JUDGE GIBBONS IS DEAD IN CHICAGO

Former City Attorney of Keokuk, and Editor of the Constitution,
 Passed Away Yesterday Morning.

WAS WELL KNOWN HERE

His Sister-in-Law Mrs. Celestine Gibbons and Mrs. T. W. Agnew Will Attend
 Funeral.

Judge John Gibbons of Chicago former editor of the Keokuk Consti- tution and city attorney of Keokuk, died suddenly in Chicago Sunday morning. His death was due to heart trouble, and occurred at the Presbyterian hospital where he had been operated on earlier in the week for a slight abdominal trouble. Judge Gibbons was one of the best known of local attorneys in the earlier days of Keokuk, and is remembered by many of the older residents.

July 17, 1876, John Gibbons, H. W. Clendenin, George Smith and Thomas Rees bought the Constitution from Judge Cloggett's estate. Judge Gibbons was the editor of the paper for four years, when on April 17, 1880, he sold his interests to Smith, Clendenin and Rees and moved to Chicago. Judge Gibbons was city attorney of Keokuk for several terms, and also represented Lee county in the legislature.

Judge Gibbons was in Keokuk a couple of years ago looking after his interests in a lawsuit being tried in the district court then.

Mrs. Celestine Gibbons of this city is a sister-in-law of Judge Gibbons. Mrs. T. W. Agnew, left this afternoon to attend the funeral in Chicago Wednesday

Funeral in Chicago.

The following obituary notice is taken from the Chicago Herald: Judge John Gibbons, who had been on the circuit court bench of Cook county since 1893, died at the Presbyterian hospital yesterday morning.
 He had undergone a slight abdominal operation Thursday, but the immediate cause of death was heart trouble.
 The judge is survived by a widow.
 He has no other near relatives in Chicago. The funeral will be held from the late residence, 1417 North Dearborn street, Wednesday morning, with services at the Church of the Immaculate Conception at 10 o'clock. The burial will be at Calvary. The sermon probably will be preached by the Right Rev. John Cavanaugh, president of the Notre Dame university. The judge was an alumnus of that institution, and had received the degree of L. L. D. from it.

Had Long Fought Illness.

Judge Gibbons had not been in good health for a number of years. As long as fifteen years ago he went to Colorado to recuperate, and while there he was stricken with pneumonia. When the crisis of that had passed he suffered a stroke of apoplexy. His friends then thought death was at hand, but the judge had sufficient reserve strength to throw off both attacks.

Up to the time he was taken to the hospital in his last illness ten days ago, the judge and Mrs. Gibbons were planning to take a trip to a warmer climate when they were able to do so Mrs. Gibbons' health also had been unsatisfactory.

Judge Gibbons was the central figure in an unusual judicial proceeding about a year and a half ago, when special counsel in the gas suit sought to have him give up jurisdiction of the cause because he was no longer sitting in a chancery court.

Case Assigned to Another.

As the case originally had come before him he refused to surrender it, justifying his position by saying the petition of the city's lawyers was in a sense a personal attack on him.
 An appeal was taken to the chief justice of the circuit court, who, after some deliberation, ordered the case transferred to another judge.

Judge Gibbons was born in County came to this country in 1866, and was graduated from Notre Dame in 1868.

Follower of Blaine's.

Until 1884 the judge had been a democrat. In that year his admiration for James G. Blaine, who was the republican nominee for the presidency, took him over into the republican party, where he remained until his death.

For a number of years the judge was editor of the Chicago Law Journal. He was the author of a work on "Rights and Wrongs of Property and Labor," and he edited five volumes of American Criminal Reports.
