Even the very names the characters in Gordon & Benen S A Royal Slave' are picturesque at charming. Who could resist the apai of such names as El Aguila, Iz. Isadora DeOra, Carlos Castello, edro Martinez, Juan Alvarez? Inheir sound is wrapped up century of highing pride, the tinkleh mandos, the thrumming of hitars, the love glances of pretty spritas, the stealthy tread of some twarted adventurer. All these and pre too are to be found in the beautul romantic production of "A Rd1 Slave," which comes to the operaouse, January 18th.

Sudden Death of C. C. Vanderpoel of West Hitchell.

Word was received here about eight o'clock last evening of the sudden death of Mr. O. C. Vanderpoel at West Mitchell. He had gone over to the G. A. R. rooms to open up for the meeting, at about 7:30 and short-ly after was found by some of his comrades dead, evidently of a sudden stroke of paralysis or heart failure. His daughter, Mrs. Hastings, who was here at Osage, was immediately phoned for and drove to Mitchell at once. The family have our sincerest sympathy in their bereavement. The deceased was seventy-four years of age and had been for many years one of Mitchell's most prominent citizens. An obituary will appear in our next issue.

HON. C. C. VANDERPOEL DEAD.

Just three months ago we had the pleasure of writing an account of the golden wedding anniversary of Hon. and Mrs. C. C. Vanderpoel of Mitchell, this county, but are at this time bowed in sadness as we chronicle Mr. Vanderpoel's sudden death at Mitchell last Tuesday evening, January 9, 1906.

Mr. Vanderpoel had walked up town during the afternoon and appeared to be in his usual health. About half after five o'clock he again started from home with a basket of kindling for the purpose of starting a fire in the G. A. R. hall where an installation program was to be held that evening, where he was found lying upon the platform in front of the building by others who arrived about seven o'clock. Heart failure is assigned as the cause of Mr. Vanderpoel's sudden death and the sorrowing family have the sympathy of their old friends in and surrounding Mitchell. The children living abroad were notified and arrangements for the funeral will be made upon their arrival at Mitchell today.

Clarence C. Vanderpoel was born in Columbia county, New York, November 22, 1830, and ten years later moved with his parents to Jefferson Co., Wisconsin, in which state he grew to manhood, receiving his education in Carroll College at Waukesha, and at the State University at Madison. After two years service he was discharged for disability and took a clerkship in the commissary department which be retained until the close of the war. Prior to his enlistment in the U. One of the enjoyable events for the young people during vacation was the party given by Fern and Lynn Bartlett last Thursday evening. Different forms of amusement furnished the pleasure of the evening, among them a story writing contest. Each girl was given the picture of an advertisement and the boys were given the names to match. They then found their partners and the couple wrote the story for the ploture. When they were all completed they were read and the judges pronounced the one written by Lola Samson and Avery Brush the best, so they were given a prize. The thirty young guests were met at the door by Margaret Ferris and Bessie Chandler. At the close of the evening refreshments were served.

One of the most pleasant events of the past week was the farewell party given at the bome of Miss Zadie Tupper, Tuesday evening by the L.O. O. H. G. Society. Reconstructed log cabin at Pinicon Alders Wildlife Area.

In the early 1950's Rev. G.J. Schmitz and the Meyer Boy Scout Troop 67 constructed a log cabin and swinging bridge in the wooded area along the Wapsipinicon River northwest of McIntire, Iowa. This project took several years of work for the Scouts, their leaders, and other members of the Meyer parish.

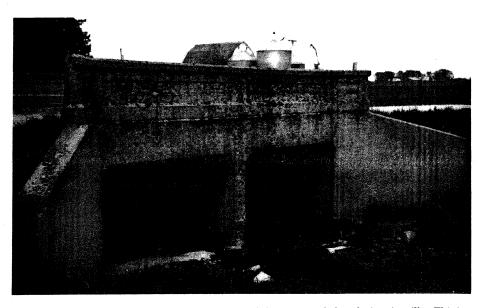

This area is now known as Pinicon Alders Wildlife Area, and owned by the Mitchell County Conservation Board. In 1987 the Mitchell County Conservation Board restored the cabin and swinging bridge, making it a camping and recreational area.

Some of the 31 Boy Scouts who originally helped to develop this area include: Robert Adams, Daniel Thome, Ray Koenigs, Jerome Koenings, Eugene Hackenmiller, Dean Blake, Clarence Kruse, Donald Retterath, Robert Michels, Duane Merten, Philip Koenigs, Jerome Adams, Eugene Klapperich, Duane Blake, Lester Durben, Kenneth Freund, Bernard Koenigs, Jerry Blake, Duane May, Eugene Domino, and Paul Kasel.

UNIQUE BRIDGE "TELLS" HISTORY

by LaVerne Kruse

This bridge in Stacyville Twp. has some of the history of the area recorded on the interior pillar. This has been written by David May, of rural Stacyville, from information he obtained from the May family history. The history he printed on the bridge pillar is very similar to the first two paragraphs of the Meyer history by Julie Hackenmiller.

The city of Mitchell extends from the east bank of the Cedar River to the big S curve east of town. The actual legal boundary is about one long block west of that point.

Mitchell is a tale of three cities. It began east of the railroad tracks, moving ever to the west. About the same time development was taking place along the river and this area came to be known as west town. The year was 1854.

In 1869 West Mitchell incorporated. In the days the area between the east and west nunities had been covered with brush. J.H. Cady had set up his blacksmith shop in this area in 1854, the first attempt at creating a community in this barren area with an eye to bridging the distance between east and west. This was as difficult a concept in Mitchell in 1854 as it is on a global scale in 1989. C.C. Prime built a hotel in 1854 and Amos Cummings built a store.

Down by the river business was booming. There was a flour mill built by John D. Chambers and John F. English. It could also grind corn. In 1858 Frank Coap built the West Mitchell Brewery. It was later owned by John Fey. Starting in 1865 the Paragon Woolen Mills turned out wool yard goods, yarn and red blankets. The wool came from this area and from surrounding states. Mitchell Iron Works, built by Anton Schulte in 1872, completed what we could now call an industrial park. The iron works was both a foundry and a machine shop. There were the usual stores and services needed in any community. Dr. W.W. Blackman built a three-story building half-way up the hill which housed a drug store, doctor and dentist and other services and shops. The building was finally demolished in 1910.

Up the hill near the railroad, development had flourished, too. By 1883 there were six large stores, two grain elevators, small shops, a bank, a boarding house and a livery barn. By 1910 a large brick building housed the ker-Glassel General Store, a successor to Greig General Store and the Klinger-Glassel General Store. The drug store was across the street and around the corner were the John Ross Hardware and the A.W. Parkhurst Restaurant. Close by were the grain elevators and the village well.

In 1857 Mitchell County was organized. The courthouse stood where the school building now stands. The line between Mitchell and West Mitchell was the street (now closed) between the Ray Kisner property and the Hilan Trout property. A third business district was growing up on the east end of town in the area near the S curve. The middle Mitchell people wanted to incorporate, but those east of the railroad were not interested and they chose not to be included when Mitchell was finally incorporated in 1879. Mitchell was the county seat from 1857 to 1870. A referendum on where the county seat should be located changed the Mitchell story.

If the influence of exit polls is a problem today, it's mild compared to the out and out vote buying that went on in those days regarding the choice of the courthouse location. St. Ansgar supported Osage in the contest because they thought it would be easier to get the county seat away from Osage. It was an issue created by egos and political and economic opportunism. Mitchell lost out because the local politicians couldn't see the long-term potential of cooperation between the three Mitchell groups. West Mitchell ontinued as a separate political entity until 1954.

Mitchell has had several schools. The first was a log house. Then in 1857 J.L. Tibbits built a frame schoolhouse which served until 1869 when a six room school was built about three blocks west of the depot. It was of unusual design and became known as the "Bird Cage School." Two primary schools were built at the same time on either end of town. In 1882 the "Bird Cage" burned and the former courthouse was converted for school use.

The press had its day with four newspapers. First was the Mitchell County Republican which began publication in 1858. Mitchell County Gazette and the Mitchell Democrat followed. The Mitchell County Press appeared in West Mitchell. It was published by Tom Atherton and was the forerunner of the present Press-News.

Religion was not overlooked. The Free Will Baptists held the first religious service in 1854. In West Mitchell the Baptists built a church of Gothic design. It stood at the top of the hill and was surrounded by maples and pines. A Methodist church and a Congregational church were founded in Mitchell in 1857. Those buildings still stand. In 1873 a Catholic church was built. It was later moved to Osage. The Lutheran church was organized in 1937 and uses what was once the Methodist church.

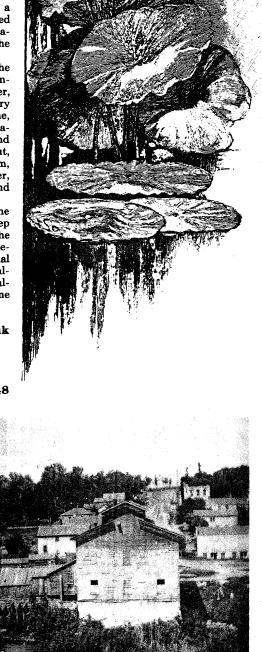

Mitchell produced many leaders. In the early days the names were Chambers, English, Coap, Fey, Schulte, Blackman, Klinger, Glassel, Becker. Also appearing in the story of business development are Archie Prime, Cheney, Tyson, Sweatt (a name later associated with Honeywell), Stacy, Piper Joy, and still later Bennett, Parkhurst, Stokes, Trout, Bamford, and in the present day Grimm, Adams, Voight. Did we miss Vulk, Sawyer, Duncan, Vanderpoel? The list goes on and

But there's life in the old town yet. The Lutheran church and the Booster Club keep up the community projects. The town has the best fireworks ever each year and the homemade ice cream at the annual summer social is special. It was built by rugged individualists, almost destroyed by rugged individualists and it will keep on going with this same rugged spirit.
