OBITUARY

Hon. Wm. Lamme Died at Mt. Pleasant
 Yesterday Morning.

Another of Iowa's earliest pioneers is gone. The telephone brought us intelligence yesterday that Hon. Wm. Lamme died at the place named at 8 a. m. He was ill but a day or so and his sudden death was a sad surprise to his family and friends.

Mr. Lamme was born in the east in 1814 and came to Iowa in 1833, one of the very first actual settlers to tread its soil in this region. He settled in the then unbroken wilderness in what is now
 Union township near the middle Augusta road and proceeded to open a farm.
 Here he lived in quiet, gradually accumulating a modest property and rearing his family in comfort. He continued to reside on the farm until three years
 when he removed to the home of his son Wm. Lamme, Jr., about three miles from Mt. Pleasant, where he spent his declining days and where his death occurred.
 He was an ardent republican and was elected by that party to the 15th general assembly of Iowa and filled his place with ability and honor. He was a kind accommodating neighbor and a friend to all in distress and need and possessed the confidence and esteem of his neighbors in a marked degree. He leaves to mourn him his widow, a daughter of Samuel Elliott, another Iowa pioneer, and three children; the son at whose home he died and two daughters, Mrs Benjamin Seamans and Mrs Frank Blakeway. His funeral will be held this afternoon at three o'clock from the Long Creek church on the Agency road, the sanctuary which he always attended while living at his old home.

John H. Porter, an old citizen of Burlington, for some time out of active life,

Foster selection weather prediction the Garden Grove press says: "As this little storm (from Michigan) proceeds on its way eastward it will be followed by two cold waves, of the elements and one for the demit and Governor Gear will soon follow the procession en route for his seat under the dome hard by where Old Probabilities deals out the daily weather."

The delivery horse of Mr. Lagomarcino took it into its head yesterday morning when the central station hose cart was tearing along Main street to try a job. It made good time for a while, when it concluded that a horse of its station in life had no business to indulge in racing and quietly went home. Sensing the horse that it didn't break a strap, nor dash a spoke.

Two Small Fires.

Yesterday was a bad day for fires. Ice tried to conflagrate, but it didn't flagrate more than a few dollars worth either case. The boys were merely led out for exercise, but they resided promptly and gallantly every one and we have a faint idea that the insurance men would feel less happy to see the department been less active.

The first alarm was sounded at nine o'clock yesterday morning. One of the station-houses in the C., B. & Q. tracks just north of the roundhouse was on fire. The little building was pulled down and the fire put out in that manner.

At eleven o'clock a. m. another alarm was given. One of the chimneys of Mr. J. Smither's residence on Summer street started a self-cleaning process by self-combustion and was emitting smoke and sparks something similar to the smoke stacks of a Mississippi river steamer. It is soon persuaded that such riotous proceeding was not becoming to a decent and respectable chimney and settled quietly down into decorous and sedate behavior. The roof was slightly scorched. Damage light.

Coming Storms.

Tomorrow's HAWK-EYE will contain a lot of Foster's forecasts of some severe winter weather in the not far distant future, in which he gives the public some good advice about making preparations for a storm period of more than ordinary proportions and intensity. He gives some intimations this morning of coming

No Humbug!

Anyone desirous of purchasing a piano or organ would do well to see J. L. Ellery at once, for he is unquestionably sincere when he tells you he is closing out the stock at 402 Jefferson street, at wholesale prices. The goods are all new and they must be sold. This is a bona fide sale, and Mr. Ellery means just what he says. Goods sold on time; $500.00 piano for $195.00; $150.00 organ for $75.00; $100.00 organ for $55.00. Everything sold by this house is fully warranted for five years.

Funeral of Wm. Lamme.

The funeral of Wm. Lamme at Long Creek church Sunday afternoon, was attended by a large concourse of people, some of whom came from long distances to pay their respects to one whom they held in such high regard. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Stryker, who was assisted by Rev. Dr. Rowley, of the Danville Congregational church and Rev. Mr. King, of the Danville Baptist church. The services were very impressive. His remains were buried in the Long Creek cemetery.

Keep Up the Signs.

Who of our merchants would think of keeping their signboards up only a part of the year? As the Columbus Junction Safeguard puts it: "The practice of advertising a little now and then may be of some benefit, but as a contemporary remarks, 'it is only a drop in the bucket compared to a standing advertisement in the columns of an influential and respectable newspaper.' All the prosperous business men to-day, who have made their money legitimately, have done it by

The Charity ball promises to be very great success. The charitableness of our population are as to the utmost and it is expected that a household will be unrepresented. divine Terpsichore will never have sweeter homage paid her than on this occasion. Burlington's old and young folks will unite to make the evening of great social and greater charity success, and the ladies who first conceived the plan and who are so gallantly striving to bring it to a successful issue, deserve the highest praise. Union Hall never has witnessed a finer, and I hope and wish, never as larger assemblage.

We shall, until Friday, the day of the great event, continue to give suggestions and hints as may appear necessary to keep everybody posted as to what is going on and what may be expected. To-day we give the full, complete revised list of the committees. There are two, the honorary committee pointed by the ladies to help in their charitable enterprise by selling tickets, etc., and the union committee, on which devolve the most responsible and flattering duty to see that the ball is a success, that no gentleman's quadrille or a waltz remains unperformed, that the ventilation is not in league with the doctors, etc. This is

Death of Wm. Lamm.

The death of Wm. Lamm, Sr., at the home of his son-in-law B. B. Seasons, east of this city, was quite unexpected to his many friends. We have not learn- ed the particulars of his death nor do we know the facts as to his interesting per- sonal history. We only know that Mr. Lamm came to Henry county some four years ago from Des Moines county where he had lived since early pioneer days, and where he had been greatly respect- ed and often honored by all who knew him and by the people of Des Moines county. Mr. Lamm served with John H. Gear in the legislature of the state as representative from Des Moines county. He was a man of much force of character and warm personal attachments, and we see from the Hawkeye that his funeral Sunday afternoon at his old home south from Danville was largely attended by former neighbors and life-long friends. Since living in this county Mr. Lamm made many friends by his frankness, di- rectness and sincerity, and his intelli- gent and active interest in all public matters. In the last campaign he was especially gratified by the success of his old associate John H. Gear in his elec- tion to Congress. Few men could relate personal reminiscences with more vivid- ness and force than Mr. Lamm, and to him we are indebted for some of the clearest and pleasantest impressions we have of the public men of Iowa in an early day. We will have an obituary of his life for the readers of the JOURNAL next week.

The many friends, old and young of Master Ralph Woolson will greatly regret to learn of his serious illness.

1886

Sketch of the Life of the Late Hon. William Lamme.

(Burlington Hawkeye.)

Death's work of thinning the ranks of the pioneers of our county and state goes steadily and relentlessly on. More than five decades have passed away since those sturdy few began the difficult and hazardous work of "opening up" and developing that wilderness known as the "Black hawk purchase;" and now, in the very shadow of the grand superstructure of civilization that stands upon the foundation they so bravely laid, they are one by one passing to the beyond of eternal rest.

One of the most recent of this noble little band to obey death's summons was William Lamme, who died at the residence of his son-in-law, B. B. Seamons, near Mt. Pleasant, on Saturday, November 6, 1886, after a very brief illness. He had been in very poor health for some time, but nothing serious in his ailments appeared to develop itself until the day previous to his death, when he was suddenly attacked with congestion. His sudden taking off was indeed a surprise to his family, his friends and physicians. He was conscious almost to the moment of separation, and talked rationally, giving intelligent directions and wise counsel to those of his family who were with him.

The greater part of William Lamme's life was spent as a pioneer. He was born near Cincinnati, Ohio, February 14 1814, and while he was yet but four years of age, his parents, William and Ruth Lamme, moved to Illinois, settling near Springfield. Soon after the close of the Blackhawk war, in 1832, his father purchased a tract of land where Nauvoo now stands. Here the family lived until the spring of 1836, when they crossed the river for settlement in Wisconsin—in that portion which is now known as the great state of Iowa. In the peculiar parlance of the early settlers, this entire region was then a "howling wilderness." Government lands in the "new purchase" had not yet been put upon the market. Burlington was but a very small, unpretentious village, and wolves and rattle snakes were the only "near neighbors" the settlers of the surrounding country had. Relatives of the family had preceded them here, among whom was Mrs. Lamme's brother, Judge William Morgan, who had settled in Burlington some four years previous. A son-in-law of Judge Morgan had taken up a claim about eight miles west of Burlington, just north of what is now known as the "upper" Augusta road. This claim Mr. Lamme's father purchased and made it his home until his death in 1840.

Early in the year of 1848 Mr. Lamme known as the upper Augusta road. This claim Mr. Lammie's father purchased, and made it his home until his death in 1890.

Early in the year of 1838 Mr. Lammie was united in marriage to Hettie, daughter of Samuel Elliott, and this woman traveled life's rugged path with him almost half a century as one of the most devoted helpmeets that ever doubled a man's joys or shared his sorrows. Soon after his marriage he purchased and settled upon a farm adjoining the old homestead, which he improved with his own hands until it became one of the most valuable pieces of property in the neighborhood. He continued to own and reside upon this place until some ten years ago, when he purchased property in Danville and moved there, remaining there until some three years ago when he went to Mt. Pleasant, or near there, to make his home with his son, Mr. Seamans.

Mr. Lammie was a firm in his opinions, but few enemies. He was unyielding in his views, but he could advance upon an opponent without being insultingly aggressive. His apparently rough exterior covered a heart full of the tenderest affection for his wife and children, and a profound respect and a hearty good will always went out to his fellow creatures. He dealt with the "small things" of life only when they were conducive to the good and welfare of himself or his friends. Petty quarrels and disturbances he disdained. He ever aimed at the comfort and good cheer of those around him, and in this his jovial nature and exceedingly happy faculty of "cracking jokes" made him always successful. He had a smile for every one and his cheerful, encouraging words have raised many a one's drooping spirits. In all business matters he was the soul of honor, and the day never passed over his head that he did not enjoy the entire confidence of all who knew him.

Although the only educational advantages he ever enjoyed were the limited ones afforded the youth of pioneer days, his broad mind, keen perception and assiduous devotion to the more solid literature of the day enabled him to acquire a storehouse of knowledge that many a man with a polished education might well covet. Politically he was a whig and then a republican, which party he associated himself with from its inception. He was a life-long opponent of the institution of slavery, and always arrayed himself against it in such a positive yet reasonable manner that there was no mistaking the sincerity of his views or the firmness of his attitude on that important question. He was very undimly devoted to the party which he believed consisted of that great national curse, his very last manifestation of that feeling being...

was very unflinchingly devoted to the party which he believed crushed out that great national curse, his very last manifestation of that fealty being the casting of a straight republican ticket four days before he died. Although he never sought office at the hands of his fellow-citizens, his party seldom failed to call him into its most important councils, where his sound judgment, his conversation and his far-reaching conception of right never failed of having weight. In 1873 he was elected to the legislature (15th General Assembly), where he served with credit to himself and honor to his constituents.

William Lamme's life being a useful one—in the sense that a good citizen, a true patriot and a kind and devoted husband and parent is a useful man—it was also essentially enjoyable to himself. He was not given to borrowing trouble, and he could always bring the bright side of life into view. He was in the broadest sense a domestic man. For his family he always had the deepest solicitude and the tenderest care, and had the satisfaction of seeing an ever happy contented wife, and his children grow up about him into honorable and useful manhood and womanhood. He leaves three children, viz: Mary J., wife of B. B. Seamans, a well-to-do farmer of Henry county; William H., a worthy scion of the old stock, who is also a farmer in the same county, and a near neighbor to his elder sister, and Clara Belle, wife of Frank Blakeway a thrifty and highly respected farmer living near Danville, this county. These and his wife are all that survive him. Of the original Lamme family that settled on the claim near Burlington, deceased was the last to go, and he obeyed the summons with a calmness and resignation that can only mark the ending of a truly noble life. To say that the memory of all such lives as his is enshrined in the hearts of all who knew them, is to feebly express the gratitude of good citizens for the grand work they have accomplished.

The funeral of the late William H. Lamme, will be held on Sunday, December 10, 1886, at 10 o'clock, a. m., being held at 10 o'clock, a. m., in the morning, and services in the afternoon at Long Creek church, near Danville, which was attended by a large concourse of relatives, friends and citizens, one grand daughter, Mrs. C. Walts, who resides in Missouri, being present. The services were conducted by Rev. Stryker assisted by Rev. Dr. Rowley, of Danville Congregational church, and Rev. King, of the Danville Baptist church. The pall bearers were Hon. John H. Gear, N. P. Snaderland and John M. Gregg, of Burlington, and Ellison Smith, R. Laycock and W. H. Stewart, of Danville. The remains were interred in Long Creek cemetery.
