LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Chapter 6

CITY GOVERNMENT

For more information about city government, contact: Iowa League of Cities, 500 Southwest Seventh Street, Suite 101, Des Moines 50309; 515.244.7282; www.iowaleague.org/Pages/Home.aspx.

City government in Iowa's 942 cities is as varied as the cities' populations. However, all city officials from Des Moines (population 214,133) to Le Roy (population 11) must work to create policies, manage city moneys, comply with legislative requirements, and maintain adequate infrastructure no matter the size of their community.

By definition in the Code of Iowa, chapter 362, a city is any municipal corporation other than a county, township, school district, or special-purpose district. A municipal body must comply with the provisions outlined in the Code of Iowa, chapter 368, to incorporate as a city. According to 2020 census figures, of the state's 941 cities, a total of 499 had a population of fewer than 500.

While most cities have a mayor-council form of government, there are currently a total of six forms of municipal government in Iowa: mayor-council or mayor-council with an appointed manager; council-manager-at-large; commission; council-manager-ward; home rule charter; and special charter. The essential differences among these forms are how the legislative and administrative responsibilities are separated.

The typical size of an Iowa city council is five members. In each of Iowa's cities, the city council serves as the policymaking body and is responsible for managing the city's annual budget. Basic sources of revenue for cities include: property taxes, state-shared revenue, local option taxes, service fees, license and permit fees, and contracts from other local governments.

For city website information, access the Iowa League of Cities' Internet site at www.iowaleague.org.

COUNTY GOVERNMENT

For more information about county government, contact:
Iowa State Association of Counties, 5500 Westown Parkway, Suite 190, West Des Moines 50266; 515.244.7181;
www.iowacounties.org.

The origin of the American county is from the French word "conte," meaning the domain of a count; however, the American county, defined by Webster as "the largest territorial division for local government within a state of the U.S.," is based on the Anglo-Saxon county, sometimes called a shire. The head of the shire in the British Isles was the Shire Reeve, the origin for today's county sheriff.

Today, elected county officials in Iowa are the board of supervisors, recorder, treasurer, auditor, sheriff, and county attorney. The board of supervisors is the chief administrative body of county government. The board consists of either three or five members.

The functions and services of counties can be grouped into three categories: functions of state government which are administered by the county; services that are of a local nature; and internal administrative functions that the county performs for its own operation or on behalf of other local taxing jurisdictions.

County governments are required to provide a number of functions which are mandated by the state and which are administered much the same way in each county. These functions, and those who generally perform them, can be broadly categorized as follows:

- Election administration: auditor
- Social/human/health services: board of supervisors, chief executive officer of county mental health and disability service region, local public health directors, county veterans affairs directors, general assistance directors, and environmental health directors
- Recording of documents and vital statistics: recorder, GIS coordinators, and local IT administrators
- Prosecution of state laws and county ordinances: county attorney
- Licensing: treasurer and recorder
- Jail administration, law enforcement: sheriff
- Road maintenance: engineer

- Emergency services: emergency manager
- Assessments and zoning: assessor and zoning administrators
- Parks and recreation: conservation
- Tax collection: treasurer

The local services provided by counties can be broadly categorized under the following headings: public works services, social/human services, health services, and law enforcement.

The internal administrative functions performed by counties are: property tax administration, finance, and miscellaneous management and recordkeeping functions.

County government in Iowa has gone through many changes since Dubuque and Des Moines were the only counties in the territory, but most of those changes have taken place quite recently. In the last 35 years, counties acquired home rule powers, county funds were consolidated, human service programs were reorganized, the court system was taken over by the state, and enabling legislation was enacted to provide for the option of county government reorganization. Iowa currently has 99 counties.[*]

For contact information for county elected and appointed officials, access the Iowa State Association of Counties' Internet site at www.iowacounties.org.
