MARCH GOES OUT LIKE LION; APRIL LYIN' DUE TODAY

Watch out.

That's the byword today. You can't even trust your dearest friends, your sisters and brothers, and it wouldn't be safe to bet that your parents wouldn't do something out of the ordinary today which might cause you at least 50 cents worth of embarrassment.

The weatherman played the first trick of the day when, after he had sent March out like a lion last night, he forgot to call the lion off and it greeted the daybreak today with a real bluster. There will probably be more lyin' before the day is over.

The reason?—Its April 1.

E. B. BROWN IS KILLED BY BLAST

Brown when the blast came. Shields stated that he thought he saw Brown light the oven, heated with gas, ten or fifteen minutes before the explosion took place, but officials of the company are at a loss as to the explanation of the accident.

Think Gas Went Out.

J. Klein, secretary of the company, stated last night that Mr. Brown looked after the Japan room, and one theory of the accident was that after lighting the fire it had one source: Iowa Terrestrial and State Legislators Collection compiled by volunteers and staff at the State Historical Society of Iowa, Library, Des Moines, Iowa.
