Storm 'David' in Caribbean

By ROBERT BEST

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (UPI) — Hurricane David spared Barbados the brunt of its 140-mph winds but the awesome storm today swept toward the Caribbean islands of Martinique, St. Lucia and Dominica.

Barbados residents and American tourists vacationing in the rich man's hideaway prepared Tuesday for a battle with the hurricane, but no significant damage was reported from fringe winds and rains as David churned north of the island on a path toward the Lesser Antilles.

Forecaster Joseph Pelissier, of the National Hurricane Center in Miami, said Martinique, the "Queen of the Antilles," was in the direct path of the hurricane, but added a last-minute zigzag could take the storm away from the French resort island.

David was expected to continue on its northwesterly path at about 15 mph, passing near mountainous St. Lucia, Martinique and Dominica — the northernmost of the neighboring islands — about daybreak.

At 3 a.m. EDT, the San Juan Weather Bureau said the hurricane was centered about 80 miles east-southeast of Martinique, near latitude 14.2 north and longitude 59.7 west.

An Air Force reconnaissance plane reported winds of up to 140 mph extended out from the center of the hurricane about 50 miles in all directions. Galeforce winds could be felt as far as 150 miles north and 100 miles south of David's center.

Forecasters billed David as one of the mightiest hurricanes of the century, and some 3,000 Barbados residents flocked to emergency shelters to wait out a possible direct hit by the storm.

But shortly before midnight Tuesday, a government broadcast said "Hurricane David is now a tropical storm" and told those who had taken refuge in the shelters to go home in the morning.

"Come dawn, there is the expectation that everything will be back to business as
