LONG LIFE OF PIONEER CITIZEN COMES TO CLOSE

Judge R. M. Wright Dies at His Home Here— Funeral Saturday

After a lingering illness, the outcome of which was known to be inevitable, Judge R. M. Wright died at 7:15 Thursday evening at his home at 1233 Fifth avenue south. He had enjoyed remarkably good health all his life until comparatively recently, but last November it became necessary to perform an operation for an organic difficulty. Although his life was prolonged he has been an invalid since then and his strength failed steadily. His vitality was such that he survived much longer than seemed probable.

The immediate members of his family are here. The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon, at 2:00 o'clock from St. Mark's Episcopal church, with the Rev. W. Ernest Stockley in charge of the services. Interment will be in the family lot in Oakland cemetery.

Judge R. M. Wright was a pioneer to whose memory honor will be universally paid. He had been one of the leaders of this community for fifty-five years. Outside his profession he had been identified with a number of local business enterprises and his sympathetic support could be depended on for any worthy public cause. He was an indefatigable worker during his long life and although his professional activities ended January 1, 1923, with his retirement after sixteen years of service as judge of the 11th judicial district of Iowa he continued to keep busily occupied until comparatively recently when a fatal organic trouble developed. His 86th anniversary was last November, so he lived beyond the years generally counted as a life time.

Judge Wright had a cultivated mind which distinguished him as a lawyer and scholar. He was a master of political economy and was always a clear thinker concerning the problems of government and of life. He had a broad and liberal outlook and was very human. Although ready to stand up for his convictions he ical course in 1871 with degree of B. A. Three years later he received the degree of Master of Arts.

Money was scarce in those times and the young man interrupted his studies with periods of laboring on farms for hire. After leaving college he became principal of the high school at Fort Wayne, Indiana, and held that position for several years. But the educational work was only a temporary undertaking for he had planned to practice law and at the first chance he took that up.

He had been married to Elizabeth Fowler, to whom he was engaged in his early college years. In July 1876 he "burned his bridges behind" and moved to Fort Dodge. When he arrived here the country was in a turmoil over the "greenback" issue and he immediately enlisted in the campaign for sound money.

Among the important changes which Judge Wright saw take place was woman suffrage. Michigan university had only men students when he entered and his was the last class without a woman in it. As editor of the college paper he was opposed to the women students being admitted, and afterward felt ashamed of his action. He made up for it by supporting woman suffrage in the Iowa legislature when he was a member.

Judge Wright lost his wife and daughter had died in 1888. Two small daughters survived and they

BERLOVICH IS INDICTED FOR $90,000

Is Charged in Part in Ottumwa Bank Robbery

OTTUMWA, Iowa, June 12. (P)—Dewey M. Berlovich of Des Moines today was sought on indictments charging him with participation in the $90,000 Ottumwa Savings bank robbery Sept. 9, and interfering with the administration of justice.

The indictments were returned late yesterday by the Wapello county grand jury. Sheriff Ralph M. Baker immediately asked Des Moines officers to make the arrest.

Bonds on the two charges were set by Judge E. K. Daugherty at $55,000. The investigation leading to the indictments was carried on by Assistant Attorney General Neil Garrett with the assistance of State Agent E. C. McPherson.

Berlovich was arrested last January on the bank robbery charge which was ignored by the grand jury. Witnesses testified at that time that he was transacting a real estate deal in Ottumwa when the robbery took place.

The second indictment returned here said that Berlovich attempted to intimidate George Smith of Ottumwa, who was expected to be called as a witness against William Hilbrandt of St. Paul, Minn., held in connection with the robbery. Hilbrandt's extradition was denied by Gov. Olson.

Charged With Intimidation

Berlovich, who was charged with participation in the million dollar Lincoln, Neb., bank robbery Sept. 17, 1930, and later cleared, was arrested in Ottumwa last Dec. 31, on a charge of "attempting to improperly influence and intimidate one George Smith," a witness to the Ottumwa robbery.

On January 3 he was charged with participation in the Ottumwa robbery, the warrant being served after he had provided $10,000 bond on the first charge.

Bonds of $50,000 set on the robbery count were posted.

lived beyond many years generally counted as a life time.

Judge Wright had a cultivated mind which distinguished him as a lawyer and scholar. He was a master of political economy and was always a clear thinker concerning the problems of government and of life. He had broad interests which made him very human. Although ready to stand up for his convictions he was a kindly opponent, never critical of the other man because he held a different view.

Twice he was sent to the Iowa legislature as representative from Webster county, the occasions being separated by a period of years. His statesmanship was recognized in that field. He was prominent in the early legislation for prohibition of liquor in the state and was practically the founder of the Iowa drainage law which cleared the way for the formation of drainage districts with equitable taxation which brought about the drainage of swamps and sloughs which used to occupy the spaces where the richest soil is now cultivated. Governor Cummins doubted the constitutionality of the law and hesitated to sign it until convinced otherwise by the arguments of the author, Representative Wright.

Lawyers have always been quite generally leaders in politics and as Mr. Wright was a believer in the principles of the republican party he supported its campaigns as a speaker at the political rallies and in party conventions. He was depended on in those years to deliver his share of the broadsides in answer to the arguments of the opposition. His logic and his thorough knowledge of his subjects made him an effective debater and he was popular with audiences locally and over the state.

In a bar that was distinguished for its able members he was the peer of the best and no criticism was ever heard of his ethical standards. It was natural that in his later years his legal career should have been crowned by election to the bench, where he received the confidence of lawyers and public alike.

A Summary of Events

The city of Sheffield, England, was the birthplace of Robert M. Wright in 1844. He was the son of Thomas and Mary Wright and he had two brothers and two sisters.

When he was but five years old his parents determined to move to the United States. His father believed that aristocracy such as then existed in England did not give the average man a square deal and he wanted that for his children.

The trip to the new world was considerable of an adventure. They started from Liverpool in a sailing vessel which was wrecked on the coast of Ireland. They lost all their belongings but were otherwise unharmed. Eventually they found themselves back in Liverpool whence a second start was made and this

As editor of the college paper he was opposed to the women students being admitted, and afterward felt ashamed of his action. He made up for it by supporting woman suffrage in the Iowa legislature when he was a member.

Judge Wright lost his wife through death in 1889 and their first daughter had died in 1888. Two small daughters survived and they received a mother's care from Mrs. Hattie Leonard Wright, whom he had then married. The latter was a former pupil when he was principal of the Fort Wayne high school. The two daughters, Roberta and Elizabeth, are now Mrs. W. S. Merryman and Mrs. R. C. Lee. In 1892 there was born to the later union a son, Robert, who is now residing in Waukegan, Ill.

Judge Wright is survived by his wife, two daughters, one son, four grandsons and one granddaughter.

The Life Worth Living

Following is the closing paragraph of reminiscences which he wrote for his grandsons in leisure moments:

"And now as I near the end of a long life I have this to say—Life can be made worth living. Give every man a 'square deal.' Make few promises but religiously keep the ones that you make. Always sympathize with the unfortunate, and always remember that there is more of good than of evil in human nature. The possession of the attributes which I have mentioned will give you the affection and good will of your fellow-men and this will be to you one of the greatest sources of happiness that is given to mortal man to have."

They lost all their belongings but were otherwise unharmed. Eventually they found themselves back in Liverpool whence a second start was made and this time they got safely across the ocean, but it took two months for the voyage with sails. The five-year-old boy, Robert, narrowly escaped being swept overboard once. He was saved by the vigilance of a sailor who caught him in time.

Arriving in New York they proceeded to Buffalo and by lake vessel to Milwaukee and on to Chicago, which was then about Fort Dodge's present size. The family settled in Kendall county, Illinois, where a 160-acre farm was purchased. It was government land and there was scarcely another house within sight.

With ox teams the prairie sod was plowed and the first crop raised. The usual experiences of the pioneers followed. There were plenty of adversities and some of them required considerable ingenuity and persistence to be overcome by the young farmer boy, but they were the trials that men are made from. The interest which Mr. Wright always felt in farming and his knowledge about it had their beginning in the boyhood days of the Illinois farm.

His education started in the country schools, but he finally entered college. He went to Ann Arbor and was graduated in the full class

NOTABLE DEATHS

JOHN LITTLEFIELD TILTON was born January 11, 1863, at Nashua, New Hampshire, and died at Morgantown, West Virginia, November 11, 1930. For many years he occupied the chair of physics and geology in Simpson College, and for twenty years he was attached in special investigations on the Iowa Geological Survey. Dr. Tilton's early education was obtained in the public schools of his native village. Afterward he attended Wesleyan University, Middletown, Connecticut, from which he received the degrees of A. B. in 1885 and A. M. in 1888. He also received the degrees of A. M. from Harvard in 1895, and of Ph. D. from Chicago in 1910. After teaching a year in Niantic, Connecticut, he was museum assistant in natural history in Wesleyan in 1886-88; professor of geology and physics in Simpson College, Indianola, Iowa, 1888-1920; associate professor of geology in West Virginia University in 1920-23, and professor in 1923-30. He was geologist, Iowa Geological Survey, and paleontologist, West Virginia Geological Survey; was a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, of the Geological Society of America, of the Paleontological Society of America, of the West Virginia Academy of Science, of which he was president in 1928 and 1929, and of the Iowa Academy of Science, being president of the latter in 1907. His specialty was the geology of central and southwestern Iowa, and the paleontology of West Virginia. Dr. Tilton was not only a scientist of wide reputation, but an outstanding personage in the educational field of our state, and in religious circles. The place occupied by him in the religious life of our state was rather unique. A firm advocate of the doctrine of evolution he was also a firm believer in theology. His outstanding function seemed to be to reconcile science and religion, and in this he was eminently successful. Beyond all doubt this reconciliation of the two was measurably advanced by his written and spoken words. On this delicate and much discussed topic he was the author of many articles in the religious journals, as well as the secular press; and he gave expression of his views widely in the classroom, in the pulpit and before the microphone. His teaching came to the lives of young people at a time when new revelations often wreck, or threaten, Christian faiths. At this period Professor Tilton carried many over the crisis opening to them a wider vision of the truths of science, yet leaving firm the underlying principles of their religious faith. To him God was indeed truth.

ROBERT MULLINS WRIGHT was born in Sheffield, England, November 1, 1844, and died in Fort Dodge, Iowa, June 11, 1931. Burial was in Oakland Cemetery, Fort Dodge. When he was five years old his parents, Thomas and Mary (Mullins) Wright, removed with their family to near Lisbon, Kendall County, Illinois, crossing the Atlantic in a perilous trip in a sailing vessel. Three years later they removed to a farm in De Kalb County, Illinois. Robert attended common school, and was graduated from the University of Michigan with the degree of A. B. in 1871 and of A. M. in 1874. During this period of his life he varied his college work with labor on farms and with school-teaching, being for four years principal of Fort Wayne, Indiana, High School. In the meantime he had been studying law, and in 1876 removed to Fort Dodge, Iowa, and began practice. This he pursued with success. In 1881 he was elected representative and was again elected to that office in 1903, thus serving in the Nineteenth and the Thirtieth and Thirty-first general assemblies. Prohibition and woman suffrage were two subjects which received his ardent support in his legislative service. He led in the enactment of the drainage laws in his two later sessions. In 1906 he was elected a judge of the Eleventh Judicial District. Re-elections followed, and he served until January 1, 1923. His work as lawyer, legislator and judge was creditable to himself and useful to his community and state.

CHARLES L. LONGLEY was born in Franklin County, Massachusetts, May 27, 1843, and died in Boise, Idaho, November 27, 1930. Burial was at Twin Falls, Idaho. His parents, Alfred and Julia Read Longley, removed their family during Charles' infancy to Medina County, Ohio, and later to the city of Oberlin. In 1854 the mother, then a widow, removed with her son to Tipton, Iowa. He secured his more advanced education in Tipton High School and in Cornell College, where he took two years in the liberal arts course, and in 1866 he took a course in a business college in Davenport. He volunteered in Company C, Twenty-fourth Iowa Infantry, August 6, 1862, and was mustered out at Savannah, Georgia, July 17, 1865. From 1867 until 1889 he was editor of the Tipton Advertiser, and became known as an able newspaper writer. In 1889 he removed to Cedar Rapids and in 1891 to Waterloo. From 1890 to 1892 he was assistant adjutant general, Department of Iowa, Grand Army of the Republic. For four years he was secretary of the Waterloo Paper Manufacturing Company. odist Episcopal church. Mr. Ashton gives his political allegiance to the republican party and has served as city councilman for three terms. His worth is widely acknowledged by those who know him and he has the favorable regard of a large circle of friends.

JUDGE ROBERT MULLINS WRIGHT.

Judge Robert Mullins Wright, who since 1906 has occupied the bench of the eleventh judicial district, entered upon his professional career well equipped by thorough and comprehensive collegiate training and in the interim since his admission to the bar has made continuous progress until Iowa today numbers him among her distinguished lawyers and jurists. He was born at Sheffield, England, November 1, 1844, and in both the paternal and maternal lines comes of English ancestry. His grandfather, Stephen Wright, born on the "Merrie Isle," was manager of an estate and to him and his wife, Matilda Wright, were born three children, Thomas, Stephen and Amy. The first named, born in England, was reared in Yorkshire and always followed farming. The agricultural opportunities of the new world, however, attracted him to America and in 1850 he crossed the Atlantic, taking up his abode near Lisbon, Kendall county, Illinois, where he remained for two or three years. He afterward removed to De Kalb county, where he passed away in 1882, at the age of eighty years. His wife survived him until 1887 and was seventy-nine years of age at the time of her demise. She, too, was born in England, as were her parents, George and Sarah (Gilot) Mullins. Her father was a farmer by occupation, thus providing for the support of his family, which numbered six children, including Robert, George, and Mary. The daughter Mary became the wife of Thomas Wright and for many years they traveled life's journey happily together. He was originally an Episcopalian in religious belief and she a member of the Congregational church, but after settling in Illinois in early days, they identified themselves with the Methodist denomination, which was the pioneer church of that state, continuing their connection with that faith until their death. In community affairs Mr. Wright was somewhat prominent, holding a number of township offices, and at all times his record measured up to high standards of manhood and citizenship. His family numbered five children, of whom the eldest, George, is deceased. Ann was the wife of William Cutts. She died at Shabbona, De Kalb county, Illinois, in September, 1912. William was a soldier of the Civil war and was killed at the battle of Resaca. Robert M. was the next of the family. Juliana is the wife of James Spaulding, an old soldier, living near Ruthven, Iowa.

Judge Wright was but five years of age when brought to the United States and remained upon the home farm in De Kalb county, Illinois, until he entered college. He supplemented his preliminary education by a course in the University of Michigan, from which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1871, while the honorary degree of Master of Arts was conferred upon him in 1874. In early manhood he devoted five years of his life to teaching school and during the last four years of that period was principal of the high school in Fort Wayne, Indiana. In July, 1876, he arrived in Fort Dodge and entered upon the practice of law here in that year, having prepared for the bar by private study at a former period. He has ever remained a close and discriminating student of the profession, reading broadly and mastering the principles of jurisprudence in large measure. He continued in active practice until 1906, when he was elected judge of the district court and is still upon the bench. His decisions are models of judicial soundness and are based upon a thorough understanding of the points presented, a comprehensive knowledge of the law and an appreciation of the equity of the case. He has not only been active in administering the law but also has taken part in framing acts which have found their way to the statute books of the state, for in 1882 he was a member of the state legislature, during which period he voted for the submission of the prohibitory amendment to the state constitution concerning intoxicating liquors and also at that time voted in favor of woman suffrage. In 1904 he was once more chosen to represent his district in the state legislature and again in 1906. He has served on some of the most important committees in the legislature, of several of which he was chairman, including the committee on constitutional amendments. He has been a stalwart republican since the organization of the party. His father was greatly opposed to slavery and Judge Wright held to the same views. Indeed, throughout his entire life he has been the opponent of any unjust domination and he stands for much that is progressive, holding to the ideal of party service for the many rather than for the few.

On the 27th of August, 1872, Judge Wright was married to Miss Elizabeth Fowler, a daughter of James and Mary Fowler. Mrs. Wright was born in Aurora, Illinois, while her parents were natives of Ireland and of Scotch-Irish descent. They also held to the Protestant faith. After living for a time in Canada they came to the United States, settling in Aurora, Illinois, but spending their last days in De Kalb county, Illinois, where Mr. Fowler passed away at the age of eighty-two years and his wife when seventy years of age. They were the parents of six children: John, who died in the Civil war; Robert, whose death occurred in Illinois about three years ago; James, a Civil war soldier, who died at Denver, Colorado, in 1910; Mary Ann, unmarried; Mrs. Sarah Jane Howlitt, of Paw Paw, Illinois, a widow and formerly the wife of a Union veteran, who died several years ago; and Mrs. Wright. The last named died in 1889, at the age of forty-two years. She was a consistent Christian woman and held membership in the Methodist church. She became the mother of four children: Florence Eliza, who died when fourteen years of age; Herbert Francis, who died when four years of age; Roberta, the wife of Walter Merryman, manager of the Messinger Printing Office; and Elizabeth Gilot, at home. On the 27th of August, 1890, Judge Wright married Miss Hattie Maria Leonard, who was born December 9, 1858, a daughter of Dr. P. M. Leonard, of Fort Wayne, Indiana. There is one son of the second marriage, Robert Leonard Wright, now a student in the University of Iowa. Mrs. Wright is a member of the Presbyterian church. Both Judge and Mrs. Wright have a wide acquaintance in Fort Dodge and this part of the state, where he has lived continuously for thirty-six years. He has ever held closely to a high standard of professional ethics and has been an able and conscientious minister in the temple of justice. His ideals of citizenship are high and in the relations of life which are of a more strictly social character he has displayed qualities which have rendered him popular wherever he is known.

ASAEL W. JONES.

Since disposing of his shop he has been engaged in the sale of agricultural implements.
