his genius. I saw him on the battle field of Waterloo, where fortune and fate combined to wreck the fortunes of their former king. I saw him at St. Helena, with his back crossed behind him, gazing out over the sad and solemn sea. I thought of the orphans and widows made—of the tears that he shed for his glory, and of the woman who ever loved him, whom he drove from his heart by the coldness of his ambition. And I said I wish I had never been a Frenchman. I wish I had worn worn wooden shoes. I wish I had never lived in a hut with a thatch growing over the door, and my cheeks growing purple in the glare of the autumn sun. I wish I had never been that peasant, with my wife by my side, knitting and my children died out of the sky—with my children upon my knees and my hands about me. I would rather have seen that man and gone down in the tongueless silence of the tomb, than to have been the subject of a theatrical impersonation of force, known as Napoleon the Great. Loud and renewed applause.

to its approval. The bill proposed in the usual form for appropriation required for the support of the during the next fiscal year. If it had no other provisions it would have my prompt approval. It is, however, further legislation, but which as it is to appropriate which are requisite for efficient performance of of the most necessary of the government involves blots of the gravest character. The section of the bill is amendatory statute now in force in regard to authority of persons in civil, military and naval service of the United States, at places where any general or special election is held in any State. The statute was adopted February 25, 1874, after a protracted debate in the Senate and almost without opposition in the House of Representatives by the present votes of both of the leading political parties of the country and became law by the approval of President Grant. It was re-enacted in 1874 in amended statutes of the United States, Sections 2002 and 5528, which are as follows: Section 2002, No military or naval officer or other person engaged in civil, military or naval service of the United States shall order, bring, or have under his authority at a place where any general or special election is held in any State, unless it is necessary to repel armed enemies of the United States or to keep peace at the polls. Section 5528.—Every officer of the army or naval service of the U. S. who orders, brings, keeps, or has under his authority or control any troops or armaments at any place where a general or special election is held in any state unless such force be necessary to repel armed enemies of the U. S. or to keep the peace at the polls shall be fined not more than $5,000 or suffer imprisonment at hard labor not less than three months nor more than three years, the amendment proposed in this statute in the bill before me omits from both of the foregoing sections the words "or to keep the peace at the polls." The effect of the adoption of this amendment will be considered first upon the right of the United States government, to call out military force to keep peace at elections for members of Congress and to prevent "upon the right of the government by civil authority to protect these elections from violence and fraud. In relation to the actions of the statute above quoted the following provisions of law claiming to use military power at elections are now in force—Sec. 5528, "No officer of the army or navy of the United States shall preside or fix the time of an election or in any manner attempt to procure the return of a vote or in any manner influence the qualification of voters in any State or in any any person willfully violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $10,000 or imprisonment not exceeding 2 years, or both. This act passed the Senate.

This is but half of Hayes's veto and we are obliged to go to press.

LAW SUIT SETTLED.

CLEVELAND, April 29.—Judge Tibbals of the court of common pleas Summit county, made the following important order in the case of trustees vs. Atlantic & Great Western railroad company and others, whereby the entire litigation between Gen. J. H. Devereux, the receiver and the United States Rolling and Stock company is taken from the courts. The contract of settlement is as follows and is satisfactory to all parties. The receiver shall pay the rolling stock company on or before the 15th of May 1879, one hundred thousand dollars on account of claims. Receiver further agrees to pay from and after January 18th 1880, not less than $7,500 per month on certificates which have been issued to the rolling stock company.

DEAD.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Congressman Rush Clark, of Iowa, died suddenly at his rooms this afternoon, after an illness of only a few hours. Mr. Clark was in good health yesterday, and on Saturday occupied his usual seat in the House of Representatives. He was taken sick at three o'clock this morning with an attack of meningitis, and although prompt medical aid was summoned he continued to suffer extremely and died after twelve hours illness. The news of his death was generally circulated this evening, and is received with a universal expression of sincere sorrow.

Special Election Notice

WHEREAS, a petition signed by a majority of the resident freehold tax-payers of the city of Iowa City, Johnson county, Iowa, has been presented to the City Council of said city, asking that the question of the construction of a line of railway from Iowa City and Western Railway Company to Iowa City and Western Railway Company, voting an additional tax of one and one-half per cent, on the taxable property of Iowa City for the year 1879, said taxes to be collected for the ordinary taxes levied in the year 1879, submitted to a vote of the electors of Iowa City.

Therefore, in accordance with the provisions of the constitution of Iowa, notice is hereby given that a special election will be held in the places state in said city on the 20th day of May, A. D. 1879, at which time the question of voting an additional tax of one and one-half per cent on the assessed property of Iowa City, for the construction of a railway from Iowa City westerly and known as the Iowa City and Western Railway, will be submitted to a vote of the electors of said city upon the following propositions:

- "But it is expressly provided that no tax shall be levied for the year 1879, if the line of railway is constructed and completed from the south line of Iowa City to a point on the Muscatine and Western Railway in English Valley, at or near the south line of Johnson County, and the terminus of said Muscatine and Western Railway westward to the coal fields at Webster, in Keokuk County, Iowa, and the failure to so build said railway for the year 1879, said tax shall be void and not collectable. The said election will be held on SAID 20th DAY OF MAY, 1879, at the following places: In the First Ward at the Summit House, Dubuque St., in the Second Ward at the Gas Office, Clinton St., Third Ward at V. Grissell's, Dodge St., Fourth Ward at John Adelsheim's, Main St., in the Fifth Ward at Mrs. McDonald's, R. L. & F. Depot.

At the said election the ballots shall be printed "For Taxation," or "Against Taxation," and if a majority of the voters at such election are for taxation, the question of voting such tax shall be deemed to be sustained and the said tax of one and one-half per cent, upon the assessed valuation of the taxable property of Iowa City shall be levied, collected and paid to the Iowa City and Western Railway Company in accordance with the above conditions, as provided by law. HON. RUSH CLARK.

The announcement of the death of Hon. Rush Clark, yesterday, at his rooms in Washington City, aroused a profound feeling here: It was known that he was in his seat in the House and attentive to his duties on Saturday, so that he literally died at his post.

Mr. Clark was born in Schellsburg, Bedford county, Pa., October 1st, 1834, and was one of a family of nine sons and daughters of John and Mary Smith Clark. He was educated at Ligonier Academy and Jefferson College, where we believe he was a class-mate of the Rev. S. M. Osmond and shared with him the oratorical honors of the college. He graduated in 1853, came to Iowa City, read law with his brother George W. and was admitted to the bar. In 1854 he had editorial charge of the Iowa City Republican, and contributed to its columns the force and grace which characterized them in that hot political fight which ended with the election of James W. Grimes to the Governorship. In 1859 he began a service of two terms in the Iowa House, of which he was elected Speaker in 1862. Work at the head of the House broke down his health and he was compelled to forego professional labor for a time. He was restored and resumed active practice, returned to politics in 1875, being re-elected to the House where he led the movement which ended in making Governor Kirkwood Senator by a series of brilliant political coups which were devised by Mr. Clark. Out of this came the first political reward commensurate alike with his merit and party service, for it secured his nomination to Congress, and his election and re-election. His career is shortened at its best estate and in all circles at his home there is a feeling of regret. He was noted for his uniform courtesy in that most uncourteous of callings, politics, and we are glad to be able to say, speaking for his political foes, that they recall no instance in which upon the stump or elsewhere he outraged wantonly the honest convictions of an opponent. His nature was not robust to coarseness but was full of fine veined sentiment, and his methods betrayed a philosophic finesse, rather than a rough direction.

A telegram received by his brother to-day, gives notice that the Congressional committee will leave Washington to-morrow to escort the remains here for interment. The vacancy in the House will have to be filled by special election of which the Governor must give ten days notice. The Gazette and other papers have spoken of it as to be filled by appointment by the Governor. This is incorrect.

IOWA IN MOURNING.

Sudden Death of Hon. Rush Clark.

Sketch of the Career of the Departed Congressman,

Of Whom the State of Iowa was Justly Proud.

It is needless to say that this city was shocked, yesterday, with the telegraphic announcement of the serious illness of Hon. Rush Clark, followed in a few minutes thereafter with another dispatch bringing intelligence of his death; and upon us now devolves a painful and melancholy duty—one from which a bruised heart involuntarily shrinks, for there had existed for years between the writer and the deceased an attachment that knew no estrangement—and a heart swelling with anguish and bowed down under the weight of a great sorrow, submissively yields in unbroken silence to the inexorable mandate, and feels like leaving to others the task of reciting the achievements and extolling the virtues of the departed with the "tender partiality of bereaved affection."

Hon. Rush Clark was born at Shellsburg, Bedford county, Penn., Oct. 1, 1834, and was therefore in his forty-fourth year when he died. He graduated at Jefferson college, Pennsylvania, in 1853, and came to this city immediately after graduation, being admitted to the bar in the Fall of the same year. He at once entered actively into the practice of his profession in connection with his brother, Capt. Geo. W. Clark, and by his energy, talents and superior attainments soon won for himself honorable distinction at the bar, composed as it was then and is now of men of marked ability and profound legal learning. In connection with his extensive and rapidly growing practice, and at the earnest solicitation of his personal and party friends, he consented to assume temporarily the editorial management of the REPUBLICAN, which was then the leading returning in the spring with health completely restored. In 1867 he formed a law partnership with Judge Wm. J. Haddock with whom he has been ever since associated in business and between whom there has always subsisted the tenderest feelings of sympathy and attachment.

In 1876, when it was important that Johnson county should be represented by a republican delegation in the legislature on account of the candidacy of Gov. Kirkwood for the Senatorial succession, Mr. Clark, much against his inclinations, and to the detriment of his personal and business interests, consented to accept the nomination for representative which was unanimously tendered him. The canvass was hotly contested but he was elected by a handsome majority, and did much in shaping the legislation of that session. He was nominated by the republicans as a candidate for Representative in the Forty-fifth congress and was elected by a large majority, and was re-elected to the Forty-sixth congress, his second term commencing on the 4th of March last.

Death's shaft has smitten us like a flash of the lightning. With appalling suddenness our gifted friend, rejoining in the fullness of matured powers, with professional eminence attained, and political ability just developing into comprehensive statesmanship, is beckoned by the shadowy hand and the gates close behind him forever. Here, where he was so well known and greatly beloved, the sombre shadow of sorrow is depicted upon every countenance, and tears come unbidden to the eyes of strong men. During the two last winters we were with him in Washington, his constant companion, and, therefore, can speak advisedly of how faithfully and conscientiously he performed his quiet official duties. He labored unflinchingly and with unflinching zeal for a constituency by whom he was dearly loved.

Rush Clark was no ordinary man. Nature had endowed him with superior mental faculties, which had been carefully cultivated, and he was therefore able to bring to the high position to which he was called

THE FEELING IN WASHINGTON. Associated Press. Davenport, April 28. A man Rush Clark, of Iowa, died suddenly at his rooms to-day after an illness of only a few days. Mr. Clark was in good health, and on Saturday he held his usual seat in the House of Representatives. He was taken ill at 10 o'clock this morning with a severe attack of meningitis, and although medical aid was summoned and continued to suffer extremely after twelve hours illness, his death was general this evening, and is receiving universal expression of sorrow.

Crows on a Field.

In Wilton, Fairfield county, Connecticut, a few days ago, a man of Dr. Turney threw a large quantity of wild cherry pits which were soaking in brandy since Sunday a large flock of crows came along and made a heart-breaking noise, and the consequence was that nearly every crow became as a fiddler. Some were around the field and fire, and apparently insensible, would fly up in the air, and then fall to the ground, in many instances breaking their necks. The birds were captured and the people had a great deal of fun out of the affair.

In connection with his extensive and rapidly growing practice, and at the earnest solicitation of his personal and party friends, he consented to assume, temporarily, the editorial management of the REPUBLICAN, which was then the leading Whig paper of the State, and notwithstanding he had not yet emerged from his teens, he displayed such ability as a writer and sagacity as a politician that he attained in a brief period a reputation circumscribed only by the State boundaries. He was elected to the legislature from this county in 1860, being then only 26 years old, but he was at once accorded a high position and maintained it throughout the session by his commanding ability. He was re-elected in 1862, and was chosen Speaker of the House, being, probably, the youngest man ever called upon to preside over the deliberations of a legislative body in this State. In this position he distinguished himself by his perfect familiarity with parliamentary law and usage, impartiality in his decisions, and the rapidity with which he dispatched public business, his administration being so eminently satisfactory in every respect that he was ever after accorded unmeasured praise. An incident occurred while he was Speaker of the House which was only recently the subject of conversation between the writer and a prominent politician of this State. It was on the occasion of the presentation to the State of the flag carried by the gallant Second Iowa through the pitiless storm of iron hail at Fort Donelson. Speaker Clark, in behalf of the State, accepted the torn and tattered ensign in a speech, which, our informant says, he never heard surpassed, and which aroused a perfect blaze of excitement and enthusiasm among the large multitude assembled to witness the interesting ceremonies.

At the expiration of his second term in the legislature, his name was presented before the republican congressional convention as a candidate for congress, his most formidable competitors being the lamented General Saml. Rush Clark was no ordinary man. Nature had endowed him with superior mental faculties, which had been carefully cultivated, and he was therefore able to bring to the high position to which he was called abilities of a high order. He was a man of warm impulses,—devoted in a marked degree to his family and friends—his integrity was unquestioned; his patriotism lofty, and Iowa to-day mourns the loss of one of her most gifted sons. He leaves behind him a tender and affectionate wife and four children, for whom our sympathies go out this day, and with them we mingle our tears of sorrow over the cruel stroke which deprives them of a tender and affectionate husband and father and us a friend whose memory we shall ever cherish.

Veto Message.

President Hayes sent to the House of Representatives to-day a message giving his reasons at length for withholding his approval of the army appropriation bill. Only a portion of it was received here in time for insertion in our columns, and as there is a press of other matter we are compelled to omit it.

At the expiration of his second term in the legislature, his name was presented before the republican congressional convention as a candidate for congress, his most formidable competitors being the laurented General Sam. A. Rice and Hon. J. B. Grinnell, the choice of the convention falling upon the last named gentleman, although Mr. Clark received within six votes of enough to nominate and doubtless would have been the nominee had not pressing business engagements necessitated his absence in the East. In 1861 he was appointed by Governor Kirkwood a member of his staff with the rank of Lt. Col., and rendered valuable assistance in the organization of troops for the suppression of the rebellion. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of the State University in 1862-66, and that great institution of learning never had a more unselfish and devoted friend. In 1865 his health became very much impaired, being threatened with consumption, and through the advice of his physicians he went south where he remained during the winter of 1865-66, us a friend whose memory we shall ever cherish.

Veto Message.

President Hayes sent to the House of Representatives to-day a message giving his reasons at length for withholding his approval of the army appropriation bill. Only a portion of it was received here in time for insertion in our columns, and as there is a press of other matter we are compelled to omit it.
