HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 28

BY FORD

A Resolution supporting the development of a standard medical school curriculum that ensures physicians receive training relating to racial and cultural bias.

WHEREAS, African-Americans frequently report experiencing a different level of medical treatment and care, regardless of their financial ability to provide payment, in connection with recommended treatment therapies; and

WHEREAS, this different level of medical treatment and care may contribute to the fact that the health status of African-Americans is significantly worse than that of other population groups; and

WHEREAS, an Institute of Medicine report in March 2002 concluded that population groups identified as racial and ethnic minorities received lower quality health care than did groups identified as Caucasian, including a reduced likelihood of undergoing bypass surgery and receiving kidney dialysis or organ transplants; and

WHEREAS, the American Medical Association has adopted a policy of zero tolerance toward racially or culturally based disparities in health care, has recommended the development of assessment tools to enable individual physicians and groups of physicians to identify and act on racial and ethnic disparities in health care, and has recommended that its membership regularly monitor and report on progress being made to address racial and ethnic disparities in
