspired by the spirit of patriotism, although only sixteen years of age, he enlisted for service in the Civil war, becoming a member of Company G, Twenty-
