

Be It Further Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be printed in the journal of the Senate and that the secretary of the Senate be directed to forward an engrossed copy to the family of the deceased.

J. A. NELSON,
B. J. HORCHEM,
C. W. WILTMORE.

The resolutions were adopted unanimously by a rising vote.

In moving the adoption of the resolutions Senator Nelson spoke in part as follows:

It was not my pleasure to be very well acquainted with ex-Senator Voorhees. He was a sterling character and a real business man. He set an example before the young people of today of what may be accomplished today in this land of ours. He was a man thrown out on the cold business world early in life and advanced steadily and gradually, showing what can be accomplished in this life and as such I commend him to the people of the state of Iowa. He was a man of good business qualities, and much energy. His life was composed of deeds not words. He died early in life, yet having lived a complete life, so to say.

Senator Wilson spoke as follows:

To my mind there is no occasion of such real profit in our senatorial careers as are these memorial occasions. It is with a peculiar sense of sadness that I say anything in reference to Senator Voorhees. During the Thirty-sixth General Assembly, among all the associates I have had in the six years—four sessions, none tied themselves to me with quite the firmness as does the association of Senator Voorhees. His sunny smile, his genial manner, his hearty handclasp are things that can never be forgotten; and after all, those are the things that make for success in life, not the accumulation of wealth, not the attainment of fame, but the fact that a man is right at heart is the only thing, fellow senators, that we take with us.

When you or I die, a few tears will be shed and soon it is all forgotten. Struggle against it as we will, how sadly true it is! May it be said of us as of our brother from Cass that as we enter the river of death we have as our pilot the captain of our salvation, may we hear not only the heavens ringing hallelujahs but the still small voice saying, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

FREDERICK TOWNSEND.

Senator Price, from a special committee, submitted the following report and moved its adoption:

Frederick Townsend was born in Albia, Iowa, July 1, 1863, and departed this life November 13, 1918. He was the son of distinguished parents and pioneers of the state of Iowa. His father, the late John S. Townsend of Albia, Iowa, was judge of the district court of Iowa from 1853 to 1863 and
