Gen. M. M. Trumbull, at one time a resident of Waterloo and afterwards of Dubuque, died at his home in Chicago at 10:45 Wednesday morning. He had been sick about two weeks and his death was the result of Bright's disease. He was born in London, England, in 1826, and at the age of 21 years sailed for the United States, being shipwrecked on the way. After landing he settled in Vermont where the first work he did was helping to build a section of railroad. He subsequently taught school and afterwards went to Virginia. Here the fact that he was a strong anti-slavery man, made his stay unpleasant and he came west and located in Iowa. He served through the Mexican war and afterwards studied law and became prosecuting attorney and afterwards member of the legislature. During the rebellion he was captain of the Third Infantry and also organized the Ninth Iowa Cavalry which he commanded during the balance of the war, and at its close was retired with the rank of Brigadier General. He was wounded several times but not seriously. At the close of the war Gen. Trumbull returned to Iowa and located at Waterloo, where he resumed the practice of law. A few years later he moved to Dubuque and during Gen. Grant's term as President, he was appointed collector of internal revenue for this district. Some 12 years ago he moved to Chicago where he has since resided. Of late years he became quite a well-known writer on sociological topics and also took a prominent position in G. A. R. circles in Chicago. He leaves a widow and four sons and two daughters,

WATERLOO, IOWA, MAY 16, 1894.

Gen. Trumbull Low.

General Mathias M. Trumbull, widely known in this city and Iowa, is lying dangerously ill at his residence, No. 408 La Salle avenue, says this morning's Chicago Tribune. He has suffered from Bright's disease for many years. This, with other complications, has brought about a condition which is causing his family and friends great anxiety. General Trumbull came to Chicago twelve years ago from Dubuque, Iowa, where he was actively identified with republican politics. He was an intimate friend of Gen. Grant, being associated with him in several campaigns. At the close of the war, when Gen. Grant was elected president, he remembered his old friend by appointing him collector of Internal revenue at Dubuque, and this position Gen. Trumbull held for twelve years. During this period Gen. Trumbull acquired a comfortable competency, and when he gave up his office he came to Chicago. Since that time he has devoted himself exclusively to literary work, occupying the somewhat paradoxical position of being both an enthusiastical republican and a free trader. He has been an active contributor to the Forum, Arena, and other periodicals, his articles treating on political economy and the labor question. His book on "The Free Trade Struggle in England" brought him considerable prominence.

Gen. Trumbull was born in London, Eng., in 1826, and came to America when 21 years old. He located in Iowa, and when the war broke out went to the front with the Third Iowa Volunteers. He afterwards organized the Ninth Iowa Cavalry. He was badly wounded in the battle of Shiloh and was made a Brigadier-General for heroic conduct on the field. He also served through the Mexican war with distinction.—Dubuque Telegraph.

General Trumbull enlisted from Butler county when the war broke out. After the close he located in Waterloo and formed the law firm of Ordway & Trumbull. Our recollection is that he remained here only some two years and then moved to Dubuque. From there he moved to Chicago, where he has put in his time as stated by the Telegraph, with the exception of making speeches occasionally to assemblages leaning towards anarchy—that is, of late years, it is reported.

Now that Kelly's army is out of Des Moines, the Register iterates the statement made ago that "if its editor was in Iowa" he would have hustled across the State on the Union train on which they entered Council Bluffs, with a company of militia, and would then have returned it to the Union Pacific. The Register says that $25,000 have been amply sufficient for the use of the track to train across the State. This is nice in theory and it will tickle the readers of the "alway" to know that had the editor of the paper been governor of Iowa he would have accomplished, at an expense of $500, what it is charged by the people of Iowa over $50,000. But then there arises the question: Since the Iowa law makes it to take a train on any of the lines in the State, how would "Governor" have managed this seizure if there are no "mule features" about so far as we are aware, by a penalty clause could be set? Gov. Jackson told Gen. Kelly at Council Bluffs that the train seized to convey his followers across the State of Iowa would land behind the bars at Fort Madison. What sort of a figure would the Governor have cut, after talking so much about the strain to Kelly, if he had taken himself for the purpose advised by the Register? The railroads had no right to refuse to carry the Kellys except on presentation of tickets as any other passenger would be required to do, and all this how they took, simply on account of the lessons of unrest which Kelly, Baker and the other agitators have been teaching in every speech they have made since they landed

Ringling Bros. had rather a good performance in Mt. Pleasant. During the noon performance, a lady riding on a swiftly galloping horse, slipped and fell to the ground, badly bruising and spraining her limb. She was taken away and will be unable to walk for some time. In the evening a girl, while balancing at the top of a twenty-foot bamboo ladder, fell on the upturned feet of a man, and was thrown from the ladder. She landed flat on

Gen. Trumbull Dead.

Gen. Matthew M. Trumbull, the Chicago dailies announce, died in that city on May 9th of Bright's disease. General Trumbull was born in London, England in 1826. He was educated with a view to entering the priesthood, but his active and stirring nature sought other pursuits, and while he was yet in his teens he became identified with the chartist movement. At the age of 21 he sailed for the United States, and had the experience of being shipwrecked. On landing he settled in Vermont and obtained his first work in helping to build a section of a railroad. The shovel and the wheelbarrow were the first tools he handled, but in a little while he gave these up, and took to teaching school in Vermont. He improved his spare time while in this occupation until he moved to Virginia, where his experience was not so pleasant. His strong stand on the slavery question made him many enemies, and he decided to move west, this time settling in Iowa.

Soon after his removal to Iowa the Mexican war broke out, and he enlisted and served through the campaign. On returning he took up the study of law. In 1854 he came to Clarksville and opened a law office and was Butler county's first lawyer. When the war broke out he enlisted as captain of Co. I of the 3rd Infantry. He was soon promoted to Colonel of the Ninth Cavalry, which he commanded until the close of the war, when he was retired with the title of brigadier general. He was wounded in several engagements and very severely at the battle of Shiloh. While his war record was of the very best, he never applied for and never received a pension.

At the close of the war General Trumbull returned to Iowa, settling in Waterloo, where he resumed his

Epworth League Convention.

The Epworth League convention for the Cedar Falls district was called to order at Plymouth, May, 8th, by the district secretary, in the absence of the other officers.

On motion, Rev. W. W. Robinson was elected chairman pro tem. Devotional services were held by Rev. I. D. Stubbs at 2 p. m., followed by a most excellent paper on the Christian Work Department by Miss Blanche Eckert of Northwood; the general discussion which followed brought out many valuable suggestions. Mrs. G. H. Betts of Allison then read a paper on the Mercy and Help Department. This paper was full of helpful suggestions and greatly helpful in its spiritual uplifting, the general discussion following brought out the practical sides of christianity.

The song service of the evening was conducted by Mrs. Jas. Clulow of Marble Rock, followed by the excellent address by Rev. J. B. Smith of Northwood. For an hour he held the closest attention of the audience, impressing the idea to the value of the "Epworth Ally" in the work of christianizing the world. The address was full of brilliant periods and impressing thoughts. Following this address Rev. J. W. Southwell of Eagle Grove spoke in behalf of the State League, urging more liberal support on the part of the local chapters and asking the united prayers for its success.

On May 9th the sunrise service at 5 a. m., was conducted by Rev. W. N. Brown. Although it was pretty early, yet about forty were present and a glorious spiritual time was had by all. At 8 a. m. Rev. W. E. Ross conducted the devotional service, fitly preparing the connections for the work before it. Mrs. T. E. Taylor read a paper on Helps for the Junior League Work.

law practice, and politics came in for a share of his attention. From Waterloo he moved to Dubuque, where he continued to practice law until 1868, when General Grant was elected president, and under his administration General Trumbull was appointed collector of internal revenue for the Third Iowa district, with headquarters at Dubuque. For eight years, during Grant's two terms, General Trumbull held this position and carried out its duties with marked ability.

He was the first representative in the legislature from Butler county, being elected in 1858.

About twelve years ago he located in Chicago and became an active worker in many and varied fields. His main work since coming to this city has been that of a writer on practical and sociological topics. His contributions to the Forum, the Monist, the Open Court, and other magazines and periodicals have made him well known on both sides of the Atlantic.

While not sympathizing with anarchy, General Trumbull was a warm personal friend of Fielden, who was released last year, and he served on the amnesty committee that went to Springfield and interceded for the release of the men convicted.

General Trumbull took an active interest in G. A. R. matters in the city, was a member of the U. S. Grant Post, and rendered valuable aid to soldiers in helping them to secure pensions. He was also president of the British American league and was recently elected president of the St. George's Benevolent society, a position in which he was to have been installed in a few days.

General Trumbull leaves a widow and four grown sons and two daughters.

the joke, by accident, turned upon himself:

One time late in the fifties the General had occasion to try a suit before one of the justices of the peace. In those days the justices, or as they were termed, the "squires," were rather illiterate, as a rule not knowing any more of law than they did of geology, and this one was no exception to the rule; but they almost invariably, if not befogged by counsel, made rulings based on common sense, law and the statutes to the contrary notwithstanding. Upon the case in question the opposing counsel was Orson Rice, who receives due attention further on. Mr. Rice was in a sort of contrary mood this morning, and kept making objections to testimony, finding something wrong with proceedings, taking exceptions to the rulings and interrupting his honor and everyone else. After a time the General called the attention of the court to the interruptions of proceedings. Finally his honor straightened up, raised his fist, and bringing it down with a thump on the table exclaimed, pompously: "Mr. Rice, you sit down!" Mr. Rice paid no attention, but kept right on talking regardless of anyone. The General saw that the 'squire was getting excited, so he said to him: "I wouldn't stand it; I'd make him keep quiet." Rice paid no attention. This was too much for his honor, who, with blood in his eye and shaking his finger at Rice sinisterly, hissed: "Mr. Rice! You sit down, or I'll put a quietus on you!" "Yes," interposed Trumbull, with a twinkle in his eye, "that's just what he wants—a quietus writ will put a stop to it." Rice soon again interrupted; and the justice, now fairly enraged, ordered: "Mr. Trumbull, you make out that writ of quietus at once! We'll see who's bossin' this court." The story leaked out, and the General many times was called upon to answer a joking query as to the writ of quietus.

General Trumbull had no difficulty in making friends, and when once made they were fast and sincere. George Poisal and Mr. Trumbull were intimate friends, and often had law business to transact. One day in April, 1857, George came into Trumbull's office, and in the course of conversation, remarked, that he had just received a new litter of pigs. "Well," says the General, "that's just what I want. You had better give me one of them!" "All right," answers George; you shall have one." The matter ran along for some months, and nothing was said about it. Finally, one day in November, George again chanced to be in the General's office, and stated that he had just killed a lot of fatted hogs. "By the way," remarked Trumbull, "I just happen to think of it. How is that hog you gave me, doing?" "That hog?" exclaimed Poisal, "that is the very litter I've been killing. You never called for it!" "Well," Trumbull answers, "I thought the matter over, and decided to let you fat it on shares." A general laugh was indulged in, and the following morning a fine dressed porker was sent to the General's house.

General M. M. Trumbull was elected to the lower house of the State Legislature in 1858, and was the first member elected from Butler county.

The fall of 1859 is noted by the arrival in Butler county of the lawyers, J. R.

cratic National Convention which nominated Tilden for President. In 1878 he was elected President of the State Bar Association. He has long ranked among the most eminent lawyers of the State and, had his party been in the majority, would have been elevated to the highest official positions.

MATHEW M. TRUMBULL was born in London, England, in 1826. He emigrated to America when twenty-one and for some time taught school in Vermont. He lived for a time in Virginia but his outspoken opposition to slavery aroused enmity which rendered it prudent for him to remove to a free State. He came to Iowa in 1853, studied law and began practice in Clarksville, Butler County. In 1857 he was elected to the House of the Seventh General Assembly on the Republican ticket, serving one term. When the Civil War began he raised a company for the Third Infantry and was appointed captain. In 1862 he was promoted to lieutenant-colonel. In the fall of 1863 he was appointed colonel of the Ninth Cavalry and at the close of the war attained the rank of Brigadier-General. In 1869 he was appointed by President Grant Collector of Internal Revenue which position he held for twelve years. He then removed to Chicago where most of his time was given to literary work. His book on "Free Trade in England" was a standard authority on that subject. He was an able writer on sociology, theology and reform topics. He contributed regularly to the Open Court, the Forum, the Monist and other periodicals and magazines. He died in Chicago May 9, 1894.

JOHN Q. TUFTS was born at Aurora, Indiana, July 12, 1840. His father removed to Iowa in 1852, taking up his residence in Cedar County near Wilton. The son was educated at Cornell College, Mount Vernon. He was elected on the Republican ticket to the House of Representatives of the Twelfth General Assembly, serving three terms by reelections. In 1874 he was elected to Congress on the Republican ticket, serving but one term.

ASA TURNER, "missionary patriarch," was born at Templeton, Worcester County, Massachusetts, July 11, 1799. He prepared for college at Amherst Academy and entered Yale, taking a three years' theological course and earning the means to pay his expenses. After graduating with the degree of B. A. he joined the "Illinois Association" of seven who pledged themselves to missionary preaching and the founding of a college. In 1830 Mr. Turner was sent to Quincy, Illinois, and soon occupied a field composed of a dozen counties, twice going as far north as the Galena lead mines. No statistics can record the manifold labors involved in this circuit; preaching, organizing churches, lecturing on temperance, founding antislavery societies, stimulating schools and the higher education, drawing young men and women of promise to seminary and college from

Civil War Union Brevet Brigadier General. He served during the Civil War first as the Lieutenant Colonel of the 3rd Iowa Volunteer Infantry, then as Colonel and commander of the 9th Iowa Volunteer Cavalry. He was brevetted Brigadier General, US Volunteers on March 13, 1865 for "faithful and meritorious services". A successful lawyer before the war, he returned to his practice at the conclusion of the conflict, and devoted his time to being a pro-labor law activist. (bio by: Russ Dodge)
