EDITOR'S INTRODUCTION

Contents. The annotations contained in this volume are a continuation of the annotations in Volume I and cover all of the decisions of the Iowa Supreme Court from the September, 1925, term, reported in Volume 200 of the Iowa Reports, to the May, 1940, term of the court, reported in Volume 227 of the Iowa Reports, insofar as the opinions have been released to the Reporter by the Supreme Court, together with a few released opinions which, when published in the Iowa Reports, will appear in Volume 228. Certain earlier cases scattered herein dealing with criminal matters were furnished to the Code Editor several years ago by Professor Rollin M. Perkins of the State University.

There have been added brief notes showing Attorney General Opinions and Iowa Law Review citations. In order to save space these citations have been condensed, e.g., '38 AG Op 67, 72, 115. A citation such as this is an equivalent of three separate citations and the searcher should inspect each of the pages cited. This is likewise true of the Iowa Law Review and Negligence and Compensation Cases, Annotated, citations in many instances.

The ALR and NCCA citations have been added to the respective annotations instead of using a table at the back of the book as was done in Volume I. It is believed that the insertion of these citations following the respective annotations, together with the other citations, will facilitate the use of this volume and save the searcher time used in referring to a table at the back of the book.

Former system followed. As was stated in the preface to Volume I, "Judge McClain was quite liberal in the preparation of his annotations. In other words, many annotations were inserted by him, not because they constituted direct constructions of the section of law in question, but because they had some fair relation to the subject matter of the section. The bar is familiar with this system and it has not been deemed wise to depart from it." The plan as thus stated has been continued in this volume.

Catchwords. The catchwords inserted at the beginning of each annotation follow the plan inaugurated in Volume I.

Folio lines. Folio lines in heavy black type at the top of the pages appear in a manner similar to the folio lines in the Code.

Analyses. The analyses under the various sections in Volume I have been used as nearly verbatim as possible in Volume II, both to aid the searcher and to provide continuity of the annotations between the two volumes. Because of extensive material in certain places, a number of new analyses have been added. For example, in the motor vehicle law, an entirely new motor vehicle act and the extensive number of cases applicable to certain sections therein required new analyses. In a few instances an analysis has been placed at the end of a chapter under a note covering cases generally applicable to the subject matter of the chapter, e.g., "Note 1 Contracts generally" at the end of chapter 420. The purpose of all these analyses is to expedite the searcher's use of this volume. In instances where the annotations under a particular analysis extend over several pages, the analysis entry has been repeated at the top of each page in order that the searcher will not be required to return to the page where the analysis is printed, and then tediously follow through several pages in order to determine the location of subject matter under a desired portion of the analysis—as is now necessary in certain parts of Volume I. Clear, black, distinct type has been used in connection with the analysis entries distinguishing the code section catchwords and the analysis entries. In the larger analyses page numbers in parentheses have been added to indicate the beginning page of the annotations under that portion of the analysis.

Cross references. Under various sections and with many of the analyses, cross references have been added to indicate places in this volume where related matters may be found, and cross references also show many instances where the same or similar subjects may be found in Volume I of the Annotations, altho it is assumed the searcher will usually refer to the material in Volume I where the section numbers are identical.

Cases. The cases covered in Volume II of the Annotations are as follows:
Iowa Reports, Volumes 200 to 227, inclusive (some cases from Volume 228)
North Western Reporter, Volumes 294 to 291
American Law Reports, Annotated, Volumes 39 to 120
Annotations to Supreme Court Rules. Since the Rules of the Supreme Court appear at the end of the Code, such annotations as apply to those rules have been added to this volume, beginning on page 2574.

Tables. At the back of this volume and just preceding the index are two tables inserted as a convenience to the users hereof. The first table is an abridged table of equivalent sections from the Code of 1935 to the Code of 1939 covering only those sections formerly carrying a combination figure-letter number and now carrying a decimal number. The other table is a corresponding section table from the Code of 1897 to the Code of 1939. Thus, if the searcher finds in the annotations either a section number referring to the Code of 1897 or a combination figure-letter number, he can immediately, by reference to one or the other of these tables, determine what is the equivalent section in the Code of 1939. The tables of corresponding sections covering the codes before 1897 are still available in the volume entitled “Tables of Corresponding Sections of Iowa Statutes”, published in 1925.

Index. Due to the fact that many common-law subjects are covered by the cases in this volume, as well as in Volume I—such subjects being very difficult, if not impossible, to locate in the annotations through the code index—a short annotation index to general common-law subjects has been added at the end of this volume. Its use is explained by a note preceding the index.

Future annotations. It is planned to follow this volume with cumulative supplements which will keep these annotations up to date.

CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF IOWA

Preamble—Boundaries.
Jurisdiction in civil cases. See under §3
Jurisdiction in criminal cases. See under §13449

Ownership of lands—accretions. The owner of land along the bank of a navigable stream is entitled to accretions to the land even tho such accretions extend over the exact spot where another person formerly owned land eroded by the river.
Bone v May, 208-1094; 225 NW 367
See Meeker v Kautz, 213-370; 239 NW 27

Boundaries—Missouri river—accretion and avulsion—presumptions. In an action involving title to land affected by changes in course of Missouri river, court recognized principles that boundaries established in the middle of the main channels vary as channels change by accretion, but that boundaries are unaffected where change takes place suddenly by avulsion; that land on Iowa side of Missouri river is presumed to be in Iowa, and that land left by recession of the river is presumed to be the result of accretion rather than avulsion.
Arnd v Harrington, 227-43; 287 NW 292

Change in boundary. The boundary line between Iowa and Nebraska changes by gradual erosion or accretion, but not by avulsion.
Bigelow v Herrink, 200-830; 205 NW 531

Dams—new high-water mark—title of state. The state of Iowa by erecting a permanent dam in the bed of its navigable river, and by maintaining said dam peaceably and uninterruptedly for a period of ten years, legally extends its title to the new high-water mark resulting from the erection of the dam; and especially may a private deedholder not complain when his deed, executed after the dam was erected, simply calls for land “up to the river”.
State v Sorenson, 222-1248; 271 NW 234

Lands under water—continuing ownership of land in place. The mere fact that land may disappear for a time, because river water enters a slough and spreads over it, will not destroy the ownership thereto as lands in place after the water recedes.
Sheldon v Chambers, 225-716; 281 NW 438

Sudden shifting of boundary river—affect. Principle applied that the sudden shiftings of boundary rivers do not change state boundary lines.
Dermit v School Dist., 220-344; 261 NW 636

I GUARANTY OF INDIVIDUAL OR PERSONAL RIGHTS

Appointment of nominated executor required unless disqualified. Altho a certain discretion lies with the probate court in the appointment of personal representatives, nevertheless an executor named in a will as the one in testator’s judgment best fitted to administer his estate should be appointed by the court in the absence of disqualification, which must be more than the objections of collateral relatives.
In re Schneider, 224-598; 277 NW 567
I GUARANTY OF INDIVIDUAL OR PERSONAL RIGHTS—concluded

Separate trials—right to waive. The statutory right of jointly indicted parties to have separate trials is not such a right that it cannot be voluntarily waived.

State v Moore, 217-872; 251 NW 737

II LIMITING INDIVIDUAL RIGHTS

Individual rights subservient to public welfare. The sanctity of the home and the right of every free man to occupy and enjoy the same unmolested is subject, as are all other individual rights, to the higher and greater right known as the public welfare.

Stoner v Highway Com., 227-115; 287 NW 269

Private property—use subservient to ordinary incidents of city or village life. A person who lives in a city, town, or village must, of necessity, submit himself to the consequences and obligations of the occupations which may be carried on in his immediate neighborhood, which are necessary for trade and commerce, and also for the enjoyment of property and the benefits of the inhabitants of the place, and matters which, altho in themselves annoying, are in the nature of ordinary incidents of city or village life and cannot be complained of as nuisances.

Casteel v Afton (Town), 227-61; 287 NW 245

Regulation of business—price fixing. Legislative authority to municipalities to adopt ordinances which provide for "fair competition" in personal service trades—trades in which services are rendered upon the person of an individual without necessarily involving the sale of merchandise—cannot constitutionally embrace authority to include in such ordinances a provision fixing the minimum price which may be charged for said services, because neither the state nor the municipality has constitutional power to fix such charges in view of Amendment XIV, federal constitution and of Art. I, §9, Constitution of Iowa. So held as to the business of barbering. And this is true tho the trade in question be subject to the police power of the state.

Regulation of profession—limitation on advertising. The right of the state, under its police power to regulate, in the interest of the public health, morals, and welfare, a medical profession, e.g., the practice of dentistry, embraces the right to place stringent limitations on the form and style of advertisements which the practitioner may legally employ in carrying on his said profession, even the right to prohibit the use of advertisements which, in themselves, are truthful. But the state must not act arbitrarily.

Craven v Bierring, 222-613; 269 NW 801

In re Cloud, 217-3; 250 NW 160

Police power—medicine and surgery. The practice of medicine and surgery is a proper exercise of the police power.

State v Hueser, 205-132; 215 NW 643

Cosmetology schools—charges for services of students. A statute defining cosmetologists as being persons who receive compensation for services and which provides that no person or corporation shall use any person as a practitioner of cosmetology unless the person is an apprentice or licensed cosmetologist, is an unconstitutional exercise of police power in requiring that students of cosmetology schools do gratuitous work while obtaining practical experience, as such requirement would be an arbitrary interference with private business and the right to contract and would impose unnecessary restrictions upon lawful occupations in violation of due process of law.

State v Thompson's School, 226-556; 285 NW 133

Police power—scientific difference as to efficiency of health measure. When it appears that there is a difference of scientific opinion as to the efficiency, desirability and reliability of a proposed public health measure, e.g., the tuberculin test for bovine tuberculosis, it necessarily follows that the door is open to the legislative department to adopt the theory to which it will apply its police power.

Pierre v Pierre, 210-1304; 232 NW 633

Loftus v Dept., 211-566; 232 NW 412

Panther v Dept., 211-868; 234 NW 560

Police power—due process as limitation. The due process clause of the federal constitution is no limitation on a legitimate and reasonable exercise by the state of its police powers. So held as to the statute requiring the testing of herds of breeding cattle and providing for the destruction of cattle found to be tubercular.

Peverill v Board, 208-94; 222 NW 535

Police power—regulation of curative agencies. The state may, under its police power, validly control the sale, distribution, and administration of an agency (e.g., tuberculin) which is the basis upon which rest the efforts of the state to eradicate bovine tuberculosis.

Fevold v Board, 202-1019; 210 NW 139

Police power—extending redemption period. Neither the federal nor state constitutional prohibitions against (a) the impairment of the obligations of contracts, or (b) the deprivation of vested property rights without due process of law, is violated by a statute (1) which is enacted during, and for the purpose of ameliorating, an existing public financial emer-
§1 BILL OF RIGHTS ART. I

Webb-Kenyon Act (27 USC, §§121, 122) and of the decisions of the federal supreme court thereunder, and especially in view of the 21st Amendment to the federal constitution (effective Dec. 5, 1933), it is futile to contend that the state, by investing the Iowa liquor control commission with the sole and exclusive right to import into the state alcoholic liquors, has transcended its police powers and thereby violated the due process, equal protection, and interstate commerce clauses of the federal constitution.

State v Arluno, 222-1; 268 NW 179

III FREEDOM OF CONTRACT

Cosmetology schools—charges for services of students. A statute defining cosmetologists as being persons who receive compensation for services and which provides that no person or corporation shall use any person as a practitioner of cosmetology unless the person is an apprentice or licensed cosmetologist, is an unconstitutional exercise of police power in requiring that students of cosmetology schools do gratuitous work while obtaining practical experience, as such requirement would be an arbitrary interference with private business and the right to contract and would impose unnecessary restrictions upon lawful occupations in violation of due process of law.

State v Thompson’s School, 226-556; 285 NW 133

Motor fuel and fuel oil—price-posting statute—non-infringement on contract right—non-discriminatory. The statute providing that every seller of motor vehicle fuel or fuel oil shall post prices and sell at not less than such prices does not infringe on right of contract or unjustly discriminate against motor vehicle fuel dealers.

State v Woitha, 227-1; 287 NW 99

IV DISCRIMINATION

Corporations—tax discrimination. See under Art VIII, §2

Discussion. See 22 ILR 736—Legislation favoring economic groups

Discrimination against nonresident alien. The state, in the imposition of an inheritance tax, may validly discriminate in favor of a resident alien and against a nonresident alien.

In re Anderson, 205-324; 218 NW 140

Restricted residence districts—discrimination—exemption to existing business. An ordinance establishing a restricted residence district and prohibiting the subsequent erection and maintenance therein of gasoline filling stations without a permit is not unconstitutional because the ordinance exempts from its operation an already established and maintained gasoline filling station.

Marquis v Waterloo, 210-439; 228 NW 870

Ford Hopkins v City, 216-1286; 248 NW 668

Local budget law—transfer of fund provisions.
State v Manning, 220-525; 259 NW 213

Timmons v Bank, 221-102; 264 NW 708; 299 US 621

Deficiency judgment limitation law.
Berg v Berg, 221-326; 264 NW 821

Chain store act of 1935—constitutional in part.
Tolerton v Board, 227-324; 288 NW 145

Right to kill animals—limitation. The statutory authority to kill a dog for which a license is required, when such dog is not wearing a collar with license tag attached, does not embrace the right to invade the premises and residence of the owner of the dog in order to effect such killing.
Mendenhall v Struck, 207-1094; 224 NW 95

Temporary obstruction of access to property—damages.
Conceding that a city in changing the course of a stream may, temporarily, substantially obstruct a property owner's access to his property, without liability in damages, yet the maintenance of such obstruction for two years is per se not a temporary obstruction, and evidence tending to exculpate the city is inadmissible.
Graham v Sioux City, 219-594; 258 NW 902

VI PROPERTY RIGHTS

Discussion. See 7 ILB 232—Legal status of American Indian and his property

Owner's right of disposal. Under ordinary circumstances one has the absolute right to dispose of his property as he pleases.
O'Brien v Stoneman, 227-389; 238 NW 447

Reasonable use permitted. The owner of property may always put his property to reasonable use, dependent upon the locality and other conditions.
Casteel v Afton (Town), 227-61; 287 NW 245

Use not to injure others. The ownership of property carries with it the obligation to so use the property that injuries to others will not result therefrom.
Casteel v Afton (Town), 227-61; 287 NW 245

Building permit for dog hospital—not license—revocability. A duly issued building permit is more than a mere "license"; and after a building permit is issued under a city's zoning ordinance to a veterinary surgeon who made full disclosure to the city of his plans to build a "dog hospital", with his own living quarters on the second floor in a "hospital" zoned district, and after the building inspector consulted the city attorney, and after veterinary surgeon had spent considerable money toward constructing the building, an order revoking the permit was illegal and reviewable by certiorari.
Crow v Board, 227-324; 288 NW 145

Right to kill animals—limitation. The statutory authority to kill a dog for which a license is required, when such dog is not wearing a collar with license tag attached, does not embrace the right to invade the premises and residence of the owner of the dog in order to effect such killing.

Temporary obstruction of access to property—damages.
Conceding that a city in changing the course of a stream may, temporarily, substantially obstruct a property owner's access to his property, without liability in damages, yet the maintenance of such obstruction for two years is per se not a temporary obstruction, and evidence tending to exculpate the city is inadmissible.

Citizens—challenging officers' official acts.
Public welfare lodges in citizens of a community the right to challenge the validity of an electric plant construction contract and to enjoin a municipal corporation and its officers from violating their duties and abusing corporate powers, if such construction contract is consummated without competitive bidding, made mandatory by statute.
Miller v Milford, 224-753; 276 NW 826

Officers—salary—power to change. The general assembly has plenary power to reduce the salary of any public officer unless such reduction is prohibited by the constitution—a public office not being property.
Smith v Thompson, 219-888; 258 NW 190
Injunction against labor union—no denial of freedom of speech and assembly. An injunction against officers of a trade union was void on its face as a denial of the right of freedom of speech and assembly because it prohibited unlawful interference with a company's business, mass picketing, intimidation and coercion, and going upon the company's premises without consent.

Carey v Dist. Court, 226-717; 285 NW 236

Political power. SEC. 2.

Additional citations. See under Art I, §25, Vol I; Art III, §1 (first)

Corporate governmental agencies—immunity from legal process and taxation. Immunity of corporate governmental agencies from suits and judicial process, and their incidents, is less readily implied than immunity from taxation.

First Tr. JSL Bank v Lehman, 225-1309; 288 NW 96

Nonviolation. A statute which requires a favorable vote equal to 60 percent of all the votes cast for and against a proposal to issue bonds in order to authorize them is not violative of the principle that political power is inherent in the people.

Waugh v Shirer, 216-468; 249 NW 246

Federal instrumentality—congress determines immunity from state laws. It is within discretion of congress to determine in what respects and to what extent its instrumentalities, for their proper functioning, shall be immune from legislation of state origin.

First Tr. JSL Bank v Lehman, 225-1309; 288 NW 96

Continuance under financial emergency. The legislative power of the state may, for the purpose of ameliorating an existing, public, financial emergency, constitutionally grant to a mortgagor, on equitable conditions, the right, in an action to foreclose the mortgage, to a continuance which is very materially in excess of that ordinarily permitted or sanctioned by law. ANALYSIS

I EQUAL PROTECTION OF LAW—CLASSIFICATIONS
II UNIFORMITY OF OPERATION
III SPECIAL PRIVILEGES

I EQUAL PROTECTION OF LAW—CLASSIFICATIONS

Additional citations. See under Art III, §30

Equal protection—allowable classifications. The general assembly in the enactment of the chain store tax act (46 GA, ch 75; C., '35, ch 329-G1) did not go beyond its concededly broad power to classify:

1. By classifying chain stores, generally, as proper subjects for an occupational tax.
2. By classifying certain of said stores as not subject to said tax.
3. By classifying the tax-paying stores into groups of ten or multiples thereof and graduating the tax progressively on each group—it appearing that none of said classifications were arbitrary—that the reason for each was manifest or reasonably discernible—that all owners of chain stores similarly situated were treated alike.

Tolerton et al. v Board, 222-908; 270 NW 427

Classification based on population. The general assembly may constitutionally make a law applicable to cities having a certain population and not applicable to cities having a lesser population, provided the subject matter of the law suggests some reasonable necessity for said distinction. So held as to an act providing for the government and management of municipal parks by a park board of ten members.

State v Darling, 216-553; 246 NW 390; 88 ALR 218

Bank shares—taxing officers acting contrary to law. The taxation of state and national bank shares at a higher rate than the shares of competing domestic corporations is violative of the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment and in excess of permission conferred by federal statute for the taxation of national bank stock.

Munn v D. M. Nat. Bank, 18 F 2d, 269
Knowles v First Nat. Bank, 58 F 2d, 232
First Nat. Bk. v Anderson, 269 US 341
Iowa Bank v Stewart, 214-1229; 232 NW 445; 284 US 269

Taxation of national banks—illegal change by auditor of assessment—effect. The act of a county auditor, on his own motion, and without the connivance of any other official charged with duties pertaining to taxation, in changing a duly made and approved assessment of corporate stock of concerns competing with national, state, and savings banks from its proper classification of "corporate stock" to the classification of "moneys and credits" and computing the tax thereon as provided for moneys...
I EQUAL PROTECTION OF LAW—CLASSIFICATIONS—concluded and credits is absolutely void, and furnishes no basis for the claim by national, state, and savings banks that they have been discriminated against, in that the consolidated levy has been applied to 20 percent of the value of their stock, while the favored concerns have been taxed on the basis of 5 mills on the dollar of the actual value of their stock. (Reversed by U. S. Sup. Ct.)

Iowa Bank v Stewart, 214-1229; 232 NW 445; 284 US 239

Cooperative selling associations. The provision of the nonprofit-sharing cooperative agricultural act (Ch 390, C., '24) (1) authorizing an association organized thereunder to require its members to sell all or a stipulated part of their produce through the association, (2) providing the form of the contract in such cases, and (3) empowering the collection of liquidated damages for a violation of the contract, is not violative of this section, no element of arbitrary or unreasonable classification or discrimination being discernible therein.

Clear Lake Co-op. v Weir, 200-1293; 206 NW 297

Due process of law—denial of permit. When the legislature enacts a regulatory measure requiring a permit to transact a business which it has the constitutional right, under its police power, to absolutely prohibit, a party who has been refused a permissible or optional permit may not successfully contend that he has been (1) denied the equal protection of the law, or (2) deprived of his property and rights without due process and without compensation.

Ford Hopkins v City, 215-1286; 248 NW 668

Sales tax—shoe repairmen as consumers—taxation uniformity. Taxation uniformity, being an equal distribution of taxation burdens upon all persons of a given class, is impossible of perfect application, and a sales tax rule promulgated under valid legislative authority classifying shoe repairmen as consumers of materials used in shoe repairing, within the meaning of the sales tax act, is not arbitrary but uniform and consistent with the law imposing the tax and not a delegation of power.

Sandberg Co. v Board, 225-1038; 278 NW 643; 281 NW 197

II UNIFORMITY OF OPERATION

Additional citations. See under Art III, §30

Arbitrary classification. An ordinance which provides safety regulations over tanks where inflammable oils are stored for sale, is null and void when in the same municipality there are large numbers of other tanks identical with those embraced in the ordinance and used for the same purpose except the stored oil is not for sale.

Edwards & B. v City, 213-1027; 240 NW 711

Class legislation—legalization of tax levies. The legalization of all taxes “heretofore assessed, levied and collected by any municipality” is not a local or special law without uniform operation throughout the state.

Chicago RI Ry. v Rosenbaum, 212-227; 231 NW 646

Class legislation—venue. The legislature may validly classify the subject of insurance into (1) life insurance and (2) nonlife insurance and validly enact that actions to recover assessments under nonlife insurance contracts shall be brought in the county of the defendant's residence, without applying the same statutory rule to life insurance companies.

Midwest Ins. v DeHoet, 206-49; 222 NW 548

Constitutional uniformity. A statute which applies equally to all of a specifically described class is constitutionally uniform.

Loftus v Department, 211-566; 232 NW 412

DeVotie v Cameron, 221-354; 265 NW 637

Permissible classification for purpose of legislation. The legislative act (§11033-1 et seq. C., '35 [§11033.1 et seq., C., '39]) which singles out four classes of judgments only, and markedly reduces the period of time thereafter granted by statute for their enforcement, does not constitute prohibited class legislation because the court will judicially take notice of the fact that the enumerated judgments and the claims out of which they arise are generally, if not uniformly, attended by such superior facilities and opportunities for collection as to justify a statute of limitation applicable to them alone.

Berg v Berg, 221-326; 264 NW 821

Uniform operation—arbitrary administration. An act will not be held unconstitutional because of the possibility that the administering officer will, by arbitrary administration, give the act a nonuniform operation.

State v Manning, 220-525; 259 NW 213

County testing units. This section is not violated by the bovine tuberculosis act because it operates through the medium of county testing units. (See Book of Anno., Vol. I, Const Art III, §50)

Fevold v Board, 202-1019; 210 NW 139

Income tax—discriminations—absence of evidence. The state income tax act (Ch. 329-F1, C., '35 [Ch. 329.3, C., '39]) will not be declared unconstitutionally discriminatory (1) because it exempts domestic corporations and not individuals, partnerships, and fiduciaries from paying a tax on that part of their income derived from activities carried on out-
Permit to sell cigarettes. The cigarette permit act which provides that certain governmental bodies "may" grant permits for the sale of cigarettes (§1557, C, '31) arms said bodies with power to exercise at least a legal discretion to grant or refuse a permit.

Class legislation—reduction of official salaries. An act readjusting or reducing the salaries of various public officers cannot be deemed unconstitutional class legislation.

Smith v Thompson, 219-888; 258 NW 190

Charitable institutions liable to strangers, invitees, or employees. Public policy has never demanded nor has the legislature adopted any immunity to charitable institutions from liability to strangers, invitees, or employees arising because of negligence of the servants of such institutions, and the court will not grant such immunity.

Andrews v Y.M.C.A., 226-374; 284 NW 186; 5 NCCA (NS) 355

Corporate governmental agencies—immunity from legal process and taxation. Immunity of corporate governmental agencies from suits and judicial process, and their incidents, is less readily implied than immunity from taxation.

First Tr. JSL Bank v Lehman, 225-1309; 283 NW 96

Liberty of speech and press. SEC. 7.

Slander and libel. See under §§12412, 12526.

Libel not avoided because published as an opinion. A published attack on a person, otherwise libelous per se, is not rendered nonlibelous because it only stated what the publisher thought.

McCuddin v Dickinson, 225-304; 283 NW 886

Newspaper attack on attorney—requisites for libel per se. A newspaper attack upon attorneys stating, among other things, that they were attempting "to stall off" an appeal, tho ill-natured, vexatious, and untrue, yet is not libelous per se, since it lacks one essential element as such, to wit, malicious defamation, and unless special damages are pleaded, is not actionable.

Boardman et al. v Gazette Co., 225-533; 281 NW 118

Injunction against labor union—no denial of freedom of speech and assembly. An injunction against officers of a trade union was not void on its face as a denial of the right of freedom of speech and assembly because it prohibited unlawful interference with a company's business, mass picketing, intimidation and coercion, and going upon the company's premises without consent.

Carey v Dist. Court, 226-717; 285 NW 236

Injunction violation by labor union officials. There was no denial of the right of freedom of speech in holding officers of a trade union in contempt of court for violating an injunc-
ART. I §8 PERSONAL SECURITY

Presumption of legality. Search warrant proceedings, regular on their face, and shown to have been issued on a sworn information, and a separate oral examination of the informant, will, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, be presumed legal, even tho the facts or evidence showing probable cause do not actually appear in any of the proceedings leading up to the issuance of the warrant.

State v Bruns, 211-826; 232 NW 684

Determining probable cause—affidavit together with testimony. An affidavit for a search warrant, to comply with the Iowa Constitution, need not contain a recital of facts showing probable cause, as the magistrate may also examine witnesses in determining the existence of probable cause.

Krueger v Mun. Court, 223-1363; 275 NW 122

Probable cause for issuance of warrant—determination—sufficiency. The existence of "probable cause" for the issuance of a search warrant is to be determined by the magistrate issuing such warrant and does not have to be shown in the information itself but may be shown by affidavit attached thereto or by sworn testimony taken before the magistrate prior to the issuance of the warrant; hence, warrant to search for gambling devices was not issued without "probable cause" where state agent who signed and swore to information was also examined under oath.

State v Doe, 227-1215; 290 NW 518

Information—sufficiency. A sworn information which makes distinct allegations of facts showing illegal possession of intoxicating liquors may not be said to be an affidavit of belief only.

State v Friend, 206-615; 220 NW 59

Validity. A recital in a search warrant that "the court finds from the evidence that there is in fact sufficient ground and reason that a search warrant issue"—conclusively shows that the warrant was not issued on mere belief.

State v Friend, 206-615; 220 NW 59

John Doe warrant—when valid. Unless a person is to be searched or is known to be in possession of the premises, a John Doe warrant sufficiently describing the premises is valid as basis to search for intoxicating liquor.

Krueger v Mun. Court, 223-1363; 275 NW 122

Unreasonable searches and seizures—what is not. The unreasonable search and seizure clause of the Iowa Constitution is not violated by the Iowa income tax act arming the state board with power to examine, under judicial procedure, the books and papers of the taxpayer in order to determine the correctness or fraudulent nature of the taxpayer's return of income.

Vilas v Board, 223-604; 278 NW 338

II SEARCH OF ARRESTED PERSONS

Compulsory examination of defendant's person. An examination of the defendant's person, while in jail, by a physician, cannot be said to have been compulsory, where the only evidence of compulsion was that the sheriff accompanied the physician, but it was not shown that he did or said anything in respect to the examination.

State v Struble, 71-11; 32 NW 1

III ILLEGAL OR UNAUTHORIZED SEARCHES

Unlawfully obtained evidence, admissibility. See under §13897 (1)

Evidence illegally obtained—admissibility. Evidence otherwise admissible is not rendered inadmissible because it was illegally obtained.

State v Rollinger, 208-1155; 225 NW 841

Forcible reposition of property. That part of a conditional sale contract which provides that the vendor, in case of default under the contract, may repossess himself of the property "forcibly and without process of law" is void because violative of public policy.

Girard v Anderson, 219-142; 257 NW 400; 4 NCCA(NS)203

IV DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY OR PLACE OF SEARCH

John Doe warrant—when valid. Unless a person is to be searched or is known to be in possession of the premises, a John Doe warrant sufficiently describing the premises is valid as basis to search for intoxicating liquor.

Krueger v Mun. Court, 223-1363; 275 NW 122

Information—description of gambling devices—sufficiency. Description of gambling devices as "cards, dice, faro, roulette tables, and other devices" in information to obtain issuance of search warrant held sufficient.

State v Doe, 227-1215; 290 NW 518
Right of trial by jury—due process of law. Sec. 9.

I Nature of Right to Jury Trial in Civil Cases

Presence of party in court—important privilege. A party’s privilege to be present in court at the trial of his cause should not be denied without weighty reasons therefor.

In re Rogers, 226-183; 283 NW 906

Equal protection—litigant’s day in court. Every litigant is entitled to his day in court.

Lunt v Van Gorden, 225-1120; 281 NW 743

New trial—grounds sustained generally—effect on appeal. Even tho the overruling of a motion to strike an amendment to plaintiff's motion for new trial was error, there was no prejudice to defendant where motion for new trial was sustained generally, and where grounds of original motion, to wit: that verdict was not sustained by evidence and that plaintiff did not receive a fair and impartial trial, were good—in which case there can be no reversal.

Mitchell v Heaton, 227-1071; 290 NW 906

Directed verdicts. Principle reaffirmed that the constitutional right of trial by jury is not infringed by the action of the court in directing a verdict for defendant whenever the evidence is such that the court would not hesitate to set aside a verdict against defendant.

Cashman v Ry. Co., 217-469; 250 NW 111

Excessive verdict—unallowable reduction by court. The court has no power to reduce the verdict of a jury in an action for unliquidated damages, and to render judgment for a less amount, unless the party in whose favor the verdict was rendered consents to such reduction.

Crawford v Emerson Co., 222-378; 269 NW 384

Agent's authority—when jury question. Questions as to the nature or extent of an agent's authority, determinable or implied from the facts, are for the jury.

Wright v Iowa P. & L. Co., 223-1192; 274 NW 892

Attorneys for juveniles—compensation—jury question. An action by an attorney against a county for compensation for defending a juvenile delinquent is not demurrable but presents a jury question.

Ferguson v Pottawattamie Co., 224-516; 278 NW 223

Right to jury when reasonable men differ—injury from street defect. When a street defect is of such character that reasonable and prudent men may reasonably differ as to whether an accident could or should have been reasonably anticipated from its existence or not, the question of city's liability for injuries caused thereby is generally one for jury.

Thomas v Ft. Madison, 225-822; 281 NW 748

II Jury Trials in Inferior Courts

Jury of six. The trial of a nonindictable misdemeanor may legally be had in municipal court before a jury of six persons.

State v Porter, 206-1247; 220 NW 100

Jury of six. The municipal court act is not unconstitutional because, in the absence of a demand for a jury of twelve, it compels a defendant residing outside the city in which the court is established to submit to a trial by a jury of six which are drawn from the city and not from the county at large.

Kinsey v Clark, 215-765; 246 NW 840

III Denial of Trial by Jury

Deprivation of jury. An action by the receiver of an insolvent bank against stockholders for the purpose of determining the necessity for an assessment on stock holdings, and adjudicating the amount of such assessment, is not inherently a law action and, therefore, the legislature may provide that the action shall be brought in equity.

Broulik v Henderson, 218-640; 254 NW 63

Insanity appeal—noncriminal—not jury—constitutionality. No constitutional rights are violated in trying an appeal from the insanity commission to the court without a jury, since this is not in any way a criminal proceeding.

In re Brewer, 224-773; 278 NW 766
ART. I §9 TRIAL BY JURY—DUE PROCESS

III DENIAL OF TRIAL BY JURY—concluded

Municipal court jury trial. Where plaintiff requested jury trial and later withdrew such request, municipal court's refusal to allow defendant trial by jury was error.

Metier v Brewer, (NOR); 205 NW 734

IV WAIVER OF JURY TRIAL

Waiver by agreement of attorneys—validity. A written agreement or stipulation, duly signed and filed by opposing attorneys in a law action and approved of record by the court, agreeing to waive a jury and to try the action to the court is, in the absence of fraud or proof that an attorney had no authority so to agree, binding on the parties to the action for at least one trial to the court, even tho, after the stipulation was entered into, the pleadings be amended and the cause be continued to a later term.

Shores Co. v Chemical Co., 222-347; 268 NW 581; 106 ALR 198

Exemption from self-incrimination—non-waiver. A witness who voluntarily appears before a grand jury, and, without duress or compulsion, testifies to matters which tend to render him criminally liable for an offense as to which he is not given absolute immunity from prosecution ($11269, C., '36), does not thereby waive his natural, common law, statutory, and constitutional right to refuse to testify to said matters on the subsequent trial of another party under an indictment returned in whole or in part on the original testimony of said witness.

Duckworth v Dist. Court, 220-1350; 264 NW 715

V JURY TRIAL IN EQUITY CASES

Bank stock assessments. An action by the receiver of an insolvent bank against stockholders for the purpose of determining the necessity for an assessment on stock holdings, and adjudicating the amount of such assessment, is not inherently a law action and, therefore, the legislature may provide that the action shall be brought in equity.

Broulik v Henderson, 218-640; 254 NW 63

Law issues determined in equity. An action in equity by one school district to enjoin another school district and the county treasurer from transferring, to the defendant school, certain funds claimed to be due from the plaintiff school as tuition, remains in equity altho the defendant school files a cross-petition raising issues at law as to determination of the amount due, if any, and for judgment accordingly, since equity, acquiring jurisdiction, may determine all issues.

Lincoln Dist. v Redfield Dist., 228-298; 283 NW 881

VI DUE PROCESS OF LAW GENERALLY

Due process not limitation on police power.

Peverill v Board, 208-94; 222 NW 635

Appeal—no constitutional right.

Chic., Burl. Ry. v Board, 206-488; 221 NW 228

Van der Burg v Bailey, 207-797; 223 NW 515

Wissenden v Bradley, 209-813; 229 NW 205; 67 ALR 1075

Donlan v Cooke, 212-771; 237 NW 496

Due process—test—equal operation on all. The test, with respect to requirements of due process of law, is simply whether the law operates equally upon all who come within class to be affected, embracing all persons who are, or may be, in like situation or circumstances.

State v Erickson, 225-1261; 282 NW 728

Trial on merits—litigant's day in court. It is the policy of the law that every cause of action should be tried upon its merits and that every party to an action shall have his day in court.

Western Grocer v Glenn, 226-1374; 286 NW 441

Judgment by default—day in court. Where a case is set for trial and counsel tho notified by letter is out of the state when the case is called for trial and a default is entered, the court erred in refusing to set aside the default since reputable counsel were employed, the parties themselves were not negligent and they should "have had their day in court".

Hatt v McCurdy, 223-974; 274 NW 72

New trial—court's inherent power to set aside verdict. Where a party has not received a fair and impartial trial, the trial court has inherent power to set aside the verdict.

Brunssen v Parker, 227-1364; 291 NW 635

Judgment—setting aside unaffected by failure to secure stay order. Fact that proceedings in district court could have been stayed pending appeal will not, on the ground that misfortune was avoidable, preclude setting aside a default judgment rendered pending appeal without customary notice between counsel.

Lunt v Van Gorden. 225-1120; 281 NW 743

Due process of law—short form indictment valid. A short form indictment is valid and the statute providing therefor is constitutional.

State v Keturokis, 224-491; 276 NW 600

Rape—amending indictment—form only—validity. In a prosecution for rape, adding the words, "a female, by force and against her will," as an amendment to an already valid indictment is an amendment affecting not substance but form only, and being merely surplusage, is not prejudicial and not error.

State v Keturokis, 224-491; 276 NW 600
Failure of accused to testify—allowable reference—due process not violated. County attorney, during the trial of a criminal case, may properly refer to the fact that the accused has not testified in his own behalf, and constitutional due process is not thereby violated.

State v Ferguson, 226-361; 283 NW 917

Inference from accused’s failure to testify—due process unaffected. Any resulting inference or presumption of guilt arising from an accused’s choice not to testify in his own behalf is not involved in the due process clause of the constitution.

State v Ferguson, 226-361; 283 NW 917

Sentence—right to revoke without notice. A defendant granted a suspension of sentence must take it with the statutory burden accompanying it, to wit: the right of the court to revoke the suspension at any time without notice or opportunity to be heard.

Pagano v Bechly, 211-1294; 232 NW 798

Venue—change on application of state. The legislature may constitutionally grant to the state the right to a change of venue in a criminal prosecution.

State v Dist. Court, 213-822; 238 NW 290

Power to punish. Contempt proceedings which are in accordance with that provided by Ch. 536, C, '35, are not violative of the due process clauses of the federal and state constitutions.

State v Baker, 222-903; 270 NW 359

"Notice" implied in context of statute. A statute is not unconstitutional because it does not expressly provide for notice to an interested party. A clear implication of notice, duly compiled with, is sufficient.

Chehock v Sch. Dist., 210-268; 228 NW 585

Absence of notice. The fact that a stockholder in an insolvent bank was not made a party to proceedings which resulted in the issuance of receiver’s certificates becomes immaterial when, in an action by the receiver to enforce an assessment to pay said certificates, the stockholder is afforded full opportunity to question the legality of such certificates.

Andrew v Bank, 206-869; 221 NW 668

Absence of notice. Notice to the beneficiary of a trust, of the hearing on an application by the trustee for an order of court confirming an investment already made by the trustee, is not necessary, such application not being an adversary proceeding, and the record revealing the perfect good faith of the trustee.

In re Lawson, 215-752; 244 NW 739; 88 ALR 316

Absence of notice. The statutes (§1989-a24, S., '13; 38 GA, ch 332 [§7563, C., '39]), authorizing certain improvements on the common outlet of two or more drainage districts, and an apportionment of the cost thereof among the several districts by means of assessments on the basis of water discharged by each district, are not unconstitutional because said statutes fail to provide for notice to interested parties prior to the making of said improvements, said improvements being analogous to repairs on ditches generally, subsequent to their construction.

Board v Board, 214-655; 241 NW 14

Absence of statutory provision for notice—power of court. When due process necessitates notice to a party and the statute makes no provision for such notice, the court may validly prescribe a notice which is reasonably calculated to give the interested party knowledge of the proceeding and opportunity to be heard.

McKinstry v Dewey, 192-753; 185 NW 565
Franklin v Bonner, 201-516; 207 NW 778
In re Barner, 201-525; 207 NW 613

Notice unnecessary. The enlargement of the boundaries of a municipality by a city council under an enabling statute, without any notice to the property owners within the territory annexed, and without any opportunity on the part of such owners to vote on the question, is not violative of this section.

Wertz v City, 201-947; 208 NW 511

Notice unnecessary. Due process does not require that notice to the owners of breeding cattle and hearing thereon be provided on an application to have a county enrolled under the county-accredited-area plan for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis.

Fevold v Board, 202-1019; 210 NW 139

Service outside state. Jurisdiction in personam of an Iowa corporation is constitutionally obtained by proper service of a proper original notice in a foreign state on one of the last known or acting officers of the corporation, as shown by the last statutory annual report of the corporation on file with the secretary of state of this state.

Bennett v Coal Co., 201-770; 208 NW 519

Substituted service on nonresident individual. The statute (§11079, C., '31) which provides, in effect, that when a corporation, company, or individual maintains in this state an agency "in any county" other than that in which said principal resides, service of original notice of any action growing out of or connected with said agency may be personally had on the principal in this state by serving in this state an agent employed in said agency, applies to a nonresident individual maintaining an agency in this state, and when so applied does not deny to said defendant (1) due process of law, (2) the equal protection of the law, (3) any privilege or immunity granted to citizens of this state, or (4) any privilege or immunity possessed by said defendant as a citizen of the United States.

VI DUE PROCESS OF LAW GENERALLY—continued

Adjudicating shortage without notice to surety. The sureties on the bond of an administrator are not entitled to notice of the proceedings wherein the probate court determines the amount the administrator is short in his accounts.

In re Kessler, 213-633; 239 NW 555

Due process of law—inaapplicable to power of taxation. The due process clause of the federal constitution has no relation whatever to the lawful exercise of the sovereign power of taxation.

Carroll v Cedar Falls, 221-277; 261 NW 652

Assessments without notice. Whether statutes authorizing the cost of certain improvements on the common outlet of several districts to be apportioned by the board doing the work to each of said districts in the ratio of water discharged by each district, are unconstitutional because said statutes fail to provide interested parties in districts other than the district embracing the common outlet, with notice of and opportunity to contest said apportionment, quare. But said interested parties may not complain of the absence of such notice and opportunity when they admit that the apportionment in question was correctly made in accordance with the said statutory ratio.

Board v Board, 214-655; 241 NW 14

Reduction in assessed valuation without notice. It is inferentially suggested that the statute which authorizes the state board of assessment and review to order a reduction in the assessed valuation of property, is not unconstitutional because the statute assumed to grant such power without notice.

State v Board, 211-1116; 235 NW 303

Decreeing lien without notice. An order establishing the heirship of persons to an estate and, without notice, decreeing a lien in favor of the attorney on the cash shares of certain heirs for whom the attorney has never appeared, is a nullity, insofar as the order establishing the lien and the amount thereof is concerned.

In re Lear, 204-346; 213 NW 240

Due process of law—removal from office without notice. There is, in a constitutional sense, no element of property in a public office. It follows that the statutory power conferred on the state executive council to investigate and remove appointive state officers, without making provision for notice and hearing, will not be held to violate the due process clause of the constitution as to an officer to whom the council has voluntarily given ample written notice and opportunity to be heard.

Clark v Herring, 221-1224; 260 NW 486

Regulation of business—price fixing. Legislative authority to municipalities to adopt ordinances which provide for "fair competition" in personal service trades—trades in which services are rendered upon the person of an individual without necessarily involving the sale of merchandise—cannot constitutionally embrace authority to include in such ordinances a provision fixing the minimum price which may be charged for said services, because neither the state nor the municipality has constitutional power to fix such charges in view of the federal constitution and of the Constitution of Iowa. So held as to the business of barbering. And this is true the the trade in question be subject to the police power of the state.

Duncan v Des Moines, 222-218; 268 NW 547

Due process—ordinance requiring weighing of loads. A municipal ordinance requiring that merchandise sold in load lots by weight for delivery within the city be weighed by a public weighmaster whose certificate stating the gross, tare, and net weight must be delivered to the purchaser, such ordinance, altho it necessitates that a person trucking coal into the city unload and reload, is not so unreasonable as to violate the due process clause of the constitution.

Huss v Creston, 224-844; 278 NW 196; 116 ALR 242

Revocation of license. A physician is not denied his constitutional right to "due process" by being denied a jury trial in proceedings before the board of medical examiners to revoke his license.

State v Hanson, 201-579; 207 NW 769

Enjoining criminal acts—constitutionality. The statute authorizing the entry of a permanent injunction against a person practicing medicine without a license even tho said person may be prosecuted criminally for so practicing, is not unconstitutional on the theory that injunction proceeding is simply a method of punishing the defendant for a crime without the intervention of a trial jury, and consequently denies the defendant due process of law.

State v Fray, 214-53; 241 NW 663; 81 ALR 286

State v Howard, 214-60; 241 NW 682

Professions—deprivation of certificate. The holder of a duly issued certificate to practice a profession, e. g., dentistry, cannot be deprived of said certificate without due process, to wit: notice, hearing, and right to appeal to the courts. Statutes reviewed and held ample to protect such holder.

Craven v Bierring, 222-613; 269 NW 801

Denial of permit. When the legislature enacts a regulatory measure requiring a permit to transact a business which it has the constitutional right, under its police power, to absolutely prohibit, a party who has been refused a permissible or optional permit may not successfully contend that he has been (1) denied the equal protection of the law, or (2) deprived of his property and rights without due process and without compensation.

Extending redemption period. Neither the federal nor state constitutional prohibitions against (a) the impairment of the obligations of contracts, or (b) the deprivation of vested property rights without due process of law, is violated by a statute (1) which is enacted during, and for the purpose of ameliorating, an existing public financial emergency, (2) which grants to the owner of real estate during the existence of said emergency the right to possession and a time, very materially in excess of that otherwise granted by law, in which to redeem from mortgage foreclosure sale—even tho the sale precedes the passage of the emergency act—and (3) which sequesters the rents during said extended time and fairly and reasonably applies them to the protection of the mortgagee and his security. (45 GA, ch 179.)

Reason: Contract rights and vested interests must reasonably yield to the paramount right of the state, through the reservoir of its reserved police power, to protect, by appropriate legislation, its sovereignty, its government, its people and their general welfare, against exigencies arising out of a great emergency.

Des M. JSL Bank v Nordholm, 217-1319; 253 NW 701

Moratorium acts of 47th GA—unconstitutionality. Moratorium acts of the 47th GA extending foreclosure of mortgages, and extending time in which to redeem, are unconstitutional as an impairment of the obligation of contract, when such acts are not based on an actual existing emergency calling for an exercise of the reserve police power of the state.

First Tr. JSL Bank v Arp, 225-1331; 283 NW 441; 120 ALR 932

John Hancock Ins. v Eggland, 225-1073; 283 NW 444

Metropolitan v McDonald, 225-1075; 283 NW 445

Unborn child. A statute empowering the court in partition proceedings (1) to assume through a guardian ad litem, jurisdiction over the contingent interest of an unborn child as a possible co-tenant of the land, (2) to order a sale of the land, and (3) to exercise a continuing jurisdiction over the resulting fund insofar as such possible child may have an interest, is violative of neither the federal nor the state constitution relative to depriving persons of property without due process.

Mennig v Howard, 213-936; 240 NW 473

Juvenile delinquents. The juvenile court act (Chs. 179, 180, C, '27) is not violative of the due process clause of the federal and state constitutions because no provision is made for a jury trial of juvenile delinquents.

Wissenburg v Bradley, 209-813; 229 NW 206; 67 ALR 1075

Granting discretionary power to administrative officer. The statutory grant of discretionary power to the superintendent of banking in re reorganization of banks is not a violation of due process.

Priet v Whitney Co., 219-1281; 261 NW 374

Timmons v Sec. Bank, 221-102; 264 NW 708

Ascertained standard of guilt or innocence. The statute which prohibits banks and bankers from receiving deposits when they know they are insolvent, and the interpretation by the courts and by the legislature of the term insolvency to mean "inability to pay, through their own agencies, all liabilities within a reasonable time, and in the ordinary course of business" presents no instance of prescribing or fixing an unascertainable standard of guilt or innocence, violative of the due process clauses of the federal and state constitutions.

State v Bevins, 210-1031; 230 NW 865

Liability of bailor of automobile. The statute which renders the bailor of an automobile liable to third persons for damages consequent on the negligent operation of the car by the bailee is not violative of the due process clause of the constitution.

Robinson v Bruce Co., 205-261; 215 NW 724; 61 ALR 851

Submission to foreign courts—insufficient showing. An Iowa accident insurance association which has not been licensed to transact its business in a foreign state (in which it has neither office, agent, nor property), and whose certificates of insurance are strictly Iowa contracts, cannot be deemed to have subjected itself to the jurisdiction of the courts of such foreign state (1) because a very large number of its certificate holders reside in said foreign state, or (2) because said association, from
VI DUE PROCESS OF LAW GENERALLY —concluded time to time and by mail from its Iowa office, requests a physician in said foreign state to there examine claimants and to report as to accidental injuries received by claimants, it appearing that said physician was under no contract obligation to comply with said requests and to make such examinations tho he had done so for several years and had received a stated fee for each separate examination.
Held, the foreign court, in an action on a certificate, acquired no jurisdiction under process served on said physician.
Saunders v Trav. Assn., 222-969; 270 NW 407

Foreign employer—adjudication on registered mail service. The workmen's compensation act, in the absence of a statutory rejection thereof, becomes a part of a contract of employment which is performable by the employee wholly within this state, and entered into between a resident employee of this state and a foreign nonresident employer doing business in this state without a state permit; but in case the employee dies from an injury compensable under said act, the industrial commissioner acquires no jurisdiction to determine and adjudicate the compensation due on account of said death by simply sending, by registered mail, notices of said proceedings to said employer in said foreign state, tho, concededly, the addressee received said notices. An adjudication on such service does not constitute due process.
Elk River Co. v Funk, 222-1222; 271 NW 204; 116 ALR 1416

Destruction of property. The constitutional requirement of due process of law—notice and hearing—is fully met by the bovine tuberculosis act (1) in depriving the owner of all notice and hearing prior to the destruction of cattle actually infected with tuberculosis, and (2) in impliedly and necessarily giving to said owner a right of action for damages against persons destroying his cattle when they are not so infected.
Loftus v Dept., 211-566; 232 NW 412

Displacing liens. The right of a judgment creditor of an insolvent railway to due process on the issue whether the receiver shall continue the operation of the road and whether the operating expenses shall be given priority over existing judgments is not satisfied by giving the creditor a hearing on the issue whether such priority shall be ordered as to expenses already incurred without any authorizing order therefor.
Continental Bank v Railway, 202-579; 210 NW 787; 50 ALR 139

Reducing statute of limitation on judgments. A legislative act which reduces the existing statutory period of time in which existing judgments may be enforced, yet accords to the holders of such judgments a reasonable time in which to enforce said judgments before the reduced time becomes an absolute bar, is not violative of the due process clause of the federal constitution.
Wertz v Ottumwa, 201-947; 208 NW 511
School not "person"—statutory tuition reimbursement without notice—due process. The statute providing for the collection of tuition fees by one school district from another is not unconstitutional under the due process clause because not requiring a notice and hearing, because a school district is not a person, as contemplated by the constitution. It is purely a creature of statute, having no power except that granted by the legislature, and so its funds are under legislative control.

Lincoln Dist. v Redfield Dist., 226-298; 283 NW 881

Cosmetology schools—charges for services of students. A statute defining cosmetologists as being persons who receive compensation for services and which provides that no person or corporation shall use any person as a practitioner of cosmetology unless the person is an apprentice or licensed cosmetologist, is an unconstitutional exercise of police power in requiring that students of cosmetology schools do gratuitous work while obtaining practical experience, as such requirement would be an arbitrary interference with private business and the right to contract and would impose unnecessary restrictions upon lawful occupations in violation of due process of law.

State v Thompson's School, 226-556; 285 NW 133

Trees in highway not property of adjoining owner. A property owner abutting and occupying a part of a highway has no rights in trees growing on such part of the highway, no matter how long his occupancy of the highway continued before public convenience and necessity required appropriation of the full highway width.

Rabiner v Humboldt Co., 224-1190; 278 NW 612; 116 ALR 89

VIII DEPRIVATION OF PROPERTY WITHOUT DUE PROCESS

Compensation for finding lost property—constitutional. The statutory provision that the finder of lost goods shall be paid a named compensation is not violative of the due process clause of the constitution.

Flood v Bank, 218-598; 233 NW 509; 95 ALR 1168

Gasoline license revocation without hearing—valid. Provision in statute imposing tax on motor vehicle fuel, authorizing revocation of license, without hearing, on failure of distributor to make reports or pay license fees held not invalid as taking property of distributor without due process of law.

Monamotor Oil Co. v Johnson, 3 F Supp 189; 222 US 86

IX TAXATION AND DUE PROCESS OF LAW

Drains—assessments for after-accruing benefits. A statute authorizing certain improvements on the common outlet of several districts and the apportionment of the cost thereof among said several districts receiving the benefit of such improvements, is applicable to a district organized prior to the enactment of said statute, and is not unconstitutional in failing to provide for notice to the landowners of the latter district before said improvements are made.

Ward v Board, 214-1162; 241 NW 26

Income tax act. Iowa income tax act reviewed and held not subject to the vice of taking private property without due process of law.

Rights of persons accused. SEC. 10.

I WHAT IS A CRIMINAL PROSECUTION

Short form of indictment. The plea that the short form indictment act does not provide for apprising the defendant of the offense with which he is charged, and is therefore unconstitutional, is untenable in view of the right of the defendant under said act to a bill of particulars.

State v Henderson, 215-276; 243 NW 289

Penal ordinance void for uncertainty. An ordinance which requires storage tanks for inflammable oils and the accessories of such tanks to "be kept and operated in compliance with law, the building code, and other city ordinances, and in a safe and proper manner, and the same shall not be permitted to become or remain defective, hazardous or dangerous" (sic), and penalizing violations, is void for uncertainty and unenforceability.

Edwards & B. v City, 213-1027; 240 NW 711 See State v Bevins, 210-1031; 230 NW 865

Regulatory ordinance—absence of specifications. An ordinance purporting to safeguard the public by regulating storage tanks for inflammable oils must, in order to be valid and enforceable, contain such rules and specifications as will enable the property owner to know, definitely, just what is required of him in order to comply with the ordinance and thereby safeguard himself. It is quite insufficient to enact the dragnet command that said tanks and appurtenant accessories "must be kept and operated in compliance with law, the building code, and other city ordinances, and in a safe and proper manner, and the same shall not be permitted to become or remain defective, hazardous or dangerous."

II SPEEDY AND PUBLIC TRIAL BY IMPARTIAL JURY

Time of trial—mandatory discharge for delay. The court, on proper motion therefor, is under mandatory duty to dismiss an indictment which, during the first term of court following its return, was, on motion for change of venue, transferred to another county, and was not there tried during the term pending when the transfer was ordered, nor during the following term—last two months—because of the very large assignment of equity cases and matters local to said county.

And this is true tho the defendant during said delay made no demand for a trial.

Davison v Garfield, 221-424; 265 NW 645

Time of trial and continuance—when court loses jurisdiction. An indictment which has neither been continued on defendant's application, nor brought to trial at the first regular term of court following its return, is, on a motion to dismiss, subject to a showing explaining and excusing the delay in trial, but the continuance of such an indictment beyond the third term following the return of the indictment, ipso facto deprives the court, after the expiration of said third term, of all jurisdiction over said indictment except to formally dismiss it.

Davison v Garfield, 219-1258; 257 NW 432; 260 NW 697

Dismissal of indictment—right to speedy trial—waiver. An accused may not have an indictment dismissed because he was not tried at the first regular term succeeding the return of the indictment, when, at said succeeding term, the court in open session offered to summon a jury if any accused was insisting on trial, and defendant's counsel, who was present, made no request for trial at said term.

State v Ellington, 200-656; 204 NW 307

Speedy trial not denied—delay by defendant occasioned by appellate review. In a larceny prosecution, a defendant may not complain that he has been denied a speedy trial, where a procedendo was recalled because of a rehearing in the supreme court, and, after the second procedendo was issued, the trial was delayed by defendant's writ of certiorari.

Delays complained of occurred at the instance of the defendant himself.

State v Ferguson, 226-361; 283 NW 917

Delay by defendant—certiorari to require dismissal denied. One convicted of larceny, who on appeal is granted a reversal, and who, then, each time thereafter as his case is assigned for retrial, delays trial on the merits by dilatory moves such as request for rehearing and change of venue, may not complain that he has been denied a speedy trial as provided by law, and certiorari will not lie to require dismissal of the indictment.

Ferguson v Bechly, 224-1049; 277 NW 755

Accused in state hospital—term for trial after release. An indictment not brought to trial because of accused's confinement in a state hospital as an inebriate is not subject to dismissal because accused was not immediately tried upon his release, when such was impossible because the release came at a time when the term was well under way and the assigned cases completely filled the court's time for that term.

Maher v Brown, 225-341; 280 NW 553

Inebriate in state hospital—delay in trial—no dismissal. Criminal courts have no right to force an inebriate inmate of a state hospital to stand trial on an indictment for driving while intoxicated, and such confinement is good cause for refusing to dismiss for delay in prosecution.

Maher v Brown, 225-341; 280 NW 553

Female jurors—house of ill fame case—no presumption of prejudice. Contention that a fair trial was not obtained on account of female jurors, a majority of which were on the jury, having an inborn prejudice against a woman accused of keeping a house of ill fame, denied because, in absence of a contrary showing, jurors regardless of sex are presumed to follow instructions and determine guilt upon the evidence.

State v Hathaway, 224-478; 276 NW 207

III RIGHT TO TRIAL BY JURY

Instructions in criminal cases. See under §13876 Jury trial on appeal in civil cases. See under Art I, §9

Waiver of jury trial in civil cases. See under Art I, §§; §§11061, 11081

Insane persons—inquisitions—appeal—special proceeding—no jury. An appeal to the district court from the finding of the county insanity commission is a special proceeding, and, since the legislature did not provide for a jury trial, the issue is triable to the court.

In re Brewer, 224-773; 276 NW 766

commission to the court without a jury, since this is not in any way a criminal proceeding.

IV RIGHT TO BE CONFRONTED WITH WITNESSES

Confronting witnesses—violation of constitutional right. The constitutional right of an accused in a criminal case to be confronted by the witnesses against him is violated, in a criminal case wherein the value of various items of property is material, by an instruction to the effect that the jurors “have the right to use their own knowledge of values * * * in connection with the testimony as to values which have been given by the different witnesses”.

State v Henderson, 217-402; 251 NW 640

Successive offenses — proof by certified copies. Statutes which authorize proof of former convictions of crime to be made by duly authenticated copies of said judgments of convictions are constitutional.

State v Murray, 222-925; 270 NW 355

Testimony of accomplice at former trial. The transcript of the testimony of an accomplice given at a former trial of the defendant in a criminal prosecution, is admissible on a retrial when the accomplice is found by the court to be out of the state and therefore beyond the reach of a subpoena.

State v Clay, 222-1142; 271 NW 212

V RIGHT TO COPY OF INDICTMENT

Informing accused of accusation. The constitutional right of an accused “to be informed of the accusation against him”—formerly accorded to him through a technically and elaborately drawn indictment—is now, under the short form indictment act, fully accorded to him through a bill of particulars, to which he is arbitrarily entitled.

State v Engler, 217-138; 251 NW 88

Due process of law—short form indictment valid. A short form indictment is valid and the statute providing therefor is constitutional.

VI RIGHT TO COMPULSORY ATTENDANCE OF WITNESSES

Accomplice out of state—testimony at former trial used. The transcript of the testimony of an accomplice given at a former trial of the defendant in a criminal prosecution, is admissible on a retrial when the accomplice is found by the court to be out of the state and therefore beyond the reach of a subpoena.

VII RIGHT TO ASSISTANCE OF COUNSEL

Neglect to procure counsel—no showing of prejudice. When the counsel for accused had withdrawn after a trial in which the jury disagreed, and the accused failed to secure new counsel until three days before retrial although he had two months to do so, and the court denied her motion for continuance, on appeal she could not complain of the ruling in the absence of showing an injury resulting from the ruling.

VIII WAIVER OF RIGHTS IN GENERAL

Bovine eradication—hearing and notice unnecessary. A statute for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis which provides (1) for the filing with the board of supervisors of a petition of “51 percent of the owners of breeding cattle within the county” as a basis for the designation of the county as a “county testing unit”, and (2) for the forwarding by the board of said petition to the commission of animal health for action thereon, is not unconstitutional because it wholly fails to provide for any hearing and notice thereof before the board on the sufficiency of the said petition, when the statute demonstrates that no one can be affected except those who have signed the petition.

ART. I §12 TWICE TRIED—BAIL

I NONINDICTABLE OFFENSES: TRIALS IN INFERIOR COURTS—concluded

False check—amount of check determines grade of offense—jurisdiction. In a prosecution for false uttering of a bank check, it is the amount of the check that determines the grade of the offense, not the amount received, provided something of value is received for it. Where a check was $20 or more, but only $2 in cash was received, the district court was in error in directing a verdict for defendant on the ground that the offense should be prosecuted in the justice of peace court.

State v Dillard, 225-915; 281 NW 842

II INDICTMENTS

Federal amendments—applicability. Principle reaffirmed that the fifth amendment to the federal constitution, relating to criminal procedure, has no application to state courts and their proceedings.

State v Hawks, 213-698; 239 NW 553

Rape—amending indictment—form only—validity. In a prosecution for rape, adding the words "a female, by force and against her will" as an amendment to an already valid indictment, is an amendment affecting not substance but form only, and being merely surplusage, is not prejudicial and not error.

State v Keturokis, 224-491; 276 NW 600

III RIGHT OF APPEAL FROM INFERIOR COURTS

Discontinuance—death of defendant—effect. The death of a defendant in a criminal prosecution, even after trial, conviction, judgment and appeal, but before the final determination of the latter proceeding, works a complete abatement of the proceeding ab initio.

ANALYSIS

I LEGAL JEOPARDY
II OFFENSES AGAINST TWO JURISDICTIONS
III EFFECT OF FORMER ACQUITTAL OR CONVICTION
IV RIGHT TO BAIL

I LEGAL JEOPARDY

False pretense and conspiracy. A conviction on an indictment charging the obtaining, by an officer of a fraternal beneficiary society, of funds of the society, by means of false and fraudulent representations, is not a bar to an indictment for conspiracy based on the identical acts charged in the former indictment—the two charges not being sustainable by the same evidence.

State v Blackledge, 216-199; 243 NW 534

Former jeopardy—necessary identification of offense. Instructions that a defendant may be found guilty of maintaining a liquor nuisance if he committed the offense within three years prior to the return of the indictment will not be deemed to put the defendant on trial for an alleged liquor offense on which the defendant was acquitted within said three years when the specific nature of the latter offense is not made to appear.

State v Kelly, 217-1305; 253 NW 49

Former jeopardy—proof of several supporting transactions—election—effect. When, upon the trial of a public officer for embezzlement charged in one count and in a lump sum, the state supports the charge by evidence of several different transactions, any one of which was sufficient to support the charge, and, on order of the court, elects to rely on one certain transaction, the defendant, after being convicted and after being granted a new trial, may not successfully contend that he has been put in jeopardy on all the transactions except the transaction on which the state elected to rely on the first trial, it appearing that the nonelected transactions were allowed to remain in the record as evidentiary matter bearing on the issue of fraudulent intent.

State v Huff, 217-41; 250 NW 581

Former jeopardy—state's appeal from directed verdict—defendant unaffected by reversal. Where the state appeals from a ruling sustaining motion for directed verdict for defendant in a criminal case, defendant will not be affected by reversal on appeal.

State v Dillard, 225-915; 281 NW 842

II OFFENSES AGAINST TWO JURISDICTIONS

Conviction of nonindictable offense bar to indictable offense embraced in former. The conviction of an accused in the court of a justice of the peace of the nonindictable offense of transporting intoxicating liquors without properly labeling the same ($1936, C. '27), is a bar to a subsequent prosecution based on the same transaction for the indictable offense of transporting intoxicating liquors ($1945-a1 et seq., C. '27), the latter offense being necessarily embraced in the former.

State v Purdin, 206-1058; 221 NW 562

III EFFECT OF FORMER ACQUITTAL OR CONVICTION

Statutory guarantee against dual jeopardy. See under §1350.

Acquittal of crime—nonconclusive as to payment in civil action. Where a contract for bailment of cattle provided for their purchase at a stipulated price and also provided for their surrender on demand if not paid for, and where defendant had been acquitted of a forgery charge based on a forged "Paid" stamp giving the appearance the contract price had been paid, his acquittal, when inter­posed in a replevin action for the cattle, was not res judicata on the issue of payment and did not bar the replevin action.

Bates v Carter, 225-893; 281 NW 727

Acquittal of larceny—felonious receiving. An acquittal under an indictment charging larceny from a building in the nighttime constitutes no bar to a subsequent indictment charging the felonious receiving of the stolen property.

State v Smith, 219-168; 256 NW 651

Acquittal as bar to civil action—penalties—forfeitures. The general rule is that a defendant's acquittal in a criminal prosecution is neither a bar to a civil action against him, nor evidence in such action of his innocence; but, when the subsequent action, altho civil in form, is quasi-criminal in nature, as to recovering penalties or declaring forfeitures, the second action may be barred by the former.

Bates v Carter, 225-893; 281 NW 727

Former jeopardy—manslaughter by negligent act. The unintentional killing, by one act of negligence, of two or more persons cannot constitute more than one manslaughter. It follows that an acquittal under an indictment charging manslaughter in the killing of one deceased is a bar to a further prosecution for manslaughter for the killing of another deceased.

State v Wheelock, 216-1428; 250 NW 617

Criminal prosecution and contempt. A criminal prosecution for a violation of the intoxicating liquor statutes is not a bar to a contempt proceeding based on the same act.

Touche v Bonner, 201-468; 205 NW 761

Criminal prosecution and injunction. A verdict of "not guilty" under an indictment charging the keeping of an intoxicating liquor nuisance on certain property is no bar to an action to enjoin the same defendant from maintaining a liquor nuisance on the same property, and based on the same transaction on which the indictment was based.

State v Osborne, 207-636; 223 NW 363

Different offenses in same act. An acquittal on an indictment which charges the maintenance of an intoxicating liquor nuisance on certain property is no bar to an action to enjoin the same defendant from maintaining a liquor nuisance on the same property, and based on the same transaction on which the indictment was based.

State v Boever, 205-88; 210 NW 751

Conviction for assault and battery—effect on higher offense. A conviction in municipal court for assault and battery constitutes no bar to a subsequent prosecution under an indictment charging assault and battery, with intent to commit great bodily injury, based on the same act.

State v Smith, 217-825; 253 NW 130

Embezzlements by agent and bailee. An acquittal on an indictment which charges the defendant, as agent, with the embezzlement of the proceeds of grain delivered to him (§13031, C., '24) is no bar to an indictment which charges the defendant, as bailee, with the embezzlement of the same grain. (§13030, C., '24.)

State v Folger, 204-1296; 210 NW 580

Subsequent overlapping charge. When the state bases an indictment for nuisance on a series of acts occurring during a specified period of time, it thereby segregates such acts from all subsequent acts, and irrevocably identifies and stamps said acts as one complete offense; and if it suffers an acquittal, it may not thereafter maintain an indictment based (1) on said segregated acts and (2) on other acts subsequent thereto; and the exclusion of said segregated acts on the trial of the last indictment will not avoid the bar resulting from the first acquittal.

State v Reinhard, 202-168; 209 NW 419

Transporting intoxicating liquors. The conviction of an accused in the court of a justice of the peace of the nonindictable offense of transporting intoxicating liquors without property labeling the same (§13066, C., '27), is a bar to a subsequent prosecution based on the same transaction for the indictable offense of transporting intoxicating liquors (§1945-81 et seq., C., '27 [§1945.1 et seq., C., '39]) the latter offense being necessarily embraced in the former.

IV RIGHT TO BAIL

No annotations in this volume

Habeas corpus. SEC. 13.

Defectively drawn indictment. The writ of habeas corpus will not lie to test the legality of imprisonment under an indictment or trial information of which the court has jurisdiction, even tho such indictment or information is defectively drawn.

Conkling v Hollowell, 203-1374; 214 NW 717

Appeal excludes habeas corpus. Habeas corpus will not lie to test the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain a judgment of conviction by a justice of the peace under an information which actually charges an offense the punishment for which does not exceed either a fine of $100 or imprisonment for 30 days.

Hallway v Byers, 205-986; 218 NW 905
Failure to determine degree of murder. A judgment of life imprisonment for murder rendered by the district court under a proper charge and on a plea of guilty of such crime, is not rendered void by the failure of the court, before imposing such judgment, to call witnesses and determine the degree of said crime, and enter said determination on the record. It follows that such failure, tho it be conceded to be error and reversible on appeal, furnishes no ground for release under a writ of habeas corpus.

McCormick v Hollowell, 215-638; 246 NW 612

Bail—punishments. Sec. 17.

Cruel and unusual punishment. An accused who has been fined $100 and ordered imprisoned in the county jail for 60 days may not question the constitutionality of the statute under which he was convicted, on the ground that the statute imposed cruel and unusual punishment.

State v Dowling, 204-977; 216 NW 271

Cruel and inhuman punishment. Sentence of six months at hard labor for maintaining liquor nuisance held not such “cruel and inhuman punishment” as to violate Amendment 8 of the United States Constitution, when the maximum punishment for the offense was one year at hard labor.

State v Gasparia, (NOR); 214 NW 550

Imprisonment for contempt as cruel and unusual punishment. Statutes providing for commitment to jail for contempt, upon default in payment of support money awarded in bastardy proceedings, without citation, charge, or hearing and without allowing defendant an opportunity to purge himself of any alleged contempt, contravene the constitutional prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment.

State v Devore, 225-815; 281 NW 740; 118 ALR 1104

Drastic and invalidating penalties. Drastic penalties may, in view of the nature of the acts punished, and in view of the circumstances attending the commission of such acts, nullify an entire ordinance. So held where each day’s continuance of each of various acts was declared a separate offense and punished by fine or imprisonment.

Edwards & B. v City, 213-1027; 240 NW 711

Excessive fines. A fine of $1,000 and, in default of payment, commitment to the county jail for ten months for the second offense of violating an injunction against the sale of intoxicating liquors is not constitutionally excessive.

Touche v Bonner, 201-466; 205 NW 761

Excessive fines. A fine of $1,000 on the operator of an automobile for driving the same on the highway while intoxicated is not a “cruel and unusual punishment.”

State v Rayburn, 213-396; 238 NW 908

Indeterminate sentence as excessive. The appellate court may not say that an indeterminate sentence is excessive when the record reveals justification for a penitentiary sentence.

State v Overbay, 201-758; 206 NW 634

Eminent domain. Sec. 18.

I NATURE OF POWER OF EMINENT DOMAIN
II WHAT IS A PUBLIC PURPOSE
III COMPENSATION AND SECURITY
IV METHOD OF ASSESSING DAMAGE
V EXTENT OF RIGHT ACQUIRED
VI ACTS WHICH DO NOT CONSTITUTE TAKING OF PROPERTY BY EMINENT DOMAIN
VII EMINENT DOMAIN AND TAXATION

I NATURE OF POWER OF EMINENT DOMAIN

Municipal light and power lines—extra-territorial extension—constitutional taxation.

Premise No. 1. The state may, inter alia, constitutionally authorize its governmental agencies to tax for any purpose which justifies the exercise of the power of eminent domain.

Premise No. 2. The power of eminent domain may be exercised only for public purposes.

Premise No. 3. The construction, operation, renewal and extension of electric light and power plants are for public purposes.

Premise No. 4. The power of eminent domain has, by statute, been conferred on cities and towns for all the purposes last above named.

Conclusion: Sections 6142, and 8310, C, ‘31, are constitutional insofar as they authorize cities and towns to levy taxes for extending, beyond their corporate limits, the transmission lines of their municipally owned electric light and power plants.

II WHAT IS A PUBLIC PURPOSE

Construction of wharf—paramount right of state. The construction by the state of a wharf below high-water mark on a navigable lake (to the bed of which the state has title), in aid of navigation, and without compensation to the riparian owner, is but the exercise of a right and the execution of a trust which is paramount to any right of ingress and egress of said riparian owner.

Peck v Const. Co., 216-519; 245 NW 131; 89 ALR 1132
Materials destroying access to property. A substantial interference by a city with access to property by means of a public street constitutes a taking of private property for public use, even tho no part of the physical property of the property owner is taken, and the city must respond in damages for such taking.

Nalon v City, 216-1041; 250 NW 166

Public property as private property. The public property of the state may, under proper circumstances, constitute private property within the meaning of the federal constitution prohibiting the taking of private property for public use without just compensation; and it does not matter that the taking is by one exclusively engaged in interstate commerce.

State v Pipe Line, 216-438; 249 NW 386

Railway right of way for private business site. The board of railroad commissioners has no constitutional power to order a railway company to furnish a private party with a site on its right of way, and to fix the rental for such site, in order to enable such party to erect and maintain on such site a coal shed in which he may store his coal and from which he may sell his coal for private gain, §8169, C. '24, to the contrary notwithstanding.

Ferguson v Railway, 202-508; 210 NW 604; 54 ALR 1

III COMPENSATION AND SECURITY

Drainage. For annotations on compensation and security in drainage improvements, see under Amendment of 1908, p. 69 of Vol. I; also under §7451, Vol. I

Discussion. See 12 ILR 286—Attorney fees as just compensation

Compensation—measure of. The recoverable measure of damages to a farm, consequent on the condemnation of a highway right of way therethrough, is the difference in value of the farm as a whole before condemnation and the value immediately thereafter. It follows that the trial court on appeal cannot limit the jury solely to a consideration of the items of damages specifically alleged by the landowner in the petition filed under §7841-cl, C. '35 [§7841.1, C. '39].

Maxwell v Highway Com., 223-159; 271 NW 883; 118 ALR 882

Measure of damages—general rules—disturbance of peace and quiet as element. In condemnation proceeding to acquire ground for highway purposes where trees taken from plaintiff were left standing along highway, testimony showing that peace and quiet of plaintiff's home was disturbed by passers-by who stopped under trees, was not incompetent on the ground that it was not a proper element of damage, it being a well-settled rule that the landowner may show all detrimental elements affecting value and that he may also show the condition the property would be in after the condemned strip had been appropriated and used for the purposes for which it was taken.

Stoner v Highway Com., 227-115; 287 NW 269

Measure of damages—advantage not considered. In condemnation proceeding where land was taken for highway purposes, under the principle that advantage resulting from improvement of property taken by condemnation may not be taken into consideration in determining amount of plaintiff's damage, the defendant had no right to plead and prove matters relating to the manner of construction of the improvement which would tend to ameliorate damages.

Stoner v Highway Com., 227-115; 287 NW 269

Evidence—driving stock across highway. In condemnation proceeding to acquire ground to widen highway which divided plaintiff's farm, a hypothetical question asked of one witness as to whether the additional trouble experienced by plaintiff in driving his stock across highway, since it had been widened, would affect the values of the farm—altho being a question of doubtful propriety—was related to a matter so simple and self-evident that the opinion of the witness could add no force or prejudicial effect thereto.

Stoner v Highway Com., 227-115; 287 NW 269

Verdict not excessive for ground and ornamental trees. In a condemnation proceeding to acquire a strip of ground for highway purposes 17 feet wide on each side of an existing highway which divided an 80 acre farm, where the land appropriated comprised 1.2 acres and included 19 trees in front of plaintiff's home, some of them being very large, hardwood, slow growing, ornamental trees, planted in connection with carefully planned landscaping, held, verdict of $2,000 was not excessive.

Stoner v Highway Com., 227-115; 287 NW 269

Inadequate or excessive verdicts—control power of court. The verdict of a common-law jury in eminent domain proceedings is subject to the same review by the court for inadequacy or excessiveness as other verdicts in other proceedings. Record in highway condemnation proceedings reviewed, and held verdict so grossly excessive as to evidence passion and prejudice.

Campbell v Highway Com., 222-544; 269 NW 20

Protection of right. Injunction will lie to enjoin the construction of a dam and the consequent overflow of private property for the public use until the damages are paid; and this is true even tho the taker is solvent.

Scott v Price Bros. Co., 207-191; 217 NW 75
ART. I §18 EMINENT DOMAIN—§20 RIGHT OF ASSEMBLAGE

IV METHOD OF ASSESSING DAMAGE

Assessment of damage—jury question. In a condemnation proceeding to acquire ground for highway purposes, the question of damages to be assessed for the land appropriated is peculiarly one for the jury.

Stoner v Highway Com., 227-115; 287 NW 269

Disputed fact questions as to value—when jury findings control. In a condemnation proceeding to acquire ground for highway purposes, the right of the jury to decide disputed fact questions as to value will not be interfered with by the supreme court, if there is evidence upon which the jury could reach the verdict it did reach.

Stoner v Highway Com., 227-115; 287 NW 269

Instructions in re benefits. In eminent domain proceedings, an instruction that the compensation allowed should not leave the landowner "poorer or worse off or better off" because of the taking, is not subject to the vice of leading the jury to understand that in computing compensation, benefits accruing to the landowner because of the taking should be deducted, when the jury is repeatedly and explicitly told elsewhere in the instructions that they should not consider benefits.

Witt v State, 223-156; 272 NW 419

Drains—trespass not taking. A landowner may not say that his land was taken for public use because in cleaning out a public ditch as a repair thereof, the contractor wrongfully distributed the dirt beyond the right of way line of the ditch as originally constructed.

Payne v Drain. Dist., 223-634; 272 NW 618

V EXTENT OF RIGHT ACQUIRED

Compensation—protection of right by injunction until damages paid. Injunction will lie to enjoin the construction of a dam and the consequent taking by overflow of private property for the public use until the damages are paid; and this is true even tho the taker is solvent.

VI ACTS WHICH DO NOT CONSTITUTE TAKING OF PROPERTY BY EMINENT DOMAIN

"Taking" defined. The enlargement of the boundaries of a municipality does not constitute a "taking" of private property for a public use, in a constitutional sense.

Wertz v City, 201-947; 208 NW 511

VII EMINENT DOMAIN AND TAXATION

No annotations in this volume

Imprisonment for debt. SEC. 19.

Imprisonment for criminal costs. See under §13564

Imprisonment for contempt. A defendant who is decreed to pay alimony and who willfully secretes his property for the purpose of avoiding compliance with said order, may be imprisoned as for a contempt of court, an award of alimony not being a "debt" in the sense of the constitutional prohibition against imprisonment for "debt".

Mason v Dist. Court, 209-774; 229 NW 168
Roberts v Fuller, 210-956; 229 NW 163
Roach v Oliver, 215-800; 244 NW 899

Imprisonment for costs. Imprisonment for nonpayment of costs in contempt proceedings is unauthorized.

Hammer v Utterback, 202-50; 209 NW 552

Jail sentence as imprisonment for debt—unconstitutional. Proceeding to establish paternity and to provide support money, being a civil proceeding, the statutory punishment by commitment to jail for nonpayment contravenes the constitutional prohibition against imprisonment for debt.

Right of assemblage—petition. SEC. 20.

Injunction violation by labor union officials. There was no denial of the right of freedom of speech in holding officers of a trade union in contempt of court for violating an injunction, when they counseled, aided, abetted, and assisted in the violation of the injunction.

Carey v Dist. Court, 226-717; 285 NW 236

Injunction against labor union—no denial of freedom of speech and assembly. An injunction against officers of a trade union was not void on its face as a denial of the right of freedom of speech and assembly because it prohibited unlawful interference with a company's business, mass picketing, intimidation and coercion, and going upon the company's premises without consent.

Carey v Dist. Court, 226-717; 285 NW 236

Right of petition—construction. The constitutional right of the people to petition their legislature for a redress of grievances is no impediment in the way of a board of supervisors, acting for a public drainage district, in entering into a proper and unobjectionable contract with attorneys to secure legislation which will carry out a moral obligation on the part of the state.

Kemble v Weaver, 200-1333; 206 NW 83
§21 EX POST FACTO LAW—CONTRACTS ART. I

Attainder—ex post facto law—obligation of contract. Sec. 21.

I EX POST FACTO LAWS
II RETROACTIVE LAWS IN GENERAL
III LEGALIZING ACTS AS RETROACTIVE LAWS
IV IMPAIRMENT OF CONTRACTS
V IMPAIRMENT OF VESTED RIGHTS

I EX POST FACTO LAWS

Aggravated punishment. A statute is not ex post facto because it attaches to a crime an increased punishment because of former convictions, even though such former convictions were had prior to the enactment of the statute.

State v Norris, 203-327; 210 NW 922

Increasing punishment. A statute which increases the punishment for an existing offense is not applicable to a violation occurring prior to the enactment of the punishment-increasing act.

State v Marx, 200-884; 205 NW 518

Requisites and sufficiency—applicability of short form act. The sufficiency of the charging part of an indictment will be determined by the short form of indictment act, the said act was enacted after the return of the indictment but before the sufficiency thereof was formally questioned; said act not being an ex post facto act.

State v Johnson, 212-1197; 237 NW 522

Redemption from tax sale—law governing. The time in which redemption may be made from tax sale is absolutely governed by the law in force at the time of the sale. It follows that a legislative amendment shortening the redemption period cannot apply to pre-existing sales.

Lockie v Hammerstrom, 222-451; 269 NW 507

II RETROACTIVE LAWS IN GENERAL

Foreclosure—continuance under emergency act. The emergency act for the continuance of mortgage foreclosure proceedings (45 GA, ch 182) was not designed to grant a continuance to a mortgagor of nonhomestead property who is so hopelessly insolvent that a continuance would, manifestly, work no benefit to him but would work material harm to the mortgagee.

Reed v Snow, 218-1165; 254 NW 800

Judicial functions outside legislative powers. A statute which provided that service in any action could be made on a nonresident criminal defendant while he was within the state, was unconstitutional in providing that the statute legalized such service where it had been made in cases pending, as after the commencement of an action, the question of determining jurisdiction is a judicial function which the legislature is without power to control.

Frink v Clark, 226-1012; 285 NW 681

Mechanics' liens. Chapter 425, C, '24, relative to labor and material on public improvements has no retroactive effect—applies only to claims arising after it took effect, to wit, October 28, 1924.

Francesconi v School Dist., 204-307; 214 NW 882

Shortening limitation on action—constitutional condition. Principle reaffirmed that the legislature may constitutionally shorten the time within which an existing cause of action may be barred if a reasonable time is given for the commencement of an action before the bar takes effect.

Johnson v Leese, 223-480; 273 NW 111

III LEGALIZING ACTS AS RETROACTIVE LAWS

Legalizing acts as special legislation. See under Art III, §30

Curative and legalizing acts. Principle recognized that the legislature may validate that which the judiciary has invalidated, especially in matters of public right.

Wilcox v Miner, 201-476; 205 NW 847
Peverill v Board, 201-1050; 205 NW 543

Legalization of invalid tax. The legislature may validly legalize a levy of taxes made under a supposedly legal statute but which was invalid because its title was constitutionally insufficient. (See also Const., Art. III, §30 (VI)

Chi. RI Ry. v Rosenbaum, 212-227; 231 NW 646

Legalization of illegal acts. When an act is done in a certain manner and under certain conditions, but in violation of an existing statute, the legislature may constitutionally validate the act, when it might constitutionally have originally ordered the act done in the manner and under the conditions in which it was done.

Peverill v Board, 201-1050; 205 NW 543

Legalizing tax levy after invalidating ruling by court. A legislative act which legalizes a tax levy after the appellate court has ruled (but before entry of judgment) that the taxpayer is entitled to a refund of the tax paid because the tax levy was void owing to the absence of an authorizing statute, neither disturbs any vested interest of the taxpayer, nor constitutes an unconstitutional interference with the judiciary.

Chi. RI Ry. v Streepy, 211-1334; 236 NW 24
ART. I §21 EX POST FACTO LAW—CONTRACTS 24

II LEGALIZING ACTS AS RETROACTIVE LAWS—concluded

Permissible legalization. The legislature may validly legalize the act of the secretary of agriculture in enrolling a county under the accredited area plan for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis when the illegality of such enrollment is predicated on the doubt whether the petitions as a basis for such action contained the statutory number of signatures.

Peverill v Board, 208-94; 222 NW 535

Retroactive laws. The legalization of a tax levy made by a county under an optional and supposedly legal statute, but which was in fact originally invalid because of a fatal defect in the title, does not constitute a levying by the general assembly of a retroactive tax on the county.

Chi. RI Ry. v Rosenbaum, 212-227; 231 NW 646

Reducing time in which to appeal. The time allowed for an appeal cannot be reduced by legislative enactment after judgment.

Davis v Robinson, 200-840; 205 NW 590
Insell v McDaniels, 201-533; 207 NW 533

IV IMPAIRMENT OF CONTRACTS

Impairment—essential nature of clause. Principle recognized that the constitutional provision relative to impairment of contracts is not an absolute one and is not to be read with literal exactness like a mathematical formula.

Peverill v Board, 207-94; 222 NW 535

Existing statutes. An insurance company may not complain that its contracts are impaired by an unreplicated statute which was enacted prior to its incorporation and which provides that assessments shall be brought in the county in which the defendant resides.

Midwest Ins. v DeHoet, 208-49; 222 NW 548

Valid statutes read into contracts. Principle affirmed that contracts are conclusively presumed to have been entered into in view of the valid statutes then existing and controlling the subject matter.

Peverill v Whitney Co., 219-1281; 261 NW 374

Judgment not contract. A judgment is not a contract in the ordinary sense of said latter term.

Berg v Berg, 221-526; 264 NW 821

Repeal of statute. A party may not complain that a statute impairs his contract rights when the statute in question is repealed before his complaint is heard.

Peverill v Board, 208-94; 222 NW 535

Change in venue of action. A legislative change in the venue of an action may be validly applied to an existing contract.

Grain Belt Ins. v Gentry, 208-21; 222 NW 855

Assessment against stockholder—additional remedy to enforce. A statutory assessment against a holder of bank stock in order to restore the impaired capital of the bank creates a personal liability on the part of the stockholder, and the statutory remedy for enforcing such personal liability by a sale of the stockholder's stock may, after the stockholder acquires his stock, be constitutionally supplemented by an additional statutory remedy, to wit, an action at law to recover of the stockholder the balance due him after selling said stock. The granting of such additional remedy does not impair the stockholder's contract in a constitutional sense.

Woodbine Bk. v Shriver, 212-106; 236 NW 10

Certificate of deposit—permissible impairment. A bank depositor may not successfully claim that his certificate of deposit was unconstitutionally impaired by a later, state-approved, good-faith bank reorganization (in which he did not join) under which all claimants (claims over $10) were given equal but less favorable terms of payment than their contracts originally contemplated, when, at the time of his deposit, the statute law contemplated and substantially provided for such reorganization and change in terms of payment; and if the actual reorganization was effected under later statutes amending the said former ones, the answer is that he was dealing with a quasi-public corporation, and that his contract of deposit must reasonably yield to the police power in the interest of the public generally, especially in an emergency resulting from a great financial depression.

Peverill v Board, 219-1281; 261 NW 374

Repeal of preferential deposit law. The repeal of a statute which gives the state a preferential right, as a depositor of state funds, to be first paid in full in those cases only where the bank is placed in the hands of a receiver, does not impair the contract obligation of an existing surety on a bond conditioned, in effect, to pay the state all loss on such deposit whether the bank was or was not placed in the hands of a receiver.

Leach v Bank, 205-1154; 213 NW 517

Income tax—interest on tax-exempt securities. Interest on tax-exempt municipal securities is not exempt from state income tax, tho the securities themselves are, by statute, exempt from general property tax. The statutory declaration that said securities "shall not be taxed" has reference solely to general property tax, and not to an excise tax—an income tax—on the interest collected on such securities.

Hale v Board, 223-321; 271 NW 168; 302 US 95

Reducing statute of limitation on judgments. A legislative act which reduces the existing statutory period of time in which existing judgments may be enforced, yet accords to the holders of such judgments a reasonable time in which to enforce such judgments before the reduced time becomes an absolute bar, is not violative of the federal constitutional prohibition of the impairment of contracts by legislation.

Berg v Berg, 221-826; 264 NW 821

Foreclosure—economic conditions and fluctuations in values. Equity cannot refuse to foreclose a mortgage because of a depressed economic condition existing throughout the country, nor, in foreclosing, may it assume to adjust the judgment to the fluctuating value of the legal tender as declared by the federal government.

Federal Bank v Wilmarth, 218-339; 252 NW 507; 94 ALR 1338

Continuance under financial emergency. The legislative power of the state may, for the purpose of ameliorating an existing, public, financial emergency, constitutionally grant to a mortgagor, on equitable conditions, the right, in an action to foreclose the mortgage, to a continuance which is very materially in excess of that ordinarily permitted or sanctioned by law. (For fundamental reason see Des Moines Bank v Nordholm, 217 Iowa 1319.)

Craig v Waggoner, 218-876; 256 NW 285

Extending redemption period. Neither the federal nor state constitutional prohibitions against (a) the impairment of the obligations of contracts, or (b) the deprivation of vested property rights without due process of law, is violated by a statute (1) which is enacted during, and for the purpose of ameliorating, an existing public financial emergency, (2) which grants to the owner of real estate during the existence of said emergency the right to possession and a time, very materially in excess of that otherwise granted by law, in which to redeem from mortgage foreclosure sale—even tho the sale precedes the passage of the emergency act—and (3) which sequesters the rents during said extended time and fairly and reasonably applies them to the protection of the mortgagor and his security. (45 GA, ch 179.)

Reason: Contract rights and vested interests must reasonably yield to the paramount right of the state, through the reservoir of its reserved police power, to protect, by appropriate legislation, its sovereignty, its government, its people and their general welfare, against exigencies arising out of a great emergency.

Tusha v Eberhart, 218-1065; 256 NW 740

Connecticut Ins. v Clingan, 218-1213; 257 NW 213

Moratorium act—unauthorized continuance. The mortgagor moratorium act does not, and constitutionally could not, authorize a continuance thereunder to a mortgagor when the record affirmatively shows (1) that the mortgaged land is of a value substantially less than the mortgage debt, and (2) that, irrespective of the foregoing fact, the mortgagor-owner is in such financial condition as to exclude any possible redemption by him.

John Hancock Ins. v Schlosser, 222-447; 269 NW 485

Moratorium acts of 47th GA—emergency must be temporary—judicial notice. An emergency, in order to justify legislation in contravention of the constitution on the theory of an exercise of the reserve police power, must be temporary or it cannot be called an emergency, but becomes an established status. In determining this question, the supreme court may take judicial notice of conditions existing at the time of enactment and whether or not they constitute an emergency.

Metropolitan v McDonald, 225-1075; 283 NW 445

Police power—mortgage continuance—moratorium acts of 47th GA—unconstitutionality. Moratorium acts of the 47th GA extending foreclosure of mortgages, and extending time in which to redeem, are unconstitutional as an impairment of the obligation of contract, when such acts are not based on an actual existing emergency calling for an exercise of the reserve police power of the state.

John Hancock Ins. v Eggland, 225-1073; 283 NW 444

V IMPAIRMENT OF VESTED RIGHTS

Abolition of common law. The legislature may, against a surety on a bond to secure state deposits in a bank, constitutionally abolish any preferential right in the state at common law to demand payment of its deposits in full—the existence of such right being assumed.

Attorney—right to practice mere privilege. The right to practice law is not a constitutional right—not a vested right—but a mere privilege.

In re Cloud, 217-3; 250 NW 160

Political rights—nonviolation. A statute which requires a favorable vote equal to 60 percent of all the votes cast for and against a proposal to issue bonds in order to authorize them is not violative of the principle that political power is inherent in the people.

Waugh v Shirer, 216-468; 249 NW 246

Noninjured complainant. A party may not question the constitutionality of a statute when he fails to show that he has been or will be injured by the statute. In other words, he may not borrow an objection from one who could complain, but does not complain. So held where a noninjured party predicated unconstitutional upon the statute which reduced the public compensation for animals slaughtered by the state in the eradication of bovine tuberculosis.

Peverill v Board, 201-1050; 205 NW 643

Vested rights—not acquirable in remedy. Principle reasserted that, ordinarily, no one acquires, in a statutory remedy for the collection of a debt, such vested interest as can be properly denominated “property”.

Berg v Berg, 221-326; 264 NW 821

Nonvested right in decree affecting public right. A plaintiff who (while furnishing electric light and power to a municipality and to the inhabitants thereof) obtains a judicial decree which adjudges invalid (for a statutory defect) certain proceedings for the erection by the municipality of an electric light and power plant, acquires by said decree no such right as will prevent the general assembly from constitutionally legalizing said proceeding, it appearing that when the legalizing act was enacted said plaintiff had, by final judicial decree, been wholly ousted, as a public utility, from said municipality.

Iowa E. L. & P. Co. v Grand Junction, 221-441; 264 NW 84

Decree—unauthorized modification. A decree in divorce proceedings to the effect that the wife should, until a named date, have the possession of certain property belonging to the husband, and that the husband, in the meantime, should pay off an existing mortgage and accruing taxes on the property, was a vested interest in the husband when he complies with the decree—an interest which the court has no jurisdiction to disturb by a subsequent order conferring the property absolutely on the wife.

Guisinger v Guisinger, 201-409; 205 NW 752

Interest on public deposits—power to divert. The general assembly has ample authority to divert from the county general fund to the state sinking fund for public deposits interest accruing on deposits of public funds in the hands of the county treasurer.

Scott Co. v Johnson, 209-213; 222 NW 378

See State v Bartlett, 207-208; 222 NW 529

See Boyd v Johnson, 212-1201; 238 NW 61

Repeal of preferential deposit law. A statute which gives to the state, when it has public funds on deposit in a bank, the preferential right to be paid in full if the bank passes into the hands of a receiver does not confer on a surety on a bond to secure said deposit any such vested right to be subrogated to said right of the state as will constitutionally prevent the legislature from repealing the statute.

Andrew v U. S. Bank, 205-883; 213 NW 531

Leach v Bank, 205-1154; 213 NW 517

Priority in payment of deposits. The general assembly has constitutional power by legislative act to deprive a county or municipal corporation of an existing right of preference in a deposit of money belonging to the county in an insolvent bank.

Kuhl v Farmers Bank, 203-71; 212 NW 837

Priority in payment of deposits. A municipal corporation which, at the time an insolvent bank is placed under receivership, is entitled, under a statute as construed by the supreme court, to a priority in the payment of its municipal deposit, is not deprived of such priority by a subsequently enacted statute which denies such priority.

Murray v Bank, 202-281; 208 NW 212

Moratorium act—unallowable apportionment of rent. When the security for a debt is a combination (1) of a mortgage on the land, and (2) of a chattel mortgage on the rents and crops of the said land, the court, on granting under the moratorium act a continuation of foreclosure proceedings, has no authority under said act (nor could it constitutionally be given such authority) to apportion or set off to the mortgagor any portion of said rents.

Equitable v McNamara, 220-297; 259 NW 231; 262 NW 466

Right to rents in mortgage foreclosure. The statutory provision, which provides, in substance, that a pledge in a mortgage of the rents of the land shall carry the same priority of right over said rents as the mortgage carries over the land itself, cannot constitutionally apply to a mortgagee who, prior to the enactment of the statute, had fully acquired priority of right to the rents under the law then prevailing, to wit, the law which granted priority to the mortgagor who first filed petition for foreclosure and first prayed for a receiver.

First Tr. JSL Bank v Smith, 219-658; 259 NW 192

Curtailing right of mortgagee. Whether a mortgagee of unimproved land may constitutionally be deprived of a lien on future-erected and permanent improvements on the land, quaere.

Crawford-Fayram Co. v Mann, 203-748; 211 NW 225

Pfister v Sioux City, 220-308; 222 NW 551; 100 ALR 1298

I THE TRIPARTITE SYSTEM

II DELEGATION AND USURPATION OF LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY

III DELEGATION AND USURPATION OF EXECUTIVE AUTHORITY

IV DELEGATION AND USURPATION OF JUDICIAL AUTHORITY

I THE TRIPARTITE SYSTEM

Legislature—sole power to legislate. The sole power of making laws resides in the legislative branch of government.

State v Woitha, 227-1; 287 NW 99

Legislature’s power—felony for third conviction—liquor violation. Legislature possesses full authority to enact statute making third and subsequent offense of violating liquor law a felony.

State v Erickson, 225-1261; 282 NW 728

Statutes—duty of court to make effective. It is the duty of the court in construing statutes to seek the object and purpose of the law and then give it force and effect if not contrary to established legal precedents.

Keokuk Co. v Keokuk, 224-718; 277 NW 291

Social welfare board. Social welfare board’s determination of eligibility for old-age assistance is administrative duty. Judicial review is limited.

Schneberger v Board, 228- ; 291 NW 859

II DELEGATION AND USURPATION OF LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY

Delegation of legislative powers. See under Art III, §1 (second)

Power to declare legislative acts unconstitutional. See under Art XII, §1

Discussion. See 17 ILR 239—Delegation to the people

Legislative authority—delegation. The statutory direction that the secretary of agriculture shall, in the administration of the bovine tuberculosis act, certify to the county auditor the facts which render unnecessary a tax levy in the county, constitutes no delegation to an individual of discretionary legislative power.

Fevold v Board, 202-1019; 210 NW 139

Nondelegation of authority. The statutory provision (§2930, C, '31) which requires the board of supervisors, under named conditions, to appropriate from the county general fund money to, and in aid of, a farm bureau organization, cannot be deemed a delegation to the said organization of the power to levy a tax on the public.
II DELEGATION AND USURPATION OF LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY—concluded

Blume v Crawford Co., 217-545; 250 NW 733

Delegation of powers—liberal interpretation. The constitutional prohibition against delegating legislative powers to administrative boards is given a liberal interpretation in favor of constitutionality of legislation.

Miller v Schuster, 227-1005; 289 NW 702

Delegation of legislative power. The legislature has no constitutional right to delegate to an administrative department, e. g., the conservation commission, the strictly and exclusively legislative power to formulate a policy and make regulations restricting angling. It may, however, make such declaration of policy, definitely describing the subject, the field, and the character of regulations intended to be imposed and leave to the department the manner in which that policy shall apply.

State v Van Trump, 224-504; 275 NW 569
See Goodlove v Logan, 217-98; 251 NW 39

Delegation of powers by legislature—Iowa securities act. Because the Iowa securities act covers such a broad field of transactions that it cannot cover each particular case in detail, it was proper for the legislature to delegate to an officer certain discretionary powers in administering the statute and in making such rules as were necessary to carry out the purposes of the law within the general policy set forth by the legislature.

Independence Fund v Miller, 226-1101; 285 NW 629

Delegating powers to nonlegislative board. While the legislature may not delegate its power to make laws, yet when it had declared a policy which is definite in describing the subject to which it relates and the character of the regulation intended to be imposed, it may delegate to nonlegislative board the power to make rules and regulations for effectuating such policy.

Miller v Schuster, 227-1005; 289 NW 702

Sales tax—shoe repairmen as consumers—delegation of power. Taxation uniformity, being an equal distribution of taxation burdens upon all persons of a given class, is impossible of perfect application, and a sales tax rule promulgated under valid legislative authority classifying shoe repairmen as consumers of materials used in shoe repairing, within the meaning of the sales tax act, is not arbitrary but uniform and consistent with the law imposing the tax and not a delegation of power.

Sandberg Co. v Board, 225-103; 278 NW 643; 281 NW 197

Powers given to state commerce commission—limitation. The state commerce commission (board of railroad commissioners) has no powers except those expressly given and those incidental to or implied in the power given.

Huxley v Conway, 226-258; 284 NW 138

Combining administrative and judicial powers. The vesting of certain discretion and judgment in ministerial and administrative officers does not necessarily lead to unconstitutionality. So held as to the bovine tuberculosis act.

Loftus v Dept., 211-556; 232 NW 412

District court's power in soldiers preference appeals. A soldiers preference law provision giving the district court the power to review the evidence and find whether the applicant is qualified, and to direct the appointing board as to further action to be taken, is not an unconstitutional delegation of power, as the finding of facts is often a judicial function, and the power of appointment is not exclusively a legislative or executive right.

Maddy v City Council, 226-941; 285 NW 208

Supreme court—no encroachment on legislative function. Supreme court may not write into a statute words that are not there.

Mathewson v Board, 226-61; 283 NW 256

Usurpation of authority. The supreme court usurps no legislative function when it declares and determines the legislative intent of a statute.

Galvin v Citizens Bank, 217-494; 250 NW 729

III DELEGATION AND USURPATION OF EXECUTIVE AUTHORITY

Zoning ordinance—vesting permit power in council. An ordinance establishing a restricted residence district and prohibiting the erection and maintenance therein of gasoline filling stations without obtaining a permit therefor is not unconstitutional because the power to grant or refuse the permit is lodged in the city council—the same body which enacted the ordinance.

Marquis v Waterloo, 210-439; 228 NW 870

IV DELEGATION AND USURPATION OF JUDICIAL AUTHORITY

Usurpation of judicial authority. Principle recognized that the legislature cannot reverse, vacate, or overrule the judgment of a court.

Wilcox v Miner, 201-476; 205 NW 847

Legalizing act noninvasion of judiciary. The validation by the legislative department of a municipal contract which the judicial department has invalidated, because of noncompliance with statutory requirements, does not constitute an unconstitutional invasion of the powers of the judiciary.
Iowa Elec. Co. v Grand Junction, 221-441; 264 NW 84

Nonjudicial review. A determination by the board of railroad commissioners, on supporting evidence, that the operation of a motor carrier line would promote the public convenience and necessity is constitutionally beyond review by the courts.
In re Beasley Bros., 206-229; 220 NW 306

Judicial functions outside legislative powers. A statute which provided that service in any action could be made on a nonresident criminal defendant while he was within the state, was unconstitutional in providing that the statute legalized such service where it had been made in cases pending, as after the commencement of an action, the question of determining jurisdiction is a judicial function which the legislature is without power to control.
Frink v Clark, 226-1012; 285 NW 681

Nonjudicial review of arbitrary act. The extension of the limits of a municipal corporation in strict compliance with a constitutional statute is conclusive on the courts, even though the statute is, to a degree, arbitrary.
State v Altoona, 201-730; 207 NW 789

Legalizing tax levy after invalidating ruling by court. A legislative act which legalizes a tax levy after the appellate court has ruled (but before entry of judgment) that the taxpayer is entitled to a refund of the tax paid because the tax levy was void owing to the absence of an authorizing statute, neither disturbs any vested interest of the taxpayer, nor constitutes an unconstitutional interference with the judiciary.
Chi. RI Ry. v Streepy, 211-1354; 236 NW 24

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT

General assembly. SECTION 1.

ANALYSIS

I GENERAL SCOPE OF POWER
II DELEGATION OF LEGISLATIVE POWER
III JUDICIAL REVIEW OF LEGISLATIVE ACTION

I GENERAL SCOPE OF POWER

Limitation on legislative power. See also under Art I, §25, Vol. I
Discussion. See 18 ILR 129—Administrative law symposium; 19 ILR 383—Recovery legislation.

Comprehensive power of general assembly. The general assembly, has power to enact any legislation it sees fit, provided such legislation is not plainly in violation of the state or federal constitution.
Carroll v Cedar Falls, 221-277; 261 NW 652

Definition of terms—power of general assembly. The general assembly in exercising its constitutional power over an authorized subject matter, may be its own lexicographer—may use its own terms and declare what entities shall be embraced therein. So held where in the enactment of a statute (Motor Vehicle Fuel Tax Act, ch 251-F1, C, '35 [ch 251.3, C, '39]) it defined the term "person" and, in effect, declared such term to include a municipal corporation.
State v Des Moines, 221-642; 266 NW 652

Public policy of statute. The public policy of a valid statute is solely for the legislature to determine, not the courts.
Brutsche v Coon Rapids, 223-487; 272 NW 624

When criminal intent immaterial. Under the Iowa securities law, the provision that the making of a "false" statement before the secretary of state relative to the financial condition of a corporation is a felony, renders immaterial testimony that the accused did not know that the statement was false.
Reason: The legislature may declare an act criminal irrespective of the knowledge or intent of the doer.
State v Dobry, 217-858; 250 NW 702

Legislature's power—felony for third conviction—liquor violation. Legislature possesses full authority to enact statute making third and subsequent offense of violating liquor law a felony.
State v Erickson, 225-1261; 282 NW 728

Curative acts—omissions of levying officer. The failure of an officer to indorse on an execution the procedural matters required by statute may be legalized by an act of the legislature.
Francis v Todd & Kraft, 219-672; 259 NW 249
Nelson v Hayes, 222-701; 269 NW 861

Salary—power to change. The general assembly has plenary power to reduce the salary of any public officer unless such reduction is prohibited by the constitution—a public office not being property.
Smith v Thompson, 219-888; 258 NW 190

Police power—prohibition of sales of cigarettes. Power of legislature to prohibit sale of cigarettes reaffirmed.
Ford Hopkins Co. v Iowa City, 216-1286; 248 NW 668
ART. III §1 GENERAL ASSEMBLY

I GENERAL SCOPE OF POWER—conclud’d

Unallowable irrevocable pledge. The general assembly has no power to render its enactment irrevocable and unrepealable by a future general assembly, even in an enactment which has been approved under the constitution by a direct vote of the people. So held where the act sought to irrevocably pledge certain indirect taxes to the payment of state bonds.

State v Council, 207-923; 223 NW 737

Interest on public deposits—power to divert. The general assembly has ample authority to divert from the county general fund to the state sinking fund for public deposits interest accruing on deposits of public funds in the hands of the county treasurer.

Scott Co. v Johnson, 209-213; 222 NW 378

Qualifications for office sufficiently set out in statute. The soldiers preference law is not unconstitutional for failure to provide standards of qualifications for office when it requires that the applicant be an honorably discharged soldier, that he be a citizen and a resident of the place of appointment, and that his qualifications be equal with those of the nonveteran applicant.

Maddy v City Council, 226-941; 285 NW 208

Legislative regulation—soldiers preference appointments. The soldiers preference law cannot be objected to on the grounds that it deprives the city of self-government when the powers of the municipality are derived solely from the legislature which has power under the constitution and under statute to prescribe rules governing municipalities.

Maddy v City Council, 226-941; 285 NW 208

II DELEGATION OF LEGISLATIVE POWER

Delegation and usurpation of legislative authority. See also §1 under “Of the Distribution of Powers” in this Article.

Discussion. See 22 ILR 684—Administrative commissions

Permissible agencies. The legislature may, generally speaking, choose any agency for the initiative and realization of the benefits of a public health measure.

Lausen v Board, 204-30; 214 NW 682

Legislative powers—no delegation to executive. Powers which can be exercised solely by the legislative branch of government may not be delegated to an administrative board which is a part of the executive branch of government.

Miller v Schuster, 227-1005; 289 NW 702

Nondelegation of authority. The statutory provision (§8950, C., ’31) which requires the board of supervisors, under named conditions, to appropriate from the county general fund money to, and in aid of, a farm bureau organization, cannot be deemed a delegation to the said organization of the power to levy a tax on the public.

Blume v Crawford County, 217-545; 250 NW 733; 92 ALR 757

Budget act—nondelegation of legislative authority. The broad, sweeping, and apparently unguarded discretion granted by statute (§888, C., ’31) to the director of the budget (now state comptroller) to grant or refuse permission to a municipality to make a transfer of its funds, does not constitute an unconstitutional grant of legislative power.

State v Manning, 220-525; 259 NW 213

Legislative power—nondelegation. The general assembly will not be deemed to delegate its legislative authority by authorizing its administrative body or board, in carrying out a law, to adopt rules and regulations which are not inconsistent with the law as the general assembly has enacted it.

Vilas v Board, 223-604; 273 NW 338

Criminal penalty in departmental rule. The mere fact that a rule or regulation of an administrative department, promulgated under valid legislative authority, imposes a criminal penalty for its violation will not invalidate it.

State v Van Trump, 224-504; 275 NW 669

Delegation of powers to executive. A statute, which delegates to the state banking board authority to determine and fix by regulation such maximum rate of interest or charges upon each class of small loans as will induce efficiently managed commercial capital to enter such business in sufficient amounts to make available adequate credit facilities to persons without the security usually required by commercial banks, is not an invalid delegation of legislative power because the standards fixed by the legislature are sufficiently definite and carefully defined to warrant conferring on such board the power to adopt rules and regulations and give effect to the legislative policy.

Miller v Schuster, 227-1005; 289 NW 702

Unallowable delegation. The general assembly cannot, for the protection of the highways or for the safety of the traffic thereon, constitutionally delegate to the state highway commission power to adopt rules and regulations which shall have the force and effect of law.

Goodlove v Logan, 217-98; 251 NW 39

Delegation of legislative power. The legislature has no constitutional right to delegate to an administrative department, e.g., the conservation commission, the strictly and exclusively legislative power to formulate a policy and make regulations restricting angling. It may, however, make such declaration of policy, definitely describing the subject, the field, and the character of regulations intended to be imposed and leave to the department the manner in which that policy shall apply.
State v Van Trump, 224-504; 275 NW 569
See Goodlove v Logan, 217-98; 251 NW 39

Sales tax rule for undertakers—reasonableness. Rule 49 of the board of assessment and review, applying to sales tax collectible from undertakers, is clearly reasonable and valid, being promulgated under proper legislative authority and containing alternate methods of computing the tax to fit varying methods of conducting such business.
Kistner v Board, 225-404; 280 NW 587

III JUDICIAL REVIEW OF LEGISLATIVE ACTION

Constitutionality of laws. See also under Art XII, §1

Determination of constitutional question only when necessary. The supreme court will not pass upon the constitutionality of a statute unless it is necessary to do so in the determination of a given case.
State v Dunley, 227-1085; 290 NW 41

Ambiguous statute—conditions existing—occasion and necessity of statute considered. Where language of statute is ambiguous, it is proper to consider conditions with reference to subject matter that existed when statute was adopted, occasion and necessity for statute, and causes which induced its enactment.
Jones v Dunkelberg, (NOR); 260 NW 717

Statutes—duty of court to make effective. It is the duty of the court in construing statutes to seek the object and purpose of the law and then give it force and effect if not contrary to established legal precedents.

Bills. SEC. 15.
Evidence of passage of bill. See under Art III, §17

Discussion. See 21 ILR 78, 128, 573—Judicial determination of due enactment

Enrollment of bill conclusive. The enrollment of a legislative bill and the due authentication of such enrollment by the signatures of the speaker of the house, president of the senate, and governor, constitute an unimpeachable attestation of what the legislative department has done.
Davidson v Mulock, 212-730; 235 NW 45

Presumption. An enrolled act which carries the signatures required by the constitution is presumed to have become a law, pursuant to the requirements of the constitution.
Dayton v Ins. Co., 202-753; 210 NW 945

Passage of bills. SEC. 17.

Fatally deficient journal entries. The mandatory constitutional requirement that a bill shall, in each house, be put on passage by a yeas and nay vote, and such vote entered on the journal, is not shown to have been complied with by a journal which simply shows the adoption by a yeas and nay vote of a conference report proposing certain amendments to the bill.
Smith v Thompson, 219-888; 258 NW 190

Readings and entry of vote. Legislative record reviewed and held to reveal full compliance with the constitutional requirements in re reading of the bill and the entry of the yeas and nays.
Witmer v Polk County, 222-1075; 270 NW 323

Adoption by house of senate amendments. The due passage of a bill by the house, and the amendment and due passage of the same bill by the senate, and the due concurrence of the house in said senate amendments, reveal a constitutional passage by the general assembly of the bill.
State v Woodbury Co., 222-488; 269 NW 449

Adoption of conference report—effect. When the general assembly is in deadlock over the final form and contents of a bill, the due adoption by both houses of the report of a joint conference committee and of the amendments therein proposed as an adjustment of existing differences, terminates all necessary legislative proceedings on said bill—other than enrollment and due signing. In other words, no necessity exists for a further or additional reading and passage of the bill as modified by said newly adopted amendments, when it is made to appear that, prior to the time said differences arose, each house had duly passed the bill immediately following the last reading thereof in said houses.

[The conference report and amendments therein proposed were adopted by a yeas and nays vote equal to that constitutionally required for the passage of a bill and said vote was duly entered on the journals of each house.]

Scott v Board, 221-1060; 267 NW 111
State v Arluno, 222-1; 268 NW 179
Brown v West, 222-331; 268 NW 525

Enrollment — when conclusive — when not conclusive. The text of the official enrollment of a legislative act will be treated by the courts as an absolute verity, but the courts will go behind such enrollment on the question whether the house or senate complied with the mandatory constitutional requirement that the bill be put on passage by a yeas and nays and such vote be entered on the legislative journal.

Smith v Thompson, 219-888; 258 NW 190

Nonconclusiveness of enrollment. Principle reaffirmed that the enrollment of a bill is not conclusive that constitutional requirements have been complied with in its passage.

Scott v Board, 221-1060; 267 NW 111

Constitutional enactment — sufficiency. The statute regulating the small loan business is not invalid on ground that in its enactment the legislature failed to comply with mandatory provisions of the constitution.

Miller v Schuster, 227-1005; 289 NW 702

Impeachment. SEC. 19.

Officers subject to impeachment — judgment. SEC. 20.

Nonimpeachable officer. The commissioner of insurance, being only an appointive, ministerial agency of the executive department of the state is not an impeachable officer.

Clark v Herring, 221-1224; 260 NW 436

Members not appointed to office. SEC. 21.

Appropriations. SEC. 24.

State comptroller — money payable by appropriation only. State disbursing officer is bound by the constitutional provision that no money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law.

O'Connor v Murtagh, 225-782; 261 NW 455

Compensation of members. SEC. 25.

Constitutional basis. The compensation of the lieutenant governor and members of the general assembly cannot be constitutionally fixed on any basis except on the basis of "per diem and mileage".

Gallarno v Long, 214-805; 243 NW 719

Reimbursement for personal expenses. The legislature cannot constitutionally reimburse its members or the lieutenant governor for an expense incurred by said officers unless said expense is a governmental or legislative expense — an expense necessary to enable said officers to perform their duties.

Gallarno v Long, 214-805; 243 NW 719

Time laws to take effect. SEC. 26.

Existing but noneffective statute — effect. A city, in acquiring jurisdiction to construct a public improvement, need only comply with existing effective statutes. In other words, it need not comply with a statute which then exists, but which has not yet taken effect.

Butters v City, 202-30; 209 NW 401

Acts of special session. Acts of a special session of the general assembly, in the absence of any contrary direction therein, take effect ninety days after final adjournment, the time being computed on the basis of excluding the day of adjournment and including the ninetieth day.

Clingingsmith v Dairy Co., 202-773; 211 NW 413
Danbury v Riedmiller, 208-879; 226 NW 159

Lotteries. SEC. 28.

Consideration for chance — indispensable element. A scheme for the distribution, by lot or chance, of valuable prizes does not constitute a lottery when the recipient of the prize neither pays nor hazards anything of value for the chance to obtain said prize. And it is quite immaterial that the donor of such prizes expects such distribution of prizes will work a financial betterment of his business.

State v Hundling, 220-1369; 264 NW 608; 103 ALR 861

II TITLES OF ACTS
I SUBJECT MATTER OF ACTS

Presumption of constitutionality—strong case to invalidate. In passing upon constitutionality of acts of the legislature a presumption exists in favor of constitutionality, and an act will be invalidated only when it is clearly, plainly, and palpably unconstitutional, and it is the duty of the courts to give such a construction to an act that, if possible, this necessity is avoided and the act upheld.

State v Talerico, 227-1315; 290 NW 660

Unity of object. A statute which simply fixes the vote sufficient to authorize the issuance of bonds cannot be said to contain more than one subject.

Waugh v Shirer, 216-468; 249 NW 246

Multifarious provisions with unity of object. A legislative title which expresses a general and outstanding legislative object justifies the inclusion in the act itself of any number of provisions, howsoever multifarious, which have a unity of object in accord with that expressed in the title.

Davidson Co. v Mulock, 212-730; 235 NW 45

Nonduality in subject matter. Neither is the title of an act nor the act itself dual in subject matter in a constitutional sense:

1. When the title declares a purpose, (a) to amend a section of an existing statutory chapter governing the acquisition by cities and towns of named public utilities, (b) to provide additional methods of paying for said plants, and (c) outlines in a general way said proposed additional methods; and,

2. When the text of the act follows the title with congruous provisions.

Iowa-Neb. Co. v Villisca, 220-238; 261 NW 423

Joining germane matters. The constitutional requirement that a legislative act “shall embrace but one subject and matters properly connected therewith” is not violated by an act (1) authorizing different offenses to be charged in the same indictment, and (2) regulating peremptory challenges under such charge, the latter being germane to the former.

State v Miller, 217-1283; 252 NW 121

Amendment, revision, and codification. In the amendment, revision, and codification of the statutes which resulted in the Code of 1924, a reference in the code revision acts to a section number of the compiled code or of the supplements thereto effected the same result as tho the reference had been to the corresponding official section number of the statute as it existed when it was carried into the compiled code or supplements.

Rains v Bank, 201-140; 206 NW 821

Amendment, revision, and codification. The amendment, revision, and codification of a section of the Compiled Code of 1919 “to read as follows” worked an effectual repeal of the same section as it appeared in the Code of 1897.

Dayton v Ins. Co., 202-753; 210 NW 945

II TITLES OF ACTS

Construction. Legislative acts must be construed consistently with their titles. Nor can they be given any broader scope than their titles.

Siegel v Railway, 201-712; 208 NW 78

Liberal construction for constitutionality. The decisions involving the sufficiency of titles to legislative enactments lay down certain general rules. It is held the constitution should be liberally construed so as to embrace all matters reasonably connected with the title and which are not incongruous, unconnected, or unrelated thereto.

State v Talerico, 227-1315; 290 NW 660

Title embracing one subject—rules for determination. Constitutional provision that title to legislative acts shall embrace but one subject and matters connected therewith was designed to prevent surprise in legislation, but the title need not be an index or epitome of the act or its details. The subject of the bill need not be specifically or exactly expressed in the title, nor is it necessary that each thought or step toward the accomplishment of object be embodied in a separate act, nor is it important that it contains matters usually expressed in separate acts when they are germane to the general subject.

State v Talerico, 227-1315; 290 NW 660

Legislative intent expressed in enactments. The act of placing a section under a particular chapter of the code and the wording of the headings of the section, have little, if any, weight as official interpretations.

State v Oge, 227-1094; 290 NW 1

Amendment, revision, and codification. A bill for “an act to amend, revise, and codify” enumerated sections of law embracing the former law governing the requisites and sufficiency of indictments, furnishes a sufficient title to support what is now known as the short form indictment act.

State v Henderson, 215-276; 243 NW 289

Simmer law—bond statutes not included.

Weiss v Woodbine, 228- ; 289 NW 469

Short form indictment act. An act to amend, revise and codify specifically named sections of law “relating to the form, contents, and sufficiency of indictments, and to provide for bills of particulars in aid of indictments”, is a perfectly good title to the act commonly known as the short form indictment act.

State v Engler, 217-138; 281 NW 88

II TITLES OF ACTS—continued

Title omnibus in form. A title which declares a purpose to amend a multitude of specifically named sections of the statutes which are described as "all relating to statutory salaries and compensation of state, county and city officers" complies with the constitutional requirement that an act shall embrace "but one subject".

Smith v Thompson, 219-888; 258 NW 190

Sufficiency of title. A title which recites that the act "creates a park board in cities having a population of 125,000 or more" sufficiently indicates that the act is designed to apply to cities subsequently acquiring the required population.

State v Darling, 216-553; 246 NW 390; 88 ALR 218

Different but related matters. This section is not violated by the title preceding §9253, C, '31, to wit: "Action by creditor", even tho said section does provide for action by three different parties, viz: action by an assignee, action by a receiver, and action by a creditor.

Andrew v Bank, 216-244; 249 NW 377

Title amendatory of existing section. A title to a legislative act which declares a purpose to amend a named section of existing school law "relating to attaching and detaching territory to and from adjoining corporations", justifies the inclusion in the act of provisions for a new and additional plan for attaching and detaching territory.

Rural Sch. Dist. v McCracken, 212-1114; 233 NW 147

Title—dual subject matter. A legislative act which is supported by a title which declares a purpose to amend a named section of existing school law "relating to attaching and detaching territory to and from adjoining corporations", is void insofar as said act assumes to cover an additional subject matter not mentioned or referred to in the title, e. g., provisions prohibiting designated insurance companies or associations from writing life insurance on the assessment plan.

National Assn. v Murphy, 222-98; 269 NW 15

Co-operative selling agencies. An act "to provide for the organization of associations without capital stock and not for pecuniary profit" is broad enough to justify the inclusion of a provision (1) authorizing a co-operative selling association to require its members to sell all or a stipulated part of their products through the association, (2) providing for the form of the contract in such cases, and (3) empowering the association to provide for and collect liquidated damages for a violation of such contract.

Co-operative Assn. v Weir, 200-1293; 206 NW 297

Titles of acts—"to suppress" obscene literature—criminal penalty not intimated. The title, "An act to suppress obscene literature," fails to intimate that a criminal penalty was provided for a violation.

State v Chenoweth, 226-217; 284 NW 110

Incongruous matter. A provision for the suspension of the license of a physician because of a conviction of a violation of the federal statutes relating to narcotics cannot be validly enacted under a title which professes "to amend, revise, and codify" certain statutes "relating to the sale and transportation of intoxicating liquors under permits".

In re Breen, 207-65; 222 NW 426

since such subject is germane to an act relating to the sale of 4 percent beer.

State v Talerico, 227-1315; 290 NW 660

Noncompliance with title. The fact that the text of an act contains no repeal or amendments of certain statutory sections which the title declares a purpose to amend or repeal, does not invalidate the act.

Smith v Thompson, 219-888; 258 NW 190

Subject not embraced in title. When the general assembly sees fit specifically to enumerate in the title to an act the particular sections of the statutes which it proposes to repeal or amend, in order to effect a readjustment or reduction in the salaries of state, county and city officers, it may not constitutionally insert in the act a reduction in the salary of officers whose salaries are fixed by sections not so specifically enumerated in the title.

Smith v Thompson, 219-888; 258 NW 190

Act in excess of title—effect. A legislative act entitled "An act to provide a method whereby assessment life associations may be reincorporated as legal reserve life insurance companies", is void insofar as said act assumes to cover an additional subject matter not mentioned or referred to in the title, e. g., provisions prohibiting designated insurance companies or associations from writing life insurance on the assessment plan.

National Assn. v Murphy, 222-98; 269 NW 15
§30 GENERAL ASSEMBLY ART. III

III CLASSIFICATION OF CITIES AND TOWNS
IV TAXATION
V VALIDITY OF CERTAIN TAX LAWS
VI LEGALIZING ACTS
VII SPECIAL LAWS

Uniform operation. See also under Art I, §6

I GENERAL AND SPECIAL LAWS DISTINGUISHED

Constitutional uniformity. A statute which applies equally to all of a specifically described class is constitutionally uniform.

Loftus v Dept., 211-566; 232 NW 412

Uniform operation. This section is not violated by the bovine tuberculosis act because it operates through the medium of county testing units.

Fevold v Board, 202-1019; 210 NW 139

Applicability to all under same conditions. A statute which provides the appellate procedure for all property owners who claim to be overassessed, is manifestly not lacking in constitutional uniformity.

Davidson v Mulock, 212-730; 235 NW 45

Bond election. A statute requiring a favorable vote equal to 60 percent of all the votes cast for and against a proposal to issue bonds, in lieu of former provisions requiring a majority vote only, is not violative of the constitutional prohibition against nonuniformity of operation.

Waugh v Shirer, 216-468; 249 NW 246

Class legislation—venue. The legislature may validly classify the subject of insurance into (1) life insurance and (2) nonlife insurance, and validly enact that actions to recover assessments under nonlife insurance contracts shall be brought in the county of the defendant’s residence, without applying the same statutory rule to life insurance companies.

Midwest Ins. v DeHoet, 208-49; 222 NW 548

Municipal utilities—discrimination against privately owned plants. Statutory authority to municipalities to erect, in their proprietary capacity, electric light and power plants, and to pay the entire initial cost thereof from the net profits of said plants, and to this end to fix such rates as will effect such payment, is not void as an unconstitutional discrimination against privately owned plants of the same kind.

Pennington v Sumner, 222-1005; 270 NW 629; 109 ALR 355

Discrimination as to defense to action. The statute (§8401, C, '27) prohibiting the defensive plea of want of legal incorporation to collateral actions by or against an acting corporation, is not unconstitutional on the ground that it is arbitrary and discriminatory.

First T&S Co. v U.S. Gyp. Co., 211-1019; 233 NW 187; 78 ALR 1196
I. GENERAL AND SPECIAL LAWS DISTINGUISHED—concluded

Permit to sell cigarettes—discretion. The cigarette permit act which provides that certain governmental bodies "may" grant permits for the sale of cigarettes ($1557, C, '31) arms said bodies with power to exercise at least a legal discretion to grant or refuse a permit. For example, a city council may, in the interest of the public as it may view the matter, validly fix the maximum number of permits that will be issued, and may refuse to issue more, and in so refusing it may not be said that the council acts arbitrarily, capriciously, or discriminatorily.

Ford Hopkins v City, 216-1286; 248 NW 668

Arbitrary classification. An ordinance which provides safety regulations over tanks wherein inflammable oils are stored for sale, is null and void when in the same municipality there are large numbers of other tanks identical with those embraced in the ordinance and used for the same purpose except the stored oil is not for sale.

Edwards & B. v City, 213-1027; 240 NW 711

Governmental functions—nonliability in performance. The statutory-prescribed rules of the state governing aerial navigation ($8338-c7, C, '35 [§8338.20, C, '39]) have no application to the state in its sovereign capacity, nor to its governmental agencies, nor to the officials of said agencies when exclusively engaged in performing the duties of said agencies.

De Votie v Cameron, 221-354; 265 NW 637

II. INCORPORATION OF CITIES AND TOWNS

III. CLASSIFICATION OF CITIES AND TOWNS

IV. TAXATION

Assessment—discrimination. No unallowable discrimination is worked by a statute which, in the assessment of the stock of an incorporated bank, authorizes a deduction for certain liabilities and does not allow such deduction in the assessment of the bank assets of a private banker.

Mannings Bk. v Armstrong, 204-512; 211 NW 485

Collection—special method—when followed. A special statutory method for collecting a special tax must be followed, but in the absence of such method, the right which inheres in sovereignty to enforce collection of taxes would apply.

State v National Ins., 223-1301; 275 NW 26

Income tax—power to classify. The legislature had the power, in enacting the income tax act, to classify the residents of this state according to their income.

Vilas v Board, 223-604; 273 NW 338

Allowable classifications—not special. The general assembly in the enactment of the chain store tax act (46 GA, ch 75; C, '35, ch 329-G1 [C, '39, ch 329.5]) did not go beyond its concededly broad power to classify:

1. By classifying chain stores, generally, as proper subjects for an occupational tax.
2. By classifying certain of said stores as not subject to said tax.
3. By classifying the taxpaying stores into groups of ten or multiples thereof and graduating the tax progressively on each group—it appearing that none of said classifications were arbitrary—that the reason for each was manifest or reasonably discernible—that all owners of chain stores similarly situated were treated alike.

Tolerton et al v Board, 222-908; 270 NW 427

Permissible classification. The motor vehicle carrier taxation act is not clearly, plainly, and palpably arbitrary, unreasonable, and unlawfully discriminatory because it provides that those who shall pay the tax shall be those only who operate motor vehicles not upon fixed rails, and as common carriers of freight and passengers, over regular routes, on scheduled trips and between fixed termini.

Iowa Motor v Board, 227-461; 221 NW 364; 75 ALR 1

Ruling of federal court—conclusiveness. The chain store tax act (46 GA, ch 75; C, '35, ch 329-G1 [C, '39, ch 329.5]) is in violation of the equal protection clause of the federal constitution insofar as it attempts to levy an annual tax solely on the basis of the gross receipts of said stores, such being the holding of the federal supreme court and such holding necessarily being conclusive on the courts of this state.

Tolerton et al v Board, 222-908; 270 NW 427

Assessment at less than actual value—justification. The statute directs property to be assessed at its actual value, it should not be so assessed if other property of a like or similar kind in the same assessment district is assessed at less than its actual value.

Talbott v Des Moines, 218-1397; 257 NW 393

V. VALIDITY OF CERTAIN TAX LAWS

Itinerant drug vendor act. The statute requiring a license of an itinerant vendor of drugs (§§3148, 3149, C, '31) are not discriminatory, do not effect double taxation, are not class legislation, were not enacted for any effect on trade or to remove competition, and are of uniform operation.

State v Logsdon, 215-1297; 248 NW 4

Legalizing acts as retrospective legislation. See under Art I, § 21

Allowable “local and special” legalizing act. The general assembly has plenary constitutional power to validate, by a strictly local and special act, the proceedings under which a municipal electric light and power plant (payable from plant earnings) has been constructed and placed in operation—it appearing that the contract under which said proceedings were had, had been judicially declared void because said contract was not let on competitive bids as mandatorily required by statute—the constitutional ex vi termini clearly recognizing the inapplicability of a general validating act to meet such a situation.

Class legislation—legalization of tax levies. The legalization of all taxes “heretofore assessed, levied and collected by any municipality” is not a local or special law without uniform operation throughout the state.

Chicago RI Ry. v Rosenbaum, 212-227; 231 NW 646

Void municipal warrants. A legalizing act purporting to legalize specified void municipal warrants then in litigation, but which act was held in said litigation inapplicable to said warrants because of a proviso in said act that it should not affect pending litigation, is not subject to the construction in later litigation that the act is applicable to the extent of legalizing the contract under which said former warrants were issued even tho the warrants were not legalized.

Roland Co. v Carlisle (Town), 215-82; 244 NW 707

VII SPECIAL LAWS

Special act—what is not. A legislative act which first makes a permissible classification of those who must pay the tax (one not arbitrary, unreasonable, and unlawfully discriminatory) and then provides that the resulting tax shall, inter alia, be used for the maintenance and repair of certain public highways, is not a “special law for road purposes”.

Iowa Motor v Board, 207-461; 221 NW 364; 75 ALR 1

§1 EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT ART. IV

General and local acts contrasted. Assuming that a supportable reason exists for classifying on the basis of population, a statute applicable to cities “now or hereafter having a population of” a named number, cannot be deemed “a local or special law” even tho when enacted it can apply to only one city, and even tho the creation of the official machinery for putting the act into effect in cities thereafter attaining said population is only implied.

State v Darling, 216-553; 246 NW 390; 88 ALR 218

Highway legislation. The constitutional provision that local or special laws for laying out, opening, and working highways shall not be passed, applies solely to ordinary legislation,—has no application to an act submitted to the electorate and designed to effect an improvement of specified state primary highways.

State v Council, 207-923; 223 NW 737

Extra compensation — payment of claims. SEC. 31.

Additional compensation after performance of contract—prohibition. Section 31, Const., Art. III, is a limitation upon the general assembly and upon every city council, and the final clause thereof conditionally withdraws the said limitation only as to particular claims pending before the general assembly, but grants no authority to the general assembly to legislate generally on the subject matter of a bonus or its equivalent for services after the services are performed.

Love v Des Moines, 210-90; 230 NW 373

Illegal reimbursement of contractor for loss. A municipal corporation has no legal authority, and can be given no constitutional legal authority, to pay or contract to pay its contractor, after performance of a contract and after settlement therefor, an added sum to reimburse the contractor for loss sustained by him because the federal government commandeered him and his equipment as a war measure, and thereby delayed the performance of the contract in question.

Love v Des Moines, 210-90; 230 NW 373

Senators—number—method of apportionment. SEC. 34.

Myers v United States, 272 US 52

Execution of laws. SEC. 9.

Vacancies. SEC. 10.
Atty. Gen. Opinions. See '34 AG Op 616; '38 AG Op 222, 616

Vacancy—when fillable by election. The statutory provision (§1157, C., '31) that if a vacancy occurs in an elective state office thirty days prior to a general election the vacancy shall be filled at said election, in legal effect prohibits the filling of such vacancy at said election when the vacancy occurs less than thirty days prior to said election.

State v Clausen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

Term — compensation of lieutenant governor. SEC. 15.

Governmental powers — legislators — reimbursement for personal expenses. The legislature cannot constitutionally reimburse its members or the lieutenant governor for an expense incurred by said officers unless said expense is a governmental or legislative expense—an expense necessary to enable said officers to perform their duties.

Basis for compensation. The compensation of the lieutenant governor and members of the general assembly cannot be constitutionally fixed on any basis except on the basis of "per diem and mileage". It follows that one general assembly may not increase the compensation of future members by reimbursing them for their personal living expenses incurred while in attendance at a session of the legislature.

Gallarno v Long, 214-805; 243 NW 719

Pardons — reprieves — commutations. SEC. 16.

Unlawful suspension. The court has no power, in a criminal case, to enter a suspension of sentence during good behavior, and on payment of the costs.

ARTICLE V
JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT

Courts. SECTION 1.
Delegation of judicial authority. See under Art III, §1 (IV) (first)
Power of courts to pass on constitutionality. See under Art XII, §1
Discussion. See 16 ILR 337—Research in administration of justice

Attorney—disbarment by special court—constitutionality. The act of the supreme court in appointing three district court judges as a special court to hear and determine disbarment proceedings against an attorney is necessarily a holding that the statute providing for such appointment is constitutional.

In re Cloud, 217-3; 250 NW 160

Disbarment proceedings—special court. The legislature has ample constitutional power to create a special court to hear and determine disbarment proceedings against an attorney, and the fact that said special court is composed of three district court judges appointed by the supreme court does not constitute an attempt by the legislature to create a district court of three judges in violation of §5, Art. V, of the constitution.

In re Cloud, 217-3; 250 NW 160

Nonusurpation of authority. The supreme court usurps no legislative function when it declares and determines the legislative intent of a statute.

Galvin v Citizens Bank, 217-494; 250 NW 729

Supreme court—no encroachment on legislative function. Supreme court may not write into a statute words that are not there.

Mathewson v Board, 226-61; 283 NW 256

Legalizing act noninvasion of judiciary. The validation by the legislative department of a municipal contract which the judicial department has invalidated, because of noncompliance with statutory requirements, does not constitute an unconstitutional invasion of the powers of the judiciary.

Iowa E. L. & F. Co. v Grand Junction, 221-441; 284 NW 84

Jurisdiction of supreme court. Sec. 4.

I LAW AND EQUITY IN GENERAL

II EQUITY JURISDICTION

III LAW JURISDICTION

IV APPEAL IN GENERAL

V SUPERVISORY AND IMPLIED POWERS

I LAW AND EQUITY IN GENERAL

Methods of trial on appeal. See under §§11431, 11432

"Jurisdiction" defined. Jurisdiction means the power of a court to take cognizance of and to decide a case and carry its judgment and decree into execution.

Western Grocer v Glenn, 226-1374; 286 NW 441

Without original jurisdiction. The supreme court has no original jurisdiction.

School Dist. v Samuelson, 220-170; 262 NW 169

II EQUITY JURISDICTION

Equitable action — insufficient record. A quite manifest duty rests on appellant in an equitable action to present the record with such affirmative fullness as will enable the appellate court to intelligently try the cause de novo.

Northrop v Mikkleson, 222-1046; 270 NW 401

Treating improperly stricken plea as in record. Upon appeal in an equity cause, the court, upon discovering from the record that the cause of action is barred by the statute of limitation, will treat an improperly stricken plea of such statute as still in the record, and enter judgment accordingly.

Lawrence v Melvin, 202-886; 211 NW 410

Equitable proceedings—trial de novo. An action which plaintiff denominates when commenced as "In equity", and which is fully tried "In equity" without objection or effort to transfer to law, will, on appeal by defendant, be treated as "In equity" and tried de novo, without assignment of error.

Bates v Seeds, 223-70; 272 NW 515

Limited appeal in equity limits de novo hearing. The de novo hearing on appeal in an equitable action is necessarily limited to the particular part of the decree from which the appeal is taken; and, under such an appeal, appellee cannot have a de novo hearing on some other part of the decree unless he perfects a cross-appeal.

Brutache v Coon Rapids, 220-1296; 264 NW 696

Trial de novo—custody of child. An appeal in habeas corpus proceedings involving the custody and best welfare of a child, necessarily and unavoidably gravitates to a review de novo; obviously such review is proper when distinctly equitable issues are involved.

Jensen v Sorenson, 211-354; 233 NW 717

De novo hearing regarding of decretal recitals of fact. A recital in a mortgage foreclosure decree that of two defensive pleas one had been established, and one had not been established, does not prevent the appellate court on review de novo from adjudging that both said defensive pleas have been established, even tho the prevailing party—the appellee—does not assume to appeal from the one adverse court finding of fact against him.

Northwest Ins. v Blohm, 212-89; 234 NW 268

Habeas corpus proceedings—custody of child. An appeal in habeas corpus proceedings—a law action—involving the custody and best welfare of a child necessarily and unavoidably gravitates to a review de novo.

Adair v Clure, 218-482; 255 NW 658

Taxation—levy and assessment—board of supervisors as objectors—trial de novo. The board of supervisors as objectors to the assessment of a stockyards company may properly appeal to the supreme court from an order sustaining a motion to dismiss their appeal to the district court, and the case in the supreme court is triable de novo.

Board v Sioux City Yards, 223-1086; 274 NW 17

III LAW JURISDICTION

Law (?) or equity (?)—mutual treatment of action. An action mutually treated as a law action, from its inception in the trial court to and including its presentation on appeal, must be treated on appeal as a law action.

Garden v Ins. Co., 218-1094; 254 NW 287

Law action tried by equity procedure—errors must be assigned. Where an essentially law action to recover a money judgment is brought and recognized as such by the parties and the court, it is not, without a record entry transferring it to equity, converted to an equity action because the parties with the consent of the court use an equity procedure, and appeal therefrom will be dismissed when no errors are assigned.

Petersen v New York Ins., 225-293; 280 NW 521

Transfer from equity to law—effect. A law action, e. g., quo warranto, commenced as an equitable action and properly transferred by the court to law, will, on appeal, be disposed of as a law action.

State v Murray, 219-108; 257 NW 553

Power to require assignments of error. The supreme court has both constitutional and statutory right and power to require such adequate assignments of error in appeals in law actions as will concisely inform the appellate court and appellee of the definite action of the trial court sought to be reviewed.

Siesseger v Puth, 211-775; 234 NW 540
ART. V §4 JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT

III LAW JURISDICTION—concluded

Final report of administrator — hearing. Hearings on final reports of administrators are not reviewed de novo in the appellate court.

In re Manning, 215-746; 244 NW 860

Fact findings in probate not triable de novo on appeal. Findings of fact by the trial court in a probate proceeding involving objections to an executor's report and payment of certain claims cannot be reviewed on appeal, such not being triable de novo.

In re Scholbrock, 224-593; 277 NW 5

Statutory punishment excessive—legislature not controlled by court. The punishment is believed excessive, supreme court has no power to change punishment fixed by specific enactment of legislature for third and subsequent offense of violating liquor law.

IV APPEAL IN GENERAL

Method of trial on appeal. See §§11431, 11433

Right of review—statutes govern appeal. The right of appeal, being purely statutory, is controlled by the statutes in effect at the time the judgment appealed from was rendered.

Ontjes v McNider, 224-115; 275 NW 328

Consent to jurisdiction—effect. Parties to litigation cannot, by agreement, confer jurisdiction upon the supreme court.

Hampton v Railway, 216-640; 249 NW 436

Original judgment by supreme court. The supreme court has no constitutional, statutory, implied, or inherent jurisdiction to enter an original judgment on a stay bond given by an appellee in compliance with an order of a judge of said court pending an application by appellee to the supreme court of the United States for a writ of certiorari to review a decision of the supreme court of this state.

Hoskins v Hotel, 206-932; 221 NW 442

Findings by probate court—conclusiveness. Findings of fact by a probate court are conclusive on the appellate court when they are fairly supported by competent testimony.

In re Fish, 220-1247; 264 NW 123

Findings of fact in probate. A supported finding of fact by trustees that the beneficiary of a testamentary bequest had fulfilled the conditions imposed on the payment of said bequest is conclusive on the appellate court.

In re Sams' Est., 219-374; 258 NW 682

Hearings in probate. Where the issue whether a trustee should be credited with a loss of trust funds was heard by the probate court without a jury (as a continuation of the probate proceedings out of which the trust arose) the holding of the court, granting such credit, will be sustained if the evidence pro and con would have presented a jury question had the hearing been before a jury.

In re Moylan, 219-624; 268 NW 766

Accounting and settlement. Supported findings and orders of the probate court on the hearing on the final report of a guardian are conclusive on the appellate court, the proceedings being at law.

In re Jefferson, 219-429; 257 NW 783

Accounting and settlement. An order of the probate court granting an executor credit on his final report for the amount paid by him on his own motion, on a claim against the estate, is conclusive on the appellate court if the record reveals supporting testimony as to the genuineness of the claim.

In re Plendl, 218-103; 253 NW 819

Appeal in name of deceased party. Altho plaintiff died during pendency of action below, supreme court took jurisdiction of appeal taken in name of such decedent, because parties treated cause as one properly before the court and because it was a case where court's constitutional authority could be invoked.

Bingaman v Rosenbohm, 227-655; 288 NW 900

Appeal from unrecorded order—no complaint by appellant. After the unsuccessful termination of his appeal, an appellant may not later challenge the jurisdiction of the supreme court to entertain the appeal because the order appealed from was not spread upon the district court records.

Lincoln Bank v Brown, 224-1256; 278 NW 294

Procedendo—competency as evidence. The supreme court, by virtue of its constitutional powers to issue writs necessary to the exercise of its powers, has power to provide, without the aid of a statute, for the writ of procedendo, in order to furnish the trial court with competent evidence of its final decision and of its release of jurisdiction.

State v Banning, 205-826; 218 NW 573

Dual remedies—appeal or mandatory order. Where, after reversal and remand in an equity cause, the trial court, on procedendo, enters a judgment which it has no discretion to enter, the defendant may apply directly to the appellate court for a mandatory order to the trial court to obey the procedendo, even tho the defendant might accomplish the same result by appealing from the entry of said judgment.

Ronna v Bank, 215-806; 246 NW 798

Unconstitutionality must be clearly shown. Courts are reluctant to declare legislation unconstitutional, and will do so only when the violation is clear, palpable, and practically free from doubt.

Maddy v City Council, 226-941; 285 NW 208
§§4-6 JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT  ART. V

Jurisdiction of district court.  Sec. 6.

Delegation of judicial authority. See under Art III, §1 (first); §10761

Discussion. See 20 ILR 83—Jurisdiction—Federal receiverships

Jurisdiction defined. Jurisdiction means the power of a court to take cognizance of and to decide a case and carry its judgment and decree into execution.

Western Grocer v Glenn, 226-1374; 286 NW 441

Rules of procedure—power to prescribe by order. Under the recognized rule that courts have the inherent power to prescribe such rules of practice and rules to regulate their proceedings in order to expedite the trial of cases, to keep their dockets clear, and to facilitate the administration of justice, the judges of a judicial district could adopt and enforce a general order requiring parties to cause each case to be finally determined within two years from date of filing petition and providing upon failure to comply with such order the clerk should enter upon the record, "Dismissed without prejudice for want of prosecution".

Hammon v Gilson, 227-1366; 291 NW 448

Dismissal of cases for want of prosecution—validity of general order. The fact that an order of the judges of a judicial district, requiring the parties to cause each case to be finally determined within two years from date of filing petition, was a general order applicable to all cases or proceedings pending or to come before the courts of the district did not invalidate such order.

Hammon v Gilson, 227-1366; 291 NW 448

Prosecution and termination—retention of jurisdiction—effect. In a judicial proceedings to accomplish a certain purpose, e. g., the proper and legal protection of both life tenants and remaindersmen in the matter of preserving the estate for all the parties, the record retention by the court of jurisdiction over the proceedings and parties thereto, will enable the court subsequently to make valid and supplementary orders in furtherance of the said purpose.

John Hancock Ins. v Dower, 222-1377; 271 NW 193

Contempt of court—legislative limitation on punishment. While the general assembly has no power to wholly deprive a constitutionally created court of its inherent power to inflict punishment for acts which are in contempt of such court, yet it may constitutionally impose a reasonable limitation on such courts as to the punishment which may be imposed.

Eicher v Tinley, 221-293; 264 NW 591

District court and judge.  Sec. 5.

Disbarment proceedings—special court. The legislature has ample constitutional power to create a special court to hear and determine disbarment proceedings against an attorney, and the fact that said special court is composed of three district court judges appointed by the supreme court does not constitute an attempt by the legislature to create a district court of three judges in violation of §5, Const., Art. V.

In re Cloud, 217-3; 250 NW 160

Nondisqualifying interest of judge. A judge of the district court does not, by signing a petition to a city council for an election to vote on the proposition whether the city shall erect a specified public utility plant, thereby disqualify himself from fully presiding over litigation questioning the legal sufficiency of said petition.

Plueser v Sioux City, 220-508; 262 NW 551; 99 ALR 967
Correction—inherent power of court. The district court is but exercising its inherent power when, on motion, it corrects by nunc pro tunc order, and regardless of the one-year limitation imposed by §1279, C., '85, the unquestionably established error of its own clerk in entering a judgment against a judgment defendant for a less amount than theretofore ordered by the court, it appearing that the judgment plaintiff had not, by laches, forfeited the right to demand such correction against the judgment defendant.

Murnan v Schultd, 221-242; 265 NW 369

Federal appointment—effect on state courts. The mere pendency of federal receivership proceedings over a party does not necessarily oust the jurisdiction of the state courts over the party and over his property.

Lippke v Milling Co., 215-134; 244 NW 845

Federal courts—probate claims—jurisdiction from diversity of citizenship. The proceedings for settlement of an estate may be pending in a state court, the federal courts may on account of diversity of citizenship assume jurisdiction to determine the validity of claims against the estate.

Reconstruction F. Corp. v Dingwell, 224-1172; 278 NW 281

State and federal courts—comity—certiorari coercing state court's release of jurisdiction. The necessity for comity between state and federal courts demands that controversies shall not arise concerning their respective jurisdictional powers on account of unsubstantial considerations, and certiorari from the supreme court of Iowa will lie to require a district court of the state to relinquish jurisdiction over a probate matter after the federal court, through diversity of citizenship, has assumed jurisdiction.

Reconstruction F. Corp. v Dingwell, 224-1172; 278 NW 281

Credit not to be loaned. SECTION 1.

Assumption of county bonds. The state may validly assume the payment of road bonds issued by counties, a county not being a corporation, within the meaning of this section.

State v Council, 207-923; 223 NW 737

Limitation. SEC. 2.

Unallowable state debt.
Hubbell v Herring, 216-728; 249 NW 430

Mortgagee suing receiver—decree fixing lien on other assets in different court. Court may authorize a mortgagee's foreclosure action against the receiver in a county where the property is located, the different from county where receivership is pending and such court, after hearing the foreclosure proceeding, has the right, where such relief is proper, not only to foreclose but to impose a lien for a deficiency judgment on the other receivership assets in the other court.

Klages v Freier, 225-588; 281 NW 145

Injunction — constitutionality. The statute authorizing injunction to restrain the practice of medicine and surgery without a license is constitutional for the reason that such practice constitutes a nuisance under the general law of the state, and chancery has, from time immemorial, possessed jurisdiction to enjoin nuisances; and this is true irrespective of the question whether the district court may be constitutionally vested with an equitable jurisdiction not possessed by chancery courts when the state constitution was adopted.

Contempt of court—legislative limitation on punishment. While the general assembly has no power to wholly deprive a constitutionally created court of its inherent power to inflict punishment for acts which are in contempt of such court, yet it may constitutionally impose a reasonable limitation on such courts as to the punishment which may be imposed.

ARTICLE VII
STATE DEBTS

Losses to school funds. SEC. 3.

School fund mortgage—state property—permanent school fund. A school fund mortgage is state property and the state has recognized its right to maintain a permanent school fund intact and inviolate for purpose to which dedicated.

Monona County v Waples, 226-1281; 286 NW 461

School fund mortgage foreclosure—defenses. In an action to foreclose a school fund mortgage, where the court decreed that plaintiff made no demand nor attempt to collect the mortgage until 11 years after it became due, held, that the defendant-holder of the certificate of tax sale was charged with knowledge of plaintiff’s lien, and that it was unpaid, and he could not rely on lapse of time, laches or negligence, as against the state.

Monona County v Waples, 226-1281; 286 NW 461

Tax sale — school fund mortgage — paramount. The statutes providing that where real estate is incumbered to school fund, the interest of the person holding the fee shall alone be sold for taxes, and that lien of state shall not be affected by the tax sale will be construed as meaning that lien of mortgage given to the state for land bought on credit and lien of a real estate mortgage to school fund will be paramount to a tax lien.

Monona County v Waples, 226-1281; 286 NW 461

Tax sale—school, agricultural college, or university land—construing statute—catchwords. In construing statute which provides in substance that in the sale of school, agricultural college, or university land sold on credit, which is sold for taxes, the purchaser shall acquire only the interest of the person holding the fee and that the state’s lien shall not be affected by such sale, the supreme court will not construe the catchwords for such statute to show legislative intent to omit school fund mortgages, as the catchwords are no part of the law enacted and are not to be considered in construing the statute.

Monona County v Waples, 226-1281; 286 NW 461

Tax sale—school fund mortgage unpaid—purchaser charged with knowledge. Where a mortgage securing the permanent school fund is on the realty purchased at tax sale, the purchaser is charged with knowledge of the rights of the county holding such mortgage and that the debt secured by the mortgage is unpaid.

Monona County v Waples, 226-1281; 286 NW 461

Contracting debt—submission to the people. SEC. 5.

Discussion. See 12 ILR 272—Amendment of acts approved by the people; 13 ILR 293—Banking clauses in Iowa Constitution

Unallowable state debt.

Hubbell v Herring, 216-728; 249 NW 430

Direct tax — nonpermissible substitution. The general assembly has no power to pledge or to substitute indirect taxes for the direct tax required by the constitution for the payment and discharge of a state bonded indebtedness approved by the people.

State v Council, 207-923; 223 NW 737

State debt—mandatory maturity. The constitutional requirement that a state debt be paid “within twenty years from the time of the contracting thereof” means, when the total debt is divided into installments, within twenty years from the contracting of the first installment of the debt.

State v Council, 207-923; 223 NW 737

Tax imposed distinctly stated. SEC. 7.

Uniformity of taxation. See under Art III, §30

Atty. Gen. Opinion. See '38 AG Op 902

Nonapplicability. This section applies only to a legislative enactment which in and of itself “imposes, continues or revives a tax”—not to the legalization of a tax levy already made under an optional and supposedly legal statute which was, in fact, fatally defective in its title.

Chicago RI Ry. v Rosenbaum, 212-227; 231 NW 646

License fee as nonproperty tax. A substantial charge placed by the legislature on motor trucks operated on the public highways, graduated on the weight of the load carried, conceding the same to be a tax, tho termed a “license fee”, is not a property tax but a tax imposed for the privilege of using the highways as a place of business, and therefore not within the meaning of this section.

Solberg v Davenport, 211-612; 232 NW 477

Reference to other law to fix tax. Section 7005, C., '31, which provides that “moneved capital” within the meaning of §5219 of the federal statutes shall be assessed in a named manner and at the same rate as imposed on the stock of certain banks (§7003, C., '31), does not violate the constitutional requirement that in the imposition of a tax “it shall not be sufficient to refer to any other law to fix such tax”.

Municipal corporations. Local or special laws for incorporation of cities and towns prohibited, see Art III, §30, Anno Vol I, and annotations thereunder

Taxation of corporations. SEC. 2.

Uniformity of taxation. See annotations under Art III, §30

Income tax—corporation provision inapplicable. The constitutional provision that "the property of all corporations for pecuniary profit, shall be subject to taxation the same as that of individuals" has no application to the state income tax act—an excise tax.

Vilas v Board, 223-604; 273 NW 338

Corporate governmental agencies—immunity from legal process and taxation. Immunity of corporate governmental agencies from suits and judicial process, and their incidents, is less readily implied than immunity from taxation.

First Tr. JSL Bank v Lehman, 225-1309; 283 NW 96

Bank stock taxed in excess of other moneyed capital—illegal and void. A tax levy on bank stock in excess of that on other moneyed capital used in competition with bank capital, held, to be a denial of equal protection, illegal and void.

Munn v D. M. Nat. Bank, 18 F 2d, 269

Bank shares—discrimination—violating constitutional rights—taxing officers acting contrary to law. The taxation of state and national bank shares at a higher rate than the shares of competing domestic corporations is violative of the equal protection clause of the 14th amendment and in excess of permission conferred by federal statute for the taxation of national bank stock.

Priest v Whitney Co., 219-1281; 261 NW 374

Moratorium act—no interference with federal land bank as governmental agency. There was no substantial or direct interference with accomplishment of purposes for which congress created joint stock land banks, by reason of the moratorium act of the 47th GA providing for continuance of foreclosure of real estate mortgage actions.

First Tr. JSL Bank v Lehman, 225-1309; 283 NW 96

Stockholders’ responsibility. SEC. 9.

Andrew v Bank, 204-243; 218 NW 925; 56 ALR 521
Andrew v Bank, 205-42; 217 NW 431; 57 ALR 767

Superadded double liability—improper plaintiff. An insolvent bank may not maintain an action against its stockholders to enforce and collect the superadded double liability imposed by §9251, C., '27.

Home Bank v Berggren, 211-697; 234 NW 573

Credit by amount of former assessment unallowable. One who purchases corporate bank stock by paying an existing assessment thereon (and but little in addition thereto) will not be permitted, after the bank has become insolvent, to assert that said assessment was coercive as to him, and that the amount of such assessment should be credited on his "double liability."

Amendment or repeal of laws—exclusive privileges. SEC. 12.

Statutory change—constitutionality. This section and §1090, C., '73 (§8376, C., '27), are constitutional and statutory authority for legislative act authorizing the board of directors of a mutual benefit life assessment company to transform said company into a legal reserve or level premium company, even tho such transformation results in leaving the old assessment certificate holders to carry their own assessments for death losses without further addition to their membership.

Wall v Life Co., 208-1053; 223 NW 257

Sale of stock for payment of assessment—common-law or statutory right of action. As to a stockholder who acquired his stock prior to the enactment of a statute permitting the sale of stock to enforce payment of a stockholder’s assessment to reimburse an impairment of the bank capital, such statute does not necessarily exclude a common-law remedy by action when not so construed by the highest state court, and such statute declaring that the stockholder shall be liable for any deficiency after applying the proceeds of such sale, and providing for its collection by suit, is not a deprivation of property without due process by impairing a contract obligation.

I WHAT CONSTITUTES INDEBTEDNESS
(a) in general

Debt—payment out of earnings. The expenditure which is necessary to establish a municipal electric light and power plant and which is to be paid solely from the earnings of the said plant is not a "debt" within the constitutional and statutory limitation on indebtedness.

Wyatt v Town, 217-979; 250 NW 141

Electric plant payable out of earnings—contract not "debt" prohibited by constitution or statute. A contract for municipal electric plant payable out of earnings does not create a "debt" within meaning of constitutional inhibition where, altho plant was constructed on site owned by town, it was not shown that furnishing of site was part of consideration nor that site had a substantial value. In an action to enjoin the carrying out of such contract, the burden of proof to show that contract created a debt within the meaning of such constitutional inhibition was on the plaintiff-electric company.

Iowa So. Utilities v Cassill, 69 F 2d, 703

(b) particular kinds of obligations

Contract with architect. A contract between an architect and a municipal corporation, which contract imposes a financial obligation on the corporation only in case the corporation enters into a further contract for the erection of the building which the architect has planned, is properly classified as a liability of the corporation's from the moment the building contract was entered into.

Holst v Sch. Dist., 203-288; 211 NW 398

(c) obligations maturing by installments

Municipal light plant—payable out of earnings. In contract for construction of municipal electric plant, payable solely out of net earnings of plant, provision defining "net earnings" as balance of gross receipts after payment solely of necessary expenses of operation and maintenance, without provision for deduction of depreciation reserve, held not violative of statute providing that city should not be liable because of insufficiency of "net earnings".

Iowa So. Utilities v Cassill, 69 F 2d, 703

Waterworks extension—installment payments—future earnings. The trustee of a municipally owned and established waterworks plant may, without an authorizing election, validly contract for improving and extending said plant, and may obtain the funds therefor by issuing bonds payable solely out of the future net earnings of the plant and secured by a lien on said earnings and on said improvements and extensions.

Chitwood v Lanning, 218-1256; 257 NW 345

(d) obligations payable from existing funds or anticipated revenues

Electric plant payable out of earnings—contract not "debt" prohibited by constitution or statute. A contract for municipal electric plant payable out of earnings does not create a "debt" within meaning of constitutional inhibition where, altho plant was constructed on site owned by town, it was not shown that furnishing of site was part of consideration nor that site had a substantial value. In an action to enjoin the carrying out of such contract, the burden of proof to show that contract created a debt within the meaning of such constitutional inhibition was on the plaintiff-electric company.

Iowa So. Utilities v Cassill, 69 F 2d, 703

Bonds payable from anticipated taxes.

Brunk v Des Moines, 228-211; 211 NW 398

(e) funding bonds

Exchanging bonds for valid indebtedness. Even tho a county, because of a sudden drop in the value of its taxable property, may find itself indebted beyond the constitutional limit, yet it may fund or refund its valid outstanding indebtedness by an issue of bonds in exchange for such indebtedness.

Hibbs v Fenton, 218-553; 255 NW 688

Funding bonds create no additional debt. A county whose valid bonded indebtedness is beyond the constitutional limitation (because of a drop in property valuations) may, under an authorizing statute, validly refund said bonds, without creating any additional indebtedness in a constitutional sense, by issuing and selling at par and for cash, refunding bonds, and by irrevocably placing the proceeds of said sale in a separate and distinct trust fund which is also irrevocably pledged for the sole purpose of discharging the particularly designated bonds which are being refunded.

Banta v Clarke County, 219-1195; 260 NW 329

§3 MISCELLANEOUS ART. XI

III INVALIDITY OF PORTION OF INDEBTEDNESS

Unconstitutional municipal indebtedness not curable. The legislature has no constitutional power to authorize a tax levy or a bond issue to pay, in whole or in part, a constitutionally prohibited indebtedness. More concretely, if a municipality creates an indebtedness which is in part valid, and in part constitutionally invalid, the invalid part may not be cured (1) by the voting of a tax to pay or reduce the indebtedness, or (2) by the issuance of bonds, and the application of the proceeds thereof to the same purpose.

Trepp v Sch. Dist., 213-944; 240 NW 247

IV RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF HOLDERS OF MUNICIPAL OBLIGATIONS

Public debt—valid authorization. The legislature may authorize municipalities to incur, with or without an election, a debt when the debt does not exceed constitutional limitations.

Chitwood v Lanning, 218-1256; 267 NW 345

School warrants—validity. School warrants which are in form the general obligations of the district, and issued under a purported contract of the district providing for such unconditional issuance, are void if in excess of the constitutional limit of indebtedness, notwithstanding the fact that the said contract carries the inference that the warrants will be paid from a special fund arising from the sale of bonds.

Carstens Bros. v Sch. Dist., 218-812; 255 NW 702

Partly void warrants. There can be no recovery on municipal warrants given in payment of part of a total purported indebtedness, part of which is void because in excess of constitutional debt limitation. In other words, recovery, insofar as permissible, must be had in some proceedings other than on said warrants.

Trepp v Sch. Dist., 213-944; 240 NW 247

VI CORPORATIONS INCLUDED

School districts—computation of assets and liabilities. In the marshaling of the assets and liabilities of a municipal corporation on the issue whether the debts of the corporation are in excess of constitutional limitation, collected and uncollected taxes and tuition due the municipality cannot be deemed an asset when it is shown that the current expenses of the municipality will consume the entire amount of said taxes and tuition; otherwise as to municipal property available for sale.

Krueger v Mun. Court, 223-1363; 275 NW 122

Motives immaterial when following lawful procedure. The motives of public officials when proceeding according to law, to submit the question of municipal ownership of a public utility, are not fit subjects for judicial inquiry.

Interstate Co. v Forest City, 225-490; 281 NW 207

How vacancies filled. SEC. 6.

Statute supplementing constitution. The constitutional provision that appointees to fill vacancies in office shall hold until the next general election, is not self-executing, and therefore has been properly supplemented by §1157, C, '31.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

Election to fill vacancy. The statutory provision (§1155, C, '31) that an officer filling a vacancy in an elective office shall hold until the next regular election at which such vacancy can be filled, means the "next regular election" at which such vacancy can be legally filled.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

Vacancy—when fillable by election. The statutory provision (§1157, C, '31) that if a vacancy occurs in an elective state office thirty days prior to a general election the vacancy shall be filled at said election, in legal effect prohibits the filling of such vacancy at said election when the vacancy occurs less than thirty days prior to said election.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

Title to office—estoppel and waiver. Where, on the erroneous assumption that a vacancy existed in a public office, two persons are formally nominated, by different political parties, to fill the supposed vacancy and are voted on at the ensuing election, the failure of the candidate who is already serving under a valid appointment to withdraw his nomination and legally to question the nominations made, furnishes no basis for the claim that he thereby waived his right longer to hold the office, and estopped himself from objecting to the result of the election.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

District court clerk—vacancy filled by board. The district court has neither exclusive nor concurrent authority with the board of supervisors to fill a vacancy in the office of clerk of the court (a county office) by appointment; the court's power is confined to the appointment of a temporary clerk until the board fills the vacancy as provided by law.

Priest v Whitney Co., 219-1281; 261 NW 374

Editorial arrangement of statutes changes no law. A mere rearrangement of statutes in code revision, or dividing one section into several sections, does not without legislative intention change the purpose, operation, and effect thereof.

Jones v Mills Co., 224-1375; 279 NW 96
§ 1 SUPREME LAW ART. XII

Statutes — construction — unambiguous language. The word "or" in a statute cannot be judicially construed to mean "and" when the language of the section is too clear and unambiguous to admit of judicial construction.

State v Best, 225-338; 280 NW 551

Constitutionality of expired act — nonnecessity to determine. Courts will not, ordinarily at least, find any necessity to pass on the constitutionality of a statute which has expired ex vi termini.

Pittington v Herring, 220-1375; 264 NW 712

Trustee's liability for taxes—determined by state law as construed by courts. A trustee in bankruptcy takes title to all property of bankrupt by operation of law, and has the rights of an execution creditor, with legal or equitable lien, and whether or not the city and county treasurer's claim for taxes is a lien, or whether or not it is "due and owing", must be determined according to the laws of Iowa, as construed by its highest court.

In re Davenport Dry Goods Co., 9 F 2d, 477

Nonjudicial review. The extension of the limits of a municipal corporation in strict compliance with a constitutional statute is conclusive on the courts, even tho the statute is, to a degree, arbitrary.

State v Altoona, 201-730; 207 NW 789

Disbarment by special court. The act of the supreme court in appointing three district court judges as a special court to hear and determine disbarment proceedings against an attorney is necessarily a holding that the statute providing for such appointment is constitutional.

In re Cloud, 217-3; 250 NW 160

Assessments — unconstitutional basis—burden of proof. The court will not declare a drainage statute unconstitutional because it fixes a ratio of water discharged as the basis for computing assessments between districts, when the record reveals the legal fact that the district does receive a benefit because of the improvement in question and is assessable therefor, and when there is no proof by complainant that the said statutory basis is not the equivalent of benefits.

Ward v Board, 214-1162; 241 NW 26

Class legislation—sale of drugs and medicines. Whether the statute (1) which defines "drugs and medicines" as including all substances and preparations for external or internal use recognized in the United States Pharmacopoeia or National Formulary, and (2) which prohibits the sale of "drugs and medicines" except by or under the supervision of a licensed pharmacist, is unconstitutional on the ground that said publications embrace many harmless substances that are of common and domestic use, quaeere.

State v Jewett Co., 209-567; 228 NW 288

Nullity because of unworkableness. Whether the purchase of electrical energy by a city or town may be financed under §§6134-d1, C., '31 [§6134.09, 6134.10, C., '39], or whether the provisions of §§6134-d5 and 6134-d6 of said code [§6134.09, 6134.10, C., '39], relative to competitive bidding for furnishing electrical energy are a nullity because of indefiniteness, uncertainty, or unworkableness, quaeere.

Brutsche v Coon Rapids, 218-1073; 256 NW 914

II POWER TO PASS UPON CONSTITUTIONALITY OF LAWS

Public policy of statute. The public policy of a valid statute is solely for the legislature to determine, not the courts.

Brutsche v Coon Rapids, 223-487; 272 NW 624

Determination of constitutional question only when necessary. The supreme court will not pass upon the constitutionality of a statute unless it is necessary to do so in the determination of a given case.

State v Dunley, 227-1085; 290 NW 41

Waiver of statutory right—public policy. A waiver by a corporate creditor of his statutory right to hold officers and directors personally responsible for prohibited excess corporate indebtedness is not violative of public policy.

Preston v Howell, 219-230; 257 NW 415; 97 ALR 1140

III CONSTRUCTION OF THE CONSTITUTION

Title embracing one subject—rules for determination. Constitutional provision that title to legislative acts shall embrace but one subject and matters connected therewith was designed to prevent surprise in legislation, but the title need not be an index or epitome of the act or its details. The subject of the bill need not be specifically or exactly expressed in the title, nor is it necessary that each thought or step toward the accomplishment of object be embodied in a separate act, nor is it important that it contains matters usually expressed in separate acts when they are germane to the general subject.

State v Talercio, 227-1315; 290 NW 660

Title of act—sufficiency—keeping liquor where beer is sold. Section 1921.126, C., '39, forbidding the keeping of intoxicating liquor where beer is sold, is not unconstitutional as violating constitutional provision requiring that the title of every legislative act embrace but one subject, since such subject is germane to an act relating to the sale of 4 percent beer.

State v Talercio, 227-1315; 290 NW 660
ART. XII §1 SUPREME LAW

IV PLEADING OF CONSTITUTIONALITY OF ISSUES

Particularity required. A pleading assailing the constitutionality of a statute must (1) point out specifically the clause or section of the constitution which it is claimed is violated, and (2) designate the specific grounds upon which the asserted violation is based.

Peverill v Board, 201-1050; 205 NW 543

Particularity—criminal case. If procedure in a criminal case violates a constitutional provision, the complainant must specifically set forth wherein or in what manner said provision has been violated.

State v Hawks, 213-698; 239 NW 553

Presumption of constitutionality. Before the supreme court will declare an act of the legislature unconstitutional, the person assailing the statute must be able to point out the particular provision that he claims has been violated. In other words, there is a presumption in favor of the constitutionality of the statute.

State v Wotha, 227-1; 287 NW 99

Determination of question—necessity. The court will not at the instance of an amicus curiae search for or pass upon constitutional grounds of invalidity of a statute not presented by the parties.

State v Martin, 210-207; 230 NW 540

Constitutionality—necessity for determination. The court will not, on an order dissolving a temporary injunction pending the trial of the main action, pass upon the constitutionality of the statute under attack.

Iowa Mot. v Board, 202-85; 209 NW 511

Nonpresented constitutional questions. Constitutional questions not presented in the trial court will not be considered on appeal.

State v Johnson, 204-150; 214 NW 594
Talarico v City, 215-186; 244 NW 750
Andrew v Bank, 215-1150; 247 NW 797

Constitutional question first raised on appeal—no review. Constitutionality of statute requiring majority stockholders voting for franchise renewal to purchase stock of those voting against renewal, within three years from date of voting, will not be considered on appeal when such question has not been raised in the lower court.

Terrell v Tel. Co., 225-994; 282 NW 702

Unallowable amendment after remand. A party who attacks the constitutionality of a statute on specified grounds, and on appeal is defeated in his contentions, will not, after remand to the trial court, be permitted to file an amendment to his pleading attacking the constitutionality of the law on new and additional grounds.

Rural Dist. v McCracken, 215-55; 244 NW 711

V CONSTRUCTION IN FAVOR OF CONSTITUTIONALITY OF STATUTES

Construction favoring constitutionality. Principle reaffirmed that statutes are presumed to be constitutional, and will not be declared unconstitutional unless such unconstitutionality is apparent beyond reasonable doubt.

Gallarno v Long, 214-805; 243 NW 719
State v Darling, 216-553; 246 NW 390; 88 ALR218

Presumption of constitutionality. Before the supreme court will declare an act of the legislature unconstitutional, the person assailing the statute must be able to point out the particular provision that he claims has been violated. In other words, there is a presumption in favor of the constitutionality of the statute.

State v Wotha, 227-1; 287 NW 99

Presumption of constitutionality—strong case to invalidate. In passing upon constitutionality of acts of the legislature a presumption exists in favor of constitutionality, and an act will be invalidated only when it is clearly, plainly, and palpably unconstitutional, and it is the duty of the court to give such a construction to an act that, if possible, this necessity is avoided and the act upheld.

State v Talerico, 227-1315; 290 NW 660

Titles of acts—liberal construction for constitutionality. The decisions involving the sufficiency of titles to legislative enactments lay down certain general rules. It is held the constitution should be liberally construed so as to embrace all matters reasonably connected with the title and which are not incongruous, unconnected, or unrelated thereto.

State v Talerico, 227-1315; 290 NW 660

Doubtful constitutionality. Principle reaffirmed that when the court is in doubt as to the constitutionality of a statute, the statute must be declared constitutional.

Loftus v Dept., 211-566; 232 NW 412
Vilas v Board, 223-604; 273 NW 338

Doubt as to unconstitutionality—effect. Cities and towns need no statutory authority in order validly to sell the excess products of their municipally owned utility plants. It follows that the unconstitutionality of a statute which authorizes a city having 7,500 people and owning its electric light plant, to furnish electricity to a town of 400 people is, at the least, very doubtful, and, being doubtful, the statute must be deemed constitutional.

Carroll v Cedar Falls, 221-277; 261 NW 652

Construction—necessity. The court will not, in order to save the constitutionality of a statute, declare a construction which, in effect, amends the statute.

New York Ins. v Burbank, 209-199; 216 NW 742

VI PART OF STATUTE UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Partial invalidity—effect. A legislative act which is constitutional in part and unconstitutional in part, and unaccompanied by any saving clause, must fall as a whole when the act reveals but a single object or purpose, which object or purpose will not be fully carried out by retaining the constitutional part only.

Smith v Thompson, 219-888; 258 NW 190

Unconstitutional in part. An unconstitutional amendment to a statute will not carry down the entire legislative structure on the subject in question unless it is very manifest that the legislature would have abrogated the entire statute, had it foreseen the unconstitutionality of its amendment.

Peverill v Board, 201-1050; 205 NW 543

Attacking particular part of act. A party contesting the validity of a legislative act may avail himself of the invalidity of a part of the act which does not directly affect himself, provided said part affects the validity of the entire act.

Smith v Thompson, 219-888; 258 NW 190

Invalid amendment—effect. An invalid amendment to a valid section of the statute leaves the section in the form in which it existed before the attempt to amend was made, unless a contrary intent on the part of the legislature is made to appear.

Talbott v Des Moines, 218-1397; 257 NW 393

Amendment—invalidity in whole (?) or part (?). When a statutory enactment for the taking of appeals in tax-adjustment proceedings turns out to be wholly invalid, such invalidity necessarily carries down all amendments which were an inseparable part of the enactment and which were designed to harmonize other statutes with the new enactment.

Talbott v Des Moines, 218-1397; 257 NW 393

Partial unconstitutionality—effect. That part of the state road bond act of 1928 which irrevocably pledged the primary road funds to the payment of the bonds, was necessarily such a persuasive inducement to the approval of the act by the people, as to invalidate the entire act upon its being adjudged that said pledge was invalid.

See State v Bevins, 210-1031; 230 NW 865

Auxiliary provisions. When sections of a statute seeking to control interstate commerce are unconstitutional because they impose unallowable burdens on such commerce, all auxiliary sections of the same statute which prescribe the procedure through which said unconstitutional control is sought to be attained, are likewise unconstitutional. (So held as to §§8838-04—8838-d11, C., '31.)

State v Pipe Line, 216-436; 249 NW 366

Unconstitutional application of valid statute—banks and banking. The holding by the federal supreme court and such holding of the federal supreme court and such holding necessarily being conclusive on the courts of this state.

Tolerton & Co. v Board, 222-908; 270 NW 427

VII RIGHT TO CHALLENGE CONSTITUTIONALITY

Noninjured complainant. A party may not question the constitutionality of a statute when he fails to show that he has been or will be injured by the statute. In other words, he may not borrow an objection from one who could complain, but does not complain.

State v Terpstra, 206-408; 220 NW 357
State v Soeder, 216-815; 249 NW 412

Invalid part of act not affecting contestant—allowable attack. A party contesting the validity of a legislative act may avail himself of the invalidity of a part of the act which does not directly affect himself, provided said part affects the validity of the entire act.

Smith v Thompson, 219-888; 258 NW 190

Member of class favored by act. The claim that the bovine tuberculosis act is unconstitutional because it grants to the owners of breeding cattle the right to initiate or bring into existence the benefits of the act, may not be asserted by one who belongs to such favored class.

VII RIGHT TO CHALLENGE CONSTITUTIONALITY—concluded

Statutory gratuity—unallowable complaint. A party may not complain as to the terms on which a mere gratuity is given to him. Loftus v Department, 211-566; 232 NW 412

Public corporation. A county has no standing to question the constitutionality of a legislative act relative to its governmental powers. Scott Co v Johnson, 209-213; 222 NW 378

School district or taxpayer—diversion of school fund interest. Neither a school district nor a taxpayer thereof has any standing to question the constitutionality of the act which diverts the future-accruing interest on school funds to the state sinking fund for public deposits (Ch. 352-A1, C, '31) for the reason that they have no such thing as a vested right in said interest. Boyd v Johnson, 212-1201; 238 NW 61

County supervisors—raising constitutionality of statutes not permitted. In an action in equity for mandamus to compel board of supervisors to remit taxes on capital stock of failed bank, held, board of supervisors could not raise issue of constitutionality of statute providing for such remission, either in that it contravened the state or the federal constitution, as counties and other municipal corporations are creatures of the legislature, existing by reason of statutes enacted within the power of the legislature, and the board may not question that power which brought it into existence and set the bounds of its capacities. Brunner v Floyd Co, 226-583; 284 NW 814

Tax statute—no challenge by public official. A county auditor or a board of supervisors as ministerial officers or public officials may not challenge the constitutionality nor the competency of the legislature to pass a statute under which they act. Hewitt & Sons v Keller, 223-1372; 275 NW 94

Fine and jail sentence not cruel punishment. An accused who has been fined $100 and ordered imprisoned in the county jail for 60 days may not question the constitutionality of the statute under which he was convicted, on the ground that the statute imposed cruel and unusual punishment. State v Dowling, 204-977; 216 NW 271

VIII EMERGENCY LEGISLATION GENERALLY

Prohibited laws—emergency cannot justify. No legislative declaration or recital of the existence of an emergency can justify the enactment of a statute which is clearly prohibited by the constitution. So held as to an act fixing prices.

Duncan v Des Moines, 222-218; 268 NW 547

Extending redemption period. Neither the federal nor state constitutional prohibitions against (a) the impairment of the obligations of contracts, or (b) the deprivation of vested property rights without due process of law, is violated by a statute (1) which is enacted during, and for the purpose of ameliorating, an existing public financial emergency, (2) which grants to the owner of real estate during the existence of said emergency the right to possession and a time, very materially in excess of that otherwise granted by law, in which to redeem from mortgage foreclosure sale—even tho the sale precedes the passage of the emergency act—and (3) which sequesters the rents during said extended time and fairly and reasonably applies them to the protection of the mortgagee and his security. (45 GA, ch 179)

Reason: Contract rights and vested interests must reasonably yield to the paramount right of the state, through the reservoir of its reserved police power, to protect, by appropriate legislation, its sovereignty, its government, its people and their general welfare, against exigencies arising out of a great emergency. Des Moines JSL Bank v Nordholm, 217-1319; 253 NW 701

Moratorium act of 47th General Assembly—extension of redemption period—unconstitutionality. Moratorium act of the 47th GA extending the period of redemption from foreclosure is unconstitutional as an impairment of the obligation of contract, when such act is not based on an actual existing emergency calling for an exercise of the reserve police power of the state.

Moratorium act of 47th General Assembly—emergency must be temporary—judicial notice. An emergency, in order to justify legislation in contravention of the constitution on the theory of an exercise of the reserve police power, must be temporary or it cannot be called an emergency, but becomes an established status. In determining this question, the supreme court may take judicial notice of conditions existing at the time of enactment and whether or not they constitute an emergency.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION

AMENDMENT 2 OF 1884
See annotations under Art V, §§5, 10, Vol I

AMENDMENT 3 OF 1884

Prosecution under trial information. The fifth amendment to the federal constitution (requiring infamous crimes to be presented by indictment) is no limitation upon the power of the state to provide for prosecution of infamous crimes without an indictment by a grand jury.

State v Ostby, 203-333; 210 NW 934; 212 NW 650

SOVEREIGNTY AND JURISDICTION OF THE STATE, AND THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT

CHAPTER 1

SOVEREIGNTY AND JURISDICTION OF THE STATE

1 State boundaries.

Sudden shifting of boundary river—effect. Principle applied that the sudden shifting of boundary rivers do not change state boundary lines.

I IN GENERAL

State fair board. The Iowa state fair board is an arm or agency of the state, and, therefore, not suable.

De Votie v Board, 216-281; 249 NW 429

II STATE SOVEREIGNTY

(a) IN GENERAL

Discussion. See 10 ILB 297—State rights

State—power and means of existence—policy not to limit. It is not the policy of this state or sovereign to place limitations upon the power and means of maintaining its own existence.

Teget v Lambach, 226-1346; 286 NW 522

Enjoining state highway commission. An action against the state highway commission to enjoin it from relocating a primary road, unaccompanied by any allegation of wrongful acts, is, in effect, an action against the state, and nonmaintainable.

Long v Highway Com., 204-376; 213 NW 532

(b) GOVERNMENTAL FUNCTIONS

Government nonliability for employee's tort—respondeat superior—exception. The exemption accorded counties and other governmental bodies and their officers from liability for torts growing out of the negligent acts of their agents or employees is a limitation or exception to the rule of respondeat superior, and in no way affects the fundamental principle of torts that one who wrongfully inflicts injury upon another is individually liable to the injured person.

Montanick v McMillin, 225-442; 280 NW 608; 4 NCCA (NS) 4

Governmental employees—personal liability for torts—no governmental immunity. A governmental employee committing a tortious act which causes injury to another in violation of a duty owed to the injured person becomes, as an individual, personally liable in damages therefor. (Hibbs v School Dist., 218 Iowa 541, overruled.)

Futter v Hout, 225-723; 281 NW 286

Shirkey v Keokuk Co., 225-1159; 275 NW 706; 281 NW 837; 4 NCCA (NS) 4

Lenth v Schug, 226-1; 281 NW 510; 287 NW 596

Doherty v Edwards, 226-249; 284 NW 169

Nonliability in performance. The statutory-prescribed rules of the state governing aerial navigation (§8338-c7, C., '35 [§8338.20, C., '39]) have no application to the state in its sovereign capacity, nor to its governmental agencies, nor to the officials of said agencies...
II STATE SOVEREIGNTY—concluded
(b) GOVERNMENTAL FUNCTIONS—concluded
when exclusively engaged in performing the duties of said agencies.

DeVolie v Cameron, 221-354; 265 NW 637

Action against board of control. Allegations in a petition to quiet title to land and to obtain a writ of possession for said land, (1) that defendants constitute the entire membership of the state board of control, an agency of the state, and (2) that said defendants are wrongfully withholding said possession from plaintiff, furnish no sufficient basis for the holding that said action, in truth and fact, is against the state in its sovereign capacity.

Iowa Elec. Co. v Board, 221-1050; 268 NW 543

Employee—action against state or its agent. An employee of a state hospital for the insane may not maintain an action for salary against the executive officer thereof, as such action is, in effect, an action against the state.

Cross v Donohoe, 202-484; 210 NW 532

Enjoining state highway commission. An action against the state highway commission to enjoin it from relocating a primary road, unaccompanied by any allegation of wrongful acts, is, in effect, an action against the state, and nonmaintainable.

Long v Highway Com., 204-376; 213 NW 532

Employee performing governmental function—jurisdiction through original notice. A liquor commission enforcement officer as a state employee performing a governmental function is, nevertheless, subject to the jurisdiction of the courts by proper service of an original notice.

Doherty v Edwards, 226-249; 284 NW 159
Lenth v Schug, 226-1; 281 NW 510; 287 NW 596

Special appearance—nondeterminable matters. Whether an action is, in truth and fact, an action against the state in its sovereign capacity is a question which cannot be tried out on a special appearance—the petition not showing on its face that the action is such.

Iowa Elec. Co. v Board, 221-1050; 266 NW 543

Government employee's automobile collision—immunity as a defense. In a damage action for injuries arising out of a motor vehicle collision, defendant's claim that he was a state employee performing a governmental function is a matter of defense not properly raised by special appearance.

Doherty v Edwards, 226-249; 284 NW 159
Lenth v Schug, 226-1; 281 NW 510; 287 NW 596

Injuries from operation of municipally owned automobiles. The statutory declaration that the owner of a "car" is liable for damages done by it when it is operated with the consent of said owner, does not embrace the ownership of public property used solely for governmental purposes.

Bateson v Marshall County, 213-718; 239 NW 803

Sinking fund—actions—waiver. The state, after reimbursing a county for the loss of county deposits in an insolvent bank, may validly prohibit an action in its own favor on the depositary bond to which it was legally subrogated by the process of reimbursing the county.

State v Bartlett, 207-208; 222 NW 529

Deposits—payment on forged indorsement—negligence not imputable to state. Negligence and laches of public officers in the handling of state funds are not imputable to the state; for instance, in an action to recover from a drawee bank the amount paid by the bank on a forged indorsement of a check drawn by a county treasurer against state school funds on deposit with said drawee, it is no defense that the county treasurer was negligent in drawing or delivering the check, or that county officers generally were negligent in not making early discovery of the forged indorsement and notifying the drawee accordingly.

New Amsterdam Co. v Bank, 214-541; 239 NW 4; 242 NW 538

Proceedings against violators of labor union injunction—state as party.

Carey v Dist. Ct., 226-717; 285 NW 236

III FEDERAL SOVEREIGNTY

Discussion. See 22 ILR 39—State taxation and federal agencies

(a) IN GENERAL

Discussion. See 16 ILR 391, 504—Sovereignty and amending power

Foreign judgments—immunity from process—nonright to relitigate issue. A defendant who, when sued in a foreign state, litigates the issue that he was immune from the service of process in said state because he was then temporarily and involuntarily therein as a military officer of the federal government, and on land owned and used exclusively by said government for military purposes, and who fails to appeal from a ruling denying his claimed immunity, may not relitigate said issue when sued in this state on the foreign judgment.

Northwestern Ins. v Conaway, 210-126; 230 NW 548; 68 ALR 1465

(b) FEDERAL INSTRUMENTALITIES

Federal instrumentality — congress determines immunity from state laws. It is within discretion of congress to determine in what respects and to what extent its instrumentalities, for their proper functioning, shall be immune from legislation of state origin.

First Tr. JSL Bank v Lehman, 225-1309; 283 NW 96

Moratorium act — no interference with federal land bank as governmental agency. There was no substantial or direct interference with accomplishment of purposes for which congress created joint stock land banks, by reason of the moratorium act of the 47th GA, providing for continuance of foreclosure of real estate mortgage actions.

First Tr. JSL Bank v Lehman, 225-1309; 283 NW 96

Foreclosure — state control over federal agencies. In proceedings instituted by a federal agency for the foreclosure of a mortgage, the state court, manifestly, cannot compel such agency to come to the relief of the debtor, even though the federal government has advanced funds to the said agency for the primary purpose of relieving debtors.

Federal Bank v Wilmarth, 218-339; 252 NW 507; 94 ALR 1388

Corporate governmental agencies — immunity from legal process and taxation. Immunity of corporate governmental agencies from suits and judicial process and their incidents is less readily implied than immunity from taxation.

First Tr. JSL Bank v Lehman, 225-1309; 283 NW 96

Land banks as nonpreferential litigants in state courts. There is nothing to show that congress contemplated that land banks should occupy a preferential status as litigants in the state courts.

First Tr. JSL Bank v Lehman, 225-1309; 283 NW 96

Representative capacity. The conservator of a national bank may, in an action instituted by him, allege generally his official capacity and authority.

Ross v Long, 219-471; 258 NW 94

Statutory reward applicable to national banks. The statute which obligates the owner of lost goods, money, etc., to compensate the finder of such property, is applicable to a national bank as owner, even tho the federal statutes are silent on the subject, as said statute does not impair the efficiency of said bank as a federal, governmental agency.

Flood v Bank, 220-935; 263 NW 321

Federal conservator — authority. The federal statute that the conservator of a national bank shall act “under the direction” of the comptroller of the currency does not require the conservator to secure specific authority from the comptroller for the bringing of an attachment and the execution of a bond on behalf of the bank.

Ross v Long, 219-471; 258 NW 94

3 Concurrent jurisdiction.

Mississippi and Missouri rivers, concurrent jurisdiction in criminal cases. See under §13449 (III)

Discussion. See 1 ILB 107—Federal control of navigable rivers

Atty. Gen. Opinions. See '36 AG Op 458; '38 AG Op 748

Accretions — formation of sand bars. Land by accretions is not established by showing that sand bars formed in the bed of the stream beyond high watermark and became visible as the waters of the river receded.

McFerrin v Wiltsie, 210-627; 231 NW 488

Accretion passes by ordinary deed. Accretion to land passes by a deed of the upland owner unless expressly excepted.

Haynie v May, 217-1238; 252 NW 749

Accretion — apportionment — estoppel. Riparian land owners interested in accretions to their lands may by agreement, acquiescence, or other conduct, apportion the accretion in a manner and way different than the law would apportion it, and thereby estop themselves, in an action to quiet title, from asserting that land did not pass under their deed because it was not accretion land.

Haynie v May, 217-1238; 252 NW 749

Dams — new high watermark — title of state. The state of Iowa by erecting a permanent dam in the bed of its navigable river, and by maintaining said dam peaceably and uninterruptedly for a period of ten years, legally extends its title to the new high watermark resulting from the erection of the dam; and especially may a private deedholder not complain when his deed, executed after the dam was erected, simply calls for land “up to the river”.

State v Sorenson, 222-1248; 271 NW 234

Fishing regulations on boundary river — rights within territorial limits. The grant of concurrent jurisdiction to two states over a river, the middle of the channel of which is the boundary line between them, does not preclude one of them, without concurrence of the other, from regulating fishing by its own residents in that part of the river that is within its own territorial limits.

Miller v McLaughlin, 281 US 261

GENERAL ASSEMBLY

10 Officers—tenure.

14 Compensation of full-time members.

15 Compensation of part-time members.

17-c1 (1935 Code) Expenses. [Section omitted from code after being held invalid]

Reimbursement for personal expenses. The legislature cannot constitutionally reimburse its members or the lieutenant governor for an expense incurred by said officers unless said expense is a governmental or legislative expense—an expense necessary to enable said officers to perform their duties. It follows that the monetary allowance to said officers under this section, as purported reimbursement for their personal living expenses incurred while in attendance at a session of the legislature, must be deemed added compensation.

Gallarno v Long, 214-805; 243 NW 719

Compensation of legislators—basis. The compensation of the lieutenant governor and members of the general assembly cannot be constitutionally fixed on any basis except on the basis of "per diem and mileage".

47 Form of bills.

The text of an act contains no repeal or amendments of certain statutory sections which the title declares a purpose to amend or repeal, does not invalidate the act.

Smith v Thompson, 219-888; 258 NW 190

Legislative reference to compiled code. In the amendment, revision, and codification of the statutes which resulted in the Code of 1924, a reference in the code revision acts to a section number of the compiled code or of the supplements thereto affected the same result as tho the reference had been to the corresponding official section number of the statute as it existed when it was carried into the compiled code or supplements.

Rains v First Nat. Bank, 201-140; 206 NW 821

Nonconclusiveness of enrollment. Principle reaffirmed that the enrollment of a bill is not conclusive that constitutional requirements have been complied with in its passage.

Scott v Board, 221-1060; 267 NW 111

Adoption of conference report—effect. When the general assembly is in deadlock over the final form and contents of a bill, the due adoption by both houses of the report of a joint conference committee and of the amendments therein proposed as an adjustment of existing differences terminates all necessary legislative proceedings on said bill—other than enrollment and due signing. In other words, no necessity exists for a further or additional reading and passage of the bill as modified by said newly adopted amendments when it is made to appear that, prior to the time said differences arose, each house had duly passed the bill immediately following the last reading thereof in said houses.

[The conference report and amendments therein proposed were adopted by a yea and nay vote equal to that constitutionally required for the passage of a bill and said vote was duly entered on the journals of each house.]

49 Headnotes and historical references.

Code editor's catchwords—no part of law. Code section catchwords, prepared by code editor, are no part of the law.

State v Chenoweth, 226-217; 284 NW 110

Tax sale—school, agricultural college, or university land—construing statute. In construing statute which provides in substance that in the sale of school, agricultural college, or university land sold on credit, which is sold for taxes, the purchaser shall acquire only the interest of the person holding the fee, and that the state's lien shall not be affected by such sale, the supreme court will not construe the catchwords for such statute to show legislative intent to omit school fund mortgages, as the catchwords are no part of the law enacted and are not to be considered in construing the statute.

I STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION IN GENERAL

Discussion. See 12 ILR 276—Genuine and spurious interpretation; 15 ILR 486—Substitution of words; 18 ILR 136—Severability of words; 24 ILR 744—Repeal of criminal statute; 25 ILR 736—Extrinsic aids in the federal court

Construction—canons of. Principles recognized that in the construction of statutes:
1. The province of construction lies wholly within the domain of ambiguity, and that prior acts may be resorted to, to solve, but not to create ambiguity.
2. A thing is within a statute if it is within the intention, tho not within the letter; a thing which is within the letter of a statute is not within the statute unless it is within the intention of the makers.
3. All statutes in pari materia should be construed irrespective of the time of their enactment.

4. Statutes should be so construed that the intent and purpose thereof cannot be eluded.

Smith v Sioux City Yards, 219-1142; 260 NW 531

Fitzgerald v State, 220-547; 260 NW 681

General principles. Principles reaffirmed that:
1. A plain, unambiguous statute admits of no construction.
2. Legislative intent must be arrived at from the words used, construed in accordance with their context and ordinary meaning.
3. The particular procedure for acquiring a statutory right, not existing under the common law must be strictly pursued.
4. The term “shall” is generally construed as a command.

Jefferson v Sherman, 208-614; 226 NW 182

Unquestioned pronouncement of court. Scant consideration will be given to the claim that a pronouncement of the court was pure dictum when it has stood unchallenged and been acted on for half a century.

Schoenwetter v Oxley, 213-528; 239 NW 118

Statutes in pari materia. The rule that statutes in pari materia shall be construed together applies with peculiar force to statutes passed at the same legislative session or appearing in the same chapter.

Iowa Motor v Board, 207-461; 221 NW 364

Dikel v Mathers, 213-76; 238 NW 118

Statutes in pari materia—amendment to clear ambiguity. Statutes in pari materia being construed together, a later statute may be used to clear up an ambiguity, such as in the moratorium statutes where an amending act was passed at the same session of the legislature.

Prudential v Lowry, 225-60; 279 NW 132

Statutes construed together.

Durst v Board, 228- ; 292 NW 73

Elections—statutes in pari materia. The statutes relative (1) to vacancies in nominations, (2) to the placing of names of candidates on the official ballot, (3) to the sufficiency of a certificate of nomination, and (4) to the eligibility of candidates, all presuppose (and properly so) the existence of statutory authorization to hold an election, and therefore can have no controlling bearing on the construction of the statute which does authorize an election. Such former series of statutes are not strictly in pari materia with the latter statute.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

General and special statute on same subject—avoiding conflict. Principle recognized that where a general statute, if standing alone, would include the same matter as a special statute, and thus conflict with it, the special act will be deemed an exception to the general statute.

Workman v Dist. Court, 222-364; 269 NW 27

Sentence—dual statutes. If there be two statutes defining an offense in such language that the accused may be sentenced under either, and one of them is general in its terms, and the other limited and particular, and imposing a lesser penalty, the particular should be construed as an exception to the general, and the lesser penalty prescribed thereby imposed. (So held under §§13140, 13144, C., '27.)

Drazich v Hollowell, 207-427; 223 NW 253

Guest statute—exceptions not to supplant general rule. Interpretation of automobile guest statute should be consistent with the intention of the legislature and its mandate in making a host not liable for injuries to guest except under exceptions of driver being reckless or intoxicated, and the statute should not be so interpreted as to supplant the general rule with the exceptions.

Crabb v Shanks, 226-589; 284 NW 446

General statutes—when applicable to governmental agencies. A general statute will not be construed to embrace a governmental agency in the absence of a definite legislative declaration that such agency is included.

Leckliter v City, 211-251; 233 NW 58

General statutes—when applicable to governmental agencies. General words of a statute will not be construed as applicable to the government or to its agencies unless such construction is clearly and indisputably required by the text of the act.

State v Des Moines, 221-642; 266 NW 41

Ambiguity as prerequisite to construction. A statute is not to be read as tho open to construction as a matter of course; but construction is invoked only when a statute contains such ambiguities or obscurities that reasonable minds may disagree as to their meaning.

Palmer v Board, 226-92; 283 NW 415

Plain meaning given in interpretation.

Green v Brinegar, 228- ; 292 NW 229

Plainness of meaning excluding construction. There can be no construction of a statute which is expressed in such plain and simple language that he who reads may read and understand it. So held as to that clause of the moratorium act which declares: "The provisions of this act shall not apply to any mortgage  executed subsequent to January 1, 1934 ." Home Owners Corp. v District Court, 223-269; 272 NW 416

Ambiguous statute—conditions existing—occasion and necessity of statute considered. Where language of statute is ambiguous, it is proper to consider conditions with reference to subject matter that existed when statute was adopted, occasion and necessity for statute, and causes which induced its enactment.

CONSTRUCTION OF STATUTES §63

Income tax—rent received on the land in another state taxable. Income tax statutes held to be so plain and certain as to require no construction and to patently indicate a legislative intent to tax all personal income whether originating in the state or without the state, and to plainly include rent received in the state from property located in another state.

Palmer v Board, 226-92; 283 NW 415

Strict construction rule nonapplicable. Strict construction of statutes granting exemptions from taxation, altho being the rule, has no application to a plain, clear, and unambiguous statute affording no room for construction.

State v Griswold, 225-237; 280 NW 489

Judicial notice of conditions—effect. While the court should, in a proper case, in construing a statute, take judicial notice of the statewide condition surrounding the subject matter covered by the statute, yet such condition will not warrant the court in overthrowing the clear and concise language of the statute.

Andrew v Bank, 214-204; 242 NW 80

Division of sections—effect. The mere act of dividing an existing section of law and printing its parts in the code as separate sections works no change in the meaning of the law. So held as to §4840, C., '97.

State v Gardiner, 205-30; 215 NW 758

Statutes—editorial arrangement changes no law. A mere rearrangement of statutes in code revision, or dividing one section into several sections, does not without legislative intention change the purpose, operation, and effect thereof.

Jones v Mills Co., 224-1375; 279 NW 96

Placement of section in code—catchwords—effect on interpretation. The act of placing a section under a particular chapter of the code and the wording of the headings of the section, have little, if any, weight as official interpretations.

State v Oge, 227-1094; 290 NW 1

Legislative titles. Legislative acts must be construed consistently with their titles. Nor can they be given any broader scope than their titles.

Siegel v Railway, 201-712; 208 NW 78

Subjects and titles of acts—co-operative selling agencies. An act "to provide for the organization of associations without capital stock and not for pecuniary profit" is broad enough to justify the inclusion of a provision (1) authorizing a co-operative selling association to require its members to sell all or a stipulated part of their products through the association, (2) providing for the form of the contract in such cases, and (3) empowering the association to provide for and collect liquidated damages for a violation of such contract.

Titles of acts—sufficiency—applicability of act. A title which recites that the act "creates a park board in cities having a population of 125,000 or more" sufficiently indicates that the act is designed to apply to cities subsequently acquiring the required population.

State v Darling, 216-553; 246 NW 390; 88 ALR 218

Construing statute—catchwords. In construing statute which provides in substance that in the sale of school, agricultural college, or university land sold on credit, which is sold for taxes, the purchaser shall acquire only that interest of the person holding the fee, and that the state's lien shall not be affected by such sale, the supreme court will not construe the catchwords for such statute to show legislative intent to omit school fund mortgages, as the catchwords are no part of the law enacted and are not to be considered in construing the statute.

Monona County v. Waples, 226-1281; 286 NW 461

Statutes—duty of court to make effective. It is the duty of the court in construing statutes to seek the object and purpose of the law and then give it force and effect if not contrary to established legal precedents.

Keokuk Co. v Keokuk, 224-718; 277 NW 291

Giving effect to all provisions. Statutes must be so construed, if possible, as to give effect to every provision thereof.

Rhoades v Allyn, 220-474; 262 NW 788

Giving effect to entire statute. In the construction of a statute, words will never be treated as surplusage if a construction can be legitimately found which will give force to and preserve all the words of the statute.

Dorsey v Bentzinger, 209-883; 226 NW 52

Duty to harmonize statutes. On the claim that statutes are inconsistent, the court must preserve both statutes, if reasonably possible.

Ryerson v Ins. Co., 213-524; 239 NW 64

Legislative intent derived from entire act. In construing a particular statute to arrive at the legislative intention, the court should consider the entire act, and, so far as possible, construe its various provisions in the light of their relation to the whole.

Ahrweiler v Board, 226-229; 283 NW 889

Literal words limited by intent. Tho a thing is within the literal words of a statute, it will not be deemed in the statute when it is clearly not within the intention of the statute. Applied in the construction of the statute (§5026, C., '35) relative to the liability of the owner of an automobile who consents to its operation by another.

McGraw v Seigel, 221-127; 263 NW 553; 106 ALR 1035

Criminal law—soliciting for prostitution—soliciting for personal gratification not included. The statute providing a penalty for any person who solicits another to have carnal knowledge is intended to punish for the solicitation for purpose of prostitution and not to punish a defendant in soliciting by mail a female to have carnal knowledge with him for his personal gratification.

State v Oge, 227-1094; 290 NW 1

Gross premiums tax—when payable—legislative intent. Legislative intent being the cardinal rule of statutory construction, the plain intent of a statute taxing gross premiums of foreign corporations is a tax computed on and payable at the end of the year.

State v Ins. Co., 223-1301; 275 NW 28

Punctuation a fallible standard.

Seeger v Manifold, 210-683; 231 NW 479

Punctuation as evincing intention. A comma may be so employed in a will as to be the fair equivalent of the words "and also".

Buck v MacEachron, 209-1168; 229 NW 693

Codification of dual definition of same term. A legislative codification of two different statutory definitions of a term, e. g., "dog", into one definition, needless to say, is conclusive on the courts.

Bigelow v Saylor, 209-294; 228 NW 279

Legislative definition binding on court—"sale"—"retail sale". The legislature having defined certain terms, the court will follow that definition. So held as to "sale" and "retail sale" used in the sales tax act.

Kistner v Board, 225-404; 280 NW 587

Legislative construction—court's consideration. A legislative construction of a statute is entitled to consideration by the courts, but when it appears that an act may have been passed for the purpose of removing doubt from previous statutes, the court should so consider it.

Hansen v Kuhn, 226-794; 285 NW 249

Former statute revised—legislative construction. When the motor vehicle statutes were completely revised, and exempted the vendor of a motor vehicle under a conditional sales contract from liability for negligent operation of the vehicle, such revision did not create a legislative construction that a former statute defining "owner" as the person with the use or control of a vehicle included such vendor within its definition, as a general revision of the law creates no presumption of an intent to change the law as is created when a particular section or a limited part of an act is re-enacted.

Hansen v Kuhn, 226-774; 285 NW 249

Amended statute. An amended statute will be interpreted as if it had read from the beginning as amended.

State v Local Board, 225-855; 283 NW 87

Amendment—presumption. The enactment of a statutory rule of procedure in lieu of one which the supreme court has held to be of doubtful meaning carries a presumption that the change was made in view of the criticism aimed at the old statute.

Dayton v Ins. Co., 202-753; 210 NW 945

Amendment—unallowable construction. The theory that an amended statute will be construed as tho the original act had been wholly repealed and re-enacted in its amended form, cannot, manifestly, be entertained when the amended statute, as a whole, reflects a contrary intent. So held where the amendment injected into the original statute a superfluous limiting date.

Metropolitan v Reeve, 222-255; 288 NW 531

Illogically placed amendment—effect. An act, additional to existing statutes on the same subject, is not invalid simply because it is declared to be an amendment to a section which, tho on the same subject, is not, perhaps, the most logical section to carry such amendment.

Iowa-Neb. Co. v Villisca, 220-238; 261 NW 423

Invalid amendment—effect. An invalid amendment to a valid section of the statute leaves the section in the form in which it existed before the attempt to amend was made, unless a contrary intent on the part of the legislature is made to appear.

Talbott v Des Moines, 218-1397; 257 NW 393

Amendment—invalidity in whole (?) or part (?). When a statutory enactment for the taking of appeals in tax-adjustment proceedings turns out to be wholly invalid, such invalidity necessarily carries down all amendments which were an inseparable part of the enactment and which were designed to harmonize other statutes with the new enactment.

Talbott v Des Moines, 218-1397; 257 NW 393

Amendment of tax sale statute—no implied amendment of special assessment sale statute. When a statute providing for tax sales was amended to prevent the sale of property against which the county held tax sale certificates, the amendment did not apply to other statutes requiring the county treasurer to sell property for delinquent special assessments, as an act amending a specified statute cannot be construed as amending an unmentioned statute, and repeal of statutes by implication is not favored.

Bennett v Greenwalt, 226-1115; 286 NW 722

Tax sale—redemption—liberal construction. The right of redemption from a sale will be liberally construed in favor of the taxpayer.

Murphy v Hatter, 227-1286; 290 NW 695

Tax sale—statutory notice to redeem—strict compliance mandatory. The requirements of §7279, C., '35, providing for steps necessary to cut off right of redemption from tax sale, are absolute, and the court is without power or authority to dispense with these positive requirements on the ground that they are unnecessary.

Murphy v Hatter, 227-1286; 290 NW 695

Application to things subsequently coming into existence. It is a rule of statutory construction that legislative enactments in general and comprehensive terms, prospective in operation, apply alike to all persons, subjects, and business within their general purview and scope coming into existence subsequent to their passage.

Bruce Transfer Co. v Johnston, 227-50; 287 NW 278

Public policy of statute. The public policy of a valid statute is solely for the legislature to determine, not the courts.

Brutsche v Coon Rapids, 223-487; 272 NW 624

Comprehensive power of general assembly. The general assembly has power to enact any legislation it sees fit, provided such legislation is not plainly in violation of the state or federal constitution.

Carroll v Cedar Falls, 221-277; 261 NW 652

Delegating powers to nonlegislative board. While the legislature may not delegate its power to make laws, yet when it had declared a policy which is definite in describing the subject to which it relates and the character of the regulation intended to be imposed, it may delegate to nonlegislative board the power to make rules and regulations for effectuating such policy.

Miller v Schuster, 227-1005; 289 NW 702

Necessity for determination. The court will not, on an order dissolving a temporary injunction pending the trial of the main action, pass upon the constitutionality of the statute under attack.

Iowa Assn. v Board, 202-85; 209 NW 511

Due process of law — “notice” implied in context of statute. A statute is not unconstitutional because it does not expressly provide for notice to an interested party. A clear implication of notice, duly complied with, is all-sufficient.

Chehock v School Dist., 210-258; 228 NW 585

Absence of statutory provision for notice—power of court to prescribe. When due process necessitates notice to a party and the statute makes no provision for such notice, the court may validly prescribe a notice which is reasonably calculated to give the interested party knowledge of the proceeding and opportunity to be heard.

Franklin v Bonner, 201-516; 207 NW 778

Temporary appointment of guardian—validity. The appointment of a temporary guardian on proper and sufficient notice to the person sought to be placed under guardianship is valid, even tho the statute authorizing such appointment is silent as to notice.

In re Barner, 201-525; 207 NW 613

Constitutionality—borrowed objection. A party may not have a portion of a legislative act, which does not affect him, declared unconstitutional.

State v Soeder, 216-815; 249 NW 412

Statutory gratuity—unallowable complaint. A party may not complain as to the statutory terms on which a mere gratuity is given to him.

Loftus v Department, 211-566; 232 NW 412

Burden to prove invalidity. One who attacks the constitutionality of a statute must show its invalidity beyond a reasonable doubt.

Miller v Schuster, 227-1005; 289 NW 702

Doubt as to unconstitutionality—effect. Cities and towns need no statutory authority in order validly to sell the excess products of their municipally owned utility plants. It follows that the unconstitutionality of a statute which authorizes a city, having 7,500 people and owning its electric light plant, to furnish electricity to a town of 400 people is, at the least, very doubtful, and, being doubtful, the statute must be deemed constitutional.

Carroll v Cedar Falls, 221-277; 261 NW 652

Amendment by construction nonpermissible. The court will not, in order to save the constitutionality of a statute, declare a construction which, in effect, amends the statute.

New York Ins. v Burbank, 209-199; 216 NW 742

Uncertainty of meaning—effect. A statute should not be held invalid because of uncertainty of meaning unless such holding is reasonably unavoidable.

Tolerton et al. v Board, 222-908; 270 NW 427

Partial invalidity—effect. The invalidity of a portion of a statute will not carry down the entire statute when the invalid portion is so severable from the valid part that the valid part remains as an effective statute.

State v Bevins, 210-1031; 230 NW 865

Davidson Co. v Mulock, 212-730; 235 NW 45

See State v Council, 207-923; 223 NW 737

Partial unconstiiutionality. The holding by the federal supreme court that the statute of this state (§§9279, 9280, C., '27) prohibiting the receipt of deposits by insolvent banks and bankers generally, was constitutionally inapplicable to national banks and bankers did not have the effect of carrying down the statute in toto—did not have the effect of thereafter rendering said statute inapplicable to state banks and bankers, even tho the state legislature did not, after said holding, re-enact said sections.

State v Bevins, 210-1031; 230 NW 865

See State v Council, 207-923; 223 NW 737

Nonconclusiveness of enrollment. Principle reaffirmed that the enrollment of a bill is not conclusive that constitutional requirements have been complied with in its passage.

Scott v Board, 221-1060; 267 NW 111

Adoption of conference report—effect. When the general assembly is in deadlock over the final form and contents of a bill, the due adoption by both houses of the report of a joint conference committee and amendments therein proposed as an adjustment of existing differences, terminates all necessary legislative proceedings on said bill—other than enrollment and due signing. In other words, no necessity exists for a further or additional reading and passage of the bill as modified by said newly adopted amendments when it is made to appear that, prior to the time said differences arose, each house had duly passed the bill immediately following the last reading thereof in said houses.

The conference report and amendments therein proposed were adopted by a yea and nay vote equal to that constitutionally required for the passage of a bill and said vote was duly entered on the journals of each house.

Scott v Board, 221-1060; 267 NW 111

Liberal construction—workmen's compensation act. The workmen's compensation act is to be liberally construed.

Everts v Jorgensen, 227-818; 289 NW 11

Delegation of powers—liberal interpretation. The constitutional prohibition against delegating legislative powers to administrative boards is given a liberal interpretation in favor of constitutionality of legislation.

Miller v Schuster, 227-1005; 259 NW 702

Form of bills. A statute providing the form of bills can have no force or effect other than as a directory provision.

Waugh v Shirer, 216-468; 249 NW 246

Statute invalid because unworkable. A statute may be invalid because the legislature has enacted it in such indefinite and uncertain form that it is unworkable. So held as to that part of chapter 205, Acts 43GA, relating to appeals from over-assessments of taxes.

Davidson Co. v Mulock, 212-730; 253 NW 45

Nullity because of unworkableness. Whether the purchase by a city or town of electrical energy may be financed under §6134-d1, C, '31 [§6134.01, C, '39], or whether the provisions of §§6134-d5, 6134-d6 [§§6134.09, 6134.10, C, '39] of said code relative to competitive bidding for furnishing electrical energy are a nullity because of indefiniteness, uncertainty, or unworkableness, quaere.

Brutsche v Town, 218-1073; 256 NW 914

Seeming contradiction—effect. The fact that the so-called Simmer law provides (§6134-d2, C, '35 [§6134.06, C, '39]) that no part of the cost of light and power plants erected thereunder (1) shall be payable by taxation, yet also provides, (2) that the city shall pay for current used by it—which payment necessarily must be made from funds derived from taxation—presents no such contradiction or unworkable condition as to invalidate the law.

Pennington v Sumner, 222-1005; 270 NW 629; 169 ALR 355

Self-nullification. A legislative act which purports to legalize specified municipal warrants, the legality of which are then being litigated, is completely nullified, so far as said question of legality is concerned, by the insertion in the act of a proviso that "nothing in this act shall affect any pending litigation".

Mote v Town, 211-392; 253 NW 695

Reinsertion of stricken words. Principle reaffirmed that the courts will not read into a statute words which have long since been legislatively stricken from the act.

Gardner v Trustees, 217-1390; 250 NW 740

Executive construction. Principle recognized that great weight should be given to the construction placed upon statutes by those charged with their administration. But held principle not applicable under facts of present case.

State v Standard Oil, 222-1209; 271 NW 185

Administrative construction — effect. An administrative construction of a statute which has been fully acquiesced in for more than half a century by those vitally and continuously interested therein, will not be disturbed except for a very compelling reason.

New York Ins. v Burbank, 209-199; 216 NW 742

Executive construction. The long-continued and unquestioned construction placed upon a statute by the state executive department charged with its enforcement will be given great weight by the courts.

John Hancock Ins. v Lookingbill, 218-373; 253 NW 604

Executive construction—weight given. State departmental executive's construction of statutes to be given much weight.

State v Ind. Foresters, 226-1339; 256 NW 425

Construction by executive departments—legislative intent—presumption. The legislature is presumed to know the construction of its statutes by the executive departments, and when legislature indicates no dissatisfaction with such construction, the court may conclude such construction followed legislative intent.

State v Ind. Foresters, 226-1339; 256 NW 425

Carriage of livestock. The statutory provisions to the effect (1) that livestock shall be shipped at the highest practicable speed, etc., (2) that proof that the shipment was made according to timetables will not show prima facie compliance with the statute, and (3) that the railroad commissioners shall prescribe the speed of such shipment (§§8114 to 8118, inclusive, C, '24), do not justify an instruction which, in effect, submits to the jury the question of the reasonableness of a freight train schedule. These statutes contemplate the fixing of livestock shipping schedules by the railroad commission, with the attending presumption that such schedules will be reasonable.

Siegel v Railway, 201-712; 208 NW 78

Jurisdiction—existing but noneffective statute. A city, in acquiring jurisdiction to construct a public improvement, need only comply with existing effective statutes. In other words, it need not comply with a statute which then exists, but which has not yet taken effect.

Butters v Des Moines, 202-30; 209 NW 401

Retroactive effect. Statutes are not, ordinarily, given retroactive effect.

In re Cumbertson, 204-473; 215 NW 761

Retroactive application. A statute prohibiting the taxation of attorney fees in eminent domain proceedings instituted by the state applies to a proceeding pending but undetermined at the time of the enactment.

Welton v Highway Com., 211-625; 233 NW 876

Nonretrospective statute. A statute which provides that “the superintendent of banking henceforth shall be the sole and only receiver” for state banks and trust companies in no manner displaces a then qualified and acting receiver.

Andrew v Bank, 206-869; 221 NW 668

Nonretroactive statute. The statute limiting the right of a guest riding in an automobile to recover damages consequent on the conduct of the operator has no application to an accident occurring prior to the passage of the statute.

Thomas v Disbrow, 208-873; 224 NW 36

Nonretroactive tax. The legalization of a tax levy made by a county under an optional and supposedly legal statute, which, however, was in fact originally invalid because of a fatal defect in the title, does not constitute a levying by the general assembly of a retroactive tax on the county.

Chicago, RI Ry v Rosenbaum, 212-227; 231 NW 646

Retroactive operation—venue. A plaintiff may avail himself of a statute which regulates the venue of the action, and which is in force when the action is brought, irrespective of the fact that the statute was not in force when the cause of action accrued.

Goben v Akin, 208-1354; 227 NW 400

Payment of tuition—retroaction. Statute enacted in 1937 providing for payment of tuition of wards of charitable institution attending public schools held not retroactive in action involving liability for tuition incurred for years prior to that date.

School Twp v Nicholson, 227-290; 288 NW 123

Legalization of invalid tax. The legislature may validly legalize a levy of taxes made under a supposedly legal statute which, however, was invalid because its title was constitutionally insufficient.

Chicago, RI Ry v Rosenbaum, 212-227; 231 NW 646

Statutes defining crime. Principle reaffirmed that statutes definitive of crime are strictly construed and all doubt resolved in favor of the accused.

State v Cooper, 221-658; 265 NW 915

Adding new element of criminal offense. The amendment of a criminal statute by adding a new and additional element of the offense does not, because of the saving clause in subsec. 1 of this section, have the effect of pardoning all unconvicted violators of the statute as it existed prior to the enactment of the additional element, unless the act which adds the new element evinces an intent to pardon.

State v Brown, 215-600; 246 NW 258

Indictment—fatal insufficiency. An indictment which alleges that a member of the Iowa liquor control commission knowingly and willingly permitted a named person unlawfully to possess intoxicating liquors (other than beer), charges no offense under §1921.092, C., '39 [§1921.092, C., '39], in the absence of an allegation that said possessor was a member, or secretary, or officer, or employee of said commission. The term “such violation” in said section refers solely to violation by members, by the secretary, by officers, or by employees, of the commission.

State v Cooper, 221-658; 265 NW 915

Continuing appropriation statute—biennial appropriation paramount. A statute, altho in the code because of its general and permanent nature, which sets the salary of the attorney general, a state officer, is not a continuing appropriation for that officer, when the biennial appropriation act appropriates a different and smaller amount for such officer for the biennium and declares “all salaries provided for in this act are in lieu of all existing statutory salaries”. Mandamus will not lie to require payment of the larger salary.

O'Connor v Murtagh, 225-782; 281 NW 455

Sale of bank stock for payment of assessment—common-law or statutory right of action. As to a stockholder who acquired his stock prior to the enactment of a statute permitting the sale of stock to enforce payment of a stockholder’s assessment to reimburse an impairment of the bank capital, such statute does not necessarily exclude a common-law remedy by action when not so construed by the highest state court, and such statute declaring that the stockholder shall be liable for any deficiency after applying the proceeds of such sale, and providing for its collection by suit, is not a deprivation of property without due process by impairing a contract obligation.

Shriver v Woodbine Bk., 285 US 467

National bank directors—violation of duty—state statute invoked—construction. State statutes of limitation apply and may be invoked by directors of national bank in respect to liability for violation of duty, but two-year limitation in respect to personal reputation, held, inapplicable under such circumstances.

The plain, obvious, and rational meaning of statute is always to be preferred to any curious, narrow, hidden sense, and, in case of substantial doubt, longer rather than shorter period of limitation is to be preferred.

Payne v Ostrus, 50 F 2d, 1039

Bastardy proceedings—repeal of statute—effect. The repeal of the former statutes relative to establishing the paternity of an illegitimate child and charging the father with the support of such child (41 GA, ch 81) did not in any manner affect an existing right to institute such proceeding, even tho no proceedings were pending at the time of the appeal.

State v Shepherd, 202-437; 210 NW 476

Bovine tuberculosis law—nonrequired bond by examiner. In applying the bovine tuberculosis test, the examiner need not, nor may he be required to, post a bond to indemnify the owner against loss in case cattle are wrongfully destroyed, because the statute does not expressly or impliedly require such bond.

Peverill v Department, 215-534; 245 NW 334

De jure corporation. A statute which provides that “no corporation shall have legal existence until such [certified] articles be left for record” does not mean that a failure to strictly comply with the statute prevents a de facto corporation from coming into existence.

Wilkin Co. v Assn., 208-921; 223 NW 899

Restriction on corporations. A statute which limits the power of corporations which are organized under the laws of this state to take a testamentary devise will not be extended by the courts to include foreign corporations.

Ross v Seminary, 204-648; 215 NW 710

Foreign corporations—dissolution—effect on pending actions. A duly rendered decree of dissolution of a foreign corporation, at the instance of the state under the laws of which said corporation was organized, is, in effect, an executed sentence of death; being such, said decree ipso facto works an abatement (1) of an unadjudicated action in rem pending in this state against said dissolved corporation, and (2) of garnishment proceeding pending in connection with said action. Under such circumstances, the garnishee may properly move for and be granted an order of discharge.

Peoria Co. v Streator Co., 221-690; 266 NW 548

Foreign remedial statute—nonapplicability. The remedial statutes of a foreign state, authorizing an action in said state against a corporation which has been dissolved at the instance of said state, do not and cannot control the procedure when the action is sought to be maintained in this state; and especially is this true when said authorized foreign procedure is contrary to the procedural law of this state.

Peoria Co. v Streator Co., 221-690; 266 NW 548

Preferred labor claim act. The preferred labor claim act, providing that, when the property of a person is “seized upon by any process of any court,” claims for labor shall be preferred over other claims, does not embrace a seizure under execution at the instance of the labor claimant. In other words, the labor claimant may not base a preference on an execution seizure instigated by himself.

Heessel v Bank, 205-508; 218 NW 298

Legalizing act re void warrants—construction. A legalizing act purporting to legalize specified void municipal warrants then in litigation, but which act was held in said litigation inapplicable to said warrants because of a proviso in said act that it should not affect pending litigation, is not subject to the construction in later litigation that the act is applicable to the extent of legalizing the contract under which said former warrants were issued even tho the warrants were not legalized.

Roland Co. v Town, 215-82; 244 NW 707

Mandatory procedure. The statutory requirement that the county treasurer shall pay collected municipal taxes to the city treasurer only on a written order signed by the mayor and city clerk or auditor is mandatory. (§6229, C, '27)

State v Hanson, 210-773; 231 NW 428

Nonmandatory procedure. The statutory command that the county auditor shall, after each assessment in his county, certify to the secretary of agriculture the number of owners of breeding cattle in his county for the purpose of enabling the said secretary to determine the numerical sufficiency of petitioners to agreements for the enrollment of the county under the accredited area plan for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis, is directory only.

Peverill v Board, 201-1050; 205 NW 543

Nonresident of supervisors to purchase certificate. The statutory provision, that the board of supervisors or the drainage trustees “may” purchase an outstanding certificate evidencing a sale of land for the nonpayment of drainage assessments, simply invests the board or trustees with discretion so to purchase. No mandatory duty so to purchase in order to protect the bondholder is imposed, even tho the bondholder must look solely to assessments for payment of his bond.

Bechtel v Board, 217-251; 251 NW 633

Nonresident with securities office in state—statute authorizing service on agent—constitutional. A state statute permitting the service of process on any agent or clerk employed in an office or agency maintained in the state by a nonresident in all actions growing out of, or connected with, the business of such office or agency does not abridge the privileges and immunities to which he is entitled by Art. IV, §2, of the federal constitution, or deprive him of the equal protection of the laws.

Doherty & Co. v Goodman, 294 US 623

Ordinances—construction as to employment of assistants. The superintendent of a department of municipal government under the so-called commission plan (Ch 326, C, '24) may

I STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION IN GENERAL—concluded himself validly employ authorized and necessary employees to carry on the work of his department (1) when an existing ordinance in effect grants such power, and (2) when an existing ordinance makes an appropriation of funds for such department and fixes the number of employees and the separate salaries thereof; and this is true notwithstanding an additional existing ordinance which provides, in effect, that all contracts shall be entered into or approved by the council as a whole, it being held that the latter ordinance is not a limitation on the former.

Loran v Des Moines, 201-543; 207 NW 529

Personal earnings—salary of public officer. The salary—the “personal earnings”—of a public officer is exempt from liability on a judgment obtained against him and his surety, by the public body, because of the failure of the officer to account for public funds coming into his hands. The court cannot, on the plea of public policy, rule into the statute an exception which the legislature has not seen fit to declare. So held where the surety having paid the judgment, and thereby subrogated to the rights of the county, sought reimbursement from the officer’s salary.

Ohio Ins. v Galvin, 222-670; 269 NW 254; 108 ALR 1036

Return of execution fees. An action to enforce the statutory liability of a county to return mortgage foreclosure execution fees to the certificate holder (when the debtor does not redeem) is barred from and after the expiration of five years from the enactment of the statute giving the right to such return.

Liljedahl v Montgomery Co., 212-951; 237 NW 523

Tax statute—construed against taxing body. A proviso or exemption in a taxing statute in derogation of its general enacting clause must be strictly construed. However, as to contention that an income tax statute does not include out-of-state rent, not because of an exception, but by its terms, if open to construction at all, must fall within the general rule that tax statutes are construed strictly against the taxing body.

Trustee’s liability for taxes—determined by state law as construed by courts. A trustee in bankruptcy takes title to all property of bankrupt by operation of law, and has the rights of an execution creditor, with legal or equitable lien, and whether or not the city and county treasurer’s claim for taxes is a lien, or whether or not it is “due and owing”, must be determined according to the laws of Iowa, as construed by its highest court.

In re Davenport Dry Goods Co., 9 F 2d, 477

Motor vehicle fuel tax—constitutional. The Iowa motor vehicle fuel tax was obviously not intended to reach transactions in interstate commerce, but to tax the use of motor fuel after it came to rest in Iowa, and the requirement that the distributor as shipper into Iowa shall, as agent of the state, report and pay the tax on the gasoline thus coming into the state for use by others on whom the tax falls, imposes no unconstitutional burden, either upon interstate commerce or upon the distributor.

Monamotor Oil Co. v Johnson, 292 US 86

Vacancy in office—statute supplementing constitution. The constitutional provision (Const. Art. XI, §6) that appointees to fill vacancies in office shall hold until the next general election, is not self-executing, and therefore has been properly supplemented by §1157, C., ‘31.

II PAR. 1. REPEAL

Standing saving clause. The statutory provision that “the repeal of a statute does not * * * affect any right which has accrued, any duty imposed, any penalty incurred, or any proceeding commenced, under or by virtue of the statute repealed”, constitutes a standing saving clause which, in effect, accompanies all repealing statutes.

State v Shepherd, 202-437; 210 NW 476

Repeals by implication. Repeals by implication are not favorites of the law.

Ogilvie v City, 212-117; 283 NW 526

Neessen v Armstrong, 213-378; 289 NW 56

Schoenwetter v Oxley, 213-528; 289 NW 118

Fowler v Board, 214-395; 238 NW 618

Towns v City, 214-76; 241 NW 658

Repeal by implication. Principle reaffirmed that in order to work the repeal by implication of an old statute by a new statute, there must be an absolute repugnancy between the two statutes.

Hahn v County, 218-543; 255 NW 696

Inferential repeal—when recognized. The court will not declare a statute repealed, or even modified, on the basis of a mere inference arising from the enactment of a later statute, unless such declaration is unavoidable.

McGraw v Seigel, 221-127; 263 NW 553; 106 ALR 1035

Repugnant statutes—implied repeal. When two statutes are repugnant and cannot be reconciled, the last in time of enactment must prevail.

Waugh v Shirer, 216-468; 249 NW 246

Implied repeal—statutes not in pari materia. A statute cannot be deemed impliedly repealed by other statutes which are not in pari materia. As an illustration, statutes dealing merely with the procedure to be followed in making nominations for office, and in determining the eligibility of candidates, cannot be held to impliedly repeal a statute which authorizes the holding of an election.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

Municipal license of trucks—nonrepeal by state law. The legislature by the enactment of Ch 252-C1, C., '31 [Ch 252.3, C., '39], and thereby requiring of truck operators a privilege or occupation tax when not operating between fixed termini nor over a regular route, on any and all highways of the state, did not impliedly repeal that part of §5970, C., '31, which empowers cities and towns to license a truck operator whose business is limited to the transportation without approval of voters.

Thomas v Sioux City, 214-76; 241 NW 658

Holdership in due course—amount of recovery. The former statutory rule (§8070, C., '24) to the effect that when a note has its inception in fraud a holder in due course could recover only the amount which he paid for the note was impliedly repealed by the enactment of the negotiable instruments law, §9517, C., '39.

Sword v Spry, 205-266; 215 NW 737

Contiguous corporations combined by respective boards without submission to vote. In view of its legislative history and the apparent intention of the legislature, the enactment of §4191, C., '35, requiring that proposals to add territory to an existing district be approved separately by majority of voters in each territory affected, did not modify or repeal §4133, C., '35, providing that "* * * so * * * that one corporation shall be included with the other as a single corporation" hence, respective boards of directors of contiguous school corporations had authority to combine such school corporations without approval of voters.

Peterson v Sch. Dist., 227-110; 287 NW 275

III PAR. 1. EFFECT OF REPEAL

"Right" and "privilege" contrasted. The statutory provision to the effect that "the repeal of a statute does not affect any right which has accrued" does not protect a mere privilege.

WELTON v HIGHWAY COM., 211-625; 233 NW 876

Effect on existing action. The repeal of the former statutes relative to establishing the paternity of an illegitimate child and charging the father with the support of such child (41GA, ch 81 §§12667-a1—12667-a54, C., '27) did not in any manner affect an existing right to institute such proceedings, even tho no proceedings were pending at the time of repeal.

State v Shepherd, 202-437; 210 NW 476

Preservation of accrued right. An action to recover damages for negligently causing the death of a married woman survives the repeal of the statute authorizing such action, and the measure of recovery in such cases is governed by the repealed statute, not by the measure of recovery provided in a later and substituted statute on the same subject.

Azeltine v Lutterman, 218-675; 254 NW 854

Repeal of source of payment—effect. The repeal of a statute which provides the funds with which to retire duly authorized bonds as they are issued, without providing any new source of payment, necessarily precludes the further issuance of such bonds.

Dee v Tama Co., 209-1341; 230 NW 337

MULTAX VOID. A mulct tax certified and levied some two years after a violation of the intoxicating liquor statutes, and after the repeal of the statutes authorizing the levy of such tax, and after the property affected had passed into the hands of an innocent party, is void as to such latter party. (This on the assumption that the repeal of a statute does not affect any right which has accrued, any duty imposed, or any penalty incurred.)

Shriver v Polk County, 203-529; 212 NW 718

VIOLATION OF REPLACED STATUTE.

State v McDowell, 228- ; 290 NW 65

SUBROGATION—REPEAL OF PREFERENTIAL DEPOSIT LAW. Sureties on a bank depositary bond conditioned to hold the state harmless on deposit of state funds in said bank, and given at a time when the state possessed a statutory preferential right, in case the bank was thrown into receivership, to be paid in full prior to the payment of general depositors, are not entitled, upon the payment of a loss, in case of such receivership, to be subrogated to such right on the part of the state when, prior to such payment, the statute giving such right has been repealed. This is on the principle that a surety is entitled to subrogation only upon payment of the principal's debt, and only to the rights then possessed by the creditor.

Leach v Bank, 205-1154; 213 NW 517

DISCHARGE OF SURETY—REPEAL OF PREFERENTIAL BANK DEPOSIT LAW. The repeal of a statute which gives the state, when it is a depositor in a bank, a preferential right to be paid in full if the bank passes into the hands of a receiver does not constitute a release of security in such sense as to release a surety on a bond which secures said deposit.

Leach v Bank, 208-1154; 213 NW 517

IV PAR. 2. WORDS AND PHRASES

Motor vehicle words and phrases. See under §5000.01

Discussion. See 12 ILR 280—The constituents of "chastity"; 17 ILR 87—"Void" and "voidable"—statute of frauds; 17 ILR 254—Marriage consanguinity; 17 ILR 402—Jurly; 17 ILR 524—Gambling; 20 ILR 483—"Domestic" and "residence".

General rules. In the construction of statutes words and phrases will, if possible, be given their ordinary and usual meaning, and that construction will be adopted, if possible, which will give force and effect to every part of the statute.

Des M. Ry. v City, 205-495; 216 NW 284

General and specific words. Principle "Expressio unius est exclusio alterius" applied.

In re Barnett, 217-187; 251 NW 59

"About November first." A contract to deliver a commercial product "about November first" requires a delivery substantially on said date or near approximation thereof.

North Am. Gin. Co. v Gilbertson, 200-1849; 206 NW 610

"Accidental means" defined. An injury caused by the intentional lifting of a log upon a wagon is one resulting from "accidental means" when such resulting injury was unexpected, undesigned, and not the usual or natural result of such an act.

Clarkson v Cas. Co., 201-1249; 207 NW 132

Acquiescence—elements. On the issue of acquiescence by both parties to a boundary line, the intention of the parties is important. Acquiescence is consent inferred from silence, involving notice or knowledge of the claim of the other party, and occurs where one who is entitled to impeach a transaction or enforce a right neglects to do so, from which the other party may infer that he has abandoned such right.

Patrick v Cheney, 226-553; 285 NW 184

Filing information—"actually in session" defined. The statutory right of the county attorney to file a trial information "at any time when the grand jury is not actually in session" does not mean that he is prohibited from filing such information at any time of any day on which the grand jury was in session. So held where the information was filed on the day on which the grand jury was duly convened, but at a time on said day when said jury was not "actually" in session.

Thrasher v Haynes, 221-1397; 264 NW 915

Adverse possession — requirements — intention. For adverse possession there must be occupancy taken with the intention to assert title beyond the true boundary line under a claim of right which must be as broad as the possession, whereas, occupancy taken by mis-take beyond the true line with claim of right only up to the true line will not acquire title.

Patrick v Cheney, 226-853; 285 NW 184

"Advertisement for bids"—irregular compliance with mandatory duty. The irregularity of municipal authorities in advertising for, receiving, and opening, bids for the construction of a municipal light and power plant before instead of after the director of the budget had, on appeal, overruled objections to the plans, specifications, and proposed form of contract, (§357, C., '31) does not invalidate the contract entered into after said ruling and specifically approved by said director. But the duty to "advertise for bids" is mandatory in case an appeal is taken to the budget director.

Johnson v Town, 215-1033; 247 NW 552

"And" may be both conjunctive and disjunctive. The word "and", used in the homestead exemption act allowing an owner credit on his taxes "for the 1936 taxes payable in 1937 and for the 1937 taxes payable in 1938", construed to be used as a conjunctive with reference to a homestead eligible to benefits for both of said years; and when used with reference to a homestead not eligible in both years, to be used as a disjunctive, equivalent to the word "or".

Ahrweiler v Board, 226-229; 283 NW 889

"And" as "or". A title, "An act to legalize any and all tax levies heretofore made and collected" supports the legalization of "All taxes heretofore assessed, levied or collected," when the intent of the legislature will be carried out by construing "made and collected" as "made or collected".

Chicago, RI Ry. v Rosenbaum, 212-227; 231 NW 646

"And shall also." When interpreting the words "and shall also" consideration must be given to the harmony of the entire statute in which the words appear.

"Apparent authority." Federal Land Bank v Trust Co., 228- ; 290 NW 512

Insurance—notice and proof of loss—"as soon as practicable". A policy requirement that written notice of an accident shall be given "as soon as practicable" means that said notice shall be given within a reasonable length of time under all the facts and circumstances. So held in a case where the insured inadvertently lost his policy and forgot the name of the insurer until some five months after liability accrued on the policy.

Gifford v Cas. Co., 215-23; 248 NW 235

"Between fixed termini." A truck operator who, under a permit duly granted under chapter 252-C1, C., '31 [Ch 252-C3, C., '39], and by means of his motor truck, transports for hire freight from place to place, at irregular times, and on no schedule of service, and only when he receives unsolicited and acceptable calls to do such transporting, is not operating "between fixed termini or over a regular route" within the meaning of chapters 252-A1, or 252-A2, C. '31 [Chs 252.1, or 252.2, C. '39], and, therefore, is under no obligation to obtain a certificate of necessity or convenience or to pay the tax required by said chapters.

State v Transfer, 213-1269; 239 NW 125

"Bi-monthly payments." A contract for services providing for payments each two weeks is obligatory, even tho the party rendering the service has not worked two full weeks.

Goben v Pav. Co., 218-829; 252 NW 262

"Building." A schoolhouse is a "building," within the definition of statutory burglary. (§13001, C, '27.)

State v Burzette, 208-818; 222 NW 394

"Buildings"—intent of parties. The word "building" as used in restrictive covenants in deeds of conveyance will be so construed as to give effect to the manifest intention and purposes of the parties. Held, inter alia, that structures for screening sand, and a derrick with hoisting machinery were "buildings" within the meaning of restrictive covenants against the erection of buildings which would cut off a view.

Curtis v Schmidt, 212-1279; 237 NW 463

"Bushel" construed. The admeasurement to a landlord by an agreed arbitrator of a certain number of bushels of corn as rent for a certain year will not be construed as calling for that number of bushels of "shelled" corn when the parties knew at all times that the admeasurement was on the basis of crib measurement; and when the landlord receives in shelled corn all that was set aside to him "on the cob," the rent must be deemed fully paid.

Salinger v Elev. Co., 210-668; 231 NW 366

"Car." A caterpillar road grader belonging to a county, and operated on the public highway, is not a "car" within the meaning of the statutory declaration that the owner of a "car" is liable for damages done by the car when it is operated with his consent.

Bateson v County, 213-718; 239 NW 803

"Chose or thing in action."

Brenton Bros. v Dorr, 213-725; 239 NW 808

"Car"—"line"—"stage"—common carrier venue statute. The terms, "line," "stage," "car" and "other line of coaches and cars" as defined at the time of the enactment of the statute specifying venue of actions against carriers are comprehensive enough to include the operations of a transfer company as a common carrier using motor vehicles, and a damage action against such motor vehicle carrier is properly brought in a county where an automobile collided with one of the carrier's trucks while traveling over its regular route, albeit company had no office in such county.

Bruce Co. v Johnston, 227-50; 287 NW 278

"Church purposes." A broad and comprehensive meaning must be accorded to the term "church purposes" in a conveyance of land to trustees "so long as used for church purposes".

Presbyterian Church v Johnson, 213-49; 238 NW 465

"Commissioner" as agent for process.

Green v Brinegar, 228- ; 292 NW 229

Compensable "injury"—workmen's compensation.

Sachleben v Gjellefald, 228- ; 290 NW 48

"Compensation." Title 38, §454, USC, providing that federal funds granted to a World War veteran, "shall not be subject to the claims of creditors", does not prohibit the courts of this state from allowing the guardian of such veteran and from such funds, compensation not only for ordinary services but for extraordinary services rendered the ward—the guardian not being a "creditor" within the meaning of said statute.

Hines v McKenzie, 216-1388; 250 NW 687

"Confidential relations." The position of head bookkeeper in the office of the state treasurer involves "strictly confidential relations" with the head of said office, within the meaning of §1165, C, '31.

Allen v Wegman, 218-801; 254 NW 74

"Consolidated" defined. A "consolidated" school district is an "independent school district," within the meaning of §4280, C, '24, authorizing the school board to elect a superintendent for a period not exceeding three years.

Consolidated Dist. v Griffin, 201-63; 206 NW 86

"Construction" as imposing continuous duty. An ordinance which requires all rain spouts on buildings to be so "constructed" that water will not be cast upon sidewalks imposes a continuing duty upon the property owner—a duty not only to "construct" the spouting as required but to maintain the spouting in such required condition.

Updegraff v City, 210-382; 226 NW 928

Cigarettes—retailer not "consumer." The statute requiring packages of cigarettes sold to a "consumer" to have the tax stamps affixed thereto does not apply to a sale by a wholesaler to a retailer, the latter not being a consumer, within the meaning of §1570, C, '24.

State v Lagomarcino-Grupe Co., 207-621; 223 NW 512

Sales tax—shoe repairman as "consumer or user". A shoe repairman is a "consumer or user" of the material used in repairing shoes within the legislative definition of those terms in the sales tax act, and in charging for such repair he is not primarily reselling those materials, but selling his services; wherefore, the one from whom he buys those materials makes the retail sale subject to the tax.

Sandberg Co. v Board, 225-103; 278 NW 643; 281 NW 197

Iowa Corp. v Halligan, 214-903; 241 NW 475

IV Par. 2. WORDS AND PHRASES—continued

“Conveyance.” A valid prohibition against the “conveyance” of real property embraces a mortgage.

“Debt.” The meaning of the term “debt” is largely dependent on its context.

Smith v Andrew, 209-99; 227 NW 587

“Debt.” A decree for alimony in fixed monthly payments does not create a debt in the sense of the garnishment statutes.

Malone v Moore, 212-58; 236 NW 100

Malone v Moore, 212-58; 236 NW 100

Judgment as “debt.” A judgment, whether based on contract or tort, is a “debt” within the meaning of the exemption statutes.

Ohio Ins. v Galvin, 222-670; 269 NW 254; 108 ALR 1096

“Indebtedness”—future taxes to pay bonds.

Brunk v Des Moines, 228- ; 291 NW 395

Mortgage redemption—“debtor” defined. The grantee of land who buys subject to an existing mortgage is a “debtor,” within the meaning of the redemption statutes; and the original mortgagor is not entitled to the possession of the land or to the value of such possession during the redemption period following foreclosure, even though the mortgagee is the only “debtor” who is personally liable for the mortgage debt.

Marx v Clark, 201-1219; 207 NW 357

“Donations” defined. Funds received by a court-appointed trustee “for the perpetual care” of a named cemetery are “donations” within the meaning of the statute requiring a bond securing such funds.

Belmond Assn. v Luick, 217-805; 253 NW 521

“Dues” and “subscription” defined. The terms “dues” and “subscriptions” are by no means necessarily synonymous.

Jefferson, etc. v Sherman, 208-614; 226 NW 182

“Dues and pledges.” The statutory provision that a farm bureau organization shall be entitled to financial aid from the county when the “yearly membership dues and pledges” amount to a certain sum, authorizes such aid when the “dues” alone amount to the required sum.

Blume v Crawford Co., 217-545; 250 NW 733; 92 ALR 757

Easements and tenements—relation. An easement is a privilege or right without profit which the owner of one piece of realty may have in another, or conversely, it is a service which one tract of land owes to another. The land entitled to the easement is the dominant tenement, and the land burdened with the servitude is the servient tenement, neither the easement nor servitude being personal, but accessory, running with the land.

Dawson v McKinnon, 226-756; 285 NW 258

“Engaged in business.” A person is “engaged in the business” of selling a drug when he has such drug for sale to any person who may apply for it for the seller’s profit, irrespective of any other business carried on by the said seller.

State v Market Co., 209-567; 228 NW 288

“Fellow servant” and “vice-principal”. Evidence held to warrant conclusion that owner of apparatus used to tear down silo, and who was actively engaged in such work, was a fellow servant; and, if he was a vice-principal, he was such only to the extent of being required to furnish plaintiff proper equipment and a safe place to work. The mere fact that one employee has authority over others does not make him a vice-principal or superior so as to charge the master with his negligence.

Redhead v Miles, 227-1290; 284 NW 829; 290 NW 702

Peterson v Barnett, 213-514; 239 NW 77

“Filing within twelve months”. Conceding, arguendo, that in the settlement of an estate, the statute of limitation commences to run from the date of the last newspaper publication, yet, when the last publication was on April 16, 1931, a claim filed April 16, 1932, is not filed “within twelve months from the giving of the notice” as provided by §11972, C, ‘31.

First Tr. JSB Bk. v Terbell, 217-624; 252 NW 789

“Final decision.” A statutory declaration that a decision of the court shall be “final” may carry the clear meaning that such decision is not an appealable decision.

State v Webster County, 209-143; 227 NW 595

“Forthwith.” The term “forthwith” does not necessarily mean “immediately”.

Ashpole v Delaney, 217-792; 253 NW 30
Franchise. A franchise is a privilege or authority vested in certain persons by grant of the sovereign to exercise powers or to do or perform acts which, without such grant, they could not legally do or perform.

Mapleton v Iowa Co., 206-9; 216 NW 683

Gambling devices—punch boards and slot machines. Legislature has specifically recognized punch boards and slot machines as gambling devices and they are subject to forfeiture when seized under a valid search warrant, unless the person named in the information or claiming an interest in the property shows cause why they should not be so forfeited.

State v Doe, 227-1215; 290 NW 518

Gifts causa mortis—essential elements. A gift causa mortis is a gift of personal property, intentionally made, even orally, by the mentally competent owner of said property, in expectation of his or her imminent death from an impending disorder or peril (the not necessarily so imminent as to exclude the opportunity to execute a will), and made and delivered by the donor to the donee on the essential condition that, if the gift be not in the meantime revoked, the property shall belong to the donee in case the donor dies, as anticipated, of the disorder or peril, leaving said donee surviving.

Flint v Varney, 220-1241; 264 NW 277

"Guest." Under the rule that passenger is neither a guest nor a mere invitee when he is riding with driver for the mutual, tangible, and definite benefit of both parties, a passenger in an automobile driven by a representative of the Federal Resettlement Administration is not a "guest" when both parties are on their way to a bank to secure a temporary loan for passenger until such time as a loan could be completed with the Federal Resettlement Administration.

Doherty v Edwards, 227-1264; 290 NW 672

"Hear and determine". In certiorari to determine the legality of proceedings of civil service commission in removing a city employee, the commission's statutory duty to "hear and determine" is an essential ingredient of jurisdiction, and the quoted words refer to a judicial investigation and settlement of an issue of fact, which implies the weighing of testimony by both sides, from a consideration of which the relief sought by the moving party is either granted or denied.

Sandahl v Des Moines, 227-1310; 290 NW 697

"High watermark." The high watermark of a navigable river is that upper line which ordinary floods permanently mark along the course of the river.

Curtis v Schmidt, 212-1279; 237 NW 463

"Horse" as vehicle. A horse, saddled and bridled, and being used as a means of conveyance or transportation is not a "vehicle" within the meaning of a policy of insurance which provides indemnity "sustained by the wrecking or disablement of any vehicle or car * * * in which the insured is riding or by being accidentally thrown therefrom".

Riser v Ins. Co., 207-1101; 224 NW 67; 63 ALR 292

Illegal transportation. The word "transportation" in the intoxicating liquor statutes is employed in its ordinary sense: that is, to convey from one place to another—any real carrying about.

State v Canalle, 206-1169; 27 NW 847

"In." The preposition "in" may be used in the sense of "for" or "on behalf of".

Willis v Sch. Dist., 210-391; 27 NW 532

"In aerial conveyance"—parachute jump.

Richardson v Assn., 228--; 291 NW 408

"Inebriacy" defined. Inebriacy is the state of drunkenness or habitual intoxication.

Maher v Brown, 225-341; 280 NW 553

"Interested person"—party to probate.

In re Duffy, 228--; 292 NW 165

"Intersection" of highways—definition. In a damage action arising from a collision of motor vehicles at a highway intersection, where the question of negligence centered largely around the rights of the parties within the intersection, it was prejudicial error to instruct the jury that "intersection" is the area within the fence lines, if such fence lines were extended across the road, when a statute defines "intersection" as being the area within the lateral boundary lines of highways which join.

Hupp v Doolittle, 226-814; 285 NW 247

"Invitee"—"licensee". An invitee to a place of business is one who goes there, either at the express or implied invitation of the owner or occupant, on business of mutual interest to both, or in connection with the business of the owner or occupant. A licensee is one who goes upon the property of another, either at the invitation, or with the implied acquiescence, of the owner or occupant, for a purpose purely personal to himself.

Wilson v Goodrich, 218-462; 252 NW 142

"Judicial capacity". In adopting plans for pavement of alley intersection, the city was acting in a "judicial capacity" and was not liable for defects in engineer's plans unless as a matter of law the plans were obviously defective.

Russell v Sioux City, 227-1302; 290 NW 708

"Knowingly consenting." A statute (now repealed) placing personal liability on the officers and directors of a corporation for prohibited excess indebtedness of the corporation, "knowingly consented to" by them, necessarily excludes liability (1) on mere proof that the officers or directors were negligent in performing their duties, and (2) as to corporate debts contracted after the officer or director ceased to be such.

Preston v Howell, 219-230; 257 NW 415; 97 ALR 1140; 38 NCCA 133
"Legally bound" persons. Where a county has maintained in a state hospital an insane person who was a member of an incorporated religious and communistic society the county's statutory right (§3595, C., '31) to recover the resulting expense from any person "legally liable" for the support of such insane person does not entitle it to recover such expense from the said society simply on proof that the society had obligated itself by contract to support said member for life. "Legal" liability under the statute is confined strictly to "common-law" liability.

Iowa Co. v Amana Soc., 214-893; 243 NW 299

"Lost" goods defined. Money taken from the owner thereof by robbery, and the whereabouts of which money is thereafter unknown to said owner until it is returned to him by one who found it, where the robber had hidden it, constitutes "lost" money within the meaning of the statute which provides compensation to the finder of "lost" money and other property.

Flood v Bank, 218-898; 253 NW 509; 95 ALR 1168

Generating electricity as "manufacturing or mechanical business". The generation or production of electricity is a manufacturing or mechanical business within the scope of a statute permitting the formation of co-operative associations to conduct a manufacturing or mechanical business.

State v Hardin County Co-op., 226-896; 285 NW 219

"May." The primary meaning of the word "may" is permissive and discretionary.

Bernstein v City, 215-1168; 248 NW 26; 86 ALR 782

"May"—"must". "May" cannot, manifestly, be given the imperative meaning of "must", unless there be substantial warrant for such construction.

Brickson v Schwebach, 219-1368; 261 NW 518

Owner of auto salesroom—neither "mechanic" nor "other laborer". Proprietor of auto salesroom with separate department where repairing is done by employee held not a "mechanic", and therefore tools are not exempt from levy; nor is such proprietor an "other laborer" within vehicle exemption.

First N. Bank v Larson, 213-468; 239 NW 134

"Mistake"—mistake of law—statute not tolled. Where a sheriff collects fees under a mistake of law, the failure to discover the mistake of law will not toll the running of the statute of limitations. The word "mistake" in §11010, C., '35, means mistake of fact.

George v Webster County, 211-164; 233 NW 49
Morgan v Jasper County, 223-1044; 274 NW 310; 111 ALR 634

"Mortgagor" defined. A "mortgagor" is he who holds title to the premises mortgaged. A wife who joins in a mortgage of the husband's land for the purpose of releasing her distributive share is not a mortgagor.

Wood v Schwartz, 212-462; 236 NW 491

Municipal light rates. A reasonable rate for electric light, duly fixed by a municipality under §6143, C., '27, is both a maximum and a minimum rate. In other words, a public utility may not legally charge more nor less than the prescribed rate.

Mapleton v Iowa Co., 209-400; 223 NW 476; 68 ALR 993

"Net income"—what constitutes. "Net income" does not mean the general income of the estate without provision for the payment of just charges, taxes, and reasonable repair and upkeep. On the contrary, it means the income remaining, if any, after such charges and expenses are taken care of. (So held as to a testamentary trust which provided for the keeping of the trust estate intact and for the annual distribution of the net income.)

In re Whitman, 221-1114; 266 NW 28

"Newspaper." An agreement not to engage in the publication or circulation of a "newspaper" in a named locality is violated by the publication and circulation in said locality, without charge, of a so-called "Shopper's Guide" of eight pages arranged in the form of an ordinary newspaper, and containing much advertisement, some current news, serial stories, editorial comment, and newspaper clippings.

Henry & Sons v Rhinesmith, 219-1088; 260 NW 9

"Next regular election." The statutory provision (§1155, C., '31) that an officer filling a vacancy in an elective office shall hold until the next regular election at which such vacancy can be filled, means the "next regular election" at which such vacancy can be legally filled.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

"Operation upon public highway." Des M. Co. v Johnson, 213-594; 239 NW 575

"On or about." The phrase "on or about" a specified date permits of some variation from the date specified, but no date in July is "on or about" the last of October of the same year.

Newcomer v Ament, 214-507; 242 NW 82
"Or"—"and". Statute construed and held, not permissible to substitute "and" for "or".
Ballard-Hassett Co. v Miller, 219-1066; 260 NW 65

Unambiguous language—"or" cannot mean "and". The word "or" in a statute cannot be judicially construed to mean "and" when the language of the section is too clear and unambiguous to admit of judicial construction.
State v Des Moines, 221-642; 266 NW 41

Simmer law ballot showing "electric light or power"—"or" synonymous with "and". Since an electric plant produces energy which may be used for either light or power, a ballot which states the question as to whether a city should establish an "electric light or power plant" would be readily understood by the voters that the city was seeking to establish an "electric light and power plant".
Lahn v Primghar, 225-686; 281 NW 214

Conjunctive or disjunctive use of "or"—technical rules disregarded. Under a statute permitting the formation of associations to conduct a manufacturing business or to construct or operate electric transmission lines, the words "or to construct or operate * * * electric transmission lines" could be eliminated where the manufacturing business was the operation of an electric power plant, as the right to use such lines is implied as essential to the manufacture of electricity; so whether "or" was used in a conjunctive or disjunctive sense made no difference, as courts will disregard technical rules of grammar and punctuation to arrive at the intent of a statute.
State v Hardin County Co-op., 226-896; 285 NW 219

"Orchard" defined. A group of some 65 bearing fruit trees of different varieties, maintained by continued replanting, constitutes an "orchard", within the meaning of the statute which prohibits the laying out of highways through orchards without the owner’s consent.
Junkin v Knapp, 205-184; 217 NW 834

"Order" as "final judgment". Where court entered an order reciting that the court "finds that said demurrer should be sustained and indictment dismissed", altho such order is not in the form of a judgment, it was in legal effect a "final judgment" from which an appeal can be taken by the state under §13995, C., ’39. Every final adjudication of the rights of the parties is a judgment.
State v Talerico, 227-1315; 290 NW 660

"Orders." An "order" of court, speaking broadly, is any direction by the court in a proceeding, not including the judgment or decree.
Blank v Walker, 206-1889; 222 NW 388

"Owner." The term "owner" may be used in a sense other than absolute and unconditional title.
Bare v Cole, 220-338; 260 NW 338

"Owner" defined. The legal titleholder of real estate and a prospective purchaser for whose benefit and use an improvement is erected upon the real estate, may both be considered "owners" of the property within the meaning of the mechanics lien law.
American Bank v West, 214-568; 243 NW 297

Moratorium act — receiver as "owner". The duly qualified and acting receiver of an insolvent private bank is the "owner" of the mortgaged real estate of said bank within the meaning of the moratorium statute (46 GA, ch 110) relative to extension of time in which to redeem from foreclosure sale.
Metropolitan v Van Alstine, 221-763; 266 NW 514

Moratorium act — "owner" defined. An "owner" within the meaning of the moratorium foreclosure act may be such tho his interest is less than a fee ownership.
Prudential v Kraschel, 222-128; 266 NW 550

"Paper" defined. A laboratory analysis, duly reduced to writing, of an organ of the human body and of the contents thereof is a "paper", within the meaning of the statute relative to the compulsory production of "papers or books" (§11316, C., ’24), and the party to an action who has the exclusive possession thereof may be compelled to produce it for the inspection of the other party when such inspection is material to the issue whether the deceased died by accident or by suicide by means of poison; but the production of private correspondence or memoranda relative to the analysis may not be coerced.
Travelers Ins. v Jackson, 201-43; 206 NW 98

"Party" and "witness". The terms "party" to an action, and "witness" are not synonymous within the meaning of §11358, C., ’31.
Bagley v Dist. Court, 218-34; 254 NW 26

"Person." The general assembly in exercising its constitutional power over an authorized subject matter, may be its own lexicographer —may use its own terms and declare what entities shall be embraced therein. So held where in the enactment of the motor vehicle fuel tax law, Ch 251-F1, C., ’35 [Ch 251.3, C., ’39], it defined the term "person" and, in effect, declared such term to include a municipal corporation.
State v Des Moines, 221-642; 266 NW 41
“Person in possession”. In action to quiet title acquired under tax deed, statute requiring that notice of expiration of right to redeem from tax sale must be served on the “person in possession” of such real estate before tax deed can issue is not complied with by serving the husband only, where husband and wife are tenants, the evidence disclosing that wife was also working and that she paid the rent out of her separate wages.

Murphy v Hatter, 227-1286; 290 NW 695

“Person of same household”—scope of term. Where an insurance policy insured the assured against liability arising or resulting from automobile accidents, but excepted liability for injuries to “the assured or persons of the same household as the assured”, held that a married woman who furnished the assured a room and board for a stated compensation could not be deemed a “person of the same household as the assured”.

Unmarger v Ins. Co., 218-203; 254 NW 87; 36 NCCA 733

“Premium.” The term “premium”, tho used in connection with insurance contract, may embrace a consideration received by an insurance company in payment of an annuity contract, even tho the annuity contract in question is not an insurance contract.

Northwestern Ins. v Murphy, 223-333; 271 NW 899; 109 ALR 1054

Presumption (?) or assumption (?) of malice. The court may, under applicable evidence, instruct that the jury has a right, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to presume the existence of malice from the use of a deadly weapon in a deadly manner; and in so instructing it is quite immaterial that the court employs the term “assume” instead of the term “presume”.

State v Berlovich, 220-1288; 263 NW 853

Provisional remedy. A provisional remedy is one which is provided for present needs, or for the occasion; that is, one adapted to meet a particular exigency, e. g., the appointment of a receiver in mortgage foreclosure. It follows that an order granting such remedy is appealable.

Davenport v Thompson, 206-746; 221 NW 347

“Public place” includes bridge. The term “public place”, as used in the statute relative to the obligation of streetcar companies to construct, reconstruct, and maintain paving between and outside the rails of their tracks, embraces a public bridge. (§6051-cl, C., ’31 [§6051.1, C., ’29].)

In re Walnut Bridge, 220-55; 261 NW 781

“Reasonably safe place” defined. The operator of a filling station was under a legal obligation to exercise reasonable and ordinary care to see that his place of business was reasonably safe for an invitee who was having a truck tire repaired. The phrase “reasonably safe” meaning safe according to the usage, habits, and ordinary risks of the business.

Reynolds v Skelly Co., 227-163; 287 NW 823

“Recklessness”. Recklessness goes beyond mere negligence and means proceeding without concern for consequences, with a heedless disregard for the rights of others. Recklessness under the motor vehicle guest statute is not found from evidence that the driver of a car went to sleep, where there was little evidence that he was conscious of the approach of sleep.

Paulson v Hanson, 226-858; 285 NW 189

“Refund.” Under a contract to pay an accountant a percentage of the amount “refunded” by the federal government as excess payment for certain years of income and war-profit taxes, the percentage must be computed on the-actual amount returned by the government, even tho the government arrived at said amount by deducting from what would otherwise have been the refund the amount of tax inadequately paid in a certain year.

Gregerson v Cherry, 210-538; 231 NW 350

“Renew.” The term “renew,” as applied to a contract, means a re-establishment of an existing contract for another period of time.

State v Niehaus, 209-533; 228 NW 508

Repairs may incidentally benefit adjacent road. Work on a drainage ditch which prevented erosion and prevented an overflow on reclaimed lands was “repair” work within the statutory authority of the board of supervisors to repair drainage ditches even tho there was an incidental benefit to bridges and to a township road at the side of the ditch.

Baldozier v Mayberry, 226-693; 285 NW 140

“Resulting from.” An injury to a passenger on a motor vehicle bus may not be said to “result from” the operation of the bus, when the proximate cause of such injury was the negligence of a third party.

Crozier v Stages, 209-313; 228 NW 520

Child on sled being towed not “riding” in vehicle. A person to be within the provisions of the Iowa guest statute must be “riding” in the motor vehicle, which excludes a child on a sled hooked to the rear of a moving automobile.

Samuelson v Sherrill, 225-421; 280 NW 596

“Rounding corner.” The statutory provision that no ground shall be taken for a primary road “for the rounding of a corner” where certain named improvements are located, is violated by locating a primary road through a 40-acre tract on an arc which extends substantially from the southeast to the northwest corner of the tract, and which so bends convexly to the northeast corner of the tract as to leave approximately 4 acres at said corner where the said improvements are located.

Brenton Bros. v Dorr, 213-725; 239 NW 808

“Shall.” Under statute providing that county board of supervisors “shall” select three official newspapers, and there were only three applicants, the board had no discretionary power, and petitioner-applicant was entitled to maintain mandamus action to compel the selection of his newspaper.

Peverill v Dept., 216-534; 245 NW 334

“Shall” and “may” used conversely. Rule reaffirmed that word “may” is construed to mean “shall” when the rights of the public or third person depend upon the exercise of the power or performance of the duty referred to, and conversely, the word “shall” is merely directory when no advantage is lost, right destroyed, or benefit sacrificed by giving it such construction.

School Twp. v Nicholson, 227-290; 288 NW 123

“Shall”—when synonymous with “may”. Statute providing that person applying for admission to high school shall present affidavit of parent or guardian construed to be directory rather than mandatory, the rule being that the word “shall” is generally construed to be mandatory, but where no right or benefit depends on its imperative use it may be, and often is, treated as synonymous with “may”.

School Twp. v Nicholson, 227-290; 288 NW 123

“Subject to liens of record.” The expression “subject to liens of record” when embraced in the habendum clause of a deed of conveyance does not have the effect of continuing the lien of a judgment after the holder thereof had failed to exercise his right to redeem.

Paulsen v Jensen, 209-453; 228 NW 357

“Suspension” and “cancellation” compared. The suspension of a policy of insurance is not synonymous with cancellation of the policy.

Federal Bank v Ins. Assn., 217-1098; 253 NW 82

Taxes and special assessments. There is a distinction between taxes and special assessments—a tax being a general contribution imposed upon property, while a special assessment is a payment for special benefits conferred upon the property by an improvement.

Bennett v Greenwalt, 226-1113; 286 NW 722

“Thereon” and “thereof.”

Edwards v Kirk, 227-684; 288 NW 875

“Train wreck.” The smashing in of a portion of one side of a passenger coach by swinging a loading bucket against the coach as it was passing, constitutes a “train wreck,” within the meaning of a policy of accident insurance, even though the coach (the only one injured) was not derailed, and was not taken from the train for repairs until a division point on the line was reached.

State v Naumann, 213-418; 239 NW 98; 81 ALR 483

“Vacation” of court. The term “vacation” as employed in §13667, C, ’31 means the interim which commences immediately after the expiration of a term of court and ends at the commencement of the next term of court. The court is not in vacation while it is in a recess.

Dayton v Bechly, 213-1305; 241 NW 416

“Vibrolithic pavement”. In action by pedestrian for injuries sustained in fall on paving, evidence that the paving was a “vibrolithic” type composed of granite and concrete chips, that the pavement was dry, that there had been no rain or mist, and that there was no foreign substance on the paving does not present a question for the jury on issue of city’s negligence in construction, even tho the pavement was “pretty smooth”, the smoothness being a quality inherent in the material.

Russell v Sioux City, 227-1302; 290 NW 708

“Volenti non fit injuria” defined. The maxim “volenti non fit injuria” means: “That to which a person assents is not esteemed in law an injury” or “He who consents cannot receive an injury”.

Edwards v Kirk, 227-684; 288 NW 875
IV PAR. 2. WORDS AND PHRASES—concluded

"Wantonness" or "recklessness". Wantonness is something more than recklessness and recklessness is something more than negligence.

Sanburn v Rollins Mills, 217-218; 251 NW 144

"Warrant." A plain, unambiguous statutory declaration that a claim shall be filed "with the officer authorized by law to issue warrants in payment of such improvement" must be strictly construed in accordance with the usual and ordinary meaning of the word "warrant".

Missouri Gravel v Surety Co., 212-1222; 237 NW 635

"Warrant-issuing officer." Claims of laborers and materialmen, under a contract for the paving of a primary highway, entered into by the state highway commission must be filed with the state auditor and not with the said commission, the auditing and approving of claims by said commission not constituting the issuance of a "warrant" within the meaning of §10306, C., '27. (Statute now changed.)

Missouri Gravel v Surety Co., 212-1222; 237 NW 635

"Willful" defined. The term "willful" in the statute specifying grounds for removal from office, when applied to "neglect to perform the duties of his office," or to "misconduct or maladministration in office," means knowingly, intentionally, deliberately, "with a bad or evil purpose."

State v Naumann, 213-418; 239 NW 93; 81 ALR 483

Misleading terms. The expression "yielding to the embraces" is not synonymous with "sexual intercourse"; likewise, the expression "wrongful acts" is not synonymous with the term "seduction".

Gardner v Boland, 209-862; 227 NW 902

V PAR. 3. NUMBER AND GENDER

"Person"—political subdivisions not included. The statutory provision that in the construction of statutes "the word 'person' may be extended to bodies corporate" does not embrace political subdivisions of the state.

Julander v Reynolds, 206-1115; 221 NW 807

VI PAR. 5. HIGHWAY—ROAD

Highway traversing city street—highway law applicable. Where a statute requires pedestrians to walk on left side of a highway, the word "highway" is applicable to a through highway traversing a street within a city, especially in view of other sections in the motor vehicle act concerning highways.

Reynolds v Aller, 226-642; 284 NW 825; 5 NCWA (NS) 724

"Construction of highway." Subgrading a street preparatory to putting down curbing and guttering constitutes "construction of a highway improvement," within the meaning of §11042, C., '27, and the contractor is suable by the subcontractor in any county where the contract is made or performed, irrespective of the residence of the defendant.

VII PAR. 6. INSANE

Adjudication of insanity—nonretroactive presumption. An adjudication of insanity creates no presumption that the person in question was insane at any particular period of time prior to said adjudication.

Davidson v Piper, 221-171; 265 NW 107

VIII PAR. 7. ISSUE

Wills—construction—"heirs"—Inaccurate use of term—Intent controls. A testamentary provision that testator's "heirs" shall participate in a specified trust fund will be deemed to include a granddaughter, even tho under the then existing circumstances she is not, technically, an heir, it appearing that testator had in other parts of his will listed his heirs and had therein included his said granddaughter.

Slavens v Bailey, 222-1091; 270 NW 367

IX PAR. 8. LAND—REAL ESTATE

No annotations in this volume

X PAR. 9. PERSONAL PROPERTY

"Property" defined. The term "property" embraces both personal and real property unless the contrary is shown; similarly the term "property owners" embraces the owners of personal as well as real property.

Groenendyke v Fowler, 204-598; 215 NW 718

Real estate and personalty distinguished. Principle reaffirmed that upon the sale of land through the medium of a contract for a deed, the purchaser acquires "land" while the vendor acquires "personal property."

Wood v Schwartz, 212-462; 236 NW 491

Matured crops. Principle reaffirmed that matured corn, standing in the field, is personal property and therefore subject to conversion.

Durringer v Heaton, 219-528; 258 NW 543

XI PAR. 10. PROPERTY

Municipal corporations—telephone franchise—"property owners" defined. The term "property owners" in the statute relative to calling elections for the purpose of voting on the granting of telephone and other franchises (§5905, C., '24), embraces owners of personal property, as well as owners of real property.

Groenendyke v Fowler, 204-598; 215 NW 718
Judgment as property. A judgment is "property" within the purview of this section, and gives jurisdiction to the district court of the county in which the judgment is entered to appoint an administrator of the deceased judgment creditor's estate.

Edwards v Popham, 206-149; 220 NW 18

XII PAR. 11. MONTH—YEAR—A.D.

Limitation of rent lien—computation of six-months period. In computing the six months during which a landlord’s lien survives the expiration of the lease, the count must commence with the first day following the said expiration. The statutory rule to exclude the first day and to include the last day has no application.

Welch v Welch, 212-1245; 238 NW 81

Statutes—time of taking effect—act of special session. Acts of a special session of the general assembly, in the absence of any contrary direction therein, take effect 90 days after final adjournment, the time being computed on the basis of excluding the day of adjournment and including the 90th day.

Clingingsmith v Jackson Dairy, 202-773; 211 NW 413

XIII PAR. 13. PERSON

“Person”—municipality not included. The statutory provision that in the construction of statutes "the word person may be extended to bodies corporate" does not embrace political subdivisions of the state.

Julander v Reynolds, 206-1115; 221 NW 807

XIV PAR. 16. TOWN

Constitutional law—classification of municipalities by population. Assuming that a supportable reason exists for classifying on the basis of population, a statute applicable to cities "now or hereafter having a population of" a named number, cannot be deemed "a local or special law" even tho the when enacted it can apply to only one city, and even tho the creation of the official machinery for putting the act into effect in cities thereafter attaining said population is only implied.

State v Darling, 216-553; 246 NW 890; 88 ALR 218

Constitutional law—privileges and immunities and class legislation. The general assembly may constitutionally make a law applicable to cities having a certain population and not applicable to cities having a lesser population, provided the subject matter of the law suggests some reasonable necessity for said distinction. So held in sustaining the constitutionality of an act providing for the government and management of municipal parks by a park board of 10 members.

State v Darling, 216-553; 246 NW 890; 88 ALR 218

XV PAR. 19. SHERIFF

Original notice—service—return by deputy. When service of an original notice is made by a deputy sheriff, the return is all-sufficient when made in the name of the sheriff by the deputy in his name.

Thompson Bros. v Phillips, 198-1064; 200 NW 727

XVI PAR. 20. DEED—BOND—INDENTURE—UNDERTAKING

Construction and operation of contract for deed. Principles reaffirmed that under a contract for a deed:

1. The purchaser acquires the full equitable title to the land, while the vendor continues to hold the legal title as security for the performance of the contract, and

2. That, for the purpose of foreclosure, the purchaser will be deemed a mortgagor and the vendor a mortgagee.

Junkin v McClain, 221-1084; 265 NW 362

Motor carrier's bond to pay taxes "incurred"—scope. A bond, (1) reciting that the principal therein had been licensed as a motor carrier under named statutes of the state, and (2) conditioned to pay "the taxes and penalties incurred" under said statutes—a positive liability—embraces liability to pay taxes and penalties incurred before, as well as after, the date of said bond.

Board v U.S.F. & G. Co., 221-880; 266 NW 501

XVII PAR. 21. EXECUTOR—ADMINISTRATOR

Special and general administrators. The fact that, in a will contest, verdict has been returned and judgment entered thereon to the effect that the alleged will in question is not a valid will, does not, in and of itself, legally justify the court in terminating an existing special administratorship and in appointing a general administrator. Said latter appointment would probably be void.

In re Whitehouse, 223-91; 272 NW 110

Executor and executor de son tort. A legatee of a strictly personal property, debt-free estate, who, with the approval of all other legatees, distributes the entire estate in strict accord with the will of the testator, is thereafter under no obligation to account to a subsequently appointed executor who does not question the correctness of her distribution. Especially is this true when such legatee offers to pay the cost of such unnecessary administration.

Davenport v Sandeman, 204-927; 216 NW 55

XVIII PAR. 22. NUMERALS—FIGURES

No annotations in this volume
XIX PAR. 23. COMPUTING TIME

Fractions of a day—when recognized. Principle recognized that the fiction, often encountered in the law, that a day is an individual period of time—that the law will not take cognizance of fractions of a day—is subject to many exceptions.

Thrasher v Haynes, 221-1137; 264 NW 915

Notice—insufficient publication. A notice of the hearing before the board of supervisors on a petition for the enrollment of a county under the county area eradication plan relating to bovine tuberculosis is a nullity when the last newspaper publication was on August 13th, and when the hearing was had on August 17th.

Phewes v Thornburg, 206-1150; 221 NW 835

Timely motion to set aside. Where judgment is entered in a municipal court on April 9th, a motion filed on April 19th following, to set aside the default, is timely.

Service System v Johns, 206-1164; 221 NW 777

Landlord’s lien—computation of six months period. In computing the six months during which a landlord’s lien survives the expiration of the lease, the count must commence with the first day following the said expiration. The statutory rule to exclude the first day and to include the last day has no application.

Welch v Welch, 212-1245; 238 NW 81

Acts of special session of legislature.

Clingingsmith v Dairy Co., 202-773; 211 NW 415

Danbury v Riedmiller, 208-879; 226 NW 159

Nugatory or ineffective amendments. The mortgage foreclosure redemption act (45 GA, ch 179), which became a law March 19, 1933, and which provided that “In any action * * * which has been commenced” for the foreclosure of a real estate mortgage, the court should, under named conditions, grant an extension of time in which to redeem from sale, manifestly, ex vi termini, had no application to mortgages executed on or after January 1, 1934. It follows that the later amendment (45 Ex. GA, ch 137) which specifically declared the inapplicability of said moratorium act to mortgages executed “on or after January 1, 1934” was nugatory—t ook naught from, and added naught to, said original moratorium act.

Metropolitan v Reeve, 222-255; 268 NW 531

Redemption from tax sale—law governing. The time in which redemption may be made from tax sale is absolutely governed by the law in force at the time of the sale. It follows that a legislative amendment shortening the redemption period cannot apply to pre-existing sales.

Lockie v Hammerstrom, 222-451; 269 NW 507

Verdict—scope of term—fatally delayed motion. A court-directed verdict (in a jury trial) is the verdict of the jury within the meaning of the statute limiting applications for new trial to five days “after the verdict is rendered” and the court has no jurisdiction to grant an application made after said time irrespective of the time when formal judgment was entered on the verdict. (Verdict rendered in 1916; judgment entered in 1930.)

Selby v McDonald, 219-823; 259 NW 485

Failure to file abstract—“second term” defined. The statutory provision that an appeal may be dismissed if the abstract is not filed “30 days before the second term” after the taking of the appeal, means “30 days before the second term at which the appeal can be submitted,” in view of other provisions of the statute. (§§12847, 12848, C, ’24.)

Mullenix v Bank, 201-137; 206 NW 670

XX PAR. 24. CONSANGUINITY AND AFFINITY

“Sister” contemplates “half-sister”. The statute (§10445, C, ’27) which declares void a marriage between a man and his sister’s daughter, embraces a marriage between a man and his half-sister’s daughter.

State v Lamb, 209-152; 227 NW 830

Status of children of adopted child. The legal status of children of an adopted child is, inter alia, that of grandchildren of their foster grandparents.

Shaw v Scott, 217-1259; 252 NW 237

Administrator—next of kin—no degrees of nearness. “Next of kin”, within the meaning of the statute regulating the preferential right to apply for administration, embraces those persons who take the personal property of the deceased; and there are no degrees of nearness in said class. For instance, the sister of the deceased has no necessarily preferential right over the niece of the deceased.

In re Wright, 210-25; 230 NW 552

Inheritable existence—criterion. An infant acquires existence capable of taking an inheritance only when it acquires an independent circulation of its blood after being fully separated from the body of the mother.

XXII PAR. 26. POPULATION

Census—when effective. A state census becomes effective only from and after the date of the official certificate of the secretary of state as to its correctness.

Broyles v Mahaska County, 213-345; 239 NW 1
64 Common-law rule of construction.

Additional annotations. See under §§63, 10002

Common-law restrictions. The common-law rule that statutes in derogation of the common law must be strictly construed has no application in this state.

In re Van Vechten, 218-229; 251 NW 729
Sullivan v Harris, 224-345; 276 NW 88

Statutory remedies not necessarily exclusive. A statutory remedy will not be construed as abrogating an existing common-law remedy unless the statute affirmatively indicates an intention to make the statutory remedy exclusive.

Jones v Knutson, 212-268; 234 NW 488

Attachment. Principle reaffirmed that proceedings in attachment are of statutory origin only, and in derogation of the common law.

Olds v Olds, 219-1395; 260 NW 1; 261 NW 488

Quasi-mechanic's lien statute. The statutes relative to materialmen and laborers on public improvements have always been strictly construed.

Aetna Cas. Co. v Kimball, 206-1251; 222 NW 31
Missouri Gravel v Surety Co., 212-1322; 237 NW 655

Tax statute—construed against taxing body. A proviso or exemption in a taxing statute in derogation of its general enacting clause must be strictly construed. However, as to contention that an income tax statute does not include out-of-state rent, not because of an exception, but by its terms, if open to construction at all, must fall within the general rule that tax statutes are construed strictly against the taxing body.

Palmer v Board, 226-92; 233 NW 415

Premises and enjoyment and use thereof—insurance. The housing law (Ch 323, C., '31) providing that "Every dwelling and all the parts thereof shall be kept in good repair by the owner" (§6392, C., '31) does not change the common-law rule of tort liability of the lessor to the lessee.

Johnson v Carter, 215-1587; 255 NW 864; 133 ALR 774

Insurance—bylaws and statutes in conflict—statute prevails. In an action to recover damages for loss by hail, bylaws of mutual hail insurance association which are inconsistent with statute relating to notice of cancellation must give way to statute.

Sorensen v Ins. Assn., 226-1316; 286 NW 494

Insurance—cancellation—statutory and contract provisions—construction. In an action on an insurance policy to recover damages for loss by hail, held, that statutory provisions for benefit of insured cannot be contracted away and terms of contract are only binding upon the insured if not contrary to applicable statutes. A policy is construed to give the insured his indemnity in questions of cancellation or forfeiture.

Sorensen v Ins. Assn., 226-1316; 286 NW 494

Highway traversing city street—highway law applicable. Where a statute requires pedestrians to walk on left side of a highway, the word "highway" is applicable to a through highway traversing a street within a city, especially in view of other sections in the motor vehicle act concerning highways.

CHAPTER 7.1
BUDGET AND FINANCIAL CONTROL ACT

84.04 State comptroller — salary — bond.

84.05 General powers and duties.

84.06 Specific powers and duties.
State comptroller—money payable by appropriation only. State disburse officer is bound by the constitutional provision that no money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law.
O'Connor v Murtagh, 225-782; 281 NW 455

Continuing appropriation statute—biennial appropriation paramount — mandamus. A statute, altho in the code because of its general and permanent nature, which sets the salary of the attorney general, a state officer, is not a continuing appropriation for that officer, when the biennial appropriation act appropriates a different and smaller amount for such officer for the biennium and declares "all salaries provided for in this act are in lieu of all existing statutory salaries". Mandamus will not lie to require payment of the larger salary.
O'Connor v Murtagh, 225-782; 281 NW 455

84.13 Claims—limitations.

Limitation on claims for unpaid salary. Claims for back salary for the attorney general, a state officer, must be made within six months after said salary was due.

Patents—collateral attack. The issuance by the state of a patent to lands is an assertion of the existence of the property conveyed; and such patent is immune from attack in a collateral proceeding.
Meeker v Kautz, 213-370; 229 NW 27

96 Maps — field notes — records — papers.
Atty. Gen. Opinion. See '38 AG Op 143

99 Lists of federal granted lands.
Invalid reservation in land grant. Principle reaffirmed that the insertion in a patent issued by the federal government under a public improvement grant of a clause “excepting and reserving all mineral lands”, is, in the absence of fraud, a nullity even tho the grant itself did except mineral lands.

CHAPTER 11
TREASURER OF STATE

131 Office—accounts.
Deposits—payment on forged indorsement—negligence not imputable to state. Negligence and laches of public officers in the handling of state funds are not imputable to the state; for instance, in an action to recover from a drawee bank the amount paid by the bank on a forged indorsement of a check drawn by a county treasurer against state school funds on deposit with said drawee, it is no defense that the county treasurer was negligent in drawing or delivering the check, or that county officers generally were negligent in not making early discovery of the forged indorsement, and notifying the drawee accordingly.

CHAPTER 12
ATTORNEY GENERAL

149 Duties.
Atty. Gen. Opinions. See '26 AG Op 508; '38 AG Op 300, 780

Appeal—attorney general as "adverse party". A liquidator (or receiver) was appointed in a foreign state to liquidate an insolvent insurance company chartered in said state, and doing business in Iowa. The attorney general of Iowa, in his official capacity, at once instituted ancillary receivership proceedings in Iowa, and, in time, certain claims were duly allowed, in said ancillary proceedings, in favor of creditors of the insolvent. The Iowa court later ruled, on intervention by the foreign liquidator, that funds in the hands of the ancillary receiver should be retained by him and distributed under the ancillary receivership.
Held, an appeal by the foreign liquidator from said latter ruling imperatively necessitated service of notice of appeal on the attorney general or on his successor in office.
State v Sur. Co., 223-558; 273 NW 129

Cy pres doctrine invoked by state in equity court. A public charity, created by trust, about to fail, is properly represented in court of equity to invoke jurisdiction to apply cy près doctrine by the state or some authorized agency thereof.

Schell v Leander Clark College, 10 F 2d, 542

Writ of prohibition—state as plaintiff. An original action in the supreme court, for a writ of prohibition directed to a district court and prohibiting further action by said latter court in private actions pending therein, may be brought in the name of the state ex rel its attorney general; especially is this true when said private actions arose out of proceedings instituted by the state through the governor thereof.

State v Dist. Court, 219-1165; 260 NW 73; 99 ALR 967

Gross premiums tax—attorney general’s opinion—not precedent. Attorney general’s opinion that payment of gross premiums tax is “condition precedent to a foreign corporation’s obtaining any recognition” is not precedent binding on supreme court.

State v Chenoweth, 226-217; 284 NW 110

Catchwords—noneffect on interpretation.
The act of placing a section under a particular chapter of the code and the wording of the headings of the section, have little, if any, weight as official interpretations.

Yardman at state capitol. An honorably discharged veteran of the war with Germany, appointed for no stated time to the position of "yard man" on the statehouse grounds, is not removable by the executive council except on duly preferred charges of incompetency or misconduct, he not being a deputy of the state custodian of public grounds, tho working under the supervision of said latter officer, and his "term" not expiring on the legal removal of said custodian.

Statter v Herring, 217-410; 251 NW 715

273 Duties.

Employees—power to discharge. The custodian of public buildings and grounds (at Des Moines) is the sole, proper defendant in an action of certiorari to review the legality, under the soldiers preference act, of the discharge of an employee of said department.

Pittington v Herring, 220-1375; 264 NW 712

Certiorari to review discharge of state employee. The custodian of public buildings and grounds (at Des Moines) is the sole, proper defendant in an action of certiorari to review the legality, under the soldiers preference act, of the discharge of an employee of said department.

Pittington v Herring, 220-1375; 264 NW 712

Certiorari—dismissal re custodian—res judicata. In an action of certiorari against the state executive council, and the custodian of public buildings and grounds, to review the legality of the discharge of an employee of the latter department, an unappealed order of court dismissing said custodian as an improper party defendant, tho unqualifiedly erroneous, becomes the law of said particular action, and precludes said plaintiff from thereafter proceeding against said custodian for the relief sought.

275 Interest in contracts.
CHAPTER 18
EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

276 Membership.

Certiorari—dismissing party defendant. In an action of certiorari against the state executive council, and the custodian of public buildings and grounds, to review the legality of the discharge of an employee of the latter department, an unappealed order of court dismissing said custodian as an improper party defendant, tho unqualifiedly erroneous, becomes the law of said particular action, and precludes said plaintiff from thereafter proceeding against said custodian for the relief sought.

Pittington v Herring, 220-1376; 264 NW 712

Certiorari—reinstatement of discharged employee—unallowable order. The court, in certiorari, is manifestly without authority to order the state executive council to reinstate, in a department of the state government, a discharged state employee, when said council has no legal authority to employ or discharge employees in said department.

CHAPTER 23
PUBLIC CONTRACTS AND BONDS

351 Terms defined.

School property—assessability. A school district having lots assessable under a city contract for paving and curbing cannot be deemed a "municipality" entering "into a contract" within the meaning of the state budget law (Ch 23, C, '31). In such circumstances, the district is simply a property owner.

Schumacher v City, 214-34; 239 NW 71
352 Notice of hearing.

Inapplicability of budget act. This section has no application to a contract entered into by a city for street grading on a per diem basis and under a contract legally terminable by the council at any time, even tho the per diem compensation ultimately exceeds $5,000.
Carlson v City, 212-373; 236 NW 421.

Public improvements — nonjurisdiction of budget director. A contract for street improvement, e.g., paving and curbing, to be paid for by special assessments, is entirely outside the purview and purpose of this section.
Schumacher v City, 214-34; 239 NW 71.

353 Objections—hearing—decision.

354 Appeal—limitation.

Fatally defective service. Appeal to the director of the budget from the action of the city council in overruling objections to a proposal for paving is not effected by simply delivering to the city clerk a notice which purports to be a copy of an unproduced original, but which was not such copy, in that only twenty-four of the twenty-seven signatures affixed to the original were affixed to the notice served; and this is true even tho the city appears, and moves to dismiss the appeal.
Casey (Town) v Hogue, 204-3; 214 NW 729.

357 Hearing and decision.

Advertisement for bids—irregular compliance with mandatory duty. The irregularity of municipal authorities in advertising for, receiving, and opening bids for the construction of a municipal light and power plant before instead of after the director of the budget had, on appeal, overruled objections to the plans, specifications, and proposed form of contract, does not invalidate the contract entered into after said ruling and specifically approved by said director. But the duty to "advertise for bids" is mandatory in case an appeal is taken to the budget director.
Johnson v Town, 215-1033; 247 NW 552.

Competitive bidding—unallowable contract. When a contract for the construction of a proposed public improvement is required by statute to be let on competitive bids, such contract cannot be legally entered into on the basis and in accordance with a bid which falls in any material respect to respond to the proposal for bids. Held, contract illegal because based on, and in accordance with, a bid which failed to respond to the legal proposals:
1. In re time of commencing and completing the work, and
2. In re testing the improvement as a condition to acceptance.

CHAPTER 24
LOCAL BUDGET LAW

368 Short title.
Incongruous matter. A title which gives notice of the creation of the office of state budget director and provides for a state and local budget, for the examination of public accounts, and for review of public contracts and bonds, is not broad enough to justify the inclusion of a provision creating a new fund and power in local municipalities to levy a tax for such fund.
Chi. RI Ry. v Streepy, 207-851; 224 NW 41.

369 Definition of terms.
370 Requirements of local budget.

AG Op 231; '36 AG Op 21

School district vs. state appeal board—action where school district located—propriety. An action against the state appeal board to review its rulings affecting a school district under the local budget law is properly brought in the county where the school district was located and where proceedings on the levy involved were held from which resulted the board’s ruling.

Board v Dist. Court, 225-296; 280 NW 525

School fund estimates under local budget law omitting money on hand—taxes valid—no refund. School districts, in submitting their budgets for their fiscal year beginning July first, are not required to include money on hand derived from taxes levied and estimated two years before and collected a year later to be expended during the current school year, and taxes collected accordingly will not be refunded in a mandamus action.

Lowden v Woods, 226-425; 284 NW 155

Budget—inviolability. After the due adoption and entry by a city council of a financial budget for an ensuing year, on the basis of estimated receipts from (1) taxable sources, and (2) nontaxable sources, the council may not later, in its appropriating ordinance, legally increase the municipal expenditures for said year by the simple expedient of revising and increasing its former estimated receipts from nontaxable sources.

Clark v Des Moines, 222-317; 267 NW 97

372 Estimates itemized.

373 Emergency fund—levy.

Legalization of invalid tax. The legislature may validly legalize a levy of taxes made under a supposedly legal statute but which was invalid because its title was constitutionally insufficient. (See also Const., Art. I, §21; Art. III, §30)

Chicago, RI Ry. v Rosenbaum, 212-227; 231 NW 646

Legalizing tax levy after invalidating ruling by court. A legislative act which legalizes a tax levy after the appellate court has ruled (but before entry of judgment) that the taxpayer is entitled to a refund of the tax paid, because the tax levy was void, owing to the absence of an authorizing statute, neither disturbs any vested interest of the taxpayer’s nor constitutes an unconstitutional interference with the judiciary.

378 Record by certifying board.

School fund estimates under local budget law omitting money on hand—taxes valid—no refund. School districts, in submitting their budgets for their fiscal year beginning July first, are not required to include money on hand derived from taxes levied and estimated two years before and collected a year later to be expended during the current school year, and taxes collected accordingly will not be refunded in a mandamus action.

Lowden v Woods, 226-425; 284 NW 155

380 Tax limited.

Taxation—source of power. The power of a city to tax is strictly statutory—never implied.

Clark v Des Moines, 222-317; 267 NW 97

Budget—inviolability of. After the due adoption and entry by a city council of a financial budget for an ensuing year, on the basis of estimated receipts from (1) taxable sources, and (2) nontaxable sources, the council may not later, in its appropriating ordinance, legally increase the municipal expenditures for said year by the simple expedient of revising and increasing its former estimated receipts from nontaxable sources.

Clark v Des Moines, 222-317; 267 NW 97

381 Further tax limitation.

383 Budgets certified.

387 Transfer of inactive funds.

388 Transfer of active funds—poor fund.

Budget act—nondelegation of legislative authority. The broad, sweeping, and apparently unguarded discretion granted by statute to the director of the budget (now state controller) to grant or refuse permission to a municipality to make a transfer of its funds, does not constitute an unconstitutional grant of legislative power.

State v Manning, 220-525; 259 NW 213

Arbitrary administration. An act will not be held unconstitutional because of the possibility that the administering officer will, by arbitrary administration, give the act a non-uniform operation.

State v Manning, 220-525; 259 NW 213

Removal of officer—proof of evil design—when not required. In an action to remove a public official from office, the principle that a corrupt or evil design or purpose must be shown under a charge of “willful misconduct or maladministration in office”, does not apply when the official is charged with the violation of a statute which specifically declares that such violation shall be sufficient ground for removal from office.

State v Manning, 220-525; 259 NW 213

389 Supervisory power of state board.

Appeal from local budget—statute directory as to time. The statutory requirement, that the state appeal board in ruling on local budget matters shall render final disposition of all appeals by October 15th of each year, should be obeyed. However, being directory rather than mandatory in its nature, a mere delay of a few days will not invalidate the action of the board or defeat the purposes sought to be obtained.

Woodbury Conference v Carr, 226-204; 284 NW 122

Collateral attack on budget appeal board—illegality on face of petition necessary—certiorari proper remedy. A suit in mandamus, to compel the county auditor to ignore the decision of the state board of appeal in local budget matters on the ground that such decision was made after the board had ceased to exist, is a collateral attack on the board’s action—certiorari being the method for a direct attack; and if the mandamus suit is dismissed by the lower court, the supreme court, on appeal, will determine, only, if the acts of the board show on their face by their dates alone that they were illegal acts because the board had ceased to exist as such.

Woodbury Conference v Carr, 226-204; 284 NW 122

Appeal board—decisions modified. The state appeal board has power to modify its decisions.

Woodbury Conference v Carr, 226-204; 284 NW 122

390 Violations.

Removal—proof of evil design. In an action to remove a public official from office, the principle that a corrupt or evil design or purpose must be shown under a charge of “willful misconduct or maladministration in office” does not apply when the official is charged with the violation of a statute which specifically declares that such violation shall be sufficient ground for removal from office.

State v Manning, 220-525; 259 NW 213

390.1 State appeal board.

Suing state appeal board—ruling on venue—appeal sole remedy. Certiorari will not lie to review the action of the trial court in overruling a motion by the state appeal board for a change of venue of a trial questioning a decision of such board.

Board v Dist. Court, 226-296; 280 NW 525

390.7 Decision certified to county.

Appeal from local budget—statute directory as to time. The statutory requirement, that the state appeal board in ruling on local budget matters shall render final disposition of all appeals by October 15th of each year, should be obeyed. However, being directory rather than mandatory in its nature, a mere delay of a few days will not invalidate the action of the board or defeat the purposes sought to be obtained.

Woodbury Conference v Carr, 226-204; 284 NW 122

Collateral attack on budget appeal board—illegality on face of petition necessary—certiorari proper remedy. A suit in mandamus, to compel the county auditor to ignore the decision of the state board of appeal in local budget matters on the ground that such decision was made after the board had ceased to exist, is a collateral attack on the board’s action—certiorari being the method for a direct attack; and if the mandamus suit is dismissed by the lower court, the supreme court, on appeal, will determine, only, if the acts of the board show on their face by their dates alone that they were illegal acts because the board had ceased to exist as such.

Zellmer v Smith, 206-725; 221 NW 220

593 Who nominated.

594 Minimum requirement for nomination.

Right of convention to nominate. The county convention of a political party may legally make a nomination for an office when no candidate of said party for said office had his name printed on the primary ballot of said party, and when the “written in” names at said primary election for said office did not effect a nomination because the candidate receiving a majority of the votes cast did not receive a vote equal to the 10 percent required by statute.

The statutes relative (1) to vacancies in nominations, (2) to the placing of names of candidates on the official ballot, (3) to the sufficiency of a certificate of nomination, and (4) to the eligibility of candidates, all presuppose (and properly so) the existence of statutory authorization to hold an election, and therefore can have no controlling bearing on the construction of the statute which does authorize an election. Such former series of statutes are not strictly in pari materia with the latter statute.

books” in cities having no statutory system of permanent registration of voters, while in cities having such system of registration (where poll books are not employed) the phrase must be deemed to refer to the “certificates of registration” duly signed by voters just preceding their actual voting.

Gilman v City, 215-442; 245 NW 868

CHAPTER 40
METHOD OF CONDUCTING ELECTIONS

719 Elections included.

Call by unauthorized body. An election which is called by an unauthorized body is a nullity.

Leslie v Barnes, 201-1159; 208 NW 725

Irregularities—effect. A school election will not be held invalid (in the absence of any showing of prejudice) because all the members of the board acted as judges of election, instead of only the president, secretary, and one director, as provided by statute.

Mack v Sch. Dist., 200-1190; 206 NW 145

Failure to initial ballot. Ballots not initialed by the judges of election as required by statute must be counted if otherwise unobjectionable.

Donlan v Cooke, 212-771; 287 NW 496

Elections—public canvass in private room—incomplete election. Until legislative mandates are obeyed, an election is not complete.

Steeves v New Market, 225-618; 281 NW 162

Improper conduct of election—no validation by successors. Statutory requirements as to conducting elections, violated by one set of officials, cannot be validated by their successors in office a year later.

Steeves v New Market, 225-618; 281 NW 162

720 Terms defined.

723 City precincts.

725 Portions of townships combined.

759 Nominees for judge of district court.

760 Form of official ballot.

§§761-776 ELECTIONS

761 Constitutional amendment or other public measure.

Atty. Gen. Opinions. See '38 AG Op 659, 841

Granting franchise — when ordinance not necessary. The passage of an ordinance and the printing of the same on the ballots are not necessary in those cases where the proposal to grant a franchise to a private party for the erection and operation of an electric light and power franchise is not initiated by the city or town council, but is initiated by the voters, through a statutory petition addressed to the mayor. (See §6555, C, '27.)

Mapleton v Iowa Co., 206-9; 216 NW 683

Contents of ballot. At an election called by a city council on its own motion on the question whether the city shall erect an electric light and power plant and pay for the same out of the earnings of the plant, the ballot need only contain (1) the main proposition, and (2) a statement of the maximum amount to be expended. Manifestly, the law does not contemplate the setting forth of a contract which can only be entered into after the election grants the authority for such a contract.

Hogan v City, 217-504; 250 NW 134

Ballots — validity of form — Simmer law — municipal electric plant. In an election to establish a municipal electric plant under the Simmer law, the ballot held to comply with statute.

Interstate Co. v Forest City, 225-490; 281 NW 207

Substantial compliance with statutory ballot. Form of ballot used in election for establishment of a municipal electric light or power plant reviewed, and held to substantially comply with statute and to be unambiguous.

Lahn v Primghar, 225-686; 281 NW 214

Fatally defective ballot. A ballot is fatally defective when it fails to clearly indicate to the voter whether a proposed municipal electric light and power plant is to be financed, (1) by ordinary taxation or, (2) by pledging the plant and the net earnings thereof; and this is true tho the ballot states the maximum amount of money to be expended.

Pennington v Fairbanks, M. & Co., 217-1117; 253 NW 60

Light and power plant — form of ballot. This section has no application when the question submitted is whether a municipality shall erect an electric light and power plant and pay for the same solely out of the earnings thereof.

Pennington v Sumner, 222-1005; 270 NW 629; 109 ALR 355

Sufficient reference to statute in ballot.

Weiss v Woodbine, 228- ; 289 NW 469

Power to pledge plant. Due authorization to a municipality by the electors thereof to establish and erect an electric light and power plant at a stated maximum cost payable only out of the earnings of said newly acquired plant without the municipality itself incurring any indebtedness legally invests the council with power to pledge both the plant and its earnings as security for the payment of the resulting cost.

Greaves v City, 217-599; 251 NW 766

762 Form of ballot.

Unallowable impeachment. Evidence of voters, at an election to establish a consolidated school district, that they did not intend to include in said proposed district certain lands described in the petition for said district, and in the ballot used at said election, is wholly immaterial.

Dermit v School Dist., 220-344; 261 NW 636

763 General form of ballot.

Form of petition. A petition for the submission of a proposition to the electors must substantially contain every matter required by the statute in order that from the petition the ballot may be so framed that the entire proposition will be submitted to the electors.

O'Keefe v Hopp, 210-398; 230 NW 876

Substantial compliance with statutory ballot. Form of ballot used in election for establishment of a municipal electric light or power plant reviewed, and held to substantially comply with statute and to be unambiguous.

ELECTIONS §§779-815

Elections—statutes in pari materia. The statutes relative (1) to vacancies in nominations, (2) to the placing of names of candidates on the official ballot, (3) to the sufficiency of a certificate of nomination, and (4) to the eligibility of candidates, all presuppose (and properly so) the existence of statutory authorization to hold an election, and therefore can have no controlling bearing on the construction of the statute which does authorize an election. Such former series of statutes are not strictly in pari materia with the latter statute.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

779 Furnishing judges name of vacancy nominee—pasters.

Statutes—construction and operation—elections—statutes in pari materia. The statutes relative (1) to vacancies in nominations, (2) to the placing of names of candidates on the official ballot, (3) to the sufficiency of a certificate of nomination, and (4) to the eligibility of candidates, all presuppose (and properly so) the existence of statutory authorization to hold an election, and therefore can have no controlling bearing on the construction of the statute which does authorize an election. Donlan v Cooke, 212-771; 237 NW 496

800 Names to be entered on poll book.

Municipal court election—percentage of voters required. The phrase “fifteen percent of the qualified electors, as shown by the poll list” as employed in §19643, C., '31, must be deemed to refer to the “poll books” in cities having no statutory system of permanent registration of voters, while in cities having such system of registration (where poll books are not employed) the phrase must be deemed to refer to the “certificates of registration” duly signed by voters just preceding their actual voting.

Gilman v City, 215-442; 245 NW 868

801 Marking and return of ballot.
Marking with pencil or ink. A voter may very properly mark his ballot with a pencil of any color or with pen and ink.
Donlan v Cooke, 212-771; 237 NW 496

805 Limitation on time for voting.

808 Assistance indicated on poll book.

809 Voting mark.

Using check mark instead of cross—effect.
Donlan v Cooke, 212-771; 237 NW 496

School elections. This section is not applicable to the election of subdirectors in school townships. Any ballot voted at such latter election for subdirector must be counted if it plainly reveals the intent of the voter.

Thompson v Roberts, 220-854; 263 NW 491

810 But one vote for same office except in groups.

811 How to mark a straight ticket.

812 Voting part of ticket only.

813 Group candidates for offices of same class.

814 How to mark a mixed ticket.

815 Counting ballots.

Inadvertent identification. The impression of a notarial seal on an official ballot, caused by placing the ballot in the return envelope before the notary affixed his seal to the affidavit on the envelope, does not constitute an illegally identified ballot.

Willis v Sch. Dist., 210-391; 227 NW 532
Invalidating identification marks. Ballots which bear an indorsement of the name of the voter, or foreign writing such as "Let's have it wet", or numbers, or markings deliberately defacing the printed squares, must be classed as identified and void.

Donlan v Cooke, 212-771; 237 NW 496

Writing name on ballot.

School elections. This section is not applicable to the election of subdirectors in school townships. Any ballot voted at such latter election for subdirector must be counted if it plainly reveals the intent of the voter.

Elections—public canvass in private room.

A canvass of an election required by statute to be made "publicly" cannot be made in a private room.

Steeves v New Market, 225-618; 281 NW 162

Return and preservation of ballots.

Preserving and guarding ballots—burden of proof. Ballots cast at an election are not admissible as evidence in a subsequent contest unless the contestant first establishes the fact that the officer legally charged with the custody of said ballots has preserved, guarded, and protected them in such manner as to reasonably preclude the opportunity of unauthorized persons to tamper with them.

Matzdorff v Thompson, 217-961; 251 NW 867

Traeger v Meskel, 217-970; 252 NW 108

Tyler v Klaver, 220-1124; 264 NW 37

Stamos v Gray, 221-145; 264 NW 919

Ballots — preservation — showing required. While in an election contest it must be shown that the ballots have been preserved with meticulous care against tampering yet such showing need not go to the point of excluding all possibility of such tampering.

Donlan v Cooke, 212-771; 237 NW 496

Ballots — preservation — showing required—admissibility. Ballots must be "carefully preserved" after the election, and without such showing they are not admissible in evidence.

Steeves v New Market, 225-618; 281 NW 162

Count of votes — directory provisions. Principle reaffirmed that the statutory direction

ABSENT VOTERS LAW

927 Right to vote—conditions.

Improper absent voting—inmates of county home—remedy not in equity. Absent voters' ballots, from Polk county home inmates who do not expect to be absent from the county or prevented by illness from going to the polls, should be challenged for cause, and, this being a plain, speedy and adequate remedy at law, equity will not enjoin the county auditor from doing his statutory duty in delivering the ballots to the judges of election.

Drennen v Olmstead, 224-85; 275 NW 884

928 Application for ballot.

929 School secretary.

Implied power. The county superintendent, under her statutory powers and duty to call elections in consolidated districts to vote on the question of dissolution of the district, has implied power to receive applications for ballots by, and to deliver ballots to, electors who wish to cast their ballots.

CHAPTER 47
CONTESTING ELECTIONS—GENERAL PROVISIONS

981 Grounds of contest.

Electioneering by judges—effect. A judge of election who, while conducting an election, electioneers for a particular candidate is guilty of such misconduct as to furnish basis for a contest as to the office involved.

Brooks v Fay, 206-845; 220 NW 30

Election bribery by third person—disqualifying effect. A candidate having been elected to office is not disqualified, merely because some third person may have given or offered a bribe to the voters for the purpose of securing the election of said candidate, unless the candidate actually participated in and approved thereof.

Van Der Zee v Means, 225-871; 281 NW 460; 121 ALR 558

Electric company offering rate reduction— not candidates' bribery—election valid. Evidence held insufficient to establish bribery and an illegal election in that candidates for municipal office acquiesced in or ratified an advertised plan by which the local electric company offered to reduce its rates, and pay back to its subscribers an accumulating sum as a rebate, in the event the voters would elect council members opposed to municipal ownership.

Van Der Zee v Means, 225-871; 281 NW 460; 121 ALR 558

Election bribery—electric rate reduction—fulfillment after trial immaterial. When the court, after hearing an election contest, finds that candidates to municipal office did not participate in an illegal bribe by a local electric company offering a rate reduction and a rebate of impounded charges if the municipal ownership opponents were elected, the fact that, after the trial, the council repeals the municipal ownership ordinance and the company does reduce rates and repay impounded funds to consumers, adds nothing new to the proof of participation and does not warrant a new trial.

Van Der Zee v Means, 225-871; 281 NW 460; 121 ALR 558

Improper absent voting—inmates of county home—remedy not in equity. Absent voters' ballots from Polk county home inmates who do not expect to be absent from the county or prevented by illness from going to the polls should be challenged for cause, and, this being a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy at law, equity will not enjoin the county auditor from doing his statutory duty in delivering the ballots to the judges of election.

Drennen v Olmstead, 224-85; 275 NW 884

Sufficient party contestee. When at an election in a judicial district several judges of the district court are to be elected for a full term, the candidate who, according to the official canvass of the returns, received the highest number of votes among those not officially declared elected, may legally institute a contest solely against him who, among those officially declared elected, received the lowest number of votes.

Haas v Contest Court, 221-150; 265 NW 373

Defect of party contestees—effect. Whether, in an election contest, a defect of party contestees is jurisdictional, quaere.

Haas v Contest Court, 221-150; 265 NW 373

Preserving and guarding ballots—burden of proof. Ballots cast at an election are not admissible as evidence in a subsequent contest unless the contestant first establishes the fact that the officer legally charged with the custody of said ballots has preserved, guarded, and protected them in such manner as to reasonably preclude the opportunity of unauthorized persons to tamper with them.

Matzdorff v Thompson, 217-961; 251 NW 867

CONTESTING ELECTIONS OF STATE OFFICERS

1006 Contest court.

Ballots—preservation—showing required. Ballots must be "carefully preserved" after the election, and without such showing they are not admissible in evidence.
Steeves v New Market, 225-618; 281 NW 162

1008 Statement filed.

Premature filing and subsequent refiling—effect. The filing of a "statement of contest" some ten days before the official declaration of election of the party whose election is sought to be contested, followed promptly, after such declaration of election, by the filing by contestant of a written assertion of refiling of said prematurely filed statement "and each and every allegation thereof", is not such irregularity as will deprive the subsequently selected court of contest of jurisdiction to proceed with said contest.

1012 Contest relative to office of district judge.

Sufficient party contestee. When at an election in a judicial district several judges of the district court are to be elected for a full term, the candidate who, according to the official canvass of the returns, received the highest number of votes among those not officially declared elected, may legally institute a contest solely against him who, among those officially declared elected, received the lowest number of votes.
Haas v Contest Court, 221-150; 265 NW 373

1017 Judgment filed—execution.

Jurisdiction—certiorari to review. Certiorari will lie to review the alleged unauthorized exercise of jurisdiction by a contest court selected for the purpose of deciding who had been elected to a state office, even tho it be true that the decree of said contest court is final under the statute.
Haas v Contest Court, 221-150; 265 NW 373

CHAPTER 52
CONTESTING ELECTIONS OF COUNTY OFFICERS

1020 Contest court.

1024 Statement.

Premature filing and subsequent refiling—effect. The filing of a "statement of contest" some ten days before the official declaration of election of the party whose election is sought to be contested, followed promptly, after such declaration of election, by the filing by contestant of a written assertion of refiling of said prematurely filed statement “and each and every allegation thereof”, is not such irregularity as will deprive the subsequently selected court of contest of jurisdiction to proceed with said contest.

Haas v Contest Court, 221-150; 265 NW 373

City office—place of filing contest and bond. In an election contest over a city office, the written statement of intention to contest and bond are properly filed with the county auditor.

Jenkins v Furgeson, 212-640; 233 NW 741

1025 Bond.

Premature filing—effect. The fact that the statutory bond required in an election contest was prematurely filed with and accepted by the proper officer—prematurely because said filing and acceptance was had some ten days before the official declaration of the election of the party whose election is sought to be contested—constitutes no such irregularity as will deprive the subsequently selected court of contest of jurisdiction to proceed with such contest, it appearing that said bond was, within 30 days after said declaration of election, officially marked filed by the clerk of the contest court.

Haas v Contest Court, 221-150; 265 NW 373

Related filing—effect. The statutory requirement, that the contestant in an election contest shall file a prescribed bond, is complied with if such bond is filed at any time within the time provided for the filing of the statement of contest, even tho said bond be filed subsequent to the filing of the statement of contest.

Haas v Contest Court, 221-150; 265 NW 373

TIME AND MANNER OF QUALIFYING

1045 Time.

Officers—duties—motives. The motives of public officials when proceeding according to law to submit the question of municipal ownership of a public utility are not fit subjects for judicial inquiry.

City office—place of filing contest and bond. In an election contest over a city office, the written statement of intention to contest and bond are properly filed with the county auditor.

Jenkins v Furgeson, 212-640; 233 NW 741

1032 Procedure—powers of court.

Attorney General Opinions. See ’28 AG Op 218; ’34 AG Op 129

1033 Sufficiency of statement.

As jurisdictional question. Sufficiency of statement of contest in case under review held to present no question of jurisdiction.

Haas v Contest Court, 221-150; 265 NW 373

1037 Judgment.

Judgment—effect. The judgment of a contest court holding the election in question illegal is valid and conclusive upon both parties to the contest, unless appealed from and reversed.

Leslie v Barnes, 201-1159; 208 NW 725

1039 Appeal.

Consent judgment—appeal. An election contestant may not appeal from the judgment of the contest board holding the election in question illegal and providing for the calling of a new election by said board, when he consented to the entry of such judgment.

Leslie v Barnes, 201-1159; 208 NW 725

Appeal by nonincumbent—bond not required. No appeal bond is required in an appeal to the district court from the judgment of an election contest court by a party who is not an incumbent of the office in question, §11440, C., ’31, having no application to such a case.

Donlan v Cooke, 212-771; 237 NW 496

Attorney General Opinion. See ’34 AG Op 685

Official acts—presumption of regularity. In the absence of contrary evidence, presumption obtains as to legality and regularity of official acts of sworn public officials.

Krueger v Mun. Court, 223-1363; 275 NW 122

1057 Approval conditioned.

Requalification as own successor—presumption. The fact that a county treasurer who succeeds himself, requalifies, and gives a new bond for his second term, creates no conclusive presumption that the liability which attached to him during the first term has been carried over to his new bond.

Dallas County v Bank, 205-672; 216 NW 119
1058 Bond not required.

1059 Conditions of bond of public officers.
Atty. Gen. Opinions. See '38 AG Op 53; '30 AG Op 40; '32 AG Op 174; '34 AG Op 100; '38 AG Op 475

Not insurer of official funds. The clerk of the district court is not liable for loss of official funds coming into his hands and lost because of the failure of the bank in which they were deposited, when, at the time of deposit, he in good faith justifiably believed the bank to be solvent.
Prudential v Hart, 205-801; 218 NW 529
Andrew v Bank, 214-105; 241 NW 412

Liability on official bonds—misuse of funds. A county treasurer breaches his official bond by using county funds in paying drainage district bonds, and the county cannot be deemed estopped to insist on said breach, or be held to have waived said breach, because of the fact that the treasurer acted with the knowledge and consent of, or in obedience to the express direction of the board of supervisors.
Mitchell County v Odden, 219-793; 259 NW 774

Excessive bank deposits. A resolution of a city council to the effect that all city funds shall be deposited in a named bank is no authority to the city treasurer to make deposits in excess of the amount of the bond given by the bank to secure said deposits, and the treasurer and the surety on his official bond are liable for such excess, even tho the treasurer was not guilty of any negligence in depositing such excess.
State v Carney, 208-133; 217 NW 472

Deposits—liability of county treasurer. Even tho the county treasurer deposits public funds in a depositary bank in an amount authorized by a resolution of the board of supervisors, yet if the board later, by resolution, reduces the amount authorized to be deposited, the treasurer and his surety are liable for a loss resulting from the failure of the treasurer to exercise reasonable diligence to reduce his deposit to the amount authorized in the latter resolution.
State v Surety Co., 210-215; 230 NW 308

When conditions broken. It may not be said that a county treasurer who succeeds himself in office is not harmed by the nonpayment of bank deposits which were made during his first term, even tho he has requalified and given a new bond to cover his second term.
Dallas County v Bank, 206-872; 216 NW 119

Unallowable deposits.
Bookhart v Younglove, 207-800; 218 NW 533

Delivery of funds to successor—effect. An outgoing sheriff and his bondsmen are absolved from all liability as to funds held by the sheriff in unadjudicated condemnation proceedings by delivering said funds to his successor in office.
Northwestern Mfg. Co. v Bassett, 205-999; 218 NW 932

Time deposit works conversion. A sheriff is guilty of instant conversion and a breach of his bond when he deposits in a bank funds properly coming into his hands in unadjudicated condemnation proceedings and takes from the bank a certificate of deposit which is payable at a definite time in the future, and in such case the question of due care or negligence in making the deposit is quite immaterial.
Northwestern Mfg. Co. v Bassett, 205-999; 218 NW 932

Good-faith and nonnegligent deposit in bank—effect. Principle reaffirmed that, generally speaking, a public officer, for instance, a sheriff, is not liable for public funds properly coming into his hands and deposited by him in good faith and without negligence in a bank which subsequently fails, with resultant loss of said funds.
Northwestern Mfg. Co. v Bassett, 205-999; 218 NW 932

Nonentertainable defense. In an action on the bond of a school treasurer to recover a shortage in his accounts, it is no defense that the plaintiff district has a cause of action against a third party who is unlawfully in possession of the funds constituting the shortage.
School District v Sass, 220-1; 261 NW 30

Indemnification of one of two sureties—effect. In an action against a public officer and his bondsmen to recover a shortage in public funds, it is quite immaterial, as far as plaintiff is concerned, that one of the sureties has received property from the public officer as partial indemnity.
School District v Sass, 220-1; 261 NW 30

Rejected defensive plea. In an action on the bond of a school treasurer, the defensive plea (if it is a defense) that the treasurer was the innocent victim of another party's wrongdoing will be given no consideration when the wrongdoing of the treasurer is manifest.
School District v Sass, 220-1; 261 NW 30
Prima facie liability. Proof that a school treasurer drew a check upon the school district bank account in favor of another bank; that the check was duly cashed; that the payee bank did not credit the amount to any account of the school district; and that said treasurer, on demand, did not deliver said money to the district, constitutes prima facie evidence of the latter's default and of liability on his bond.

School District v Sass, 220-1; 261 NW 30

Unallowable limitation on liability. A statutory bond which is given for the express purpose of securing public deposits in a bank may not be limited in liability to less than the liability called for by the statute; and any such attempt will be deemed nugatory, even though the bond is approved by the public governing board. (See also §10300; §10982, Anno. 20.)

Leach v Bank, 205-1154; 213 NW 517

Demand on surety. In an action on the bond of a public officer to recover funds unaccounted for, no demand on the surety is necessary before commencing the action, when proper demand has been made on the principal.

State v Carney, 208-133; 217 NW 472

Holding under former statutes. The general bond of a guardian of property must be deemed to embrace liability for the proceeds of a promissory note which is in the hands of the guardian when he gives such bond and which represents the sale price of real estate sold under order of court, but without a sale bond being given by the guardian.

Iowa Bank v Soppe, 215-1242; 247 NW 632

1060 Liability of surety.

Additional annotations. See under §7408, Vol I

Holding under former statute. The surety on the bond of a public officer is an insurer or guarantor of the funds coming into the hands of the principal.

Danbury v Riedmiller, 208-879; 226 NW 159

Scope of liability. The liability of the surety on the bond of a public officer is not limited solely to the failure of the official to make proper accounting for all public money and property officially coming into his possession, but embraces liability for the failure of said officer to "faithfully and impartially, without fear, favor, fraud, or oppression, discharge all duties * * * required of his office by law".

Brown v Cochran, 222-34; 268 NW 585

Continuing liability. The liability of a surety on a statutory depository bond conditioned "to hold the county treasurer harmless" because of authorized deposit of public funds in a bank continues for a reasonable time after the expiration of the authorized period as to the undrawn balance of all deposits made during said period.

Dallas County v Bank, 205-672; 216 NW 119

Requalification as own successor—presumption. The fact that a county treasurer who succeeds himself, requalifies, and gives a new bond for his second term, creates no conclusive presumption that the liability which attached to him during the first term has been carried over to his new bond.

Dallas County v Bank, 205-672; 216 NW 119

Unallowable deposits. The principle that an administrator is not liable for estate funds which have been lost because of the failure of a bank in which he has, in good faith, and without negligence, deposited them, has no application to deposits made by an administrator in his own private bank.

Bookhart v Younglove, 207-800; 218 NW 533

Parties plaintiff. An action on a statutory bond is properly brought by the entity to which the bond runs.

Belmond Assn. v Luick, 217-805; 253 NW 521

Unallowable defense. It is no defense on the part of one of two sureties on the bond of a public officer that said officer, while so acting, was also acting as cashier of a bank; that, as cashier, he was short in his account with the bank; that said other surety was also surety on the private bond of the cashier; and that said other surety and said cashier conspired to use and did use the public funds with which to make good the cashier's shortage to the bank.

School District v Sass, 220-1; 261 NW 30

Cross-complaint. In an action on the bonds of a public officer and his bondsmen to recover a shortage, one surety may not cross-petition against a party who he alleges wrongfully received the funds resulting in the shortage, said latter party not being a party to the bond sued on.

School District v Sass, 220-1; 261 NW 30

Taking assignment of claim. Where, because of the peculations of a county auditor, a depository bank pays a forged check on school funds, the county, on effecting settlement with the surety on the auditor's official bond, may assign to the said surety its cause of action against the bank, and the assignee may enforce the said assigned action as the county might have enforced it.

New Amsterdam Cas. v Bank, 214-541; 239 NW 4; 242 NW 538

Contract limitations. Whether parties to a statutory bond will be permitted by contract to specify the time before which or after which an action can be maintained, quaere.

Page County v Fidelity Co., 205-798; 216 NW 967
Evidence—unsigned copy of fidelity bond—inadmissible. In action by a surety company against defendant, who was covered by a fidelity bond and who agreed to indemnify plaintiff against loss sustained by reason of its executing fidelity bond in his behalf, it was error to admit in evidence instrument purporting to be a certified copy of the bond, but containing no signatures and which was admittedly no true and genuine copy of original bond.

Fidelity Deposit Co. v Ryan, 225-1260; 282 NW 721

Authority of agent. A surety company will not, in an action on a bond issued in its name by its agent, be permitted to dispute the authority which it has specifically conferred on said agent in a written power of attorney filed with the clerk of the district court and relied on by said clerk in approving the bond, the obligee in the bond having no knowledge of any limitation on the authority of the agent.

State v Packing Co., 219-419; 258 NW 456

Reduction of widow's allowance—effect. Where the amount allowed a widow for her support for the year following the death of the husband is taken by her from the funds of the estate (she being executrix) and spent, a subsequent order, in an adversary proceeding, reducing said former amount is conclusive on the surety—and, of course, on the executrix—and in an action against the principal and surety the reduced amount is the limit of the allowable credit.

In re Durey, 215-257; 245 NW 236

Voluntarily augmented funds. A court-appointed, testamentary trustee and the surety on his official, statutory bond are liable not only for the money which comes into his hands as specifically required by the will, but for additional amounts of the testamentary funds which come into the hands of the trustee, as such, consequent on the generous action of the devisees, generally, in voluntarily augmenting said trust funds from the testamentary funds.

Whisler v Estes, 216-491; 249 NW 264

Salary of public officer. The salary—the “personal earnings”—of a public officer is exempt from liability on a judgment obtained against him and his surety, by the public body, because of the failure of the officer to account for public funds coming into his hands. The court cannot, on the plea of public policy, rule into the statute an exception which the legislature has not seen fit to declare. So held where the surety having paid the judgment, and thereby subrogated to the rights of the county, sought reimbursement from the officer’s salary.

Ohio Ins. v Galvin, 222-670; 269 NW 254; 108 ALR 1036

Failure to file claim—when enforceable against heir. A claim arising under a bond wherein the surety binds “his heirs, devisees, and personal representatives”, and arising after the death of said surety and the due settlement of his estate, is enforceable:

1. Against the property received by an heir, as such, from said ancestor-surety, and
2. Against the property passing from said ancestor and owned by said heir under conveyance for which he paid nothing, and
3. Against the heir, personally, for the value of the property so received if he has consumed it. And this is true even tho, necessarily, said claim was not filed against the estate of said surety.

Baker v Baker, 220-1216; 264 NW 116; 103 ALR 995

1061 Conditions of other bonds.

Necessary conditions. It seems that the official bonds of executors, administrators, court-appointed trustees, and similar officers are necessarily conditioned as the bonds of public officers are conditioned.

Whisler v Estes, 216-491; 249 NW 264

Fraud of trustee—affirmance or disaffirmance. It is of no concern to a surety on the bond of a trustee whether the beneficiary affirms or disaffirms the fraudulent conduct of the trustee.

Dodds v Cartwright, 209-835; 226 NW 918

Adjudication of liability—conclusiveness. An unappealed order of court adjudicating the amount of the liability of a trustee to the beneficiary is conclusive on the trustee and ipso facto on his surety.

Dodds v Cartwright, 209-835; 226 NW 918

Holding under prior statutes. The general bond of a guardian of property must be deemed to embrace liability for the proceeds of a promissory note which is in the hands of the guardian when he gives such bond and which represents the sale price of real estate sold under order of court, but without a sale bond being given by the guardian.

Iowa Bank v Soppe, 215-1242; 247 NW 632

When nonterminable by death—enforcement against heirs et al. The bond of a fiduciary, under the terms of which a surety purports to bind “his heirs, devisees, and personal representatives”, is not revoked by the death of the surety, and binds the estate of the surety in the hands of his heirs, devisees, or personal representative.

Baker v Baker, 220-1216; 264 NW 116; 103 ALR 995

1062 Want of compliance—effect.

Omission of penalty—effect.

Ind. Dist. v Morris, 208-588; 226 NW 66

Attempt to limit liability.

Monona Co. v O’Connor, 205-1119; 215 NW 803

Andrew v Bank, 205-878; 219 NW 34
Statutory bonds—estoppel to deny. A bond given for the performance of a public building contract, and containing some of the conditions which the statute mandatorily prescribes for such a bond, anything in any contract to the contrary notwithstanding, will be deemed a statutory bond, with all the statutory conditions impliedly inserted therein.

Carey Co. v Cas. Co., 201-1063; 206 NW 808; 47 ALR 495

Statutory bond—scope. Principle reaffirmed that a statutory bond always carries the obligations imposed by the statute, even tho said obligations are not written into said bond.

In re Durey, 215-257; 245 NW 236

Oral modification of bond.
Leach v Bank, 205-975; 213 NW 612

Curtis v Michaelson, 205-111; 219 NW 49
Ottumwa Boiler v O'Meara, 206-577; 218 NW 920

Inclusion and exclusion. Statutory requirements will be read into a statutory bond, and nonstatutory requirements will be read out of such bond.

Chas. City v Rasmussen, 210-841; 232 NW 137; 72 ALR 638

Acts constituting breach. A statutory bond conditioned to secure the prompt paying over to the proper authorities of public funds on deposit in a bank is breached on the failure to promptly make such payment, and not from the time when the authorities suffer an actual loss.

CHAPTER 55
ADDITIONAL SECURITY AND DISCHARGE OF SURETIES

1081 New bond.
Release—strict compliance with statute. The release and discharge of the surety on a guardian's bond under any judicial procedure other than that prescribed by statute is a nullity, and, in such case, a new bond cannot be deemed a "substitute bond", but must be deemed additional security.

Brooke v Bank, 207-668; 223 NW 500

§§1091-1114 REMOVAL FROM OFFICE

CHAPTER 56

REMOVAL FROM OFFICE

Atty. Gen. Opinions. See '36 AG Op 381; '38 AG Op 300

1091 Removal by court.

Pleadings. Allegations that a public officer drew statutory mileage on account of official journeys when the travel (1) was without cost to himself, or (2) was by means of a conveyance owned and supplied by the public, do not state facts constituting grounds for removal from office. (See §1225-d, C, '31 [1225.05, C, '39].)

State v Naumann, 213-418; 229 NW 93; 81 ALR 483

Fundamentally required proof. In the absence of willful misconduct and corrupt motives on the part of a public officer, mere error of judgment either as to law or fact will not justify his removal from office.

State v Canning, 206-1349; 221 NW 923
State v Naumann, 213-418; 229 NW 93
State v Missildine, 215-663; 245 NW 303

Systematic disregard of law. The conduct of a member of the board of supervisors in systematically disregarding, or by subterfuges avoiding, the law which requires estimates by the county engineer and advertisement of public contracts for work and supplies evinces such "willfulness" as to render such acts ample ground for removal from office.

State v Garretson, 207-627; 223 NW 390

Using public funds for private use. The acts of a county treasurer in wrongfully and repeatedly taking and using, for his own private purposes, public funds in his possession, ipso facto constitutes "willful misconduct and maladministration in office", notwithstanding the fact (1) that prior to the commencement of an action to remove him from office, he returns to the public treasury the amount of his peculations, and (2) that his bondsmen are liable for his wrongdoing; a priori is this true when he also knowingly connives at and permits like conduct by his official employee.

State v Smith, 219-5; 257 NW 181

Proof of evil design—when not required. In an action to remove a public official from office, the principle that a corrupt or evil design or purpose must be shown under a charge of "willful misconduct or maladministration in office", does not apply when the official is charged with the violation of a statute which specifically declares that such violation shall be sufficient ground for removal from office.

Constitutional power to remove officer.

1100 Special prosecutor.

1101 Application for outside judge.
Atty. Gen. Opinions. See '38 AG Op 823

1111 Effect of dismissal.

Allowance of attorney fees—nullification on appeal. An allowance against the county of attorney fees in favor of a county officer unsuccessfully sought to be removed from office will, on reversal in the supreme court on appeal, be set aside.

State v Smith, 219-5; 257 NW 181

1112 Want of probable cause.

Dismissal of proceeding—costs. When citizens, with apparently good cause, and with reason to believe that the complaint is justified, initiate proceedings for the removal of a party from office, they should not be taxed with the costs in case the proceedings are dismissed by the court.

State v Canning, 206-1349; 221 NW 923

Unallowable taxation to relator. In a proceeding to remove a public officer, proof that the officer had drawn fees in a material amount to which he had no legal claim, precludes the court from taxing the costs to the relator, even tho the court, under the evidence, properly exonerates said officer from corrupt motive in drawing said fees.

State v Missildine, 215-663; 245 NW 303

Atty. Gen. Opinions. See '36 AG Op 381

Constitutional power to remove officer. The President of the United States is vested by the federal constitution with the right to remove, without the consent of the senate, any federal executive officer appointed by him, even tho the said officer was appointed "by and with the advice and consent of the senate".

Myers v United States, 272 US 52

Due process of law—removal from office without notice. There is, in a constitutional sense, no element of property in a public office. It follows that the statutory power conferred on the state executive council to investigate and remove appointive state officers, without making provision for notice and hearing, will not be held to violate the due process clause of the constitution as to an officer to whom the council has voluntarily given ample written notice and opportunity to be heard.

Clark v Herring, 221-1224; 260 NW 436
CHAPTER 57
SUSPENSION OF STATE OFFICERS

CHAPTER 59
VACANCIES IN OFFICE

1145 Holding over.

Resignation—when effective. Three members of a board of school directors of five members constitute a legal quorum to elect a successor to one of said three members who had theretofore resigned with the intent (shared in by his fellow members) that the resignation would not take effect until his successor had been elected and had qualified.
Cowles v Sch. Dist., 204-689; 216 NW 83

County supervisor-elect—death before qualifying—vacancy. The death of a duly elected member to the board of supervisors, before qualifying, creates a vacancy in that office to be filled in the manner provided by subsec. 5, §1152, C, '35.
State v Best, 225-338; 280 NW 551

1146 What constitutes vacancy.

County supervisor-elect—death before qualifying. The death of a duly elected member to the board of supervisors, before qualifying, creates a vacancy in that office to be filled in the manner provided by subsec. 5, §1152, C, '35.
State v Best, 225-338; 280 NW 551

Unambiguous language—"or" cannot mean "and". The word "or" in a statute cannot be judicially construed to mean "and" when the language of the section is too clear and unambiguous to admit of judicial construction.
State v Best, 225-338; 280 NW 551

Negotiation for other office—effect. A mayor may not be deemed to have vacated his office on a simple showing that he had requested an appointment as justice of the peace, and had executed a bond as such justice but was never appointed.
Meijerink v Lindsay, 203-1031; 213 NW 934

Incompatible offices. The office of constable is ipso facto vacated when the incumbent qualifies as marshal of a city which is coextensive with the township in which the constable was elected.
State v Bobst, 205-608; 218 NW 253

1147 Possession of office.
Atty. Gen. Opinion. See '38 AG Op 415

1148 Resignations.
Atty. Gen. Opinions. See '38 AG Op 1, 415

1151 Duty of officer receiving resignation.
Atty. Gen. Opin. See '38 AG Op 415

1152 Vacancies—how filled.

Vacancy—when fillable by election. The statutory provision (§1157, C, '31) that if a vacancy occurs in an elective state office thirty days prior to a general election the vacancy shall be filled at said election, in legal effect prohibits the filling of such vacancy at said election when the vacancy occurs less than thirty days prior to said election.
State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

Power to fill—majority of quorum. Vacancies on an official board (which is empowered to fill vacancies) may be filled by a majority of a quorum, in the absence of a statute which requires a majority of the entire membership of the board.
Cowles v Sch. Dist., 204-689; 216 NW 83

De facto officers. Members of a school board who are, in supposed compliance with the law, and in good faith, elected to fill vacancies caused by resignations, and who in good faith act as such members, are at least directors de facto, and their official actions may not be collaterally assailed.
Cowles v Sch. Dist., 204-689; 216 NW 83

District court clerk—vacancy filled by board. The district court has neither exclusive nor concurrent authority with the board of supervisors to fill a vacancy in the office of clerk of the court (a county office) by appointment; the court's power is confined to the appointment of a temporary clerk until the board fills the vacancy as provided by law.
State v Larson, 224-509; 275 NW 566

County supervisor-elect—death before qualifying. The death of a duly elected member to the board of supervisors, before qualifying, creates a vacancy in that office to be filled in the manner provided by subsec. 5 of this section.
State v Best, 225-338; 280 NW 551
§§1154-1159 VACANCIES—SOLDIERS PREFERENCE LAW

1154 Appointments.

Officers—qualification—failure to file commission—effect. The appointee to a vacancy in a public office derives his legal authority to act from the duly executed written appointment. Failure to file the appointment with the officer with whom the qualifying oath is required to be filed is but an irregularity.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

1155 Tenure of vacancy appointee.

Election to fill vacancy. The statutory provision that an officer filling a vacancy in an elective office shall hold until the next regular election at which such vacancy can be filled, means the “next regular election” at which such vacancy can be legally filled.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

District court clerk—vacancy filled by board. The district court has neither exclusive nor concurrent authority with the board of supervisors to fill a vacancy in the office of clerk of the court (a county office) by appointment; the court’s power is confined to the appointment of a temporary clerk until the board fills the vacancy as provided by law.

State v Larson, 224-509; 275 NW 566

1156 Officers elected to fill vacancies—tenure.

1157 Vacancies—when filled.

Statute supplementing constitution. The constitutional provision (Art. XI, §6) that appointees to fill vacancies in office shall hold until the next general election, is not self-executing, and therefore has been properly supplemented by this section.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

Estoppel and waiver. Where, on the erroneous assumption that a vacancy existed in a public office, two persons are formally nominated, by different political parties, to fill the supposed vacancy and are voted on at the ensuing election, the failure of the candidate who is already serving under a valid appointment to withdraw his nomination and legally to question the nominations made, furnishes no basis for the claim that he thereby waived his right longer to hold the office, and estopped himself from objecting to the result of the election.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

Implied repeal—statutes not in pari materia. A statute cannot be deemed impliedly repealed by other statutes which are not in pari materia. As an illustration, statutes dealing merely with the procedure to be followed in making nominations for office, and in filling vacancies in such nominations, or in determining the eligibility of candidates, cannot be held to impliedly repeal a statute which authorizes the holding of an election.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

Statutes in pari materia. The statutes relative (1) to vacancies in nominations, (2) to the placing of names of candidates on the official ballot, (3) to the sufficiency of a certificate of nomination, and (4) to the eligibility of candidates, all presuppose (and properly so) the existence of statutory authorization to hold an election, and therefore can have no controlling bearing on the construction of the statute which does authorize an election. Such former series of statutes are not strictly in pari materia with the latter statute.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

Vacancy—when fillable by election. The statutory provision that if a vacancy occurs in an elective state office 30 days prior to a general election the vacancy shall be filled at said election, in legal effect prohibits the filling of such vacancy at said election when the vacancy occurs less than thirty days prior to said election.

State v Claussen, 216-1079; 250 NW 195

1158 Special election to fill vacancies.

CHAPTER 60

SOLDIERS PREFERENCE LAW

1159 Appointments and promotions.

Discussion. See 31 ILR 135—General review of legislation

Atty. Gen. Opinions. See '36 AG Op 538; '38 AG Op 190

Qualifications for office sufficiently set out in statute. The soldiers preference law is not unconstitutional for failure to provide standards of qualifications for office when it requires that the applicant be an honorably discharged soldier, that he be a citizen and a resident of the place of appointment, and that his qualifications be equal with those of the nonveteran applicant.

Maddy v City Council, 226-941; 285 NW 208

Police judge appointment—no implied repeal by statute which merely limits. A statute providing that in certain cities the courts shall appoint a police judge is not impliedly repealed by the soldiers preference law, which merely places a limitation on the power of appointment.

Maddy v City Council, 226-941; 285 NW 208

Purpose of act. The intent of the soldiers preference law is to make veterans secure in their positions in public service and to prevent their removal except for misconduct, and it is not intended for the purpose of retaining in office one who violates his duty.

Edwards v Civil Service, 227-74; 287 NW 285

Justifiable discharge. An order of a city council to reduce the number of employees in a named department justifies the discharge of an ex-soldier employee whose duties are apparently inseparably connected with said department.

Rounds v City, 213-52; 238 NW 428

Good-faith abolishment of position—evidence sustaining. In an action by world war veteran, claiming to be within soldiers preference law, to compel reinstatement to position in city street cleaning department, finding of trial court that position had been abolished in good faith by city council held sustained by evidence.

Hamilton v MacVicar, (NOR); 269 NW 750

Legislative regulation—soldiers preference appointments. The soldiers preference law cannot be objected to on the grounds that it deprives the city of self-government when the powers of the municipality are derived solely from the legislature which has power under the constitution and under statute to prescribe rules governing municipalities.

Maddy v City Council, 226-941; 285 NW 208

Yardman at state capitol. An honorably discharged veteran of the war with Germany, appointed for no stated time to the position of "yardman" on the statehouse grounds, is not removable by the executive council except on duly preferred charges of incompetency or misconduct, he not being a deputy of the state custodian of public grounds, tho working under the supervision of said latter officer, and his "term" not expiring on the legal removal of said custodian.

Statter v Herring, 217-410; 251 NW 715

Investigation in re qualification. The general statutory requirement of the soldiers preference act that the appointing board or officer shall "make an investigation" relative to the qualifications of a soldier applicant, necessarily leaves to said board or officer the determination of the nature and kind of investigation to be made.

Miller v Hanna, 221-55; 265 NW 127

Soldiers preference law—findings on qualifications of applicants. In an action to compel the appointment of the plaintiff war veteran as police judge, where it was shown that both the plaintiff and the nonveteran appointed by the city council were qualified for the position, a finding by the district court in favor of the veteran should not be disturbed.

Maddy v City Council, 226-941; 285 NW 208

Investigation of qualifications. An investigation of the comparative qualifications of applicants is a good faith investigation even tho there was no public hearing or formal taking of evidence, when record shows that supervisors made inquiries relating to personal knowledge of qualifications of applicants and were influenced by that fact that petitioner had at one time been convicted of assault with intent to commit rape.

McLaughlin v Board, 227-267; 288 NW 74

Investigation—evidence—abuse of discretion. Evidence of past conduct and employment, coupled with appointing board's personal knowledge from having heard of and observed applicant's work held not to show a clear abuse of discretion warranting interference by the court.

McLaughlin v Board, 227-267; 288 NW 74

Grounds for refusing appointment—filing. Failure of appointing board to file the required statutory statement of grounds for refusing appointment does not invalidate another's appointment and under the circumstances of the case held not to be evidence that the board acted arbitrarily and unwarrantedly.

McLaughlin v Board, 227-267; 288 NW 74

Employees—power to discharge. The custodian of public buildings and grounds (at the seat of government) must, in view of §275, C, '35, be deemed vested with the sole authority legally to discharge the employees of said department, no statute to the contrary appearing; especially is this true when other legislation, tho it has expired ex vi termini, clearly demonstrates such to have been the intent of the general assembly.

Pittington v Herring, 220-1375; 264 NW 712

1162 Mandamus.

Nonreview of discretion. The legal freedom of the board of supervisors to determine according to its own judgment, in other words, its discretion to determine, that an applicant who is not an honorably discharged soldier has qualifications for the position of steward of the county home superior to the qualifications of an applicant who is such soldier, will not be reviewed in an action of mandamus unless the record is such as to clearly show that the board abused its discretion—acted in bad faith.

Miller v Hanna, 221-55; 265 NW 127

Refusal—narrow issue. On mandamus to right the alleged wrong in refusing to grant to an ex-soldier a preference in a public appointment or employment, the sole and only issue before the court is whether the appointing officer or board was justified, within the range of fair discretion, in finding on the law-required investigation as to relative qualifications that the qualifications of the ex-soldier were not equal to the qualifications of the non-soldier appointee.

Bender v Iowa City, 222-739; 269 NW 779

Extent of court's power—soldiers preference. In mandamus action to compel county supervisors to employ war veteran as courthouse janitor and discharge incumbent non-veteran, court cannot control the appointment but can only direct and require the appointing body to make investigation of the comparative qualifications of the applicants, and when such investigation is made court cannot interfere unless it is plainly apparent from the testimony that the board acted arbitrarily and capriciously.

McLaughlin v Board, 227-267; 288 NW 74

1162.1 Appeals.

District court's power in soldiers preference appeals. A soldiers preference law provision giving the district court the power to review the evidence and find whether the applicant is qualified, and to direct the appointing board as to further action to be taken, is not an unconstitutional delegation of power, as the finding of facts is often a judicial function, and the power of appointment is not exclusively a legislative or executive right.

Maddy v City Council, 226-941; 285 NW 208

Soldiers preference law—findings on qualifications of applicants. In an action to compel the appointment of the plaintiff war veteran as city police judge, where it was shown that both the plaintiff and the nonveteran appointed by the city council were qualified for the position, a finding by the district court in favor of the veteran should not be disturbed.

Maddy v City Council, 226-941; 285 NW 208

Findings by district court. In an appeal under the soldiers preference law, the district court may direct a city council to appoint a war veteran to the position of police judge and to cancel all action taken in appointing a nonveteran with the same qualifications for the office, rather than remand the case for further consideration by the city council.

Maddy v City Council, 226-941; 285 NW 208

1163 Removal—certiorari to review.

Purpose of act. The intent of the soldiers preference law is to make veterans secure in their positions in public service and to prevent their removal except for misconduct, and it is not intended for the purpose of retaining in office one who violates his duty.

Edwards v Civil Service, 227-74; 287 NW 285

Civil service and soldiers preference laws—purpose. Civil service and soldiers preference laws were not intended as a cloak or shield to cover misconduct, incompetency, or failure to perform official duties, but to provide protection and safeguard against arbitrary action of superior officers in removing such employees for reasons other than those named in the statutes.

Anderson v Board, 227-1164; 290 NW 493

Employment for definite time—effect. An honorably discharged soldier who is employed by the board of supervisors, under a written contract for a definite period of time as janitor of the courthouse, does not, by serving said contract period of time, acquire a legal right, even tho his competency and conduct are unquestioned, to continue in said position in preference to another honorably discharged soldier of equal qualifications.

Sorenson v Andrews, 221-44; 264 NW 562

Reduction of employees. The city council has plenary power by appropriate resolution to order a good-faith reduction in the number of employees in a municipal department operating under civil service regulations, and may validly delegate to the chief officer of such department the administrative duty to designate, on the basis of efficiency, competency, and length of service, and without the preferring of charges the employees who shall be discharged; and this is true tho the employees be ex-soldiers.

Lyon v Com., 208-1203; 218 NW 579

Right to discharge. A municipality may, in good faith, validly discharge an ex-soldier employee when the emergency under which he was employed has ceased, and at any time when the city has no funds with which to pay such employee.

Douglas v City, 206-144; 220 NW 72

Discharge—conflicting statutes. A duly appointed county engineer, who is an honorably discharged soldier, may not be summarily discharged by the board of supervisors prior to the end of the term for which appointed, even tho the statute authorizing the appointment of such engineer provides that the "tenure of office may be terminated at any time by the board".

Hahn v County, 218-543; 255 NW 695

Hearing prior to discharge—waiver. The soldiers preference act requires a hearing, prior to discharge, on charges of misconduct against a public employee as grounds for discharge, yet, where no such hearing is held, and the parties join issue on certiorari on the issue of misconduct, they must be held thereby to have presented the issue to the court.

Allen v Wegman, 218-801; 254 NW 74

Hearing before discharge—waiver. Tho the soldiers preference law requires, as grounds for and prior to discharge, a hearing on charges of misconduct against a public employee, yet, when no such hearing is held and in a certiorari action the parties join issue on misconduct they waive this hearing provided by the soldiers preference law. Evidence held to establish such misconduct.

Butler v Curran, 224-1339; 270 NW 89

Policeman assaulting prisoner—discharge justifiable. In an action in certiorari brought under soldiers preference law to review a ruling of civil service commission sustaining the discharge of a police officer for violation of civil service rules, providing for the dismissal of a policeman who clubs or mistreats a prisoner merely because such prisoner makes derogatory remarks concerning the officer, held, evidence sufficient to sustain findings of the commission.

Edwards v Civil Service, 227-74; 287 NW 285

Discharge of policeman for nonpayment of debts—nonpermissibility. Civil service commission's removal of police officer, an honorably discharged soldier, on sole ground that he failed to pay his creditors, held arbitrary and void despite fact that police department suffered inconvenience because of creditor's demands for assistance in collection, where such officer made good-faith efforts to meet his obligations which accrued as result of sickness in family.

Anderson v Board, 227-1164; 290 NW 493

Soldier employee—license fee retention. Retention of license fees collected for a state department is not "trivial and inconsequential" but is misconduct and incompetency sufficient to discharge a public employee having a soldier's preference.

Butler v Curran, 224-1339; 279 NW 89

When charges unnecessary. Charges against an ex-soldier employee as a condition precedent to his discharge are unnecessary when the office or position has been necessarily abolished.

Rounds v City, 213-52; 238 NW 428

Legislative abolishment of position—effect. The position known as "clerk of the state employment bureau" was, in legal effect, abolished by the act of the general assembly in accepting the provisions of the Wagner-Peyser Act (29 USC, §49 et seq.) and by the subsequent joint adoption by the federal and state governments of a system under which all employees of the state employment bureau were placed on a civil service basis after competitive examination administered by the federal employment service. It follows that he who was holding the said position of "clerk" at the time the position was legally abolished, tho an honorably discharged soldier, was not entitled to have charges preferred and a hearing had thereon.

Holmes v Reese, 221-52; 265 NW 384

SOLDIERS PREFERENCE LAW §1163

Non-good-faith discharge. The summary discharge by a municipal department superintendent of an honorably discharged soldier employee cannot be justified on the plea that the position occupied by said employee was in good faith abolished, when, immediately following said discharge, several other persons of no qualifications superior to that of the discharged employee were employed in the same department to do the same work which the discharged employee had done.

Dickey v King, 220-1322; 263 NW 823

Definite tenure of employment—removal. Durst v Board, 228- ; 292 NW 73

Tenure—removal—yardman at state capitol. An honorably discharged veteran of the war with Germany, appointed for no stated time to the position of "yardman" on the statehouse grounds, is not removable by the executive council except on duly preferred charges of incompetency or misconduct, he not being a deputy of the state custodian of public grounds, the working under the supervision of said latter officer, and his "term" not expiring on the legal removal of said custodian.

Statter v Herring, 217-410; 251 NW 715

Defendants. The custodian of public buildings and grounds (at Des Moines) is the sole, proper defendant in an action of certiorari to review the legality, under the soldiers preference act, of the discharge of an employee of said department.

Pittington v Herring, 220-1375; 264 NW 712

Certiorari—dismissal re custodian—res judicata. In an action of certiorari against the state executive council, and the custodian of public buildings and grounds, to review the legality of the discharge of an employee of the latter department, an unappealed order of court dismissing said custodian as an improper party defendant, tho unqualifiedly erroneous, becomes the law of said particular action, and precludes said plaintiff from thereafter proceeding against said custodian for the relief sought.

Pittington v Herring, 220-1375; 264 NW 712

Evidence in addition to return. On certiorari, to review the action of a municipality in declining longer to continue the employment of an employee, evidence in addition to the "return" may be received.

Douglas v City, 206-144; 220 NW 72

Failure of proof. Writ of certiorari, to review discharge of ex-soldier from a public appointive position, cannot be sustained when plaintiff predicates his right to relief solely on the unproven allegation that he was discharged by defendant.

Johnson v Herring, 222-1126; 271 NW 175

Reinstatement—unallowable order. The court, in certiorari, is manifestly without authority to order the state executive council to reinstate, in a department of the state government, a discharged state employee, when said council has no legal authority to employ or discharge employees in said department.
§§1163-1167 SOLDIERS PREFERENCE—NEPOTISM

Pittington v Herring, 220-1375; 264 NW 712

Certiorari to review veteran's discharge—scope. Under soldiers preference law affording veterans the right of hearing and review by certiorari, in the event of discharge from public employment, the scope of the review is not, as in ordinary cases of certiorari, limited to evidence on question of jurisdiction or other illegality, but is enlarged to allow a review of all proceedings had before a civil service commission.

Edwards v Civil Service, 227-74; 287 NW 285

Civil service commission findings—conclusiveness. The ruling of a civil service commission as to the discharge of a veteran under soldiers preference law, altho not conclusive, should not be lightly set aside, it being the general rule that where there is compliance in good faith with all requirements as to hearings, the courts will not usually interfere to direct or control the discretion of the commission.

Edwards v Civil Service, 227-74; 287 NW 285

Discharge by civil service commission—findings—reviewability. Supreme court will not review findings of civil service commission which are supported by competent evidence, where commission has jurisdiction and has otherwise acted legally; but, where evidence is entirely lacking to support the findings, the question becomes one of law and the action of the commission would not only be erroneous, but would amount to an illegality reviewable by certiorari.

Anderson v Board, 227-1164; 290 NW 493

No waiver by taking civil service examination. A war veteran holding a continuing position for a city does not waive his rights under the soldiers preference law by taking a civil service examination as to the position he holds. He is secure in the position so long as he is capable and efficient altho he may fail in the examination.

Jones v Des Moines, 225-1342; 283 NW 924

Soldiers preference law—not superseded by civil service law. Where a position occupied by a war veteran, such as license collector for a city, was treated by the council as a continuing one and not for a definite term, the fact that the city conducted a civil service examination (which the veteran failed to pass) will not permit the city to oust the veteran and appoint another without charges, notice, and hearing, as provided by the soldiers preference law.

Jones v Des Moines, 225-1342; 283 NW 924

1164 Burden of proof.

Civil service employee's discharge—burden of proof. Burden is on civil service commission to prove statutory grounds for removal of police officer who is entitled to soldiers preference.

Anderson v Board, 227-1164; 290 NW 493

1165 Exceptions.

Confidential employee. The position of head bookkeeper in the office of the state treasurer involves “strictly confidential relations” with the head of said office, within the meaning of this section.

Allen v Wegman, 218-801; 254 NW 74

CHAPTER 61
NEPOTISM

1166 Employments prohibited.

Approval of appointment—effect. The appointment by a county superintendent of his wife as deputy superintendent cannot be legally questioned when the appointment was legally approved by the board of supervisors.

Kellogg v County, 218-224; 253 NW 915

1167 Payment prohibited.

CHAPTER 62
DUTIES RELATIVE TO PUBLIC CONTRACTS

CHAPTER 62.1
PREFERENCE FOR IOWA PRODUCTS AND LABOR

1171.01 Preference authorized — conditions.

Domestic products preference—not applicable to Simmer law. Sections 1171-b1 and 1171-b2, C, '35 (§§1171.01, 1171.02, C, '39), have no application to contracts let for construction of municipal public utility plants payable from the earnings.

Keokuk Co. v Keokuk, 224-718; 277 NW 291

1171.02 Advertisements for bids — form.

Domestic products preference—not applicable to Simmer law. Sections 1171-b1 and 1171-b2, C, '35 (§§1171.01, 1171.02, C, '39), have no application to contracts let for construction of municipal public utility plants payable from the earnings.

Keokuk Co. v Keokuk, 224-718; 277 NW 291

1171.03 Iowa labor.

1171.07 Bids and contracts.

CHAPTER 62.2
PUBLIC WARRANTS NOT PAID FOR WANT OF FUNDS

CHAPTER 63
AUTHORIZATION AND SALE OF PUBLIC BONDS

1171.18 Bonds — election — vote required.

Primary road bonds. Section 4753-a11, C, '31, [§4753.11, C, '39] insofar as it authorizes the issuance of primary road bonds on a majority vote was impliedly repealed by the subsequent enactment of this section, requiring a favorable vote equal to 60 percent of all the votes cast.

Waugh v Shirer, 216-468; 249 NW 246

Simmer law—nonapplicable statute. Elections to establish municipally owned public utilities payable from the earnings are controlled by chapter 312, C, '35, and not by this section.

Abbott v Iowa City, 224-698; 277 NW 437

Interstate Co. v Forest City, 225-490; 281 NW 207

1172 Notice of sale.

Bonds to contractor—noncompetitive bidding. Simmer law—noninclusive title of act.

Weiss v Woodbine, 228- 289 NW 469

1173 Sealed and open bids.

1174 Rejection of bids.

1175 Selling price.

Value of government bonds. The face value of government bonds is prima facie evidence of their actual value.

Mulenix v Bank, 203-897; 209 NW 432

1176 Commission and expense.

1177 Penalty.

Presumption as to official conduct. Presumptively a public officer will perform his duties as prescribed by law.

Banta v Clarke County, 219-1195; 260 NW 329

1178 Sale of state bonds.

1179 Exchange of bonds.

CHAPTER 63.1
MATURITY AND PAYMENT OF BONDS

1179.1 Mandatory retirement.

Inadequate provision for payment. The court cannot assume that inadequate provision has been made for the payment of county primary road bonds and that, therefore, the bonds are void, in view of the fact that the state has underwritten every such bond through its primary road fund and has appropriated said fund to said purpose for the life of said bonds.

Harding v Board, 213-560; 237 NW 625

1179.2 Mandatory levy.

1179.4 Permissive application of funds.

1179.6 Place of payment.

Acting after expiration of commission. A notary public may not, after his term of appointment has expired, voluntarily or under order of court validly attach a new certificate of acknowledgment to a statutory agreement for arbitration executed during his expired term, even tho, at the time of attaching such new certificate, he was a notary public under a new appointment.

Koht v Towne, 201-538; 207 NW 596

1200 Conditions.

Bond—action on. An action against a notary public and his sureties for damages consequent on a willfully false certificate of acknowledgment does not sound in tort.

Atlas Sec. Co. v O'Donnell, 210-810; 232 NW 121; 30 NCCA 273

1201 Certificate filed.

1203 Powers within county of appointment.

1204 Powers within adjoining county.

1206 Improperly acting as notary.
Disqualified notary—when inconsequential. The validity of a deed of conveyance is, as between the grantor and grantee, in no manner affected by the fact that the deed was acknowledged before a disqualified notary public.

Shanda v Clutier Bank, 220-290; 260 NW 841

False certificate—proximate cause. A willfully false certificate by a notary public as to the acknowledgment by the vendee of the execution of a forged conditional sale contract is not the proximate cause of the damage suffered by one who purchases the forged contract and the forged promissory note accompanying it.

Atlas Sec. Co. v O'Donnell, 210-810; 232 NW 121; 30 NCCA 273

Impeachment by notary of his own certificate. Very little weight will be given to the testimony of a notary public that the recitals of his certificate are false.

McDaniel v Bank, 210-1287; 232 NW 653

1207 Acting under maiden name.
OATHS—SALARIES AND FEES §§1208-1225.04

1208 Record to be kept.

Lost certificate—allowable proof. Testimony tending to show the contents of a lost official notarial certificate of protest of a promissory note is inadmissible, but the facts constituting a legal protest of the note may, in such case, be established by any competent oral testimony.

CHAPTER 66
ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS

1215 General authority.

Affidavits in general. See §11342
Atty. Gen. Opinion. See '34 AG Op 672

Affidavit lacking seal of court clerk. Affidavit of publication of notice of hearing on drainage assessment was sufficient although court seal was not attached by court clerk before whom the affidavit was made. Moreover, statute did not require that proof of service be by affidavit.

Whisenand v Van Clark, 227-800; 288 NW 915

1216 Limited authority.

CHAPTER 67
SALARIES, FEES, MILEAGE, AND EXPENSES IN GENERAL

1218 Salaries paid monthly.

Salary—power to change. The general assembly has plenary power to reduce the salary of any public officer unless such reduction is prohibited by the constitution—a public office not being property.

Smith v Thompson, 219-888; 258 NW 190

Compensation—acceptance in part—effect. An officer who accepts part of a statutory compensation does not thereby estop himself from enforcing payment of the balance.

Broyles v County, 213-345; 239 NW 1

Inequitable demand for legal salary. A city officer, who has not, for a series of months, received his full salary as legally fixed by ordinance, may not, in an equitable action, compel the city to pay him the deficiency when during said time he has properly received an unknown amount of fees belonging to the city (or county) but has illegally retained them as salary and makes no offer to return said fees.

King v Eldora, 220-568; 261 NW 602

Personal earnings exempt. The salary—the “personal earnings”—of a public officer is exempt from liability on a judgment obtained against him and his surety, by the public body, because of the failure of the officer to account for public funds coming into his hands. The court cannot, on the plea of public policy, rule into the statute an exception which the legislature has not seen fit to declare. So held where the surety, having paid the judgment and thereby subrogated to the rights of the county, sought reimbursement from the officer’s salary.

Ohio Ins. v Galvin, 222-670; 269 NW 254; 108 ALR 1036

1219 Appraisers of property.

COAL MINES AND MINING

1226 Board of examiners.
  Discussion. See 9 ILB 145—Coal price regulation

1228 Mine inspectors—examinations.

1231 Examination—mine inspector.

1241 Duty of mine owner.

1242.1 Filling or sealing abandoned mine.
  Strip mining coal—pipe line right of way easement—back-filling required—judgment. A holder of a strip mine coal lease who enters upon and strips coal from land, upon which land a pipe-line company holds an easement, knowing that by so mining violates his lease, must back-fill the land when the easement holder exercises his option to buy; and upon his failure to make the back-fill, a judgment against the coal lessee for the cost thereof is proper.
  Penn v Pipe Line Co., 225-680; 281 NW 194

1272 Ventilation.

1276 Unhealthful conditions.
  Operation of mines—gasoline engine—powers and duties of state mine inspector. Where a mine was being worked by its owners without "employees", and the state mine inspector (1) had never been in the mine, (2) had never made a test of air and health conditions therein, and (3) had not made inquiry as to whether air and health conditions were such as to endanger health of workers in the mine, the inspector exceeded his statutory authority in making an order, under §1308, C., '35, to "remove all mining machines operated with or by gasoline [or any other fuel oil whatsoever]"—portion in brackets not being contained in above code section.
  State v Padavich, 223-991; 274 NW 51

1286 "Mine foreman" defined.

1292 Duties of foreman or pit boss.

1293 Duty of miners and other employees.

1308 Gasoline and engines—use and location.
  Powers and duties of state mine inspector. Where a mine was being worked by its owners without "employees," and the state mine inspector (1) had never been in the mine, (2) had never made a test of air and health conditions therein, and (3) had not made inquiry as to whether air and health conditions were such as to endanger health of workers in the mine, the inspector exceeded his statutory authority in making an order, under this section to "remove all mining machines operated with or by gasoline [or any other fuel oil whatsoever]"—portion in brackets not being contained in above code section.

State v Padavich, 223-991; 274 NW 51

1309 Temporary location of engine.

1332 Burden of proof.

Gasoline engine—powers and duties of state mine inspector. Where a mine was being worked by its owners without "employees", and the state mine inspector (1) had never been in the mine, (2) had never made a test of air and health conditions therein, and (3) had not made inquiry as to whether air and health conditions were such as to endanger health of workers in the mine, the inspector exceeded his statutory authority in making an order, under §1308, C., '35, to "remove all mining machines operated with or by gasoline [or any other fuel oil whatsoever]"—portion in brackets not being contained in above code section.

State v Padavich, 223-991; 274 NW 51

1334 Right of adjoining landowner.

Strip mining—coal lease subject to pipe-line easement—lateral support. Where a pipe-line company has an easement across land and an option to buy a designated strip of land along the pipe line if a strip coal mine should be opened on the land, a subsequent strip mine coal lease, subject to the pipe-line easement and option, gives the coal lessee no rights to strip mine coal on the land covered by the purchase option and thus destroy the lateral support of the pipe line, nor is such lessee entitled to any part of the purchase price for such strip of land.

Penn v Pipe Line Co., 225-880; 281 NW 194

Lease of mineable coal—breach—burden of proof. In an action to recover minimum royalties under a lease of coal lands because of defendant's breach of contract to mine all mineable, workable and merchantable coal underlying said lands, plaintiff has the burden to establish the existence of such coal, especially when plaintiff assumed such burden by his pleadings. Evidence exhaustively reviewed and held insufficient to generate a question for the jury.

Scovel v Norwood-White Co., 222-354; 269 NW 9

COAL MINES AND MINING

1336 Double damages.

Failure to quitclaim mineral rights—damages. The measure of damages for breach of contract to quitclaim to the surface owner of lands "the right to coal and minerals" under the lands is not the difference between the value of the land with and without the coal and mining rights existing against the land as an incumbrance, when the unit fee has theretofore been separated into (1) a fee to the surface, (2) a fee to the minerals, and (3) a fee to the right to vertical support, and the two latter fees have been conveyed to other parties and paid for.

Bremhorst v Coal Co., 202-1251; 211 NW 898

Measure of damages—wrongful act without profit to wrongdoer. The lessee of coal lands who seeks to recover damages consequent on the wrongful act of the owner of the land in taking coal from the land, need not show that the defendant-owner made any profit from his wrongful operations. Plaintiff need only show wherein and to what extent he was damaged.

Hartford Co. v Helsing, 220-1010; 263 NW 269

Opinion evidence—examination of experts—improper form. In an action against a mine owner for damages consequent on an injury to the surface of the soil which he did not own, hypothetical questions calling for values should not be framed on the erroneous theory that the mine owner had no right to use the surface of the soil to any extent.

Grell v Lumsden, 206-166; 220 NW 123

Torts—liability of mere employee. The mere employee of a tort-feasor is not necessarily liable for the damage resulting from the tort. So held in an action by the lessee of coal lands for damages consequent on the wrongful removal of coal by the owner of the leased land.

Hartford Co. v Helsing, 220-1010; 263 NW 269

Decree—broad power under general prayer for relief. A court of equity, in dealing with and adjusting involved and complicated matters of fact, has exceptionally broad power to effect equity and justice when both parties pray for general equitable relief. Illustrated where defendant, who was the owner of coal lands, and those working in conjunction with him, had wrongfully interfered with the rights of lessees, and were held liable in a reasonable amount for permanent improvements placed in the mine by lessees, even tho said improvements became worthless—it appearing that defendant's misconduct had materially contributed to said latter condition.

Hartford Co. v Helsing, 220-1010; 263 NW 269

CHAPTER 69

GYPSUM MINES

1349 Duties and powers of inspector.

1353 Separate maps.

Sale of gypsum lands—compensation—jury question. Evidence that defendant orally agreed to pay plaintiff a commission to assist in the sale of gypsum lands upon which plaintiff held drill plats, that agents of purchaser conferred with plaintiff and examined the plats, coupled with a denial by defendant that plaintiff accepted the offer or assisted in consummating the sale, presents a question precisely determinable by the jury.

CHAPTER 70

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

Discussion. See 7 ILB 100—Workmen's compensation; 7 ILB 166—Conflict of laws; 17 ILR 181, 343—Commentary on workmen's compensation act

1361 To whom not applicable.

Additional annotations. See under §1421, Interstate commerce. See under §§1417, 8042 (II)

Constitutionality.
Hawkins v Bleakly, 243 US 210

Liberal construction—workmen's compensation act. The workmen's compensation act is to be liberally construed.
Everts v Jorgensen, 227-818; 289 NW 11

Maintenance of residence not "trade or business". Testimony which simply shows that a home owner maintains on his residential grounds an additional residence which is occupied by his son, establishes no such "trade or business" as renders the home owner liable under the workmen's compensation act to an employee who is injured in the course of his employment while repairing the equipment of the house occupied by the son; and this is true even tho the employee was not a casual employee.
Tunnicliff v Bettendorf, 204-168; 214 NW 516

Casual employment—dual provision. The provision of the workmen's compensation act that "persons whose employment is of a casual nature" shall not be under the act (subsec. 2, this section), and the further provision that "A person whose employment is purely casual, and not for the purpose of the employer's trade or business," shall not be deemed an "employee" (§1421, subsec. 3a, C., '31), when construed together, have but one meaning, to wit, the full meaning of the last provision.
Gardner v Trustees, 217-1390; 250 NW 740

Casual employment “for the purpose of the employer's trade or business”. An employment to wash the kitchen walls of a restaurant is "for the purpose of the employer's trade or business", even tho the employment is purely casual.
Dial v Coleman's Lunch, 217-945; 251 NW 33

Noncasual employment.
Eddington v Tel. Co., 201-67; 202 NW 374

Operator of sorghum mill not within act. The employee of a farmer is "engaged in an agricultural pursuit" while engaged in operating a sorghum mill on the farm, and therefore is not within the benefits of the workmen's compensation act.
Taverner v Anderson, 220-151; 261 NW 610

Employees within acts—excludes farm supervisors—agricultural pursuit. An employee whose duties consisted of repairing buildings and fences on some 20 farms and who occasionally advised as to crops was engaged in an agricultural pursuit within the meaning of §1361, C., '35, and when fatally injured on the highway while going from one farm to another, his estate is not entitled to workmen's compensation.
Criger v Mustaba Co., 224-1111; 276 NW 788

Scope of employment—jury question. The scope of a servant's duties is to be determined by what he was employed to perform, and by what, with knowledge and approval of his master, he actually did perform. Evidence
Nonagricultural pursuit. A workman who is employed by a county as a member of the county highway department, and is paid by the county an hourly wage for driving a heavy tractor road grader in the construction and maintenance of county roads—for which work said grader was exclusively designed—is not, as regards the county, the employer, deprived of the benefits of the workman’s compensation act because, when injured in the operation of said grader, he was, under the orders from the board of supervisors, engaged in the construction on a farm and for the benefit of the owner thereof, of a trench silo, such construction not being an engagement by said workman “in an agricultural pursuit or any operation immediately connected therewith” within the meaning of subsec. 5 of this section.

Trullinger v Fremont Co., 223-677; 273 NW 124

Civil Works Administration employee—status. Workmen who are (1) employed, (2) directed when and where to work, and (3) paid for their services, by the federal Civil Works Administration, are not, while engaged in re-decorating a public school building, employees of the school corporation owning said building, within the meaning of the workmen’s compensation act.

Hoover v Sch. Dist., 220-1364; 264 NW 611; 39 NCCA 271; 3 NCCA (NS) 741

Township not employer. A civil township is not an “employer” within the meaning of this chapter, such township being but an unincorporated district. It necessarily follows that a township road superintendent is not an “employee.”

Hop v Brink, 205-74; 217 NW 551

Wife as employee of husband. A husband who is the sole owner of a printing plant may validly employ his wife as a linotype and press operator in said plant and the wife may legally accept such employment and collect therefor, because such services are wholly outside of, and foreign to, the usual and ordinary marital duties of a wife. It follows that the wife is entitled to compensation under the workmen’s compensation act for injuries arising out of and in the course of said employment.

Reid v Reid, 216-882; 249 NW 387

Policemen not within act. The minor children of a deceased policeman who was a member of an organized police department and contributing to the statutory pension fund of said department, and who was killed while attempting to effect an arrest and at a time when he was not actually “pensioned”, are not entitled to compensation under this chapter.

Ogilvie v Des Moines, 212-117; 233 NW 526
§1363 WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

Applicability of state and federal acts. Injuries received by an employee of a common carrier, engaged in the transportation of both intrastate and interstate freight, are compensable under the state workmen's compensation act, and not under the corresponding federal act, when the employment, in the course of which and out of which the injuries arose, consists solely of the duty to patrol the railroad yards of the employer against thieves, trespassers, and fires.

Califome v Railway, 220-676; 263 NW 29

Extra-territorial effect. The workmen's compensation act of this state, when not formally rejected, becomes a part of a contract of employment entered into in this state by a resident employer and a nonresident employee, tho the contract requires almost exclusive execution of the contract by the employee in the foreign state—where the employee was injured.

Cullamore v Groneweg & S., 219-200; 257 NW 561

Consent of owner-employer to operation of automobile—effect. An employer, whose automobile is being operated with his consent, is not liable, under §5026, C., '35, to his own employee for an injury suffered by said employee in consequence of the actionable negligence of said operator of the car, provided said injury is compensable under the workmen's compensation act.

McGraw v Seigel, 221-127; 263 NW 553; 106 ALR 1035

Injury not occurring from accident. A personal injury may be compensable even tho it did not arise out of an accident, or special incident or unusual occurrence. So held where a workman ruptured his stomach consequent on the physical strain of his ordinary work.

Almquist v Nurseries, 218-724; 254 NW 35; 94 ALR 573; 35 NCCA 432

Traumatic injury to diseased organ. A traumatic injury to an organ of the human body is not rendered noncompensable because the organ was already in a weakened condition because of a disease, and, therefore, more susceptible to an injury than a normal organ.

Almquist v Nurseries, 218-724; 254 NW 35; 94 ALR 573; 35 NCCA 432

Injury aggravating disease. In workmen's compensation case where the injury aggravates or accelerates a disease with which the workman is afflicted, it is compensable if death results from or is hastened by the injury.

West v Phillips, 227-612; 288 NW 625

Lead poisoning to auto mechanic—occupational disease—nonconclusive finding. As to lead poisoning suffered by an automobile mechanic from using a blowtorch negligently filled with tetraethyl lead gasoline, industrial commissioner's finding it to be an occupational disease was not conclusive on the courts.

Black v Creston Auto Co., 225-671; 281 NW 189

Garage mechanic—lead poisoning from blowtorch not occupational. An occupational disease is a usual or unavoidable incident or result of the particular employment. Lead poisoning suffered by a garage mechanic over a period of time resulting from using a blowtorch containing tetraethyl lead gasoline negligently furnished by the employer is a disease outside the ordinary diseases that follow the usual business of an automobile mechanic, and is compensable as an injury in the course of his employment.

Black v Creston Auto Co., 225-671; 281 NW 189

Fatal sunstroke—when noncompensable. A fatal sunstroke cannot be said to "arise out of" an employment and, therefore, be compensable, when the facts attending the injury fail to reveal any causal connection between the employment and the said injury.

Wax v Des M. Corp., 220-864; 263 NW 333; 38 NCCA 621

Death from lightning—noncompensable. The death of an employee from a fatal stroke of lightning, tho occurring "in the course of" his employment, cannot be deemed to "arise out of" said employment, and therefore be compensable under the workmen's compensation act, unless, by a preponderance of the evidence, a causal connection is established between (1) the circumstances and conditions attending said employment and (2) said death, i.e., that a person engaged in said employment is more susceptible to such an injury than other persons in the same locality. Evidence held insufficient.

Mincey v Dultmeier Co., 223-252; 272 NW 430

Heat exhaustion. In workmen's compensation action it is essential, in order to recover an award for death from heat exhaustion, that natural heat be intensified by artificial heat.

West v Phillips, 227-612; 288 NW 625

Exhaustion from artificial heat. Exhaustion from artificial heat in a bakeshop, which caused the death of a workman in the course of his employment, creates a compensable injury.

West v Phillips, 227-612; 288 NW 625

Excessive heat caused artificially. In workmen's compensation action to recover for death of workman caused by intensified or artificial heat, held, evidence sufficient to sustain finding that there was excessive heat in a bakeshop, caused artificially.

West v Phillips, 227-612; 288 NW 625
Causal connection between injury and death.
In workmen's compensation action to recover for death of workman allegedly caused by intensified or artificial heat, wherein testimony of physician shows that some of the symptoms of heat exhaustion are that patient perspires freely, has an increased thirst, flushed face, increasing weakness and chills, and where workman manifested substantially all of the symptoms enumerated, such testimony supplied evidence that workman suffered heat exhaustion which hastened his death and thus provided the causal connection between his death and injury.

West v Phillips, 227-612; 288 NW 625

Act of courtesy resulting in injury. An injury to an employee may be said to "arise out of and in the course of his employment" when received at the employer's plant during working hours in extending, as a matter of courtesy, helpful assistance to a nonemployee who is rightfully on the premises for a purpose advantageous to the owner of the plant, provided the employee, from all the facts and circumstances attending his employment and work, believed and had reasonable grounds to believe that his employment embraced and contemplated the giving of such assistance under such circumstances.

Yates v Humphrey, 218-792; 255 NW 639; 35 NCCA 541

Hunting pheasants—course of employment—supported findings. The evidence leading up to and attending the injury of a salesman of steel culverts, while hunting pheasants with a son of a prospective customer, may be such as to support a finding of the industrial commissioner that the salesman was injured in the course of his employment and entitled to compensation accordingly.

Fintzel v Stoddard Co., 219-1263; 260 NW 725; 37 NCCA 799; 4 NCCA (NS) 694

1364 Rejection.

Failure to reject—effect. The neglect of an employer specifically to reject the workmen's compensation act in the manner provided automatically and conclusively places such employer under said act; and his neglect to insure his liability does not take him out from under said act.

Van Gorkom v O'Connell, 201-52; 206 NW 637

1367 Defenses when employee rejects.

Torts—fundamental laws govern liability. The fundamental and underlying law of torts is that he who does injury to the person or property of another is civilly liable in damages for the injuries inflicted.

Montanick v McMillin, 225-442; 280 NW 608

Safe place to work—no warranty by master—reasonable care only. In no event is a master held to warrant or insure the servant's safety, but he is held to the exercise of reasonable care to eliminate those elements of danger to the life and limb of the servant which are not the usual and natural incidents of the service when the master has exercised reasonable care.

Rehard v Miles, 227-1290; 284 NW 829; 290 NW 702
