IN MEMORIAM.

JESSE BOWEN, born in Virginia in 1805, died near Iowa City, Tuesday March 14th 1882 in his 77th year.

His parents removed to Ohio in his childhood, and he grew up there on a farm until his eighteenth year, when he began the study of the honorable profession of medicine. His course completed he began practice in Indiana, where he married and lived several years. He early took an active part and had an intelligent interest in public matters. Attached to the Whig party and an ardent disciple of Henry Clay, he bore a great part in those public movements in behalf of that statesman which now make up the basis of many of the heroic political traditions of the Wabash valley. He was elected to the Indiana Senate and was active in laying the foundations of that commonwealth. He came to Iowa territory in 1840, settled in this city and began the practice of his profession and took part in the politics of the period, repeatedly leading the Whig party and by voice and pen enforcing its views of public policy and contributing to its energies. He was, we believe the first President of the State Agricultural Society, was a Taylor elector in 1848 and was selected as messenger to carry the vote of Iowa's electoral college to Washington. He was appointed Register of the State land office and laying aside that public trust lapsed into private life with the decay of the Whig party. When party ranks were reformed he was in the van of the new Republican organization, his house was the center of activity. To an hereditary hatred of slavery he united the clearest conception of the means of hardest warfare against it. Let it be said now in praise of his courage that when even Gerritt Smith quailed before popular opinion and slunk into the shelter of an insane asylum after the John Brown arrest at Harper's Ferry, Dr. Bowen, with the dauntless courage that was his highest attribute, faced a Nation in arms and when Seward and even Phillips and Garrison were frightened into seclusion, he walked abroad clothed on with the courage of his convictions. These things are old memories with us. This episode was abhorrent to our early convictions, but let it be recorded to the credit of the high souled man gone to such reward as awaits one who even faces death for the good of others as he saw that good to be. He returned to public life as a member of the Iowa Senate, was then appointed Adjutant General, an office which he surrendered early in the war to accept promotion to the post of pay master in the regular army, which he held through the civil struggle and until he resigned it some time after the war. His whole life betrayed the high blood of Virginia; self poised, brave, public spirited, with a dash of the cavalier in him, few men have so well filled the space in life allotted to them. Five daughters survive him, one the widow of ex Senator Howell, of Keokuk, is in Europe, Mrs. Cadwallader lives at Stockton, California, Mrs. A. Beach is in Washington City, Mrs. Bradford lives in Kansas and Mrs. Capt. Sterling in Iowa City.

THE NAIAD QUEEN.

The time for the opening of the Naiad Queen is fast drawing near, and the preparations, although extensive and fabulous are about completed.

The "Naiad Queen" is so unlike anything ever before presented here that it will no doubt prove an attraction on account of its novelty. A gentleman who witnessed its rendition in Cedar Rapids tells us that it surpasses anything he ever saw in scenic effect.

The managers have been careful to keep the tone and teachings of the Opera free from all objectionable features and in this respect it differs from most spectacular pieces, possessing all their points of beauty, splendor and fascination, and none in word or action that can be objected to.

The plot of the Naiad Queen may be easily stated, but not so easily comprehended as when elaborated by the 'immortals' in fact as some one fitly remarks, one should spend a week in reading Hans Christian Anderson and other fairy authors, to get one's self in condition to thoroughly appreciate the doings of these mythical beings. But to the plot.

The Goddesses of Justice and Mercy summon upon earth the immortal powers to aid them in testing the sincerity of human love and charity and their sojourn, is limited to a year, and its progress is indicated by the different seasons.

The operetta being divided into four parts, viz: Spring, Summer, Autumn and Winter. The Queen of the Naiads (Stalacta) is made supreme ruler, and the immortals resort to their glittering court to perfect their plans for co-operation. Various expedients are resorted to in testing the hearts of mortals; and lessons are taught to those who err, and virtue is in time rewarded. Their earthly mission being accomplished, they bid farewell to earth and are wafted back to regions of their own.

Mr. Clark has been untiring in his efforts to give the public an exhibition surpassing in beauty and mechanical effects anything we have yet seen and the citizens of Iowa City will be neglecting a duty to themselves as well as to encourage and support refined and elevating entertainment and the teachings of high and noble moral sentiments, if they do not patronize the Fairy Opera.

Opera House Iowa City, four evenings March 29d, 30th, 31st and 1st. Reserved seats 75 and 50 cents. Admission 35 cents.
