thoughtful and scholarly discussion of the subject. Mr. Moscrip is a scholar and thinker; he left out declamatory surplusage and went directly to the material points of the case. To many of his propositions we agree—others we dissent from. In our general review of the discussion of the amendment which we shall make before the day of voting we shall notice somewhat that he said. His spirit and method were admirably broad and catholic.

LUMBER FREIGHT RATES.

How They Have Been Adjusted Between Keokuk and Other Points and the Missouri River—The Rates as They Now Stand.

Recently we announced that representatives of the various lumber firms of Keokuk had gone to Chicago to meet representatives of the lumber interests and traffic agents of the railroad lines for the purpose of re-adjusting rates on lumber from Keokuk and other points on the Missouri river. The conference was held at the Grand Pacific Hotel and there amendment and the fact that such a noted lady as Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the Woman's Temperance Union of the United States was to discuss it, drawing the large concourse of people to the church. After singing by a quartette composed of Messrs. Sheetz, Barnett, Edwards and Robertson, reading of a Psalm by Mrs. Rounds and prayer by Rev. C. H. Moscrip, H. Scott Howell introduced Miss Willard with the following remarks:

When Adam and Eve walked down the garden of Eden they were equally the recipients of its joys and pleasures. When the tempter came they were both weak enough to sin, both disobeyed the prohibitory command of their Creator, and each suffered alike the sad effects of the fall.

It is fitting—it is but right, then, that woman should be the coadjutor of man in all the schemes and all the labor for the redemption of the race.

And right nobly has woman done her part in this degree. In missionary work, in the spread of the gospel she has rendered its work efficient and in the cause of liberty she has been a powerful advocate. It was a woman who devised the plan which brought speedy emancipation to the slaves of England.

And now in this gigantic war with the spirit kings Backus and Gambrius, she is a most potential factor. She comes with her quick intuition of what is right; she comes with her heart aglow with hope and faith for the triumph for the truth; she comes without any trammels of party; she comes with the powerful weapon of truth and praise; she comes with gifted tongue and pen, to plead the cause that involves the life of the nation.

We have with us to-day one of the most eloquent and earnest and distinguished workers of the day, the president of the W. C. T. U. of the United States, and who has addressed the congress of the United States, the general assembly of many states. I have the pleasure and the honor alike to introduce to the audience Mrs. Francis S. Willard.

Miss Willard's address was an excellent one, and the lady created a very favorable impression. We will attempt to give but a brief outline of the points sought to be established by her in her argument favoring the passage of the prohibitory amendment. She asked whether it was right for a civilized government to receive revenue from the manufacture and sale of intoxicants the obvious mission of which was evil. She referred to the home-loving people of the nation, and asked if they desired to build up and foster at their doors institutions that were gigantic evils. She predicted that in twenty years from to-day the sentence of the people in regard to this matter would be as much changed as it was in the
